

Bodleian Libraries

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

This book is part of the collection held by the Bodleian Libraries and scanned by Google, Inc. for the Google Books Library Project.

For more information see:

<http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/dbooks>

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 2.0 UK: England & Wales (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0) licence.

256 f. 2379

A KIPLING ANTHOLOGY
P R O S E

A KIPLING ANTHOLOGY

P R O S E

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED
ST. MARTIN'S STREET, LONDON

1922

COPYRIGHT

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

I WRITE of all matters that lie within my understanding, and of many that do not. But chiefly I write of Life and Death, and men and women, and Love and Fate according to the measure of my ability, telling the tale through the mouths of one, two, or more people. Then by the favour of God the tales are sold and money accrues to me that I may keep alive.

GOD has made very many heads, but there is only one heart in all the world among your people or my people. They are children in the matter of tales.

Life's Handicap.

EAST OF SUEZ

E

I

B

EAST OF SUEZ

A SOLID line of blue, rising and falling like the back of a caterpillar in haste, would swing up through the quivering dust and trot past to a chorus of quick cackling. That was a gang of changars—the women who have taken all the embankments of all the Northern railways under their charge—a flat-footed, big-bosomed, strong-limbed, blue-petticoated clan of earth-carriers, hurrying north on news of a job, and wasting no time by the road. They belong to the caste whose men do not count, and they walked with squared elbows, swinging hips, and heads on high, as suits women who carry heavy weights. A little later a marriage procession would strike into the Grand Trunk with music and shoutings, and a smell of marigold and jasmine stronger even than the reek of the dust. One could see the bride's litter, a blur of red and tinsel, staggering through the haze, while the bridegroom's bewreathed pony turned aside to snatch a mouthful from a passing fodder-cart. Then Kim would join the Kentish-fire of good wishes and bad jokes, wishing the couple a hundred sons and no daughters, as the saying is.

Kim.

THE LAMA, very straight and erect, the deep folds of his yellow clothing slashed with black in the light of the parao fires precisely as a knotted tree-trunk is slashed with the shadow of the long sun, addressed a tinsel and lacquered ruth which burned like a many-coloured jewel in the same uncertain light. The patterns on the gold-worked curtains ran up and down, melting and reforming as the folds shook and quivered to the night wind; and when the talk grew more earnest the jewelled forefinger snapped out little sparks of light between the embroideries.

Kim.

BUT IT was all pure delight—the wandering road, climbing, dipping, and sweeping about the growing spurs ; the flush of the morning laid along the distant snows ; the branched cacti, tier upon tier on the stony hillsides ; the voices of a thousand water-channels ; the chatter of the monkeys ; the solemn deodars, climbing one after another with down-drooped branches ; the vista of the Plains rolled out far beneath them ; the incessant twanging of the tonga-horns and the wild rush of the led horses when a tonga swung round a curve ; the halts for prayers ; the evening conferences by the halting-places, when camels and bullocks chewed solemnly together and the stolid drivers told the news of the Road—all these things lifted Kim's heart to song within him.

Kim.

ABOVE THEM, still enormously above them, earth towered away towards the snow-line, where from east to west across hundreds of miles, ruled as with a ruler, the last of the bold birches stopped. Above that in scarps and blocks upheaved, the rocks strove to fight their heads above the white smother. Above these again, changeless since the world's beginning, but changing to every mood of sun and cloud, lay out the eternal snow. They could see blots and blurs on its face where storm and wandering wullie-wa got up to dance. Below them, as they stood, the forest slid away in a sheet of blue-green for mile upon mile ; below the forest was a village in its sprinkle of terraced fields and steep grazing-grounds ; below the village they knew, though a thunderstorm worried and growled there for the moment, a pitch of twelve or fifteen hundred feet gave to the moist valley where the streams gather that are the mothers of young Sutlej.

Kim.

HERDING in India is one of the laziest things in the world. The cattle move and crunch, and lie down, and move on again, and they do not even low. They only grunt, and the buffaloes very seldom say anything, but get down into the muddy pools one after another, and work their way into the mud till only their noses and staring china-blue eyes show above the surface, and there they lie like logs. The sun makes the rocks dance in the heat, and the herd-children hear one kite (never any more) whistling almost out of sight overhead, and they know that if they died, or a cow died, that kite would sweep down, and the next kite miles away would see him drop and follow, and the next, and the next, and almost before they were dead there would be a score of hungry kites come out of nowhere. Then they sleep and wake and sleep again, and weave little baskets of dried grass and put grasshoppers in them ; or catch two praying-mantises and make them fight ; or string a necklace of red and black jungle-nuts ; or watch a lizard basking on a rock, or a snake hunting a frog near the wallows. Then they sing long, long songs with odd native quavers at the end of them, and the day seems longer than most people's whole lives, and perhaps they make a mud castle with mud figures of men and horses and buffaloes, and put reeds into the men's hands, and pretend that they are kings and the figures are their armies, or that they are gods to be worshipped. Then evening comes, and the children call, and the buffaloes lumber up out of the sticky mud with noises like gunshots going off one after the other, and they all string across the grey plain back to the twinkling village lights. “ Tiger ! Tiger ! ”

AS THE elephant swung up the steep roads paved with stone and built out on the sides of the hill, the Englishman looked into empty houses where the little grey squirrel sat and scratched its ears. The peacock walked on the house-tops, and the blue pigeon roosted within. He passed under iron-studded gates whose hinges were eaten out with rust, and by walls plumed and crowned with grass, and under more gateways, till, at last, he reached the palace and came suddenly into a great quadrangle where two blinded, arrogant stallions, covered with red and gold trappings, screamed and neighed at each other from opposite ends of the vast space.

Letters of Marque.

FROM THE top of the palace you may read if you please the Book of Ezekiel written in stone upon the hillside. Coming up, the Englishman had seen the city from below or on a level. He now looked into its very heart—the heart that had ceased to beat. There was no sound of men or cattle, or grind-stones in those pitiful streets—nothing but the cooing of the pigeons. At first it seemed that the palace was not ruined at all—that soon the women would come up on the house-tops and the bells would ring in the temples. But as he attempted to follow with his eye the turns of the streets, the Englishman saw that they died out in wood tangle and blocks of fallen stone, and that some of the houses were rent with great cracks, and pierced from roof to road with holes that let in the morning sun. The drip-stones of the eaves were gap-toothed, and the tracery of the screens had fallen out so that zenana-rooms lay shamelessly open to the day. On the outskirts of the city, the strong-walled houses dwindled and sank down to mere stone-heaps and faint indications of plinth and wall, hard to trace against the background of stony soil. The shadow of the palace lay over two-thirds of the city and the trees deepened the shadow. "He who has bent him o'er the dead" after the hour of which Byron sings, knows that the features of the man become blunted as it were—the face begins to fade. The same hideous look lies on the face of the Queen of the Pass, and when once this is realised, the eye wonders that it could have ever believed in the life of her. She is the city "whose graves are set in the side of the pit, and her company is round about her graves," sister of Pathros, Zoan, and No.

Letters of Marque.

HE STUMBLED across more ruins and passed between tombs of dead Ranis, till he came to a flight of steps, built out and cut out from rock, going down as far as he could see into a growth of trees on a terrace below him. The stone of the steps had been worn and polished by the terrible naked feet till it showed its markings clearly as agate; and where the steps ended in a rock-slope, there was a visible glair, a great snail-track, upon the rocks. It was hard to keep safe footing upon the sliminess. The air was thick with the sick smell of stale incense, and grains of rice were scattered upon the steps. But there was no one to be seen. Now this in itself was not specially alarming ; but the Genius of the Place must be responsible for making it so. The Englishman slipped and bumped on the rocks, and arrived, more suddenly than he desired, upon the edge of a dull blue tank, sunk between walls of timeless masonry. In a slabbed-in recess, water was pouring through a shapeless stone gargoyle into a trough ; which trough again dripped into the tank. Almost under the little trickle of water, was the loathsome Emblem of Creation, and there were flowers and rice around it. Water was trickling from a score of places in the cut face of the hill ; oozing between the edges of the steps and welling up between the stone slabs of the terrace. Trees sprouted in the sides of the tank and hid its surroundings. It seemed as though the descent had led the Englishman, firstly, two thousand years away from his own century, and secondly, into a trap, and that he would fall off the polished stones into the stinking tank, or that the Gau-Mukh would continue to pour water until the tank rose up and swamped him, or that some of the stone slabs would fall forward and crush him flat.

Chitor. Letters of Marque.

FROM A peepul-shaded courtyard came a clamour of young voices. Thirty or forty little ones, from five to eight years old, were sitting in an open verandah learning accounts and Hindustani, said the teacher. No need to ask from what castes they came, for it was written on their faces that they were Mahajans, Oswals, Aggerwals, and in one or two cases, it seemed, Sharawaks of Guzerat. They were learning the business of their lives, and, in time, would take their fathers' places, and show in how many ways money might be manipulated. Here the profession-type came out with startling distinctness. Through the chubbiness of almost babyhood, or the delicate suppleness ness of maturer years, in mouth and eyes and hands, it betrayed itself. The Rahtor, who comes of a fighting stock, is a fine animal, and well bred ; the Hara, who seems to be more compactly built, is also a fine animal ; but for a race that show blood in every line of their frame, from the arch of the instep to the modelling of the head, the financial—trading is too coarse a word—the financial class of Rajputana appears to be the most remarkable. Later in life he may become clouded with fat jowl and paunch ; but in his youth, his quick-eyed, nimble youth, the young Marwarri, to give him his business title, is really a thing of beauty.

Letters of Marque.

THE STARS had no fire in them and the fish had stopped jumping, when the black water of the lake paled and grew grey. While he watched it seemed to the Englishman that voices on the hills were intoning the first verses of Genesis. The grey light moved on the face of the waters till, with no interval, a blood-red glare shot up from the horizon and, inky black against the intense red, a giant crane floated out towards the sun. In the still, shadowed city the great Palace Drum boomed and throbbed to show that the gates were open, while the dawn swept up the valley and made all things clear. The blind man who said, "The blast of a trumpet is red," spoke only the truth. The breaking of the red dawn is like the blast of a trumpet.

Letters of Marque.

THE ENGLISHMAN lay out at high noon on the crest of a rolling upland crowned with rock, and heard, as a loafer had told him he would hear, the "set of the day," which is as easily discernible as the change of tone between the rising and the falling tide. At a certain hour the impetus of the morning dies out, and all things, living and inanimate, turn their thoughts to the prophecy of the coming night. The little wandering breezes drop for a time, and, when they blow afresh, bring the message. The "set of the day," as the loafer said, has changed ; the machinery is beginning to run down ; the unseen tides of the air are falling. This moment of change can only be felt in the open and in touch with the earth, and once discovered, seems to place the finder in deep accord and fellowship with all things on earth.

Letters of Marque.

IN AN Indian Jungle the seasons slide one into the other almost without division. There seem to be only two—the wet and the dry ; but if you look closely below the torrents of rain and the clouds of char and dust you will find all four going round in their regular ring. Spring is the most wonderful, because she has not to cover a clean, bare field with new leaves and flowers, but to drive before her and to put away the hanging-on, over-surviving raffle of half-green things which the gentle winter has suffered to live, and to make the partly-dressed stale earth feel new and young once more. And this she does so well that there is no spring in the world like the Jungle spring.

There is one day when all things are tired, and the very smells, as they drift on the heavy air, are old and used. One cannot explain this, but it feels so. Then there is another day—to the eye nothing whatever has changed—when all the smells are new and delightful, and the whiskers of the Jungle People quiver to their roots, and the winter hair comes away from their sides in long, draggled locks. Then, perhaps, a little rain falls, and all the trees and the bushes and the bamboos and the mosses and the juicy-leaved plants wake with a noise of growing that you can almost hear, and under this noise runs, day and night, a deep hum. That is the noise of the spring—a vibrating boom which is neither bees, nor falling water, nor the wind in tree-tops, but the purring of the warm, happy world.

The Spring Running.

A LIGHT spring rain—elephant-rain they call it—drove across the Jungle in a belt half a mile wide, left the new leaves wet and nodding behind, and died out in a double rainbow and a light roll of thunder.

The Spring Running.

BUT FIRST it is necessary to explain something about the Supreme Government which is above all and below all and behind all. Gentlemen come from England, spend a few weeks in India, walk round this great Sphinx of the Plains, and write books upon its ways and its works, denouncing or praising it as their own ignorance prompts. Consequently all the world knows how the Supreme Government conducts itself. But no one, not even the Supreme Government, knows everything about the administration of the Empire. Year by year England sends out fresh drafts for the first fighting-line, which is officially called the Indian Civil Service. These die, or kill themselves by overwork, or are worried to death, or broken in health and hope in order that the land may be protected from death and sickness, famine and war, and may eventually become capable of standing alone. It will never stand alone, but the idea is a pretty one, and men are willing to die for it, and yearly the work of pushing and coaxing and scolding and petting the country into good living goes forward. If an advance be made all credit is given to the native, while the Englishmen stand back and wipe their foreheads. If a failure occurs the Englishmen step forward and take the blame. Overmuch tenderness of this kind has bred a strong belief among many natives that the native is capable of administering the country, and many devout Englishmen believe this also, because the theory is stated in beautiful English with all the latest political colour. On the City Wall.

SOME PEOPLE will tell you that if there were but a single loaf of bread in all India it would be divided equally between the Plowdens, the Trevors, the Beadons, and the Rivett-Carnacs. That is only one way of saying that certain families serve India generation after generation as dolphins follow in line across the open sea. The Tomb of his Ancestors.

THE MAN was at his feet a second time. "He has not forgotten. He remembers his own people as his father remembered. Now can I die. But first I will live and show the Sahib how to kill tigers. That that yonder is my nephew. If he is not a good servant, beat him and send him to me, and I will surely kill him, for now the Sahib is with his own people. Ai, Jan baba—Jan baba ! My Jan baba ! I will stay here and see that this does his work well. Take off his boots, fool. Sit down upon the bed, Sahib, and let me look. It is Jan baba ! ”

He pushed forward the hilt of his sword as a sign of service, which is an honour paid only to viceroys, governors, generals, or to little children whom one loves dearly. Chinn touched the hilt mechanically with three fingers, muttering he knew not what. It happened to be the old answer of his childhood, when Bukta in jest called him the little General Sahib.

The Tomb of his Ancestors.

AS AN Acting District Superintendent of Police, Martyn drew the magnificent pay of six hundred depreciated silver rupees a month, and his little four-roomed bungalow said just as much. There were the usual blue-and-white striped jail-made rugs on the uneven floor ; the usual glass-studded Amritsar phulkaris draped to nails driven into the flaking white-wash of the walls ; the usual half-dozen chairs that did not match, picked up at sales of dead men's effects ; and the usual streaks of black grease where the leather punka-thong ran through the wall. It was as though everything had been unpacked the night before to be repacked next morning. Not a door in the house was true on its hinges. The little windows, fifteen feet up, were darkened with wasp-nests, and lizards hunted flies between the beams of the wood-ceiled roof. But all this was part of Scott's life. Thus did people live who had such an income ; and in a land where each man's pay, age, and position are printed in a book, that all may read, it is hardly worth while to play at pretences in word or deed.

William the Conqueror.

IT IS conceivable that her aunts would not have approved of a girl who never set foot on the ground if a horse were within hail ; who rode to dances with a shawl thrown over her skirt ; who wore her hair cropped and curling all over her head ; who answered indifferently to the name of William or Bill ; whose speech was heavy with the flowers of the vernacular ; who could act in amateur theatricals, play on the banjo, rule eight servants and two horses, their accounts and their diseases, and look men slowly and deliberately between the eyes—yea, after they had proposed to her and been rejected.

William the Conqueror.

SHE DELIGHTED in hearing men talk of their own work, and that is the most fatal way of bringing a man to your feet.

William the Conqueror.

WILLIAM served them generously, in large cups, hot tea, which saves the veins of the neck from swelling inopportunately on a hot night.

It was characteristic of the girl that, her plan of action once settled, she asked for no comments on it. Life with men who had a great deal of work to do, and very little time to do it in, had taught her the wisdom of effacing as well as of fending for herself. She did not by word or deed suggest that she would be useful, comforting, or beautiful in their travels, but continued about her business serenely : put the cups back without clatter when tea was ended, and made cigarettes for her guests.

William the Conqueror.

THEN THEY came to an India more strange to them than to the untravelled Englishman—the flat, red India of palm-tree, palmyra-palm, and rice, the India of the picture-books, of Little Harry and His Bearer—all dead and dry in the baking heat. They had left the incessant passenger-traffic of the north and west far and far behind them. Here the people crawled to the side of the train, holding their little ones in their arms ; and a loaded truck would be left behind, men and women clustering round and above it like ants by spilled honey. Once in the twilight they saw on a dusty plain a regiment of little brown men, each bearing a body over his shoulder ; and when the train stopped to leave yet another truck, they perceived that the burdens were not corpses, but only foodless folk picked up beside their dead oxen by a corps of Irregular troops.

William the Conqueror.

AT LAST, in a dry, hot dawn, in a land of death, lit by long red fires of railway sleepers, where they were burning the dead, they came to their destination, and were met by Jim Hawkins, the Head of the Famine, unshaven, unwashed, but cheery, and entirely in command of affairs.

William the Conqueror.

SCOTT understood dimly that many people in the India of the South ate rice, as a rule, but he had spent his service in a grain Province, had seldom seen rice in the blade or the ear, and least of all would have believed that, in time of deadly need, men would die at arm's length of plenty, sooner than touch food they did not know. In vain the interpreters interpreted ; in vain his two policemen showed by vigorous pantomime what should be done. The starving crept away to their bark and weeds, grubs, leaves, and clay, and left the open sacks untouched.

William the Conqueror.

