PARLIAMENTS OF GREAT BRITAIN, 1705—1796.

PARLIAMENTS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, 1801—1874.

PARLIAMENTS AND CONVENTIONS OF THE ESTATES OF SCOTLAND, 1357—1707.

PARLIAMENTS OF IRELAND, 1559—1800.

Ordered to be printed 11th August 1879.

NOTES.

THIS Return, so far as it relates to "Parliaments of Great Britain," and "Parliaments of the United Kingdom," pp. 1–516, has been compiled from the Writs and Returns preserved in the Public Record Office. The books of Parliamentary Returns preserved at the Crown Office have also been made use of where necessary.

In Scotland the year was first reckoned from 1 January in 1600, whereas in England and Ireland, until 1752, the year was reckoned from 25 March. For the sake of uniformity, however, double dates have been put to the Scotch as well as to the English Returns to the Parliaments of Great Britain down to the year 1752.

PARLIAMENTS OF SCOTLAND,

PARLIAMENTS AND CONVENTIONS OF THE ESTATES OF SCOTLAND.

RETURN of the NAMES, DESIGNATIONS, and DATES of ELECTION of the ELECTED or REPRESENTATIVE MEMBERS of the PARLIAMENTS and CONVENTIONS of ESTATES of SCOTLAND.

IN the Parliament of Scotland the Estates sat and voted together as one Chamber. There was no division into an Upper and Lower House. The following Return, therefore, contains only the names and dates of election, so far as they can be ascertained, of the elected or representative Members of the Parliaments of Scotland, with the names of the shires or burghs for which they were respectively returned.

The beginnings of Parliamentary representation in Scotland are associated with the rise of the burgesses into political importance, as the Third Estate of the realm, in the early part of the fourteenth century. Their presence in the Great Council of the nation is first clearly ascertained on the occasion of the Parliament held at Cambuskenneth, 15th July 1326, when the earls, barons, burgesses, and freeholders, in full Parliament assembled, granted to King Robert Bruce, in consideration of his great services, and for the due support of the Royal dignity, the tenth penny of all rents and profits of lands, estimated according to the old extent or valuation of King Alexander III.; the King conceding in return the important constitutional limitation that no tax or impost should be levied by the Crown without the consent of the Parliament. It has generally been supposed that thenceforward the burgesses appeared by their Commissioners in every Parliament; but this does not admit of being satisfactorily determined, inasmuch as no sederunts or rolls of Members have been preserved of the many Parliaments which assembled between that date and the middle of the following century.

Only a very few lists of Commissioners for Burghs are extant of earlier date than the beginning of the sixteenth century. Before that time the records contain the names of those only who, at the beginning of each Session, were elected Members of the committees on which great part of the business of the Parliament was devolved—the Committee of Articles [Domini ad articulos inquirendos], by which all measures were discussed and prepared for receiving legislative sanction; and the Judicial Committee for hearing of causes and appeals [Domini auditores ad causas et querelas audiendas et ad judicia contradicta], which, co-ordinately with the Lords of Council, discharged the functions of a supreme civil tribunal till the institution, in 1532, of a permanent high court of judicature, under the name of the Court of Session.

By the small barons, and freeholders, who were regarded as of the same estate with the greater barons, the feudal obligation to give suit and presence in the King's High Court of Parliament was always felt to be a burden; and as early as the time of James I., in 1427, an Act was passed for their relief, granting them authority to elect representatives. This statute, however, remained inoperative. In 1457 and 1503 Acts were passed for relief of the more inconsiderable of the freeholders, granting exemption, except when specially summoned, to those of them whose holdings were below a specified value. In 1567 there was renewed legislation on the subject of the election of Commissioners, but it was not till 1587 that the representation of the shires was actually established. It was then ordained "that the Commissioners of all the Sheriffdoms be elected at the first head court after Michaelmas yearly;" that they be "authorised with sufficient commissions, sealed and subscribed by six at least of the barons and freeholders" of the shire; and that "the compearance of the said Commissioners of the shires in Parliaments, or General Councils, shall relieve the whole remanent small barons and freeholders of the shires of the suit and presence due in the said Parliaments." From that time onwards the Commissioners for the shires are found in the roll of every Parliament.

Besides the Parliaments, Conventions of the Estates were frequently called together for the despatch of urgent business. At first they consisted of the Privy Council, with a few additional Members specially summoned, and their sittings rarely exceeded one or two days. In 1567 it was enacted that Provosts of Burghs, or Commissioners for Burghs, should be present in every Convention, and especially when taxation was to be imposed. This was, for a time, very imperfectly observed; but, gradually, the representation of the burghs became more regular, and the representation of the shires being established towards the close of the sixteenth century, the composition of the Convention of Estates became at length substantially identical with that of the Parliament. The Convention which met 14th March 1689 was turned into a Parliament without re-election of Members. The Conventions have therefore been included in this Return.

(a) The minor barons, or lairds, who, for three quarters of a century before this time, seem to have been almost entirely absent from the Parliaments, having begun to reappear there immediately after the passing of the Act of 1587, which imposed on them the obligation to elect representatives, are found also, soon after, in gradually increasing numbers, in the Rolls of the Conventions of Estates. For a time, probably, most of these who are found there sat as Privy Councillors, the Council being very numerous till its numbers were limited by the Convention in December 1598. It is, however, difficult to distinguish between those who sat in this capacity and those who may have represented constituencies; and, as it is possible that, in almost every Roll, some of the latter class may occur, or, indeed, that most of them may have had the double qualification, it has been thought proper, with this explanation, to give in the following pages the names of all the minor barons, not being Officers of State, who are found in the Sederunts of the Conventions between this date and 1608, when the Commissioners for Shires are first clearly distinguished and their constituencies named.

