A Collection of Poems.

Vol. II.
A COLLECTION OF POEMS
IN SIX VOLUMES.
BY SEVERAL HANDS.

LONDON: Printed by J. Hughes,
For J. Dodsley, in Pall-Mall,
MDCCCLXVI.
THE PROGRESS of LOVE.
IN Four ECLOGUES.

UNCERTAINTY. ECLOGUE I.
To Mr. POPE.

POPE, to whose reed beneath the beechen shade,
The Nymphs of Thames a pleas'd attention paid;
While yet thy Muse, content with humbler praise,
Warbled in Windsor's grove her sylvan lays;
Though now sublimely borne on Homer's wing,
Of glorious wars, and godlike chiefs she sing;
Wilt thou with me re-visit once again
The crystal fountain, and the flow'ry plain?

Vol. II.

A

Wilt
Wilt thou, indulgent, hear my verse relate
The various changes of a lover's state;
And while each turn of passion I pursue,
Ask thy own heart if what I tell be true?
To the green margin of a lonely wood,
Whose pendent shades o'erlook'd a silver flood,
Young Damon came, unknowing were he stray'd,
Full of the image of his beauteous maid:
His flock far off, unfed, untended lay,
To every savage a defenceless prey;
No sense of interest could their master move,
And every care seem'd trifling now but Love.
Awhile in pensive silence he remain'd,
But though his voice was mute, his looks complain'd;
At length the thoughts within his bosom pent,
Forc'd his unwilling tongue to give them vent.
Ye Nymphs, he cry'd, ye Dryads, who so long
Have favour'd Damon, and inspir'd his song;
For whom, retir'd, I shun the gay resorts
Of sportful cities, and of pompous courts;
In vain I bid the restless world adieu,
To seek tranquillity and peace with you.
Though wild Ambition and destructive Rage
No Factions here can form, no wars can wage;
Though Envy frowns not on your humble shades,
Nor Calumny your innocence invades,
Yet cruel Love, that trouble of the breast,
Too often violates your boasted rest;

With
With inbred storms disturbs your calm retreat,
And taints with bitterness each rural sweet.
Ah luckless day! when first with fond surprize
On Delia’s face I fix’d my eager eyes;
Then in wild tumults all my soul was lost,
Then reafon, liberty, at once were lost:
And every wish, and thought, and care was gone,
But what my heart employ’d on her alone.
Then too she smil’d: can smiles our peace destroy,
Those lovely Children of Content and Joy?
How can soft pleasure and tormenting woe,
From the same spring at the same moment flow?
Unhappy boy, these vain enquiries cease,
Thought could not guard, nor will restore thy peace:
Indulge the frenzy that thou must endure,
And soothe the pain thou know’st not how to cure.
Come, flattering Memory, and tell my heart
How kind she was, and with what pleasing art
She strove its fondest wishes to obtain,
Confirm her pow’r, and faster bind my chain.
If on the green we danc’d, a mirthful band,
To me alone she gave her willing hand;
Her partial taste, if e’er I touch’d the lyre,
Still in my song found something to admire.
By none but her my crook with flow’rs was crown’d,
By none but her my brows with ivy bound:
The world that Damon was her choice believ’d,
The world, alas! like Damon was deceiv’d.

A 2

When
When last I saw her, and declar'd my fire,
In words as soft as passion could inspire,
Coldly she heard, and full of scorn withdrew,
Without one pitying glance, one sweet adieu.
The frighted hind, who sees his ripen'd corn
Up from the roots by sudden tempest torn,
Whose fairest hopes destroy'd and blasted lie,
Feels not so keen a pang of grief as I.
Ah! how have I deserv'd, inhuman maid,
To have my faithful service thus repay'd?
Were all the marks of kindnes I receiv'd,
But dreams of joy, that charm'd me and deceiv'd?
Or did you only nurse my growing love,
That with more pain I might your hatred prove?
Sure guilty treachery no place could find
In such a gentle, such a generous mind:
A maid brought up up the woods and wilds among,
Could ne'er have learnt the art of courts so young:
No; let me rather think her anger feign'd,
Still let me hope my Delia may be gain'd;
'Twas only modesty that seem'd disdain,
And her heart suffer'd when she gave me pain.

Plead'd with this flattering thought the love-sick boy
Felt the faint dawning of a doubtful joy;
Back to his flock more cheerfull he return'd,
When now the setting sun less fiercely burn'd;
Blue vapours rose along the mazy rills,
And light's last blushes ting'd the distant hills.

H O P E.
HOPE. Eclogue II.

To Mr. DODDINGTON.

Hear, DODDINGTON, the notes that shepherds sing,
Notes soft as those of nightingales in spring:
Nor Pan, nor Phœbus tune the shepherd’s reed;
From Love alone our tender lays proceed:
Love warms our fancy with enliv’ning fires,
Refines our genius, and our verse inspires:
From him Theocritus, on Enna’s plains,
Learnt the wild sweetness of his Doric strains;
Virgil by him was taught the moving art,
That charm’d each ear, and soften’d every heart:
O would’st thou quit the pride of courts, and deign
To dwell with us upon the vocal plain,
Thee too his pow’r should reach, and every shade
Resound the praises of thy fav’rite maid;
Thy pipe our rural concert would improve,
And we should learn of thee to please and love.

Damon no longer fought the silent shade,
No more in unfrequented paths he stray’d,
But call’d the nymphs to hear his jocund song,
And told his joy to all the rustic throng.

A 3

Blef
Blest be the hour, he said, that happy hour,
When first I own'd my Delia's gentle pow'r;
Then gloomy discontent and pining care
Forsook my breast, and left soft wishes there:
Soft wishes there they left, and gay desires,
Delightful languors, and transporting fires.
Where yonder limes combine to form a shade,
These eyes first gaz'd upon the charming maid;
They she appear'd, on that auspicious day,
When swains their sportive rites to Bacchus pay:
She led the dance—heav'n's! with what grace she mov'd!
Who could have seen her then, and not have lov'd?
I strove not to resist so sweet a flame,
But glory'd in a happy captive's name;
Nor would I now, could Love permit, be free,
But leave to brutes their savage liberty.

And art thou then, fond swain, secure of joy?
Can no reverse thy flattering bliss destroy?
Has treach'rous Love no torment yet in store?
Or hast thou never prov'd his fatal pow'r?
Whence flow'd those tears that late bedew'd thy cheek?
Why sigh'd thy heart as if it strove to break!
Why were the defart rocks invok'd to hear
The plaintive accents of thy sad despair?
From Delia's rigour all those pains arose,
Delia, who now compassionates my woes,
Who bids me hope; and in that charming word
Has peace and transport to my soul restored.

Begin,
Begin, my pipe, begin the gladsome lay;
A kiss from Delia shall thy music pay;
A kiss obtain'd 'twixt struggling and consent,
Giv'n with forc'd anger, and disguis'd content:
No laureat wreaths I ask to bind my brows,
Such as the Muse on lofty bards bestows;
Let other swains to praise or fame aspire:
I from her lips my recompense require.

Hark how the bees with murmurs fill the plain,
While every flow'r of every sweet they drain;
See, how beneath yon hillock's shady steep,
The shelter'd herds on flow'ry couches sleep:
Nor bees, nor her 's, are half so blest as I,
If with my fond desires my Love comply:
From Delia's lips a sweeter honey flows,
And on her bosom dwells more soft repose.

Ah how, my dear, shall I deserve thy charms?
What gift can bribe thee to my longing arms?
A bird for thee in silken bands I hold,
Whose yellow plumage shines like polish'd gold;
From distant isles the lovely stranger came,
And bears the Fortunate Canaries name;
In all our woods none boasts so sweet a note,
Not ev'n the nightingale's melodious throat.
Accept of this; and could I add beside
What wealth the rich Peruvian mountains hide;
If all the gems in Eastern rocks were mine,
On thee alone their glitt'ring pride should shine.

A 4

But
But if thy mind no gifts have pow'r to move,
Phœbus himself shall leave th' Aonian grove;
The tuneful Nine, who never sue in vain,
Shall come sweet suppliants for their fav'rite swain.
For him each blue-ey'd Naiad of the flood,
For him each green-hair'd sifter of the wood,
Whom oft beneath fair Cynthia's gentle ray
His music calls to dance the night away.
And you, fair nymphs, companions of my Love,
With whom the joys the cowslip meads to rove,
I beg you recommend my faithful flame,
And let her often hear her shepherd's name;
Shade all my faults from her enquiring sight,
And shew my merits in the fairest light;
My pipe your kind assistance shall repay,
And every friend shall claim a diff'rent lay.

But see! in yonder glade the heav'nly fair
Enjoys the fragrance of the breezy air—
Ah, thither let me fly with eager feet;
Adieu, my pipe, I go my Love to meet—
O may I find her as we parted last,
And may each future hour be like the past!
So shall the whitest lamb these pastures feed,
Propitious Venus, on thy altars bleed.
JEALOUSY. Eclogue III.

To Mr. EDWARD WALPOLE.

The gods, WALPOLE, give no bliss sincere:
Wealth is disturb'd by care, and pow'r by fear.
Of all the passions that employ the mind,
In gentle love the sweetest joys we find;
Yet e'en those joys dire Jealousy molests,
And blackens each fair image in our breasts.
O may the warmth of thy too tender heart
Ne'er feel the sharpness of his venom'd dart;
For thy own quiet think thy mistress just,
And wisely take thy happiness on trust.

Begin my Muse, and Damon's woes rehearse,
In wildest numbers and disorder'd verse.

On a romantic mountain's airy head
(While browsing goats at ease around him fed)
Anxious he lay, with jealous cares oppress'd;
Distrust and anger lab'ring in his breast—
The vale beneath a pleasing prospect yields,
Of verdant meads and cultivated fields;
Through these a river rolls its winding flood,
Adorn'd with various tufts of rising wood;

Here
Here half conceal'd in trees a cottage stands,
A castle there the op'ning plain commands,
Beyond, a town with glitt'ring spires is crown'd,
And distant hills the wide horizon bound:
So charming was the scene, awhile the swain
Beheld delighted, and forgot his pain;
But soon the stings infix'd within his heart,
With cruel force renew'd their raging smart:
His flow'ry wreath, which long with pride he wore,
The gift of Delia, from his brows he tore:
Then cry'd; May all thy charms, ungrateful maid,
Like these neglected roses droop and fade;
May angry Heav'n deform each guilty grace,
That triumphs now in that deluding face;
Those alter'd looks may every shepherd fly,
And ev'n thy Daphnis hate thee worse than I.
Say thou inconstant, what has Damon done,
To lose the heart his tedious pains had won?
Tell me what charms you in my rival find,
Against whose power no ties have strength to bind:
Has he, like me, with long obedience strove
To conquer your disdain, and merit love?
Has he with transport every smile ador'd,
And dy'd with grief at each ungentle word?
Ah, no! the conquest was obtain'd with ease:
He pleas'd you, by not studying to please:
His careless indolence your pride alarm'd;
And had he lov'd you more, he less had charm'd.

O pain
( II )

O pain to think, another shall possess
Those balmy lips which I was wont to press:
Another on her panting breast shall lie,
And catch sweet madness from her swimming eye!
I saw their friendly flocks together feed,
I saw them hand in hand walk o’er the mead;
Would my clos’d eyes had sunk in endless night,
Ere I was doom’d to bear that hateful sight!
Where’er they pass’d be blasted every flow’r,
And hungry wolves their helpless flocks devour!—
Ah wretched swain! could no examples move
Thy heedless heart to shun the rage of Love?
Haft thou not heard how poor * Menalcas dy’d
A victim to Parthenia’s fatal pride?
Dear was the youth to all the tuneful plain,
Lov’d by the nymphs, by Phæbus lov’d in vain:
Around his tomb their tears the Muses paid,
And all things mourn’d but the relentless maid.
Would I could die like him, and be at peace,
These torments in the quiet grave would cease;
There my vex’d thoughts a calm repose would find,
And rest as if my Delia still were kind.
No, let me live her falsehood to upbraid;
Some god perhaps my just revenge will aid.—
Alas! what aid, fond swain, wouldst thou receive?
Could thy heart bear to see its Delia grieve?

* See Mr. G a y’s Dione,

Protest
Protect her, Heav'n, and let her never know
The slightest part of hapless Damon's woe:
I ask no vengeance from the pow'rs above;
All I implore is never more to love—
Let me this fondness from my bosom tear,
Let me forget that e'er I thought her fair.
Come, cool Indifference, and heal my breast;
Wearied, at length I seek thy downy rest:
No turbulence of passion shall destroy
My future case with flattering hopes of joy.
Hear, mighty Pan, and all ye Sylvans hear,
What by your guardian deities I swear;
No more my eyes shall view her fatal charms,
No more I'll court the trait'rs to my arms;
Not all her arts my steady soul shall move,
And she shall find that Reason conquers Love.—
Scarce had he spoke, when through the lawn below
Alone he saw the beauteous Delia go;
At once transported he forgot his vow,
(Such perjuries the laughing gods allow)
Down the steep hills with ardent haste he flew;
He found her kind, and soon believ'd her true.
P O S S E S S I O N. E c l o g u e IV.

To Lord COBHAM.

COBHAM, to thee this rural lay I bring,
Whose guiding judgment gives me skill to sing;
Though far unequal to those polish'd strains,
With which thy Congreve charm'd the lift'ning plains,
Yet shall its music please thy partial ear,
And sooth thy breast with thoughts that once were dear;
Recall those years which time has thrown behind,
When smiling Love with Honour shar'd thy mind:
The sweet remembrance shall thy youth restore,
Fancy again shall run past pleasures o'er,
And while in Stowe's enchanting walks you stray,
This theme may help to cheat the summer's day.

Beneath the covert of a myrtle wood,
To Venus rais'd, a rustic altar stood,
To Venus and to Hymen, there combin'd,
In friendly league, to favour human kind.
With wanton Cupids in that happy shade,
The gentle Virtues, and mild Wisdom play'd.
Nor there in sprightly Pleasure's genial train,
Lurk'd sick Disgust, or late repenting Pain,
Nor Force, nor Int'rest, join'd unwilling hands,
But Love consenting ty'd the blissful bands.
Thither with glad devotion Damon came,
To thank the pow'rs who blest'd his faithful flame;
Two milk-white doves he on their altar laid,
And thus to both his grateful homage paid:
Hail, bounteous god, before whose hallow'd shrine
My Delia vow'd to be for ever mine,
While glowing in her cheeks, with tender love,
Sweet virgin modesty reluctant grove:
And hail to thee, fair queen of young desires,
Long shall my heart preserve thy pleasing fires,
Since Delia now can all its warmth return,
As fondly languish, and as fiercely burn.

O the dear gloom of last propitious night!
O shade more charming than the fairest light!
Then in my arms I clasp'd the melting maid,
Then all my pains one moment overpaid;
Then first the sweet excess of bliss I prov'd,
Which none can taste but who like me have lov'd.
Thou too, bright goddes, once in Ida's grove,
Didst not disdain to meet a shepherd's love,
With him while frisking lambs around you play'd,
Conceal'd you sported in the secret shade;
Scarce could Anchises' raptures equal mine,
And Delia's beauties only yield to thine.

What are you now, my once most valu'd joys,
Insipid trifles all, and childish toys ———

Friendship
Friendship itself ne’er knew a charm like this,
Nor Colin’s talk could please like Delia’s kiss.
Ye Muses, skill’d in every winning art,
Teach me more deeply to engage her heart;
Ye Nymphs, to her your freshest roses bring,
And crown her with the pride of all the spring;
On all her days let health and peace attend;
May she ne’er want, nor ever lose a friend;
May some new pleasure every hour employ;
But let her Damon be her highest joy.

With thee, my Love, for ever will I stay,
All night carest thee, and admire all day;
In the same field our mingled flocks we’ll feed,
To the same spring our thirsty heifers lead,
Together will we share the harvest toils,
Together press the vine’s autumnal spoils,
Delightful state, where peace and love combine,
To bid our tranquil days unclouded shine!
Here limpid fountains roll through flow’ry meads,
Here rising forests lift their verdant heads;
Here let me wear my careless life away,
And in thy arms insensibly decay.

When late old age our heads shall silvery o’er,
And our slow pulses dance with joy no more;
When time no longer will thy beauties spare,
And only Damon’s eye shall think thee fair;
Then may the gentle hand of welcome death,
At one soft stroke deprive us both of breath;

May
May we beneath one common stone be laid,
And the same cypress both our ashes shade.
Perhaps some friendly Muse, in tender verse,
Shall deign our faithful passion to rehearse,
And future ages with just envy mov'd,
Be told how Damon and his Delia lov'd.

SOLILOQUY

Of a BEAUTY in the COUNTRY.

Written at Eton School. By the Same.

TWAS night; and Flavia to her room retir'd,
   With ev'n'ing chat and sober reading tir'd;
There melancholy, pensive, and alone,
She meditates on the forsaken town:
On her rais'd arm reclin'd her drooping head,
She sigh'd, and thus in plaintive accents said:
"Ah, what avails it to be young and fair,
To move with negligence, to dress with care?
What worth have all the charms our pride can boast,
If all in envious solitude are lost?
Where none admire, 'tis useless to excel;
Where none are Beaus, 'tis vain to be a Belle:

"Beauty,
"Beauty, like wit, to judges should be shewn;
Both most are valued where they best are known.
With every grace of nature, or of art,
We cannot break one stubborn country heart:
The brutes, insensible, our pow'r defy:
To love exceeds a 'Squire's capacity.
The town, the court, is Beauty's proper sphere;
That is our heav'n, and we are angels there:
In that gay circle thousand Cupids rove,
The court of Britain is the court of Love.
How has my conscious heart with triumph glow'd,
How have my sparkling eyes their transport shew'd,
At each distinguish'd birth-night ball, to see
The homage due to empire, paid to me!
When every eye was fix'd on me alone,
And dreaded mine more than the monarch's frown:
When rival statesmen for my favour strove,
Less jealous in their pow'r, than in their love.
Chang'd is the scene; and all my glories die,
Like flow'rs transplanted to a colder sky;
Lost is the dear delight of giving pain,
The tyrant joy of hearing slaves complain.
In stupid indolence my life is spent,
Supinely calm, and dully innocent:
Unblest I wear my useless time away;
Sleep (wretched maid!) all night, and dream all day;
Go at set hours to dinner and to prayer;
For dulness ever must be regular.

Vol. II. B

"Now
"Now with mamma at tedious whist I play;
Now without scandal drink insipid tea;
Or in the garden breathe the country air,
Secure from meeting any Tempter there:
From books to work, from work to books I rove,
And am (alas!) at leisure to improve!
Is this the life a Beauty ought to lead?
Were eyes so radiant only made to read?
These fingers, at whose touch ev’n age would glow,
Are these of use for nothing but to sew?
Sure erring Nature never could design
To form a housewife in a mould like mine!
O Venus, queen and guardian of the fair,
Attend propitious to thy vot’ry’s pray’r:
Let me revisit the dear town again:
Let me be seen!—could I that wish obtain,
All other wishes my own pow’r would gain.”
BLENHEIM.

Written at the University of Oxford in the Year 1727.

By the Same.

Parent of arts, whose skilful hand first taught
The tow'ring pile to rise, and form'd the plan
With fair proportion; architect divine,
Minerva, thee to my advent'rous lyre
Assistant I invoke, that means to sing
BLENHEMIA, monument of British fame,
Thy glorious work! for thou the lofty tow'rs
Didst to his virtue raise, whom oft thy shield
In peril guarded, and thy wisdom steer'd
Through all the storms of war.—Thee too I call,
Thalia, sylvan Muse, who lov'd to rove
Along the shady paths and verdant bow'rs
Of Woodstock's happy grove: there tuning sweet
Thy rural pipe, while all the Dryad train
Attentive listen; let thy warbling song
Paint with melodious praise the pleasing scene,
And equal these to Pindus' honour'd shades.

When Europe freed, confess'd the saving pow'r
Of Marlborough's hand; Britain, who sent him forth

B 2  Chief
Chief of confed'rate hosts, to fight the cause
Of Liberty and Justice, grateful rais'd
This palace, sacred to her Leader's fame;
A trophy of success; with spoils adorn'd
Of conquer'd towns, and glorying in the name
Of that auspicious field, where Churchill's sword
Vanquish'd the might of Gallia, and chastis'd
Rebel Bavar.—Majestic in its strength
Stands the proud dome, and speaks its great design.

Hail happy Chief, whose valour could deserve
Reward so glorious! grateful nation hail,
Who paid't his service with so rich a meed!
Which most shall I admire, which worthiest praise,
The Hero or the People? Honour doubts,
And weighs their virtues in an equal scale.
Not thus Germania pays th' uncancelled debt
Of gratitude to us.—Blush, Cæsar, blush,
When thou behol'dst these tow'rs, ingrate, to thee
A monument of shame. Canst thou forget
Whence they are nam'd, and what an English arm
Did for thy throne that day? But we disdain
Or to upbraid, or imitate thy guilt.
Steel thy obdurate heart against the sense
Of obligation infinite, and know,
Britain, like Heav'n, protects a thankless world
For her own glory, nor expects reward.

Pleas'd with the noble theme, her task the Muse
Pursues untir'd, and through the palace roves

With
With ever-new delight. The tapestry rich
With gold, and gay with all the beauteous paint
Of various-colour'd silks, dispos'd with skill,
Attracts her curious eye. Here Isser rolls
His purple wave; and there the Granic flood
With passing squadrons foams: here hardy Gaul
Flies from the sword of Britain; there to Greece
Effeminate Persia yields.—In arms oppos'd
Marlb'rough and Alexander vie for fame
With glorious competition; equal both
In valour and in fortune, but their praise
Be different, for with different views they fought;
This to subdue, and that to free mankind.

Now through the flately portals issuing forth,
The Muse to softer glories turns, and seeks
The woodland shade, delighted. Not the vale
Of Tempé fam'd in song, or Ida's grove
Such beauty boasts. Amid the mazy gloom
Of this romantic wilderness once stood
The bow'r of Rosamonda, hapless fair,
Sacred to grief and love: the crystal fount
In which she us'd to bathe her beauteous limbs
Still warbling flows, pleas'd to reflect the face
Of Spencer, lovely maid, when tir'd she fits
Beside its flow'ry brink, and views those charms
Which only Rosamond could once excel.
But see where flowing with a nobler stream,
A limpid lake of purest waters rolls

Beneath
Beneath the wide-stretch'd arch, stupendous work,
Through which the Danube might collected pour
His spacious urn! Silent awhile and smooth
The current glides, 'till with an headlong force
Broke and disorder'd, down the steep it falls
In loud cascades; the silver-sparkling foam
Glitters reluent in the dancing ray.

In these retreats repos'd the mighty soul
Of Churchill, from the toils of war and state,
Splendidly private, and the tranquil joy
Of contemplation felt, while Blenheim's dome
Triumphal, ever in his mind renew'd
The mem'ry of his fame, and soothe'd his thoughts
With pleasing record of his glorious deeds.

So by the rage of faction, home recall'd,
Lucullus, while he wag'd successful war
Against the pride of Asia, and the pow'r
Of Mithridates, whose aspiring mind
No losses could subdue, enrich'd with spoils
Of conquer'd nations, back return'd to Rome,
And in magnificent retirement past
The evening of his life.—But not alone,
In the calm shades of honourable ease,
Great Marlborough peaceful dwelt: Indulgent Heav'n
Gave a companion to his softer hours,
With whom conversing, he forgot all change
Of fortune, or of taste, and in her mind
Found greatness equal to his own, and lov'd

Himself
Himself in her.—Thus each by each admir'd,
In mutual honour, mutual fondness join'd:
Like two fair stars with intermingled light,
In friendly union they together shone,
Aiding each other's brightness, 'till the cloud
Of night eternal quench'd the beams of one.
Thee, CHURCHILL, first the ruthless hand of death
Tore from thy comfort's side, and call'd thee hence
To the sublimier seats of joy and love;
Where Fate again shall join her soul to thine,
Who now, regardful of thy fame, erects
The column to thy praise, and soothes her woe
With pious honours to thy sacred name
Immortal. Lo! where tow'ring on the height
Of yon aërial pillar proudly stands
Thy image, like a guardian god, sublime,
And awes the subject plain: beneath his feet,
The German eagles spread their wings, his hand
Grasps Victory, its slave. Such was thy brow
Majestic, such thy martial port, when Gaul
Fled from thy frown, and in the Danube sought
A refuge from thy sword.—There, where the field
Was deepest stain'd with gore, on Hochstet's plain,
The theatre of thy glory, once was rais'd
A meaner trophy, by th' Imperial hand;
Extorted gratitude; which now the rage
Of Malice impotent, beseeming ill
A regal breast, has levell'd to the ground:
Mean insult! this with better auspices
Shall stand on British earth, to tell the world
How Marlborough fought, for whom, and how repay'd
His services. Nor shall the constant love
Of her who rais'd this monument be lost
In dark oblivion: That shall be the theme
Of future bards in ages yet unborn,
Inspir'd with Chaucer's fire, who in these groves
First tun'd the British harp, and little deem'd
His humble dwelling should the neighbour be
Of Blenheim, house superb; to which the throng
Of travellers approaching, shall not pass
His roof unnoted, but respectful hail
With rev'rence due. Such honour does the Muse
Obtain her favourites—But the noble pile
(My theme) demands my voice.—O shade ador'd,
Marlborough! who now above the starry sphere
Dwell'st in the palaces of heav'n, enthron'd
Amongst the demi-gods, deign to defend
This thy abode, while present here below,
And sacred still to thy immortal fame,
With tutelary care. Preserve it safe
From Time's destroying hand, and cruel stroke
Of factious Envy's more relentless rage.
Here may, long ages hence, the British youth,
When honour calls them to the field of war,
Behold the trophies which thy valour rais'd;
The roud reward of thy successful toils
For
(25)
For Europe's freedom, and Britannia's fame:
That sir'd with gen'rous envy, they may dare
To emulate thy deeds.—So shall thy name,
Dear to thy country, still inspire her sons
With martial virtue; and to high attempts
Excite their arms, 'till other battles won,
And nations sav'd, new monuments require,
And other Blenheims shall adorn the land.

TO THE

Reverend Dr. AYSCOUGH
at OXFORD.

Written from PARIS in the Year 1728.

By the Same.

SAY, dearest friend, how roll thy hours away?
What pleasing study cheats the tedious day?
Dost thou the sacred volumes oft explore
Of wife Antiquity's immortal lore,
Where virtue by the charms of wit refin'd,
At once exalts and polishes the mind?

How
How different from our modern guilty art,
Which please, only to corrupt the heart;
Whose curs'd refinements odious Vice adorn,
And teach to honour what we ought to scorn!
Dost thou in sage Historians joy to see
How Roman Greatness rose with Liberty;
How the same hands that tyrants durst controul,
Their empire stretch'd from Atlas to the Pole;
'Till wealth and conquest into slaves refin'd
The proud luxurions masters of mankind?
Dost thou in letter'd Greece each charm admire,
Each grace, each virtue Freedom could inspire;
Yet in her troubled states see all the woes
And all the crimes that giddy Faction knows;
'Till rent by parties, by corruption fold,
Or weakly careless, or too rashly bold,
She funk beneath a mitigated doom,
The slave and tut'ress of protecting Rome?
Does calm Philosophy her aid impart,
To guide the passions, and to mend the heart?
Taught by her precepts, haft thou learnt the end
To which alone the wise their studies bend;
For which alone by nature were desigh'd
The pow'rs of thought—to benefit mankind?
Not like a cloyster'd drone, to read and doze,
In undeserving, undeserv'd repose;
But reason's influence to diffuse; to clear
Th' enlighten'd world of every gloomy fear;
Dispel the mists of error, and unbind
Those pedant chains that clog the freeborn mind.
Happy who thus his leisure can employ!
He knows the purest hours of tranquil joy;
Nor vex'd with pangs that bury bosoms deep,
Nor lost to social Virtue's pleasing care;
Safe in the port, yet lab'ring to sustain
Those who still float on the tempestuous main.
So Locke the days of studious quiet spent;
So Boyle in wisdom found divine content;
So Cambray, worthy of a happier doom,
The virtuous slave of Louis and of Rome.

Good * Wor’ter thus supports his drooping age,
Far from court-flatt’ry, far from party rage;
He, who in youth a tyrant's frown defy'd,
Firm and intrepid on his country's side,
Her boldest champion then, and now her mildest guide.

O gen’rous warmth! O sanctity divine!
To emulate his worth, my friend, be thine:
Learn from his life the duties of the gown;
Learn not to flatter, nor insult the crown;
Nor basely servile court the guilty great,
Nor raise the Church a rival to the State:
To Error mild, to Vice alone severe,
Seek not to spread the law of Love by Fear.
The priest, who plagues the world, can never mend:
No foe to Man was e'er to God a friend:

* Dr. Houg h.

Let
Let reason and let virtue faith maintain,
All force but theirs is impious, weak, and vain.
Me other cares in other climes engage,
Cares that become my birth, and suit my age;
In various knowledge to improve my youth,
And conquer Prejudice, worst foe to Truth;
By foreign arts domestic faults to mend,
Enlarge my notions, and my views extend;
The useful science of the world to know,
Which books can never teach, or pedants shew.
A nation here I pity, and admire,
Whom noblest sentiments of glory fire,
Yet taught by custom’s force, and bigot fear,
To serve with pride, and boast the yoke they bear:
Whose Nobles born to cringe, and to command,
In courts a mean, in camps a gen’rous band;
From each low tool of pow’r content receive
Those laws, their dreaded arms to Europe give.
Whose people vain in want, in bondage blest,
Though plunder’d, gay; industrious, though oppress’d:
With happy follies rise above their fate,
The jelt and envy of each wiser state.
Yet here the Muses deign’d awhile to sport
In the short sun-shine of a fav’ring court:
Here Boileau, strong in sense, and sharp in wit,
Who from the ancients, like the ancients writ;
Permission gain’d inferior vice to blame,
By flatter’ring incense to his Matter’s fame.

Here
Here Molière, first of comic wits, excel'd
Whate'er Athenian theatres beheld;
By keen, yet decent satire skill'd to please,
With morals mirth uniting, strength with ease.
Now charm'd, I hear the bold Corneille inspire
Heroic thought with Shakespear's force and fire;
Now sweet Racine with milder influence move
The soften'd heart to Pity and to Love.

With mingled pain and pleasure I survey
The pompous works of arbitrary sway;
Proud palaces, that drain'd the subjects' store,
Rais'd on the ruins of th' oppreß'd and poor;
Where ev'n mute walls are taught to flatter state,
And painted triumphs file Ambition Great *
With more delight those pleasing shades I view,
Where Condé from an envious court withdrew †;
Where, sick of glory, faction, pow'r and pride,
(Sure judge how empty all, who all had try'd)
Beneath his palms the weary Chief repos'd,
And life's great scene in quiet Virtue clos'd.

With shame that other fam'd retreat I see
Adorn'd by Art, disgrac'd by Luxury ||;
Where Orleans wasted every vacant hour
In the wild riot of unbounded pow'r.
Where feverish Debauch and impious Love
Stain'd the mad table and the guilty grove.

* The victories of Louis XIV. painted in the galleries of Versailles.
† Chantilly.          || St. Cloud.
With these amusements is thy friend detain’d,
Pleas’d and instruct’d in a foreign land;
Yet oft a tender wish recalls my mind
From present joys to dearer left behind:
O native isle! fair Freedom’s happiest seat!
At thought of thee my bounding pulses beat;
At thought of thee my heart impatient burns,
And all my country on my soul returns.
When shall I see thy fields, whose plenteous grain
No pow’r can ravish from th’ industrious swain?
When kiss with pious love the sacred earth,
That gave a Burleigh, or a Russel birth?
When, in the shade of laws, that long have flood,
Prop’d by their care, or strengthen’d by their blood,
Of fearless independence wisely vain,
The proudest slave of Bourbon’s race disdain’d?
Yet oh! what doubt, what sad presaging voice
Whispers within, and bids me not rejoice;
Bids me contemplate every state around,
From sultry Spain to Norway’s icy bound;
Bids their lost rights, their ruin’d glories see;
And tells me, These, like England, once were Free.
To Mr. P O Y N T Z,
Ambassador at the Congress of Soissons, in the Year 1728.

Written at Paris. By the Same.

O Thou, whose friendship is my joy and pride,
Whose virtues warm me, and whose precepts guide;
Thou, to whom greatness, rightly understood,
Is but a larger power of being good;
Say, Poyntz, amidst the toils of anxious state,
Does not thy secret soul desire retreat?
Dost thou not wish (the task of glory done)
Thy busy life at length might be thy own;
That to thy lov'd Philosophy resign'd,
No care might ruffle thy unbended mind?
Just is the wish. For sure the happiest meed,
To favour'd man by smiling Heav'n decreed,
Is to reflect at ease on glorious pains,
And calmly to enjoy what Virtue gains.

Not him I praise, who from the world retir'd,
By no enliv'ning gen'rous passion fir'd,
On flow'ry couches slumbers life away,
And gently bids his active pow'rs decay;

Who
Who fears bright Glory's awful face to see,
And shuns Renown as much as Infamy.
But blest is he, who exercis'd in cares,
To private Leisure public Virtue bears;
Who tranquil ends the race he nobly run,
And decks Repose with trophies Labour won.
Him Honour follows to the secret shade,
And crowns propitious his declining head;
In his retreats their harps the Muses string,
For him in lays unbought spontaneous sing;
Friendship and Truth on all his moments wait,
Pleas'd with Retirement better than with State;
And round the bow'r where humbly great he lies,
Fair olives bloom, or verdant laurels rise.

So when thy Country shall no more demand
The needful aid of thy sustaining hand;
When Peace restor'd shall on her downy wing
Secure Repose and careless Leisur bring;
Then to the shades of learned Ease retir'd,
The world forgetting, by the world admir'd,
Among thy books and friends, thou shalt posses
Contemplative and quiet happiness;
Pleas'd to review a life in honour spent,
And painful merit paid with sweet content.
Yet though thy hours unclogg'd with sorrow roll,
Though wisdom calm, and science feed thy soul;
One dearer bliss remains to be posses'd,
That only can improve and crown the rest—
Permit thy friend this secret to reveal,
Which thy own heart perhaps would better tell;
The point to which our sweetest passions move,
Is to be truly lov’d, and fondly love.
This is the charm that soothes the troubled breast,
Friend to our health, and author of our rest,
Bids every gloomy vexing passion fly,
And tunes each jarring string to harmony.
Ev’n while I write, the name of Love inspires
More pleasing thoughts, and more enliv’ning fires;
Beneath his pow’r my raptur’d fancy glows,
And every tender verse more sweetly flows.
Dull is the privilege of living free;
Our hearts were never form’d for Liberty:
Some beauteous image well imprinted there,
Can best defend them from consuming care.
In vain to groves and gardens we retire,
And nature in her rural works admire;
Though grateful these, yet these but faintly charm,
They may Delight us, but can never Warm.
May some fair eyes, my friend, thy bosom fire
With pleasing pangs of ever gay desire;
And teach thee that soft science, which alone
Still to thy searching mind refts slightly known.
Thy soul, though great, is tender and refin’d,
To friendship sensible, to love inclin’d;
And therefore long thou canst not arm thy breast
Against the entrance of so sweet a guest.

Vol. II. C

Hear
Hear what th' inspiring Muses bid me tell,
For Heav'n shall ratify what they reveal.
A chosen bride shall in thy arms be plac'd,
With all th' attractive charms of beauty grac'd;
Whose wit and virtue shall thy own express,
Distinguish'd only by their softer dress:
Thy greatness she, or thy retreat shall share,
Sweeten tranquillity, or soften care:
Her smiles the taste of every joy shall raise,
And add new pleasure to renown and praise;
'Till charm'd you own the truth my verse would prove,
That Happiness is near allied to Love.

VERSES to be written under a Picture of Mr. POYNTZ.

By the Same.

SUCH is thy form, O Poyntz! but who shall find
A hand, or colours, to express thy mind?
A mind unmov'd by every vulgar fear,
In a false world that dares to be sincere;
Wise without art; without ambition great;
Though firm, yet pliant; active, though sedate;
With all the richest stores of Learning fraught,
Yet better still by native Prudence taught;

That,
That, fond the griefs of the distress'd to heal,
Can pity frailties it could never feel;
That, when Misfortune su'd, ne'er sought to know
What feel, what party, whether friend or foe;
That, fix'd on equal Virtue's temp'rate laws,
Despises calumny, and shuns applause;
That, to its own perfections singly blind,
Would for another think this praise design'd.

An Epistle to Mr. POPE.

From Rome, 1730. By the Same.

Immortal bard! for whom each Muse has wove
The fairest garlands of th' Aonian grove;
Preserv'd, our drooping genius to restore,
When Addison and Congreve are no more.
After so many stars extinct in night
The darken'd age's last remaining light!
To thee from Latian realms this verse is writ,
Inspir'd by memory of ancient wit;
For now no more these climes their influence boast,
Fall'n is their glory, and their virtue lost;
From Tyrants and from Priests the Muses fly,
Daughters of Reason and of Liberty:
Nor Baiae now, nor Umbria's plain they love,
Nor on the banks of Nar, or Mincius rove;
To Thames's flow'ry borders they retire,
And kindle in thy breast the Roman fire.
So in the shades, where cheer'd with summer rays
Melodious linnets warbled sprightly lays,
Soon as the faded, falling leaves complain
Of gloomy Winter's unauspicious reign,
No tuneful voice is heard of joy or love,
But mournful silence saddens all the grove.

Unhappy Italy! whose alter'd state
Has felt the worst severity of fate:
Not that Barbarian hands her Fasces broke,
And bow'd her haughty neck beneath their yoke;
Not that her palaces to earth are thrown,
Her cities defart, and her fields unsown;
But that her ancient Spirit is decay'd,
That sacred Wisdom from her bounds is fled,
That there the source of Science flows no more,
Whence its rich streams supply'd the world before.

Illustrious names! that once in Latium shin'd,
Born to instruct and to command mankind;
Chiefs, by whose virtue mighty Rome was rais'd,
And Poets, who those Chiefs sublimely prais'd!
Oft I the traces you have left explore,
Your ashes visit, and your urns adore;
Oft kiss, with lips devout, some mould'ring stone,
With ivy's venerable shade o'ergrown;

Those
Those hallow'd ruins better pleas'd to see
Than all the pomp of modern luxury.

As late on Virgil's tomb fresh flow'rs I strow'd,
While with th' inspiring Muse my bosom glow'd,
Crown'd with eternal bays my ravish'd eyes
Beheld the poet's aweful form arise;
Stranger, he said, whose pious hand has paid
These grateful rites to my attentive shade,
When thou shalt breathe thy happy native air,
To Pope this message from his Master bear:

'Great Bard, whose numbers I myself inspire,
To whom I gave my own harmonious lyre,
If high exalted on the throne of Wit,
Near me and Homer thou aspire to sit,
No more let meaner Satire dim the rays
That flow majestic from thy nobler bays;
In all the flow'ry paths of Piadus stray,
But shun that thorny, that unpleasing way;
Nor when each soft engaging Muse is thine,
Address the least attractive of the Nine.

Of thee more worthy were the task, to raise
A lasting column to thy Country's praise;
To sing the land, which yet alone can boast
That Liberty corrupted Rome has lost;
Where Science in the arms of Peace is laid,
And plants her Palm beside the Olive's shade.
Such was the theme for which my lyre I strung,
Such was the people whose exploits I sung:
Brave, yet refin'd, for arms and arts renown'd,
With diff'rent bays by Mars and Phoebus crown'd;
Dauntless opposers of tyrannic sway,
But pleas'd a mild Augustus to obey.

If these commands submissive thou receive,
Immortal and unblam'd thy name shall live;
Envy to black Cocytus shall retire,
And howl with Furies in tormenting fire;
Approving Time shall consecrate thy lays,
And join the Patriot's to the Poet's praise.

To my Lord ———

In the Year 1730.

From Worcestershire. By the Same.

Strenua nos exercet Inertia: Navibus atque
Quadrigis petimus bene Viveret: quod petis hic est;
Est Ulubris, Animus et te non deficit æquus.