THAT WAS the time when eight years of clean living and hard condition told, though a man's head were ringing like a bell from the cinchona, and the earth swayed under his feet when he stood and under his bed when he slept. If Hawkins had seen fit to make him a bullock-driver, that, he thought, was entirely Hawkins's own affair. There were men in the North who would know what he had done ; men of thirty years' service in his own department who would say that it was " not half bad " ; and above, immeasurably above all men of all grades, there was William in the thick of the fight, who would approve because she understood. He had so trained his mind that it would hold fast to the mechanical routine of the day, though his own voice sounded strange in his own ears, and his hands, when he wrote, grew large as pillows or small as peas at the end of his wrists. That steadfastness bore his body to the telegraph-office at the railway-station, and dictated a telegram to Hawkins, saying that the Khanda district was, in his judgment, now safe, and he "waited further orders."

William the Conqueror.

MORNING brought the penetrating chill of the Northern December, the layers of wood-smoke, the dusty grey blue of the tamarisks, the domes of ruined tombs, and all the smell of the white Northern plains, as the mail-train ran on to the mile-long Sutlej Bridge. William, wrapped in a poshteen—silk-embroidered sheepskin jacket trimmed with rough astrakhan—looked out with moist eyes and nostrils that dilated joyously. The South of pagodas and palm-trees, the over-populated Hindu South, was done with. Here was the land she knew and loved, and before her lay the good life she understood, among folk of her own caste and mind.

William the Conqueror.

OF THE wheels of public service that turn under the Indian Government, there is none more important than the Department of Woods and Forests. The reboisement of all India is in its hands ; or will be when Government has the money to spend. Its servants wrestle with wandering sand-torrents and shifting dunes : wattling them at the sides, damming them in front, and pegging them down atop with coarse grass and spindling pine after the rules of Nancy. They are responsible for all the timber in the State forests of the Himalayas, as well as for the denuded hillsides that the monsoons wash into dry gullies and aching ravines ; each cut a mouth crying aloud what carelessness can do. They experiment with battalions of foreign trees, and coax the blue gum to take root and, perhaps, dry up the Canal fever. In the plains the chief part of their duty is to see that the belt fire-lines in the forest reserves are kept clean, so that when drought comes and the cattle starve, they may throw the reserve open to the villager's herds and allow the man himself to gather sticks. They poll and lop for the stacked railway-fuel along the lines that burn no coal; they calculate the profit of their plantations to five points of decimals; they are the doctors and midwives of the huge teak forests of Upper Burma, the rubber of the Eastern Jungles, and the gall-nuts of the South; and they are always hampered by lack of funds.

In the Rukh.

DO YOU know what life at a Mission outpost means? Try to imagine a loneliness exceeding that of the smallest station to which Government has ever sent you—isolation that weighs upon the waking eyelids and drives you by force headlong into the labours of the day. There is no post, there is no one of your own colour to speak to, there are no roads: there is, indeed, food to keep you alive, but it is not pleasant to eat ; and whatever of good or beauty or interest there is in your life, must come from yourself and the grace that may be planted in you.

The Judgment of Dungara.

AS THE day wears and the impetus of the morning dies away, there will come upon you an overwhelming sense of the uselessness of your toil. This must be striven against, and the only spur in your side will be the belief that you are playing against the Devil for the living soul.

The Judgment of Dungara.

THE REPORTS are silent here, because heroism, failure, doubt, despair, and self-abnegation on the part of a mere cultured white man are things of no weight as compared to the saving of one half-human soul from a fantastic faith in wood-spirits, goblins of the rock, and river-fiends.

The Judgment of Dungara.

A SIMLA funeral with the clergyman riding, the mourners riding, and the coffin creaking as it swings between the bearers, is one of the most depressing things on this earth, particularly when the procession passes under the wet, dank dip beneath the Rockcliffe Hotel, where the sun is shut out, and all the hill streams are wailing and weeping together as they go down the valleys.

At the Pit's Mouth.

EACH well-regulated Indian Cemetery keeps half-a-dozen graves permanently open for contingencies and incidental wear and tear.

At the Pit's Mouth.

FAR FROM the haunts of Company Officers who insist upon kit-inspections, far from keen-nosed Sergeants who sniff the pipe stuffed into the bedding-roll, two miles from the tumult of the barracks, lies the Trap. It is an old dry well, shadowed by a twisted pipal tree and fenced with high grass. Here, in the years gone by, did Private Ortheris establish his depot and menagerie for such possessions, dead and living, as could not safely be introduced to the barrack-room. Here were gathered Houdin pullets, and fox-terriers of undoubted pedigree and more than doubtful ownership, for Ortheris was an inveterate poacher and pre-eminent among a regiment of neat-handed dog-stealers.

Never again will the long lazy evenings return wherein Ortheris, whistling softly, moved surgeonwise among the captives of his craft at the bottom of the well ; when Learoyd sat in the niche, giving sage counsel on the management of "tykes," and Mulvaney, from the crook of the overhanging pipal, waved his enormous boots in benediction above our heads, delighting us with tales of Love and War, and strange experiences of cities and men.

Private Learoyd's Story.

THERE WAS the Canteen of course, and there was the Temperance Room with the second-hand papers in it ; but a man of any profession cannot read for eight hours a day in a temperature of 96° or 98° in the shade, running up sometimes to 103° at midnight. Very few men, even though they get a pannikin of flat, stale, muddy beer and hide it under their cots, can continue drinking for six hours a day. One man tried, but he died, and nearly the whole regiment went to his funeral because it gave them something to do. It was too early for the excitement of fever or cholera. The men could only wait and wait and wait, and watch the shadow of the barrack creeping across the blinding white dust. That was a gay life.

They lounged about cantonments—it was too hot for any sort of game, and almost too hot for vice—and fuddled themselves in the evening, and filled themselves to distension with the healthy nitrogenous food provided for them, and the more they stoked the less exercise they took and more explosive they grew. Then tempers began to wear away, and men fell a-brooding over insults real or imaginary, for they had nothing else to think of. The tone of the repartees changed, and instead of saying light-heartedly : “ I’ll knock your silly face in,” men grew laboriously polite and hinted that the cantonments were not big enough for themselves and their enemy, and that there would be more space for one of the two in another Place.

In the Matter of a Private.

“PRAY TO the Saints you may niver see cholera in a throop-thrain ! ’Tis like the judgmint av God hittin’ down from the nakid sky !”

The Daughter of the Regiment.

THEY DO not understand that nobody cares a straw for the internal administration of Native States so long as oppression and crime are kept within decent limits, and the ruler is not drugged, drunk, or diseased from one end of the year to the other. They are the dark places of the earth, full of unimaginable cruelty, touching the Railway and the Telegraph on one side, and, on the other, the days of Harun-al-Raschid.

The Man Who Would be King.

ALL INDIA is full of holy men stammering gospels in strange tongues ; shaken and consumed in the fires of their own zeal ; dreamers, babblers, and visionaries : as it has been from the beginning and will continue to the end.

Kim.

YOUR GODS and my Gods—do you or I know which are the stronger ?

The Mark of the Beast.

EAST OF Suez, some hold, the direct control of Providence ceases ; Man being there handed over to the power of the Gods and Devils of Asia, and the Church of England Providence only exercising an occasional and modified supervision in the case of Englishmen.

The Mark of the Beast.

A MAN should, whatever happens, keep to his own caste, race, and breed. Let the White go to the White and the Black to the Black. Then, whatever trouble falls is in the ordinary course of things—neither sudden, alien, nor unexpected.

Beyond the Pale.

MUCH THAT is written about Oriental passion and impulsiveness is exaggerated and compiled at second-hand, but a little of it is true ; and when an Englishman finds that little, it is quite as startling as any passion in his own proper life.

Beyond the Pale.

BUT THE woman moved not till I stood in front of her, crying : “ O woman, what is this that thou hast done ? ” And she, void of fear, though she knew my thought, laughed, saying : “ It is a little thing. I loved him, and thou art a dog and cattle-thief coming by night. Strike ! ” And I, being still blinded by her beauty, for, O my friend, the women of the Abazai are very fair, said : " Hast thou no fear ? " And she answered : " None—but only the fear that I do not die." Then said I : " Have no fear." And she bowed her head, and I smote it off at the neck-bone so that it leaped between my feet. Thereafter the rage of our people came upon me, and I hacked off the breasts, that the men of Little Malikand might know the crime, and cast the body into the watercourse that flows to the Kabul river. Dray wara yow dee ! Dray wara yow dee ! The body without the head, the soul without light, and my own darkling heart—all three are one—all three are one !

Dray Wara Yow Dee.

IN THE long hot nights of latter April and May all the City seemed to assemble in Lalun's little white room to smoke and to talk. Shiahs of the grimmest and most uncompromising persuasion ; Sufis who had lost all belief in the Prophet and retained but little in God ; wandering Hindu priests passing southward on their way to the Central India fairs and other affairs ; Pundits in black gowns, with spectacles on their noses and undigested wisdom in their insides ; bearded headmen of the wards ; Sikhs with all the details of the latest ecclesiastical scandal in the Golden Temple ; red-eyed priests from beyond the Border, looking like trapped wolves and talking like ravens ; M.A.'s of the University, very superior and very voluble—all these people and more also you might find in the white room.

On the City Wall.

A GLARE of light on the stair-head, a clink of innumerable bangles, a rustle of much fine gauze, and the Dainty Iniquity stands revealed, blazing—literally blazing—with jewellery from head to foot. Take one of the fairest miniatures that the Delhi painters draw, and multiply it by ten ; throw in one of Angelica Kaufmann's best portraits, and add anything that you can think of from Beckford to Lalla Rookh, and you will still fall short of the merits of that perfect face ! For an instant, even the grim professional gravity of the Police is relaxed in the presence of the Dainty Iniquity with the gems, who so prettily invites every one to be seated, and proffers such refreshments as she conceives the palates of the barbarians would prefer. Her maids are only one degree less gorgeous than she. Half a lakh, or fifty thousand pounds' worth—it is easier to credit the latter statement than the former—are disposed upon her little body. Each hand carries five jewelled rings which are connected by golden chains to a great jewelled boss of gold in the centre of the back of the hand. Ear-rings weighted with emeralds and pearls, diamond nose-rings, and how many other hundred articles make up the list of adornments. English furniture of a gorgeous and gimcrack kind, unlimited chandeliers, and a collection of atrocious Continental prints are scattered about the house, and on every landing squats or loafs a Bengali who can talk English with unholy fluency.

Calcutta. City of Dreadful Night.

OVER OUR heads burned the wonderful Indian stars, which are not all pricked in on one plane, but, preserving an orderly perspective, draw the eye through the velvet darkness of the void up to the barred doors of heaven itself. The earth was a grey shadow more unreal than the sky. We could hear her breathing lightly in the pauses between the howling of the jackals, the movement of the wind in the tamarisks, and the fitful mutter of musketry-fire leagues away to the left. A native woman from some unseen hut began to sing, the mail-train thundered past on its way to Delhi, and a roosting crow cawed drowsily. Then there was a belt-loosening silence about the fires, and the even breathing of the crowded earth took up the story.

The Courting of Dinah Shadd.

FOR BLEAK, unadulterated misery that dâk-bungalow was the worst of the many that I had ever set foot in. There was no fireplace, and the windows would not open ; so a brazier of charcoal would have been useless. The rain and the wind splashed and gurgled and moaned round the house, and the toddy-palms rattled and roared. Half-a-dozen jackals went through the compound singing, and a hyena stood afar off and mocked them. A hyena would convince a Sadducee of the Resurrection of the Dead—the worst sort of Dead. Then came the ratub—a curious meal, half native and half English in composition—with the old khansamah babbling behind my chair about dead-and-gone English people, and the wind-blown candles playing shadow-bo-peep with the bed and the mosquito-curtains. It was just the sort of dinner and evening to make a man think of every single one of his past sins, and of all the others that he intended to commit if he lived.

My Own True Ghost Story.

OVERHEAD blazed the unwinking eye of the Moon. Darkness gives at least a false impression of coolness. It was hard not to believe that the flood of light from above was warm.

Not so hot as the Sun, but still sickly warm, and heating the heavy air beyond what was our due. Straight as a bar of polished steel ran the road to the City of Dreadful Night ; and on either side of the road lay corpses disposed on beds in fantastic attitudes—one hundred and seventy bodies of men. Some shrouded all in white with bound-up mouths ; some naked and black as ebony in the strong light ; and one—that lay face upwards with dropped jaw, far away from the others—silvery white and ashen grey.

Lahore. "The City of Dreadful Night."

THEN SILENCE follows—the silence that is full of the night noises of a great city. A stringed instrument of some kind is just, and only just audible. High over head some one throws open a window, and the rattle of the woodwork echoes down the empty street. On one of the roofs a hookah is in full blast ; and the men are talking softly as the pipe gutters. A little farther on the noise of conversation is more distinct. A slit of light shows itself between the sliding shutters of a shop.

Inside, a stubble-bearded, weary-eyed trader is balancing his account-books among the bales of cotton prints that surround him. Three sheeted figures bear him company, and throw in a remark from time to time. First he makes an entry, then a remark ; then passes the back of his hand across his streaming forehead. The heat in the built-in street is fearful. Inside the shops it must be almost unendurable. But the work goes on steadily ; entry, guttural growl, and uplifted hand-stroke succeeding each other with the precision of clock-work.

Lahore. "The City of Dreadful Night."

"ALLAH HO AKBAR" ; then a pause while another Muezzin somewhere in the direction of the Golden Temple takes up the call—"Allah ho Akbar." Again and again ; four times in all ; and from the bedsteads a dozen men have risen up already.—"I bear witness that there is no God but God." What a splendid cry it is, the proclamation of the creed that brings men out of their beds by scores at midnight ! Once again he thunders through the same phrase, shaking with the vehemence of his own voice ; and then, far and near, the night air rings with " Mahomet is the Prophet of God." It is as though he were flinging his defiance to the far-off horizon, where the summer lightning plays and leaps like a bared sword. Every Muezzin in the city is in full cry, and some men on the roof-tops are beginning to kneel. A long pause precedes the last cry, " La ilaha Illallah," and the silence closes up on it, as the ram on the head of a cotton-bale.

Lahore. " The City of Dreadful Night."

THE BLOOM of the peach-orchards is upon all the Valley, and here is only dust and a great stink. There is a pleasant wind among the mulberry trees, and the streams are bright with snow-water, and the caravans go up and the caravans go down, and a hundred fires sparkle in the gut of the Pass, and tent-peg answers hammer-nose, and pack-horse squeals to pack-horse across the drift smoke of the evening. It is good in the North now. Come back with me. Let us return to our own people ! Come !

Dray Wara Yow Dee.

HE GREW up with the cubs, though they, of course, were grown wolves almost before he was a child, and Father Wolf taught him his business, and the meaning of things in the jungle, till every rustle in the grass, every breath of the warm night air, every note of the owls above his head, every scratch of a bat's claws as it roosted for a while in a tree, and every splash of every little fish jumping in a pool, meant just as much to him as the work of his office means to a business man. When he was not learning he sat out in the sun and slept, and ate and went to sleep again ; when he felt dirty or hot he swam in the forest pools ; and when he wanted honey (Baloo told him that honey and nuts were just as pleasant to eat as raw meat) he climbed up for it, and that Bagheera showed him how to do. Bagheera would lie out on a branch and call, " Come along, Little Brother," and at first Mowgli would cling like the sloth, but afterward he would fling himself through the branches almost as boldly as the grey ape.

Mowgli's Brothers.

BUT MOWGLI, as a man-cub, had to learn a great deal more than this. Sometimes Bagheera, the Black Panther, would come lounging through the jungle to see how his pet was getting on, and would purr with his head against a tree while Mowgli recited the day's lesson to Baloo. The boy could climb almost as well as he could swim, and swim almost as well as he could run ; so Baloo, the Teacher of the Law, taught him the Wood and Water Laws : how to tell a rotten branch from a sound one ; how to speak politely to the wild bees when he came upon a hive of them fifty feet above the ground ; what to say to Mang the Bat when he disturbed him in the branches at mid-day ; and how to warn the water-snakes in the pools before he splashed down among them.

Kaa's Hunting.

THEN THEY began their flight; and the flight of the Monkey-People through tree-land is one of the things nobody can describe. They have their regular roads and cross-roads, up hills and down hills, all laid out from fifty to seventy or a hundred feet above ground, and by these they can travel even at night if necessary. Two of the strongest monkeys caught Mowgli under the arms and swung off with him through the tree-tops, twenty feet at a bound. Had they been alone they could have gone twice as fast, but the boy's weight held them back. Sick and giddy as Mowgli was he could not help enjoying the wild rush, though the glimpses of earth far down below frightened him, and the terrible check and jerk at the end of the swing over nothing but empty air brought his heart between his teeth. His escort would rush him up a tree till he felt the thinnest topmost branches crackle and bend under them, and then, with a cough and a whoop, would fling themselves into the air outward and downward, and bring up, hanging by their hands or their feet to the lower limbs of the next tree. Sometimes he could see for miles and miles across the still green jungle, as a man on the top of a mast can see for miles across the sea, and then the branches and leaves would lash him across the face, and he and his two guards would be almost down to earth again. So, bounding and crashing and whooping and yelling, the whole tribe of Bandar-log swept along the tree-roads with Mowgli as their prisoner.

Kaa's Hunting.

“GOOD. Begins now the dance—the Dance of the Hunger of Kaa. Sit still and watch.”

He turned twice or thrice in a big circle, weaving his head from right to left. Then he began making loops and figures of eight with his body, and soft, oozy triangles that melted into squares and five-sided figures, and coiled mounds, never resting, never hurrying, and never stopping his low, humming song. It grew darker and darker, till at last the dragging shifting coils disappeared, but they could hear the rustle of the scales.

Kaa's Hunting.

EVEN WHEN he was being lionised in London he had held before him his dream of peace and quiet—the long, white, dusty Indian road, printed all over with bare feet, the incessant, slow-moving traffic, and the sharp-smelling wood smoke curling up under the fig-trees in the twilight, where the wayfarers sit at their evening meal.

The Miracle of Purun Bhagat.

HE FOLLOWED the Himalaya-Thibet road, the little ten-foot track that is blasted out of solid rock, or strutted out on timbers over gulfs a thousand feet deep ; that dips into warm, wet, shut-in valleys, and climbs out across bare, grassy hill-shoulders where the sun strikes like a burning-glass ; or turns through dripping, dark forests where the tree-ferns dress the trunks from head to heel, and the pheasant calls to his mate. And he met Thibetan herdsmen with their dogs and flocks of sheep, each sheep with a little bag of borax on his back, and wandering wood-cutters, and cloaked and blanketed Lamas from Thibet, coming into India on pilgrimage, and envoys of little solitary Hill-states, posting furiously on ring-streaked and piebald ponies, or the cavalcade of a Rajah paying a visit ; or else for a long, clear day he would see nothing more than a black bear grunting and rooting below in the valley. When he first started, the roar of the world he had left still rang in his ears, as the roar of a tunnel rings long after the train has passed through ; but when he had put the Mutteeanee Pass behind him that was all done, and Purun Bhagat was alone with himself, walking, wondering, and thinking, his eyes on the ground, and his thoughts with the clouds.

The Miracle of Purun Bhagat.

IMMEDIATELY below him the hillside fell away, clean and cleared for fifteen hundred feet, where a little village of stone-walled houses, with roofs of beaten earth, clung to the steep tilt. All round it the tiny terraced fields lay out like aprons of patchwork on the knees of the mountain, and cows no bigger than beetles grazed between the smooth stone circles of the threshing-floors. Looking across the valley, the eye was deceived by the size of things, and could not at first realise that what seemed to be low scrub, on the opposite mountain-flank, was in truth a forest of hundred-foot pines. Purun Bhagat saw an eagle swoop across the gigantic hollow, but the great bird dwindled to a dot ere it was half-way over. A few bands of scattered cloud strung up and down the valley, catching on a shoulder of the hills, or rising up and dying out when they were level with the head of the pass. And "Here shall I find peace," said Purun Bhagat.

The Miracle of Purun Bhagat.

FURTHER EAST

FURTHER EAST

MINOR ARTISTS had worked with Kano the magnificent. These had been allowed to lay brush upon panels of wood in the outer verandahs, and very faithfully had they toiled. It was not till the guide called my attention to them that I discovered scores of sketches in monochrome low down on the verandah doors. An iris broken by the fall of a branch torn off by a surly ape ; a bamboo spray bowed before the wind that was ruffling a lake ; a warrior of the past ambushing his enemy in a thicket, hand on sword, and mouth gathered into puckers of intensest concentration, were among the many notes that met my eye. How long, think you, would a sepia-drawing stand without defacement in the midst of our civilisation were it put on the bottom panel of a door, or the scantling of a kitchen passage ? Yet in this gentle country a man may stoop down and write his name in the very dust, certain that, if the writing be craftily done, his children's children will reverently let it stand.

From Sea to Sea.

JAPAN IS a great people. Her masons play with stone, her carpenters with wood, her smiths with iron, and her artists with life, death, and all the eye can take in. Mercifully she has been denied the last touch of firmness in her character which would enable her to play with the whole round world. We possess that—We, the nation of the glass flower-shade, the pink worsted mat, the red and green china puppy dog, and the poisonous Brussels carpet. It is our compensation.

From Sea to Sea.

IN HIS own land, I believe, the Chinaman is treated with a certain amount of carelessness, not to say ferocity. Where he hides his love of Art, the Heaven that made him out of the yellow earth that holds so much iron only knows. His love is for little things, or else why should he get quaint pendants for his pipe, and at the backmost back of his shop build up for himself a bower-bird's collection of odds and ends, every one of which has beauty if you hold it sufficiently close to the eye. It grieves me that I cannot account for the ideas of a few hundred million men in a few hours. This much, however, seems certain. If we had control over as many Chinamen as we have natives of India, and had given them one tithe of the cosseting, the painful pushing forward, and studious, even nervous, regard of their interests and aspirations that we have given to India, we should long ago have been expelled from, or have reaped the reward of, the richest land on the face of the earth.

From Sea to Sea.

THERE WERE girls who had been to Leadville and Denver and the wilds of the wilder West, who had acted in minor companies, and who had generally misconducted themselves in a hundred weary ways. They chattered like daws and shovelled down the sickly liquor that made the rooms reek. As long as they talked sensibly things were amusing, but a sufficiency of liquor made the mask drop, and verily they swore by all their gods, chief of whom is Obidicut. Very many men have heard a white woman swear, but some few, and among these I have been, are denied the experience. It is quite a revelation ; and if nobody tilts you backward out of your chair, you can reflect on heaps of things connected with it. So they cursed and they drank and they told tales, sitting in a circle, till I felt that this was really Life and a thing to be quitted if I wished to like it. The young man who knew a thing or two, and gave the girls leave to sell him if they could, was there of course ; and the hussies sold him as he stood for all he considered himself worth ; and I saw the by-play. Surely the safest way to be fooled is to know everything.

From Sea to Sea.

THE MARCH of the Mongol is a pretty thing to write about in magazines. Hear it once in the gloom of an ancient curio shop, where nameless devils of the Chinese creed make mouths at you from back-shelves, where brazen dragons, revelations of uncleanness, all catch your feet as you stumble across the floor—hear the tramp of the feet on the granite blocks of the road and the breaking waves of human speech, that is not human! Watch the yellow faces that glare at you between the bars, and you will be afraid, as I was afraid.

From Sea to Sea.

BEHOLD A bunnia's shop (in Japan). He sells rice and chillies and dried fish and wooden scoops made of bamboo. The front of his shop is very solid. It is made of half-inch battens nailed side by side. Not one of the battens is broken; and each one is foursquare perfectly. Feeling ashamed of himself for this surly barring up of his house, he fills one-half the frontage with oiled paper stretched upon quarter-inch framing. Not a single square of oil paper has a hole in it, and not one of the squares, which in more uncivilised countries would hold a pane of glass if strong enough, is out of line. And the bunnia, clothed in a blue dressing-gown, with thick white stockings on his feet, sits behind, not among his wares, on a pale gold-coloured mat of soft rice straw bound with black list at the edges. This mat is two inches thick, three feet wide, and six long. You might, if you were a sufficient pig, eat your dinner off any portion of it. The bunnia lies with one wadded blue arm round a big brazier of hammered brass on which is faintly delineated in incised lines a very terrible dragon. The brazier is full of charcoal ash, but there is no ash on the mat. By the bunnia's side is a pouch of green leather tied with a red silk cord, holding tobacco cut fine as cotton. He fills a long black and red lacquered pipe, lights it at the charcoal in the brazier, takes two whiffs, and the pipe is empty. Still there is no speck on the mat. Behind the bunnia is a shadow-screen of bead and bamboo. This veils a room floored with pale gold and roofed with panels of grained cedar. There is nothing in the room save a blood-red blanket laid out smoothly as a sheet of paper. Beyond the room is a passage of polished wood, so polished that it gives back the reflections of the white paper wall. At the end of the passage and clearly visible to this unique bunnia is a dwarfed pine two feet high in a green glazed pot, and by its side is a branch of azalea, blood-red as the blanket, set in a pale grey crackle-pot. The bunnia has put it there for his own pleasure, for the delight of his eyes, because he loves it.

From Sea to Sea.

ADVENTURE

ADVENTURE

“ I’VE SEEN Sir Huon and a troop of his people setting off from Tintagel Castle for Hy-Brasil in the teeth of a sou’-westerly gale, with the spray flying all over the Castle, and the Horses of the Hill wild with fright. Out they’d go in a lull, screaming like gulls, and back they’d be driven five good miles inland before they could come head to wind again. Butterfly-wings ! It was Magic—Magic as black as Merlin could make it, and the whole sea was green fire and white foam with singing mermaids in it. And the Horses of the Hill picked their way from one wave to another by the lightning flashes ! That was how it was in the old days ! ”

Weland’s Sword.

“ HE MADE no promise ; he swore no oath ; he looked for no thanks ; but to Hugh, an armless man, and to me, an old cripple whom he could have flung into the sea, he passed over wedge upon wedge, packet upon packet of gold and dust of gold, and only ceased when we would take no more. As he stooped from the rail to bid us farewell he stripped off his right-arm bracelets and put them all on Hugh's left, and he kissed Hugh on the cheek. I think when Thorkild of Borkum bade the rowers give way we were near weeping. It is true that Witta was an heathen and a pirate ; true it is he held us by force many months in his ship ; but I loved that bow-legged, blue-eyed man for his great boldness, his cunning, his skill, and, beyond all, for his simplicity."

The Knights of the Joyous Venture.

"MONEY MEANS pace and weight," said Shiraz, rubbing his black-silk nose dolefully along his neat-fitting boot, "and by the maxims of the game as I know it——"

"Ah, but we aren't playing the maxims," said the Maltese Cat. "We're playing the game, and we've the great advantage of knowing the game."

The Maltese Cat.

IT WAS a glorious sight, and the come-and-go of the little quick hooves, and the incessant salutations of ponies that had met before on other polo-grounds or racecourses, were enough to drive a four-footed thing wild.

The Maltese Cat.

NOW A polo-pony is like a poet. If he is born with a love for the game he can be made. The Maltese Cat knew that bamboos grew solely in order that polo-balls might be turned from their roots, that grain was given to ponies to keep them in hard condition, and that ponies were shod to prevent them slipping on a turn. But, besides all these things, he knew every trick and device of the finest game of the world, and for two seasons he had been teaching the others all he knew or guessed.

The Maltese Cat.

THEY WERE a team of crack players instead of a crack team ; and that made all the difference in the world.

The Maltese Cat.

THE FOG had gone, but a sullen sea ran in great rollers behind it. The We're Here slid, as it were, into long, sunk avenues and ditches which felt quite sheltered and homelike if they would only stay still ; but they changed without rest or mercy, and flung up the schooner to crown one peak of a thousand gray hills, while the wind hooted through her rigging as she zigzagged down the slopes. Far away a sea would burst in a sheet of foam, and the others would follow suit as at a signal, till Harvey's eyes swam with the vision of interlacing whites and grays. Four or five Mother Carey's chickens stormed round in circles, shrieking as they swept past the bows. A rain-squall or two strayed aimlessly over the hopeless waste, ran down wind and back again, and melted away.

"Captains Courageous."

SHE MIGHT have been the very Flying Dutchman, so foul, draggled, and unkempt was every rope and stick aboard. Her old-style quarter-deck was some four or five feet high, and her rigging flew knotted and tangled like weed at a wharf-end. She was running before the wind—yawing frightfully—her staysail let down to act as a sort of extra foresail—“scandalised,” they call it—and her foreboom guyed out over the side. Her bowsprit cocked up like an old-fashioned frigate’s; her jib-boom had been fished and spliced and nailed and clamped beyond further repair; and as she hove herself forward, and sat down on her broad tail, she looked for all the world like a blouzy, frowzy, bad old woman sneering at a decent girl.

“Captains Courageous.”

IT WAS a forlorn little jingle; the thick air seemed to pinch it off; and in the pauses Harvey heard the muffled shriek of a liner’s siren, and he knew enough of the Banks to know what that meant. It came to him, with horrible distinctness, how a boy in a cherry-coloured jersey—he despised fancy blazers now with all a fisherman’s contempt—how an ignorant, rowdy boy had once said it would be “great” if a steamer ran down a fishing-boat. That boy had a state-room with a hot and cold bath, and spent ten minutes each morning picking over a gilt-edged bill of fare. And that same boy—no, his very much older brother—was up at four of the dim dawn in streaming, crackling oilskins, hammering, literally for the dear life, on a bell smaller than the steward’s breakfast bell, while somewhere close at hand a thirty-foot steel stem was storming along at twenty miles an hour ! The bitterest thought of all was that there were folks asleep in dry, upholstered cabins who would never learn that they had massacred a boat before breakfast. So Harvey rang the bell.

“Captains Courageous.”

THEY SAW little of the horizon save when she topped a swell ; and usually she was elbowing, fidgeting, and coaxing her steadfast way through gray, gray-blue, or black hollows laced across and across with streaks of shivering foam ; or rubbing herself caressingly along the flank of some bigger water-hill. It was as if she said : " You wouldn't hurt me, surely ? I'm only the little We're Here." Then she would slide away chuckling softly to herself till she was brought up by some fresh obstacle. The dullest of folk cannot see this kind of thing hour after hour through long days without noticing it ; and Harvey, being anything but dull, began to comprehend and enjoy the dry chorus of wave-tops turning over with a sound of incessant tearing ; the hurry of the winds working across open spaces and herding the purple-blue cloud-shadows ; the splendid upheaval of the red sunrise ; the folding and packing away of the morning mists, wall after wall withdrawn across the white floors ; the salty glare and blaze of noon ; the kiss of rain falling over thousands of dead, flat square miles ; the chilly blackening of everything at the day's end ; and the million wrinkles of the sea under the moonlight when the jib-boom solemnly poked at the low stars, and Harvey went down to get a doughnut from the cook.

" Captains Courageous."

THE SEA was like smoky oil, except where it turned to fire under our forefoot and whirled back into the dark in smears of dull flame. There was a thunderstorm some miles away ; we could see the glimmer of the lightning. The ship's cow, distressed by the heat and the smell of the ape-beast in the cage, lowed unhappily from time to time in exactly the same key as that in which the look-out man answered the hourly call from the bridge. The tramping tune of the engines was very distinct, and the jarring of the ash-lift, as it was tipped into the sea, hurt the procession of hushed noise.

Bertran and Bimi.

“ LOOK,” HE answered, and I saw that the dead sea-mist had risen out of the lifeless sea and wrapped us while my back had been turned. The pencils of the Light marched staggeringly across tilted floors of white cloud. From the balcony round the light-room the white walls of the lighthouse ran down into swirling, smoking space. The noise of the tide coming in very lazily over the rocks was choked down to a thick drawl.

The Disturber of Traffic.

“YOU UNDERSTAND us English are always looking up marks and lighting sea-ways all the world over, never asking with your leave or by your leave, seeing that the sea concerns us more than any one else.”

The Disturber of Traffic.

THE SEA, sliding over 267's skin, worried me with importunate, half-caught confidences. It drummed tackily to gather my attention, coughed, spat, cleared its throat, and, on the eve of that portentous communication, retired up stage as a multitude whispering. Anon, I caught the tramp of armies afoot, the hum of crowded cities awaiting the event, the single sob of a woman, and dry roaring of wild beasts.
A dropped shovel clanging on the stokehold floor was, naturally enough, the unbarring of arena gates ; our sucking uplift across the crest of some little swell, nothing less than the haling forth of new worlds ; our half-turning descent into the hollow of its mate, the abysmal plunge of God-forgotten planets. Through all these phenomena and more—though I ran with wild horses over illimitable plains of rustling grass ; though I crouched belly-flat under appalling fires of musketry ; though I was Livingstone, painless and incurious in the grip of his lion—my shut eyes saw the lamp swinging in its gimbals, the irregularly gliding patch of light on the steel ladder, and every elastic shadow in the corners of the frail angle-irons ; while my body strove to accommodate itself to the infernal vibration of the machine. At the last I rolled limply on the floor, and woke to real life with a bruised nose and a great call to go on deck at once.

“ Their Lawful Occasions.”

THE SKY behind us whitened as I laboured, and the first dawn drove down the Channel, tipping the wave-tops with a chill glare. To me that round wind which runs before the true day has ever been fortunate and of good omen. It cleared the trouble from my body, and set my soul dancing to 267's heel and toe across the northerly set of the waves—such waves as I had often watched contemptuously from the deck of a ten-thousand-ton liner. They shouldered our little hull sideways and passed, scalloped, and splayed out, toward the coast, carrying our white wake in loops.

“Their Lawful Occasions.”

THERE WAS Mulvaney, the father in the craft, who had served with various regiments from Bermuda to Halifax, old in war, scarred, reckless, resourceful, and in his pious hours an unequalled soldier. To him turned for help and comfort six and a half feet of slow-moving, heavy-footed Yorkshireman, born on the wolds, bred in the dales, and educated chiefly among the carriers' carts at the back of York railway-station. His name was Learoyd, and his chief virtue an unmitigated patience which helped him to win fights. How Ortheris, a fox-terrier of a Cockney, ever came to be one of the trio, is a mystery which even to-day I cannot explain. "There was always three av us," Mulvaney used to say. "An' by the grace av God, so long as our service lasts, three av us they'll always be. 'Tis bettther so."

The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney.

"A DHIRTY man," he was used to say, in the speech of his kind, "goes to Clink for a weakness in the knees, an' is coort-martialled for a pair av socks missin' ; but a clane man, such as is an ornament to his service—a man whose buttons are gold, whose coat is wax upon him, an' whose 'coutrements are widout a speck—that man may, spakin' in reason, do fwhat he likes an' dhrink from day to divil. That's the pride av bein' dacint."

The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney.

"O MY time past, whin I put me fut through ivry livin' wan av the Tin Commandmints between Revelly and Lights Out, blew the froth off a pewter, wiped me moustache wid the back av me hand, an' slept on ut all as quiet as a little child ! ”

The Solid Muldoon.

“ WATCH THE hand,” said Mulvaney ; “ av she shuts her hand tight, thumb down over the knuckle, take up your hat an’ go. You’ll only make a fool av yoursilf av you shtay. But av the hand lies opin on the lap, or av you see her thryin’ to shut ut, an’ she can’t—go on ! She’s not past reasonin’ wid.”

The Solid Muldoon.

“ I KNEW if something didn’t happen, something worse would,” said Leggatt. “ It never fails when you’re aboard.”

The Horse Marines.