FAV'RITE of Venus and the tuneful Nine,
Pollio, by nature form'd in courts to shine,
Wilt thou once more a kind attention lend
To thy long absent and forgotten friend:
Who after seas and mountains wander'd o'er,
Return'd at length to his own native shore,

From
From all that's gay retir'd, and all that's great,
Beneath the shades of his paternal seat
Has found that Happiness he sought in vain
On the fam'd banks of Tiber and of Seine?
'Tis not to view the well-proportion'd pile,
The charms of Titian's and of Raphael's stile;
At soft Italian sounds to melt away;
Or in the fragrant groves of myrtle stray;
That lulls the tumults of the soul to rest,
Or makes the fond possessor truly blest.
In our own breasts the source of Pleasure lies
Still open, and still flowing to the wife;
Not forc'd by toilsome art and wild desire
Beyond the bounds of nature to aspire,
But in its proper channels gliding fair;
A common benefit, which all may share.
Yet half mankind this easy Good disdain
Nor relish happiness unbought by pain;
False is their taste of bliss, and thence their search is vain.
So idle, yet so restless are our minds,
We climb the Alps, and brave the raging winds,
Through various toils to seek Content we roam,
Which but with thinking right were our's at home,
For not the ceaseless change of shifted place
Can from the heart a settled grief erase;
Nor can the purer balm of foreign air
Heal the distemper'd mind of aching care.
The wretch by wild impatience driv'n to rove,
Vex'd with the pangs of ill-requited love,
From pole to pole the fatal arrow bears,
Whose rooted point his bleeding bosom tears,
With equal pain each different clime he tries,
And is himself that torment which he flies.

For how should ills, that from our passions flow,
Be chang'd by Afric's heat, or Ruffia's snow?
Or how can aught but pow'rful Reason cure,
What from unthinking Folly we endure?
Happy is He, and He alone, who knows
His heart's uneasy discord to compose;
In gen'rous love of others' good to find
The sweetest pleasures of the social mind;
To bound his wishes in their proper sphere;
To nourish pleasing hope, and conquer anxious fear.
This was the wisdom ancient Sages taught,
This was the sov'reign good they justly sought;
This to no place or climate is confin'd,
But the free native produce of the mind.

Nor think, my Lord, that Courts to you deny
The useful practice of Philosophy:
Horace, the wisest of the tuneful choir,
Not always chose from Greatness to retire,
But in the palace of Augustus knew
The same unerring maxims to pursu'e,
Which in the Sabine or the Velian shade
His study and his happiness he made.
May you, my friend, by his example taught,
View all the giddy scene with sober thought;
Undazzled every glittering folly see,
And in the midst of slavish forms be free;
In its own center keep your steady mind;
Let Prudence guide you, but let Honour bind;
In show, in manners, act the Courtier's part,
But be a Country-gentleman at heart.

A D V I C E to a L A D Y.

By the Same. 1731.

THE counsels of a friend, Belinda, hear,
Too roughly kind to please a Lady's ear,
Unlike the flatteries of a lover's pen,
Such truths as women seldom learn from men.
Nor think I praise you ill, when thus I shew
What female Vanity might fear to know:
Some merit's mine, to dare to be sincere,
But greater your's, sincerity to bear.

Hard is the fortune that your sex attends;
Women, like Princes, find few real friends:
All who approach them their own ends pursue:
Lovers and ministers are seldom true.

Hence
Hence oft from Reason heedless Beauty strays,
And the most trusted Guide the most betrays:
Hence by fond dreams of fancy’d pow’r amus’d,
When most you tyrannize you’re most abus’d.
What is your sex’s earliest, latest care,
Your heart’s supreme ambition? To be fair:
For this the toilet every thought employs,
Hence all the toils of dress, and all the joys:
For this, hands, lips, and eyes are put to school,
And each instructed feature has its rule;
And yet how few have learnt, when this is giv’n,
Not to disgrace the partial boon of heav’n?
How few with all their pride of form can move?
How few are lovely, that were made for love?
Do you, my fair, endeavour to possess
An elegance of mind as well as dress;
Be that your ornament, and know to please
By graceful Nature’s unaffected ease.
Nor make to dangerous Wit a vain pretence,
But wisely rest content with modest Sense;
For Wit, like wine, intoxicates the brain,
Too strong for feeble woman to sustain;
Of those who claim it, more than half have none,
And half of those who have it, are undone.
Be still superior to your sex’s arts,
Nor think Dishonesty a proof of Parts;
For you the plainest is the wifest rule,
A Cunning Woman is a Knave’s Fool.
Be good yourself, nor think another's shame
Can raise your merit, or adorn your fame.
Prudes rail at whores, as statesmen in disgrace
At ministers, because they wish their place.
Virtue is amiable, mild, serene,
Without, all beauty, and all peace within:
The honour of a prude is rage and storm,
'Tis ugliness in its most frightful form:
Piercely it stands defying gods and men,
As fiery monsters guard a giant's den.
Seek to be good, but aim not to be great:
A woman's noblest station is Retreat;
Her fairest virtues fly from public sight,
Domestic worth, that shuns too strong a light.
To rougher man Ambition's task resign:
'Tis ours in Senates or in Courts to shine,
To labour for a sunk corrupted state,
Or dare the rage of envy, and be great.
One only care your gentle breasts should move,
Th' important business of your life is Love:
To this great point direct your constant aim,
This makes your Happiness, and this your Fame.

Be never cool reserve with passion join'd;
With caution choose; but then be fondly kind.
The selfish heart, that but by halves is giv'n,
Shall find no place in Love's delightful heav'n;
Here sweet extremes alone can truly bless,
The virtue of a lover is excess,

A maid
A maid unask'd may own a well-plac'd flame,
Not loving first, but loving wrong is shame.
Contemn the little pride of giving pain,
Nor think that conquest justifies disdain;
Short is the period of insulting Pow'r;
Offended Cupid finds his vengeful hour,
Soon will resume the empire which he gave,
And soon the Tyrant shall become the Slave.
Blest is the maid, and worthy to be blest,
Whose soul, entire by him she loves posses'd,
Feels every vanity in fondness lost,
And asks no pow'r, but that of pleasing most:
Her's is the bliss in just return to prove
The honest warmth of undissimulated Love;
For her, inconstant man might cease to range,
And Gratitude forbid Desire to change.

But left harsh Care the lover's peace destroy,
And roughly blight the tender buds of joy,
Let Reason teach what Passion fain would hide,
That Hymen's bands by Prudence should be ty'd.
Venus in vain the wedded pair would crown,
If angry Fortune on their union frown:
Soon will the flattering dream of bliss be o'er,
And cloy'd imagination cheat no more.
Then waking to the sense of lasting pain,
With mutual tears the nuptial couch they stain;
And that fond love, which should afford relief,
Does but increase the anguish of their grief;

While
While both could easier their own sorrows bear,
Than the sad knowledge of each other's care.

Yet may you rather feel that virtuous pain,
Than sell your violated charms for gain;
Than wed the wretch whom you despise, or hate,
For the vain glare of useless wealth or state.
The most abandon'd prostitutes are they,
Who not to Love, but Avarice fall a prey:
Nor aught avails the specious name of Wife;
A maid so wedded is a Whore for Life.

Ev'n in the happiest choice, where Fav'ring Heav'n
Has equal love, and easy fortune giv'n,
Think not, the Husband gain'd, that all is done;
The prize of happiness must still be won;
And oft, the careless find it to their cost,
The Lover in the Husband may be lost;
The Graces might alone his heart allure;
They and the Virtues meeting must secure.

Let ev'n your Prudence wear the pleasing dress
Of care for him, and anxious tenderness.
From kind concern about his weal or woe,
Let each domestic duty seem to flow;
The Household Scepter if he bids you bear,
Make it your pride his servant to appear;
Endearing thus the common acts of life,
The Mistress shall charm him in the Wife;
And wrinkled age shall unobserv'd come on,
Before his eye perceiv'd one beauty gone:

Ev'n
Ev'n o'er your cold, and ever-sacred urn,
His constant flame shall unextinguish'd burn.
Thus I, Belinda, would your charms improve,
And form your heart to all the arts of Love;
The task were harder to secure my own
Against the pow'r of those already known;
For well you twist the secret chains that bind
With gentle force the captivated mind,
Skill'd every soft attraction to employ,
Each flattering hope, and each alluring joy;
I own your genius, and from you receive
The rules of Pleasing, which to you I give.

SONG.

Written in the Year 1732. By the Same.

I.

When Delia on the plain appears,
Auw'd by a thousand tender fears,
I would approach, but dare not move;—
Tell me, my Heart, if this be Love.

II.

Whene'er she speaks, my ravish'd ear
No other voice but her's can hear,
No other wit but her's approve;—
Tell me, my Heart, if this be Love.
(47)

III.
If she some other youth commend,
Though I was once his fondest friend,
His instant enemy I prove; —
Tell me, my Heart, if this be Love.

IV.
When she is absent, I no more
Delight in all that pleas'd before,
The clearest spring, or shadiest grove; —
Tell me, my Heart, if this be Love.

V.
When fond of pow'r, of beauty vain,
Her nets she spread for every swain,
I strove to hate, but vainly strove; —
Tell me, my Heart, if this be Love.

-song-

SONG.

Written in the Year 1733. By the Same.

I.

The heavy hours are almost past
That part my Love and me;
My longing eyes may hope at last,
Their only wish to see.

II. But
( 48 )

II.
But how, my Delia, will you meet
The man you've lost so long?
Will Love in all your pulses beat,
And tremble on your tongue?

III.
Will you in every look declare
Your heart is still the same?
And heal each idly anxious care
Our fears in absence frame?

IV.
Thus, Delia, thus I paint the scene,
When shortly we shall meet,
And try what yet remains between
Of loit'ring time to cheat.

V.
But if the dream that soothes my mind
Shall false and groundless prove;
If I am doom'd at length to find
You have forgot to love;

VI.
All I of Venus ask, is this;
No more to let us join;
But grant me here the flattery bliss,
To Die and Think you mine.

DAMON
(49)

DAMON and DELIA.

In Imitation of HORACE and LYDIA.

Written in the Year 1732. By the Same.

DAMON.

TELL me, my Delia, tell me why
My kindest, fondest looks you fly:
What means this cloud upon your brow?
Have I offended? tell me how?
Some change has happen'd in your heart,
Some rival there has stole a part;
Reason these fears may disapprove:
But yet I fear, because I love.

DELIA.

First, tell me, Damon, why to-day
At Belvidera's feet you lay?
Why with such warmth her charms you prais'd,
And ev'ry tribling beauty rais'd,
As if you meant to let me see
Your flattery is not all for me?
Alas! too well your sex I knew,
Nor was so weak to think you true.

VOL. II  D  DAMON.
( 50 )

Damon.

Unkind! my falsehood to upbraid,
When your own orders I obey'd;
You bid me try by this deceit
The notice of the world to cheat,
And hide beneath another name
The secret of our mutual flame.

Delia.

Damon, your prudence I confess,
But let me wish it had been less;
Too well the lover's part you play'd,
With too much art your court you made;
Had it been only art, your eyes
Would not have join'd in the disguise.

Damon.

Ah, cease thus idly to molest
With groundless fears thy virgin breast.
While thus at fancy'd wrongs you grieve,
To me a real pain you give.

Delia.

Though well I might your truth distrust,
My foolish heart believes you just;
Reason this faith may disapprove,
But I believe, because I love.
ODE, in Imitation of Pastor Fido.

(O Primavera Gioventu del Anno.)

Written Abroad in 1729: By the Same.

I.

Paren of blooming flow'rs and gay desires,
Youth of the tender year, delightful Spring,
At whose approach, inspir'd with equal fires,
The am'rous Nightingale and Poet sing:

II.

Again dost thou return, but not with thee
Return the smiling Hours I once possess'd;
Blessings thou bring'lt to others, but to me
The sad remembrance, that I once was blest.

III.

Thy faded charms, which Winter snatch'd away,
Renew'd in all their former luftre shine;
But ah! no more shall hapless I be gay,
Or know the vernal joys that have been mine.

IV.

Though linnets sing, though flow'rs adorn the green,
Though on their wings soft zephyrs fragrance bear;
Harsh is the music, joyless is the scene,
The odour faint; for Delia is not there.

V. Cheer-
Cheerless and cold I feel the genial sun,
From thee while absent I in exile rove;
Thy lovely presence, fairest light, alone
Can warm my heart to gladness and to love.

Part of an Elegy of Tibullus, translated.

(Divitiis alius fulvo fibi congerat Auro.)

1729-30. By the Same.

Let others heap of wealth a shining store,
And much possess, labour still for more;
Let them, disquieted with dire alarms,
Aspire to win a dangerous fame in arms:
Me tranquil poverty shall lull to rest,
Humbly secure and indolently blest;
Warm’d by the blaze of my own cheerful hearth,
I’ll waste the wintry hours in social mirth;
In summer pleas’d attend to harvest toils,
In autumn press the vineyard’s purple spoils,
And oft to Delia in my bosom bear
Some kid, or lamb that wants its mother’s care:
With her I’ll celebrate each gladsome day,
When swains their sportive rites to Bacchus pay:
With her new milk on Pales' altar pour,
And deck with ripen'd fruits Pomona's bow'r.
At night how soothing would it be to hear,
Shelter'd and warm, the tempest whistling near;
And while my charmer in my arms I strain,
Slumber assisted by the beating rain!
Ah! how much happier, than the fool who braves
In search of wealth the black tempestuous waves!
While I, contented with my little store,
In tedious voyage seek no distant shore,
But idly lolling on some shady seat,
Near cooling fountains shun the dog-star's heat;
For what reward so rich could Fortune give
That I by absence should my Delia grieve?
Let great Messalla shine in martial toils,
And grace his palace with triumphal spoils;
Me Beauty holds in strong, though gentle chains,
Far from tumultuous war and dusty plains.
With thee, my love, to pass my tranquil days,
How would I flight ambition's painful praise!
How would I joy with thee, my love, to yoke
The ox, and feed my solitary flock!
On thy soft breast might I but lean my head,
How downy should I think the woodland bed!
The wretch who sleeps not by his fair one's side,
Detests the gilded couch's useless pride,
Nor knows his weary, weeping eyes to close,
Though murm'ring rills invite him to repose.
Hard was his heart, who thee, my fair, could leave
For all the honours prospring War can give;
Though through the vanquish'd east he spread his fame,
And Parthian tyrants trembled at his name;
Though bright in arms, while hosts around him bleed,
With martial pride he press'd his foaming steed.
No poms like these my humble vows require;
I ask, in thy embraces to expire:
Thee may my closing eyes in death behold!
Thee may my fault'ring hand yet strive to hold!
Then, Delia, then thy heart will melt in woe,
Then o'er my breathless clay thy tears will flow;
Thy tears will flow, for gentle is thy mind,
Nor dost thou think it weakness to be kind.
With thee each youth and tender maid shall join
In grief, and mix their friendly sighs with thine:
But ah! my Delia, I conjure thee, spare
Thy heaving breasts and loose dishevell'd hair:
Wound not thy form; left on th' Elysian coast
Thy anguish should disturb my peaceful ghost.
But now nor death, nor parting should employ
Our sprightly thoughts, or damp our bridal joy:
We'll live, my Delia, and from life remove
All care, all bus'ness, but delightful Love.
Old age in vain those pleasures would retrieve,
Which youth alone can taste, alone can give;
Then let us snatch the moment to be blest,
This hour is Love's—be Fortune's all the rest.

SONG.
SONG.

Written in the Year 1732. By the Same.

I.
SAY, MYRA, why is gentle Love
A stranger to that mind,
Which pity and esteem can move;
Which can be just and kind?

II.
Is it because you fear to share
The ills that Love molest:
The jealous Doubt, the tender Care,
That rack the am'rous breast?

III.
Alas! by some degree of woe
We every bliss must gain:
The heart can ne'er a transport know,
That never feels a pain.
Written at Mr. Pope's House at Twickenham, which he had lent to Mrs. G——lle.

In August 1735. By the Same.

I.

Go, Thames, and tell the busy town,
Not all its wealth or pride
Could tempt me from the charms that crown
Thy rural flow'ry side:

II.

Thy flow'ry side, where Pope has plac'd
The Muses' green retreat,
With every smile of Nature grac'd,
With every Art compleat.

III.

But now, sweet bard, thy heav'nly song
Enchants us here no more;
Their darling glory left too long
Thy once lov'd shades deplore.

IV.

Yet still for beauteous G——lle's fake,
The Muses here remain;
G——lle, whose eyes have power to make
A Pope of every swain.

E P I G R A M.
EPIGRAM.

By the Same.

NONE without Hope e'er lov'd the brightest Fair,
But Love can hope where Reason would despair.

To Mr. WEST at Wickham.

Written in the Year 1749.

By the Same.

FAIR Nature's sweet simplicity
With elegance refin'd,
Well in thy Seat, my friend, I see,
But better in thy Mind.
To both from courts and all their state
Eager I fly, to prove
Joys far above a courtier's fate,
Tranquillity and love.

To
To Miss L U C Y F——.

By the Same.

ONCE by the Muse alone inspir'd,
I sung my am'rous strains:
No serious love my bosom fir'd;
Yet every tender maid deceiv'd
The idly mournful tale believ'd,
And wept my fancy'd pains.

But Venus now to punish me,
For having feign'd so well,
Has made my heart so fond of thee,
That not the whole Aonian quire
Can accents soft enough inspire,
Its real flame to tell.

To the Same, with H A M M O N D's Elegies.

ALL that of Love can be express'd
In these soft numbers see;
But, L u c y, would you know the rest,
It must be read in me.
To the Same.

To him who in an hour must die,
   Not swifter seems that hour to fly,
Than slow the minutes seem to me,
   Which keep me from the sight of thee.

Not more that trembling wretch would give
   Another day or year to live;
Than I to shorten what remains
   Of that long hour which thee detains.

   Oh! come to my impatient arms,
   Oh! come with all thy heav'ly charms,
At once to justify and pay
   The pain I feel from this delay.

To the Same.

I.

To ease my troubled mind of anxious care,
   Last night the secret casket I explor'd;
Where all the letters of my absent fair,
   (His richest treasure) careful Love had stor'd:
II.
In every word a magic spell I found
Of pow'r to charm each busy thought to rest,
Though every word increas'd the tender wound
Of fond desire still throbbing in my breast.

III.
So to his hoarded gold the miser steals,
And loses every sorrow at the sight;
Yet wishes still for more, nor ever feels
Entire contentment, or secure delight.

IV.
Ah! should I lose thee, my too lovely maid,
Couldst thou forget thy heart was ever mine,
Fear not thy letters should the change upbraid:
My hand each dear memorial shall resign:

V.
Not one kind word shall in my pow'r remain
A painful witness of reproach to thee;
And lest my heart should still their sense retain,
My heart shall break, to leave thee wholly free.

A Prayer to Venus in her Temple at Stowe.

To the Same.

FAIR VENUS, whose delightful shrine surveys
Its front reflected in the silver lake,
These humble off'rings, which thy servant pays,
Fresh flowers, and myrtle wreaths, propitious take.

II. If
II.
If less my love exceeds all other love,
Than Lucy's charms all other charms excel,
Far from my breast each soothing hope remove,
And there let sad despair for ever dwell.

III.
But if my soul is fill'd with her alone,
No other wish, nor other object knows,
Oh! make her, Goddess, make her all my own,
And give my trembling heart secure repose.

IV.
No watchful spies I ask to guard her charms,
No walls of brass, no steel-defended door;
Place her but once within my circling arms,
Love's surest fort, and I will doubt no more.

To the Same.

On her pleading want of Time.

I.
ON Thames's bank, a gentle youth
For Lucy sigh'd with matchless truth,
Ev'n when he sigh'd in rhyme;
The lovely maid his flame return'd,
And would with equal warmth have burn'd
But that she had not Time.

II. Oft
II.
Oft he repair'd with eager feet
In secret shades his fair to meet
  Beneath th' accustom'd lyme;
She would have fondly met him there,
And heal'd with love each tender care,
  But that she had not Time.

III.
"It was not thus, inconstant maid,
"You acted once (the shepherd said)
  "When love was in its prime:"
She griev'd to hear him thus complain
And would have writ to eafe his pain,
  But that she had not Time.

IV.
How can you act so cold a part?
No crime of mine has chang'd your heart,
  If Love be not a crime.—
We soon must part for months, for years—
She would have answer'd with her tears,
  But that she had not Time.
To the Same.

YOUR shape, your lips, your eyes are still the same,
Still the bright object of my constant flame;
But where is now the tender glance, that stole
With gentle sweetness my enchanted soul?
Kind fears, impatient wishes, soft desires,
Each melting charm that love alone inspires.
These, these are lost; and I behold no more
The maid, my heart delighted to adore.
Yet still unchang'd, still doating to excess,
I ought, but dare not, try to love you less;
Weakly I grieve, unpity'd I complain;
But not unpunish'd shall your change remain;
For you, cold maid, whom no complaints can move,
Were far more blest, when you like me could love.

To the Same.

I.

WHEN I think on your truth, I doubt you no more,
I blame all the fears I gave way to before,
I say to my heart, "Be at rest, and believe
"That whom once she has chosen she never will leave."

II. But
II.

But ah! when I think on each ravishing grace
That plays in the smiles of that heavenly face,
My heart beats again; I again apprehend
Some fortunate rival in every friend.

III.

These painful suspicions you cannot remove,
Since you neither can lessen your charms nor my love;
But doubts caus'd by passion you never can blame;
For they are not ill founded, or you feel the same.

To the Same with a New Watch.

With me while present, may thy lovely eyes
Be never turn'd upon this golden toy:
Think every pleasing hour too swiftly flies,
And measure time, by joy succeeding joy.

But when the cares that interrupt our bliss
To me not always will thy sight allow,
Then oft with kind impatience look on this,
Then every minute count—-as I do now.
An Irregular ODE written at Wickham, in 1746.

To the Same.

I.

Ye sylvan scenes with artless beauty gay,
Ye gentle shades of Wickham say,
What is the charm that each successive year,
Which sees me with my Lucy here,
Can thus to my transported heart,
A sense of joy unfelt before impart?

II.

Is it glad Summer's balmy breath that blows
From the fair jeft' mine, and the blushing rose?
Her balmy breath, and all her blooming store
Of rural blifs was here before:
Oft have I met her on the verdant side
Of Norwood-hill, and in the yellow meads,
Where Pan the dancing Graces leads,
Array'd in all her flow'ry pride.
No sweeter fragrance now the gardens yield,
No brighter colours paint th' enamel'd field.
Is it to Love these new delights I owe?
Four times has the revolving sun
His annual circle through the zodiac run;
Since all that Love's indulgent pow'r
On favour'd mortals can beflow,
Was giv'n to me in this auspicious bow'r.

IV.
Here first my Lucy, sweet in virgin charms,
Was yielded to my longing arms;
And round our nuptial bed,
Hovering with purple wings, th' Idalian boy
Shook from his radiant torch the blissful fires
Of innocent desires,
While Venus scatter'd myrtles o'er her head.

Whence then this strange increase of joy?
He, only he can tell, who match'd like me,
(If such another happy man there be)
Has by his own experience try'd
How much the Wife is dearer than the Bride.
To the Memory of the same LADY,

A MONODY. A. D. 1747.

Ipsa cava solans aeternas testudine amorem,
Te dulcis conjux, te solos in litora secum,
Te veniente die, te decedente camebat.

By the Same.

I.

At length escap'd from every human eye,
From every duty, every care,
That in my mournful thoughts might claim a share,
Or force my tears their flowing stream to dry,
Beneath the gloom of this embow'ring shade,
This lone retreat, for tender sorrow made,
I now may give my burden'd heart relief,
And pour forth all my stores of grief,
Of grief surpassing every other woe,
Far as the purest bliss, the happiest love
Can on th' ennobled mind beflow,
Exceeds the vulgar joys that move
Our gross desires, inelegant and low.

II.

Ye tufted groves, ye gently-falling rills,
Ye high o'ershadowing hills,
Ye lawns gay-smiling with eternal green,
Oft have you my Lucretia seen!

But
But never shall you now behold her more:
Nor will she now with fond delight
And taste refin'd your rural charms explore.
Clos'd are those beau'teous eyes in endless night,
Those beau'teous eyes where beaming us'd to shine
Reason's pure light, and Virtue's spark divine.

III.
Oft would the Dryads of these woods rejoice
To hear her heav'nly voice,
For her desp'ring, when she deign'd to sing,
The sweetest songsters of the spring:
The woodlark and the linnet pleas'd no more;
The nightingale was mute,
And every shepherd's flute
Was cast in silent scorn away,
While all attended to her sweeter lay.
Ye larks and linnets now resume your song,
And thou, melo'dious Philomel,
Again thy plaintive story tell.
For death has stop'd that tuneful tongue,
Whose music could alone your warbling notes excel.

IV.
In vain I look around
O'er all the well-known ground
My Lucy's wonted footsteps to descry;
Where oft we us'd to walk,
Where oft in tender talk
We saw the summer sun go down the sky;
(69)

Nor by yon fountain's side,
Nor where its waters glide
Along the valley, can she now be found:
In all the wide-stretch'd prospect's ample bound
No more my mournful eye
Can aught of her espy,
But the sad sacred earth where her dear relics lie.

V.

O shades of H—— y, where is now your boast?
Your bright inhabitant is lost.
You she preferr'd to all the gay resorts
Where female vanity might wish to shine,
The pomp of cities, and the pride of courts.
Her modest beauties shun'd the public eye:
To your sequester'd dales
And flow'r-embroider'd vales
From an admiring world she chose to fly;
With Nature there retir'd, and Nature's God,
The silent paths of wisdom trod,
And banish'd every passion from her breast,
But those, the gentlest and the best,
Whose holy flames with energy divine
The virtuous heart enliven and improve,
The conjugal, and the maternal love.

VI.

Sweet babes, who, like the little playful fawns,
Were wont to trip along these verdant lawns
By your delighted Mother's side,
Who now your infant steps shall guide?
Ah! where is now the hand whose tender care
To every Virtue would have form'd your Youth,
And strew'd with flow'rs the thorny ways of Truth?
O loss beyond repair!
O wretched Father left alone
To weep their dire misfortune, and thy own!
How shall thy weaken'd mind, oppress'd with woe,
And drooping o'er thy Lucy's grave,
Perform the duties that you doubly owe,
Now she, alas! is gone,
From folly, and from vice, their helpless age to save?

VII.
Where were ye, Muses, when relentless Fate
From these fond arms your fair disciple tore,
From these fond arms that vainly strove
With hapless ineffectual Love
To guard her bosom from the mortal blow?
Could not your fav'ring power, Aonian maids,
Could not, alas! your pow'r prolong her date,
For whom so oft in these inspiring shades,
Or under Campden's moss-clad mountains hoar,
You open'd all your sacred store,
Whate'er your ancient sages taught,
Your ancient bards sublimely thought,
And bade her raptur'd breast with all your spirit glow?

VIII. Nor
VIII.

Nor then did Pindus' or Castralia's plain,
Or Aganippe's fount your steps detain,
Nor in the Thespian vallies did you play;
Nor then on a Mincio's bank
Befet with offers dank,
Nor where b Clitumnus rolls his gentle stream,
Nor where through hanging woods
Steep c Anio pours his floods,
Nor yet where d Meles, or e Ilius stray.
Ill does it now be seem,
That, of your guardian care bereft,
To dire diseafe and death your darling should be left.

IX.

Now what avails it that in early bloom,
When light fantastic toys
Are all her sex’s joys,
With you she search'd the wit of Greece and Rome?
And all that in her latter days
To emulate her ancient praise

a The Mincio runs by Mantua, the birth-place of Virgil.
b The Clitumnus is a river of Umbria, the residence of Propertius.
c The Anio runs through Tibur or Tivoli, where Horace had a villa.
d The Meles is a river of Ionia, from whence Homer, suppos'd to be born on its banks, is called Meligenes.
e The Ilius is a river at Athens.

Italia's
(72)

Italia's happy genius could produce;
Or what the Gallic fire
Bright-sparkling could inspire,
By all the Graces temper'd and refin'd;
Or what in Britain's isle,
Most favour'd with your smile,
The pow'rs of reason and of fancy join'd
To full perfection have conspir'd to raise?
Ah! what is now the use
Of all these treasures that enrich'd her mind,
To black oblivion's gloom for ever now consign'd?

X.

At least, ye Nine, her spotless name
'Tis yours from death to save,
And in the temple of immortal Fame
With golden characters her worth engrave.

Come then, ye virgin sibyls, come,
And strew with choicest flow'rs her hallow'd tomb.
But foremost thou, in sable vestment clad,

With accents sweet and sad,
Thou, plaintive Muse, whom o'er his Laura's urn
Unhappy Petrarch call'd to mourn,
O come, and to this fairer Laura pay
A more impassion'd tear, a more pathetic lay.

XI.

Tell how each beauty of her mind and face
Was brighten'd by some sweet, peculiar grace!
How eloquent in every look
Through her expressive eyes her soul distinctly spoke!
Tell how her manners by the world refin'd
Left all the taint of modish vice behind,
And made each charm of polish'd courts agree
With candid Truth's simplicity,
And uncorrupted Innocence!
Tell how to more than manly sense
She join'd the soft'ning influence
Of more than female tenderness:
How in the thoughtless days of wealth and joy,
Which oft the care of others' good destroy,
Her kindly-melting heart,
To every want, and every woe,
To guilt itself when in distress
The balm of pity would impart,
And all relief that bounty could bestow!
Ev'n for the kid or lamb that pour'd its life
Beneath the bloody knife,
Her gentle tears would fall,
Tears from sweet Virtue's source, benevolent to all.

XII.
Not only good and kind,
But strong and elevated was her mind:
A spirit that with noble pride
Could look superior down
On Fortune's smile, or frown;
That could without regret or pain
To Virtue's lowest duty sacrifice
Or int'rest or ambition's highest prize;
That injur'd or offended never try'd

It's
Its dignity by vengeance to maintain,
   But by magnanimous disdain.
A wit that temperately bright,
   With inoffensive light
All pleasing shone, nor ever past
The decent bounds that Wisdom's sober hand,
And sweet Benevolence's mild command,
And bashful Modesty before it cast.
A prudence undeceiving, undeceiv'd,
That nor too little, nor too much believ'd,
That scorn'd unjust Suspicion's coward fear,
And without weakness knew to be sincere.
Such Lucy was, when in her fairest days
Amidst th' acclam of universal praise,
In life's and glory's freshest bloom
Death came remorseless on, and sunk her to the tomb.

XIII.

So where the silent streams of Liris glide,
In the soft bosom of Campania’s vale,
When now the wintry tempests all are fled,
And genial Summer breathes her gentle gale,
The verdant orange lifts its beauteous head:
From every branch the balmy flow’rets rise,
On every bough the golden fruits are seen;
With odours sweet it fills the smiling skyes,
The wood-nymphs tend it, and th’ Idalian queen:
But in the midst of all its blooming pride

A sudden
A sudden blast from Apenninus blows,
Cold with perpetual snows:
The tender blighted plant shrinks up its leaves, and dies.

XIV.

Arise, O Petrarch, from th’ Elysian bowers,
With never-fading myrtles twin’d,
And fragrant with ambrosial flowers,
Where to thy Laura thou again art join’d;
Arise, and hither bring the silver lyre,
Tun’d by thy skilful hand,
To the soft notes of elegant desire,
With which o’er many a land
Was spread the fame of thy disastrous love;
To me resign the vocal shell,
And teach my forrows to relate
Their melancholy tale so well,
As may ev’n things inanimate,
Rough mountain oaks, and desert rocks, to pity move.

XV.

What were, alas! thy woes compar’d to mine?
To thee thy mistress in the blissful band
Of Hymen never gave her hand;
The joys of wedded love were never thine.
In thy domestic care
She never bore a share,
Nor with endearing art
Would heal thy wounded heart
Of every secret grief that fester’d there:

Nor
Nor did her fond affection on the bed
Of sickness watch thee, and thy languid head
Whole nights on her unwearied arm sustain,
And charm away the sense of pain:
Nor did she crown your mutual flame
With pledges dear, and with a father’s tender name.

XVI.
O best of wives! O dearer far to me
Than when thy virgin charms
Were yielded to my arms,
How can my soul endure the loss of thee?
How in the world to me a desert grown,
Abandon’d, and alone,
Without my sweet companion can I live?
Without thy lovely smile,
The dear reward of every virtuous toil,
What pleasures now can pall’d Ambition give?
Ev’n the delightful sense of well-earn’d praise,
Unshar’d by thee, no more my lifeless thoughts could raise.

XVII.
For my distracted mind
What succour can I find?
On whom for consolation shall I call?
Support me, every friend,
Your kind assistance lend
To bear the weight of this oppressive woe.
Alas! each friend of mine,
My dear departed love, so much was thine,
That none has any comfort to bestow.

My ( 77 )

My books, the best relief
In every other grief,
Are now with your idea sadden'd all:
Each fav'rite author we together read
My tortur'd mem'ry wounds, and speaks of Lucy dead.

XVIII.

We were the happiest pair of human kind!
The rolling year its varying course perform'd,
And back return'd again,
Another and another smiling came,
And saw our happiness unchang'd remain;
Still in her golden chain
Harmonious Concord did our wishes bind:
Our studies, pleasures, taste, the same.
O fatal, fatal stroke,
That all this pleasing fabric Love had rais'd
Of rare felicity,
On which ev'n wanton Vice with envy gaz'd,
And every scheme of bliss our hearts had form'd
With soothing hope, for many a future day,
In one sad moment broke!
Yet, O my soul, thy rising murmur's stay,
Nor dare th' all-wife Disposer to arraign,
Or against his supreme decree
With impious grief complain.
That all thy full-blown joys at once should fade
Was his most righteous will, and be that will obey'd.

XIX. Would
Would thy fond love his grace to her controul,
And in these low abodes of sin and pain
Her pure, exalted soul
Unjustly for thy partial good detain?
No—rather strive thy grov'ling mind to raise
Up to that unclouded blaze,
That heav'nly radiance of eternal light,
In which enthron'd she now with pity sees
How frail, how infecure, how slight
Is every mortal bliss;
Ev'n love itself, if rising by degrees
Beyond the bounds of this imperfect state,
Whose fleeting joys so soon must end,
It does not to its sov'reign Good ascend.
Rise then, my soul, with hope elate,
And seek those regions of serene delight,
Whose peaceful path and ever open gate
No feet but those of harden'd Guilt shall mis.
There Death himself thy Lucy shall restore,
There yield up all his pow'r e'er to divide you more.
VERSÉS

Making Part of an

EPITAPH on the same LADY.

By the Same.

Made to engage all hearts, and charm all eyes;
Tho' meek, magnanimous; tho' witty, wise;
Polite, as all her life in courts had been;
Yet good, as she the world had never seen;
The noble fire of an exalted mind,
With gentle female tenderness combin'd.
Her Speech was the melodious voice of Love,
Her Song the warbling of the vernal Grove;
Her Eloquence was sweeter than her Song,
Soft as her Heart, and as her Reason strong;
Her Form each beauty of her mind express'd,
Her Mind was Virtue by the Graces drest'd.

ON
ON THE ABUSE of TRAVELING.
A CANTO,
In Imitation of SPENSER.
By GILBERT WEST, Esq.
The ARGUMENT.

Archimage tempts the Red-Cross Knight
From love of Fairy-land,
With show of foreign pleasures all,
The which he doth withstand.

I.

WISE was that Spartan Law-giver of old,
Who rais'd on Virtue's base his well-built state,
Exiling from her walls barbaric gold,
With all the mischiefs that upon it wait,
Corruption, luxury, and envious hate;
And the distinctions proud of rich and poor,
Which among brethren kindle foul debate,
And teach Ambition, that to Fame would soar,
To the false lure of wealth her flouncing wing to low'r.

II. Yet
II.
Yet would Corruption soon have entrance found,
And all his boasted schemes eftsoons decay'd,
Had not he cast a pow'rful circle round,
Which to a distance the arch felon fray'd,
And ineffectual his foul engines made:
This was, to weet, that politic command,
Which from vain travel the young Spartan stay'd,
Ne suffer'd him forfake his native land,
To learn deceitful arts, and science contraband.

III.
Yet had the ancient world her courts and schools;
Great Kings and Courtiers civil and refin'd;
Great Rabbins, deeply read in Wisdom's rules,
And all the arts that cultivate the mind,
Embellish life, and polish human kind.
Such, Asia, birth-place of proud monarchy,
Such, elder Ægypt, in thy kingdoms shin'd,
Mysterious Ægypt, the rank nursery
Of superstitions fond, and learned vanity.

IV.
But what accomplishments, what arts polite,
Did the young Spartan want his deeds to grace,
Whose manly virtues, and heroic spright,
Check'd by no thought impure, no falsehood base,
With nat'ral dignity might well outface
The glare of manners false, and mimic pride?
And wherefore should they range from place to place,
Who to their country's love so firm were ty'd,
All homely as she was, that for her oft they dy'd?

V.

And a sooth it is (with rev'rence may ye hear,
And honour due to passion so refin'd)
The strong affection which true patriots bear
To their dear country, zealous is and blind,
And fond as is the love of womankind,
So that they may not her defects espy,
Ne other b paragone may ever find,
But gazing on her with an aweful eye
And superstitious zeal, her learn to deify.

VI.

And, like as is the faith unsound, untrue,
Of him, who wand'ring aye from fair to fair,
Conceiveth from each object passion new,
Or from his heart quite drives the troublous care;
So with the patriot-lover doth it fare,
Who through the world delighting aye to rove,
His country changeth with each change of air,
Or weening the delights of all to prove,
On none, or all alike befaows his vagrant love.

* truth    b rival, or one to compare with her.

VII. Alas
VII.

Als doth Corruption in a distant soil,
With double force assay the youthful heart,
Expos'd suspectless to the traytor's wife,
Expos'd unwarn'd to Pleasure's poison'd dart,
Expos'd unpractis'd in the world's wide mart,
Where each one lies, imposes, and betrays,
Without a friend due counsel to impart,
Without a parent's awe to rule his ways,
Without the check of shame, or spur of public praise.

VIII.

Forty, false Archimago, traytor vile,
Who burnt 'gainst Fairy-land with ceaseless ire,
'Gan cast with foreign pleasures to beguile
Her faithful knight, and quench the heav'nly fire
That did his virtuous bosom aye inspire
With zeal unfeigned for her service true,
And send him forth in chivalrous attire,
Arm'd at all points adventures to pursue,
And wreak upon her foes his vowed vengeance due.

IX.

So as he journeyed upon the way,
Him soon the fly enchaunter over-hent,
Clad like a Fairy knight in armour gay,
With painted shield, and spear right forward bent,

In knightly guise and shew of hardiment,
That aye prepared was for bloody fight.
Whereat the Elfin knight with speeches gent
Him first saluted, who, well as he might,
Him fair salutes again, as seemeth courteous knight.

X.

Then 'gan he purpose frame of valiant deeds
Atchiev'd by foreign knights of prowess great,
And mighty fame which emulation breeds
In virtuous breast, and kindleth martial heat;
Of arts and sciences for warriour meet,
And knight that would in feats of arms excel,
Or him, who liefer chooing calm retreat,
With Peace and gentle Virtue aye would dwell,
Who have their triumphs, like as hath Bellona fell.

XI.

These, as he said, beseem'd knight to know,
And all be they in Fairy-lond y-taught,
Where every art and all fair virtues grow;
Yet various climes with various fruits are fraught,
And such in one hath full perfection taught
The which no skill may in another rear.
So gloz'd th' enchaunter 'till he hath him brought
To a huge rock, that clomb so high in air,
That from it he a uneath the murmuring surge mote hear.

XII. Thence (85)

XII.
Thence the salt wave beyond in prospect wide
A spacious plain the false enchantress show'd,
With goodly castles deck'd on every side,
And silver streams, that down the champain flow'd,
And wash'd the vineyards that beside them stood,
And groves of myrtle; as the lamp of day
His orient beams display'd withouten cloud,
Which lightly on the glistening waters play,
And tinge the castles, woods, and hills with purple ray.