“ WHEN numerous bodies of ’ighly trained men arrive simultaneous in the same latitude from opposite directions, each remarking briskly, 'What the 'ell did you do that for?' detonation, as you might say, is practically assured."

The Horse Marines.

THERE WAS no answer, save the incessant angry murmur of the Nile as it raced round a basalt-walled bend and foamed across a rock-ridge half a mile up-stream. It was as though the brown weight of the river would drive the white men back to their own country. The indescribable scent of Nile mud in the air told that the stream was falling and that the next few miles would be no light thing for the whale-boats to overpass. The desert ran down almost to the banks, where, among gray, red, and black hillocks, a camel-corps was encamped. No man dared even for a day lose touch of the slow-moving boats; there had been no fighting for weeks past, and throughout all that time the Nile had never spared them. Rapid had followed rapid, rock rock, and island-group island-group, till the rank and file had long since lost all count of direction and very nearly of time.

The Light that Failed.

DICK PAID seven shillings a week for his lodging, which left him rather less than a shilling a day for food and drink. Naturally, his first purchase was of the materials of his craft ; he had been without them too long. Half a day's investigation and comparison brought him to the conclusion that sausages and mashed potatoes, twopence a plate, were the best food. Now, sausages once or twice a week for breakfast are not unpleasant. As lunch, even, with mashed potatoes, they become monotonous. As dinner they are impertinent. At the end of three days Dick loathed sausages, and, going forth, pawned his watch to revel on sheep's head, which is not as cheap as it looks, owing to the bones and the gravy. Then he returned to sausages and mashed potatoes. Then he confined himself entirely to mashed potatoes for a day, and was unhappy because of pain in his inside. Then he pawned his waistcoat and his tie, and thought regretfully of money thrown away in times past. There are few things more edifying unto Art than the actual belly-pinch of hunger, and Dick in his few walks abroad—he did not care for exercise, it raised desires that could not be satisfied—found himself dividing mankind into two classes,—those who looked as if they might give him something to eat, and those who looked otherwise. “I never knew what I had to learn about the human face before,” he thought ; and, as a reward for his humility, Providence caused a cab-driver at a sausage-shop where Dick fed that night to leave half eaten a great chunk of bread. Dick took it, —would have fought all the world for its possession,—and it cheered him.

The Light that Failed.

“AND THERE are noises under the sea, and sounds overhead in a clear sky. Then you find your island alive with hot moist orchids that make mouths at you, and can do everything except talk. There’s a waterfall in it three hundred feet high, just like a sliver of green jade laced with silver ; and millions of wild bees live up in the rocks ; and you can hear the fat cocoa-nuts falling from the palms ; and you order an ivory-white servant to sling you a long yellow hammock with tassels on it like ripe maize, and you put up your feet and hear the bees hum and the water fall till you go to sleep."

The Light that Failed.

A BLIND man cannot eat with cleanliness till he has been some months used to the darkness. If he demand attendance and grow angry at the want of it, he must assert himself and stand upright. Then the meanest menial can see that he is blind and, therefore, of no consequence. A wise man will keep his eyes on the floor and sit still. For amusement he may pick coal lump by lump out of the scuttle with the tongs, and pile it in a little heap in the fender, keeping count of the lumps, which must all be put back again, one by one and very carefully. He may set himself sums if he cares to work them out ; he may talk to himself or to the cat if she chooses to visit him ; and if his trade has been that of an artist, he may sketch in the air with his forefinger ; but that is too much like drawing a pig with the eyes shut. He may go to his bookshelves and count his books, ranging them in order of their size ; or to his wardrobe and count his shirts, laying them in piles of two or three on the bed, as they suffer from frayed cuffs or lost buttons. Even this entertainment wearies after a time ; and all the times are very, very long.

The Light that Failed.

THAT NIGHT he prayed to God that his mind might be taken from him, offering for proof that he was worthy of this favour the fact that he had not shot himself long ago.

The Light that Failed.

SO HE was brought to Madame Binat's and filled his nostrils with the well-remembered smell of the East, that runs without a change from the canal head to Hong-Kong, and his mouth with the villainous Lingua Franca of the Levant. The heat smote him between the shoulder-blades with the buffet of an old friend, his feet slipped on the sand, and his coat-sleeve was warm as new-baked bread when he lifted it to his nose.

The Light that Failed.

FIRST, shadowy under closing eyelids, would come the outline of the brushwood-pile ; next the white sand of the beach road, almost overhanging the black, changeful sea ; then the turn inland and uphill to the single light.

The Brushwood Boy.

AT LAST he saw the brushwood-pile, and hurried along to the ridge, for behind him he felt was the wide-awake, sultry world. He reached the lamp in safety, tingling with drowsiness, when a policeman—a common country policeman—sprang up before him and touched him on the shoulder ere he could dive into the dim valley below. He was filled with terror—the hopeless terror of dreams—for the policeman said, in the awful distinct voice of the dream-people, "I am Policeman Day coming back from the City of Sleep. You come with me."

The Brushwood Boy.

THEY FLED hand in hand till they reached a road that spanned ravines, and ran along the edge of precipices, and was tunnelled through mountains. "This goes to our brushwood-pile," said his companion; and all his trouble was at an end. He took a pony, because he understood that this was the Thirty-Mile-Ride, and he must ride swiftly; and raced through the clattering tunnels and round the curves, always downhill, till he heard the sea to his left, and saw it raging under a full moon against sandy cliffs. It was heavy going, but he recognised the nature of the country, the dark purple downs inland, and the bents that whistled in the wind. The road was eaten away in places, and the sea lashed at him—black, foamless tongues of smooth and glossy rollers; but he was sure that there was less danger from the sea than from "Them," whoever "They" were, inland to his right.

He knew, too, that he would be safe if he could reach the down with the lamp on it. This came as he expected : he saw the one light a mile ahead along the beach, dismounted, turned to the right, walked quietly over to the brushwood-pile, found the little steamer had returned to the beach whence he had unmoored it, and—must have fallen asleep, for he could remember no more.

The Brushwood Boy.

HE INTRODUCES me to the Captain of "162"—Captain Purnall, and his relief, Captain Hodgson. The one is small and dark ; the other large and red ; but each has the brooding sheathed glance characteristic of eagles and aeronauts.

With the Night Mail.

IT LEAPS monstrously across the blackness, alights on the precise tip of our nose, pirouettes there an instant, and swings off. Our roaring bow sinks as though that light were lead—sinks and recovers to lurch and stumble again beneath the next blow-out. Tim's fingers on the lift-shunt strike chords of numbers—1 : 4 : 7 :—2 : 4 : 6 :—7 : 5 : 3, and so on ; for he is running by his tanks only, lifting or lowering her against the uneasy air. All three engines are at work, for the sooner we have skated over this thin ice the better. Higher we dare not go. The whole upper vault is charged with pale krypton vapours, which our skin-friction may excite to unholy manifestations. Between the upper and lower levels—5000 and 7000, hints the Mark Boat—we may perhaps bolt through if . . . Our bow clothes itself in blue flame and falls like a sword. No human skill can keep pace with the changing tensions. A vortex has us by the beak and we dive down a two-thousand-foot slant at an angle (the dip-dial and my bouncing body record it) of thirty-five. Our turbines scream shrilly ; the propellers cannot bite on the thin air ; Tim shunts the lift out of five tanks at once and by sheer weight drives her bullet-wise through the maelstrom till she cushions with a jar on an up-gust, three thousand feet below.

With the Night Mail.

HUMANITIES

HUMANITIES

“MY SPIRITS, d’you see, were caught up in a high, solemn exaltation, and I saw all earth’s vanities foreshortened and little, laid out below me like a town from a cathedral scaffolding.”

The Wrong Thing.

NOW THE reserve of a boy is tenfold deeper than the reserve of a maid, she being made for one end only by blind Nature, but man for several.

The Flag of their Country.

“NOT ONE little bit of it, Padre,” said M’Turk. “Bullies like bullyin’. They mean it. They think it up in lesson and practise it in the quarters.”

The Moral Reformers.

THEY CALLED a house-meeting after dinner—an excited and angry meeting of all save the prefects, whose dignity, though they sympathised, did not allow them to attend. They read ungrammatical resolutions, and made speeches beginning, “Gentlemen, we have met on this occasion,” and ending with, “It’s a beastly shame,” precisely as houses have done since time and schools began.

An Unsavoury Interlude.

WHEN A matured man discovers that he has been deserted by Providence, deprived of his God, and cast without help, comfort, or sympathy, upon a world which is new and strange to him, his despair, which may find expression in evil-living, the writing of his experiences, or the more satisfactory diversion of suicide, is generally supposed to be impressive. A child, under exactly similar circumstances as far as its knowledge goes, cannot very well curse God and die. It howls till its nose is red, its eyes are sore, and its head aches.

Baa, Baa, Black Sheep.

FOR WHEN young lips have drunk deep of the bitter waters of Hate, Suspicion, and Despair, all the Love in the world will not wholly take away that knowledge ; though it may turn darkened eyes for a while to the light, and teach Faith where no Faith was.

Baa, Baa, Black Sheep.

TO REAR a boy under what parents call the " sheltered life system " is, if the boy must go into the world and fend for himself, not wise. Unless he be one in a thousand he has certainly to pass through many unnecessary troubles ; and may, possibly, come to extreme grief simply from ignorance of the proper proportions of things.

Let a puppy eat the soap in the bath-room or chew a newly-blacked boot. He chews and chuckles until, by and by, he finds out that blacking and Old Brown Windsor make him very sick ; so he argues that soap and boots are not wholesome. Any old dog about the house will soon show him the unwisdom of biting big dogs' ears. Being young, he remembers and goes abroad, at six months, a well-mannered little beast with a chastened appetite. If he had been kept away from boots, and soap, and big dogs till he came to the trinity full-grown and with developed teeth, consider how fearfully sick and thrashed he would be! Apply that notion to the "sheltered life," and see how it works. It does not sound pretty but it is the better of two evils.

Thrown Away.

HE COULD not altogether understand the boys, who hung upon his words so reverently. The line of the chin-strap, that still showed white and untanned on cheek-bone and jaw, the steadfast young eyes puckered at the corners of the lids with much staring through red-hot sunshine, the slow, untroubled breathing, and the curious, crisp, curt speech seemed to puzzle him equally. He could create men and women, and send them to the uttermost ends of the earth, to help, delight, and comfort ;

he knew every mood of the fields, and could interpret them to the cities, and he knew the hearts of many in city and the country, but he had hardly, in forty years, come into contact with the thing which is called a Subaltern of the Line. He told the boys this in his own way.

A Conference of the Powers.

BEFORE HE was thirty he discovered that there was no one to play with him. Though the wealth of three toilsome generations stood to his account, though his tastes in the matter of books, bindings, rugs, swords, bronzes, lacquer, pictures, plate, statuary, horses, conservatories, and agriculture were educated and catholic, the public opinion of his country wanted to know why he did not go to office daily, as his father had before him.

An Error in the Fourth Dimension.

THERE WAS no chance now of mistaking the man's nationality. Speech, gesture, and step, so carefully drilled into him, had gone away with the borrowed mask of indifference. It was a lawful son of the Youngest People, whose predecessors were the Red Indian. His voice had risen to the high, throaty crow of his breed when they labour under excitement. His close-set eyes showed by turns unnecessary fear, annoyance beyond reason, rapid and purposeless flights of thought, the child's lust for immediate revenge, and the child's pathetic bewilderment, who knocks his head against the bad, wicked table.

An Error in the Fourth Dimension.

HE WAS going to Plymouth to assist in a consultation upon a fellow-countryman who had retired to a place called The Hoe—was that up town or down town?—to recover from nervous dyspepsia. Yes, he himself was a doctor by profession, and how any one in England could retain any nervous disorder passed his comprehension. Never had he dreamed of an atmosphere so soothing. Even the deep rumble of London traffic was monastical by comparison with some cities he could name ; and the country—why, it was Paradise. A continuance of it, he confessed, would drive him mad ; but for a few months it was the most sumptuous rest cure in his knowledge.

My Sunday at Home.

DESPAIR upon despair, misery upon misery, fear after fear, each causing their distinct and separate woe, packed in upon me for an unrecorded length of time, until at last they blurred together, and I heard a click in my brain like the click in the ear when one descends in a diving bell, and I knew that the pressures were equalised within and without, and that, for the moment, the worst was at an end. But I knew also that at any moment the darkness might come down anew ; and while I dwelt on this speculation precisely as a man torments a raging tooth with his tongue, it ebbed away into the little gray shadow on the brain of its first coming, and once more I heard my brain, which knew what would recur, telegraph to every quarter for help, release, or diversion.

The House Surgeon.

I LAY awake till dawn, breathing quickly and sweating lightly, beneath what De Quincey inadequately describes as “the oppression of inexpressible guilt.” Now as soon as the lovely day was broken, I fell into the most terrible of all dreams—that joyous one in which all past evil has not only been wiped out of our lives, but has never been committed ; and in the very bliss of our assured innocence, before our loves shriek and change countenance, we wake to the day we have earned.

The House Surgeon.

THE NEXT few weeks were for me, as for the invalids, a low delirium, clouded with fantastic memories of Portuguese officials trying to tax calves'-foot jelly ; voluble doctors insisting that true typhoid was unknown in the island ; nurses who had to be exercised, taken out of themselves, and returned on the tick of change of guard ; night slides down glassy, cobbled streets, smelling of sewage and flowers, between walls whose every stone and patch Attley and I knew ; vigils in stucco verandahs, watching the curve and descent of great stars or drawing auguries from the break of dawn ; insane interludes of gambling at the local Casino, where we won heaps of unconsoling silver ; blasts of steamers arriving and departing in the roads ; help offered by total strangers, grabbed at or thrust aside ; the long nightmare crumbling back into sanity one forenoon under a vine-covered trellis, where Attley sat hugging a nurse, while the others danced a noiseless, neat-footed breakdown never learned at the Middlesex Hospital.

The Dog Hervey.

SERVICE

SERVICE

GOD HAS arranged that a clean-run youth of the British middle classes shall, in the matter of backbone, brains, and bowels, surpass all other youths. For this reason a child of eighteen will stand up, doing nothing, with a tin sword in his hand and joy in his heart until he is dropped. If he dies, he dies like a gentleman. If he lives, he writes Home that he has been "potted," "sniped," "chipped," or "cut over," and sits down to besiege Government for a wound-gratuity until the next little war breaks out, when he perjures himself before a Medical Board, blarneys his Colonel, burns incense round his Adjutant, and is allowed to go to the Front once more.

The Drums of the Fore and Aft.

INDEED, when you come to think of it, had the British Army consistently waited for reserves in all its little affairs, the boundaries of Our Empire would have stopped at Brighton beach.

The Drums of the Fore and Aft.

THE OFFICERS, who had been lying down with the men, rose and began to walk steadily up and down the front of their companies.

This manœuvre, executed, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith, to soothe men, demands nerve. You must not hurry, you must not look nervous, though you know that you are a mark for every rifle within extreme range, and above all, if you are smitten you must make as little noise as possible and roll inward through the files. It is at this hour, when the breeze brings the first salt whiff of the powder to noses rather cold at the tip, and the eye can quietly take in the appearance of each red casualty, that the strain on the nerves is strongest.

The Mutiny of the Mavericks.

THOMAS isn't a brute, and his business, which is to look after the virtuous people, demands that he shall have his ammunition to his hand. He doesn't wear silk stockings, and he really ought to be supplied with a new Adjective to help him to express his opinions ; but, for all that, he is a great man. If you call him " the heroic defender of the national honour " one day, and " a brutal and licentious soldiery " the next, you naturally bewilder him, and he looks upon you with suspicion. There is nobody to speak for Thomas except people who have theories to work off on him ; and nobody understands Thomas except Thomas, and he does not always know what is the matter with himself.

In the Matter of a Private.

" I'M A Tommy—a bloomin', eight-anna, dog-stealin' Tommy, with a number instead of a decent name. Wot's the good o' me ? If I 'ad a stayed at 'Ome, I might a married that gal and a kep' a little shorp in the 'Ammer-smith 'Igh.—' S. Orth'ris, Prac-ti-cal Taxi-der-mist.' With a stuff' fox, like they 'as in the Haylesbury Dairies, in the winder, an' a little case of blue and yaller glass-heyas, an' a little wife to call 'shorp!' 'shorp!' when the door-bell rung. As it his, I'm on'y a Tommy—a Bloomin', Gawd-forsaken, Beer-swillin' Tommy. 'Rest on your harms—versed. Stan' at—hease; 'Shun. 'Verse—harms. Right an' lef'—tarrn. Slow—march. 'Alt—front. Rest on your harms—'versed. With blank-cartridge—load.' An' that's the end o' me." He was quoting fragments from Funeral Parties' Orders.

The Madness of Private Ortheris.

"NOW I'M sick to go 'Ome—go 'Ome—go 'Ome! No, I ain't mammysick, because my uncle brung me up, but I'm sick for London again; sick for the sounds of 'er, an' the sights of 'er, and the stinks of 'er; orange-peel and hasphalte an' gas comin' in over Vaux'all Bridge. Sick for the rail goin' down to Box 'Ill, with your gal on your knee an' a new clay pipe in your face. That, an' the Stran' lights where you knows ev'ry one, an' the Copper that takes you up is a old friend that tuk you up before, when you was a little, smitchy boy lying loose 'tween the Temple an' the Dark Harches."

The Madness of Private Ortheris.

" FOG AV fightin'. You know, Sorr, that, like makin' love, ut takes each man diff'rint. Now I can't help bein' powerful sick whin I'm in action. Orth'ris, here, niver stops swearin' from ind to ind, an' the only time that Learoyd opins his mouth to sing is whin he is messin' wid other people's heads ; for he's a dhirty fighter is Jock. Recruities sometime cry, an' sometime they don't know fwhat they do, an' sometime they are all for cuttin' throats an' such-like dirtiness ; but some men get heavy-dead-dhrunk on the fightin'. This man was. He was staggerin', an' his eyes were half shut, an' we cud hear him dhraw breath twinty yards away. He sees the little orf'cer bhoy, an' comes up, talkin' thick an' drowsy to himsilf."

With the Main Guard.

“ DON'T MAKE game ! ” said the Cockney.
“ I knowed I wasn't no good then, but I guv 'em compot from the lef' flank when we opened out. No ! ” he said, bringing down his hand with a thump on the bedstead, “ a bay'nit ain't no good to a little man—might as well 'ave a bloomin' fishin'-rod ! I 'ate a clawin', maulin' mess, but gimme a breech that's wore out a bit an' hamminition one year in store, to let the powder kiss the bullet, an' put me some-wheres where I ain't trod on by 'ulkin swine like you, an' s'elp me Gawd, I could bowl you over five times outer seven at height 'undred.
Would yer try, you lumberin' Hirishman ? ”

With the Main Guard.

“ 'TIS A shame both to the rig'mints and the Arrmy sendin' down little orf'cer bhoys wid a draf' av strong men mad wid liquor an' the chanst av gettin' shut av India, an' niver a punishment that's fit to be given right down an' away from cantonmints to the dock ! 'Tis this nonsince. Whin I am servin' my time, I'm undher the Articles av War, an' can be whipped on the peg for thim. But whin I've served my time, I'm a Reserve man, an' the Articles av War haven't any hould on me. An orf'cer can't do anythin' to a time-expired savin' confinin' him to barricks. 'Tis a wise rig'lation bekaze a time-expired does not have any barricks ; bein' on the move all the time. 'Tis a Solomon av a rig'lation, is that. I wud like to be inthroduced to the man that made ut. 'Tis easier to get colts from a Kibbereen horse-fair into Galway than to take a bad draf' over ten miles av country." The Big Drunk Draf'.

" I WINT over an' tuk hould. There was wan sergeant left standin', an' they'd pay no heed to him. The remnint was me, an' 'twas full time I came. Some I talked to, an' some I did not, but before night the bhoys av the Tyrone stud to attention, begad, if I sucked on my poipe above a whishper. Betune you an' me an' Bobs I was commandin' the Company, an' that was what Crook had thransferred me for ; an' the little orf'cer bhoy knew ut, and I knew ut, but the Comp'ny did not. And there, mark you, is the vartue that no money an' no dhrill can buy—the vartue av the ould soldier that knows his orf'cer's work an' does ut for him at the salute !”

“ Love-o'-Women.”

“WE CAME through in the early mornin', havin' been awake the night through, and we dhruv sheer into the middle av the mess. Mother av Glory, will I iver forget that comin' back ? The light was not fair lifted, and the first we heard was ' For 'tis my delight av a shiny night,' frum a band that thought we was the second four comp'nies av the Lincolnshire. At that we was forced to sind them a yell to say who we was, an' thin up wint ' The Wearin' av the Green.' It made me crawl all up my backbone, not havin' taken my brequist. Thin right smash into our rear came fwhat was left av the Jock Elliott's—wid four pipers an' not half a kilt among thim, playin' for the dear life, an' swingin' their rumps like buck-rabbits, an' a native rig'mint shriekin' blue murther. Ye niver heard the like ! There was men cryin' like women that did—an' faith I do not blame them ! Fwhat bruk me down was the Lancers' Band—shinin' an' spick like angils, wid the ould dhrum-horse at the head an' the silver kettle-dhrums an' all an' all, waitin' for their men that was behind us. They shtruck up the Cavalry Canter ; an' begad those poor ghosts that had not a sound fut in a throop they answered to ut ; the men rockin' in their saddles. We thried to cheer them as they wint by, but ut came out like a big gruntin' cough, so there must have been many that was feelin' like me. Oh, but I'm forgettin' ! The Fly-by-Nights was waitin' for their second battalion, an' whin ut came out, there was the Colonel's horse led at the head—saddle-empty. The men fair worshipped him, an' he'd died at Ali Musjid on the road down. They waited till the remnint av the battalion was up, and thin—clane against ordhers, for who wanted that chune that day ?—they wint back to Peshawur slow-time an' tearin' the bowils out av ivry man that heard, wid ' The Dead March.' Right acrost our line they wint, an' ye know their uniforms are as black as the Sweeps, crawlin' past like the dead, an' the other bands damnin' them to let be."

"Love-o'-Women."

"GOOSE LIVER is ut?" said Mulvaney. "Faith, I'm thinkin' thim that makes it wud do betther to cut up the Colonel. He carries a power av liver undher his right arrum whin the days are warm an' the nights chill. He wud give thim tons an' tons av liver. 'Tis he sez so. 'I'm all liver to-day,' sez he; an' wid that he ordhers me ten days' C.B. for as moild a dhrink as iver a good sodger tuk betune his teeth."

The God from the Machine.

ABOVE ALL this war without honour lies that which I find hard to put into writing, and thou knowest I am unhandy of the pen. I will ride the steed of Inability sideways at the wall of Expression. One View of the Question.

IF THIS people be purged and bled out by battle, their sickness may go and their eyes be cleared to the necessities of things. But they are now far gone in rottenness. Even the stallion, too long heel-roped, forgets how to fight ; and these men are mules.

One View of the Question.

YES, I was a trooper first—nay, I had risen to a Lance-Duffadar, I remember—and my father gave me a dun stallion of his own breeding on that day ; and he was a little baba, sitting upon a wall by the parade-ground with his ayah—all in white, Sahib—laughing at the end of our drill. And his father and mine talked together, and mine beckoned to me, and I dismounted, and the baba put his hand into mine—eighteen — twenty-five—twenty-seven years gone now—Kurban Sahib—my Kurban Sahib ! Oh, we were great friends after that ! He cut his teeth on my sword-hilt, as the saying is.

A Sahibs' War.

WE OF Hind listened and heard and wondered ; and when it was a sure thing, as reported by the pedlars and the vegetable-sellers, that the Sahibs of Yunasbagh lay in bondage to the Boer-log, certain among us asked questions and waited for signs. Others of us mistook the meaning of those signs. Wherefore, Sahib, came the long war in the Tirah ! This Kurban Sahib knew, and we talked together. He said, " There is no haste. Presently we shall fight, and we shall fight for all Hind in that country round Yunasbagh." Here he spoke truth. Does the Sahib not agree ? Quite so. It is for Hind that the Sahibs are fighting this war. Ye cannot in one place rule and in another bear service. Either ye must everywhere rule or everywhere obey. God does not make the nations ring-straked. True—true—true ! A Sahibs' War.

" THEY COULD fight in their own way, and don't you forget it. But I guess you will not. They fought to kill, and, by what I could make out, the British fought to be killed. So both parties were accommodated.” The Captive.

“THEY’D JOLT into action, and wiggle around and skid and spit and cough and prize ’emselves back again during our hours of bloody battle till I could have wept, Sir, at the spectacle of modern white men chained up to these old hand-power, back-number, flint-and-steel reaping machines.” The Captive.

“I FELT friendly, but the British haven’t more tact than you can pick up with a knife out of a plate of soup.” The Captive.

“I TELL you, Sir, there’s not much of anything the matter with the Royal British Artillery. They’re brainy men languishing under an effete system which, when you take good holt of it, is England—just all England.

'Times I'd feel I was talking with real live citizens, and times I'd feel I'd struck the Beef-eaters in the Tower.'

The Captive.

"BUT THE General was the peach. I presume you're acquainted with the average run of British generals, but this was my first. I sat on his left hand, and he talked like—like the Ladies' Home Journal. 'J'ever read that paper? It's refined, Sir—and innocuous, and full of nickel-plated sentiments guaranteed to improve the mind. He was it. He began by a Lydia Pinkham heart-to-heart talk about my health, and hoped the boys had done me well, and that I was enjoying my stay in their midst. Then he thanked me for the interesting and valuable lessons that I'd given his crowd—specially in the matter of placing artillery and rearguard attacks. He'd wipe his long thin moustache between drinks—lime-juice and water he used—and blat off into a long 'a-aah,' and ladle out more taffy for me or old man Van Zyl on his right."

The Captive.

“DON’T misunderstand me, Sir. I loved that General. After ten minutes I loved him, and I wanted to laugh at him ; but at the same time, sitting there and hearing him talk about the centuries, I tell you, Sir, it scared me. It scared me cold ! He admitted everything—he acknowledged the corn before you spoke—he was more pleased to hear that his men had been used to wipe the veldt with than I was when I knocked out Tom Reed’s two lead-horses—and he sat back and blew smoke through his nose and matured his men like cigars and—he talked of the everlastin’ centuries !”

The Captive.

REFLECTIONS

REFLECTIONS

“THE SAFETY of the Hive is the highest thing I’ve ever heard of. You mustn’t teach us to refuse work,” Melissa began.

The Mother Hive.

“I HAVE observed in my life that Great Ones employ words very little between each other in their dealings ; still less when they speak to a third concerning those dealings. Also they profit by silence.”

A Deal in Cotton.

“THERE CAN be no war without gold, and we Jews know how the earth’s gold moves with the seasons, and the crops, and the winds ; circling and looping and rising and sinking away like a river—a wonderful underground river. How should the foolish Kings know that while they fight and steal and kill ? ”

The Treasure and the Law.

ONE OF the many beauties of a democracy is its almost superhuman skill in developing troubles with other countries and finding its honour abraded in the process. A true democracy has a large contempt for all other lands that are governed by Kings and Queens and Emperors ; and knows little and thinks less of their internal affairs. All it regards is its own dignity, which is its King, Queen, and Knave. So, sooner or later, its international differences end in the common people, who have no dignity, shouting the common abuse of the street, which also has no dignity, across the seas in order to vindicate their new dignity. The consequences may or may not be war ; but the chances do not favour peace.

Judson and the Empire.

“ ‘THERE’S not much justice in this world,’
he says, ‘without a Navy.’ ”

“ A Priest in Spite of Himself. ”

“ ‘BAH!’ HE says. ‘Nothing’s stronger than a man. Me, for example! Less than two years ago I was blown up in the Orient in Aboukir Bay, but I descended again and hit the water like a fairy. Look at me now,’ he says. He wasn’t much to look at, for he’d only one leg and one eye, but the cheerfulest soul that ever trod shoe-leather. ‘You’re young, too! What wouldn’t I give to be young in France at this hour! There’s nothing you couldn’t do,’ he says. ‘The ball’s at your feet—kick it!’ he says. He kicks the old fire bucket with his peg-leg.”

“ A Priest in Spite of Himself. ”

BUT IT is with steamers as it is with men.
There are those who will for a consideration sail extremely close to the wind ; and, in the present state of a fallen world, such people and such steamers have their use.

The Devil and the Deep Sea.

WHEN ONE nation apologises to another, millions of amateurs who have no earthly concern with the difficulty hurl themselves into the strife and embarrass the trained specialist.

The Devil and the Deep Sea.

WHEN YOU have lost seventy thousand pounds' worth of pearls, your pay, your ship, and all your clothes, and have lived in bondage for eight months beyond the faintest pretences of civilisation, you know what true independence means, for you become the happiest of created things—natural man.

The Devil and the Deep Sea.

“A MAN who can only do one thing, he's but next-above-fool to the man that can't do nothing. That's where the Unions make their mistake.”

The Wrong Thing.

“MEN CAN ’most always tell when a man has handled things for himself, and then they treat him as one of themselves.”

“Captains Courageous.”

A LOCOMOTIVE is, next to a marine engine, the most sensitive thing man ever made.

•007.

“EVERYTHING in life is a miracle, but I should be slow—ve-ry slow should I be—to assume that a certain sort of miracle happens whenever lazy and improvident people say they are going to turn over a new leaf if they are paid for it.”

The Conversion of St. Wilfrid.

FOR TRUTH is a naked lady, and if by accident she is drawn up from the bottom of the sea, it behoves a gentleman either to give her a print petticoat or to turn his face to the wall and vow that he did not see.

A Matter of Fact.

MEN AND women may sometimes, after great effort, achieve a creditable lie ; but the house, which is their temple, cannot say anything save the truth of those who have lived in it.

“ They.”

“ BECAUSE any man can lie to a God, but no man can lie to a woman.”

The Knife and the Naked Chalk.

“ ’TISN’T BEAUTY, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It’s just It. Some women ’ll stay in a man’s memory if they once walk down a street, but most of ’em you can live with a month on end, an’ next commission you’d be put to it to certify whether they talked in their sleep or not, as one might say.”

Mrs. Bathurst.

“ IN WAR it is as it is in Love,” said Pertinax.
“ Whether she be good or bad, one gives one’s best once, to one only. That given, there remains no second worth giving or taking."

The Winged Hats.

" I HAVE seen something of this world," she said over the crowded trays, " and there are but two sorts of women in it—those who take the strength out of a man and those who put it back. Once I was that one, and now I am this."

Kim.

" BUT EACH man must have his black hour or where would be the merit of laughing ? "

The Tree of Justice.

THERE IS hope for a man who gets publicly and riotously drunk more often than he ought to do ; but there is no hope for the man who drinks secretly and alone in his own house—the man who is never seen to drink. In Error.

“ THIN I knew he spoke the truth about bein’ in hell, for whin liquor does not take hould the sowl av a man is rotten in him.”

“ Love-o’-Women.”

HOLDEN WENT to his bungalow and began to understand that he was not alone in the world, and also that he was afraid for the sake of another—which is the most soul-satisfying fear known to man.

Without Benefit of Clergy.

THERE ARE not many happinesses so complete as those that are snatched under the shadow of the sword.

Without Benefit of Clergy.

“ THE MAN who looks on can talk about the light hand ; but you can’t clean a pig-stye with a pen dipped in rose-water.”

At the End of the Passage.

"THERE ARE many lies in the world, and not a few liars, but there are no liars like our bodies, except it be the sensations of our bodies."

Kim.

NO ONE, the owner least of all, can explain what is in a growing boy's mind.

Regulus.

THERE ARE few things sweeter in this world than the guileless, hot-headed, intemperate, open admiration of a junior. Even a woman in her blindest devotion does not fall into the gait of the man she adores, tilt her bonnet to the angle at which he wears his hat, or interlard her speech with his pet oaths. And Charlie did all these things.

"The Finest Story in the World."

NEXT TO a requited attachment, one of the most convenient things that a young man can carry about with him at the beginning of his career, is an unrequited attachment. It makes him feel important and business-like, and blasé, and cynical ; and whenever he has a touch of liver, or suffers from want of exercise, he can mourn over his lost love, and be very happy in a tender, twilight fashion.

On the Strength of a Likeness.

ONE MUST not mock a young man's first love or loyalty.

A Deal in Cotton.

“ NIVER SHOW a woman that ye care the snap av a finger for her, an' begad she'll come bleatin' to your boot-heels ! ”

The Courting of Dinah Shadd.

“ BEGAD, I cud ha' hiked the sun out av the sky for a live coal to my pipe, so magnificent I was.”

The Courting of Dinah Shadd.

“ BUT WHIN was a young man, high or low, the other av a fool, I'd like to know ? ” said

Mulvaney. "Sure, folly's the only safe way to wisdom, for I've thried it."

❧ On Greenhow Hill.

"THEY TALK o' rich folk bein' stuck up an' genteel, but for cast-iron pride o' respectability there's naught like poor chapel folk. It's as cold as th' wind o' Greenhow Hill—ay, and colder, for 'twill never change."

❧ On Greenhow Hill.

LET IT be clearly understood that the Russian is a delightful person till he tucks in his shirt. As an Oriental he is charming. It is only when he insists upon being treated as the most easterly of western peoples instead of the most westerly of easterns that he becomes a racial anomaly extremely difficult to handle. The host never knows which side of his nature is going to turn up next. The Man Who Was.

AT TWENTY the things for which one does not care a damn should, properly, be many, but one must not include mothers in the list.

"The Finest Story in the World."

THE ARMY, unlike every other profession, cannot be taught through shilling books. First a man must suffer, then he must learn his work, and the self-respect that that knowledge brings. The learning is hard, in a land where the army is not a red thing that walks down the street to be looked at, but a living tramping reality that may be needed at the shortest notice, when there is no time to say, "Hadn't you better?" and "Won't you please?"

His Private Honour.

ONCE A priest, always a priest; once a mason, always a mason; but once a journalist, always and for ever a journalist.

A Matter of Fact.

"BORROW trouble for yourself if that's your nature, but don't lend it to your neighbours."

Cold Iron.

THE SCOTCH are a great people, but they are apt to hang over a joke too long, particularly when no one can see the point but themselves.

“Bread upon the Waters.”

BUT IT is a venerable fact that, if a man or woman makes a practice of, and takes a delight in, believing and spreading evil of people indifferent to him or her, he or she will end in believing evil of folk very near and dear.

Watches of the Night.

NEVER PRAISE a sister to a sister, in the hope of your compliments reaching the proper ears, and so preparing the way for you later on. Sisters are women first, and sisters afterwards ; and you will find that you do yourself harm.

False Dawn.

IF YOU hit a pony over the nose at the outset of your acquaintance, he may not love you, but he will take a deep interest in your movements ever afterwards.

False Dawn.

" I NEVER knew kings went to chapel much," said Mr. Springett. " But I always hold with a man, don't care who he be, seein' about his own grave before he dies. 'Tidn't the sort of thing to leave to your family after the will's read. I reckon 'twas a fine vault."

The Wrong Thing.

" THEN YE know that a man can't drink and dice and dress fine, and keep company above his station, but his work suffers for it, Mus' Springett."

" I never held much with dressin' up, but—you're right ! The worst mistakes I ever made they was made on a Monday morning," Mr. Springett answered. " We've all been one sort of fool or t'other."

The Wrong Thing.