XIII.
So fair a landscape charm'd the wond'ring knight;
And eke the breath of morning fresh and sweet
Inspire'd his jocund spirit with delight,
And ease of heart for soft persuasion meet.
Then him the traitor base 'gan fair entreat,
And from the rock as downward they descend,
Of that blest land his praises 'gan repeat,
'Till he him moved hath with him to ' wend;
So to the billowy shore their hasty march they bend.

XIV.
There in a painted bark all trim and gay,
Whose sails full glad embrac'd the wanton wind,
There sat a stranger * wight in quaint array,
That seem'd of various garbs t attune combin'd,

* to go.  " man or woman.  t together.
Of Europe, Afric, east and western Inde.
Als round about him many creatures stood,
Of several nations and of divers kind,
Apes, serpents, birds with human speech endow'd,
And monsters of the land, and wonders of the flood.

XV.

He was to meet a mighty traveller,
Who Curiosity thereafter v hight,
And well he knew each coast and harbour fair,
And every nation's latitude and site,
And how to steer the wand'ring bark aright.
So to him strait the false enchant'er bore,
And with him likewise brought the red-cross knight:
Then fairly him besought to waft them o'er;
Swift flew the dauncing bark, and reach'd the adverse shore.

XVI.

There when they landed were, them ran to greet
A bevy bright of damsels gent and gay,
Who with soft smiles, and salutation sweet,
And courteous violence would force them stay,
And rest them in their bow'r not far away;
Their bow'r that most luxuriously was w dight
With all the dainties of air, earth and sea,
All that mote please the taste, and charm the sight,
The pleasure of the board, and charm of beauty bright.

v was called,  w adorned, set forth,

XVII. Als
XVII.
Als might he therein hear a mingled sound
Of feast and song and laughing jollity,
That in the noise was all distinction drown'd
Of graver sense, or music's harmony.
Yet were there some in that blithe company
That aptly could discourse of virtuous lore,
Of manners, wisdom and sound policy;
Yet they would they often ope their sacred store,
Ne might their voice be heard 'mid riot and uproar.

XVIII.
Thereto the joys of idleness and love,
And luxury, that besots the noblest mind,
And custom prevalent at distance drove
All sense and relish of a higher kind,
Whereby the soul to virtue is resign'd.
Instead whereof the arts of slavery
Were taught, of slavery perverse and blind,
That vainly boasts her native liberty,
Yet wears the chains of pride, of lust, and gluttony.

XIX.
Of which the red-cross knight right well aware,
Would in no wise agree with them to go,
Albeit with courtly glee their leader fair,
't Hight Politesse, him did kindly woo.

would not.

F 4
But
But all was false pretence, and hollow show,
False as the flow'rs which to their breasts they ty'd,
Or those which seemed in their cheeks to glow,
For both were false, and not by Nature dy'd,
False rivals of the spring, and beauty's rosy pride.

XX.

Then from behind them straightway 'gan advance
An uncouth stripling quaintly habited,
As for some revel mask, or antic daunce,
All chequer'd o'er with yellow, blue, and red;
Als in a vizor black he shrouds his head,
The which he toossed to and fro amain,
And eft his lathy falchion brandished,
As if he meant fierce battle to a darrain,
And like a wanton ape eft skip'd he on the plain,

XXI.

And eft about him skip'd a gaudy throng
Of youthful gallants, frolic, trim, and gay,
Chanting in careless notes their amourous song,
Match'd with like careless geists, like amourous play,
Als were they gorgeous, dress'd in rich array,
And well accepted of that female train,
Whose hearts to joy and mirth devoted aye,
Each proffer'd love receive without disdain,
And part without regret from each late-favour'd swain,

*often,
*attempt.

XXII. And
And now they do accord in wanton daunce
To join their hands upon the flow'ry plain;
The whiles with amorous leer and eyes a'kaunce
Each damsel fires with love her glowing swain;
'Till all-impatient of the tickling pain,
In sudden laughter forth at once they break,
And ending so their daunce, each tender twain
To shady bow'rs forthwith themselves betake,
Deep hid in myrtle groves, beside a silver lake.

Thereat the red-cross knight was much enmov'd,
And 'gan his heart with indignation swell,
To view in forms so made to be belov'd,
Ne faith, ne truth, ne heav'nly virtue dwell;
But lust instead, and falsehood, child of hell;
And glutton sloth, and love of gay attire:
And sooth to say, them well could parallel
Their lusty b paramours in vain desire;
Well fitted to each dame was every gallant squire.

Yet when their sov'reign calls them forth to arms,
Their sov'reign, whose c behests they most revere,
Right wisely can they menage war's alarms,
And wield with valour great the martial spear,

b lovers.  c commands.
So that their name is dreaded far and near.
Oh! that for Liberty they so did fight!
Then need not Fairy-land their prows fear,
Ne give in charge to her advent'rous knight
Their friendship to beware, and sense-deluding sleight.

XXV.

But not for liberty they wagen war,
But solely to d aggrate their mighty lord,
For whom their dearest blood they e nilen spare,
Whenso him lifteth draw the conqu'ring sword;
So is that idol vain of them ador'd,
Who ne with might beyond his meanest thrall
Endued, ne with superior wisdom stor'd,
Sees at his feet prostrated millions fall,
And with religious dread obey his princely call.

XXVI.

Thereto so high and filately was his port,
That all the petty kings him fore envy'd,
And would him imitate in any fort,
With all the mimic pageantry of pride,
And worship'd be like him, and deify'd
Of courtly sycophants and f scoundrels vile,
Who to those services themselves apply'd,
And in that school of servitude ere while
Had learn'd to bow and grin, and flatter, and beguile.

* please,       * will not,       * scoundrels.

XXVII. For XXVII.

For to that seminary of fashions vain
The rich and noble from all parts repair,
Where grown enamour'd of the gaudy train,
And courteous haviour gent and debonair,
They cast to imitate such semblance fair;
And deeming meanly of their native lond,
Their own rough virtues they disdain to wear,
And back returning dreft by foreign hond,
Ne other matter care, ne other understand.

XXVIII.

Wherefore th' enchaunter vile, who fore was griev'd
To see the knight reject those damfels gay,
Wherewith he thought him sure to have deceiv'd,
Was minded to that court him to convey,
And daze his eyen with Majesty's bright ray:
So to a stately castle he him brought,
Which in the midst of a great garden lay,
And wisely was by cunning craftsmen wrought,
And with all riches deck'd surpassing human thought.

XXIX.

There underneath a sumptuous canopy,
That with bright ore and diamonds glitter'd far,
Sate the swoln form of royal's surquedry,
And deem'd itself a allgates some creature rare,

* pride.       * by all means; omnino.

While
While its own haughty state it mote compare
With the base count’nance of the vassal fry,
That seem’d to have nor eye, nor tongue, nor ear;
Ne any sense, ne any faculty,
That did not to his throne owe servile ministr’y.

XXX.
Yet wist he not that half that homage low
Was at a wizard’s shrine in private pay’d,
The which conducted all that goodly show,
And as he lift th’ imperial puppet play’d,
By secret springs and wheels right wisely made,
That he the subtle wires mote not ¹ avize,
But deem in sooth that all he did or said,
From his own motion and free grace did rise,
And that he justly hight immortal, great, and wise.

XXXI.
And eke to each of that fame gilded train,
That meekly round that lordly throne did stand,
Was by that wizard ty’d a magic chain,
Whereby their actions all he mote command,
And rule with hidden influence the land.
Yet to his lord he outwardly did bend,
And those fame magic chains within his hand
Did seem to place, albeit by the end
He held them fast, that none them from his gripe mote rend.

¹ discover, perceive.

XXXII. He XXXII.
He was to meet an old and wrinkled mage,
Deep read in all the arts of policy,
And from experience grown so crafty sage,
That none his secret counsels more descry,
Ne search the mines of his deep subtlety.
Thereto fair peace he lov'd and cherished;
And traffic did promote and industry,
Whereby the vulgar were in quiet fed,
And the proud lords in ease and plenty wallowed.

XXXIII.
Thence all the gorgeous splendor of the court,
Sith the sole bus'ness of the rich and great,
Was to that hope-built temple to resort,
And round their earthly god in glory wait,
Who with their pride to swell his royal state,
Did pour large sums of gold on every one,
Brought him by harpies fell, him to aggrate,
And torn from peafants vile, beneath the throne
Who lay deep sunk in earth, and inwardly did groan.

XXXIV.
Behold, says Archimage, the envy'd height
Of human grandeur to the gods ally'd!
Behold yon sun of pow'r, whose glorious light,
O'er this rejoicing land out-beaming wide,
(94)

Calls up those princely flow'rs on every side;
Which like the painted daughters of the plain,
Ne toil, ne spin, ne stain their silken pride
With care, or sorrow, sith withouten pain,
Them in eternal joy those heav'nly beams maintain.

XXXV.

Them morn and evening joy eternal greets,
And for them thousands and ten thousands' moil,
Gathering from land and ocean honied sweets
For them, who in soft indolence the while
And slumbering peace enjoy the luscious spoil;
And as they view around the careful bees
m Forespent with labour and incessant toil,
With the sweet contrast learn themselves to please,
And heighten by compare the luxury of ease.

XXXVI.

Ungenerous man, quoth then the Fairy knight,
That can rejoice to see another's woe!
And thou, unworthy of that glory bright,
Wherewith the gods have deck'd thy princely brow,
That doth on Sloth and Gluttony bestow
The hard-earn'd fruits of Industry and Pain,
And to the dogs the labourer's morsel throw,
Unmindful of the hand that sow'd the grain,
The poor earth-trodden root of all thy greatness vain.

\[1\] work hard. \[m\] quite spent.

XXXVII. Oh
XXXVII.

Oh foul abuse of sacred Majesty,
That boasteth her fair self from heav'n yspromg!
Where are the marks of thy divinity?
Truth, Mercy, Justice steady, bold and strong,
To aid the meek, and curb oppressive wrong?
Where is the care and love of public good,
That to the people's father doth belong?
Where the vice-gerent of that bounteous God,
Who bids dispense to all, what he for all bestow'd?

XXXVIII.

Dwell'st thou not rather, like the prince of hell,
In Pandemonium full of ugly fiends?
Diffimulation, Discord, Malice fell,
Reckless Ambition, that right onward a wends,
Though his wild march o'erthrow both fame and friends,
And virtue and his country; crooked Guile,
Obliquely creeping to his treach'rous ends,
And Flatt'ry, curs'd assassin, who the while
He holds the murd'rous knife, can fawn, and kiss, and smile.

XXXIX.

Then 'gan he strait unveil the mirror bright,
The which fair o Una gave him heretofore,
Ere he as yet, with p Paynim foe to fight,
For foreign land had left his native shore.

a goes.  * Una in Spenser represents Truth, see B. 1. Fairy.
Queen.  * Heathen, the usual enemy of knight-errants in Spenser.
This in his careful breast he always bore,
And on it oft would cast his wary eye;
For it by magic framed was of yore,
So that no falsehood mote it well abye,
But it was plainly seen, or fearfully did fly.

XL.
This on that gay assembly did he turn,
And saw confounded quite the gaudy scene;
Saw the close fire that inwardly did burn,
And waste the throbbed heart with secret and keen;
Saw base dependence in the haughty mien
Of lords and princes; saw the magic chain
That each did wear, but deem'd he wore unseen,
The whiles with count'nance glad he hid his pain,
And homage did require from each poor lowly swain.

XLI.
And though to that old mage they louted down,
Yet did they dearly wish for his decay:
Als trembled he, and aye upon the throne
Of his great lord his tottering steps did stay,
And oft behind him skulk'd for great dismay;
Als shook the throne, when so the villain crew,
That underneath oppress'd and groveling lay,
Impatient of the grievous burthen grew,
And loudly for redress and liberty did sue.

XLII. There
There mote he likewise see a ribbald train
Of dancers, broid'rs, slaves of luxury,
Who cast o'er all those lords and ladies vain
A veil of semblance fair, and richest dye,
That none their inward baseness mote descry.
But nought was hidden from that mirror bright.
Which when false Archimago'gan espy,
He feared for himself, and warn'd the knight
From so detested place to maken speedy flight.

So on he passed, till he comen hath
To a small river, that full flow did glide,
As it uneth mote find its watry path
For stones and rubbish, that did choak its tide,
So lay the mould'ring piles on every side,
Seem'd there a goodly city once had been,
Albeit now fallen were her royal pride,
Yet mote her auncient greatnesse still be seen,
Still from her ruins prov'd the world's imperial queen.

For the rich spoil of all the continents,
The boast of art and nature there was brought,
Corinthian brases, Ægyptian monuments,
With hieroglyphic sculptures all inwrought,
And Parian marbles, by Greek artists taught
To counterfeit the forms of heroes old,
And set before the eye of sober thought
Lycurgus, Homer, and Alcides bold.
All these and many more that may not here be told.

XLV.
There in the midst of a ruin'd pile,
That seem'd a theatre of circuit vast,
Where thousands might be seated, he erewhile
Discover'd hath an uncouth trophy plac'd;
Seem'd a huge heap of stone together cast
In nice disorder and wild symmetry,
Urns, broken freezes, statues half defac'd,
And pedestals with antique imagery
Embois'd, and pillars huge of costly porphyry.

XLVI.
Aloft on this strange basis was 'ypight
With girlands gay adorn'd a golden chair,
In which aye smiling with self-bred delight,
In careless pride reclin'd a lady fair,
And to soft music lent her idle ear;
The which with pleasure so did her enthrall,
That for aught else she had but little care,
For wealth, or fame, or honour feminal,
Or gentle love, sole king of pleasures natural.

XLVII. Als
XXXVII.
Als by her side, in richest robes array'd,
An eunuch fate, of visage pale and dead,
Unseemly paramour for royal maid!
Yet him she courted oft and honoured,
And oft would by her place in princely stead,
Though from the dregs of earth he springen were,
And oft with regal crowns she deck'd his head,
And oft, to soothe her vain and foolish ear,
She bade him the great names of mighty 'Kesars bear.'

XXXVIII.
There to herself a pompous title bore,
For she was vain of her great auncesstry,
But vainer still of that prodigious store
Of arts and learning, which she vaunts to lie
In the rich archives of her treasury.
These she to strangers oftentimes would shew,
With grave demean and solemn vanity,
Then proudly claim as to her merit due,
The venerable praise and title of Vertù.

XXXIX.
Vertù she was 'yclep'd, and held her court
With outward shews of pomp and majesty,
To which natheless few others did resort,
But men of base and vulgar industry.

'seat or place, 'emperors. 'called or named.
Or such perdy as of them cozen'd be,
Mimes, fidlers, pipers, eunuchs squeaking fine,
Painters and builders, sons of masonry,
Who well could measure with the rule and line,
And all the orders five right craftily define.

L.
But other skill of cunning architect,
How to contrive the house for dwelling best,
With self-sufficient scorn they wont neglect,
As corresponding with their purpose least;
And herein be they copied of the rest,
Who aye pretending love of science fair,
And generous purpose to adorn the breast
With liberal arts, to Vertù's court repair,
Yet nought but tunes and names, and coins away do bear.

LI.
For long, to visit her once-honour'd seat
The studious sons of learning have forbore:
Who whilom thither ran with pilgrim feet
Her venerable reliques to adore,
And load their bosom with the sacred store,
Whereof the world large treasure yet enjoys.
But w' thence she declin'd from wisdom's lore,
They left their to display her pompous toys
To virtuosi vain, and wonder-gaping boys.

w since.

LII. Forthy
LII.

Forthy to her a num'rous train doth x long
Of ushers in her court well practised,
Who aye about the monied stranger throng,
Off'ring with shews of courteous y bountihed
Him through the rich apartments all to lead,
And shew him all the wonders of her state,
Whose names and price they wisely can z areed,
And tell of coins of old and modern date,
And pictures false and true right well discriminate.

LIII.

Als are they named after him, whose tongue
Shook the dictator in his curule chair,
And thund'ring through the Roman senate, rung
His bold Philippics in Antonius' ear;
Which when the Fairy heard, he sigh'd full dear,
And casting round his quick discerning eye,
At every a deal he dropt a manly tear,
As he the stately buildings mote desery,
Baths, theatres, and fanes in mould'ring fragments lie.

x belong.  y good-nature or civility.  z relate or declare. These under fort of antiquarians, who go about with strangers to shew them the antiquities, &c. of Rome, are called Ciceroni.  a At every turn, every now and then.
LIV.

And, oh! imperial city! then he said,
How art thou tumbled from thine Alpine throne!
Whereon, like Jove on high Olympus' head,
Thou fittedst erst unequall'd and alone,
And madest through the world thy greatness known;
While from the western isles, to Indus' shore,
From seven-mouth'd Nilus, to the frozen Don,
Thy dreadded bolts the strong-pounc'd Eagle bore,
And taught the nations round thy Fasces to adore.

LV.

And doth among thy reliques nought remain,
No little portion of that haughty spright,
Which made thee whilom scorn soft Pleasure's chain,
And in free Virtue place thy chief delight,
Whereby through ages shone thy glory bright?
And is there nought remaining to confound
Those, who regardless of thy woeful plight,
With idle wonder view thy ruins round,
And without thought survey thy memorable wound?

LVI.

Arise, thou genuine Cicero, and declare
That all these mighty ruins scatter'd wide,
The sepulchres of Roman virtue were,
And trophies vast of Luxury and Pride,

Those
Those fell diseases whereof Rome erst dy'd.
And do you then with vile mechanic thought
Your course, ye sons of Fairy, hither guide,
That ye those gay refinements may be taught,
Which Liberty's fair lord to shame and thraldom brought?

LVII.
Let Rome those vassal arts now meanly boast,
Which to her vanquish'd thralls she erst resign'd;
Ye who enjoy that freedom she has lost,
That great prerogative of human-kind,
Close to your hearts the precious jewel bind,
And learn the rich possession to maintain,
Learn Virtue, Justice, Constancy of Mind,
Not to be mov'd by Fear or Pleasure's train;
Be these your arts, ye brave, these only are humane.

LVIII.
As he thus spake, th' enchauter half asham'd
Wist not what fitting answer to devise,
Als was his captive heart well-nigh inflam'd,
By that same knight so virtuous, brave and wise,
That long he doubts him farther to entice.
But he was harden'd and remorseless grown,
Through practice old of villainy and vice;
So to his former wiles he turns him soon,
As in another place hereafter shall be shown.
THE INSTITUTION OF THE ORDER OF THE GARTER.
A Dramatic POEM.
By the Same.

---Lectos ex omnibus Oris
Evebis; & meritum, non qua cunabula quæris,
Et qualis, non unde fetus: sub teste benigno
Vivitur; egregios invitant præmia mores.  CLAUD.
HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE.
(106)

Dramatis Personæ.

Edward the Third, King of England, &c.
Philippa, Queen of England, &c.
Edward, Prince of Wales.
John, * King of France, &c.

Spirits.

Bards,
Druids,
Heralds, Attendants, &c.

Scene 3,

Windfor Park, with a Prospect of the Castle.

* The order of the Garter was instituted on St. George's day the 23d of April 1350. King John came into England in 1357. I have taken the advantage of the licence usually allowed to poets, of departing a little from chronology; and have postponed for a few years the institution of this order, for the sake of rendering that solemnity more august, by introducing King John of France, who, though a prisoner, was treated both by Edward and his son the prince of Wales with all the regard due to the quality and virtue of so great a prince. To alleviate his captivity, Edward entertained him and the other French prisoners with diversions of various kinds: among which a tournament he held at Windfor on the 23d of April, to solemnize the feast of St. George, the patron of the order of the Garter, held the chief place; and was, as Rapin tells us, the most sumptuous and magnificent that had ever been seen in England. The duke of Brabant, with several other sovereign princes, and an infinite number of knights of all nations were present, and splendidly entertained.
THE INSTITUTION OF THE ORDER OF THE GARTER.

SCENE, WINDSOR PARK.
Flourish of aerial music at a distance, after which the following verses are sung in the air by SPIRITS, while the GENIUS of England descends.

First SPIRIT.

HITHER, all ye heav'nly pow'rs,
From your empyreal bow'rs;
From the fields for ever gay,
From the star-pav'd milky way,
From the moon's relucent horn,
From the star that wakes the morn;
From the bow, whose mingling dyes
Sweetly cheer the frowning skies;
From the silver cloud that fails
Shadowy o'er the darken'd vales;
From th' Elysiums of the sky,
Spirits immortal, hither fly!

CHORUS
Chorus of Spirits.
Fly, and through the limpid air
Guard in pomp the sliding car,
Which to his terrestrial throne
Wafts Britannia's Genius down.

Second Spirit.
Hither, all ye heav'nly pow'rs!
From your empyreal bow'rs!
Chiefly ye, whose brows divine
Crown'd with stany circlets shine;
Who in various labours try'd,
Once Britannia's strength and pride,
Now in everlasting rest
Share the glories of the blest!
Peers and nobles of the sky,
Spirits immortal, hither fly!

Chorus of Spirits.
Fly, and through the limpid air
Guard in pomp the sliding car,
Which to his terrestrial throne
Wafts Britannia's Genius down.

Third Spirit.
Hither too, ye tuneful throng,
Masters of enchanting song,
Sacred bards! whose rapt'rous strains
Sooth the toiling hero's pains,
Sooth the patriot's gen'rous cares;
Sweetly through their ravish'd ears
Whisp'ring
Whisp'ring to th' immortal mind
Heav'nly visions, hopes refin'd;
Hopes of endless peace and fame,
Safe from envy's blasting flame,
Pure, sincere, in those abodes,
Where to thrones of lift'ning gods,
Hymning bards, to virtues praise,
Tune their never-dying lays,
Sweet encomiaists of the sky,
Spirits immortal, hither fly!

Chorus of Spirits.
Fly, and charm the limpid air,
While the softly-sliding car,
To his sea-encircled throne
Wafts Britannia's Genius down.

Chorus of Bards descends, dress'd in long flowing sky-colour'd robes spangled with stars, with garlands of oaken boughs upon their heads, and golden harps in their hands, made like the Welch, or old Britifh harp. Before they appear, they sing the chorus, and afterwards, as they descend, the following songs; at the last stanza of which, the chariot of the Genius appears, and descends gradually all the while that and the grand chorus is singing.

Chorus of Bards.
Gentle Spirit, we obey;
Thus along th' ætherial way,
We attend our monarch's car;
Thus we charm the silent air.

SONG.
SONG.

First Bard.

Ye southern gales, that ever fly
In frolic April's vernal train,
Who, as ye skim along the sky,
Dip your light pinions in the main,
Then shake them fraught with genial show'rs,
O'er blooming Flora's primrose bow'rs:

2.

Now cease awhile your wanton sport,
Now drive each threat'ning cloud away;
Then to the flow'ry vale resort,
And hither all its sweets convey;
And ever as ye dance along,
With softest murmurs aid our song.

SONG II.

Second Bard.

But lo! fair Windsor's tow'rs appear,
And hills with spreading oaks imbrownd!
Hark! hark! the voice of joy I hear,
Sung by a thousand echoes round;
And now I view a glitt'ring train,
In triumph March o'er yonder plain.

Grand
Grand Chorus of Spirits and Bards.

Hail mighty nation! ever fam'd in war!
Lo! heav'n descends thy festivals to share;
To view those heroes, whose immortal praise
Celestial bards shall sing in living lays.

At the conclusion of this chorus, the Genius alights from his chariot, the front of which resembling the head of a man of war, is adorned with a carved lion, bolding before his breast the arms of England, as they were borne by Edward. Behind, on a rais'd seat, sits the Genius, leaning upon an anchor of silver, and bearing in his right hand the vindicta, or wand of enfranchisement, and in his left a roll of parchment, upon which is written, in large letters of gold, Magna Charta. On his head is a corona rostrata, or naval crown; and his robe, of a sea-green colour, is embroidered with cornucopia's and golden tridents.

Genius.

Disdain not, ye blest denizens of air,
To breathe this groser atmosphere awhile,
Your service I shall need; mean time resort
To yon imperial palace, and in air
Draw up your squadrons in a radiant orb,
Suspended o'er those lofty battlements,
Like the bright halo that invests the moon,
Or Saturn's lucid ring: thence shed benign
Your choicest influence on the noble train,
There on this solemn day assembled round
The throne of Brittish Edward: I awhile
Must here await th' approach of other spirits.
Sage Druids, Britain's old philosophers;
Fetch'd by my summons from the western isles,
That, scatter'd o'er the rough Hibernian flood,
Seem like huge fragments by the wild wave torn
From stormy Scotland, and the Cambrian shore.
There, from the world retir'd, in sacred shades,
Chiefly where Breint and Meinai wash'd the oaks
Of ancient Mona, their academies
And schools of sage and moral discipline
They held; and to the neigh'ring Britons round,
From their rever'd tribunals, holy mounts,
Dispens'd at once their oracles and laws.
'Till fierce Paulinus, and his Roman bands,
Them and their gods defying, drove them thence to seek for shelter in Hibernian shades.
Yet still enamour'd of their ancient haunts,
Unseen of mortal eyes, they hover round
Their ruin'd altars, consecrated hills,
Once girt with spreading oaks, mysterious rows
Of rude enormous obelisks, that rise
Orb within orb, stupendous monuments
Of artless architecture, such as now
Oft times amaze the wand'ring traveller,
By the pale moon discern'd on Sarum's plain.
But hence, aerial spirits: lo, they come!

*Here the Spirits and Bards, together with the chariot of the Genius, reascend, and at the same time the Druids enter cloath'd in dark-colour'd coarse stuff gowns which which before hang no lower than the knee, but behind almost touch the ground. The sleeves of these gowns reach down below the elbow, and from behind comes up a sort of hood or cowle, which hangs loose about the head and forehead. From the left shoulder hangs in a string a kind of pouch, or scrip, and rests on the right hip. In their right hands they hold a staff, and in their left an oaken branch. Their beards are very large and long, reaching below their waists. Their legs are naked, and their feet shod with sandals, which are fastened by thongs wound about the foot and the small of the leg.

Enter DRUIDS.

Chief DRUID.

Inform us, happy spirit, protecting pow'r
Of this our ancient country, wherefore now
From our sequester'd vallies, pensive groves
And dark recesses, thou hast summon'd us
To wait thy orders on this flow'ry hill?

GENIUS.

A great event, sage Druids, that no less
Imports than this your ancient country's fame,
From contemplation, and your silent shades,
Calls you to meet me on this flow'ry hill.

Know, in yon castle, whose proud battlements
Sit like a regal crown upon the brow
Of this high-climbing lawn, doth Edward hold
This day his solemn session, to receive

* See a cut of the chief Druid in Rowland's Mona Antiqua restaurata, taken from a statue, p. 65.
The pleas of all th' aspiring candidates,
Who, summon'd by the b heralds public voice,
To Windsor, as to Fame's bright temple, haste
From every shone; the noble, wise, and brave,
Knights, senators, and statesmen, lords and kings;
Ambitious each to gain the splendid prize,
By Edward promis'd to transcendent worth.
For who of mortals is too great and high
In the career of virtue to contend?
Of these, selecting the most glorious names,
Doth England's monarch purpose to compose
A princlly brotherhood, himself the chief,
And worthy sov'reign of th' illustrious band;
A band of heroes, lifted in the cause
Of honour, virtue, and celestial truth,
Under the name and holy patronage
Of Cappadocian George, Britannia's saint.
Such is the plan by gen'rous Edward form'd;
A plan of glory, that beyond the reach
Of his own conqu'ring arms, shall propagate

b Edward having communicated his intention of instituting the order of the Garter to the great council of his realm, and having received their approbation, dispatched his heralds to several parts of Europe, to invite all that were eminent for military virtue, &c. to be present at its institution. And his queen Philippa, on her part, assembled a train of 300 of the fairest ladies to grace the solemnity, and add to its magnificence.
The sov'reignty of Britain, and erect
Her monarchs into judges of mankind.

But from this day's decisions, from the choice
Of his first colleagues, shall succeeding times
Of Edward judge, and on his fame pronounce.
For dignities and titles, when misplac'd
Upon the vicious, the corrupt and vile,
Like princely virgins to low peasants match'd,
Descend from their nobility, and soil'd
By base alliance, not their pride alone
And native splendor lose, but shame retort
Ev'n on the sacred throne, from whence they sprung.
So may the luster of this order bright,
This eldest child of chivalry be stain'd,
If at her first espousals, her great fire,
Caught by the specious outsiders, that deceive
And captivate the world, admit the suit
Of vain pretenders void of real worth;
Light empty bubbles, by the wanton gale
Of fortune swell'd, and only form'd to dance
And glitter in the sun-shine of a court.

Begin we then with Edward; first let him
At his own high tribunal undergo
The rigid inquisition—-I for this
Have left my lucid star-encircled throne:
For this, immortal sages, have requir'd
Your wife and prudent ministry, well skill'd
In various science and the human heart.
Search Edward’s to the bottom: found the depths
And shallows of his soul; if he posses
That first of regal talents, to discern
With quick-ey’d penetration, through the veil
Of art, each character’s intrinsic worth,
And all the labyrinths of the human mind.
Nor blush for this good end yourselves to wear
Fallacious forms, to plead the cause of false
But specious merit: at his throne appear
In borrow’d shapes, and there with artful guile,
When the shrill trumpet cites the candidates,
Urge your pretensions: all the pow’r employ
Of wit and eloquence: Edward, I trust,
The trial shall abide; which shall but tend
’T to manifest, that not from arrogance,
But conscious virtue, hath he thus assum’d
Above all other kings, to be the judge
And great rewarer of heroic deeds.
Nor wholly unafflicted will I leave
My royal charge, but with blest influence clear
His intellectual eye from the dim mists
It haply hath contrasted from a long
Unebbing current of felicity,
Unhop’d, unequall’d triumphs, from the view
Of captive monarchs, and the glitt’ring throng,
Who at his summons from all climates come,
To take, as from their sov’reign, honours new.

When
When heav'n tries mortals in unusual ways,
'Tis fit it should afford unusual aid.
Now, fages, to yon spreading oaks retire,
There wait my summons; and mean time advise
How best to execute the task enjoin'd.

[Ex. Gen. and Druids.

The Scene changes to a large room in the castle (St. George's Hall) at the upper end of which is a royal canopy with the figure of St. George, and the motto of the Garter, HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE, beneath it embroider'd in gold. Under this canopy appears seated on an elevation of two or three steps, King Edward, in the habit of the order of the Garter, with a sceptre in his right hand, and a globe in his left. On his left hand is seated Queen Philippa, with a crown upon her head, and dress'd in a royal mantle of crimson velvet, powdered with embroider'd garters, and an enamel'd garter bound like a bracelet upon her left arm. By her stand a great number of ladies very richly dress'd. On Edward's right hand is seated King John, in the imperial robes of France; and on the same side, but a step lower, sits Edward the Black Prince, in the robes belonging to the Prince of Wales. Next to queen Philippa are seated the rest of Edward's children; and next to the Black Prince, on the other side, stand the French prisoners, and a great number of lords, &c. richly dress'd.

On the floor, at some distance, stands Garter king at arms in the habit of his office, holding in his hand a Garter, with the grand collar of the order. Near him stand other heralds, ushers, attendants, &c.

* That the ladies of the knights of the Garter wore this ensign of the order upon their left arms, may be seen in Ashmole's History of the Garter.
Flourish of trumpets, kettle-drums, &c. After which Edward rising up from his throne, addresses himself to the assembly.

Edward.

That hither from your distant residence,
By solemn invitation, noble guests,
I have entreated your illustrious train,
Misconstrue not to levity and pride,
Or ostentatious vain magnificence,
Unworthy the grave majesty of kings,
Unworthy your attention, my renown.
This bright assemblage of the wife, the brave,
The noble, the magnificent, the fair,
The ornaments of Europe, have I sought
To grace the pomp of Virtue, to adorn
With noblest off’rings her unspotted shrine,
Attracting thus to her divine commands
The awful veneration of mankind,
This was the cause, great princes, this the call,
The voice of Virtue, not of England’s king,
That with respectful zeal ye hear’d and follow’d:
From Burgundy’s rich vineyards, from the meads
Of Hainault and Brabant, the rocky wave
Of Danube, from Germania’s warlike tow’rs,
Imperial mother of an hundred states;
From Spain, long exercis’d by Moorish arms,
From Italy’s fair prince-doms, and the walls
Of sea-wash’d Venice, Adria’s haughty spouse.

With
With me then, all ye virtuous, by what file
Recorded in the regifiers of fame,
Knights, senators, or soldiers, ermin'd lords,
Or scepter'd princes; from whatever clime
Ye come, ennobled by heroic acts,
With me unite the splendor of your names
To dignify th' erection of a new
And noble order, which to heav'n's high praise,
And to heav'n's champion, Cappadocian George,
On this his holy festival I mean
To found a recompence for worthiest deeds.
Thus as the orient sun, ador'd of old
By prostrate Persia, ow'd his deity
Lest to that genial and benignant heat
That cherishes and warms the seeds of life,
Than to those gorgeous beams, that deck with gold
And crimson the gay portals of the morn;
So shall this rising order owe its fame
And brightest lustre to the splendid train
Of lords and purpled princes, who are met
This day to usher and adorn its birth.

Nor deem that to allure heroic minds,
My private int'rests partially to serve,
To lift the valiant in ambition's cause,
And form a league of conquest, I have laid
In subtle policy this great design:
d Asham'd be he who with malignant eye
So reads my purpose: and be he accrues'd
Whoe'er in after-times shall so pervert
This sacred institution. To the world
I here consign it, to the good and great
Of every age and clime, and them alone.

Now

d Edward being engaged in a war with France, for the obtaining that crown, in order to draw into England great multitudes of foreigners, with whom he might negotiate either for their personal service, or aids of troops to assist him in that undertaking, ordered, during the truce that then subsisted between the two crowns, publication to be made of a great tournament, to be held at Windsor; an expedient, says Rapin, which could not fail of success, because it was entirely agreeable to the taste of that age. Accordingly many persons of distinction came over, to all of whom he gave an honourable reception, caressing them in such a manner that they could never sufficiently admire his politeness, magnificence, and liberality. To render these entertainments the more solemn, and to free himself also from the ceremonies, to which the difference of rank and condition would have subjected him, he caused a circular hall of boards to be run up at Windsor, 200 feet diameter. There it was that he feasted all the knights at one table, which was called the Round Table, in memory of the great Arthur, who, as it is pretended, instituted an order of knighthood by that name. Next year he caused a more solid building to be erected, that he might continue yearly the same diversions. During that time he treated with these several lords about the aids, where-with each could furnish him, in proportion to his forces. His rival king Philip could not see without jealousy, Spaniards, Italians, Germans, Flemings, and Frenchmen themselves flock to England to assist at these tournaments. He suspected some hidden design in these entertainments, and to break Edward's mea-
Now found the trumpet; bid the candidates
With confidence appear, and urge their claims.

Flourish of trumpets, &c. which is answered by another trumpet from without; then enter a grandee of Spain, magnificently attir'd in the Spanish habit, holding in his hand the pedigree of his family, and preceded by heralds, &c. bearing achievements, banners, coats of armour, helmets, gauntlets, spurs, &c.

Spaniard.

Illustrious monarch! emp'ror of the isles!
My name is Guzman—from those heroes sprung,

sures, caused the like to be published in his dominions; which meeting with success, proved a countermine to Edward's main design, so that he did not long continue to keep up his round table. From thence, however, it is generally agreed, he took the first hint of instituting the order of the Garter. But as his purpose in erecting this order was very different from that which had induced him to revive Arthur's round table, as he had in this no private views, no ambitious scheme of engaging such as should be admitted into this fraternity to assist him in his wars, he thought proper, in order to obviate the like jealousies and suspicion as had alarmed king Philip, to signify by his motto the purity of his intentions, and to retract shame upon all those who should put any malignant construction upon his design in instituting this order. This therefore I take to be the true meaning and import of the famous motto, Honi soit qui mal y pense. The notion understanding the purport of which, gave rise, in all probability, to that vulgar story of the countess of Salisbury's garter, rejected by all the best writers,

Who
Who with Pelagio 'mid th’ Aftarian rocks
Against th’ invasion of unnumber’d Moors,
Maintain’d the fame and empire of the Goths,
And founded at Oviedo once again
The Spanish monarchy and cath’lic faith,
Transporting from the mountain’s dreary womb
To glitt’ring temples her most holy altars.
Thence on the bordering Moor their valiant sons
Waging incessant war, ere long regain’d
Their ancient realms of Leon, Arragon,
And rich Caftilia; in which great exploits
My brave progenitors, by valour, zeal,
And loyalty distinguish’d, from their kings
Gain’d those high honours, princely signories,
And proud prerogatives, which have extoll’d
The name of Guzman to such envy’d grandeur,
That scarce above it towers the regal throne.

These honours undiminish’d, undefil’d,
To me deliver’d down, might well content
A vulgar mind; but spirits highly born
Are full of gen’rous and aspiring thoughts;
And use the vantage ground of rank and pow’r
But to ascend still higher. Thus I come
Thy Garter to sollicit; pleas’d, great prince,
With thee to be enroll’d thy brother knight,
And fearing no repulse. Nobility,
As nearest in her orbit, first receives
The beams of majesty; alone can bear

The
The fulness of that glory, which o'erpow'rs
Inferior natures. Virtue's self would blush,
Did she at once approach too near the throne:
But the young eagle borne amid the blaze
Of glancing lightnings, with undazzled eye
Soars to the courts of heav'n, and perches bold
On the bright sceptre of imperial Jove.

The greatest king is he, who is the king
Of greatest subjects. Seek'lt thou to advance
The glory of thy order? To thy self
Associate those, whose high-exalted names
For ages past from Envy's self have forc'd
Habitual veneration, never paid
To new and upstart merit. Such am I,
Whose pure and generous blood descending down
From noblest fountains, in its course enrich'd
By glorious mixture with each royal stream
That fair Iberia boasts, might ev'n pretend
To thy alliance, Edward. View this scroll,
The faithful blazon of my ancient line,
A line of potentates, whose every son
Deserv'd to wear the Garter I demand.
In me their representative, the heir
Of all their honours, son of their renown,
Do thou reward their virtues: in their names
I claim, and on hereditary right,
The right of monarchs, Edward, rest my plea.

Edward.
The high desert of thy renown'd forefathers
Well hast thou shewn; but hast thou therefore prov'd
Thy self deserving to be call'd their son?
'To thee their prosp'rous virtues have indeed
Transmitted lineal rank, and titles proud,
By them more hardly gain'd; for which thou stand'st
To custom and th' indulgence of thy country
Indebted, Guzman, in a large account;
Which thou must first discharge by noble deeds,
Ere thou canst file those dignities thine own.
This if thou hast not paid, why dost thou seek,
Like thriftless prodigals, to swell the debt,
And overwhelm thy self with obligations?
Virtue is honour, and the noblest titles
Are but the public stamps set on the ore
To ascertain its value to mankind.
It were a kind of treason to my crown,
To mark base metal with the royal impress,
And put off lazy pride in virtue's name.
Would'st thou attain my Garter? Seek it there
Where thy heroic ancestors acquir'd
Their glorious honours, in th' embattled field
Among the squadrons of the warlike Moors:
Or in the council of thy king, by truth
And wisdom equal to th' important trust.
Be what thy fathers were, and then return
To
To ask the pledge of merit from my hand,
And be the fit companion of a king.  [Exit Spaniard.

Flourish of trumpets, &c. which, as before, is answered
by another trumpet from without; then enter an usurer
and senator of Genoa (at that time the bank of Europe)
dressed in his senatorial gown of black velvet, profusely,
but awkwardly adorned with jewels, pearls and diamond necklaces, pendants, bracelets, rings, such as he may be supposed to have received as pawns, and to wear rather as marks of his great riches, than as ornaments of his dress. He is attended by a large train of people of every profession, appearing to be his debtors, by their abject and timid countenances; at the head of whom, and next to the usurer, marches a scrivener, bearing a large bundle of bonds, mortgages, &c.

Genoese.

From Genoa the opulent, the bank
And treasury of the world, most puissant king,
Invited by thy heralds, am I come
To claim the honour by thy promise due,
Due by thy justice to superior worth;
Due then to me, great Edward, who posses
That object of the toils, the cares, the vows
Of all mankind, that comprehensive good,
Source of all pow'r and grandeur, boundless wealth.