" DRESSED ! Don't tell me that woman ever dressed in her life. She stood in the middle of the room while her ayah—no, her husband—it must have been a man—threw her clothes at her. She then did her hair with her fingers, and rubbed her bonnet in the flue under the bed. I know she did, as well as if I had assisted at the orgy. Who is she ? ” said Mrs. Hauksbee.

A Second-rate Woman.

ALL THE world knows that it is ill taking the breeks off a Highlander. It is much iller to try to make him stir unless he is convinced of the necessity for haste.

The Drums of the Fore and Aft.

THE ONLY real things in the world are crystal seas, clean-swept decks, soft rugs, warm sunshine, the smell of salt in the air, and fathomless, futile indolence.

From Sea to Sea.

WHEN MAN has come to the turnstiles of Night all the creeds in the world seem to him wonderfully alike and colourless.

Preface, Life's Handicap.

IN NINE cases out of ten a native makes no miscalculation as to the day of his death. He has the foreknowledge of the beasts in this respect.

Preface, Life's Handicap.

THERE ARE three great doors in the world where, if you stand long enough, you shall meet any one you wish. The head of the Suez Canal is one, but there Death comes also ; Charing Cross Station is the second—for inland work ; and the Nyanza Docks is the third. At each of these places are men and women looking eternally for those who will surely come.

The Limitations of Pambé Serang.

BUT I knew that so long as a man trusts himself to the current of Circumstance, reaching out for and rejecting nothing that comes his way, no harm can overtake him. It is the contriver, the schemer, who is caught by the law, and never the philosopher.

My Sunday at Home.

FELLOW CREATIONS

FELLOW CREATIONS

NOBODY seems to know the laws that govern the pulse of the big waters. Sometimes even a landsman can tell that the solid ocean is atilt, and that the ship is working herself up a long unseen slope ; and sometimes the captain says, when neither full steam nor fair wind justifies the length of a day's run, that the ship is sagging downhill ; but how these ups and downs come about has not yet been settled authoritatively.

A Matter of Fact.

FOR CENTURIES the Little People had hived and swarmed from cleft to cleft, and swarmed again, staining the white marble with stale honey, and made their combs tall and deep in the dark of the inner caves, where neither man nor beast nor fire nor water had ever touched them. The length of the gorge on both sides was hung as it were with black shimmery velvet curtains, and Mowgli sank as he looked, for those were the clotted millions of the sleeping bees. There were other lumps and festoons and things like decayed tree-trunks studded on the face of the rock, the old combs of past years, or new cities built in the shadow of the windless gorge, and huge masses of spongy, rotten trash had rolled down and stuck among the trees and creepers that clung to the rock-face. As he listened he heard more than once the rustle and slide of a honey-loaded comb turning over or falling away somewhere in the dark galleries ; then a booming of angry wings, and the sullen drip, drip, drip, of the wasted honey, guttering along till it lipped over some ledge in the open air and sluggishly trickled down on the twigs.

Red Dog.

AS FRAME after frame followed it, the swarm beheld the upheaval, exposure, and destruction of all that had been well or ill done in every cranny of their Hive for generations past. There was black comb so old that they had forgotten where it hung ; orange, buff, and ochre-varnished store-comb, built as bees were used to build before the days of artificial foundations ; and there was a little, white, frail new work. There were sheets on sheets of level, even brood-comb that had held in its time unnumbered thousands of unnamed workers ; patches of obsolete drone-comb, broad and high-shouldered, showing to what marks the male grub was expected to grow ; and two inch deep honey-magazines, empty, but still magnificent : the whole gummed and glued into twisted scrap-work, awry on the wires, half-cells, beginnings abandoned, or grandiose, weak-walled, composite cells pieced out with rubbish and capped with dirt.

The Mother Hive.

FOR NINE months of the year there is only ice and snow, and gale after gale, with a cold that no one can realise who has never seen the thermometer even at zero. For six months of those nine it is dark ; and that is what makes it so horrible. In the three months of the summer it only freezes every other day and every night, and then the snow begins to weep off on the southerly slopes, and a few ground-willows put out their woolly-buds, a tiny stonecrop or so makes believe to blossom, beaches of fine gravel and rounded stones run down to the open sea, and polished boulders and streaked rocks lift up above the granulated snow. But all that is gone in a few weeks, and the wild winter locks down again on the land ; while at sea the ice tears up and down the offing, jamming and ramming, and splitting and hitting, and pounding and grounding, till it all freezes together, ten feet thick, from the land outward to deep water.

Quiquern.

THE SKY above them was an intense velvety black, changing to bands of Indian red on the horizon, where the great stars burned like street-lamps. From time to time a greenish wave of the Northern Lights would roll across the hollow of the high heavens, flick like a flag, and disappear ; or a meteor would crackle from darkness to darkness, trailing a shower of sparks behind. Then they could see the ridged and furrowed surface of the floe tipped and laced with strange colours—red, copper, and bluish ; but in the ordinary starlight everything turned to one frost-bitten gray. The floe, as you will remember, had been battered and tormented by the autumn gales till it was one frozen earthquake. There were gullies and ravines, and holes like gravel-pits, cut in ice ; lumps and scattered pieces frozen down to the original floor of the floe ; blotches of old black ice that had been thrust under the floe in some gale and heaved up again ; roundish boulders of ice ; saw-like edges of ice carved by the snow that flies before the wind ; and sunken pits where thirty or forty acres lay below the level of the rest of the field. From a little distance you might have taken the lumps for seal or walrus, overturned sleighs or men on a hunting expedition, or even the great Ten-legged White Spirit-Bear himself ; but in spite of these fantastic shapes, all on the very edge of starting into life, there was neither sound nor the least faint echo of sound. And through this silence and through this waste, where the sudden lights flapped and went out again, the sleigh and the two that pulled it crawled like things in a nightmare—a nightmare of the end of the world at the end of the world.

Quiquern.

THIS WAS one of the very many things that Kotick learned, and he was always learning. Matkah taught him to follow the cod and the halibut along the under-sea banks, and wrench the rockling out of his hole among the weeds ; how to skirt the wrecks lying a hundred fathoms below water, and dart like a rifle-bullet in at one port-hole and out at another as the fishes ran ; how to dance on the top of the waves when the lightning was racing all over the sky, and wave his flipper politely to the stumpy-tailed Albatross and the Man-of-war Hawk as they went down the wind ; how to jump three or four feet clear of the water, like a dolphin, flippers close to the side and tail curved ; to leave the flying-fish alone because they are all bony ; to take the shoulder-piece out of a cod at full speed ten fathoms deep ; and never stop and look at a boat or a ship, but particularly a row-boat. At the end of six months, what Kotick did not know about deep-sea fishing was not worth the knowing, and all that time he never set flipper on dry ground.

The White Seal.

THE TWELVE Government elephants rocked at their pickets outside the big mud-walled stables (one arch, as wide as a bridge-arch, to each restless beast), and the mahouts were preparing the evening meal. Now and again some impatient youngster would smell the cooking flour-cakes and squeal ; and the naked little children of the elephant-lines would strut down the row shouting and commanding silence, or, reaching up, would slap at the eager trunks. Then the elephants feigned to be deeply interested in pouring dust upon their heads, but, so soon as the children passed, the rocking, fidgeting, and muttering broke out again.

My Lord the Elephant.

“GOD KNOWS, who made elephants,” he said simply. “In his now state peradventure he might kill you three, or run at large till his rage abated. He would not kill me except he were musth. Then would he kill me before any one in the world, because he loves me. Such is the custom of the elephant-folk; and the custom of us mahout-people matches it for foolishness. We trust each our own elephant, till our own elephant kills us. Other castes trust women, but we the elephant-folk. I have seen men deal with enraged elephants and live; but never was man yet born of woman that met my lord the elephant in his musth and lived to tell of the taming. They are enough bold who meet him angry.”

My Lord the Elephant.

HIS MOTHER, Radha Pyari,—Radha the darling,—who had been caught in the same drive with Kala Nag, told him, before his little milk tusks had dropped out, that elephants who were afraid always got hurt ; and Kala Nag knew that that advice was good, for the first time that he saw a shell burst he backed, screaming, into a stand of piled rifles, and the bayonets pricked him in all his softest places. So before he was twenty-five he gave up being afraid, and so he was the best-loved and the best-looked-after elephant in the service of the Government of India. He had carried tents, twelve hundred pounds' weight of tents, on the march in Upper India ; he had been hoisted into a ship at the end of a steam-crane and taken for days across the water, and made to carry a mortar on his back in a strange and rocky country very far from India, and had seen the Emperor Theodore lying dead in Magdala, and had come back again in the steamer, entitled, so the soldiers said, to the Abyssinian War medal. He had seen his fellow-elephants die of cold and epilepsy and starvation and sunstroke up at a place called Ali Musjid, ten years later ; and afterward he had been sent down thousands of miles south to haul and pile big baulks of teak in the timber-yards of Moulmein. There he had half killed an insubordinate young elephant who was shirking his fair share of the work.

Toomai of the Elephants.

“ HE IS afraid of me also,” said Little Toomai, standing up to his full height of four feet, with only one rag upon him. He was ten years old, the eldest son of Big Toomai, and, according to custom, he would take his father’s place on Kala Nag’s neck when he grew up, and would handle the heavy iron ankus, the elephant-goat that had been worn smooth by his father, and his grandfather, and his great-grandfather. He knew what he was talking of ; for he had been born under Kala Nag’s shadow, had played with the end of his trunk before he could walk, had taken him down to water as soon as he could walk, and Kala Nag would no more have dreamed of disobeying his shrill little orders than he would have dreamed of killing him on that day when Big Toomai carried the little brown baby under Kala Nag's tusks, and told him to salute his master that was to be.

Toomai of the Elephants

THEN, INCH by inch, the untempered heat crept into the heart of the Jungle, turning it yellow, brown, and at last black. The green growths in the sides of the ravines burned up to broken wires and curled films of dead stuff ; the hidden pools sank down and caked over, keeping the last least footmark on their edges as if it had been cast in iron ; the juicy-stemmed creepers fell away from the trees they clung to and died at their feet ; the bamboos withered, clanking when the hot winds blew, and the moss peeled off the rocks deep in the Jungle, till they were as bare and as hot as the quivering blue boulders in the bed of the stream.

The birds and the monkey-people went north early in the year, for they knew what was coming ; and the deer and the wild pig broke far away to the perished fields of the villages, dying sometimes before the eyes of men too weak to kill them. Chil, the Kite, stayed and grew fat, for there was a great deal of carrion, and evening after evening he brought the news to the beasts, too weak to force their way to fresh hunting-grounds, that the sun was killing the Jungle for three days' flight in every direction.

How Fear came to the Jungle.

RIKKI-TIKKI was bounding all round Nagaina, keeping just out of reach of her stroke, his little eyes like hot coals. Nagaina gathered herself together, and flung out at him. Rikki-tikki jumped up and backward. Again and again and again she struck, and each time her head came with a whack on the matting of the verandah, and she gathered herself together like a watch-spring. Then Rikki-tikki danced in a circle to get behind her, and Nagaina spun round to keep her head to his head, so that the rustle of her tail on the matting sounded like dry leaves blown along by the wind.

He had forgotten the egg. It still lay on the verandah, and Nagaina came nearer and nearer to it, till at last, while Rikki-tikki was drawing breath, she caught it in her mouth, turned to the verandah steps, and flew like an arrow down the path, with Rikki-tikki behind her. When the cobra runs for her life, she goes like a whip-lash flicked across a horse's neck.

"Rikki-Tikki-Tavi."

DOGS ARE at the best no more than verminous vagrants, self-scratchers, foul feeders, and unclean by the law of Moses and Mohammed ; but a dog with whom one lives alone for at least six months in the year ; a free thing, tied to you so strictly by love that without you he will not stir or exercise ; a patient, temperate, humorous, wise soul, who knows your moods before you know them yourself, is not a dog under any ruling.

Garm—a Hostage.

MAKINGS OF THINGS

MAKINGS OF THINGS

IN MOST big undertakings one or two men do the work, while the rest sit near and talk till the ripe decorations begin to fall.

Wressley of the Foreign Office.

MEN OFTEN do their best work blind, for some one else's sake.

Wressley of the Foreign Office.

HE FELL to work, whistling softly, and was swallowed up in the clean, clear joy of creation, which does not come to man too often, lest he should consider himself the equal of his God, and so refuse to die at the appointed time.

The Light that Failed.

“YOU HAVE all done not so badly,” he would say. “ But you shall remember that it is not enough to have the method, and the art, and the power, nor even that which is touch, but you shall have also the conviction that nails the work to the wall."

The Light that Failed.

"IT COME over me, in a bitter wave like, that here was I, a master craftsman, who had worked no bounds, soul or body, to make the King's tomb and chapel a triumph and a glory for all time ; and here, d'you see, I was made knight, not for anything I'd slaved over, or given my heart and guts to, but expressedly because I'd saved him thirty pounds and a tongue-lashing from Catherine of Castile—she that had asked for the ship. That thought shrivelled me withinsides while I was folding away my draft. On the heels of it—maybe you'll see why—I began to grin to myself. I thought of the earnest simplicity of the man—the King, I should say—because I'd saved him the money ; his smile as though he'd won half France ! I thought of my own silly pride and foolish expectations that some day he'd honour me as a master craftsman. I thought of the broken-tipped sword he'd found behind the hangings ; the dirt of the cold room, and his cold eye, wrapped up in his own concerns, scarcely resting on me. Then I remembered the solemn chapel roof and the bronzes about the stately tomb he'd lie in, and—d'ye see ?—the unreason of it all—the mad high humour of it all—took hold on me till I sat me down on a dark stair-head in a passage, and laughed till I could laugh no more. What else could I have done ? ”

The Wrong Thing.

“ THEN HE made a sword—a dark grey, wavy-lined sword—and I blew the fire while he hammered. By Oak, Ash, and Thorn, I tell you, Weland was a Smith of the Gods ! He cooled that sword in running water twice, and the third time he cooled it in the evening dew, and he laid it out in the moonlight and said Runes (that's charms) over it, and he carved Runes of Prophecy on the blade. ‘ Old Thing,’ he said to me, wiping his forehead,

‘ this is the best blade that Weland ever made. Even the user will never know how good it is. Come to the monastery.’

“ We went to the dormitory where the monks slept, we saw the novice fast asleep in his cot, and Weland put the sword into his hand, and I remember the young fellow gripped it in his sleep. Then Weland strode as far as he dared into the Chapel and threw down all his shoeing-tools—his hammer, and pincers, and rasps—to show that he had done with them for ever. It sounded like suits of armour falling, and the sleepy monks ran in, for they thought the monastery had been attacked by the French. The novice came first of all, waving his new sword and shouting Saxon battle-cries. When they saw the shoeing-tools they were very bewildered, till the novice asked leave to speak, and told what he had done to the farmer, and what he had said to Wayland-Smith, and how, though the dormitory light was burning, he had found the wonderful rune-carved sword in his cot.

“ The Abbot shook his head at first, and then he laughed and said to the novice : ‘ Son Hugh, it needed no sign from a heathen God to show me that you will never be a monk. Take your sword, and keep your sword, and go with your sword, and be as gentle as you are strong and courteous. We will hang up the Smith's tools before the Altar,' he said, 'because, whatever the Smith of the Gods may have been in the old days, we know that he worked honestly for his living and made gifts to Mother Church.' "

Weland's Sword.

" 'THAT'S MR. Hinchcliffe,' said Pyecroft. " He's what is called a first-class engine-room artificer. If you hand 'im a drum of oil an' leave 'im alone, he can coax a stolen bicycle to do typewritin'." " Their Lawful Occasions."

HE BELIEVES that there are only two poets in the world: one being Robert Burns, of course, and the other Gerald Massey. When he has time for novels he reads Wilkie Collins and Charles Reade—chiefly the latter—and knows whole pages of Hard Cash by heart. In the saloon his table is next to the captain's, and he drinks only water while his engines work.

“Bread upon the Waters.”

THERE WERE sailing-ships, with stewards and mahogany and maple saloons, trading to Australia, taking cargoes of consumptives and hopeless drunkards for whom a sea-voyage was recommended; there were frouzy little West African boats, full of rats and cockroaches, where men died anywhere but in their bunks; there were Brazilian boats whose cabins could be hired for merchandise that went out loaded nearly awash; there were Zanzibar and Mauritius steamers, and wonderful reconstructed boats that plied to the other side of Borneo. These were loved and known, for they earned our bread and a little butter, and we despised the big Atlantic boats, and made fun of the P. and O. and Orient liners, and swore by our respected owners—Wesleyan, Baptist, or Presbyterian, as the case might be.

“Bread upon the Waters.”

IF YOU lay your ear to the side of the cabin the next time you are in a steamer, you will hear hundreds of little voices in every direction, thrilling and buzzing, and whispering and popping, and gurgling and sobbing and squeaking exactly like a telephone in a thunderstorm. Wooden ships shriek and growl and grunt, but iron vessels throb and quiver through all their hundreds of ribs and thousands of rivets. The Dimbula was very strongly built, and every piece of her had a letter or number, or both, to describe it ; and every piece had been hammered, or forged, or rolled, or punched by man, and had lived in the roar and rattle of the ship-yard for months. Therefore, every piece had its own separate voice in exact proportion to the amount of trouble spent upon it. Cast-iron, as a rule, says very little ; but mild steel plates and wrought-iron, and ribs and beams that have been much bent and welded and riveted, talk continuously. Their conversation, of course, is not half as wise as our human talk, because they are all, though they do not know it, bound down one to the other in a black darkness, where they cannot tell what is happening near them, nor what will overtake them next.

The Ship that Found Herself.

THE SEA was getting up in a workmanlike style. It was a dead westerly gale, blown from under a ragged opening of green sky, narrowed on all sides by fat, grey clouds; and the wind bit like pincers as it fretted the spray into lacework on the flanks of the waves.

The Ship that Found Herself.