Behold yon glitt'ring train, whose sumptuous pride,
Bright with the treasures of each precious mine,
Invests with glory thy imperial throne:
Whence is their dignity? The ray august,
That awes and dazzles the respectful crowd,

Proceeds
Proceeds it from nobility, from virtue,
Their wisdom, or their valour, or their fame?
Comes it not rather from the beaming ore?
The diamond's star-like radiance? Wealth, O king,
Wealth is the sun that decks the gorgeous scene;
That cherishes, adorns, and calls to view
These princely flowers of honour, virtue, fame,
Which in the shades of poverty were lost.
Whatever men desire or venerate,
On wealth attends; ev'n empire's self is bought.
Nor could the mighty Julius have attain'd
By wisdom or by valour sov'reign pow'r,
Had not the gold of vanquish'd Gaul subdu'd
The liberties of Rome. On wretched want,
Contempt and narrow-soul'd dependence wait.
Ev'n kings, of necessary wealth depriv'd,
In powerless indigence lose all respect,
All homage from their subjects: while the rich,
Like gods ador'd, o'er every neck extend
Their potent sceptres, and in golden chains
Fierce Faction and rebellious Freedom bind.

The glory, strength, importance of a realm,
Is measur'd by its riches: Venice thus,
Thus Genoa's petty state out-balances,
In Europe's scale, the boundless wilds that cloath
With tributary furs the Russian Czar.
With like pre-eminence exalted shines
In every land above the proudest names,
The blest possessor of all-worship’d gold.
My birth or rank I boast not here, though born
A senator of Genoa. The desert,
On which I found my claim, is all my own;
To have adorn’d and dignify’d the state
Of my declining house with greater wealth
Than e’er my thriftless ancestors posses’d;
Whose richest acquisitions were but sprigs
Of barren laurel, or the flaunting rags
Of some torn ensign, to their needy son
A worthless heritage. Yet not to swell
My narrow fortunes would my soul descend
To the base methods of ignoble trade,
And vulgar mercantile pursuit of gain.
Mine were the noble arts of raising gold
From gold, of nursing and improving wealth
By gainful use; arts practis’d heretofore
By senators and sages of old Rome,
Illustrious Cæsarius, and wife Seneca.
Thus have I grac’d the splendor of my name
With suitable possessions; thus I hold
In firm subjection to my will the poor
Of every rank and order, soldier, priest,
The vent’rous merchant, and the sumptuous lord,
Who in a lower vassalage to me,
Than to thy sceptre, Edward, bow their heads,
Pledging their lands and liberties for gold.

Hence
Hence am I bold to stand before thy throne
A candidate for glory's highest prize:
And let me add, that policy alone
Should teach thy prudence to approve my claim;
Should teach thee in thy subjects to excite,
By honours on superior wealth bestowed,
An useful emulation to be rich:
Which once inspir'd, thy Albion shall become
The first of nations, thou the first of kings.

EDWARD.

Hadst thou by opening to thy native land
The golden veins of commerce, by employing
The useful hands of industry in works
Of national advantage, by uniting
Remoteest regions in the friendly bands
And honest intercourse of mutual trade;
Hadst thou by these humane and generous arts,
Which thy mistaken pride so much disdains,
Enrich'd at once thy country and thy self,
Then not unworthy hadst thou been to wear
The brightest marks of honour; but thy wealth,
The base-born child of fordid usury,
That foe to commerce, nurse of idleness,
Stains and degrades thee from thy noble birth;
Nor in the usurer can I discern
The senator of Genoa.—To enlarge
The mind with gen'rous sentiments, to raise
Its aims by virtuous emulation, here

I fit;
I fit; but not to gild with honour's beams
That selfish passion which congeals the heart,
And stops the streams of sweet benevolence,
Mean avarice, the vice of narrowest souls,
Incapable of glory.—Wealth, thou say'st,
Can buy ev'n empire, and to Julius gave
Dominion o'er his country—Fatal gift,
And ruinous to both! But what to Rome,
What to that Cæsar's successors avail'd
The boundless treasures of the ravag'd world,
When they had lost their virtue? Did not soon
The valiant sons of poverty, the Goths,
The Huns and Vandals, from their barren hills
And rugged woods descending, to their steel
Subject the Roman gold? Yet I deny not
The pow'r and use of riches: to the wife
And good, in public or in private life,
They are the means of virtue, and best serve
The noblest purposes; but in the use,
Not in the bare possession, lies the merit.
Shew me thy merit then, thy bounteous acts,
Public munificence, or private alms,
The hungry and the naked, and the sick,
Sustain'd and cherish'd by thy saving hand;
Plead this, and I allow thy worthy claim,
For this is virtue, and deserves reward.

Ex. Gen.

Vol. II. I

Flourish
Flourish of trumpets, &c. which is answered by a symphony of flutes, violins, &c. playing a light amorous air; then appears a Neapolitan courtier, a favourite of queen Joan, who then reign’d at Naples; and whose court was the most debauch’d and dissolute of that age. He comes in with a gay and affected gesture, and is dres’d in loose silken robes, rich, but fisical and effeminate; on his hair, which is curl’d and spread all over his shoulders down to the middle of his back, he wears a chaplet of roses, and is attended by a train of beautiful boys, habited like Cupids, and musicians, who, as he marches towards the throne, continue playing their soft and wanton airs.

Neapolitan.

Not on my wealth, nor on my noble blood,
Shall I presume to claim thy royal gift,
Auspicious prince, but on the skill to give
That splendor to nobility and wealth,
That elegance of taste, from which alone
Their value they derive; of this to judge,
This to direct, I boast, fit arbiter
Of all refin’d delights.—But chief to kings
My happy talents I devote; on them
My genius waits with duteous care, and wafts
The golden cup of pleasure to their lips,
Like Ganymede before the throne of Jove.
And who indeed would wish to be a god
Only to thunder, and to hear the pray’rs
Of clam’rous suitors? ’Tis the nectar’d feast,
The dance of Graces, and the wanton charms
Of Venus, sporting with the Smiles and Loves,

That
That make the court of heav'n a blest abode.
Far happier were the meanest peasant's lot
Who sleeps or sings in careless ease beneath
The sun-burnt hay-cock, or the flow'ry thorn,
Than to be plac'd on high in anxious pride,
The purple drudge and slave of tiresome state,
If to superior pow'r superior means
Of joy were not annex'd, and larger scope
For every wish the lavish heart can form:
If the soft hand of pleasure did not wreathe
Around the royal diadem, whose weight
Oppressive loads the monarch's aching brow,
Her fairest growth of ever-blooming flow'rs.

On thee, victorious prince, propitious Fortune
Hath pour'd her richest gifts, renown and wealth,
And greatness equal to thy mighty mind;
One only bliss is wanting to thy court,
Voluptuous elegance, the lovely child
Of ease and opulence; that never comes,
But like a bird of summer to attend
The brightest sun-shine of a glorious state.
To her, and her alone, belongs the task,
By learned delicacy to remove
What yet remains in this thy ancient realm
Of Gothic barbarism, the ruff of war,
And valiant ignorance.—Her artful hand
Thy rugged Britons shall refine, and teach
More courtly manners, to their Sov'reign's will

Politely
Politely pliant: do but thou command
Thy willing servant, with thy favours grac’d,
From fair Joanna’s ever-smiling court,
Under whose happy influence I was train’d,
From polish’d Naples, her delightful seat,
The blooming goddess to transport, with all
Her train of joys, and fix them here beneath
Thy great protection.—But perhaps thou fear’st
The voice of censure, and the grave reproof
Of moralizing dullness: idle fear!
The vulgar herd, indeed, religious craft
And policy of state have well confin’d
With wise severity to rigid laws:
Else would that headstrong beast the multitude
Forget obedience, and its rider’s voice
D disdain. But shall the rider put a curb
In his own mouth? The laws that kings have made
Shall they restrain the makers? Edward, no!
For thee indulgent justice shall relax
Her harsh decrees, and piety shall wait
To give her rev’rend sanction to thy will.
’Tis thine to rove at large through nature’s field,
Crop every flow’r, and taste of every fruit;
By sweet variety provoking still
The languid appetite to new desires.
Nor useless to thy pleasures, happy prince,
Shall be my faithful service; nicer joys,
Joys of a quicker, more exalted taste,
(133)

Than ever ripen'd in this northern clime,
The growth of softer regions, shall my hand
By skilful culture in thy Britain raise.

To them, whose gros & dull capacities
Are fit to bear the burthens of the state,
The labring mules, that through the mire of forms
Draw the slow car of government along,
Gladly the task of bus'ness I resign.

Be mine the brighter province, to direct
Thy pleasures, Edward, minister supreme
Of all thy softer hours: to serve the king
Be theirs the glory, let me serve the man.

But should thy sterner Genius, only pleas'd
With arms and royalty's important cares,
The duties of a king, my gentle arts
Too lightly prize, and thence reject my suit:

Permit at least, that to Philippa's ear,
Divine Philippa, thine and beauty's queen,
And her attendant graces, I may plead
The cause of bliss, a cause so much their own:
They will approve my claim, to whom the cares,
The labours of my life, my head, my heart
Are all devoted—Let me from their hands
Receive the Garter, and be call'd their knight.

Philippa.

Permit me, gracious Edward, to reply
To this irreverent flatterer, who presumes
Before a matron and a queen to plead

I 3

The
The cause of vice, and impudently hopes
To find in her a fautors of his suit.
But know, pernicious sophister, my heart
Hath learn'd from Edward's love, and this high rank
Which I partake with him, a noble pride,
That ill can brook the too familiar eye
And saucy tongue of riot and debauch;
In whose unmanner'd light society,
Nor majesty, nor virtue can maintain
That dignity, which is their proper guard.

Thy vile refinements, and luxurious arts,
Miscall'd politeness, I detest; and feel,
In the soft duties of a virtuous love,
Such pure, serene delight, as far transcends
What thou styl'd pleasur, the delirious joy
Of an intoxicated feverish brain.
Behold my royal lord, the first and best
Of kings, the love and wonder of mankind!
Behold my children, worthy their great sire,
The gen'r'ral theme of praise and benediction!
These are my pleasures; can thy skill bestow
Superior bliss? Ah no, the vain attempt
Would only bring disgust, remorse, and shame.

Edward.

That I have lov'd, Philippa, and esteem'd thee
More for thy virtues than those female charms,
Which this vile flatterer deems singly worth.

His
His panegyric, be thy happiness
And glory, as it is thy Edward's pride.
With the like spirit have I also woo'd
And wedded soveign power: nor weakly caught
With outward pomp, or seeking to myself
A privilege to riot uncontroll'd
In sensual pleasures, and behind the throne
To laugh securely at restraint and law.
No: I embrac'd her as the child of heav'n,
Dow'd with the ample means of doing good;
From whose espousals I might hope to raise
An offspring, worth th' ambition of a king,
Immortal glory; to a generous mind
As far surpassing all the wanton toys,
Which he calls pleasure, as thy faithful love
(The sweet o'erflowing of heart-felt delight)
Excels, Philippa, the lascivious smile
Of common prostitutes, care'sd and loath'd.

Hence from my fight with thy detested arts,
Bafe minister of luxury, the bane
Of every flourishing and happy state:
Presume no more within my court to sing
Thy Syren-song, nor soften into slaves
And cowards my brave subjects.—I disdain
That elegance, which such as thou can teach.
Virtue alone is elegant, alone
Polite; vice must be for'd, and deform'd,
Though to adorn her every art contend.
And rather would I see my Britons roam
Untutor'd savages, among the woods,
As once they did, in naked innocence,
Than polish'd like the vile degenerate race
Of modern Italy's corrupted sons.

[Exit Neap.

Trumpet sounds, and is answer'd from without by another trumpet, which sounds a march, accompanied by kettle-drums, and other warlike instruments: Then enters, preceded by soldiers playing upon fifes, and others bearing tatter'd ensigns, standards and trophies, a leader of mercenary bands, compleatly arm'd from head to foot, and carrying in his right hand a baton or truncheon. On each side of him march bis squires, one bearing his lance, the other his shield. Behind him, as his attendants, comes a train of officers and soldiers maim'd, and their faces all seam'd with scars.

Soldier.

Nor riches, nor nobility of birth,
Nor the soft arts of base effeminate ease,
Which justly thou reject'st, valiant prince,
But thy own darling attribute I boast,
Undaunted courage, try'd in many a field,
In every clime, and under every banner,
That for these forty summers have been wav'd
O'er Europe's plains, by Ilster, Rhine, and Po,
Hungarian and Bohemian, Flemish, French,
Venetian, Spanish, Guelph and Gibbeline:
Whence in just confidence secure I come
This military honour to demand,
Due to my toils and service, to my wounds,
My laurels, and that generous love of glory,
Which without any call, or public cause,
Or private animosity, alone
Rais'd my strong arm, and drew my dreadful sword.

Wherever Mars his crimson flag display'd,
That was my country, thither swift I bore
My ready valour, and the dauntless band
Of various nations, under my command,
Prepar'd to sell their blood, their limbs, their lives:
Nor where the right, nor where the justest cause,
Deign'd we to ask—those intricate debates
We left to lazy penmen in the shade
Of coward ease; while our impetuous fire
Still bore us forward, ardent to pursue
Through danger's roughest paths the steps to fame.
On such a spirit should thy favour smile.

But let me wonder, Edward, that so long
Thy ear the vain pretensions could endure
Of men unknown to war, attendants meet
Of some luxurious Asiatic court,
Or female distaff-reign; but suitting ill
The presence of a monarch great in arms.
Hadst thou to those inglorious sons of peace
Thy martial order giv'n, the warrior-saint
Had blush'd to see his image so profan'd,
Which on my manly breast, indented o'er
With many a noble scar, will fitly shine.
But wherefore stand I thus haranguing here,
Unskilful as I am in smooth discourse,
The coward's argument? On force alone
I rest my title: let the glorious prize
Be hung on high amid the lifted field,
And let me there dispute it; there my lance.
Shall plead my cause far better than my tongue,
If any dare deny my rightful claim.

Edward.

Not for the brave alone have I ordain'd
This institution, but for all desert,
All public virtue, wisdom, all that serves,
Improves, defends, or dignifies a state:
Though first indeed to valour, as the guard
Of all the rest, when in the public cause.
With justice and benevolence employ'd.

But thou, base mercenary, canst thou dare
The glorious name of valour to usurp,
Who know'st no public cause, no sense of right,
Nor pity, nor affection, nor remorse?
Who under any chief, in any quarrel,
Canst stain with gore thy prostituted arms?
Call it not love of glory; that is built
On acts for the deliverance of mankind:
On gen'rous principles, and noble scorn
Of fordid interest: call it cruel pride,
And savageness of nature, that delights
To conquer, and oppress, afflict, insult:

Or
Or call it love of plunder; that can draw
Unauthoris'd, uninjur'd, unprovok'd,
The sword of war; that braavo-like can lift
For hire the venal hand to perpetrate
Assassinations, murders, massacres.

But thou hast serv'd with courage: be it so—
Thou hast thy pay, and with it thy reward:
Thy services, thy valor, thy designs,
Pretend no farther, nor compare thy deeds,
Dishonour'd by the mean desire of gain,
With his, who for his country and his king
Resigns his ease, his fortune, or his life.
Those battles thou hast fought, those forty years
Of blood and horror, which thy vaunting tongue
So high hath founded, are indeed thy crimes,
Flagitious crimes; for which th' impartial bar
Of reason would condemn thee, as the foe
Of human nature, did not custom screen
By her unjust esteem thy guilty head,
But hope not honour or employment here.
Unsafe and wretched is that monarch's state
Who weakly trusts to mercenary bands,
The guard or of his person, or his realm.
Unfaithful, insolent, rapacious, base.
He soon shall prove them, and become himself
Their slave, to hold his kingdom at their will.
For this within my Britain have I fought
To raise a martial spirit, and ordain'd
These new incitements, honours, and rewards.

To
To virtuous chivalry, that never king
Who wears hereafter my imperial crown,
May need to stoop to the precarious aid
Of venal foreign swords; but in the hearts
Of his brave subjects find a stronger guard,
Prepar'd with zeal unbought, and English valour,
His rights to vindicate, and save their own.

[Exit Soldier.

Trumpet sounds, to which another from without replies:
Then enters an Italian politician, habited like a Venetian nobleman, who advancing with a solemn and important air towards the throne, makes a low reverence to King Edward, and proceeds.

Politician.

Well has thy sovereign wisdom, royal judge,
The suit refus'd of these pretenders vain,
And, by rejecting them, embolden'd me.
For valour, and nobility, and wealth,
Though by their proud possessors vaunted high,
Are but subordinate, the slaves and tools,
Not the companions, and the counsellors
Of godlike monarchy; whose aweful throne
By darksome clouds envelop'd, far beyond
The ken of vulgar eyes, supported stands
On that deep-rooted prop, the craft of state,
Mysterious policy. —— Who best hath learn'd
Her wily lessons, best deserves to share

The
The honours, counsels, and the hearts of kings.
By him instructed, ev'n the meanest prince
Shall rise to envy'd greatness, shall advance
His dreaded pow'r above restraint and fear,
And all the rules that in fantastic chains
Inferior minds confine. Thus Milan's dukes,
Thus Padua's lords above their country's laws
Have rais'd their heads, and trampled to the dust
The pride of freedom, that essays in vain
Their high superior genius to control.
These were my masters, mighty prince; beneath
Their rule, and in their councils was I form'd
To know the false corrupted heart of man,
His every weakness, every vice, and thence
To tempt, or break his passions to the yoke:
To scorn the public as an empty name,
And on the helpless multitude impose
The adamantine bonds of fraud and force.

Thus was I train'd, thus fitted to conduct
The fate of proudest empires; thus I come
To claim thy Garter, Edward, the just meed
Of worth præeminent, and in return
My services to offer, which no doubt
Thy wisdom gladly will accept: for who
So fit to serve the majesty of kings,
As he, who flighting every meaner tye,
Friends, parents, country, to advance their pow'r
Devotes his toil, experience, fortune, fame,
Nor other favour courts, nor refuge hopes
But in their high protection?—Led by me,
Thou, royal Edward, shalt attain that height,
That glorious summit of imperial pow'r,
Which not thy mighty ances tors have reach'd;
Where in a freer air, a more enlarg'd
Horizon, bounded only by thy will,
Thou shalt exalted sit, and view beneath,
In humbler distances and safer bounds,
Those subjects, who presumptuous now approach
Too near, and with rude hands profane thy throne.
Nor let weak scruples check thy manly soul
In the bright task of glory; know, great prince,
A king's divinity is sov'reign pow'r,
The only god, before whose shrine the wife
Their incense offer, whence inspir'd, they draw
Divine ambition, and heroic scorn
Of vulgar prejudices, vulgar fears.
Virtue's the people's idol, and by them
Rewarded well with popular applause,
That idle breath, the gift and prize of fools.
'Tis thine to govern, not to court mankind,
Nor on their smiles precarious to depend;
But nobly force them to depend on thine.
O sacred sir, can virtue give thee this,
This bright supremacy? Trust not her boasts,
Her idle pageantry of barren praise:
Reject her saucy claims, importunate,
And
And self-supported; nor admit her train,
Proud independency, and public zeal,
Those factious demagogues, the foes of kings.

Edward.

Are virtue then, and love of public good,
The foes of monarchy? and are deceit,
Injustice and oppression, qualities
Becoming and expeditious in a king?
Then know I not to govern; but have nurs'd
For twice these fifteen years ev'n in my heart,
A pois'nous viper; nay unking'd myself,
By yielding to restrain my sov'reign pow'r
With laws and charters of enfranchisement,
Not due, it seems, from monarchs to their slaves.

But know, vile counsellor of infamy,
That I disdain thy politics, those false
And shallow politics, by which my fire,
Weak judging Edward, was betray'd to shame
And soul destruction, while to such as thee
His ear and heart incautious he resign'd,
And was indeed their slave, not England's king.

By maxims different far have I sustain'd
The strength and splendor of my regal state,
On the broad basis of true wisdom fix'd
With solid firmness. By encouraging
The gen'rous love of virtue and of fame,
That source of valour, pledge of victory.

By
By granting to my subjects, what indeed
Is their inherent right, security,
The cheerful father of content and peace,
Of industry and opulence, which fills
With smiling multitudes the land, and pays
In willing subsidies that prince’s care,
Who lays up treasure in his people’s hearts.

By holding with a firm impartial hand
The steady scale of justice; not alone
Betwixt my subjects in their private rights,
But in the gen’ral, more important cause,
Betwixt the crown and them, the diff’rent claims
Of freedom and of just prerogative;
Transgressing not myself by boundless pow’r,
Nor suffer’ing others to transgress those laws,
That in their golden chain together bind,
For common good, the whole united state.

But more than all, by guarding from contempt,
Or impious violation, that supreme
Protection of all government and law,
Religion; in whose train for ever wait
Obedience, order, justice, mercy, love,
A guard of angels plac’d around the throne.
Her sacred counsels have I still rever’d,
Her high commands enforce’d, her power implor’d,
O’er all my subject nations to call down
From heav’nly wisdom, her eternal fire,

A fix’d
A fix'd secure felicity, beyond
The force of human prudence to attain.
These are my arts of government, those arts
By which my British crown I have advanc'd
Above th' imperial diadem, above
The pride of Afric's, or of Asia's thrones.
I would not tell thee this, but that thou seem'st
A stranger to my fame, as to my realm,
And to the real greatness of a king:
Whose sacred dignity, by thee traduc'd,
Much it behoves a king to vindicate;
Not by rejecting only with disdain
Thy arrogant pretensions, but in thee
Dishonouring and branding with reproach
Thy tenets also, the pernicious lore
Of tyrants and usurpers, which thy tongue,
Blaspheming justice, government, and law,
Hath in a land of freedom dar'd to vent.
Hence! from my kingdom, with thy quickest speed,
Left the revenge of an insulted king
With sudden ruin intercept thy flight. [Exit Politician.

King JOHN.

Permit me, Edward, to thy royal voice
To add my suffrage also, and with thee
Protest against this coward policy,
That meanly skulks behind opprobrious fraud,
And low unprincely artifice; I feel

Vol. II.  K  A virtue
A virtue in my heart, a gen’rous pride,
That tells me kings were cloath’d with majesty,
Encircled with authority, rever’d
And almost deify’d, to teach them thence
That goodness and the saving attributes
Of heav’n become their office, justice chief,
And truth, the virtue of heroic minds,
Which, were it banish’d from all other breasts,
Should dwell for ever in the hearts of kings.

Aerial music, upon which re-enter the true Druids who perfonated the Grandee, &c. in their original characters and habits of Druids, the chief of whom advancing towards the throne, address’d himself to King Edward.

Chief Druid.

Behold in us, great king, the ancient priests
And judges of this land, the Druids old:
Who late in borrow’d characters have stood
Before thy sage tribunal, to prefer
The claims of valour, wealth, nobility,
And those soft specious flatterers, who beneath
The rosy wreath of pleasure and of love
Conceal the sickly and disgusting brow
Of riot and debauch, and often win
From weak unmanly princes the rich prize
To virtue due and wisdom, not to these
The cankers of a state; but least of all
Due to that traitor of his king and country,

Who
Who lab'ring to build up the regal throne
Beyond its due proportion, and the strength
Of those foundations which the laws have laid,
O'erwhelms the people, and at once o'erturns
His royal master, places him at last
On an uneasy tottering pinnacle,
The mark of execration and reproach.

These claims hast thou rejected; like a king
Discerning in mankind, and knowing well
The value of his favours: like a king
Deserving the high office of the judge
And arbiter of Europe: like a king
Equal to his great fame, and worth the care
Of those immortal spirits, who this day
Have quitted their celestial residence,
To view and to approve thy glorious deeds.

But, Edward, be not thou amaz'd to find
That those who lately for thy favour su'd
Were not the personages they assum'd.
O king! thou art beset with counterfeit
The very opposites to us, who seem
Far better than they are. For Flattery,
Cameleon-like, accommodates with care
To the court-hue his changeful countenance.
And when a prince is brave, magnanimous,
And high in spirit, then Ambition wears
A face of dignity, and nothing breathes
But lofty enterprizes, conquest, pow'r,
And schemes of glory to the sov'reign ear,
Pretending love and care for his renown
With more than duteous zeal.—Of these beware!
For as the Theban queen, in fables old,
Was, by the specious guile of fraudful Jove,
In her Amphitryon's form to guilt betray'd,
So by these counterfeits are kings seduc'd,
Ev'n in the most belov'd suspectless shapes,
To take a traytor to their royal arms.
But thou shalt know them, Edward, by their works.
And of this truth be most assur'd, that he,
Who in his private commerce with mankind
Is mean, dishonest, interested, false,
Can ne'er be true to thee; nor can he love
His prince, who feels not for his country's good.
Thus warn'd we leave thee, mighty prince: be firm,
Be constant in the paths of fair renown.
Think it thy duty to revere thyself
The sacred laws of chivalry, the wife
Injunctions by thy order laid on all
The garter'd knights; so shall thy fame remain
The great example of all future kings.
Farewell! for lo! the Genius of thy realm
With all his pomp attended, comes to share
And grace the glories of this signal day.
These clouds of fragrance, that far-beaming blaze
Of heav'ly brightness; his approach declare.

[Druids vanish.
Flashes]
Flaskes of light, and symphony of aërial music. Genius of England descends in his chariot attended by spirits and bards; then alighting, he advances towards the throne, and addresseth himself to Edward.

GENIUS.

From the gay realms of cloudless day I come,
Where in the glitter of unnumber'd worlds,
That like to isles of various magnitudes
Float in the ocean of unbounded space;
On my invisible aërial throne
I sit, attended with a radiant band
Of spirits immortal, whose pure essences,
While clad in human shapes on earth they dwelt,
Through the dull clay of gross mortality
Disclos'd their heav'nly vigour, and burst forth
In godlike virtues and heroic deeds,
Their Albion gracing with as fair a growth
Of fame, as e'er enrich'd imperial Rome.
Thence ripe for heav'n and immortality,
To me, the Genius of this happy isle,
They fly, and claim the meed of their desert,
Celestial crowns, and ever-living prais'd
Recorded in the songs of heav'nly bards,
That round my throne their hymns of triumph sing,
Attuning to the sweet harmonious spheres
Their undiscording lyres and voice divine.
Nor thus remov'd to heav'n, and thus employ'd
In careless raptures, wont they to forget

K 3

Their
Their native country, and the public weal,
To which on earth their labours and their lives
They once devoted; but pursuing still
The bent and habit of their souls, with me
They watch the British empire, still intent
To check alternately th' incroaching waves
Of regal pow'r and popular liberty:
I, chief attentive near the royal throne;
Take up my watchful station, to infuse
My sage and mod'rate counsels in those ears,
Which wisdom hath prepar'd and purify'd
To relish honest, though unpleasing truth.
Thus am I always, though invisible,
Attendant, Edward, on thy glorious deeds.
But on this solemn day have I vouchsaf'd
To manifest my presence; to declare,
Not in those whispers which have often spoke
Peace to thy conscious heart, but audibly
And evident to all, th' assent of heav'n
To the great business, which hath gather'd here
This troop of princes from all nations round.
Hence all may know that virtue hath a train
More bright than earthly empire can command:
Know, that those actions which are great and good,
Receive a nobler sanction from the free
And universal voice of all mankind,
Which is the voice of heav'n, than from the higheft,
The most illustrious act of regal pow'r.

This
This nobler sanction, Edward, in the name
Not of this age alone, but latest time,
Here do I solemnly annex to each
Of thy great acts, but chief to this most wise,
Most virtuous institution, which extends
Wide as thy fame, beyond thy empire's bound,
A prize of virtue publish'd to mankind.
Ye register of heav'n, record the deed.

Bards.

Now tune, ye bards, the British lyre;
Now wake the vocal string;
While heav'n and earth in Edward's praise conspire,
Join to the general voice your sacred choir,
And on your soaring wing,
From time and envy waft his glorious name,
And place it in the shrine of incorruptible fame.

Begin: the lighten'ing echoes round
Shall catch with joy the long-forgotten sound,
And warbling through each grove the British strain
To Windsor's smiling nymphs, recall their Arthur's reign.

Ye nymphs of Windsor's bow'ry woods,
Ye pow'rs who haunt yon glist'ning floods,
That with reluctant fond delay
Around yon flow'ry valley stray;
Say, from your minds hath time erased
The pleasing images of glory pass'd?
Review ye now those scenes no more?
When nobly stain'd with Saxon gore,
From Badon's long-contended plain
Great Arthur with his martial train
To Windfor's chosen shades repair'd,
And with his knights the festive banquet shar'd.

Then first exulting Thames beheld
The triumphs of the lifted field;
Beheld along his level meads
Careering knights, encount'ring steeds,
Heroic games, whose toils inspire
The thirst of praise, and kindle martial fire.

Fair Peace in War's bright mail array'd,
With smiles the glorious lifts survey'd;
So should the brave (she cry'd) prepare
Their hearts and sinewy arms for war:
Such combats break not my repose,
Such sons best guard my rights from daring foes.

Then too in feastful hall or bow'r,
Attendant on the genial hour,
The British harp sweetly lyrists strung,
And Albion's generous victors fung:
While valiant Arthur's copious fame
Incessant fed the bright poetic flame.

But
But mortals erring in excess,
O'erwhelm the virtue they carefs.
Thus Arthur his great story mourn'd,
By too fond praise to fable turn'd:
Mourn'd the companions of his toils,
Mock'd with false glory and fantastic spoils.

'Till through the dark romantic tale,
Through superstition's magic veil,
Sage Edward piercing view'd, and own'd
The chief with genuine lustre crown'd:
View'd the great model, and restor'd
The long-lost honours of his martial board.

Hail British prince! these faithful lays,
Eternal records of heroic worth,
Shall reassert thy ancient praise,
And from the cloud of fiction call thee forth,
In glory's sphere thy orbit to reclaim,
And at great Edward's beam relume thy darken'd fame.

But see in heav'nly panoply array'd,
Whose streaming radiance skirts the clouds with gold,
I view Pendragon burst the veiling shade,
And all his blazing magnitude unfold!
O'er yon broad tow'r he takes his airy stand,
And pointing, Edward, towards the royal throne,
To his fam'd knights around, a laurel'd band,
Shews on thy knee the bright sky-tinctur'd zone.

Virtue,
Virtue, he cries, (th’ æthereal sound
Thy gross material organ cannot hear)
Virtue on earth by Britifh Edward crown’d,
Her rev’rend throne once more shall rear.

To her own self-applauding breast
Forc’d for reward no longer to retreat,
She sees her aweful charms by kings carefs’d,
Sees honour woo her for his mate.

Honour, her heav’n-elected spouse,
From her embrace by lawless pow’r with-held,
Now at yon altar plights his holy vows,
Vows by assenting Edward seal’d.

And now the fair angelic bride
Gath’ring her noble train from every land,
To her late wedded lord with decent pride
Presents the venerable band.

The great procession Edward leads;
I see yon hallow’d dome with heroes throng’d:
Incessant still the white-plum’d pomp proceeds,
Through time’s eternal course prolong’d.

And you, dear partners of my fame,
Your ancient honours now again shall boast;
This noble order shall retrieve our name,
In visionary fables loft.
This from our martial board deriv'd,
These for our brethren let us proudly own,
More pleas'd to view our deeds by thee reviv'd,
Than griev'd, great king, to be outdone.

CHORUS.
Hail British prince! these faithful lays
Shall reassert thy ancient praise.
Nor thee, O Windsor, shall I pass unsung,
Mansion of princes, and fit haunt of gods,
Who frequent shall desert their bright abodes,
To view thy sacred walls with trophies hung:
Thy walls by British Arthur first renown'd,
The early seat of chivalry and fame;
By Edward now with deathless honours crown'd,
Illustrious by his birth, his Carter, and his name.

GENIUS.
Consorting just rewards, most worthy prince,
Is the first attribute of sov'reign pow'r,
And that which best distinguishes a king:
For punishment, and all the nice awards
Of civil justice, by the laws are fix'd,
And kings but execute what they decree.
While in rewarding merit, uncontro'd,
Unguided, unassisted is the hand
Of majesty; the prince himself alone
There judges, and his wisdom is the law.
Well does thy court, great king, with every worth
And
And every virtue fill'd, this wisdom shew
In thee transcendent: well hast thou prov'd
Its force in this great trial, which my pow'r
Commanded, in no common ways to prove
Thy royal mind.—But that a father's name
May not restrain thy justice in the choice
Of the first knights-companions of St. George,
Myself here take upon me to present
A candidate, whom, were he not thy son,
Thou wouldst thyself select from all mankind.
His modesty compels me to declare
That candidate is Edward, prince of Wales.

Prince Edward.
Inhabitant of heav'n! I not presume
To deprecate or question that high will,
To which it best becomes me to submit.
But, gentle spirit, be propitious to me;
And thou, my gracious liege, if I request
That this illustrious monarch, whose desert
Is equal to the grandeur of his crown,
May stand before me in this list of fame.

King John.
O generous youth! in vain thy goodness strives
To raise thy captive thus above his fortune.
The king that is not free, is not a king;
Nor can thy bounteous favour reconcile
Honour and bondage.—To thy conqu'ring son
Do thou, great Edward, give this noble mark
Of prosperous virtue; ill becomes it me,
To wear at once thy Garter and thy chains.
Though by my former dignity I swear,
That were I reinstated in my throne,
The throne of Capet and of Charlemagne,
Thus to be join'd in fellowship with thee,
Would be the first ambition of my soul;
A ray of glory I would sue to gain,
And prize it equal with my diadem.

Genius.
Wisely thou hast determin'd, worthy prince,
For thine and Edward's honour, and hast fix'd
Its proper value on his royal gift,
Which as the meed of merit, may become
The proudest monarchs, by this Garter mark'd
For something more than monarchs, virtuous men.
This be the glory of thy order, Edward.
And * never shall it want the greatest names
Of all succeeding times to grace its annals.
France, Sweden, Poland, Germany, and Spain,
Each realm of Europe's wide-extended bounds,
Shall count among thy knights its mightiest lords,
And see, in emulation of thy fame,

* Besides the great persons of our own nation, that have been admitted of this order, the English reader may be glad to be informed, that in the annals of the Garter are found the names of Charles V. emperor of Germany; of Francis I. and Henry IV.
kings of France; and of Gustavus Adolphus king of Sweden.
New royal founders of like orders rise,
Proceed then, mighty king, and set the world
The precedent of glory: thou begin
The radiant lift of Sov’reigns, while thy son,
Like a young bride, that on her nuptial morn
Leads on with modest pride the virgin-choir,
Herself the brightest, heads the shining band
Of knights-companions, nobly seconding
His father’s glorious deeds with equal fame.

Edward.

The testimony of heav’n to thee, my son,
Thus gloriously accorded, renders vain
All farther trial.—To my people’s voice,
By this their tutelary pow’r declar’d,
With pleasure I consent, directing still
By theirs my choice, my judgment, my desires.

Approach then, my belov’d, my noble son,
Strength of my crown, and honour of my realm;
In whom my heart more joys, and glories more,
Than in the highest pride of Sov’reign pow’r.

* Thus I admit thee, Edward prince of Wales,
First founder of the order of St. George:
In evidence whereof, about thy knee
I bind this mystic Garter; to denote
The bond of honour that together ties

* The prince of Wales advances to his father, and kneels;
while the king, taking the Garter from the herald, buckles it round his left leg.
The brethren of St. George in friendly league,
United to maintain the cause of truth
And justice only—† "May propitious heav'n
" Grant thou may'st henceforth wear it to his praise,
" The exaltation of this noble order,
" And thy own glory."—With like reverence,
My son receive and wear this golden chain,
" Grac'd with the image of Britannia's saint,
" Heav'n's valiant soldier, Cappadocian George;
" In imitation of whose glorious deeds
" May'st thou triumphant in each state of life,
" Or prosperous or adverse, still subdue
" Thy spiritual and carnal enemies;
" That not on earth alone thou may'st obtain
" The guerdon of thy valour, endless praise,
" But with the virtuous and the brave above,
" In solemn triumph, wear celestial palms,
" To crown thy final noblest victory."

[Embraces Pr. Edw.]

Prince Edward.

Accept, my sovereign liege, my grateful thanks,
That thou hast thus vouchsaf'd to place thy son
First next thyself upon the roll of fame,

† The sense, and almost the words in the verses of this speech, mark'd thus "are taken from the admonition read to the knights, at the time of their receiving the Carter and the Ribbon or Collar of the order. Vide Ashmole's History of the order of the Carter.
As he indeed is first in filial love,
And emulation of thy royal virtues.
And may thy benediction, gracious lord,
May thy paternal vows be heard in heav'n!
That he, whom thou hast lifted in the cause
Of truth and virtue, never may forget
His vow'd engagements, nor defraud thy hopes,
By foiling with dishonourable deeds
The lustre of that order, which thy name
Should teach him to respect and to adorn.

O D E.

S T R O P H E I. B A R D S.

Celestial maid!

Bright spark of that æthereal flame,
Whose vivid spirit through all nature spread,
Sustains and actuates this boundless frame!
O by whatever file to mortals known,
Virtue, benevolence, or public zeal,
Divine assessor of the regal throne,
Divine protector of the common weal,
O in our hearts thy energy infuse!
Be thou our Muse,

Celestial maid,

And, as of old, impart thy heav'nly aid
To those, who, warm'd by thy benignant fire,
To public merit and their country's good
Devoted ever their recording lyre,
Wont along Deva's sacred flood,

Or,
Or, beneath Mona's oak retir'd,
To warble forth their patriot lays,
And nourish with immortal praise
The bright heroic flames by thee inspir'd.

ANTISTROPHE I.
I feel, I feel
Thy soul-invigorating heat;
My bounding veins distend with fervent zeal,
And to Britannia's fame responsive heat.

Hail Albion, native country! but how chang'd
Thy once grim aspect, how adorn'd and gay
Thy howling forests! where together rang'd
The naked hunter and his savage prey:
Where amid black inhospitable woods
The fedge-grown floods
All cheerless stray'd.
Nor in their lonely wand'ring course survey'd,
Or tow'r, or castle, heav'n-ascending fane,
Or lowly village, residence of peace
And joyous industry, or furrów'd plain,
Or lowing herd, or silver fleece
That whitens now each verdant vale;
While laden with their precious store
Far trading barks to every shore,
Swift heralds of Britannia's glory, sail.
EPISODE I.

These are thy shining works: this smiling face
Of beauteous nature thus in regal state,
Deck'd by each handmaid art, each polish'd grace,
That on fair liberty and order wait.

This pomp, these riches, this repose,
To thee imperial Britain owes.

To thee, great substitute of heav'n,
To whom the charge of earthly realms was giv'n;
Their social systerns by wise nature's plan
To form and rule by her eternal laws;
To teach the selfish soul of wayward man
To seek the public good, and aid the common cause.

So didst thou move the mighty heart
Of Alfred, founder of the British state:
So to Matilda's scepter'd son,
To him whose virtue and renown
First made the name of Edward great,
Thy ample spirit so didst thou impart:
Protecting thus in every age,
From greedy pow'r and factious rage,
The law of freedom, which to Britain's shore
From Saxon Elva's many-headed flood,
The valiant sons of Odin with them bore,
Their national, ador'd, inseparable good.

STROPHE
STROPHE II.

* On yonder plain,
   Along whose willow-fringed side
The silver-footed Naiads, sportive train,
Down the smooth Thames amid the cygnets glide,
I saw, when, at thy reconciling word,
Injustice, anarchy, intestine jar,
Despotic insolence, the waiting sword,
And all the brazen throats of civil war,
Were hush'd in peace; from his imperious throne
   Hurl'd furious down,
   Abash'd, dismay'd,
Like a chas'd lion to the savage shade
Of his own forests, fell oppression fled,
With vengeance brooding in his fullen breast.
Then Justice fearles's rear'd her decent head,
   Heal'd every grief, each wrong redress'd;
While round her valiant squadrons stood,
And bade her awful tongue demand,
From vanquish'd John's reluctant hand,
The deed of freedom purchas'd with their blood.

* Runny Mead near Stains, where the Grand Charter was signed by king John.
O vain surmise!
To deem the grandeur of a crown
Consists in lawless pow’r! to deem them wise
Who change security and fair renown,
For detestation, shame, distrust, and fear!
Who, shut for ever from the blissful bow’rs,
With horror and remorse at distance hear
The music that enchants th’ immortal pow’rs,
The heav’nly music of well-purchas’d praise,
Seraphic lays,
The sweet reward
On heroes, patriots, righteous kings confess’d,
For such alone the heav’n-taught poets sing.
Tune ye for Edward, then, the mortal strain,
His name shall well become your golden string:
Begirt with this æthereal train,
Seems he not rank’d among the gods?
Then let him reap the glorious meed
Due to each great heroic deed,
And taste the pleasures of the blest abodes.

E P O D E  II.

Hail, happy prince! on whom kind Fate bestows
Sublimer joys, and glory brighter far
Than Creffy’s palm, and every wreath that grows
In all the blood-stain’d field of prosp’rous war;
Joys that might charm an heav'nly breast,
To make dependent millions blest,
A dying nation to restore,
And save fall'n liberty with kingly pow'r;
To quench the torch of discord and debate,
Relume the languid spark of public zeal,
Repair the breaches of a shattered state,
And gloriously complete the plan of England's weal;
Complete the noble Gothic pile,
That on the rock of justice rear'd shall stand
In symmetry, and strength, and fame,
A rival of that boasted frame
Which virtue rais'd on Tiber's strand.
This, Edward, guardian, father of our isle,
This god-like task, to few assign'd,
Exalts thee above human-kind,
And from the realms of everlasting day
Calls down celestial bards thy praise to sing;
Calls this bright troop of spirits to survey
Thee, the great miracle of earth, a Patriot-King.

GENIUS.

Now reascend your skies, immortal spirits!
Th' important act, that drew ye down to earth,
Is finish'd. Spare we now their mortal sense,
That cannot long endure th' unshrouded beam
Of higher natures. Well hath Edward laid,
Under your happy auspices, the base
Of his great Order: let him undisturb'd,

L 3

But (166)

But not unaided by the heav'ny powers,
Complete th' illustrious work, which future kings,
Struck with the beauty of the noble plan,
Shall emulously labour to maintain.

And may thy spirit, Edward, be their guide!
In every chapter, thou henceforth preside,
In every breast infuse thy virtuous flame,
And teach them to respect their country's fame.

[Genius and Spirits reascend to a loud symphony of music.

An Epistle to the Right Honourable the Lord Viscount CORNBURY.

By ——— Esq;

While you, my Lord, alas! amidst a few,
With generous warmth your country's good pursue;
While to that centre all your wishes tend,
Accept the zeal that prompts a willing friend.

Others like you heaven's hallow'd spark insp'rd,
Whom soon the blaze of selfish passion fir'd,
Soon ruder flames extinguisht'd reason's light,
While prejudices foul'd their jaundice'd sight.

Such through false optics every object prove,
And try the good and bad, by hate and love.
All-powerful means each virtue to supply,
All-powerful means each virtue to deny;
To Wyndham strength, and grace, and fire, and weight;
To Granville parts, to save a sinking state.
Hence various judgments form the madden'd throng,
Only in this alike, they all are wrong.
Hence to false praise shall blame unjust succeed,
And cherubs fall, and gods unpity'd bleed.

Would you, my friend, not mix the purer flame,
Nor lose the patriot in a baser name;
Nor factious rage mistake for public zeal,
Nor private int'rest for the gen'ral weal?
By truth's sure test let every deed be try'd,
And justice ever be th' unerring guide.
Her rules are plain, and easy is her way,
And yet how hard to find if once we stray!
All lost alike the maze perplex'd we tread,
However prompted, whether drove or led;
Whether false honour or ambition goad,
Or sneaking av'rice wind the miry road,
Or whether sway'd by passions not our own,
And the weak fear of being right alone.
Alone in such a cause 'tis base to fear,
Though fools suspect, and knaves designing sneer.
Sneer, villains, sneer! th' avenging time is nigh,
When Balbo scourg'd shall weep the taunting lie;
When Stopus foul with each imputed crime,
Shall dread false prose repaid with honest rhyme.

'Tis
Tis not enough you scorn a private claim,
And to your country’s good direct your aim.
Wrong is still wrong, however great the end,
Though all the realm were brother, father, friend;
Justice regards not these — where right prevails,
A nation is an atom in her scales.
Heaven means not all the good which men can gain,
But that which truth can earn, and right maintain.
However fair the tempting prize may be,
If guilt the price, it is not meant for thee.
Succeeding times may claim the just design,
Or other means, or other powers than thine.

Each part’s connected with the general plan,
The weal of Britain with the weal of man.
Justice the scale of interest for the whole,
The same in Indies as beneath the pole;
Sure rule by which heaven’s blessings to dispense,
Unerring light of guiding providence.
Others may fail, —— If wrongly understood,
How fatal is the thirst of public good!
No heavier curse almighty vengeance brings,
Nor plagues, nor famine, nor the lust of kings.
Fir’d by this rage, the frantic sons of Rome
The suff’ring world to death and bondage doom;
Nations must sink to raise her cumb’rous frame,
And millions bleed to eternize her name.
But lo! her glories fade, her empire’s past,
She madly conquer’d but to fall the last.

Nor
Nor would I here the patriot's views reprove,
Or damp the sacred flame of social love.
Still may that portion of th' eternal ray
Sublime our sense, and animate our clay;
Above low self exalt th' immortal frame,
And emulate that heaven from whence it came.
Oh! would it never be confin'd to place,
But beam extensive as the human race:
Be, as it was design'd, the world's great soul,
Connect its parts, and actuate the whole,
So each should think himself a part alone,
And for a nation's welfare stake his own!
Yet farther still, though dearest to the breast,
That nation think but part of all the rest.
For this let equal justice poise the ball,
Her swaying force unites us all to all;
Of manners, worship, form, no diff'rence knows,
Condemns our friends, and saves our better foes.
Confess the heavenly power! nor need you fear
Left Britain suffer, while you follow her.
Though prosp'rous crimes some daring villains raise,
Nor life's short date my halting vengeance seize;
A nation cannot 'scape —— the destin'd rage
Pursues her ceaseless to some future age;
Speeds the sure ruin from the conqueror's hand,
Or spreads corruption o'er a pining land.
Ask hoary Time, what nation is most blest?
For sage experience shall this truth attest:

"Where
“Where freedom sleeps secure from lawless wrath,
Where commerce shelter’d flows through public faith,
Where fell ambition lights no foreign wars,
Nor discord rages with intestine jars;
Where justice reigns.”—Immortal were that state,
If aught immortal here were giv’n by Fate.

Such, loft Iberia! were those happy reigns,
When liberty sat brooding o’er thy plains.
The rich in plenteous peace their stores enjoy’d,
By cares unvex’d, by luxury uncloy’d.
Hope soothe’d the poor with promises of gain,
And paid with future joys their present pain;
Shew’d the full bowl amidst their sultry toil,
While those who prun’d the olive drank the oil;
By night of all the fruits of day possedd,
Labour soft-clos’d the eye, and sweeten’d rest.
Such was thy state, all gay in nature’s smiles!
And such is now the state of Britain’s isles.
Hence o’er the ocean’s waste her sail unfurl’d,
Wide wafts the tribute of a willing world.
Hence trufing nations treasure here their wealth,
Safe from tyrannic force or legal theft:
And hence the injur’d exile doom’d to roam,
Shall find his country here and dearer home.

Still be this truth, this saving truth confess,
Britain is great, because with freedom blest;
Her prince is great, because her people free,
And power here springs from public liberty.
Hail mighty monarch of the free and great!
Firm on the basis of a prosperous state.
The wealth, the strength of happy millions thine,
United rise, united shall decline.
For time will come, sad period of the brave,
When Britain's humble prince shall rule the slave;
When traffic vile shall stain the guilty throne,
And kings shall buy our ruin and their own.

But long, O long th' inglorious doom suspend!
What virtue gain'd may virtue still defend!
Thrice sacred spirit, never may you cease,
But as you blaz'd in war, shine forth in peace!
Dauntless with all the force of truth engage
The headlong tide of each corrupted age.
O ever wake around one favour'd throne,
Nor let our guardian monarch wake alone!

Though oft defeated, and though oft betray'd,
Numbers shall rise in sacred freedom's aid.
Far as her all-enlivening influence reigns,
Heroic ardour beats in gen'rous veins.
Now bids learn'd Greece barbarian might defy,
Now the soft arts of polish'd tyranny;
Now to no stock, or sect, or place confin'd,
She takes adopted sons from human kind;
While denizen'd by her eternal laws,
They all are Britons who shall serve her cause.

Lo! to the banner crowds a youthful band;
Form'd for the glorious task by nature's hand;

Wisdom
Wisdom unclogg'd by years, with toil unbought,
A zeal by vigour kindled, rul'd by thought.
Such gifts she to the happy few imparts,
To judging heads and to determin'd hearts;
To heads unfr'd by youth's tumultuous rage,
To hearts unnumb'd by the chill ice of age;
And while they both preserve a sep'rate claim,
Their passions reason, and their reasons flame.
Proceed, brave youths! Let others court renown
In hostile fields, be yours the olive crown;
And trust to fame, those heroes brighter shone
Who sav'd a nation, than who nations won.
Nor let assuming age restrain your flight,
Fearful to tempt the yet unpractis'd height;
Deceitful counsel lurks in hoary haits,
And the last dregs of life are fordid cares.
Objects are clear proportion'd in degree,
To gen'r'al use, or strong necessity.
Nor are two things so plainly understood,
As the worst evil, and the greatest good;
If rescu'd from the misty breath of schools,
Men will but feel without the help of rules.
So unbewilder'd in the crooked maze,
Where guilt low sculks, and reptile cunning strays,
A nation's interest, and a people's rights,
Distinctly shine in nature's simple lights,
And claim in him who fairly acts his part,
Before a Lonsdale's head, a Lonsdale's heart.
Chief when snatch’d by heaven’s preserving hand,
From the fell contests of each hostile land,
A happy island to th’ incircling main
Trusts for a sure report and honest gain.
The just are heaven’s, earth is for heaven ordain’d,
Form’d by its laws, and by its laws maintain’d.
These one true inter’st, one great system frame,
Political and moral are the same.
Guilt toils for gain at honour’s vast expence,
Heaven throws the trifle in to innocence;
And fixes happiness in hell’s despite,
The necessary consequence of right.
Proceed, ye Deists! blindfold rage employ,
And prove the sacred truths ye would destroy.
Prove Christian faith the wifest scheme to bind,
In chains of cordial love, our jarring kind;
And thence conclude it human, if you can,
The perfect produce of imperfect man!
While prostrate we adore that power divine,
Whose simple rule connects each great design;
Bids social earth a type of heaven appear,
Where justice tastes those joys which wait her there.
But though self-int’rest follow virtue’s train!
Yet selfish think not virtue’s end is gain!
Older than time, ere inter’st had a name,
Justice existed, and is still the same;
Alike the creature’s and creator’s guide,
His rule to form, the law by which we’re ty’d:

In
In reason's light, eternal word, exprest,
Stamp'd with his image in the creature's breast.
Thus speaks the sage, who skill'd in nature's laws,
Deep from effects high-trac'd th' all-ruling cause.
" Before creation was, th' Almighty Mind
" In time's abyss the future world design'd;
" Did the great system in its parts survey,
" And fit the springs, and regulate their play;
" In meet gradations plann'd th' harmonious round,
" These links by which depending parts are bound.
" All these he knew, ere yet the things he made,
" In types which well the mimic world display'd.
" The types are real, since from them he drew
" The real forms of whatsoe'er we view.
" Made to their resemblance, heaven and earth exist,
" But they unmade eternally subsist.
" For if created, we must sure suppose
" Some other types whence their resemblance flows;
" While these on others equally depend,
" Nor ever shall the long progression end.
" God ere it was, the future being saw,
" Or blindfold made his world, and gave his law.
" But chance could never frame the vast design,
" Where countless parts in justest order join.
" The types eternal, just proportions teach,
" Greater or less, more or less perfect each.
" These ever present power omniscient sees,
" On them he forms his ever-made decrees;
" Nor
"Nor can he better love what merits least,
"Man than an angel, or than man a beast.
"Hence Reason, hence immortal Order springs,
"Knowledge and Love adapted to the things,
"And thence th' unerring rule of justice flows,
"To act what Order prompts, and Reason shows.
"When man in nature's purity remain'd,
"By pain untroubled, and by sin unstain'd;
"Fair image of the God, and close conjoin'd,
"By innate union with the heavenly mind;
"In the pure splendor of substantial light,
"The beam divine of Reason blest'd his sight;
"Seraphic Order in its fount he view'd,
"Seeing he lov'd, and loving he pursu'd;
"Nor dard the body, passive slave, controul
"The sovereign mandates of the ruling soul.
"But soon by sin the sacred union broke,
"Man bows to earth beneath the heavy yoke.
"The darkling soul scarce feels a glimm'ring ray,
"Shrouded in sense from her immortal day.
"Vengeance divine offended Order arms,
"And clothes in terrors her celestial charms.
"Now grosser objects heav'n-born souls possefs,
"Passions enslave, and servile cares oppress.
"Fraud, rapine, murder, guilt's long horrid train,
"Distracted nature's anarchy maintain.
"No more pure Reason earthly minds can move,
"No more can Order's charms persuasive prove.

"But
"But as the moon reflecting borrow'd day,
Sheds on our shadow'd world a feeble ray;
Some scatter'd beams of Reason law contains,
While Order's rule must be enforc'd by pains.
Hence death's black scroll, dire tortures hence are giv'n;
Hence kings, the necessary curse of heav'n.
And just the doom of an avenging God,
Who spurn'd his sceptre, feel the tyrant's rod.
Blind by our fears we meet the ills we fly,
In rule oppression, want in property."

So spoke the sage, and if not learn'd in vain,
If spotless truth in sacred books remain;
Dearly the child hath paid the parent's pride;
And ill hath Law the heavenly rule supply'd.
Thus boasts some leech with unavailing art,
To mend the tainted lungs and wasting heart;
Bids the loose springs with wonted vigour play,
And sprightly juices warm in cold decay.

Or would imperious reason deign to own,
The world not made for sovereign man alone;
Some things there are for human use design'd,
And these in common dealt to human kind.
To mortal wants is given a power to use,
What to th' immortal part just heaven might well refuse.
This faithful instinct in each breast implants,
All know their rights, for all must feel their wants.

But soon began the rage of wild desire,
To thirst for more than use could e'er require.
Ere stung by luxury's unfated call,
And ere ambition madly grasp'd the ball,
Vain restless man in busy search employ'd,
Saw somewhat still beyond the bliss enjoy'd,
Pres't eager on; the lowly and the great,
Alike their wish beyond their destin'd state;
Alike condemn'd, whatever Fortune grant,
To real poorness in phantastic want.

And now some pages high by others deem'd,
For virtue honour'd, and for parts esteem'd;
Call'd forth to judge where dubious claims are try'd,
Convince with reason, and with counsel guide;
Fix'd rules devise to sway th' assenting throng,
And marks distinct impress on right and wrong.

The simple precept subtle wiles evade,
And statutes as our crimes increas'd were made,
These were at first unwritten, plain and few,
'Till swell'd by time the law's vast volume grew;
And grown with these, to sway th' unwieldy trust,
Thousands we chose to keep the millions just,
Some plac'd o'er others, others plac'd o'er these,
Thus government grew up by slow degrees;
Higher the pile arose, and still more high,
When lo! the summit ends in monarchy.
There plac'd, a man in gorgeous pomp appears,
And far o'er earth his tow'ring aspect rears;
While prostrate crowds his sacred smile implore,
And what their crimes had form'd, their fears adore.
Low from beneath they lift their servile eyes,
And see the proud colossus touch the skies.
So at some mountain’s foot have children gaz’d,
While close to heaven they view the summit rais’d,
Eager they mount, new regions to explore,
But heaven is now as distant as before.
Thus views the crowd a throne, while those who rise
Claim not a nearer kindred to the skies;
Earth is their parent, thither kings should bend,
From thence they rise, and not from heaven descend.
Happy, had all the royal sons of earth
Thus sprung, nor guilt had claim’d the monstrous birth.
Where from the fire descending through the line,
Rapine and fraud confer a right divine.
Ye mortal gods, how vainly are ye proud?
If just your title, servants to the crowd;
If wide your sway, if large your treasur’d store,
These but increase your servitude the more;
A part is only yours, the rest is theirs,
And nothing all your own, except your cares.
Shall man, by nature free, by nature made
To share the feast her bounteous hand display’d,
Transfer these rights? as well he may dispense
The beam of reason, or the nerve of sense;
With all his strength the monarch’s limbs invest,
Or pour his valour in the royal breast.
Take the starv’d peasant’s taste, devouring lord!
Ere you deprive him of the genial board.

And
And if you would his liberty controul,
Assume the various attendings of his soul!
So shall one man a people’s powers enjoy,
Thus Indians deem of wretches they destroy.
Thus in old tales the fabled monster stands,
Proud of a thousand eyes, a thousand hands.
Thus dreams the sophist, who with subtle art,
Would prove the whole included in a part,
A people in their king; and from the throng,
Transfer to him their rights in nature’s wrong;
Those sacred rights in nature’s charter plain,
By wants that claim them, and by powers that gain.

Though sophists err, yet stand confess’d thy claim,
And be the king and multitude the same,
Whose deeds benevolent his title prove,
And royal selfishness, in public love;
Nor, draining wasted realms for sordid self,
O scepter’d suicide! destroy thy self.

Where fails this proof, in vain would we unite
The ruler’s interest with the people’s right.
Frantic ambition has her sep’rate claim,
The dropsy’d thirst of empire, wealth, or fame;
Pride’s boundless hope, valour’s enthusiastic rant,
With the long nameless train of fancy’d want.
Urg’d on by these, all view the magic prize,
The prospect widening as they higher rise;
For him who seeks a limited command,
To him whose wish devours air, sea, and land.
(r80)

Alike all foes to freedom's holy cause,
For freedom ties unbounded will with laws,
Alike all foes to every public gain,
For public blessings loose the bond-man's chain.
Ill-fated slaves of arbitrary sway!
Where trusted power seduces to betray;
Makes private failings rage a gen'r'al pest,
And taints even virtue in the social breast;
Bids friendship plunder, charity undo.
The blameless many, for the favour'd few.
'Till guilt high rear'd on crimes protecting crime,
Fills the heap'd measure of predestin'd time.

Far others, ye, O wealthy, wise, and brave!
Though subject, free; more freedom would enslave.
Bless'd with a rule by long experience try'd,
Unwarp'd by faction's rage, or kingly pride;
Bless'd with the means, whate'er this rule shall bend,
Again to trace it to its glorious end;
And bless'd with proofs, the proofs are seal'd with blood,
Whate'er the form, the end is public good.

But yet admit the fire his right fore-goes!
Can he his children's sep'rate claim dispose?
Whate'er the parent gave, whate'er he give,
They who have right to life, have right to live.
And spite of man's consent, or man's decree,
A right to life, is right to liberty.
Though for convenience fram'd the laws should shine,
Pure emanation from the source divine;

Such
Such as can pierce the gloom of pagan night,
And untaught savages in woods enlight;
Such as on scaffolds can the guiltless save,
And torture on his throne the scepter’d slave;
Such as th’ offending wretch reluctant owns,
And hails its beauty with his dying groans:
In such fair laws the will of heaven impress’d,
Shines to all eyes, and rules the conscious breast.
Though tortures cease, though night’s thick-mantling veil
From mortal ken the secret deed conceal;
Reason and conscience shall awake within,
And light the shade, and loud proclaim the sin.

"But should the universal voice combine,
To cloath injustice in a robe divine?"
Let the same breath divest the day of light,
To blazon forth the dusky face of night.
Then shall the laws of fainted evil bind,
And human will subvert th’ all-ruling mind;
That sacred fount whence lawful rule must spring,
And diff’rent from the robber marks the king.

Yet vainly would despotic will conclude,
That force may sway the erring multitude,
Justice, ’tis own’d, should ever guide the free,
But pow’r of wrong, in all, is liberty;
And for whatever purposes restrain’d,
A nation is enslav’d that may be chain’d.
Heaven gives to all a liberty of choice,
A people’s good requires a people’s voice;
Man's surest guide, where dif'rent views agree,
From private hate, and private int'rest free.
Fatal their change from such who rashly fly,
'To the hard grasp of guiding tyranny;
Soon shall they find, when will is arm'd with might,
Injustice wield the sword, though drawn for right.

Blind to these truths who fond of boundless sway,
Bids trembling slaves implicitly obey;
Though by a long decent from Adam down
Through scepter'd heirs, heboasts his ancient crown,
Great nature's rebel forfeits every claim,
And loads the tyrant with th' usurper's name;
While with each lawless act of proud command,
He stands proscrib'd by his own guilty hand.

Bow, Filmer, bow! to hell's tremendous throne,
And bid thy fellow-damn'd suppress each groan!
There sits a king whom pow'r divine hath giv'n,
Nor earth boafts one so surely sent from heav'n.
And thou, blest martyr in fair freedom's cause,
Thou great asserter of thy country's laws;
Vainly oppression stopp'd thy potent breath;
Truth shone more powerful through the vail of death;
Example mov'd whom precept could not save,
And lifted axes wak'd each drowsy slave.

Yet magistrates must rule, they're useful things,
Our guilt the vengeance, and avenger brings.
Whate'er more perfect heaven might first create,
A state well govern'd, now, is nature's state;

For
For law from reason springs, spontaneous fruit,
And reason sure is man's first attribute.
Let visionary schoolmen toil in vain,
Who seek in anarchy for nature's reign;
Wretched alike the slaves of lawless will,
Whether the savage, or the tyrant kill;
Unjust alike all rule, where public choice
Speaks not through laws a willing people's voice.
Nor freedom suffers when the guilty fall,
'Tis nature's doom, 'tis self-defence in all.

Such now is man deprav'd that fear must sway,
To tread the paths where duty points the way;
The wretch must suffer to forewarn the rest,
And some must fall to stop the spreading pest.
Alone the gen'ral welfare can demand
The bleeding victim from th' unwilling hand.

Hence public pains—what to the crime is due,
O Judge supreme! must be reserv'd for you.
To you alone, whose all-pervading eye
Deep in the breast can latent thought esp'y;
Try every action by the known intent,
And to each crime adapt its punishment;
While men, misled by erring lights, dispense
The doom of guilt to injur'd innocence;
Or though repentance cleanse the moral stain,
Inflit on crimes aton'd avenging pain.
Yet blameless they who act sincere their part,
Faultless he errs who cannot read the heart.
Not such fierce flames the mad enthusiast's zeal,
On errors harmless to the general weal,
Whether false notions wander far from truth,
Or age retain the trace impress'd in youth.
While interest prompts the holy murd'rer's hand,
In sacred fires to light th' unhallow'd brand;
To draw destruction from heaven’s saving page,
And bid sweet mercy breathe relentless rage.

Accurs'd all such! and he with joy exalt,
Whose baleful breath embitters certain fate;
Who on th' imploring face malignant smiles,
And sentenc'd wretches wantonly reviles.
Better, far better in the savage den,
Let the robb'd lion judge o'er prostrate men:
Better let pow'r the lawless faulchion draw,
Than coward cruelty disgrace the law.

This well you know, O — ! whose righteous seat
Gives to the innocent a sure retreat;
Severely just, and piously humane,
The wretch you punish, while you share his pain.
Tears with the dreadful words of sentence flow,
Nor does the rigid judge the man forego.
So feels the breast humane, ye truly brave!
And such is thine, my friend, intent to save!
Whether thy bounty pining want relieve,
Or lenient pity sooth the hearts that grieve;
Whether thy pious hand due bounds prescribe
To little tyrants, o'er the lesser tribe;
An E P I S T L E.

By the Same.

Through the wild maze of life's still varying plan,
Bliss is alone th' important task of man.
All else is trifling, whether grave or gay,
A Newton's labours, or an infant's play;
Whether this vainly waftes th' unheeded fun,
Or those more vainly mark the course it run;
For of the two, sure smaller is the fault,
'To err unthinking, than to err with thought;
But if, like them, we still must trifles use,
Harmlesst at least, like theirs, be those we choose.
Enough it is that reason blames the choice,
Join not to her's the wretch's plaintive voice;
Be folly free from guilt: let foplings play,
Or write, or talk, or dress, or die away.
Let those, if such there be, whose giant-mind
Superior tow'r's above their pigmy kind,

Unaided
Unaided and alone, the realms explore,
Where hail and snow renew their treasur'd store.
Lo! heav'n spreads all its stars; let those explain,
What balanc'd pow'rs the rolling orb sustain;
Nor in more humble scales, pernicious weigh
Sense, justice, truth, against seducing pay.
So distant regions shall employ their thought,
And spotless senates here remain unbought.

Well had great † Charles, by early want inspir'd,
With warring puppets, guiltles! praise acquir'd;
So would that flame have mimic fights engag'd,
Which fann'd by pow'r, o'er wasted nations rag'd.
Curs'd be the wretch, should all the mouths of fame,
Wide o'er the world his deathless deeds proclaim,
Who like a baneful comet spreads his blaze,
While trembling crowds in stupid wonder gaze;
Whose potent talents serve his lawless will,
Which turns each Virtue to a public ill,
With direful rage perverted might employs,
And heav'n's great ends with heav'n's best means destroys.
The praise of power is his, whose hand supplies
Fire to the bold, and prudence to the wise;
While man this only real merit knows,
Fitly to use the gifts which heav'n bestows:

* Job, chap. xxxviii.
† Charles V. Emperor of Germany, who in his retirement amus'd himself with puppets. See Strada de bello Belgico.
If savage valour be his vaunted fame,
The mountain-lion shall dispute his claim:
Or, if persidious wiles deserve applause,
Through slighted vows, and violated laws;
The subtle plotter's title stands confess'd,
Whose dagger gores the trusting tyrant's breast.
And sure the villain less deserves his fate,
Who stabs one wretch, than he who stabs a state.
Now, mighty hero! boast thy dear delights,
The price of toilsome days and sleepless nights;
Say, canst thou aught in purple grandeur find,
Sweet as the slumbers of the lowly hind?
   Better are ye, the youthful and the gay,
Who jocund rove through pleasure's flow'ry way!
Yet seek not there for bliss! your toil were vain,
(And disappointed toil is double pain)
Though from the living fount your nectar-bowls
Pour the soft balm upon your thirsty souls;
Though pure the spring, though every draught sincere,
By pain unbitter'd, and unpall'd by fear;
Though all were full as high as thought can soar,
'Till fancy fires, and wishes crave no more:
Let lovely woman artles charms display,
Where truth and goodness bask in beauty's ray;
Let heav'nly melody luxuriant float
In swelling sounds, and breathe the melting note;
Let gen'rous wines enliv'ning thoughts inspire,
While social converse sooths the genial fire:

If
If aught can yet more potent charms dispense,
Some stronger rapture, some sublimer sense;
Be these enjoy'd.—Then from the crowd arise
Some chief, in life's full pride maturely wise.
Ev'n you, my Lord, with titles, honours grac'd,
And higher still by native merit plac'd;
By sainted talents to no sphere confin'd,
Free ranging every province of the mind:
Equally fit, a nation's weight to bear,
Or shine in circles of the young and fair;
In grave debates instructed senates move,
Or melt the glowing dame to mutual love.
To heighten these, let conscious worth infuse
Sweet ease, and smiling mirth th' inspiring Muse.
Then answer, thou of every gift possess'd,
Say, from thy soul, art thou sincerely blest!
To various objects wherefore dost thou range?
Pleasure must cease, ere man can wish to change.
Hast thou not quitted Flaccus' sacred lay,
To talk with Bavius, or with Flavia play;
When wasted nature shuns the large expence
Of deep attention to exalted sense!
Precarious bliss! which soon, which oft must cloy,
And which how few, how very few enjoy!
Say, is there aught, on which, completely blest,
Fearless and full the raptur'd mind may rest?
Is there aught constant? Or, if such there be,
Can varying man be pleas'd with constancy?

Mark
Mark then what sense the blessing must employ!
The senses change, and loath accustom’d joy:
Eden in vain immortal sweets displays,
If the taste sickens, or our frame decays.

The range of life contracted limits bound;
Yet more confin’d is pleasure’s faithless round:
Fair op’ning to the sight, when first we run,
But, ah! how alter’d, when again begun!
When tir’d we view the same known prospect o’er,
And lagging, tread the steps we trod before.
Now clogg’d with spleen, the lazy current flows,
Through doubts, and fears, and self-augmenting woes;
’Till sated, loathing, hopeless here of bliss,
Some plunge to seek it into death’s abyss.

Of all superfluous wealth’s unnumber’d flings,
The sharpest is that knowledge which it brings;
Enjoyment purchas’d makes its object known,
And then, alas! each soft illusion’s flown:
Love’s promis’d sweet, ambition’s lofty scheme,
The painter’s image, and the poet’s theme.

These, in perspective fair exalted high,
Attract with seeming charms the distant eye;
But when by envious Fortune plac’d too near,
Mislapen forms, and groser tints appear:
Where lovely Venus led her beauteous train,
Some fiend gigantic holds her monstrous reign;
Crowns, scepters, laurels are confus’dly strow’d,
A wild, deform’d, unmeaning, heavy load.
(1901)

Some pleasures here with sparing hand are giv’n,
That fans of earth should taste their promis’d heav’n;
But what was meant to urge us to the chase,
Now stops, or sideway turns our devious race:
Though still to make the destin’d course more plain,
Thick are our erring paths beset with pain;
Nor has one object equal charms to prove
The fitting center of our restless love.
And when the great Creator’s will had join’d,
Unequal pair! the body and the mind,
Left the proud spirit should neglect her clay,
He had corporeal objects thought convey;
Each strong sensation to the soul impart,
Ecstatic transport or afflicting smart:
By that entic’d, the useful she enjoys;
By this deter’d, the flies what’er destroys:
Hence from the dagger’s point sharp anguish flows,
And the soft couch is spread with sweet repose.

In something frail, though general this design,
For some exceptions every rule confine:
Yet few were they, while nature’s genuine store
Supply’d our wants, nor man yet sought for more;
Ere diff’rent mixtures left no form the fame,
And vicious habits chang’d our sickly frame.
Now subtle art may gild the venom’d pill,
And bait with soothing sweets destructive ill.

To narrow self heav’n’s impulse unconfin’d
Diffusive reigns, and takes in all our kind.
The smile of joy reflected joy imparts;
The wretch's groans pierce sympathizing hearts.
Yet not alike are all conjoin'd with all,
Nor throng with rival heat to nature's call:
By varying instinct different ties are known,
While love superior points to each his own;
Those next the reach of our assisting hands,
And those to whom we're link'd by kindred bands;
Those who most want, and best deserve our care,
In warmer streams the sacred influence share;
Ambrosial sweets her infant's lip distills,
While through the mother's heart quick rapture thrills.
The social fires friend, servant, neighbour claim,
Which blaze collected in the patriot's flame:
Hence Britain throbs superior in thy soul,
Nor idly wak'st thou for the distant pole.
Yet farther still the saving instinct moves,
And to the future wide extends our loves;
Glows in our bosom for an unborn race,
And warms us mutual to the kind embrace.
For this, to man was giv'n the graceful air;
For this, was woman form'd divinely fair.
But now to pleasure sensual views confin'd,
Reach not the use, for which it was design'd;
To this one point our hopes, our wishes tend,
And thus mistake the motive for the end.
Whate'er sensations from enjoyment flow,
Our erring thought to matter's force would owe;
To that ascribe our pleasures and our pains,
And blindly for the cause mistake the means;
In od’rous meads the vernal gale we praise,
Or dread the storm, that blows the wintry seas;
While he’s unheeded, who alone can move,
Claims all our fears, and merits all our love;
Alone to souls can sense and thought convey,
Through the dark mansions of surrounding clay.

Man, part from heav’n, and part from humble earth,
A motley substance, takes his various birth;
Close link’d to both, he hangs in diff’rent chains,
The pliant fetter length’ning as he strains.
If, bravely conscious of her native fires,
To the bold height his nobler frame aspires;
Near as she fears to join th’ approaching skyes,
Our earth still lessens to her distant eyes.
But if o’erpois’d she sinks, her downward course
Each moment weighs, with still augmenting force;
Low and more low, the burden’d spirit bends,
While weaker still each heav’nly link extends;
*Till prostrate, grov’ling, fetter’d to the ground,
She lies in matter’s heap o’erwhelm’d and bound.
Wrapt in the toils of sin, just heav’n employs
What caus’d her guilt, to blast her lawless joys:
Love, potent guardian of our length’ning race,
Unnerves the feeble lecher’s cold embrace;
And appetite, by nature giv’n to save,
Sinks the gorg’d glutton in his early grave.
What sends yon fleet o'er boist'rous seas to roll,
Beneath the burning line, and frozen pole?
Why ravage men the hills, the plains, the woods?
Why spoil all nature, earth, and air, and floods?
Seek they some prize to help a sinking state,
No!—this must all be done, ere Bernard eat.
Tell it some untaught savage! with surprize
He asks, "How vast must be that giant's size!
"How great his pow'r, who thousands can employ!
"How great his force, who millions can destroy!"
But if the savage would, more curious, know
What potent virtues from such viands flow,
What blest effects they cause——consult with Sloane,
Let him explain the colic, gout, and stone!
Pleasure's for use; it differs in degree,
Proportion'd to the thing's necessity.
Hence various objects variously excite,
And diff'rent is the date of each delight;
But when th' allotted end we once attain,
Each step beyond it, is a step to pain.
Nor let us murmur.—Hath not earth a store
For every want? it was not meant for more.
Blest is the man, as far as earth can bless,
Whose measur'd passions reach no wild excess;
Who, urg'd by nature's voice, her gifts enjoys,
Nor other means, than nature's force, employs.

* A Frenchman render'd famous for a most extravagant expence in eating.

Vol. II. N While
While warm with youth, the sprightly current flows,
Each vivid sense with vigor's rapture glows;
And when he droops beneath the hand of age,
No vicious habit flings with fruitless rage;
Gradual, his strength, and gay sensations cease,
While joys tumultuous sink in silent peace.

Far other is his lot, who, not content
With what the bounteous care of nature meant,
With labour'd skill would all her joys dilate,
Sublime their sense, and lengthen out their date;
Add, blend, compose, each various mixture try,
And wind up appetite to luxury.
Thus guilty art unknown desires implants,
And viler arts must satisfy their wants;
When to corruption by himself betray'd,
Gold blinds the slave, whom luxury has made.

The hand, that form'd us, must some use intend,
It gives us pow'r's proportion'd to that end;
And happiness may justly be design'd,
A full attainment of the end design'd.
Virtue and wisdom this alike implies,
And blest must be the virtuous and the wise.

Bliss is ordain'd for all, since heav'n intends
All beings should attain their desir'd ends:
For this the fair idea shines confess'd
To every mind, and glows in every breast.
Compar'd with this, all mortal joys are vain;
Insip'd by this, we restless onward strain.
High though we mount, the object mounts more high,
Eludes our grasp, and mingles with the sky.
With nothing less th' aspiring soul's content,
For nothing less her gen’rous flame was meant;
Th' unerring rule, which all our steps should guide,
The certain test, by which true good is try'd.
Blest when we reach it, wretched while we miss,
Our joys, our sorrows prove, there must be bliss.
Nor can this be some visionary dream,
Where heated fancy forms the flattering scheme.
There sure is bliss—else, why by all desir'd?
What guileful pow'r has the mad search insin'd?
Could accident produce in all the same,
Or a vain shadow raise a real flame?
When nature in the world's distended space,
Or fill'd, or almost fill'd each smaller place;
Careful in meanest matter to produce
Each single motion for some certain use;
Hard was the lot of her first fav'rite, man,
Faulty the scheme of his contracted span,
If that alone must know an useless void,
And he feel longings ne'er to be enjoy'd.
That only can produce consummate joy,
Which equals all the pow'rs it would employ;
Such fitting object to each talent giv'n,
Earth cannot fit what was design'd for heav'n,
Why then is man with gifts sublimest fraught,
And active will, and comprehensive thought?

N 2

For
For what is all this waste of mental force?
What! for a house, a coach, a dog, a horse?
Has nature's Lord inverted nature's plan?
Is man now made for what was made for man?

There must be pleasures past the reach of sense,
Some nobler source must happiness dispense:
Reason, arise! and vindicate thy claim,
Flash on our minds the joy-infusing flame;
Pour forth the fount of light, whose endless store
Thought drinks insatiate, while it thirsts for more.
And thou, seraphic flame! who couldst inspire
The prophet's voice, and wrap his soul in fire;
Ray of th' eternal beam! who canst pervade
The distant past, and future's gloomy shade;
While trembling reason tempts heav'n's dazzling height,
Sublime her force, and guide her dubious flight;
Strengthen'd by thee, she bears the streaming blaze,
And drinks new light from truth's immortal rays.
Great, only evidence of things divine!
By thee reveal'd, the mystic wonders shine!
What puzzled sophists vainly would explore,
What humbled pride in silence must adore,
What plainly mark'd in heav'n's deliver'd page,
Makes the taught hind more wise than Greece's sage.
Yet reason proves thee in her low degree,
And owns thy truths, from their necessity.

Conspicuous now is happiness display'd,
Possessing him for whom alone we're made.
For he alone all human bliss compleats,
To him alone th' expanding bosom beats;
Who fills each faculty, each pow'r can move,
Exerts all thought, and deep absorbs all love;
Whose ceaseless being years would tell in vain,
Whose attributes immense all bounds disdain.
No sickly taste the heav'nly rapture cloys,
Nor wearied senses sink in whelming joys;
While, rais'd above low matter's groser frame,
Pure spirit blazes in his purer flame.
Such are th' immortal blessings that attend
The just and good, the patriot and the friend.
Nor such alone in distant prospect cheer,
They taste heav'n's joys anticipated here.
These in the smiling cups of pleasure flow,
Or, mingling, soothe the bitter stream of woe;
These pay the loss of honours, and of place,
And teach that guilt alone is true disgrace;
These with the glorious exile cheerful rove,
And, far from courts, fresh bloom in Curio's grove.

Long may such bliss, by such enjoy'd, attest,
The greatly virtuous are the greatly blest!
Enough there are amidst yon gorgeous train,
Who, wretched, prove all other joys are vain.
So shines the truth these humble lines unfold,
"Fair virtue ever is unwisely fold."
Too mean a price sublimest fortune brings,
Too mean the wealth, the smiles, the crowns of kings;

N 3

For ( 198 )

For rais'd o'er these, she makes our blifs secure,
The present pleasing, and the future sure.
While prosp'rous guilt a sad reverse appears,
And in the tasteless now, the future fears.

An E P I S T L E to a L A D Y.

By the Same.

C

Larinda, dearly lov'd, attend
The counsels of a faithful friend;
Who with the warmest wishes fraught,
Feels all, at least, that friendship ought.
But since by ruling heav'n's design,
Another's fate shall influence thine;
O! may these lines for him prepare
A blifs, which I would die to share!

Man may for wealth or glory roam,
But woman must be blest at home;
To this should all her studies tend,
This her great object and her end.
Diftaste unmingleed pleasures bring,
And use can blunt affliction's sting;
Hence perfect blifs no mortals know,
And few are plung'd in utter woe;
While nature arm'd against despair,
Gives pow'r to mend, or strength to bear;
And half the thought content may gain,
Which spleen employs to purchase pain.
Trace not the fair domestic plan,
From what you would, but what you can!
Nor, peevish, spurn the scanty store,
Because you think you merit more!
Bliss ever differs in degree,
Thy share alone is meant for thee;
And thou shouldst think, however small,
That share enough, for 'tis thy all:
Vain scorn will aggravate distress,
And only make that little less.

Admit whatever trifles come,
Units compose the largest sum:
O! tell them o'er, and say how vain
Are those which form ambition's train:
Which swell the monarch's gorgeous state,
And bribe to ill the guilty great!
But thou more blest, more wise than these,
Shalt build up happiness on ease.