FINDLAYSON, C.E., sat in his trolley on a construction-line that ran along one of the main revetments—the huge stone-faced banks that flared away north and south for three miles on either side of the river—and permitted himself to think of the end. With its approaches, his work was one mile and three-quarters in length; a lattice-girder bridge, trussed with the Findlayson truss, standing on seven-and-twenty brick piers. Each one of those piers was twenty-four feet in diameter, capped with red Agra stone and sunk eighty feet below the shifting sand of the Ganges' bed. Above them ran the railway-line fifteen feet broad ; above that, again, a cart-road of eighteen feet, flanked with footpaths. At either end rose towers of red brick, loopholed for musketry and pierced for big guns, and the ramp of the road was being pushed forward to their haunches. The raw earth-ends were crawling and alive with hundreds upon hundreds of tiny asses climbing out of the yawning borrow-pit below with sackfuls of stuff ; and the hot afternoon air was filled with the noise of hooves, the rattle of the drivers' sticks, and the swish and roll-down of the dirt. The river was very low, and on the dazzling white sand between the three centre piers stood squat cribs of railway sleepers, filled within and daubed without with mud, to support the last of the girders as those were riveted up. In the little deep water left by the drought, an overhead-crane travelled to and fro along its spile-pier, jerking sections of iron into place, snorting and backing and grunting as an elephant grunts in the timber-yard. Riveters by the hundred swarmed about the lattice side-work and the iron roof of the railway-line, hung from invisible staging under the bellies of the girders, clustered round the throats of the piers, and rode on the overhang of the footpath-stanchions ; their fire-pots and the spurts of flame that answered each hammer-stroke showing no more than pale yellow in the sun's glare. East and west and north and south the construction-trains rattled and shrieked up and down the embankments, the piled trucks of brown and white stone banging behind them till the side-boards were unpinned, and with a roar and a grumble a few thousand tons more material were thrown out to hold the river in place.

The Bridge-Builders.

THERE WERE oil-cars, and hay-cars, and stock-cars full of lowing beasts, and ore-cars, and potato-cars with stovepipe-ends sticking out in the middle ; cold-storage and refrigerator cars dripping ice-water on the tracks ;

ventilated fruit- and milk-cars ; flat-cars with truck-waggon full of market-stuff ; flat-cars loaded with reapers and binders, all red and green and gilt under the sizzling electric lights ; flat-cars piled high with strong-scented hides, pleasant hemlock-plank, or bundles of shingles ; flat-cars creaking to the weight of thirty-ton castings, angle-irons, and rivet-boxes for some new bridge ; and hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of box-cars loaded, locked and chalked. Men—hot and angry—crawled among and between and under the thousand wheels ; men took flying jumps through his cab, when he halted for a moment ; men sat on his pilot as he went forward, and on his tender as he returned ; and regiments of men ran along the tops of the box-cars beside him, screwing down brakes, waving their arms, and crying curious things.

·007.

WHEN HIS load was fairly on the move, three or four cars would be cut off, and ·007 would bound forward, only to be held hiccupping on the brake. Then he would wait a few minutes, watching the whirled lanterns, deafened with the clang of the bells, giddy with the vision of the sliding cars, his brake-pump panting forty to the minute, his front coupler lying sideways on his cow-catcher, like a tired dog's tongue in his mouth, and the whole of him covered with half-burnt coal-dust.

•007.

THERE EXISTS, for all their human bickerings, a very close brotherhood in the ranks of those whose work lies in Gunnison Street. To begin with, they have seen pain—pain that no word or deed of theirs can alleviate—life born into Death, and Death crowded down by unhappy life. Also they understand the full significance of drink, which is a knowledge hidden from very many well-meaning people, and some of them have fought with the beasts at Ephesus. They meet at unseemly hours in unseemly places, exchange a word or two of hasty counsel, advice, or suggestion, and pass on to their appointed toil, since time is precious and lives hang in the balance of five minutes.

For many, the gas-lamps are their sun, and the Covent Garden wains the chariots of the twilight. They have all in their station begged for money, so that the freemasonry of the mendicant binds them together.

The Record of Badalia Herodsfoot.

A NEWSPAPER office seems to attract every conceivable sort of person, to the prejudice of discipline. Zenana-mission ladies arrive, and beg that the Editor will instantly abandon all his duties to describe a Christian prize-giving in a back-slum of a perfectly inaccessible village ; Colonels who have been overpassed for command sit down and sketch the outline of a series of ten, twelve, or twenty-four leading articles on Seniority versus Selection ; Missionaries wish to know why they have not been permitted to escape from their regular vehicles of abuse and swear at a brother-missionary under special patronage of the editorial We ; stranded theatrical companies troop up to explain that they cannot pay for their advertisements, but on their return from New Zealand or Tahiti will do so with interest ; inventors of patent punkah-pulling machines, carriage couplings, and unbreakable swords and axle-trees, call with specifications in their pockets and hours at their disposal ; tea-companies enter and elaborate their prospectuses with the office pens ; secretaries of ball-committees clamour to have the glories of their last dance more fully described ; strange ladies rustle in and say, " I want a hundred lady's cards printed at once, please," which is manifestly part of an Editor's duty ; and every dissolute ruffian that ever tramped the Grand Trunk Road makes it his business to ask for employment as a proof-reader. And, all the time, the telephone-bell is ringing madly, and Kings are being killed on the Continent, and Empires are saying, " You're another," and Mister Gladstone is calling down brimstone upon the British Dominions, and the little black copy-boys are whining, "kaa-pi chay-ha-yeh" (copy wanted) like tired bees, and most of the paper is as blank as Modred's shield.

The Man Who Would be King.

HE KNEW by instinct the precise moment in a newspaper's life when the impetus of past good management is exhausted and it fetches up on the dead-centre between slow and expensive collapse and the new start which can be given by gold injections—and genius. He was wisely ignorant of journalism ; but when he stooped on a carcase there was sure to be meat. He had that week added a half-dead, halfpenny evening paper to his collection, which consisted of a prosperous London daily, one provincial ditto, and a limp-bodied weekly of commercial leanings.

The Village that Voted the Earth was Flat.

“THE SECRET of power,” said Ollyett, “is not the big stick. It’s the liftable stick.”

The Village that Voted the Earth was Flat.

“WHAT A man does doesn’t matter much ; and how he does it don’t matter either. It’s the when—the psychological moment. ’Press can’t make up for it ; money can’t ; brains can’t. A lot’s luck, but all the rest is genius.”

The Village that Voted the Earth was Flat.

ENGLAND

ENGLAND

“ ‘ ROME HAS forsaken her Gods, and must be punished. The great war with the Painted People broke out in the very year the temples of our Gods were destroyed. We beat the Painted People in the very year our temples were rebuilt. Go back further still.’ . . . He went back to the time of Diocletian ; and to listen to him you would have thought Eternal Rome herself was on the edge of destruction, just because a few people had become a little large-minded.”

A Centurion of the Thirtieth.

“ TO PARNESIUS and Pertinax, the not unworthy Captains of the Wall, from Maximus, once Emperor of Gaul and Britain, now prisoner waiting death by the sea in the camp of Theodosius—Greeting and Good-bye. I have joyfully done much evil in my life to those who have wished me evil, but if ever I did any evil to you two I repent, and I ask your forgiveness. The three mules which I strove to drive have torn me in pieces as your Father prophesied. The naked swords wait at the tent door to give me the death I gave to Gratian. Therefore I, your General and your Emperor, send you free and honourable dismissal from my service, which you entered, not for money or office, but, as it makes me warm to believe, because you loved me. You gave me the time for which I asked. If I have failed to use it, do not lament. We have gambled very splendidly against the Gods, but they hold weighted dice, and I must pay the forfeit. Remember, I have been ; but Rome is ; and Rome will be. Tell Pertinax his Mother is in safety at Nicaea, and her monies are in charge of the Prefect at Antipolis. Make my remembrances to your Father and to your Mother, whose friendship was great gain to me. Give also to my little Picts and to the Winged Hats such messages as their thick heads can understand. I would have sent you three Legions this very day if all had gone aright. Do not forget me. We have worked together. Farewell! Farewell! Farewell!"

The Winged Hats.

ONE BY one, the Provinces of the Empire were hauled up and baited, hit and held, lashed under the belly, and forced back on their haunches for the amusement of their new masters in the parish of Westminster. One by one they fell away, sore and angry, to compare stripes with each other at the ends of the uneasy earth.

Little Foxes.

"THE CONTINENT used to point out, every time relations were strained, that nothing would be easier than to raid England if they got command of the sea for a week. After a few years some genius discovered that it cut both ways, an' there was no reason why we, who are supposed to command the sea and own a few ships, should not organise our little raids in case of need."

The Army of a Dream.

“LIFE IN England is like settin’ in the front row at the theatre and never knowin’ when the whole blame drama won’t spill itself into your lap.”

The Edge of the Evening.

IT WAS the very point of perfection in the heart of an English May-day. The unseen tides of the air had turned, and all nature was setting its face with the shadows of the horse-chestnuts toward the peace of the coming night. But there were hours yet, I knew—long, long hours of the eternal English twilight—to the ending of the day. I was well content to be alive—to abandon myself to the drift of Time and Fate; to absorb great peace through my skin, and to love my country with the devotion that three thousand miles of intervening sea bring to fullest flower. And what a garden of Eden it was, this fatted, clipped, and washen land! A man could camp in any open field with more sense of home and security than the stateliest buildings of foreign cities could afford. And the joy was that it was all mine inalienably—groomed hedgerow, spotless road, decent greystone cottage, serried spinney, tasselled copse, apple-bellied hawthorn, and well-grown tree. A light puff of wind—it scattered flakes of may over the gleaming rails—gave me a faint whiff as it might have been of fresh cocoanut, and I knew that the golden gorse was in bloom somewhere out of sight.

My Sunday at Home.

THERE WAS a beautiful smell in the air—the smell of white dust, bruised nettles, and smoke, that brings tears to the throat of a man who sees his country but seldom—a smell like the echoes of the lost talk of lovers ; the infinitely suggestive odour of an immemorial civilisation.

My Sunday at Home.

JUST AT that minute we found ourselves opposite an empty villa. Its roof was of black slate, with bright unweathered ridge-tiling ; its walls were of blood-coloured brick, cornered and banded with vermiculated stucco work, and there was cobalt, magenta, and purest apple-green window glass on either side of the front door. The whole was fenced from the road by a low, brick-pillared, flint wall, topped with a cast-iron Gothic rail, picked out in blue and gold.

Tight beds of geranium, calceolaria, and lobelia speckled the grass-plat, from whose centre rose one of the finest araucarias (its other name by the way is "monkey-puzzler") that it has ever been my lot to see. It must have been full thirty feet high, and its foliage exquisitely answered the iron railings. Such bijou ne plus ultras replete with all the amenities do not, as I pointed out to Penfentenyou, transpire outside of England.

The Puzzler.

AND SHE—oh ! that I could do her justice !—she turned her broad black bows to the westering light, and lifted us high upon hills that we might see and rejoice with her. She whooped into veiled hollows of elm and Sussex oak ; she devoured infinite perspectives of park palings ; she surged through forgotten hamlets, whose single streets gave back, reduplicated, the clatter of her exhaust, and, tireless, she repeated the motions. Over naked uplands she droned like a homing bee, her shadow lengthening in the sun that she chased to his lair. She nosed up unparochial byways and accommodation-roads of the least accommodation, and put old scarred turf or new-raised molehills under her most marvellous springs with never a jar. And since the King's highway is used for every purpose save traffic, in mid-career she stepped aside for, or flung amazing loops about, the brainless driver, the driverless horse, the drunken carrier, the engaged couple, the female student of the bicycle and her staggering instructor, the pig, the perambulator, and the infant school (where it disembogued yelping on cross-roads), with the grace of Nellie Farren (upon whom be the Peace) and the lithe abandon of all the Vokes family. But at heart she was ever Judic as I remember that Judic long ago—Judic clad in bourgeois black from wrist to ankle, achieving incredible improprieties.

Steam Tactics.

“THAT’S Southdown thyme which makes our Southdown mutton beyond compare, and, my mother told me, ’twill cure anything except broken necks, or hearts. I forget which.”

The Knife and the Naked Chalk.

AS THE light beat across my face my fore-wheels took the turf of a great still lawn from which sprang horsemen ten feet high with levelled lances, monstrous peacocks, and sleek round-headed maids of honour—blue, black, and glistening—all of clipped yew. Across the lawn—the marshalled woods besieged it on three sides—stood an ancient house of lichened and weather - worn stone, with mullioned windows and roofs of rose-red tile.
It was flanked by semi-circular walls, also rose-red, that closed the lawn on the fourth side, and at their feet a box hedge grew man-high. There were doves on the roof about the slim brick chimneys, and I caught a glimpse of an octagonal dove-house behind the screening wall.

“They.”

“HAVE YOU ever bin in the Marsh?” he said to Dan.

“Only as far as Rye, once,” Dan answered.

“Ah, that’s but the edge. Back behind of her there’s steeples settin’ beside churches, an’ wise women settin’ beside their doors, an’ the sea settin’ above the land, an’ ducks herdin’ wild in the diks” (he meant ditches). “The Marsh is justabout riddled with diks an’ sluices, an’ tide-gates an’ water-lets. You can hear ’em bubblin’ an’ grummelin’ when the tide works in ’em, an’ then you hear the sea rangin’ left and right-handed all up along the Wall. You’ve seen how flat she is—the Marsh? You’d think nothin’ easier than to walk eend-on acrost her? Ah, but the diks an’ the water-lets, they twists the roads about as ravelly as witch-yarn on the spindles. So ye get all turned round in broad daylight."

"Dymchurch Flit."

"ALL I say is that you can put up larch and make a temp'ry job of it ; and by the time the young master's married it'll have to be done again. Now, I've brought down a couple of as sweet six-by-eight oak timbers as we've ever drawed. You put 'em in an' it's off your mind for good an' all. T'other way—I don't say it ain't right, I'm only just sayin' what I think—but t'other way, he'll no sooner be married than we'll 'ave it all to do again. You've no call to regard my words, but you can't get out of that."

An Habitation Enforced.

THE VALLEY was so choked with fog that one could scarcely see a cow's length across a field. Every blade, twig, bracken-frond, and hoof-print carried water, and the air was filled with the noise of rushing ditches and field-drains, all delivering to the brook below. A week's November rain on water-logged land had gorged her to full flood, and she proclaimed it aloud.

Two men in sackcloth aprons were considering an untrimmed hedge that ran down the hillside and disappeared into mist beside those roarings. They stood back and took stock of the neglected growth, tapped an elbow of hedge-oak here, a mossed beech-stub there, swayed a stooped ash back and forth, and looked at each other.

Friendly Brook.

“ I NEVER knowed her show any sort o’ kindness to nobody—not even when Jim’s mother was took dumb. No ! ’Twadn’t no stroke. It stifled the old lady in the throat here. First she couldn’t shape her words no shape ; then she clucked, like, an’ lastly she couldn’t more than suck down spoon-meat an’ hold her peace. Jim took her to Doctor Harding, an’ Harding he bundled her off to Brighton Hospital on a ticket, but they couldn’t make no stay to her afflictions there ; and she was bundled off to Lunnon, an' they lit a great old lamp inside her, and Jim told me they couldn't make out nothing in no sort there ; and, along o' one thing an' another, an' all their spyin's and pryin's, she come back a hem sight worse than when she started. Jim said he'd have no more hospitalizin', so he give her a slate, which she tied to her waist-string, and what she was minded to say she writ on it."

Friendly Brook.

"HE TOLD me he was a printer. I reckon, though, he lived on the rates like the rest of 'em up there in Lunnon."

Friendly Brook.

THERE WAS not so much a roar as the purposeful drive of a tide across a jagged reef, which put down every other sound for twenty minutes. A wide sheet of water hurried up to the little terrace on which the house stood, pushed round either corner, rose again and stretched, as it were, yawning beneath the moonlight, joined other sheets waiting for them in unsuspected hollows, and lay out all in one. A puff of wind followed.

“ My Son's Wife.”

HERE THEY found the ghost of a patch of lucerne that had refused to die ; there a harsh fallow surrendered to yard-high thistles ; and here a breadth of rampant kelk feigning to be lawful crop. In the ungrazed pastures swaths of dead stuff caught their feet, and the ground beneath glistened with sweat. At the bottom of the valley a little brook had undermined its foot-bridge, and frothed in the wreckage. But there stood great woods on the slopes beyond—old, tall, and brilliant, like unfaded tapestries against the walls of a ruined house.

An Habitation Enforced.

“ IT'S not our land. We've only paid for it. We belong to it, and it belongs to the people—our people they call 'em.”

An Habitation Enforced.