Hail sweet Content! where joy serene
Gilds the mild soul's unruffled scene;
And with blith fancy's pencil wrought,
Spreads the white web of flowing thought;
Shines lovely in the cheerful face,
And cloak'd each charm with native grace;
Effusion pure of bliss sincere,
A vestment for a god to wear.

N 4

Far
Far other ornaments compose
The garb that shrouds dissembled woes,
Piec'dout with motley dies and forts,
Freaks, whimsies, festivals and sports;
The troubled mind's fantastic dress,
Which madness titles happiness.
While the gay wretch to revel bears
The pale remains of sighs and tears;
And seeks in crowds, like her undone,
What only can be found in one.

But, chief, my gentle friend! remove
Far from thy couch seducing love!
O! shun the false magician's art,
Nor trust thy yet unguarded heart!
Charm'd by his spells fair honour flies,
And thousand treach'rous phantoms rise,
Where guilt in beauty's ray beguiles,
And ruin lurks in friendship's smiles.

Lo! where th' enchanted captive dreams
Of warbling groves, and purling streams;
Of painted meads, of flowers that shed
Their odours round her fragrant bed.
Quick shifts the scene, the charm is lost,
She wakes upon a desert coast!
No friendly hand to lend its aid,
No guardian bow'r to spread its shade;
Expos'd to every chilling blast,
She treads th' inhospitable waste;
And
And down the drear decline of life,
Sinks a forlorn, dishonour'd wife.
Neglect not thou the voice of Fame,
But clear from crime, be free from blame!
Though all were innocence within,
'Tis guilt to wear the garb of sin.
Virtue rejects the soul disguise:
None merit praise who praise despise.
Slight not, in supercilious strain,
Long practis'd modes, as low or vain!
The world will vindicate their cause,
And claim blind faith in custom's laws.
Safer with multitudes to stray,
Than tread alone a fairer way;
To mingle with the erring throng,
Than boldly speak ten millions wrong.
Beware of the relentless train,
Who forms adore, whom forms maintain!
Left prudes demure, or coxcombs loud,
Accuse thee to the partial crowd;
Foes who the laws of honour slight,
A judge who measures guilt by spite.
Behold the sage Aurelia stand,
Disgrace and fame at her command!
As if heaven's delegate desigu'd,
Sole arbiter of all her kind.
Whether she try some favour'd piece,
By rules devis'd in ancient Greece;

Or
Or whether modern in her flight,
She tells what Paris thinks polite.
For much her talents to advance,
She study'd Greece, and travell'd France.
There learn'd the happy art to please,
With all the charms of labour'd ease;
Through looks and nods with meaning fraught,
To teach what she was never taught.

By her each latent spring is seen,
The workings' soul of secret spleen;
The guilt that sculks in fair pretence,
Or folly veil'd in specious sense.
And much her righteous spirit grieves,
When worthlessness the world deceives;
Whether the erring crowd commends
Some patriot sway'd by private ends;
Or husband trust a faithless wife,
Secure in ignorance from strife.
Averse she brings their deeds to view,
But justice claims the rig'rous due;
Humanely anxious to produce
At least some possible excuse.
O ne'er may virtue's dire disgrace
Prepare a triumph for the base!

Mere forms the fool implicit sway,
Which witlings with contempt survey,
Blind folly no defect can see,
Half wisdom views but one degree;
The wise remoter uses reach,
Which judgment and experience teach.
   Whoever would be pleas'd and please,
Must do what others do with ease.
Great precept undefin'd by rule,
And only learn'd in custom's school;
To no peculiar form confin'd,
It spreads through all the human kind;
Beauty and wit and worth supplies,
Yet graceful in the good and wise.
Rich with this gift and none beside,
In fashion's stream how many glide?
Secure from every mental woe,
From treach'rous friend or open foe;
From social sympathy that shares
The public los' or private cares;
Whether the barb'rous foe invade,
Or merit pine in fortune's shade.
   Hence gentle Anna ever gay,
The same to-morrow as to-day,
Save where perchance, when others weep,
Her cheek the decent sorrow steep;
Save when perhaps a melting tale,
O'er every tender breast prevail.
The good, the bad, the great, the small,
She likes, she loves, she honours all.
And yet if fiend'rous malice blame,
Patient she yields a sister's fame.

Alike
Alike if satire or if praise,
She says whate'er the circle says;
Implicit does whate'er we do,
Without one point or wish in view,
Sure test of others, faithful glass
Through which the various phantoms pass.
Wide blank, unfeeling when alone,
No care, no joy, no thought her own.

Not thus succeeds the peerless dame,
Who looks, and talks, and acts for fame;
Intent, so wide her cares extend,
To make the universe her friend.
Now with the gay in frolic shines,
Now reasons deep with deep divines.
With courtiers now extols the great,
With patriots fights o'er Britain's fate.
Now breathes with zealots holy fires,
Now melts in less refin'd desires.
Doom'd to exceed in each degree,
Too wise, too weak, too proud, too free,
Too various for one single word,
The high sublime of deep absurd.
While every talent nature grants,
Just serves to shew how much she wants.

Although in ——— combine
The virtues of our sex and thine:
Her hand restrains the widow's tears,
Her sense informs, and soothes and cheers;

Yet
Yet like an angel in disguise,
She shines but to some favour'd eyes;
Nor is the distant herd allow'd
To view the radiance through the cloud.
   But thine is every winning art,
Thine is the friendly honest heart:
And should the gen'rous spirit flow,
Beyond where prudence fears to go;
Such fallies are of nobler kind,
Than virtues of a narrow mind.

An E P I S T L E to Mr. P O P E.

By the Same.

H E A V E N in the human breast implants
Fit appetites for all our wants;
With hunger prompts to strength'ning food,
With love of praise to public good;
These to their object strait convey,
While reason winds her tardy way.
   Yet in one center should unite,
Faith, instinct, reason, appetite:
One perfect plan ordain'd to trace
And nature dignify with grace;
In one great system meant to roll,
To move, support, and guide the whole.

But
But some there are who rigid blame
The mind that thirsts for righteous fame;
And with weak lights presumptuous scan
The springs which move predestin'd man.
And some there are, accurs'd their art,
Though all the nine their charms impart,
Who in false forms of great and just,
Cloath av'rice, treachery, rage and lust:
As if superior beings suit
Those attributes which sink the brute.
But vainly chime the partial lays,
Chaste Fame rejects all spurious praise.
She, fairest offspring of the skies,
The goddess of the brave and wise,
Whose sacred impulse prompts the best
To succour and preserve the rest,
Is deaf to every private call,
And wakes but at the voice of all.

From heaps of ill-collected gain,
From hecatombs by heroes slain,
From courts where guilty greatness dwells,
She flies to penury and cells;
With Erin, pious exile, goes,
To soothe a drooping father's woes;
Or mingling with the orphan-train,
She sings the bounties of Germain.

Nor pow'r, nor policy of state,
Can ever give intrinsic weight;

And
And should fallacious art display
O'er titled drofs a golden ray,
Still bafer through deteéting years,
The speckled counterfeit appears.

But when from proof, fair issuing forth,
The ore asserts its native worth;
Then, fo've reign bard, 'tis justly thine
To stamp the well-attested coin;
And consecrated with thy name,
To treasure in the stores of Fame.

EPISTLE to POLLIO, from the Hills of HOWTH in IRELAND.

By the Same.

POLLIO! would'st thou condescend
Here to see thy humble friend,
Far from doctors, potions, pills,
Drinking health on native hills;
Thou the precious draught may'tt share,
Lucy shall the bowl prepare.
From the brouzing goat it flows,
From each balmy shrub that grows;

Hence
Hence the kidling’s wanton fire,
Hence the nerves that brace his fire.
Vigorous, buxom, young and gay,
Thou like them shalt love and play.

What, though far from silver Thames,
Stately piles, and courtly dames;
Here we boast a purer flood,
Joys that stream from sprightly blood;
Here is simple beauty seen,
Fair, and cloath’d like beauty’s queen:
Nature’s hands the garbs compose,
From the lilly and the rose.

Or, if charm’d with richer dies,
Fancy every robe supplies.
Should perchance some high-born fair,
Absent, claim thy tender care;
Here, enraptur’d shalt thou trace,
S—’s shape, and R—’s face;
While the waking dream shall pay
Many a wishing, hopeless day.

Domes with gold and toil unbought,
Rife by magic pow’r of thought,
Where by artist’s hand undrawn,
Slopes the vale, and spreads the lawn;
As if sportive nature meant,
Here to mock the works of Kent.

Come, and with-thee bring along
Jocund tale and witty song.
Sense to teach, and words to move,
Arts that please, adorn, improve;
And, to gild the glorious scene,
Conscience spotless and serene.

Poor with all a H——t's store,
Lives the man who pines for more.
Wretched he who doom'd to roam,
Never can be blest at home;
Nor retire within his mind,
From th' ungrateful and unkind.

Happy they whom crowds befriend,
Curs'd who on the crowd depend;
On the great one's peevish fit,
On the coxcomb's spurious wit;
Ever sentenc'd to bemoan
Others failings in their own.

If, like them, rejecting ease,
Hills and health no longer please;
Quick descend! —— Thou may'st resort
To the viceroy's splendid court.

There, indignant, shalt thou see
Cringing slaves, who might be free,
Brib'd, with titles, hope, or gain,
Tye their country's shameful chain;
Or, inspir'd by heav'n's good cause,
Waste the land with holy laws;
While the gleanings of their power,
Lawyers, lordlings, priests devour.
(210)

Now, methinks, I hear thee say,
"Drink alone thy mountain-whey!
"Wherefore tempt the Irish shoals?
"Sights like these are nearer Paul's."

An ODE to William Pultney, Esq:

By the Same.

I.

REMOTE from liberty and truth,
By fortune's crime, my early youth
Drank error's poison'd springs.
Taught by dark creeds and mystic law,
Wrapt up in reverential awe,
I bow'd to priests and kings.

II.

Soon reason dawn'd, with troubled fight
I caught the glimpse of painful light,
Afflicted and afraid,
Too weak it shone to mark my way,
Enough to tempt my steps to stray
Along the dubious shade.

III. Rest-
III.
Refles; I roam’d, when from afar
Lo, Hooker shines! the friendly star
Sends forth a steady ray.
Thus cheer’d, and eager to pursue,
I mount, ’till glorious to my view,
Locke spreads the realms of day.

IV.
Now warm’d with noble Sidney’s page,
I pant with all the patriot’s rage;
Now wrapt in Plato’s dream,
With More and Harrington around
I tread fair Freedom’s magic ground,
And trace the flattering scheme.

V.
But soon the beauteous vision flies;
And hideous spectres now arise,
Corruption’s direful train:
The partial judge perverting laws,
The priest forsaking virtue’s cause,
And senates slaves to gain.

VI.
Vainly the pious artist’s toil
Would rear to heaven a mortal pile,
On some immortal plan;
Within a sure, though varying date,
Confined, alas! is every state
Of empire and of man.
VII.
What though the good, the brave, the wise,
With adverse force undaunted rise,
   To break th' eternal doom!
Though
Though
Though
Yet perish'd fated

VIII.
To swell some future tyrant's pride,
Good
On
Once more her fields shall thirst in vain
For wholesome streams of honest gain,
   While rapine wastes her stores.
IX.
Yet glorious is the great design,
And such, O
   To prop a nation's frame.
If crush'd beneath the sacred weight,
The ruins of a falling state
   Shall tell the patriot's name.
An ODE to the Right Honourable the Lord Lonsdale.

By the Same.

I.

Lonsdale! thou ever-honour'd name,
For such is sacred virtue's claim,
Say, why! my noble friend!
While nature sheds her balmy powers
O'er hill and dale, in leaves and flowers,
Say, why my joys suspend!

II.

Here spreads the lawn high-crown'd with wood,
Here slopes the vale, there winds the flood
In many a crystal maze;
The fishes sport, in silver pride
Slow moves the swan, on either side
The herds promiscuous graze.

III.

Or if the filler shade you love,
Here solemn nods th' imbow'ring grove
O'er innocence and ease;
Whether with deep reflection fraught,
Or in the sprightly stream of thought,
The lighter trifles please.

O 3

IV. And
IV.
* And should the shaft of treacherous spleen
  Glance venom’d through this peaceful scene,
  Unheeded may it fly.
  Provok’d, nor tempted to repay,
  Though truth feverer prompt the lay,
  A mean prosaic lie.

V.
Here with the pheasant and the hare,
Unfearful of the human snare,
  Have statesmen pass’d a day.
While far from yon forbidden gate,
Pale care and lank remorse await
  Their slow-returning prey.

VI.
O! blind to all the joys of life,
Who seek them in the storm of strife,
  Destroying, or destroy’d.
Lest wretched they, and yet unbless’d,
Who batten in lethargic rest,
  On blessings unenjoy’d.

VII.
But come, my friend, the sun invites,
For thee the town hath no delights,
  Distraught and aggrieved;
While fools believe, while villains cheat,
Too honest to approve deceit,
  Too wise to be deceiv’d.

* Alluding to a certain scandalous libel.
(215)

VIII.
Or dost thou fear lest dire disease
Again thy tortur'd frame may seize;
And hast thou therefore stay'd?
O! rather haste, where thou shalt find
A ready hand, a gentle mind,
To comfort and to aid.

IX.
And while by sore afflictions try'd,
You bear without the Stoic's pride,
What Stoic never bore;
O! may I learn like thee to bear,
And what shall be my destin'd share,
To suffer, not explore.

******************************************************************************

An ODE.

By the Same.

GENTLE, idle, trifling boy,
Sing of pleasures, sing of joy!
Well you paint the crystal spring,
Well the flow'ry meadow sing,
But beware with bolder flight,
Tempt not heaven's unequal height;

O 4

But
But beware! with impious strain!
Mock not freedom's hallow'd train!
Sacred, here, O! ever be
Heaven, and heaven-born liberty!
Let the slaves of lawless sway,
Let the stupid flock obey!
Pent within a narrow fold,
Ty'd, and stript, and slain, and fold.
Happier stars the brave befriend,
Britons know a nobler end.
Theirs it is to temper laws,
Theirs to watch in freedom's cause,
Theirs one common good to share,
Theirs to feel one common care;
In the glorious task combin'd,
From the monarch to the hind.
Yet O! cease not gentle boy!
Sing of pleasures, sing of joy!
Like thy brothers of the wing,
Idly hop, and chirp, and sing!
Heaven can nothing vain produce,
Every creature has its use.
Thine it is to soothe our toil,
Thine to make e'en wisdom smile.
Much they err who such despise,
Trifles please the truly wise.
An ODE.

By the Same.

I.

ON Stow, the Muse's happy theme,
Let fancy's eye enamour'd gaze;
Where through one nobly simple scheme,
Ten thousand varying beauties please.
There patriot-virtue rears her shrine,
Nor love! art thou depriv'd of thine.

II.

Mark where from Pope's exhaustless vein,
Pure flows the stream of copious thought,
While nature pours the genial strain,
With fairest springs of learning draught;
The treasures of each clime and age,
Grace and enrich his sacred page.

III.

So while through Britain's fields her Thames
Prolific rolls his silver tide;
The tribute of a thousand streams
Swells the majestic river's pride;
And where his gen'rous current strays,
The wealth of either world conveys.

IV. Far
IV.
Far other is that wretch's song,
Whose scanty rill devoid of force,
With idle tinklings creeps along,
A narrow, crooked, dubious course;
Or soul with congregated floods,
Spreads a wide waste o'er plains, and woods.

V.
In action thus the mind express'd
High soars in Pope the true sublime:
A Stow unfolds a Cobham's breast,
A Bavius crawls in doggrel rhyme.
Through all their various works we trace
The greatly virtuous, and the base.

An ODE.

By the Same.

I.
Too anxious for the public weal,
Awhile suspend the toilsome strife!
O think if Britain claims thy zeal,
Thy friends and Britain claim thy life!

II. Thy
II.
Thy gen’rous, free, and active soul,
Inspir’d by glory’s sacred flame,
Springs ardent to the distant goal,
And strains the weaker mortal frame.

III.
Happy whom reason deigns to guide,
Secure within the golden mean,
Who shuns the Stoic’s senseless pride,
Nor wallows with the herd obscene.

IV.
He nor with brow severely bent,
Chides pleasure’s smiling train away;
Nor careless of life’s great intent,
With folly wastes each heedless day.

V.
But from the mountain’s lofty height,
Now nature’s mighty frame surveys;
And now descending with delight,
Along the humble valley strays.

VI.
So have I seen thee gain applause,
Though faction rag’d, from Britain’s peers;
Then glorious in thy country’s cause,
Go whisper love in Chloe’s ears.
An ODE to MANKIND.

Address'd to the Prince.

By the Same.

INTRODUCTION to the PRINCE.

Nor me the glories of thy birth engage,
With royal names to swell my pompous page,
Nor meaner views allure, in soothing lays
To court thy favour with officious praise.
Yet praise it is, thus to address thine ear
In strains no slave dare sing, no tyrant hear;
While warm for Britain's rights and nature's laws,
I call forth Britain's Hope in freedom's cause:
Assert an empire which to All belongs,
And vindicate a world's long suffer'd wrongs.

These saving truths import thee most to know,
The links that tie the mighty to the low;
What now, our fellow-subject, is your due,
And, when our lord, shall be a debt on you.
O! may'st thou to the throne such maxims bring!
And feel the free-man while thou reign'st the king.
Far hence the tribe, whose servile arts delude,
And teach the great to spurn the multitude.
Are those unworthy of the royal heir,
Who claim the future monarch's duteous care?
Still may thy thoughts the godlike task pursue,
And to the many ne'er prefer the few!
Still mayst thou fly thy fortune's specious friends,
Who deal forth sov'reign grace to private ends;
In narrow streams divert the copious tide,
Exalt one foot, and damn the world beside;
While with false lights directing partial rule,
The lord of nations falls a party's tool.
Such there have been—and such, in truth's despite,
Disgrac'd the cause of liberty and right.
But thou shalt rise superior to their arts,
And fix thy empire in a people's hearts.
Nor hence may faction boast her favour'd claim,
Where selfish passions borrow virtue's name:
Free government alone preserves the free,
And righteous rule is gen'ral liberty;
Their guiding law is freedom's native voice,
The public good defin'd by public choice;
And justly should the bold offenders fall,
Who dare invade the sov'reign rights of all;
A king who proudly makes these claims his own,
Or they whose rage would shake a lawful throne.
From truths like these proceeds a right divine,
And may the pow'r that rais'd, preserve thy scepter'd line.

To
To MANKIND: An ODE.

I.

Is there, or do the schoolmen dream?
Is there on earth a pow'r supreme,
The delegate of heav'n,
To whom an uncontroul'd command,
In every realm o'er sea and land,
By special grace is giv'n?

II.

Then say, what signs this god proclaim?
Dwells he amidst the diamond's flame,
A throne his hallow'd shrine?
The borrow'd pomp, the arm'd array,
Want, fear, and impotence betray:
Strange proofs of pow'r divine!

III.

If service due from human kind,
To men in slothful ease reclin'd,
Can form a sov'reign's claim:
Hail monarchs! ye, whom heav'n ordains,
Our toils unshar'd, to share our gains,
Ye ideots, blind and lame!

IV. Superior
IV.
Superior virtue, wisdom, might,
Create and mark the ruler’s right,
So reason must conclude:
Then thine it is, to whom belong
The wise, the virtuous, and the strong,
Thrice sacred multitude!

V.
In thee, vast All! are these contain’d,
For thee are those, thy parts ordain’d,
So nature’s systems roll:
The scepter’s thine, if such there be;
If none there is, then thou art free,
Great monarch! mighty whole!

VI.
Let the proud tyrant rest his cause
On faith, prescription, force, or laws,
An hoist’s or senate’s voice!
His voice affirms thy stronger due,
Who for the many made the few,
And gave the species choice.

VII.
Unsanctify’d by thy command,
Unknown by thee, the scepter’d hand
The trembling slave may bind.
But loose from nature’s moral ties,
The oath by force impos’d belies
The unassenting mind.

VIII. Thy
VIII.
Thy will's thy rule, thy good its end;
You punish only to defend
What parent nature gave:
And he who dare her gifts invade,
By nature's oldest law is made
Thy victim or thy slave.

IX.
Thus reason founds the just decree
On universal liberty,
Not private rights resign'd:
Through various nature's wide extent,
No private beings e'er were meant
To hurt the gen'ral kind.

X.
Thee justice guides, thee right maintains,
Th' oppressor's wrongs, the pilferer's gains,
Thy injur'd weal impair.
Thy warmest passions soon subside,
Nor partial envy, hate, nor pride,
Thy temper'd counsels share.

XI.
Each instance of thy vengeful rage,
Collected from each clime and age,
Though malice swell the sum,
Would seem a spotless scanty scroll,
Compar'd with Marius' bloody roll,
Or Sylla's hippodrome.

XII. But
But thine has been imputed blame,
Th’ unworthy few assume thy name,
The rabble weak and loud;
Or those who on thy ruins feast,
The lord, the lawyer, and the priest;
A more ignoble crowd.

Avails it thee, if one devours,
Or lesser spoilers share his pow’rs,
While both thy claim oppose?
Monsters who wore thy fully’d crown,
Tyrants who pull’d those monsters down,
Alike to thee were foes.

Far other shone fair Freedom’s hand,
Far other was th’ immortal stand,
When Hampden fought for thee:
They snatch’d from rapine’s gripe thy spoils,
The fruits and prize of glorious toils,
Of arts and industry.

On thee yet foams the preacher’s rage,
On thee fierce frowns th’ historian’s page,
A false apostate train:
Tears stream adown the martyr’s tomb;
Unpity’d in their harder doom,
Thy thousands strow the plain.
XVI.
These had no charms to please the sense,
No graceful port, no eloquence,
To win the Muse's throng:
Unknown, unsung, unmark'd they lie:
But Caesar's fate o'ercasts the sky,
And Nature mourns his wrong.

XVII.
Thy foes, a frontless band, invade;
Thy friends afford a timid aid,
And yield up half thy right.
Ev'n Locke beams forth a mingled ray,
Afraid to pour the flood of day
On man's too feeble fight.

XVIII.
Hence are the motley systems fram'd,
Of right transfer'd, of pow'r reclaim'd;
Distinctions weak and vain.
Wife Nature mocks the wrangling herd;
For unreclaim'd, and untransfer'd,
Her pow'rs and rights remain.

XIX.
While law the royal agent moves,
The instrument thy choice approves,
We bow through him to you.
But change, or cease th' inspiring choice,
The sov'reign finks a private voice,
Alike in one, or few!

XX. Shall (227)

XX.
Shall then the wretch, whose daftard heart
Shrinks at a tyrant's nobler part,
And only dares betray;
With reptile wiles, alas! prevail,
Where force, and rage, and priest-craft fail,
To pilfer pow'r away?

XXI.
O! shall the bought, and buying tribe,
The slaves who take, and deal the bribe,
A people's claims enjoy!
So Indian murd'rers hope to gain
The pow'rs and virtues of the flain,
Of wretches they destroy.

XXII.
"Avert it, heav'n! you love the brave,
"You hate the treach'rous, willing slave,
"The self-devoted head.
"Nor shall an hireling's voice convey
"That sacred prize to lawless sway,
"For which a nation bled."

XXIII.
Vain pray'r, the coward's weak ressource!
Directing reason, active force,
Propitious heaven bestows.
But ne'er shall flame the thund'ring sky,
To aid their trembling herd that fly
Before the weaker foes.

P 2

XXIV. In XXIV.

In names there dwell no magic charms,
The British virtues, British arms
Unloos’d our fathers’ band:
Say, Greece and Rome! if these should fail,
What names, what ancestors avail,
To save a sinking land?

XXV.

Far, far from us such ills shall be,
Mankind shall boast one nation free,
One monarch truly great:
Whose title speaks a people’s choice,
Whose sovereign will a people’s voice,
Whose strength a prosperous state.

Verses to Camilla.

By the Same.

Weary’d with indolent repose,
A life unmix’d with joy or woes;
Where all the lazy moments crept,
And every passion sluggish slept;
Wish’d for love’s inspiring pains,
To rouze the loiterer in my veins:
Th’ officious power my call attends,
He who uncalled his succour lends;

And
And with a smile of wanton spite,
He gave Camilla to my sight.
Her eyes their willing captive seize,
Her look, her air, her manner please;
New beauties please, unseen before,
Or seen, in her they please me more;
And soon, too soon, alas! I find
The virtues of a nobler kind.

Now cheerful springs the morning ray,
Now cheerful sinks the closing day;
For every morn with her I walk'd,
And every eve with her I talk'd;
With her I lik'd the vernal bloom,
With her I lik'd the crowded room;
From her at night I went with pain,
And long'd for morn to meet again.

How quick the smiling moments pass,
Through varying fancy's mimic glass!
While the gay scene is painted o'er,
Where all was one wide blank before:
And sweetly sooth'd th' enchanting dream,
'Till love inspir'd a bolder scheme.

Camilla, stung with grief and shame,
Now marks, and shuns the guilty flame;
Fierce anger lighten'd in her face,
Then cold reserve assum'd its place:
And soon, the wretch's hardest fate,
Contempt succeeds declining hate.
No more my presence now she flies,
She sees me with unheeding eyes;
Sees me with various passions burn,
Enrag'd depart, submit return;
Return with flattering hopes to find
Soft pity move her gentle mind.
But ah! her looks were still the same,
Unmark'd I went, unmark'd I came;
Unmark'd were all my hopes and fears,
While Strephon whispers in her ears.
O Jealousy! distracting guest!
Fly to some happy lover's breast;
Fitsly with joy thou minglest care,
But why inhabit with despair?

To CLARISSA.

By the Same.

’Twas when the friendly shade of night
Suspends the busy cares of light,
And on the various world bestows
Or sprightly joy, or calm repose.
With gen’rous wine the glass was crown’d,
And mirth, and talk, and toasts went round.
Clarissa came to bless the feast,
Clarissa, dearly welcome guest.
Not such she look’d as when by day
She blazes in the diamond’s ray;
And adding to each gem a grace,
Gives India’s wealth the second place.
But soft reclin’d in careless ease,
More pleasing, less intent to please.
Loose flow’d her hair in wanton pride,
Her robe unbound, her zone unty’d;
Half bare to view her milk-white breast,
A slender veil scarce shades the rest:
Her eye with sparkling luftre glows,
And wit in sweetest accent flows.

Now sooth’d the angel’s voice I hear,
And drink in love at either ear;
Now stung with wilder rapture gaze,
While our eyes meet with blended rays;
And kindling in th’ infectious flame,
I feel what words want pow’r to name.

Awaking from the silent trance,
Cautious I steal a broken glance;
In clam’rous-mirth each pang disguise,
And laughter swell with bursting sighs;
For Envy, pallid fiend, was there,
And Jealousy with watchful care.

Now ends the feast, each guest retires,
And with them all my soul desires,
Clarissa goes.—Ah! cruel fate!
She goes with her ill-sort’d mate:
Sullen and slow he moves along,
And heavy hums a drowsy song.
O! drowsy may the monster lye,
And instant slumbers seal his eye!
So shalt thou, best belov'd, escape
The horrors of a legal rape.

Or, should the brutish instinct goad,
And thou must bear th' unwelcome load;
If struggle, pray'r, pretence be vain,
To shun what tyrant-laws ordain;
Ah! sparing deal out scanty dues,
And keep whate'er thou canst refuse!
Ah! give no bounding pulse to beat,
No cheek to glow with genial heat!
No breast to heave in am'rous play,
No limbs to twine, no hands to stray;
But sluggish press the joyless bed,
And lye in cold indiffer'nce dead:
Nor let the blasting spoiler sip
The fragrance of thy balmy lip!
To share with him the lover's part,
Were rank adultery of the heart.

But if, in chastier love's despite,
Warm nature catch the known delight;
While fierce desires tumultuous rise,
And rapture melts thy closing eyes;
Ah! be those joys for me design'd,
And let me rush upon thy mind!

To
To me the burning kiss impart,
On me impress the humid dart,
For me unlock the nectar’d store,
Then sigh, and dream the transport o’er!

Thus with her lov’d idea fraught,
Delusive fancy charms my thought;
And joining in the flattering cheat,
Willing I hug the dear deceit;
From fiction real bliss receive,
And all I fondly wish believe;
Nor envy to a husband’s arms,
The dull fruition of her charms.

But when, regardless of my truth,
She smiles on some more favour’d youth;
And while he whispers in her ears,
With more than wonted pleasure hears;
My jealous thought his voice supplies,
And reads perdition in her eyes.
Then torn with envy, love, and hate,
I wish her with her wedded mate.
An INSCRIPTION on the Tomb,

Raised to the memory of the Author's father, and of others
his ancestors.

By the Same.

Unmark'd by trophies of the great and vain,
Here sleeps in silent tombs a gentle train.
No folly wasted their paternal store,
No guilt, no fordid avrice made it more;
With honest fame, and sober plenty crown'd,
They liv'd and spread their cheering influence round.
May he whose hand this pious tribute pays,
Receive a like return of filial praise!

EPIGRAMS.

By the Same.

EPIGRAM I.

I
Lov'd thee beautiful and kind,
And plighted an eternal vow;
So alter'd are thy face and mind,
’Twere perjury to love thee now.

EPIGRAM
(235)

E P I G R A M II.
Since first you knew my am'rous smart,
Each day augments your proud disdain;
'Twas then enough to break my heart,
And now, thank heav'n! to break my chain.
Cease, thou scorn' r, cease to shun me!
Now let love and hatred cease!
Half that rigour had undone me,
All that rigour gives me peace.

E P I G R A M III.
My heart still hovering round about you,
I thought I could not live without you;
Now we have liv'd three months asunder,
How I liv'd with you is the wonder.

E P I G R A M IV.
Upon the Bust of English worthies, at Stow.
Among these chief of British race,
Who live in breathing stone,
Why has not Cobham's bust a place?
The structure was his own.

E P I G R A M V.
Tho' cheerful, discreet, and with freedom well bred,
She never repented an idle word said:
Securely she smiles on the forward and bold,
They feel what they owe her, and feel it untold.

E P I G R A M
(236)

E P I G R A M VI.

LyE on! while my revenge shall be,
To speak the very truth of thee.

E P I G R A M VII.

I swore I lov'd, and you believ'd,
Yet, trust me, we were both deceiv'd;
Though all I swore, was true.
I lov'd one gen'rous, good, and kind,
A form created in my mind;
And thought that form was you.

E P I G R A M VIII.

On Mrs. Penelope.

The gentle Pen with look demure,
Awhile was thought a virgin pure:
But Pen, as ancient poets say,
Undid by night the work of day.

E P I G R A M IX.

On one who first abused, and then made love to a Lady.

Foul — with graceless verse,
The noble — dar'd asperse.
But when he saw her well bespatter'd,
Her reputation stain'd and tatter'd;
EPIGRAM X.

WHILE Lucy, chaste as mountain snows,
   Gives every idle sop a hearing;
In Mary's breast a passion glows,
   Which stronger is from not appearing.
Say, who has chose the better part!
   Mary to whom no joy is missing;
Or she, who dupe to her own heart,
   Pays the full price of Mary's kissing.

EPIGRAM XI.

SHE who in secret yields her heart,
   Again may claim it from her lover;
But she who plays the trifler's part,
   Can ne'er her squander'd fame recover.
Then grant the boon for which I pray!
   'Tis better lend than throw away.

EPIGRAM XII.

WE thought you without titles great,
   And wealthy with a small estate;
While by your humble self alone,
   You seem'd unrated and unknown.

   But
But now on fortune's swelling tide
High-borne, in all the pomp of pride;
Of grandeur vain, and fond of pelf,
'Tis plain, my lord, you knew yourself.

Epigram XIII.

Ovely shines thy wedded fair,
Gentle as the yielding air;
Cheering as the solar beam,
Soothing as the fountain-stream.

Why then, jealous husband, rail?
All may breathe the ambient gale,
Bask in heaven's diffusive ray,
Drink the streams that pass away.

All may share unfe'ning joy,
Why then jealous, peevish boy?
Water, air, and light confine,
Ere thou think'st her only thine.

Epigram XIV.

Tom thought a wild profusion great:
And therefore spent his whole estate:
Will thinks the wealthy are ador'd,
And gleans what misers blush to hoard.
Their passion, merit, fate the fame,
They thirst and starve alike for fame.
EPIGRAM XV.

To Clarissa.

Why like a tyrant wilt thou reign,
When thou mayst rule the willing mind?
Can the poor pride of giving pain
Repay the joys that wait the kind?
I curse my fond enduring heart,
Which scorn'd presumes not to be free,
Condemn'd to feel a double smart,
To hate myself, and burn for thee.

EPIGRAM XVI.

Ever busy'd, ne'er employ'd,
Ever loving, ne'er enjoy'd,
Ever doom'd to seek and miss,
And pay unblest'd the price of bliss.

EPIGRAM XVII.

Vainly hath heaven denounced'd the woman's woes,
Thou know'st no tender cares, no bitter throes,
Unfelt your offspring comes, unfelt it goes.
The Danger of Writing Verse.

An Epistle.

First printed in the Year 1741.

By William Whitehead, Esq;

Quae poterant unquam satisfacere cicuta,
Ni melius dormire putem, quam scribere veris?

Hor. Ep. 2. Lib. 2.

You ask me, sir, why thus by phantoms aw'd,
No kind occasion tempts the Muse abroad?
Why, when retirement doth this idle art,
To fame regardless sleepeth the youthful heart?
'Twould wrong your judgment, should I fairly say
Distrust or weakness caus'd the cold delay:
Hint the small difference, 'till we touch the lyre,
'Twixt real genius and too strong desire;
The human slips, or seeming slips pretend,
That rouze the critic, but escape the friend;
Nay which, though dreadful when the foe pursues
You pass, and smile, and still provoke the Muse.
Yet, spite of all you think, or kindly feign,
My hand will tremble while it grasps the pen.
For not in this, like other arts, we try
Our light excursions in a summer sky,
No casual flights the dangerous trade admits;
But wits once authors, are for ever wits.
The fool in prose, like earth's unwieldy son,
May oft rise vig'rous, though he's oft o'erthrown;
One dangerous crisis marks our rise or fall,
By all we're courted, or we're shun'd by all.
Will it avail, that unmatur'd by years,
My easy numbers please'd your partial ears,
If now condemn'd, my riper lays must bear
The wise man's censure, and the vain man's sneer?
Or, still more hard, ev'n where he's valu'd most,
The man must suffer if the poet's lost;
For wanting wit, be totally undone,
And barr'd all arts for having fail'd in one.
When fears like these his serious thoughts engage,
No bugbear phantom curbs the poet's rage.
'Tis powerful reason holds the strowghten'd rein,
While flutt'ring fancy to the distant plain
Sends a long look, and spreads her wings in vain.

But grant for once, th' officious Muse has shed
Her gentlest influence on his infant head,
Let fears lie vanquish'd, and resounding Fame
Give to the bellowing blast the poet's name.
And see! distinguishing'd from the crowd he moves,
Each finger marks him, and each eye approves!
Secure, as halcyons brooding o'er the deep,
The waves roll gently, and the thunders sleep,
Obsequious nature binds the tempest's wings,
And pleas'd attention listens whilst he sings!
O blissful state, O more than human joy!
What shafts can reach him, or what cares annoy?
What cares, my friend? why all that man can know,
Oppress'd with real or with fancy'd woe.
Rude to the world, like earth's first lord expell'd,
To climes unknown, from Eden's safer field;
No more eternal springs around him breathe,
Black air scowls o'er him, deadly damps beneath;
Now must he learn, misguided youth, to bear
Each varying season of the poet's year:
Flattery's full beam, detraction's wintry store,
The frowns of fortune, or the pride of pow'r.
His acts, his words, his thoughts no more his own,
Each folly blazon'd, and each frailty known.
Is he reserv'd?—his sense is so refin'd,
It ne'er descends to trifle with mankind.
Open and free?—they find the secret cause
Is vanity; He courts the world's applause.
Nay, though he speak not, something still is seen,
Each change of face betrays a fault within.
If grave, 'tis spleen; he smiles but to deride;
And downright awkwardness in him is pride.
Thus must he steer through fame's uncertain seas,
Now sunk by censure, and now puff'd by praise;
Contempt with envy strangely mix'd endure,
Fear'd where cares'd, and jealous though secure.
One fatal rock on which good authors split
Is thinking all mankind must like their wit;
And the grand business of the world stand still
To listen to the dictates of their quill.
Hurt if they fail, and yet how few succeed!
What's born in leisure men of leisure read;
And half of those have some peculiar whim
Their test of sense, and read but to condemn.

Besides, on parties now our fame depends,
And frowns or smiles, as these are foes or friends.
Wit, judgment, nature join; you strive in vain;
'Tis keen invective stamps the current strain.
Fix'd to one side like Homer's gods, we fight,
These always wrong, and those for ever right.
And would you choose to see your friend, resign'd
Each conscious tie which guides the virtuous mind,
Embroid'd in factions, hurl with dreadful skill
The random vengeance of his desp'rate quill?
*Gainst pride in man with equal pride declaim,
And hide ill-nature under virtue's name?
Or deeply vers'd in flattery's wily ways,
Flow in full reams of undistinguish'd praise?
To vice's grave, or folly's bust bequeath
The blushing trophy, and indignant wreath?
* Like Ægypt's priests, did endless temples rise,
And people with earth's pests th' offended skies?

* Qui nec sit quaestum demens

Ægyptus portenta colat Æ crocodilum adorat.

Juv. Sat. 15. The
The Muse of old her native freedom knew,
And wild in air the sportive wand’rer flew;
On worth alone her bays eternal strow’d,
And found the hero, ere she hymn’d the god.
Nor left the chief his kind support return’d,
No drooping Muse her slighted labours mourn’d;
But stretch’d at ease she prun’d her growing wings,
By sages honour’d and rever’d by kings.
Ev’n knowing Greece confess’d her early claim,
And warlike Latium caught the gen’rous flame.
Not so our age regards the tuneful tongue,
’Tis senseless rapture all, and empty song:
No Pollio sheds his genial influence round,
No Varus listens whilst the groves resound.
Ev’n those, the knowing and the virtuous few,
Who noblest ends by noblest means pursue,
Forget the poet’s use; the powerful spell
Of magic verse, which Sidney paints so well,
Forget that Homer wak’d the Grecian flame,
That Pindar round inglorious Thebes to fame,
That every age has great examples given
Of virtue taught in verse, and verse inspir’d by heaven.
But I forbear—these dreams no longer last,
The times of fable and of flights are past.
To glory now no laurel’d suppliants bend,
No coins are struck, no sacred domes ascend.
Yet ye, who still the Muse’s charms admire,
And best deserve the verse your deeds inspire.

Ev’n
Ev’n in these gainful unambitious days,
Feel for yourselves at least, ye fond of praise,
And learn one lesson taught in mystic rhyme,
“'Tis verse alone arrests the wings of Time.”

b Faft to the thread of life, annex’d by Fame,
A sculptur’d medal bears each human name,
O’er Lethe’s streams the fatal threads depend,
The glitt’ring medal trembles as they bend;
Close but the shears, when chance or nature calls,
The birds of rumour catch it as it falls;
Awhile from bill to bill the trifle’s tost,
The waves receive it, and 'tis ever lost!

But should the meanest swan that cuts the stream
Consign’d to Phæbus, catch the favour’d name,
Safe in her mouth she bears the sacred prize
To where bright Fame’s eternal altars rise.
'Tis there the Muse’s friends true laurels wear,
There c Ægypt’s monarch reigns, and great Augustus there.

Patrons of arts must live ’till arts decay,
Sacred to verse in every poet’s lay.
Thus grateful France does Richlieu’s worth proclaim,
Thus grateful Britain doats on Somer’s name.
And, spite of party rage, and human flaws,
And British liberty and British laws,

b Bacon de augmentis.
c Pythoemy Philadelphus.
Times yet to come shall sing of Anna's reign,
And bards, who blame the measures, love the men.
But why round patrons climb th' ambitious bays?
Is interest then the sordid spur to praise?
Shall the same cause, which prompts the chattering jay
To aim at words, inspire the poet's lay?
And is there nothing in the boasted claim
Of living labours and a deathless name?
The pictur'd front, with sacred fillets bound?
The sculptur'd bust with laurels wreath'd around?
The annual roses scatter'd o'er his urn,
And tears to flow from poets yet unborn?

Illustrious all! but sure to merit these,
Demands at least the poet's learned ease.
Say, can the bard attempt what's truly great,
Who pants in secret for his future fate?
Him serious toils, and humbler arts engage,
To make youth easy, and provide for age;
While loft in silence hangs his useless lyre,
And though from heav'n it came, fast dies the sacred fire.
Or grant true genius with superior force
Bursts every bond, resists in its course,
Yet lives the man, how wild soever his aim,
Would madly barter fortune's smiles for fame!
Or distant hopes of future ease forego,
For all the wreaths that all the Nine bestow?

* Persius.
Well pleas’d to shine, through each recording page,
The hapless Dryden of a shameless age?
Ill-fated bard! where-e’er thy name appears,
The weeping verse a sad memento bears.
Ah! what avail’d th’ enormous blaze between
Thy dawn of glory, and thy closing scene!
When sinking nature asks our kind repairs,
Unstrung the nerves, and silver’d o’er the hairs;
When stay’d reflection comes uncall’d at last,
And grey experience counts each folly past,
Untun’d and harsh the sweetest trains appear,
And loudest Pæans but fatigue the ear.
’Tis true the man of verse, though born to ills,
Too oft deserves the very fate he feels.
When, vainly frequent at the great man’s board,
He shares in every vice with every lord:
Makes to their taste his sober sense submit,
And ’gainst his reason madly arms his wit;
Heav’n but in justice turns their serious heart
To scorn the wretch, whose life belies his art.
He, only he, should haunt the Muse’s grove,
Whom youth might rev’rence and grey hairs approve;
Whose heav’n-taught numbers, now, in thunder roll’d,
Might rouse the virtuous and appal the bold.
Now, to truth’s dictates lend the grace of ease,
And teach instruction happier arts to please.
For him would Plato change their gen’ral fate,
And own one poet might improve his state.
Curs'd be their verse, and blasted all their bays,
Whose sensual lure th' unconscious ear betrays;
Wounds the young breast, ere virtue spreads her shield,
And takes, not wins, the scarce disputed field,
Though specious rhetoric each loose thought refine,
Though music charm in every labour'd line,
The dangerous verse, to full perfection grown,
Bavius might blush, and Quarles disdain to own.

Should some Machaon, whose sagacious soul
Trac'd blushing nature to her inmost goal,
Skill'd in each drug the varying world provides,
All earth embosoms, and all ocean hides,
Nor cooling herb, nor healing balm supply,
Ease the swoln breast, or close the languid eye;
But, exquisitely ill, awake disease,
And arm with poisons every baleful breeze:
What racks, what tortures must his crimes demand,
The more than Borgia of a bleeding land!
And is less guilty he, whose shameless page
Not to the present bounds its subtle rage,
But spreads contagion wide, and stains a future age?

Forgive me, Sir, that thus the moral strain,
With indignation warm'd, rejects the rein;
Nor think I rove regardless of my theme,
'Tis hence new dangers clog the paths to fame.
Not to themselves alone such bards confine
Fame's just reproach for virtue's injur'd shrine;

Profan'd
Profan’d by them, the Muse’s laurels fade,
Her voice neglected, and her flame decay’d.
And the son’s son must feel the father’s crime,
A curse entail’d on all the race that rhyme.

New cares appear, new terrors swell the train,
And must we paint them ere we close the scene?
Say, must the Muse th’ unwilling task pursue,
And to compleat her dangers mention you?
Yes you, my friend, and those whose kind regard
With partial fondness views this humble bard:
Ev’n you he dreads.—Ah! kindly cease to raise
Unwilling censure, by exacting praise.
Just to itself the jealous world will claim
A right to judge; or give, or cancel fame.
And, if th’ officious zeal unbounded flows,
The friend too partial is the worst of foes.

* Behold th’ Athenian sage, whose piercing mind
Had trac’d the wily lab’rinths of mankind,
When now condemn’d, he leaves his infant care
To all these evils man is born to bear.
Not to his friends alone the charge he yields,
But nobler hopes on juster motives builds;
Bids ev’n his foes their future steps attend,
And dare to censure, if they dar’d offend.
Would thus the poet trust his offspring forth,
Or bloom’d our Britain with Athenian worth:

* Platonis Apologia,
Would the brave foe th' imperfect work engage
With honest freedom, not with partial rage,
What just productions might the world surprise!
What other Popes, what other Mars rise!

But since by foes, or friends alike deceiv'd,
Too little those, and these too much believ'd;
Since the same fate pursues by diff'rent ways,
Undone by censure, or undone by praise;
Since bards themselves submit to vice's rule,
And party-feuds grow high, and patrons cool:
Since, still unnam'd, unnumber'd ills behind
Rise black in air, and only wait the wind:
Let me, O let me, ere the tempest roar,
Catch the first gale, and make the nearest shore;
In sacred silence join th' inglorious train,
Where humble peace, and sweet contentment reign;
If not thy precepts, thy example own,
And steal through life not uselessly, though unknown.
To the Honourable ***

By the Same.

O CHARLES, in absence hear a friend complain,
Who knows thou lov'st him wherefo're he goes,
Yet feels uneas'ly starts of idle pain,
And often would be told the thing he knows.
Why then, thou loiterer, fleets the sil'ent year,
How dar'st thou give a friend unnecessary fear?

We are not now beside that oisier'd stream,
Where erst we wander'd, thoughtless of the way:
We do not now of distant ages dream,
And cheat in converse half the ling'ring day;
No fancied heroes rise at our command,
And no TIMOLEON weeps, and bleeds no THEBAN band.

Yet why complain? thou feel'st no want like these,
From me, 'tis true, but me alone debar'd,
Thou still in GRANTA's shades enjoy'st at ease
The books we reverenc'd, and the friends we shar'd;
Nor see'st without such aids the day decline,
Nor think'st how much their loss has added weight to thine.
Truth's genuine voice, the freely-opening mind,
    Are thine, are friendship's, and retirement's lot;
To conversation is the world confin'd,
    Friends of an hour, who please and are forgot;
And interest stains, and vanity controls
The pure unfurled thoughts, and fallies of our souls.

O I remember, and with pride repeat
    The rapid progress which our friendship knew!
Even at the first with willing minds we met,
    And ere the root was fix'd the branches grew,
In vain had fortune plac'd her weak barrier,
Clear was thy breast from pride, and mine from servile fear.

I saw thee gen'rous, and with joy can say,
    My education rose above my birth,
Thanks to those parent shades, on whose cold clay
    Fall fast my tears, and lightly lie the earth!
To them I owe whate'er I dare pretend,
Thou saw'st with partial eyes, and bade me call thee friend.

Let others meanly heap the treasure'd store,
    And awkward fondness cares on cares employ
To leave a race more exquisitely poor,
    Possess'd of riches which they ne'er enjoy:
He's only kind who takes the noble way
T' unbind the springs of thought, and give them pow'r to play.

His
His heirs shall blest him, and look down with scorn
On vulgar pride from vaunted heroes sprung;
Lords of themselves, thank heaven that they were born
Above the sordid miser's glitt'ring dung,
Above the servile grandeur of a throne,
For they are Nature's heirs, and all her works their own.

To Mr. GARRICK.

By the Same.

On old PARNASSUS, t'other day,
The Muses met to sing and play;
Apart from all the rest were seen
The tragic and the comic queen,
Engag'd, perhaps, in deep debate,
On RICH's, or on FLEETWOOD's fate.
When, on a sudden, news was brought
That GARRICK had the patent got,
And both their ladyships again
Might now return to Drury-lane.
They bow'd, they simper'd, and agreed
They wish'd the project might succeed,
'Twas very possible, the case
Was likely too, and had a face—
A face! THALIA titt'ring cry'd,
And could her joy no longer hide;
Why sitter, all the world must see
How much this makes for you and me:
No longer now shall we expose
Our unbought goods to empty rows,
Or meanly be oblig'd to court
From foreign aid a weak support;
No more the poor polluted scene
Shall teem with births of Harlequin;
Or vindicated stage shall feel
The insults of the dancer's heel.
Such idle trash we'll kindly spare
To operas now—they'll want them there;
For Sadler's- Wells, they say; this year
Has quite undone their engineer.

Pugh, you're a wag, the buxkin'd prude
Reply'd, and smil'd; besides 'tis rude
To laugh at foreigners, you know,
And triumph o'er a vanquish'd foe:
For my part, I shall be content
If things succeed as they are meant;
And should not be displeas'd to find
Some changes of the tragic kind.

And say, Thalia, may'n't we hope
The stage will take a larger scope?
Shall he whose all-expressive powers
Can reach the heights that Shakespeare soars,
Descend to touch an humbler key,
And tickle ears with poetry;

Where
Where every tear is taught to flow
Through many a line's melodious woe,
And heart-felt pangs of deep distress
Are fritter'd into similes?
— O thou, whom nature taught the art
To pierce, to cleave, to tear the heart,
Whatever name delight thine ear,
Othello, Richard, Hamlet, Lear,
O undertake my just defence,
And banish all but nature hence!
See, to thy aid with streaming eyes
The fair afflicted Constance flies;
Now wild as winds in madness tears
Her heaving breasts and scatter'd hairs;
Or low on earth disdains relief,
With all the conscious pride of grief.
My Pritchard too in Hamlet's queen—
The goddes of the sportive vein
Here stop'd her short, and with a sneer,
My Pritchard, if you please, my dear!
Her tragic merit I confess,
But surely mine's her proper dress;
Behold her there with native ease,
And native spirit, born to please;
With all Maria's charms engage,
Or Milwood's arts, or Touchwood's rage,
Through every foible trace the fair,
Or leave the town, and toilet's ease.

* Mrs. Cibber.
To chant in forests unconfin'd
The wilder notes of Rosalind.
O thou, where-e'er thou fix thy praise,
Brute, Drugger, Friible, Ranger, Bays!
O join with her in my behalf,
And teach an audience when to laugh.
So shall buffoons with shame repair
To draw in fools at Smithfield fair,
And real humour charm the age,
Though Falstaff should forfake the stage.

She spoke. Melpomene reply'd,
And much was said on either side;
And many a chief, and many a fair,
Were mention'd to their credit there.
But I'll not venture to display
What goddesses think fit to say.
However, Garrick, this at least
Appears, by both a truth confess'd,
That their whole fate for many a year
But hangs on your paternal care.
A nation's taste depends on you
—Perhaps a nation's virtue too.
O think how glorious 'twere to raise
A theatre to virtue's praise.
Where no indignant blush might rise,
Nor wit be taught to plead for vice:
But every young attentive ear
Imbibe the precepts, living there.

† Mr. Quin, inimitable in that character, who was then leaving the stage.
And every unexperienc'd breast
There feel its own rude hints express'd,
And, waken'd by the glowing scene,
Unfold the'worth that lurks within.
   If possible, be perfect quite;
A few short rules will guide you right.
Consult your own good sense in all,
Be deaf to fashion's fickle call,
Nor e'er descend from reason's laws
To court what you command, applause.

NATURE to Dr. HOADLY,
On his Comedy of the SUSPICIOUS HUSBAND.

By the Same.

SLY hypocrite! was this your aim?
To borrow Pæon's sacred name,
And lurk beneath his graver mien,
To trace the secrets of my reign?
Did I for this applaud your zeal,
And point out each minuter wheel,
Which finely taught the next to roll,
And made my works one perfect whole?
For who, but I, 'till you appear'd
To model the dramatic herd,
E'er bade to wond'ring ears and eyes,
Such pleasing intricacies rise?
Where every part is nicely true,
Yet touches still some master clue;
Each riddle opening by degrees,
'Till all unravels with such ease,
That only those who will be blind
Can feel one doubt perplex their mind.

Nor was't enough, you thought, to write,
But you must impiously unite
With Garrick too, who long before
Had stole my whole expressive pow'r.
That changeful Proteus of the stage
Usurps my mirth, my grief, my rage;
And as his different parts incline,
Gives joys or pains, sincere as mine.

Yet you shall find (howe'er elate
You triumph in your former cheat)
'Tis not so easy to escape
In Nature's as in Pæon's shape.
For every critic, great or small,
Hates every thing that's natural.
The beaus, and ladies too, can say,
What does he mean? is this a play?
We see such people every day.
Nay more, to chafe, and tease your spleen,
And teach you how to steal again,
My very fools shall prove you're fit,
And damn you for your want of wit.

The
The Youth and the Philosopher.

A F A B L E.

By the Same.

A Grecian Youth, of talents rare,
Whom Plato's philosophic care
Had form'd for virtue's nobler view,
By precept and example too,
Would often boast his matchless skill,
To curb the steed, and guide the wheel.
And as he pass'd the gazing throng,
With graceful ease, and smack'd the thong,
The idioct wonder they express'd
Was praise and transport to his breast.

At length quite vain, he needs would shew
His master what his art could do;
And bade his slaves the chariot lead
To Academus' sacred shade.
The trembling grove confess'd its fright,
The wood-nymphs startle'd at the sight,
The Muses drop the learned lyre,
And to their inmost shades retire!

Howe'er, the youth with forward air,
Bows to the sage, and mounts the car,
The lash resounds, the courser springs,
The chariot marks the rolling ring,
And gather’ring crowds with eager eyes,
And shouts, pursue him as he flies.

Triumphant to the goal return’d,
With nobler thirst his bosom burn’d;
And now along th’ indented plain,
The self-same track he marks again,
Pursues with care the nice design,
Nor ever deviates from the line.

Amazement seiz’d the circling crowd;
The youths with emulation glow’d;
Ev’n bearded sages hail’d the boy,
And all, but Plato, gaz’d with joy.
For he, deep-judging sage, beheld
With pain the triumphs of the field:
And when the charioteer drew nigh,
And, flush’d with hope, had caught his eye,
Alas! unhappy youth, he cry’d,
Expect no praise from me, (and sigh’d)
With indignation I survey
Such skill and judgment thrown away.
The time profusely squander’d there,
On vulgar arts beneath thy care,
If well employ’d, at less expense,
Had taught thee honour, virtue, sense,
And rais’d thee from a coachman’s fate
To govern men, and guide the state.
An ODE to a GENTLEMAN,
On his pitching a Tent in his GARDEN.

By the Same.

A H! friend, forbear, nor fright the fields
With hostile scenes of imag’d war;
Content still roves the blooming wilds,
And sheds her mildest influence there:
Ah! drive not the sweet wand’rer from her seat,
Nor with rude arts profane her latest best retreat.

Are there not bowers, and sylvan scenes,
By nature’s kind luxuriance wove?
Has Romely lost the living greens
Which erst adorn’d her artless grove?
Where through each hallow’d haunt the poet stray’d,
And met the willing Muse, and peopled every shade.

But now no bards thy woods among,
Shall wait th’ inspiring Muse’s call;
For though to mirth and festal song
Thy choice devotes the woven wall,
Yet what avails that all be peace within,
If horrors guard the gate, and scare us from the scene?

’Tis true of old the patriarch spread
His happier tents which knew not war,
And chang’d at will the trampled mead
For frether greens and purer air;

But
But long has man forgot such simple ways,
Truth unsuspecting harm!—the dream of ancient days.

Ev'n he, cut off from human kind,
(Thy neighb'ring wretch) the child of Care,
Who, to his native mines confin'd,
Nor sees the sun, nor breathes the air,
But 'midst the damps and darkness of earth's womb
Dragg'd out laborious life, and scarcely dreads the tomb;

Ev'n he, should some indulgent chance
Transport him to thy sylvan reign,
Would eye the floating veil askance,
And hide him in his caves again,
While dire presage in every breeze that blows
Hears shrieks and clashing arms, and all Germany's woes.

And doubt not thy polluted taste
A sudden vengeance shall pursue;
Each fairy form we whilom trac'd
Along the morn or evening dew,
Nymph, Satyr, Faun, shall vindicate their grove,
Robb'd of its genuine charms, and hospitable Jove.

I see, all-arm'd with dews unblest,
Keen frosts, and noisome vapours drear,
Already, from the bleak north-east,
The Genius of the wood appear!

—Far
Far other office once his prime delight,
To nurse thy saplings tall, and heal the harms of night,

With ringlets quaint to curl thy shade,
   To bid the insect tribes retire,
To guard thy walks and not invade——
   O wherefore then provoke his ire?
Alas! with prayers, with tears his rage repel,
While yet the red'ning shoots with embryo-blossoms swell.

Too late thou'lt weep, when blights deform
   The fairest produce of the year;
Too late thou'lt weep, when every storm
   Shall loudly thunder in thy ear,
   "Thus, thus the green-hair'd deities maintain
   "Their own eternal rights, and Nature's injur'd reign."

On a Message - Card in Verse,
Sent by a Lady.

By the Same.

HERMES, the gamester of the sky,
To share for once mankind's delights,
Slip'd down to earth, exceeding fly,
   And bade his coachman drive to White's.
In form a beau; so light he trips,
   You'd swear his wings were at his heels;
From glass to glass alert he skips,
   And bows and prattles while he deals.
In short, so well his part he play'd,
The waiters took him for a peer;
And ev'n some great ones whisp'ring said
He was no vulgar foreigner.
Whate'er he was, he swept the board,
Won every beat and every game;
Stript even the Rooks, who stampt and roar'd,
And wonder'd how the devil it came!
He wonder'd too, and thought it hard;
But found at last this great command
Was owing to one fav'rite card,
Which still brought luck into his hand.
The four of spades; when'er he saw
Its fable spots, he laugh'd at rules,
Took odds beyond the gaming law,
And Hoyle and Philidor were fools.
But now, for now 'twas time to go,
What gratitude shall he express?
And what peculiar boon bestow
Upon the cause of his success?
Suppose, for something must be done,
On Juno's self he could prevail
To pick the pips out, one by one,
And stick them in her peacock's tail.
Should Pallas have it, was a doubt,
To twift her filk, or range her pins;
Or should the Muses cut it out,
For bridges to their violins.

To
To Venus should the prize be given,
Superior beauty's just reward,
And 'gainst the next great rout in heaven
Be sent her for a message card.
Or hold—by Jove, a lucky hit!
Your goddesses are arrant farces;
Go, carry it to Mrs. —
And bid her fill it full of verses.

The Je ne scai Quoi. A SONG.

By the Same.

I.

YE S, I'm in love, I feel it now,
And Cælia has undone me;
And yet I'll swear I can't tell how
The pleasing plague stole on me.

II.

'Tis not her face which love creates,
For there no graces revel;
'Tis not her shape, for there the fates
Have rather been uncivil.

III.

'Tis not her air, for sure in that
There's nothing more than common;
And all her sense is only chat,
Like any other woman.

IV. Her
IV.

Her voice, her touch might give th’ alarm—
’Twas both perhaps, or neither;
In short, ’twas that provoking charm
Of Cælia altogether.

An ODE
On a distant Prospect of
ETON COLLEGE.

By Mr. Gray.

Ye distant spires, ye antique towers,
That crown the wat’ry glade,
Where grateful science still adores
Her Henry’s holy shade;
And ye that from the stately brow
Of Windsor’s heights th’ expanse below
Of grove, of lawn, of mead survey,
Whose turf, whose shade, whose flowers among
Wanders the hoary Thames along
His silver-winding way.

Ah happy hills, ah pleasing shade,
Ah fields belov’d in vain,
Where once my careless childhood stray’d,
A stranger yet to pain!
I feel the gales, that from ye blow,
A momentary bliss below,
As waving fresh their gladsome wing,
My weary soul they seem to soothe,
And, redolent of joy and youth,
To breathe a second spring.

Say, father Thames, for thou hast seen
Full many a sprightly race
Disporting on thy margent green,
The paths of pleasure trace,
Who foremost now delight to cleave
With pliant arms thy glasy wave?
The captive linnet which enthrall?
What idle progeny succeed
To chase the rolling circle's speed,
Or urge the flying ball?

While some on earnest business bent
Their murm'ring labours ply,
'Gainst graver hours, that bring constraint
To sweeten liberty:
Some bold adventurers disdain
The limits of their little reign,
And unknown regions dare descry:
Still as they run, they look behind,
They hear a voice in every wind,
And snatch a fearful joy.

Gay hope is theirs by fancy fed,
Lest pleasing when possess'd;
The tear forgot as soon as shed,
The sun-shine of the breast.

Theirs
Theirs buxom health of rosy hue,
Wild wit, invention ever-new,
And lively cheer of vigour born;
The thoughtless day, the easy night,
The spirits pure, the slumbers light,
That fly th' approach of morn.

Alas, regardless of their doom,
The little victims play!
No sense have they of ills to come,
No care beyond to day:
Yet see how all around 'em wait
The ministers of human fate,
And black misfortune's baleful train!
Ah! shew them where in ambush stand,
'To seize their prey the murth'rous band,
Ah! shew them they are men!

These shall the fury passions tear,
The vultures of the mind,
Disdainful anger, pallid fear,
And shame that sculks behind;
Or pineing love shall waste their youth,
Or jealousy with rankling tooth,
That inly gnaws the secret heart,
And envy wan, and faded care,
Grim-vifag'd comfortless despair,
And sorrow's piercing dart.

Ambition this shall tempt to rise,
Then whirl the wretch from high,
To bitter scorn a sacrifice,
And grinning infamy;
The stings of falsehood those shall try,
And hard unkindness alter'd eye,
That mocks the tear it forc'd to flow;
And keen remorse with blood defil'd,
And moody madness laughing wild
Amidst severest woe.

Lo, in the vale of years beneath,
A grievously troop are seen,
The painful family of death,
More hideous than their queen:
This racks the joints, this fires the veins,
That every lab'ring finew strains,
Those in the deeper vitals rage:
Lo, poverty, to fill the band,
That numbs the soul with icy hand,
And slow-consuming age.

To each his suff'ring: all are men,
Condemn'd alike to groan,
The tender for another's pain;
Th' unfeeling for his own.
Yet ah! why should they know their fate?
Since sorrow never comes too late,
And happiness too swiftly flies.
Thought would destroy their paradise.
No more; where ignorance is bliss,
'Tis folly to be wise.

ODE.
ODE.

By the Same.

I.

LO! where the rosy-boom'd hours,
Fair Venus' train appear,
Disclose the long-expecting flowers,
And wake the purple year!
The Attic warbler pours her throat
Responsive to the cuckow's note,
The untaught harmony of spring:
While whisp'ring pleasure as they fly,
Cool Zephyrs through the clear blue sky
Their gather'd fragrance fling.

II.

Where'er the oak's thick branches stretch
A broader browner shade;
Where'er the rude and moss-green beech
O'er-canopies the glade;
Beside some water's rushy brink
With me the Muse shall sit and think
(At ease reclin'd in rustic state)
How vain the ardour of the crowd,
How low, how indigent the proud,
How little are the great!

III. Still
III.
Still is the toiling hand of care:
The panting herds repose:
Yet hark, how through the peopled air
The busy murmur glows!
The insect youth are on the wing,
Eager to taste the honied spring,
And float amid the liquid noon:
Some lightly o'er the current skim,
Some shew their gayly-gilded trim
Quick-glancing to the sun.

IV.
To Contemplation's sober eye
Such is the race of man:
And they that creep, and they that fly,
Shall end where they began.
Alike the busy and the gay
But flutter through life's little day,
In fortune's varying colours drest:
Brush'd by the hand of rough mischance,
Or chill'd by age, their airy dance
They leave, in dust to rest.

V.
Methinks I hear in accents low
The sportive kind reply:
Poor mortal! and what art thou?
A solitary fly!

Thy
Thy joys no glittering female meets,
No hive hast thou of hoarded sweets,
No painted plumage to display:
On hasty wings thy youth is flown;
Thy sun is set, thy spring is gone—
We frolic, while 'tis May.

ODE on the Death of a Favourite Cat,
Drowned in a Tub of Gold Fishes.

By the Same.

I.

'Twas on a lofty vase's side,
Where China's gayest art had dy'd
The azure flowers, that blow;
Demurest of the Tabby kind,
The pensive Selima reclin'd,
Gaz'd on the lake below.

II.

Her conscious tail her joy declar'd;
The fair round face, the snowy beard,
The velvet of her paws,
The coat that with the tortoise vies,
Her ears of jet, and emerald eyes,
She saw; and purr'd applause.

III. Still
III.
Still had she gaz’d: but ’midst the tide
Two beauteous forms were seen to glide,
The Genii of the stream;
Their scaly armour’s Tyrian hue
Through richest purple to the view
Betray’d a golden gleam.

IV.
The hapless nymph with wonder saw:
A whisker first, and then a claw,
With many an ardent wish,
She stretch’d in vain to reach the prize.
What female heart can gold despise?
What cat’s averse to fish?

V.
Presumptuous maid! with looks intent
Again she stretch’d, again she bent,
Nor knew the gulph between;
(Malignant Fate fat by and smil’d)
The slipp’ry verge her feet beguil’d,
She tumbled headlong in.

VI.
Eight times emerging from the flood
She mew’d to every wat’ry god,
Some speedy aid to send.
No Dolphin-came, no Nereid stirr’d:
Nor cruel Tom, nor Susan heard.
A fav’rite has no friend!
(274)

VII.
From hence, ye beauties undeceiv'd,
Know, one false step is ne'er retriev'd,
And be with caution bold.
Not all that tempts your wand'ring eyes
And heedless hearts, is lawful prize;
Nor all, that glitters, gold.

A MONODY
Or the Death of Queen CAROLINE.

By Richard West, Esq; Son to the Chancellor of Ireland, and Grandson to Bishop Burnet.

I.

Sing we no more of hymeneal lays,
Nor strew the land with myrtles and with bays:
The voice of joy is fled the British shore,
For Caroline's no more:
And now our sorrows ask a sadder string;
Come, plaintive goddess of the Cyrrhan spring,
Pour thy deep note, and shed thy tuneful tear,
And, while we lose the memory of pain
In thy oblivious strain,
—Ah! drop thy cypress on yon mournful bier!
Begin: nor more delay
The sacred meed of gratitude to pay:
Begin: whate'er immortal song can do,
To the dear name of Caroline is due:
Who loves the Muse, deserves the Muse's love:
Then raise thy numbers high,
Sound out her glory to the throne of Jove,
Spread the glad voice through all the ambient sky,
From the dull marble vindicate her praise,
And waft it down to lighten future days.

II.

Ye bards to come, the song of truth attend:
This, this is she, the Muse's judge and friend!
The royal female! whose benignant hand
Throughout fair Albion's land
Dealt every useful, every decent part,
Each Memphian science, and each Attic art;
Within the Muse's bower
She oft was wont to lose the vacant hour,
Or underneath the sapient grot reclin'd,
Her soul to contemplation she resign'd,
And for awhile laid down
The painful, envied burthen of a crown:
Mean time thy rural ditty was not mute,
Sweet bard of Merlin's cave!
Though rude, thy ditty was of her, who gave
Thy voice to sing, and tun'd thy oaten flute.
In strains unwonted to the ear of swain:
As when the lark, ambitious of the skies,
Quits the low harvest of the golden plain,
Taught by the sun's inspiring warmth to rise,
Sublime in air he spreads his dappled wings,
Mounts the blue æther, and in mounting sings.

III.

But whither wanders the licentious song?
Such joyous notes to happier days belong!
Ah me! our happier days are now no more:
Return, sad Muse: see pale Britannia weep,
See all the sisters of the subject deep
Their sovereign's loss deplore!
See fond Ierne gives her sorrows vent,
And as she tunes her brazen lyre to woe,
Indulge her grief to flow!
See even the northern Orcaedes lament!
Nor ends the wailing here:
Where-e'er beneath our flag wild Ocean roars,
From farthest Orient to Hesperia's shores,
From torrid Africa to the world's cold end,
The British woes extend,
And every colony has dropt a tear.

IV.

O honour'd flood! with reeds Pierian crown'd,
Isis! whose argent waters glide along
Fair Belosite's Lycean shades renown'd,
Now aid my feeble song;

And
And call thy chosen sons, and bid them bring
Their lays of Dorian air,
With lenient sounds to steal awhile from care
Th' inconsolable King:
O! soothe his anguish, and compose his pains
With artful unimaginary strains,
According sweetly to the golden lyre,
Such as might half inspire
The iron breast of Hades to resign
Our loft, lov'd Caroline.

V.
These are thy glorious deeds, almighty Death!
These are thy triumphs o'er the sons of men,
That now receive the miserable breath,
Which the next moment they resign again!
Ah me! what boots us all our boasted power,
Our golden treasure, and our purpled state?
They cannot ward th' inevitable hour,
Nor stay the fearful violence of Fate:
—Virtue herself shall fail:
Else now, if virtue ever could prevail,
Death had not dar'd to violate the throne,
Nor had Britannia heard her sovereign groan.
—Ye nymphs! recall the song:
For heaven-born virtue does to heaven belong,
And scorns the meanest of her sons should die,
But opens him a passage to the sky;

S 3

Her
Her rod ay-pointing to the eternal goal,
From the brute earth she frees the ardent soul;
Swift from the vulgar herd aloft she springs,
Spurns the moist clay, and soars on azure wings.

VI.
Then hence with sorrows vain:
Ye Theban Muses! elevate the strain:
Search o'er the records of immortal fame,
And high resplendent on the female line,
Imblaze in starry characters the name
Of British Caroline:
While sacred story rings with Sheba's praise,
While Berenice's virtues still inspire
The Cyrenian lyre,
And Gloriana blooms in Spenser's lays;
Thy name, great Queen, shall glow in every page,
Shall dwell in every clime, and live in every age.
When George shall go, where William went before,
And all the present world shall be no more;
When the fond factions of unjust mankind,
The mean, the mad, the envious, and the blind,
Shall turn to worms and dust;
Then Time, impartial judge, that states the price
Of each man's virtue, and of each man's vice,
From thy bright fame shall clear the cank'ring rust;
And O! the Muses ever shall be just.

VII. But
VII.

But lo! what sudden radiance gilds the skies?
*Tis Gratitude descending from above,
Known by the sweetness of her dove-like eyes,
Daughter of truth and universal love!
To Henry's sacred dome she wafts along,
And on thy tomb she pours
Celestial sweets and aramantine flowers:
The old, the young, the rich, the wretched crowd
Numerous around her, and with accents loud
Raise the mix'd voice, and pour the grateful song:
"Hail Queen adorn'd by nature and by art!
"Thine was each virtue of the head and heart;
"Thy people blest thee, and thy children lov'd,
"And thy King honour'd, and thy God approv'd."

VIII.

But here my labours cease:
*Tis time the foaming courser to release.
And thou, O royal shade,
Forgive the Muse that those vain honours paid;
A Muse as yet unheeded and unknown;
That dares to sacrifice to truth alone,
Not prone to blame, not hasty to commend,
No foe unjust, no mercenary friend,
No sensual bosom, no ungenerous mind,
And though not virtuous, virtuously inclin'd.
A PIPE of TOBACCO:

In Imitation of Six Several Authors.

IMITATION I.

A NEW-YEAR'S ODE.

RECITATIVO.

OLD battle-array, big with horror is fled,
And olive-rob'd peace again lifts up her head.
Sing, ye Muses, TOBACCO, the blessing of peace;
Was ever a nation so blessed as this?

AIR.

When summer suns grow red with heat,
TOBACCO tempers Phæbus' ire,
When wintry storms around us beat,
TOBACCO cheers with gentle fire.

Yellow autumn, youthful spring,
In thy praises jointly sing.
Recitativo.

Like Neptune, Caesar guards Virginian fleets,
Fraught with Tobacco’s balmy sweets;
Old Ocean trembles at Britannia’s pow’r,
And Boreas is afraid to roar.

A I R.

Happy mortal! he who knows
Pleasure which a Pipe bestows;
Curling eddies climb the room,
Wafting round a mild perfume.

Recitativo.

Let foreign climes the vine and orange boast,
While wastes of war deform the teeming coast;
Britannia, distant from each hostile found,
Enjoys a Pipe, with ease and freedom crown’d;
E’en restless faction finds itself most free,
Or if a slave, a slave to liberty.

A I R.

Smiling years that gayly run
Round the zodiac with the sun,
Tell, if ever you have seen
Realms so quiet and serene.
British sons no longer now
Hurl the bar, or twang the bow,
Nor of crimson combat think,
But securely smoke and drink.
CHORUS,
Smiling years, that gayly run
Round the zodiac with the sun,
Tell, if ever you have seen
Realms so quiet and serene.

IMITATION II.

LITTLE tube of mighty pow'r,
Charmer of an idle hour,
Object of my warm desire,
Lip of wax, and eye of fire:
And thy snowy taper wait,
With my finger gently brac'd;
And thy pretty swelling crest,
With my little stopper prett,
And the sweetest bliss of blisses,
Breathing from thy balmy kisses.
Happy thrice, and thrice a'gen,
Happiest he of happy men;
Who when a'gen the night returns,
When a'gen the taper burns;
When a'gen the cricket's gay,
(Little cricket, full of play)
Can afford his tube to feed
With the fragrant INDIAN weed:
Pleasure for a nose divine,
Incense of the god of wine.
Happy thrice, and thrice a'gen,
Happiest he of happy men.
IMITATION III.

O Thou, matur'd by glad Hesperian suns,
Tobacco, fountain pure of limpid truth,
That looks the very soul; whence pouring thought
Swarms all the mind; absorpt is yellow care,
And at each puff imagination burns:
Flash on thy bard, and with exalting fires
Touch the mysterious lip that chants thy praise,
In strains to mortal sons of earth unknown.
Behold an engine, wrought from tawny mines
Of dulcile clay, with plastic virtue form'd,
And glaz'd magnific o'er, I grasp, I fill.
From Paeotere with pungent pow'rs perfum'd
Itself one tortoise, all, where shines imbib'd
Each parent ray; then rudely ram'd illume,
With the red touch of zeal-enkindling sheet,
Mark'd with Gibsonian lore; forth issue clouds,
Thought-thrilling, thirst-inciting clouds around,
And many mining fires: I all the while,
Lolling at ease, inhale the breezy balm.
But chief, when Bacchus wont with thee to join,
In genial strife and orthodoxal ale,
Stream life and joy into the Mufe's bowl.
Oh be thou still my great inspirer, thou
My Mufe; oh fan me with thy zephyrs boon,
While I, in clouded tabernacle shrin'd,
Burst forth all oracle and mystic song.

IMITA-
IMITATION IV.

CRITICS avaunt! TOBACCO is my theme;
Tremble like hornets at the blasting steam.
And you, court-insects, flutter not too near
Its light, nor buzz within the scorching sphere.
POLLIO, with flame like thine, my verse inspire,
So shall the Muse from smoke elicit fire.
Coxcombs prefer the tickling sting of snuff;
Yet all their claim to wisdom is—a puff:
Lord FOPEN smokes not—for his teeth afraid:
Sir TAWDRY smokes not—for he wears brocade.
Ladies, when pipes are brought, affect to swoon;
They love no smoke, except the smoke of town;
But courtiers hate the puffing tribe,—no matter,
Strange if they love the breath that cannot flatter!
Its foes but shew their ignorance; can he
Who scorns the leaf of knowledge, love the tree?
The tainted templar (more prodigious yet)
Rails at TOBACCO, though it makes him—spit.
CRITONIA vows it has an odious stink;
She will not smoke (ye gods!)—but she will drink:
And chaste PRUDENTIA (blame her if you can)
Says, pipes are us'd by that vile creature Man:
Yet crowds remain, who still its worth proclaim,
While some for pleasure smoke, and some for fame:
Fame, of our actions universal spring,
For which we drink, eat, sleep, smoke—every thing.
IMITATION V.

BLEST leaf! whose aromatic gales dispense
To templars mealy, to parsons sense:
So raptur'd priests, at fam'd Dodona's shrine
Drank inspiration from the steam divine.
Poison that cures, a vapour that affords
Content, more solid than the smile of lords:
Rest to the weary, to the hungry food,
The last kind refuge of the Wise and Good.
Inspir'd by thee, dull cits adjust the scale
Of Europe's peace, when other statesmen fail.
By thee protected, and thyister, beer,
Poets rejoice, nor think the bailiff near.
Nor less the critic owns thy genial aid,
While supperless he plies the piddling trade.
What though to love and soft delights a foe,
By ladies hated, hated by the beau,
Yet social freedom, long to courts unknown,
Fair health, fair truth, and virtue are thy own.
Come to thy poet, come with healing wings,
And let me taste thee unexcis'd by kings.

IMITATION VI.

BOY! bring an ounce of Freeman's best,
And bid the vicar be my guest:
Let all be plac'd in manner due,
A pot wherein to spit or spue,

And
And London Journal, or Free-Briton,
Of use to light a pipe, or *
* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
This village, unmolested yet
By troopers, shall be my retreat:
Who cannot flatter, bribe, betray;
Who cannot write or vote for *.
Far from the vermin of the town,
Here let me rather live, my own,
Doze o'er a pipe, whose vapour bland
In sweet oblivion lulls the land;
Of all which at Vienna passes,
As ignorant as * * Bras is:
And scorning rascals to carest,
Extoll the days of good Queen Bess,
When first Tobacco blest our idle,
Then think of other Queens—and smile.

Come jovial pipe, and bring along
Midnight revelry and song;
The merry catch, the madrigal,
That echoes sweet in City Hall;
The parson's pun, the smutty tale
Of country justice o'er his ale.
I ask not what the French are doing,
Or Spain, to compass Britain's ruin:
Britons, if undone, can go,
Where Tobacco loves to grow.

O D E
ODE to the Hon. C. Y.

By the Same.

Charles, son of Yorke, who on the mercy-seat
Of justice states the bounds of right and wrong;
Not like the vulgar law-bewilder'd throng,
Who in the maze of error, hope to meet
Truth, or hope rather to delude with lies
And airy phantoms, under truth's disguise.

Some wrapt in precedents, or points decreed,
Or lop or stretch the laws to forms precife:
Some, who the pedantry of rules despise,
Plain sense adopt, from legal fetters freed;
Sense without science, fleeting, unconfin'd,
Is empty guess, and shifts with every wind.

But he, thy fire, with more discerning toil,
Rang'd the wide field, sagacious to explore
Where lay dispers'd or hid the precious ore;
Then form'd into a whole the gather'd spoil,
Law, reason, equity, which now unite,
Reflecting each on each a friendly light.
Blest in a guide, a pattern so compleat,
Read, as thou do'st, his footsteps? for not rude
Thy genius, not uncultur'd, unsuj'd.
Yet there are intervals and seasons meet,
To smooth the brow of thought; nor thou disdain
Fit hour of vacance with the Muse's train.

Let meaner spirits, cast in common mould,
Who feed on husks of learned lore, refuse
To hear the lessons of the warbling Muse;
Nor know that bards, the law-givers of old,
By soothing song to moral truth beguil'd
Man, 'till then fierce, a lawless race, and wild.

What means the lyre, by which the fabled sage
Drew beasts to listen, and made rocks advance
Around him as he play'd, in mystic dance?
What, but the Muse? who soften'd human rage.
Parent of concord, she prepar'd the plan
Of social life, and man attun'd to man.

She taught the spheres to move in fair array,
Each in their orbits heark'ning to her strain;
Else would they wander o'er th' ethereal plain
Licentious, but that she directs their way:
She aw'd to temper, by her magic spell,
The warring elements, and powers of hell.

They
They err, who think the Muses not ally'd
To Themis; both are of celestial birth:
Both give peace, order, harmony to earth;
Both by one heav'nly fountain are supply'd;
And men and angels hymn, in general quire,
What law ordains, and what the Nine inspire.

From CÆLIA to CLOE.

By the Same.