INDEX

INDEX

A blind man cannot	The Light that Failed . . . 79
"A dhirty man," he was used to say	The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney . . . 74
A glare of light on the stair-head	City of Dreadful Night . . . 36
A light spring rain—elephant-rain	The Spring Running . . . 16
A locomotive is, next to a marine engine	'007 121
A man should, whatever happens	Beyond the Pale . . . 34
"A man who can only do one thing	The Wrong Thing . . . 120
A newspaper office seems to attract	The Man Who Would be King 163
A Simla funeral	At the Pit's Mouth . . . 29
A solid line of blue	Kim 3
Above all this war without honour	One View of the Question . 108
Above them, still enormously above them	Kim 5
All India is full of holy men	Kim 33
"All I say is that you can	An Habitation Enforced . 178
All the world knows	The Drums of the Fore and Aft 131
"Allah ho Akbar"; then a pause	"The City of Dreadful Night" 41
And she—oh! that I could	Steam Tactics 174
"And there are noises under the sea	The Light that Failed . . . 78
As an Acting District Superintendent	William the Conqueror . . . 19
As frame after frame followed	The Mother Hive 136
As the day wears	The Judgment of Dungara . 28
As the elephant swung up the steep roads	Letters of Marque 8
As the light beat across my face	"They" 176
At last he saw the brushwood-pile	The Brushwood Boy . . . 81
At last, in a dry, hot dawn	William the Conqueror . . . 23
At twenty the things	"The Finest Story in the World" 127
"Bah!" he says, "Nothing's stronger	"A Priest in Spite of Himself" 119
"Because any man can lie	The Knife and the Naked Chalk 122
Before he was thirty, he discovered	An Error in the Fourth Dimension 91

186 A KIPLING ANTHOLOGY

" Begad, I cud ha' hiked Behold a bunnia's shop " Borrow trouble for yourself " But each man must have But first it is necessary But I knew that so long as a man trusts But it is a venerable fact But it is with steamers as But it was all pure delight But Mowgli, as a man-cub " But the General was the peach But the woman moved not " But whin was a young man	The Courting of Dinah Shadd 126 From Sea to Sea . . . 57 Cold Iron . . . 128 The Tree of Justice . . . 123 On the City Wall . . . 17 My Sunday at Home . . . 132 Watches of the Night . . . 129 The Devil and the Deep Sea . 119 Kim 5 Kaa's Hunting 44 The Captive 112 Dray Wara Yow Dee . . . 34 On Greenhow Hill . . . 126
Despair upon despair Dick paid seven shillings Do you know what life Dogs are at the best no more " Don't make game!" said the Cockney " Don't misunderstand me, Sir " Dressed! Don't tell me	The House Surgeon . . . 93 The Light that Failed . . . 77 The Judgment of Dungara . . 27 Garm—a Hostage . . . 147 With the Main Guard . . . 104 The Captive 113 A Second-rate Woman . . . 130
Each well - regulated Indian Cemetery East of Suez, some hold Even when he was being lionised " Everything in life is a miracle	At the Pit's Mouth . . . 29 The Mark of the Beast . . . 33 The Miracle of Purun Bhagat 47 The Conversion of St. Wilfrid 121
Far from the haunts Findlayson, C.E., sat in his trolley First, shadowy under closing eye- lids, would come the outline " Fog av fightin' For bleak, unadulterated misery For centuries the Little People For nine months of the year For Truth is a naked lady For when young lips have drunk deep From a peepul-shaded courtyard From the top of the palace	Private Learoyd's Story . . . 29 The Bridge-Builders . . . 158 The Brushwood Boy . . . 81 With the Main Guard . . . 103 My Own True Ghost Story . . 38 Red Dog 135 Quiquern 137 A Matter of Fact . . . 121 Baa, Baa, Black Sheep . . . 89 Letters of Marque . . . 12 Letters of Marque . . . 9
God has arranged that God has made very many heads " God knows, who made ele- phants" " Good. Begins now the Dance " Goose liver is ut?"	The Drums of the Fore and Aft 99 Preface, Life's Handicap . . v My Lord the Elephant . . . 142 Kaa's Hunting 46 The God from the Machine . 108
" Have you ever bin in the Marsh?" He believes that there are only two poets	" Dymchurch Flit" . . . 177 " Bread upon the Waters" . 155

He could not altogether understand	A Conference of the Powers . . . 90
He fell to work, whistling	The Light that Failed . . . 151
He followed the Himalaya-Thibet	The Miracle of Purun Bhagat . . . 47
He grew up with the cubs	Mowgli's Brothers . . . 43
He introduces me to the Captain	With the Night Mail . . . 83
"He is afraid of me also"	Toomai of the Elephants . . . 144
He knew by instinct the precise moment	The Village that Voted the Earth was Flat . . . 165
"He made no promise	The Knights of the Joyous Venture . . . 63
He stumbled across more ruins	Letters of Marque . . . 10
"He told me he was a printer	Friendly Brook . . . 180
He was going to Plymouth	My Sunday at Home . . . 92
Herding in India	"Tiger! Tiger!" . . . 6
Here they found the ghost	An Habitation Enforced . . . 181
His mother, Radha Pyari	Toomai of the Elephants . . . 142
Holden went to his bungalow	Without Benefit of Clergy . . . 124
"I felt friendly, but	The Captive . . . 111
"I have observed in my life	A Deal in Cotton . . . 117
"I have seen something of this world"	Kim . . . 123
"I knew if something didn't happen	The Horse Marines . . . 75
I lay awake till dawn	The House Surgeon . . . 94
"I'm a Tommy	The Madness of Private Ortheris . . . 101
"I never knew kings went	The Wrong Thing . . . 130
"I never knowed her show	Friendly Brook . . . 179
"I tell you, Sir, there's not much	The Captive . . . 111
"I've seen Sir Huon	Weland's Sword . . . 63
"I wint over an' tuk hould	"Love-o'-Women" . . . 105
I write of all matters	Preface, Life's Handicap . . . v
If this people be purged	One View of the Question . . . 109
If you hit a pony over the nose	False Dawn . . . 129
If you lay your ear	The Ship that Found Herself . . . 157
Immediately below him	The Miracle of Purun Bhagat . . . 48
In an Indian Jungle	The Spring Running . . . 15
In his own land, I believe, the Chinaman	From Sea to Sea . . . 54
In most big undertakings	Wressley of the Foreign Office . . . 151
In nine cases out of ten	Preface, Life's Handicap . . . 132
In the long hot nights	On the City Wall . . . 35
"In War it is as it is in Love"	The Winged Hats . . . 122
Indeed, when you come to think	The Drums of the Fore and Aft . . . 99
"It come over me	The Wrong Thing . . . 152
It is conceivable that her aunts	William the Conqueror . . . 21
It leaps monstrously	With the Night Mail . . . 83
"It's not our land	An Habitation Enforced . . . 181
It was a forlorn little jingle	"Captains Courageous" . . . 67
It was a glorious sight	The Maltese Cat . . . 65
It was the very point of perfection	My Sunday at Home . . . 172
Japan is a great people	From Sea to Sea . . . 54
Just at that minute we found	The Puzzler . . . 173

188 A KIPLING ANTHOLOGY

Let it be clearly understood	The Man Who Was . . . 127
"Life in England is like	The Edge of the Evening . . . 172
"Look," he answered	The Disturber of Traffic . . . 70
Men and women may sometimes	" They " . . . 122
"Men can 'most always tell	" Captains Courageous " . . . 121
Men often do their best work	Wressley of the Foreign Office . . . 151
Minor artists had worked with	From Sea to Sea . . . 53
Kano
"Money means pace and weight"	The Maltese Cat . . . 64
Morning brought the penetrating	William the Conqueror . . . 25
chill
Much that is written	Beyond the Pale . . . 34
"My spirits, d'you see, were	The Wrong Thing . . . 87 caught
Never praise a sister to a sister	False Dawn . . . 129
Next to a requited attachment	On the Strength of a Likeness . . . 125
"Niver show a woman that ye care	The Courting of Dinah Shadd . . . 126
No one, the owner least of all	Regulus . . . 125
Nobody seems to know	A Matter of Fact . . . 135
"Not one little bit of it, Padre"	The Moral Reformers . . . 87
Now a polo-pony is like a poet	The Maltese Cat . . . 65
"Now I'm sick to go 'Ome	The Madness of Private
	Ortheris . . . 102
Now the reserve of a boy	The Flag of their Country . . . 87
"O my time past	The Solid Muldoon . . . 74
Of the wheels of public service	In the Rukh . . . 26
Once a priest, always a priest	A Matter of Fact . . . 128
One by one, the Provinces	Little Foxes . . . 171
One must not mock	A Deal in Cotton . . . 126
One of the many beauties of a	Judson and the Empire . . . 118 democracy
Over our heads burned the won-	The Courting of Dinah Shadd . . . 38
derful Indian stars
Overhead blazed the unwinking	" The City of Dreadful
eye	Night " . . . 39
"Pray to the saints	The Daughter of the Regiment . . . 32
Rikki-tikki was bounding	" Rikki-Tikki-Tavi " . . . 146
"Rome has forsaken her Gods	A Centurion of the Thirtieth . . . 169
Scott understood dimly	William the Conqueror . . . 23
She delighted in hearing men talk	William the Conqueror . . . 21
She might have been the very	" Captains Courageous " . . . 67
So he was brought to Madame	The Light that Failed . . . 80
Binat's
Some people will tell you	The Tomb of his Ancestors . . . 18
That night he prayed	The Light that Failed . . . 80
"That's Mr. Hinchcliffe," said	" Their Lawful Occasions " . . . 155
Pycroft
"That's Southdown thyme	The Knife and the Naked
	Chalk . . . 176

INDEX

189

That was the time	William the Conqueror . . . 24
The army, unlike every other profession	His Private Honour . . . 128
The bloom of the peach-orchards	Dray Wara Yow Dee . . . 42
"The Continent used to point out	The Army of a Dream . . . 171
The Englishman lay out at high noon	Letters of Marque . . . 14
The fog had gone	" Captains Courageous " . . . 66
The lama, very straight and erect	Kim . . . 4
The man was at his feet	The Tomb of his Ancestors . . . 18
"The man who looks on	At the End of the Passage . . . 124
The March of the Mongol is a pretty thing	From Sea to Sea . . . 56
The next few weeks were	The Dog Hervey . . . 94
The officers, who had been lying down	The Mutiny of the Mavericks 100
The only real things in the world	From Sea to Sea . . . 131
The reports are silent here	The Judgment of Dungara . . . 28
"The safety of the Hive"	The Mother Hive . . . 117
The Scotch are a great people	" Bread upon the Waters " . . . 128
The sea, sliding over 267's skin	" Their Lawful Occasions " . . . 71
The sea was getting up	The Ship that Found Herself 158
The sea was like smoky oil	Bertran and Bimi . . . 70
"The secret of power," said Ollyet	The Village that Voted the Earth was Flat . . . 165
The sky above them was	Quiquern . . . 138
The sky behind us whitened	" Their Lawful Occasions " . . . 72
The stars had no fire in them	Letters of Marque . . . 13
The twelve Government elephants	My Lord the Elephant . . . 141
The valley was so choked with fog	Friendly Brook . . . 178
"Then he made a sword	Weland's Sword . . . 153
Then, inch by inch	How Fear came to the Jungle 145
Then silence follows	" The City of Dreadful Night " 40
Then they began their flight	Kaa's Hunting . . . 45
Then they came to an India	William the Conqueror . . . 22
"Then ye know that a man can't	The Wrong Thing . . . 130
There are few things sweeter	" The Finest Story in the World " . . . 125
"There are many lies	Kim . . . 125
There are not many happinesses so complete	Without Benefit of Clergy . . . 124
There are three great doors	The Limitations of Pambé Serang . . . 132
"There can be no war	The Treasure and the Law . . . 117
There exists, for all their human bickerings	The Record of Badalia Herodsfoot . . . 162
There is hope for a man	In Error . . . 123
"There's not much justice	" A Priest in Spite of Himself " 119
There was a beautiful smell in the air	My Sunday at Home . . . 173
There was Mulvaney, the father in the craft	The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney . . . 73
There was no answer	The Light that Failed . . . 76
There was no chance now	An Error in the Fourth Dimension . . . 91
There was not so much a roar	" My Son's Wife " . . . 180

There was the Canteen	In the Matter of a Private	30
There were girls who had been	From Sea to Sea	55
There were oil-cars, and hay-cars	'007	160
There were sailing-ships, with stewards	"Bread upon the Waters"	156
They called a house-meeting	An Unsavoury Interlude	88
"They could fight	The Captive	110
"They'd jolt into action	The Captive	111
They do not understand	The Man Who Would be King	32
They fled hand in hand	The Brushwood Boy	82
They saw little of the horizon	"Captains Courageous"	68
"They talk o' rich folk	On Greenhow Hill	127
They were a team of crack players	The Maltese Cat	66
"Thin I knew he spoke the truth	"Love-o'-Women"	124
This was one of the very many things	The White Seal	140
Thomas isn't a brute	In the Matter of a Private	101
"'Tis a shame both to the rig'-ments	The Big Drunk Draf	104
"'Tisn't beauty, so to speak	Mrs. Bathurst	122
" To Parnesius and Pertinax	The Winged Hats	169
To rear a boy	Thrown Away	89
"Watch the hand," said Mulvaney	The Solid Muldoon	75
"We came through in the early mornin'	"Love-o'-Women"	106
We of Hind listened	A Sahibs' War	110
"What a man does doesn't matter much	The Village that Voted the Earth was Flat	165
When a matured man discovers	Baa, Baa, Black Sheep	88
When his load was fairly on the move	'007	161
When man has come	Life's Handicap	131
"When numerous bodies of 'ighly trained men arrive	The Horse Marines	75
When one nation apologises	The Devil and the Deep Sea	120
When you have lost seventy thousand	The Devil and the Deep Sea	120
William served them generously	William the Conqueror	21
Yes, I was a trooper first	A Sahibs' War	109
"You have all not done so badly"	The Light that Failed	151
"You understand us English	The Disturber of Traffic	71
Your Gods and my Gods	The Mark of the Beast	33

THE END

Printed in Great Britain by R. & R. CLARK, LIMITED, Edinburgh.

THE WORKS OF RUDYARD KIPLING.

Uniform Edition. Extra Crown 8vo. Red Cloth, with Gilt Tops, 7s. 6d. net each.

*Pocket Edition. Fcap. 8vo. Printed on Thin Paper, with Gilt Edges.
Scarlet Leather, 7s. 6d. net. Blue Cloth, 6s. net each.*

PLAIN TALES FROM THE HILLS. One Hundred and Twentieth Thousand.

LIFE'S HANDICAP. Being Stories of Mine Own People. Ninety-fifth Thousand.

MANY INVENTIONS. Ninetieth Thousand.

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED. One Hundred and Twentieth Thousand.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE, and other Stories. Sixty-ninth Thousand.

SOLDIERS THREE, and other Stories. Seventy-sixth Thousand.

"CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS." A Story of the Grand Banks. Illustrated by I. W. TABER. Seventy-third Thousand.

THE JUNGLE BOOK. With Illustrations by J. L. KIPLING, W. H. DRAKE, and P. FRENZENY. Two Hundred and Sixteenth Thousand.

THE DAY'S WORK. One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Thousand.

THE SECOND JUNGLE BOOK. With Illustrations by J. LOCKWOOD KIPLING. One Hundred and Sixteenth Thousand.

STALKY & CO. One Hundred and Second Thousand.

FROM SEA TO SEA. Letters of Travel. In Two Vols. Forty-third Thousand.

THE NAULAHKA. A Story of West and East. By RUDYARD KIPLING and WOLCOTT BALESTIER. Forty-first Thousand.

KIM. With Illustrations by J. LOCKWOOD KIPLING. One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Thousand.

JUST SO STORIES FOR LITTLE CHILDREN. With Illustrations by the Author. One Hundred and Fiftieth Thousand.

TRAFFICS AND DISCOVERIES. Seventy-first Thousand.

PUCK OF POOK'S HILL. With Illustrations by H. R. MILLAR. Ninetieth Thousand.

ACTIONS AND REACTIONS. Seventieth Thousand.

REWARDS AND FAIRIES. With Illustrations by FRANK CRAIG. Seventy-fifth Thousand.

SONGS FROM BOOKS. Fifty-third Thousand.

A DIVERSITY OF CREATURES. Sixty-second Thousand.

LETTERS OF TRAVEL (1892-1913). Twenty-sixth Thousand.

THE SERVICE KIPLING.

In 26 Vols. Blue Cloth. 16mo. 3s. net each.

PLAIN TALES FROM THE HILLS. 2 vols.

SOLDIERS THREE. 2 vols.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE. 2 vols.

FROM SEA TO SEA. 4 vols.

LIFE'S HANDICAP. 2 vols.

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED. 2 vols.

THE NAULAHKA. 2 vols.

MANY INVENTIONS. 2 vols.

THE DAY'S WORK. 2 vols.

KIM. 2 vols.

TRAFFICS AND DISCOVERIES. 2 vols.

ACTIONS AND REACTIONS. 2 vols.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LTD., LONDON.

THE WORKS OF RUDYARD KIPLING.

In extra gilt cloth, gilt edges. 7s. 6d. net each.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS.

SOLDIER TALES. Fifteenth Thousand.

THE JUNGLE BOOK. | SECOND JUNGLE BOOK.

THE JUNGLE BOOK. With Illustrations in Colour by MAURICE and EDWARD DETMOLD. 8vo. 10s. net.

LETTERS OF TRAVEL (1892-1913). Edition de Luxe. 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

THE YEARS BETWEEN AND POEMS FROM HISTORY. Edition de Luxe. 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

THE YEARS BETWEEN. THE MUSE AMONG THE MOTORS. Bombay Edition. 8vo. 21s. net.

A DIVERSITY OF CREATURES. Bombay Edition. Sup. royal 8vo. 21s. net. Edition de Luxe. 2 vols. 8vo. 10s. 6d. net each.

JUST SO STORIES FOR LITTLE CHILDREN. With Illustrations by the Author. Original Edition. 4to. 7s. 6d. net.

THE JUST SO SONG BOOK. Being the Songs from RUDYARD KIPLING's Just So Stories. Set to Music by EDWARD GERMAN. Music Folio. Price 7s. 6d. net.

SEA WARFARE. Crown 8vo. 5s. net.

A FLEET IN BEING. Crown 8vo. Cloth, 1s. 6d. net. Sewed, 1s. net.

THE NEW ARMY IN TRAINING. 16mo. Sewed. 6d. net.

FRANCE AT WAR. 16mo. Sewed. 6d. net.

THE ARMY OF A DREAM. Crown 8vo. 6d. net.

DOCTORS. An Address. Crown 8vo. 1s. net.

IF —. Pott 8vo. Sewed, 1d. net. Also on Card, 3d. net.

THE CHILDREN'S SONG. Globe 8vo. Booklet. Sewed, 1d. net. Leaflet, 2s. 6d. net per 100.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LTD., LONDON.