Rural life enjoy, the town's your taste,
In this we differ, twins in all the rest.
Yet when the dog-star brings diseases on,
And each fond mother trembles for her son;
Now when the Mall's forlorn, the beaux and belles,
All for retirement crowd to Tunbridge-Wells;
Say, will not Cloe for awhile withdraw
From dear Vaux-hall and charming Ranelagh?
Sure at this homely hut one may contrive
Awhile not only to exist, but live;
For not dull landscapes here my thoughts engross,
Woods, lawns, and rills, and grottoes green with moss.
No, the same appetite that courts infuse,
Haunts in retreat, and to the shade pursues.
Here all my cares are to receive and pay
Visits, my studies a romance or play.
And then to pass the live-long Sunday off,
Walks or a ride, nay church serves well enough.
At church, one has a chance to see cockades,
Lur'd thither in pursuit of country maids:
Or tall Hibernian smite with fond desire
To wed the only daughter of a squire.
Cards have their turn, to kill a tedious hour,
If baulk'd of whist, piquette is in my pow'r;
For oft the captain, fresh from town, bestows
A friendly week upon his friend my spouse.
Then gaily glide the days on downy feet,
For sure the captain has prodigious wit;
O I could hear his sweet discourse for ever,
Of all that's done, and who and who's together.
Oft far and wide for new delights I range,
True sex, and constant to the love of change.
Is there within ten miles a troop review'd,
An auction of old goods, an interlude
By strolling players, an horse-race, or a ball!
There to be seen I have an urgent call.
The labours of the plough are then forgot,
And Thomas mounts the box in liv'ry coat.
Scenes odd as these, if Cæs can endure,
(And yet these scenes are town in miniature)
Come and reflect on Kanelagh with scorn,
Content ev'n here, at least 'till routs return.

ON A

FIT of the GOUT.

By the Same.

Wherefore was man thus form'd with eye sublime,
With active joints, to traverse hill or plain,
But to contemplate nature in her prime,
Lord of this ample world, his fair domain?
Why on this various earth such beauty pour'd,
But for thy pleasure, man, her sovereign lord?

Why does the mantling vine her juice afford
NeCTareous, but to cheer with cordial taste?
Why are the earth and air and ocean flor'd
With beast, fish, fowl; if not for man's repast?
Yet what avails to me, or taste, or sight,
Exil'd from every object of delight?

T 2  So
So much I feel of anguish, day and night
Tortur'd, benumb'd; in vain the fields to range
Me vernal breezes, and mild suns invite:
In vain the banquet smokes with kindly change
Of delicacies, while on every plate
Pain lurks in ambush, and alluring fate.

Fool! not to know the friendly powers create
These maladies in pity to mankind;
These abdicated reason restate,
When lawless appetite usurps the mind;
Heaven's faithful centries at the door of bliss
Plac'd to deter, or to chastise excess.

Weak is the aid of wisdom to repress
Passion perverse; philosophy how vain!
Gainst Circe's cup, enchanting forcers;
Or when the Syren sings her warbling strain.
Whate'er or sages teach, or bards reveal,
Men still are men, and learn but when they feel.

As in some free and well-pois'd common-weal
Sedition warns the rulers how to steer,
As storms and thunders rattling with loud peal,
From noxious dregs the dull horizon clear;
So when the mind imbrutes in sloth supine,
Sharp pangs awake her energy divine.
Ceafe then, ah ceafe, fond mortal, to repine
At laws, which nature wisely did ordain;
Pleasure, what is it? rightly to define,
’Tis but a short-liv’d interval from pain:
Or rather each alternately renew’d,
Gives to our lives a sweet vicissitude.

Horace, Ode XIV. Book I. imitated in 1746.

By the Same.

O Ship! shall new waves again bear thee to sea?
Where, alas! art thou driving? keep steady to shore.
Thy sides are left without an oar,
And thy shaken mast groans, to rude tempests a prey.
Thy tackle all torn, can no longer endure
The assaults of the surge that now triumphs and reigns,
None of thy sails entire remains,
Nor a God to protect in another sad hour.
Though thy outside bespeaks thee of noble descent,
The forest’s chief pride, yet thy race and thy fame,
What are they but an empty name?
Wife mariners trust not to gilding and paint.
Beware then lest Thou float, uncertain again,
The sport of wild winds; late my sorrowful care,
And now my fondest wish, beware
Of the changeable shoals where the Rhine meets the Main.

T 3

The
The Female Right to Literature, in a Letter to a young Lady from Florence.

By ———

Wilt you, Athenia, with assiduous toil
Reap the rich fruits of learning's fertile soil:
Now search whate'er historic truth has shewn,
And make the wealth of ages past your own;
Now crop the blossoms of poetic flow'rs,
And range delighted in the Muses' bow'rs;
Say, will the sweetest of her sex attend
To lines by friendship, not by flattery penned;
To lines which tempt not worth with empty praise;
But to still greater height that worth would raise;
To lines which dare against a world decide,
And stem the rage of custom's rapid tide?

Come then, Athenia, freely let us scan
The coward insults of that tyrant, man.
Self-prais'd, and grasping at despotic pow'r,
He looks on flattery as the female dow'r;
To Nature's boon ascribes what force has giv'n,
And usurpation deems the gift of heav'n.
See the first-peopled East, where Asia sheds
Her balmy spices o'er her fertile meads:

There,
There, while th’ Assyrian stretch’d his wide domain
From distant Indus to the Cyprian main,
All nature’s laws by impious force were broke;
The female sex to slav’ry’s galling yoke
Bow’d their fair necks: from social life confin’d,
And all th’ exertions of th’ enlighten’d mind,
Clos’d in a proud Seraglio’s wanton bow’rs,
The dalliance of a tyrant’s looser hours.
By kings’ examples subjects form their lives,
Dependent satraps had their train of wives;
Proportion’d pow’r each petty tyrant craves,
And each poor female was the slave of slaves.

When Persia next o’erturn’d th’ Assyrian throne,
Destroy’d her tyranny and fix’d its own;
The fair distress’d no milder treatment saw,
This was indeed th’ unalterable law.
In future times, whatever masters came,
Tyrants were chang’d, but tyranny the same.
At length t’ accumulate the female woes,
The grand impostor Mahomet arose;
Swoln with prophetic byes, he lay’d his plan
On the firm basis of the pride of man;
“Women, the toys of men, and slaves of lust,
“Are but meer moulds to form man’s outward crust;
“The heavenly spark, that animates the clay,
“Of the prime essence that effulgent ray,
“Th’ immortal soul, is all to man confin’d,
“Not meanly squander’d on weak woman-kind.”

Accursed
Accursed wretch! by hell's black council driv'n
Thus to debase the fairest work of heav'n.
And could Religion rear her sacred head
Fraught with such doctrines? could such errors spread
From western Tangier, and the sun-burnt Moor,
To the cold Tartar's ever frozen shore?
Ev'n Greece too not exempt, Greece, once the seat
Where Sense and Freedom held the reins of state;
Where Force was Reason's hand-maid; where the bands
Of Love and Friendship join'd the wedded hands;
Where flourish'd once, and flourish still in fame
Th' Athenian matron, and the Spartan dame.

In Rome too Liberty once reign'd, in Rome
The female virtues were allow'd to bloom,
And bloom they did: when Cannæ's fatal plain
Was heap'd with mountains of the Roman slain,
Was there a matron wept her children dead?
Was there a matron wept not those that fled?
Then when each rumour seem'd the voice of fate,
And spoke the victor thund'ring at their gate,
Was there one mention'd peace? did they not pour
Their wealth, their jewels, to the public store,
In emulous haste all pressing to be poor?

Alas how chang'd! how are the mighty sunk,
From the firm Patriot to the whining Monk!
Where Industry secur'd the public good,
Where censors, consuls, and dictators plough'd.

Now
Now lazy zealots batt'en on the spoil,
And consecrated Sloth devours the farmer's toil.
But oh still worse! where Love and Friendship shone,
Domestic Tyranny has fix'd his throne,
With all his train of monsters: at his side
Swoln with self-flatteries suits stiff-neck'd Pride;
Two twin-born fiends his other ear engage,
Heart-canker'd Jealousy, and fire-ey'd Rage;
In front, his empire's sole support and source,
Rattling chains, bars and locks, stalks brutal Force;
Whilst pale and shrivell'd, crouch'd beneath the chair,
Lies sneaking, conscious Worthlessness; and near
Squint-ey'd Suspicion lurks, with self-distracting Fear.

Hail, happy Britain, dear parental land,
Where Liberty maintains her latest stand!
Oh while amidst tyrannic realms I rove,
Enamour'd let me pour my filial love
Into thy bosom. When the raven wings
Of darkness hover o'er me, when the springs
Of every outward sense are shut, my soul
Thee oft revisits, oft without control
Ranges thy fields delighted, and inhales
Friendship's pure joys, and Freedom's healthful gales.

But say, Britannia, do thy sons, who claim
A birth-right liberty, dispense the same
In equal scales? Why then does Custom bind
In chains of Ignorance the female mind?

Why
Why is to them the bright ethereal ray
Of science veil'd? Why does each pedant say,
"Shield me, propitious powers, nor clog my life
With that supreme of plagues a learned wife.
"Tis man's, with science to expand the soul,
And wing his eagle-flight from pole to pole;
"Tis his to pierce antiquity's dark gloom,
And the still thicker shades of times to come;
"Tis his to guide the pond'rous helm of state,
And bear alone all wisdom's solid weight.
"Let woman with alluring graces move
The fondling passions and the baby love;
"Be this our only science, be her doom
"Fix'd to the toilette, the spinnet and loom."

Tongue-doughty pedant, was Athenia's soul
Form'd for these only? Bring th' exactest rule
Of judgment to the tryal, prove that e'er
Thy school-proud tribe engross'd a greater share
Of mental excellence; though vernal Youth
Justs swell her lovely bosom, yet blest Truth,
Offspring of Sense and Industry, has there
Long fix'd her residence; and taught the fair
Or wisdom's deep recesses to explore,
Or on invention's rapid wings to soar
Above th' Aonian mount; and can't thou think
That virtues, which exalt the soul, can sink
The outward charms? must knowledge give offence?
And are the graces all at war with sense?

Say,
Say, who of all the fair is form'd to move
The fondest passions, most ecstatie love,
More than Athena? in her gentle eye
Soft innocence and virgin modesty
Incessant shine, while still a new-born grace
Springs in each speaking feature of her face.
Her sprightly wit no forward pertiness spoils;
No self-assuming air her judgment foilts;
Still prone to learn, though capable to teach,
And lofty all her thoughts, but humble all her speech.
Proceed, Athena, let thy growing mind
Take every knowledge in of every kind:
Still on perfection fix thy steady eye,
Be ever rising, rise thou never so high.
But oh reflect, that in th' advent'rous flight,
Thou mount'lt a glorious, but a dangerous height:
When every science, every grace shall join,
When most thy wit, when most thy beauties shine,
When thickest crowds enamour'd press around,
When loudest every tongue thy praise shall sound,
When verse too offers incense to thy shrine,
And adoration breathes in every line,
Then let my friendly Muse express her care,
Then most will danger spread her viewless snare:
Then let this truth possess thy inmost soul,
"One drop of Vanity may spoil the whole."
Not self-secure on earth can Knowledge dwell,
Knowledge the bliss of heav'n and pang of hell,
Alike the instrument of good and evil,
The attribute of God and of the Devil.
Without her, Virtue is a powerless Will;
She, without Virtue, is a powerful ill;
Does she then join with Virtue, or oppose,
She proves the best of Friends, or worst of Foes.
O! be they once in happiest union join'd,
And be that union in Athenia's mind.

On Shakespeare's Monument at Stratford upon Avon.

By the Same.

Great Homer's birth few'ning rival cities claim,
Too mighty such monopoly of Fame;
Yet not to birth alone did Homer owe
His wond'rous worth; what Egypt could bestow,
With all the schools of Greece and Asia join'd,
Enlarg'd th' immense expansion of his mind.
Nor yet unrival'd the Maonian strain,
The British Eagle, and the Mantuan Swan
Tow'r' equal heights. But happier Stratford, thou
With incontested laurels deck thy brow:
Thy Bard was thine unschoold, and from thee brought
More than all Egypt, Greece, or Asia taught.
Not Homer's self such matchless honours won;
The Greek has Rivals, but thy Shakespeare none.

*Milton

A SONG.
A S O N G.

By the Same.

I.

WHEN fair Serenā first I knew,
By friendship's happy union charm'd;
Incessant joys around her flew,
And gentle smiles my bosom warm'd.

II.

But when with fond officious care
I press'd to breathe my amorous pain,
Her lips spoke nought but cold despair,
Her eyes shot iced through every vein.

III.

Thus in Itāliā's lovely vales
The sun his genial vigour yields,
Reviving heat each sense regales,
And plenty crowns the smiling fields.

IV.

When nearer we approach his ray,
High on the Alps' stupendous brow,
Surpriz'd we see pale sun-beams play
On everlasting hills of snow.

Chiswick.
C H I S W I C K.
By the Same.

The potent Lord, that this bright villa plann'd,
Exhibits here a Paradise regain'd;
Whate'er of Verdure have Hills, Lawns, or Woods,
Whate'er of Splendor, Buildings, Flow'rs, or Floods,
Whate'er of Fruits the Trees, of Birds the Air,
In blissful union are collected here:
All with such harmony disposed, as shews,
That in the midst the Tree of Knowledge grows.

The I N D I F F E R E N T.
From the Italian of Metellatio.
By the Same.

THANKS, CLOE, thy coquetting art
At length hath heal'd my love-fick heart,
At length thy slave is free;
I feel no tyrant's proud control,
I feel no inmate in my soul,
But peace and liberty.

No
No longer now a fierce desire
In anger masks its amorous fire,
And fiercer burns suppress’d,
I blush not when thy name I hear,
I meet thee suddenly, and fear
No fluttering in my breast.

In dreams I every trifle see,
Yet very rarely dream of thee:
I wake, nor think about thee:
When absent I ne’er wish thee near:
And when thou’rt present I nor fear,
Nor pray to be without thee.

I think, hear, talk about thy charms,
Nor stoop the head, nor fold the arms;
Nay ev’n my wrongs sit easy.
And when my favour’d rival’s near,
And eyes me with insulting leer,
His triumphs never tease me.

Put on thy looks of cold disdain,
Or speak respectful, ’tis in vain,
Nor frowns nor smiles can move.
Those lips no more have words that bind,
Those eyes no more have light to find
The path that leads to love.

Seasons,
( 304 )

Seasons, which wont to take their dye
Of soul or fair, from Cloe's eye,
Now their own livery wear.
This place I hate, and that I love,
The fen's a fen, the grove's a grove,
If absent thou, or there.

Judge if I speak like one sincere,
Still I confess your face is fair,
But so are twenty faces;
And if plain truth will not offend,
You've now some features I could mend,
Which once appear'd all graces.

Nay more, I own, when from my heart
I strove to tug the fatal dart
I cut my heart in sunder;
But to relieve a constant pain,
And to retrieve one's self again,
What would one not go-under?

The fluttering bird in viscous snare
Entangled, willingly will spare
For liberty a feather;
In time again the feather grows,
And wise by danger made, he knows
To shun the snare for ever.
(305)

But still I hear you smiling say,
'Tis sign you've flung your chains away,
   You take such pains to shew 'em.
Why, Cloe, there's a fond delight
Our former dangers to recite;
   And let our neighbours know 'em.

After the thunder of the wars,
The veteran thus displays his fears,
   And tells you of his pains;
The galley-slave, enslav'd no more,
Shews you the shackles which he wore,
   And where their mark remains.

I talk, 'cause talking gives delight,
I please myself not Cloe by't,
   Nor care if she believe;
And when myself she deigns to name,
Whether she praise my song or blame,
   I neither joy nor grieve.

For me I quit a sikele fair,
Cloe has lost a heart sincere,
   Who first should sing Te Deum?
You'll never find so true a swain;
But women full as false as vain,
   By dozens one may see 'em.
The Triumph of Indifference.

Being the same ODE, imitated by an unknown Hand.

I.

THANKS, dear coquet! indulgent cheat!
Kind heaven, and your more kind deceit,
At length have set me free;
No more I sigh, and doat, and pine,
All ease without, and calm within,
In peace and liberty.

II.

Cupid no more has power to search,
Time sure has robb'd him of his torch,
Ne'er was a cooler creature:
That name no more has such eclat,
No more my heart goes pit-a-pat
At sight of each dear feature.

III.

I sleep at night, and sometimes dream,
Nor you the fond vexatious theme;
I wake, nor think about you:
I meet, I leave you, meet again,
But feel no mighty joy or pain,
Or with you, or without you.

IV. Now
IV.
Now with indifference I chat
Of eyes, lips, bobbies, and all that,
And laugh at former follies:
Joke with my rival when we meet,
What eye so keen! what lips so sweet!
What skin so soft as Molly's!

V.
Leave then those little torturing arts,
You practise on complying hearts;
They're all in vain, believe me:
Whether those eyes look kind, or weep,
The pouting, or the smiling lip,
Will neither please, nor grieve me.

VI.
From those despotic looks, no more
(Once tyrants of each fickle hour)
I date my grief and joy:
May, though you frown, looks sweetly glad;
And dull December's mighty sad,
Though you stand smiling by.

VII.
Yet still (for I am quite sincere)
You're mighty pretty,—true, my dear,
But, like your pretty sex,
You've here and there, and now and then
A failing; for like other men,
I now can spy defects.
(308)

VIII.

Yet once with coward fondness curs’d,
My poor weak heart I fear’d would burst
At thought of separation:
But now despise my feeble chain,
And bless the salutary pain
That curb’d me of my passion.

IX.

Impatient of his iron cage,
The bird thus spends his little rage,
And escapes with shatter’d wings:
But soon with new-fledg’d pinions soars,
And hast’ning to his native bow’rs,
A joyful welcome sings.

X.

Fond female vanity will say,
These long harangues they sure betray
A heart that’s hankering still:
This passion so proclaim’d in song,
This tale so pleasing to the tongue,
Does it not touch the will?

XI.

Lovers like soldiers, Molly, dwell
With pleasure on the horrid tale,
When all the danger’s o’er:
Like other slaves from fetters free,
We smile with anxious joy, to see
The chains which once we wore.

XII. In
XII.
In kind indulgence to a heart,
Engag'd in so severe a part,
This sweet revenge I write:
Rail, weep, be woman all, for I
Lull'd in indifference, defy
Your fondness or your spite.

XIII.
A frail false maid I lost, but you
A man, fond, generous, and true;
Which fortune is the worse?
Try all love's mighty empire round,
A faithful lover's seldom found;
A jilt's a common curse.

The Shepherd's Farewel to his Love.

Being the same O D E.

Translated by Mr. Roderick.

Phæbe, thank thy false heart, it has fix'd my repose,
The gods have had pity at length on my woes;
I feel it, I feel my soul loose from its chain,
And at last freedom comes, often dream'd of in vain.

The
The flame is burnt out, and each passion at rest,
Under which love disguis'd still might lurk in my breast?
No more, when thou'rt nam'd, the warm blushes arise,
No more flutters my heart, when I meet with your eyes.

In my sleep now no longer thy image I see,
Nor the first of my thoughts, when I wake, is of thee;
When from thee, no more of thy absence I plain,
When with thee, I feel neither pleasure nor pain.

My heart without fondness can muse on thy charms,
My past pains I recount, yet no passion alarms;
Discompos'd I'm no longer, when to'ward me you move,
And at ease with my rival I talk of my love.

Whether haughty thy frown, whether gentle thy strain,
In vain thy proud looks, thy fond speeches in vain;
Thy false tongue to beguile me no more has the art,
No more thy keen eye knows the way to my heart.

Whether pensive or cheerful, no longer to you
For this are my thanks, or for that my blame due;
The gay prospect now pleases, though you are away,
And your presence no more can make dreariness gay.

Believe me, I still can allow that thou'rt fair,
But not that no fair-one can with thee compare;

And
And though beauteous I own thee, yet still in thy face
I can now spy a fault, which I once thought a grace.

When first the fix’d arrow I pluck’d from my heart,
Oh, methought I should die! so severe was the smart:
But from pow’r so oppressive to set myself clear,
Torments greater than dying with patience I’d bear.

When lim’d the poor bird thus with eagerness strains,
Nor regrets the lost plume, so his freedom he gains;
The loss of his plumage small time will restore,
And once try’d the false twig, it can cheat him no more.

The old flame, never flatter yourself to believe,
While it dwells on my tongue, in my heart still must live;
Our dangers, when past, with delight we repeat,
What in suffering was pain, to remembrance is sweet.

’Tis thus when the soldier returns from the wars,
He fights o’er his old battles, and vaunts of his scars:
With pleasure the captive, his liberty gain’d,
The fetters thus shows, which once held him enchain’d.

Thus I talk, and I still will talk on while I may,
Nor heed I, though you disbelieve what I say:
I ask not that Phœbe my talk should approve,
Let her too, if she can, talk at ease of my love.
(312)

An inconstant I leave, a true lover you lose;
Which first of us two will have comfort, who knows?
This I know—Phoebus ne'er such a true love will find;
I can easily meet with a fair as unkind.

R I D D L E.

By the Same.

Through the close covert of the shady grove,
One summer's day it was my chance to rove,
Where, shrouded from the sun's too scorching ray,
Stretch'd at her ease, half-slumbering Cloe lay.
Occasion so inviting, who could miss?
Softly I stole, and snatch'd a sudden kiss.
Startled at first, the rising blush display'd
The quick resentment of the ruffled maid;
Lively display'd—for soon it over past;
Such blushing anger never long did last!
Quick reconciliation must to rage succeed,
Where wrongs ideal solid pleasures breed.
Submissive looks my pardon soon obtain'd,
And pardon'd love as soon new boldness gain'd.
Offending thus, forgiving thus, we lay,
Long time entranc'd with the alternate play;

'Till
'Till warn'd, too soon, by envious night, we part:
The thrilling joy still flutters round my heart;
Thought still, though fainter, paints the glowing bliss,
On fancy's lip still cleaves the rapt'rous kiss.

But mark the sad effects of casual love,
And tread with caution in the shady grove.
In due time, Cloe at my doors appears,
A fix'd composure on her brow she wears;
And guess the cause: close in her lap conceal'd
A lovely twin in either hand she held;
And take, she cry'd, these pledges of our love,
These fruits you planted in the shady grove.

Soft as the downy bloom on Cloe's cheek,
Smooth as the polish'd ivory of her neck,
Warm as her bosom, white as was her arm,
So smooth were they and white, so soft and warm.
Pleas'd I receiv'd them for the giver's sake,
Heedless what censures strict-lac'd prudes might make.

Compliant to my forming hand they grew,
And with their size increas'd obedience due.
As I direct they take th' appointed bent,
With every motion, every beck, consent;
Whate'er I want, they reach with ready hand,
Where-e'er I go, they wait at my command.
Now at his ease one in my bosom lays;
While by my side the other wanton plays;
Now this my hand embraces, t'other free,
Takes his full swing and plays at liberty.
Before me hand in hand sometimes they move,
Emblems of friendship, and united love;
Sometimes behind my leading steps they trace
Still closely knit in brotherly embrace;
Anon on either side as guards attend,
At once adorn me, and at once defend.
Still more and more my love they thus engage,
Thus still shall cherish my declining age;
And when th’ appointed hour of fate shall come,
They’ll follow still attendant on my tomb.
More lasting far than man’s soon-fading breath,
Their love extends beyond the vale of death;
They’ll hang for ever o’er my much-lov’d bust,
‘Till they themselves, like me, are turn’d to dust.

---

R I D D L E.

--- Mortalis in unum
Quodque caput, vultu mutabilis, albus an ater.

By the Same.

ORN from the fruitful spot on which I grew,
Me innocent unnumber’d pains pursue;
Pains more afflicting, as from man they flow,
From parent man! for birth to man I owe.
Sometimes on spikes of steel my nerves they rend,
Sometimes asunder split from end to end;

In
In boiling cauldrons now immers'd I lie,
Now doom'd the rage of drying fires to sty:
There while in double torment scorch'd and drown'd,
Fasp tied I writhe the rigid stake around,
Lash their fierce hate its utmost effort tries
With all Barbarian pomp of sacrifice.
The purple fillet round my temples wreathe,
From every part the scented unguent breathes;
O'er my white locks the sacred flower is spread,
Whilst on the fatal block is plac'd my head.
Yet with fix'd constancy I bear my doom;
And constancy at last will overcome,
From all my tryals I return at length,
My worth increas'd, my beauty, and my strength.
The suffering martyr thus in torment dies,
In fain'ted state more glorious to arise.
And now I re-assume my native state.
My torturers now beneath their burden sweat,
Slaves in their turn to me, and think it pride
If on their subject necks I deign to ride.
 Yet still my filial duty I retain,
Unchang'd by honours, as unmov'd by pain.
Still to mankind a friend, I daily shed
My warmest blessings on his parent head;
Around him still with fond embraces twine,
As round the elm her tendrils curls the vine.
Nor quit him e'er till he to rest repairs,
And every morn renew my constant cares.

Ready
(316)

Ready alike on rich and poor to wait;
I suit myself to every different state.
With priest in white dress array'd I shine,
Emblem of purity and truth divine.
His solemn face the doctor owes to me,
His solemn face, to which he owes his fee.
At bench or bar, I add a dignity
To th' upright sentence, or rhetoric plea;
Hence without me no judge explains the laws,
Nor coifed council pleads the puzzling cause:
In fullest floods my bounty showers on them
Profuse, descending to the garment's hem.
Gorgeous in filken garb I grace the beau;
And all around ambrosial fragrance throw;
Nor less decorous, though with dust o'erspread,
When to the camp the valiant warriors lead,
Gorgonian terrors to each mien I add,
And still their weakest part with care I shade.

RIDDLE.
RIDDLE.

By the Same.

My size is large, my shape's uncouth,
I have neither limb nor feature;
Mens hands have form'd my skin so smooth:
My guts were made by nature.

Nor male nor female is my sex,
You'll scarce believe my troth:
For when I've told you all my tricks
You'll swear 't must needs be both.

For oft my master lies with me,
His wife I oft enjoy;
Yet she's no whore, no cuckold he,
And true to both am I.

My cloaths, nor women fit, nor men,
They're neither coat nor gown;
Yet oft both men and maidens, when
They're naked, have them on.

When
When I'm upon my legs; I lie,
Yet legs in truth I've none;
And never am I seen so high
To rise as when I'm down.

What's off my belly is off my back,
And what my feet, my head;
And though I'm up, I have a knack
Of being still a-bed.

IMITATED.

By the Same.

LYCE, at length my vows are heard,
My vows so oft to heaven preferr'd;
Welcome thy silver'd hairs!
* In vain thy affectation gay
To hide the manifest decay,
In vain thy youthful airs.

* his anus, et tamen
Vis formosa videri
Ludisque—
If still thy cheeks preserve a blush,
With b heat of wine, not youth, they flush;
c Unamiable stain!
If still thou warblest, harsh the note
When d trembling age shakes in the throat
Th’ involuntary strain.

Think’st thou can these my love prolong?
(Ungrateful blush! untuneeful song!)
Or rival Hebe’s charms?
Hebe melodious, Hebe fair,
For e judgment swells her rapt’rous air,
For f youth her blushes warms.

The rosy cheek, the forehead smooth,
Those native ornaments of youth,
Once lost, are lost for aye.
No art can smooth g, no paint repair
The furrow’d face; h no diamond’s glare
Give luftre to decay.

--- et b bibis impudens.
Cantu d tremulo b pota Cupidinem
c Lentum sollicitas ---
--- f virentis et
e Doctae purlere Chiae
Pulchris exubat in genis.
Nec g Coae referunt jam tibi purpurae,
Nec h clari lapides, tempora que semel
Notis condita facitis
Inclusit volucris dies.

What
What now of all which once was thine,
* Feature, * Complexion, * Mien divine,
Remains the sense to charm?
* Why now command they not my love?
Once could they—"even though Cloë strove
Their empire to disarm.

Cloë!—alas, thou much-lov'd name!
* Thou, full of beauty, full of fame,
Found'lt an untimely urn!
* Whilst Lyce, rest of every grace
'T' enrich the mind, 't'adorn the face,
Still lives, the public scorn.*

* Quo * Venus fugit, ah! quove * color decens,
* Quo * motus? quid habes illius, illius,
* Quae spirabat amores?
* Quae me surpuerat mihi?
* Fælix post Cynaram.
* Cynæ breves
Annos fata dedere:
Servatura diu * parem
Cornicis vetulæ temporibus Lycean.

* The contemptuous satire at the conclusion of the original, is preferred in the English, but a graver turn is given to it, instead of the more ludicrous one of Horace. Whether judiciously or no, may be better determined by any body, than by the author.
A SONNET.

Imitated from the Spanish of LOPEZ DE VEGA.
Menagiana tom. iv. p. 176.

By the Same.

CAPRICIOUS W* a sonnet needs must have
I ne'er was so put to't before:—a Sonnet!
Why, fourteen verses must be spent upon it;
'Tis good howe'er t' have conquer'd the first stave.

yet I shall ne'er find rhymes enough by half,
    Said I, and found myself i' th' midst o' the second.
    If twice four verses were but fairly reckon'd,
I should turn back on th' hardest part and laugh.

Thus far with good success I think I've scribbled,
    And of the twice seven lines have clean got o'er ten.
Courage! another 'll finish the first triplet,
    Thanks to thee, Muse, my work begins to shorten.
There's thirteen lines got through driblet by driblet.
    'Tis done! count how you will, I warr'nt there's four-

VOL. II.  X  S O N-
SONNETS.
By T. E.
SONNET I.

O, whom virtue makes the worthy heir
Of *'s titles, and of *'s estate,
Blest in a wife, whose beauty, though so rare,
Is the least grace of all that round her wait,

While other youths, sprung from the good and great,
In devious paths of pleasure seek their bane,
Reckless of wisdom's lore, of birth, or state,
Meanly debauch'd, or insolently vain;

Through Virtue's sacred gate to Honour's fane
You and your fair associate ceaseless climb
With glorious emulation, sure to gain
A meed, shall last beyond the reign of Time:
From your example long may Britain see,
Degenerate Britain, what the great should be!
SONNET II.

While, O, enjoy the present hour,
The present hour is all the time we have,
High God the rest has plac'd beyond our pow'r,
Consign'd, perhaps, to grief—or to the grave.

Wretched the man, who toils ambition's slave;
Who pines for wealth, or fights for empty fame;
Who rolls in pleasures which the mind deprave,
Bought with severe remorse, and guilty shame.

Virtue and knowledge be our better aim;
These help us ill to bear, or teach to shun;
Let Friendship cheer us with her gen'rous flame,
Friendship, the sum of all our joys in one:
So shall we live, each moment fate has giv'n;
How long, or short, let us resign to heav'n.
SONNET III.

To F. K. Esq;

O Sprung from worthies, who with counsels wise
Adorn'd and strengthen'd great Elisa's throne.
Who yet with virtuous pride, may'lt well despise
To borrow praise from merits not thy own.

Oft as I view the monumental stone
Where our lov'd H's cold ashes rest,
Musing on joys with him long past and gone,
A pleasing sad remembrance fills my breast.

Did the sharp pang we feel for friends deceas'd
Unbated laft, we muft with anguish die;
But nature bids its rigour should be eas'd
By lenient time, and strong necessity:
These calm the passions, and subdue the mind
To bear th' appointed lot of human kind.
SONNET IV.

Cs, I hop'd the little heaven shall spare
Of my short day, which slits away so saft,
And sickness threats with clouds to overcast,
In social converse oft with thee to share.

Ill-luck for me, that wayward fate should tear
Thee from the haven thou had'st gain'd at laft,
Again to try the toils and dangers past
In foreign climates, and an hostile air:

Yet duteous to thy country's call attend,
Which claims a portion of thy useful years,
And back with speed thy course to Britain bend.
If, e'er again we meet, perchance should end
My dark'ning eve, thou'lt pay some friendly tears,
Grateful to him, who liv'd and dy'd thy friend.
SONNET V.

On a FAMILY-PICTURE.

WHEN pensive on that portraiture I gaze,
Where my four brothers round about me stand,
And four fair sisters smile with graces bland,
The goodly monument of happier days;

And think, how soon infatiate death, who preys
On all, has cropp'd the rest with ruthless hand,
While only I survive of all that band,
Which one chaste bed did to my father raise;

It seems, that like a column left alone,
The tottering remnant of some splendid stele,
'Scap'd from the fury of the barb'rous Gaul,
And waiting Time, which has the rest overthrown,
Amidst our house's ruins I remain,
Single, unprop'd, and nodding to my fall.

SON-
SONNET VI.

R, who well hast judg'd the task too hard,
Of this short life throughout the total day
To follow glory's false bewitching ray,
Through certain toils, uncertain of reward;

A prince's service how should we regard?
    As service still—though deck'd in livery gay,
    Disguis'd with titles, gilded o'er with pay,
    Specious, yet ill to liberty preferr'd.

Bounding thy wishes by the golden mean,
    Nor weakly bartering happiness for show,
    Wisely thou'rt left the busy bustling scene,
    Where merit seldom has successful been,
    In C's shades to taste the joys, that flow
    From calm retirement, and a mind serene.

X 4

SON-
SONNET VII.

Ce, with whom, my pilot and my guide,
Pleas'd I have travers'd thy Sabrina's flood,
Both where she foams impetuous, soil'd with mud,
And where she peaceful rolls her golden tide.

Never, O never let ambition's pride
'I'oo oft pretext'd with our country's good
And tinsel'd pomp, despis'd when understood,
Or thirst of wealth thee from her banks divide.

Reflect how calmly, like her infant wave,
Flows the clear current of a private life;
See the wide public stream by tempests toss'd,
Of every changing wind the sport, or slave,
Soil'd with corruption, vex'd with party strife,
Cover'd with wrecks of peace and honour loft.
SONNET VIII.

On the CANTOS of SPENGER’s Fairy Queen, lost in the Passage from Ireland.

Worth the man, who in ill hour assay’d
To tempt that western frith with vent’rous keel,
    And seek what heav’n, regardful of our weal,
Had hid in fogs, and night’s eternal shade.

Ill-starr’d Hibernia! well art thou repaid
    For all the woes that Britain made thee feel
By Henry’s wrath, and Pembroke’s conqu’ring steel,
Who sack’d thy towns, and castles disarray’d:

No longer now with idle sorrow mourn
 Thy plunder’d wealth, or liberties restrain’d,
    Nor deem their victories thy loss or shame;
Severe revenge on Britain in thy turn
And ample spoils thy treach’rous waves obtain’d,
    Which sunk one half of Spenfer’s deathless fame.

S O N-
SONNET IX.

PEACE to thy ashes, to thy mem'ry fame,
Bright paragon of merit feminine,
In forming whom kind nature did inshrine
A mind angelic in a faultless frame;

Through every stage of changing life the fame,
How did thy bright example ceaseless shine,
And every grace with every virtue join
To raise the virgin's and the matron's name!

In thee religion cheerful and serene
Unfou'rd by superstition, spleen, or pride,
Through all the social offices of life
To shed its genuine influence was seen;

This thy chief ornament, thy surest guide,
This form'd the daughter, parent, friend, and wife.
SONNET X.

To the Author of Observations on the Conversion and Apostleship of St. Paul.

O : great meed shalt thou receive,
Great meed of fame, thou and thy learn'd compeer,
Who 'gainst the scepttic's doubt, and scorner's sneer,
Assert those heav'n-born truths, which you believe.

In elder times thus heroes went x' achieve
    Renown, they held the faith of Jesus dear,
    And round their ivy-crown, or laurel'd spear,
    Blush'd not religion's olive branch to weave.

Thus Raleigh, thus immortal Sydney shone
    (Illustrious names) in great Eliza's days.
Nor doubt his promise firm, that such who own
In evil times, undaunted, though alone,
    His glorious truth, such he will crown with praise,
And glad agnize before his Father's throne.

S O N-
SONNET XI.

Young, fair, and good! ah why should young and fair
And good be huddled in untimely grave?
Must so sweet flow'r so brief a period have,
Just bloom and charm, then fade and disappear?

Yet our's the loss, who ill, alas! can spare
The bright example, which thy virtues gave;
The guerdon thine, whom gracious heav'n did save
From longer trial in this vale of care.

Rest then, sweet saint, in peace and honour rest,
While our true tears bedew thy maiden hearse,
Light lie the earth upon thy lovely breast;
And let a grateful heart with grief oppress'd
To thy dear mem'ry consecrate this verse,
Though all too mean for who deserves the best.
SONNET XII.

W* whose dear friendship in the dawning years
Of undesigning Childhood first began,
Through Youth's gay morn with even tenor ran,
My noon conducted, and my evening cheers,

Rightly dost thou, in whom combin'd appears
Whate'er for Public-Life completes the Man,
With active Zeal strike out a larger plan,
No useless friend to Senators and Peers:

Me moderate talents and a small estate
Fit for retirement's unambitious shade,
Nor envy I who near approach the throne;
But joyful see thee mingle with the Great,
See thy deserts with due distinction paid,
And praise thy lot, contented with my own.

SON
SONNET XIII.

To the Right Hon. Mr. ———, with the foregoing Sonnets.

Thou, who successive in that honour'd seat
Presid'st, the feuds of jarring Chiefs to 'twage,
To check the boist'rous force of party rage,
Raise modest worth, and guide the high debate,

Sometimes retiring from the toils of State,
Thou turn'st th' instructive Greek or Roman page,
Or what our British Bards of later age
In scarce inferior numbers can relate:

Amid this feast of Mind, when Fancy's Child,
Sweet Shakespeare, raps the soul to virtuous deed,
When Spenser, warbling tunes his Doric lays,
Or the first Man from Paradise exil'd
Great Milton sings, can aught my rustic reed
Presume to found, that may deserve thy praise?
THE Progress of Love. In four Eclogues
Soliloquy of a Beauty
Blenheim
Epistle to Dr. Aylcough
Epistle to Mr. Poyntz
Verses under Mr. Poyntz’s Picture
Epistle to Mr. Pope
Epistle to my Lord ***
Advice to a Lady
Song
Song
Damon and Delia
Ode in Imitation of Paltor Fido
Part of an Elegy of Tibullus
Song
Verses written at Mr. Pope’s
Epigram
To Mr. West, at Wickham
To Miss Lucy F——
To the Same with Hammond’s Elegies
To the Same
To the Same
A Prayer to Venus in her Temple at Stowe
To the Same. On her pleading Want of Time
To the Same
To the Same
To the Same with a new Watch
An Irregular Ode written at Wickham in 1746
To the Memory of the same Lady. A Monody
Verses, making Part of an Epitaph on the same Lady
By Mr. West
The Institution of the Order of the Garter. By the Same
Epistle to Lord Cornbury
An Epistle
Epistle to a Lady
Epistle to Mr. Pope
Epistle to Pollio
| Ode to William Pultney, Esq. | 210 |
| Ode to Lord Lonsdale | 213 |
| Ode | 215 |
| Ode | 217 |
| Ode | 218 |
| Ode to Mankind | 220 |
| Verses to Camilla | 223 |
| To Clarissa | 228 |
| An Inscription on a Tomb | 230 |
| Epigrams | 234 |
| The Danger of Writing Verse. By W. Whitehead, Esq. | 240 |
| To the Honourable * * * | 251 |
| To Mr. Garrick | 253 |
| Nature to Dr. Hoadly | 257 |
| The Youth and the Philosopher | 259 |
| Ode to a Gentleman on his pitching his Tent, &c. | 261 |
| On a Message Card | 263 |
| The Je ne sais Quoi | 265 |
| Ode to a distant Prospect of Eton College, By Mr. Gray | 266 |
| Ode | 267 |
| Ode on the Death of a favourite Cat | 270 |
| Monton on the Death of Q. Caroline. By R. Welf, Esq. | 272 |
| A Pipe of Tobacco, in Imitation of six several Authors | 274 |
| Ode to the Hon. C. Y. | 280 |
| From Calia to Cloe | 287 |
| On a Fit of the Gout | 289 |
| An Ode of Horace | 291 |
| The female Right to Literature | 293 |
| On Shakespear’s Monument at Stratford upon Avon | 294 |
| A Song | 300 |
| Chiswick | 301 |
| The Indifferent, from the Italian of Metaftatio | 302 |
| The Triumph of Indifference, an Ode | 306 |
| The Shepherd’s Farewell to his Love | 309 |
| Riddles | 312, 314, 317 |
| Audivere, Lyce, &c. | 318 |
| A Sonnet, imitated from the Spanifh of Lopez de Vega | 321 |
| Sonnets | 322 |

* The END of Vol. II. *