(1) A protest was made, 29 July 1644, in name of the burghs, against the admission of a Commissioner for the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, on the ground that it was comprehended in Wigtown-shire. This was met, however, by a counter protest on the part of the barons. The same proceeding was renewed in several subsequent Parliaments.

(2) There was also a Commission in favour of Sir James Lockhart, of Ley, and James Hamiltoun, younger, of Woodhall. The Parliament, however, preferred that in favour of Sir W. Carmichael and the Laird of Dalserf, 5 June 1644. A similar decision was given 8 January 1645, the same four Commissioners having been re-elected.

(1) It is uncertain whether the Laird of Cavers, who sat in Sessions 1 and 5, was Sir Thomas Ker or Sir William Douglas, the Sheriff of Teviotdale. Sir James Balfour (Annals, iii. 167) gives Sir Thomas Ker as Commissioner in Session 1.

(2) As both Sir Patrick Agnew and his son, Sir Andrew, are designed Laird of Lochnaw and Sheriff of Galloway, it is uncertain which of them sat in this Parliament. Probably it was the latter.

(1) No use has been made for this purpose of the Rolls of the Committee of Estates during these Sessions, because, while the majority of its members were chosen from the Parliament, there appear to have been usually some who were not, and these cannot be accurately distinguished.

(2) There was also a Commission in favour of the Lairds of Craigievar and Echt. That, however, in favour of the Lairds of Philorth and Udny was preferred by the Parliament, 8 March 1648.

(3) The election of the Laird of Plandergaist was declared invalid, 4 March 1648, because he was not, at the time, a vassal of the King. A warrant was issued for a new election, to be held 10 March 1648, which resulted in his re-election.

(1) The Earldom and Lordship of Orkney and Zetland were re-annexed to the Crown, and erected into a Stewartry, 17 December 1669. It appears from a ratification by the Parliament, 23 August 1670, of previous grants of privileges to the burgh of Kirkwall, that, hitherto, the King had dispensed with their sending a Commissioner to Parliament, "in respect of their inability and remoteness."

(2) A Commission is extant, of date 6 October 1674, in favour of Sir Thomas Murray, of Glendook, one of the Senators of the College of Justice, and John Grahame, of Fentrie, as Commissioners for the Sheriffdom of Perth "in the next ensuing Parliament or Convention of Estates, if any shall happen to be called before the next Michaelmas Head Court;" but there was no Session of Parliament or Convention during these twelve months.

(3) The election for Stirling-shire having been declared informal 26 October 1669, a new election was ordered to be held 4 November following. It appears to have resulted in a double election, and the Parliament, 23 November 1669, preferred the Commission in favour of the Lairds of Keir and Touch.

(4) Alexander Ross is not found in the Roll of Session 1.

(1) There was a double Return for Ayr-shire, one in favour of Sir John Cochran and Sir John Cunynghame, the other in favour of the Laird of Blair and another. On 2 July the Convention found the first-mentioned Commission invalid, and the Laird of Blair was accordingly, 8 July, admitted to take the oaths.

(2) In the Roll, Robert Doock; in the Minutes, William Doock.

(3) There was also a Commission in favour of the Lairds of Langtoun and Polwart. On 29 June the Commission in favour of Harcarss and Langtoun was sustained by the Convention.

(4) There was also a Commission in favour of Thomas Lyndesay. The Convention, however, on 29 June, declared it invalid, on the ground that he was not a freeholder of a 40*s.* land holden of the Crown.

(5) There was also a Commission in favour of John Stark, of Craigtoun, and John Smollat, of Pillenflat. It was rejected by the Convention, 3 July, as being subscribed by three heritors only, instead of six, as required by Statute. The names of Houstoun and Hamilton are not in the Roll of the Convention.

(6) There was also a Commission in favour of Sir Robert Dalzell and the Laird of Craigdarroch. Sir Robert Dalzell having retired, 29 June, Lagg and Craigdarroch were admitted, and took the Oath of Allegiance, and signed the Declaration.

(7) An objection made against John Johnstone that he was not a "resident trafficquing-burgess" was remitted to the Committee for Controverted Elections. The result does not appear.

(1) There was also a Commission in favour of the Lairds of Humbie and Gosfoord; but that in favour of the Lairds of Ormestoune and Saltoune was preferred 18 August 1681.

(2) There was also a Commission in favour of George Suitie, of Balgony, of date 28 June 1681. A protest was taken against his election, because he was not resident and a trader in the burgh, and because the Council had been summoned to the election on a half-hour's notice, between six and seven o'clock in the morning, and a burgess-ticket had been granted him only after he had been elected. On 5 August the Parliament declared his election invalid, and sustained the Commission of Charles Maitland, as being "a residing traffiquing merchant in the burgh."

(3) It appears from the Commission to the Laird of Torcastle that the Lairds of Grant and Dunvegan were elected at Michaelmas, 1680.

(4) For a long period no Commissioner had been returned for Kinross-shire, except to the Commonwealth Parliaments, the greater part of the lands of the shire being in the possession of the Earl of Morton and Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, who sat in Parliament as barons. Sir William Bruce, of Balcaskie, having acquired the lands which belonged to the Earl of Morton, being the greater part of the shire, and having been elected Commissioner, was allowed to represent the shire, according to former custom, by Royal Letter dated 13 August 1681.

(5) There was also a Commission in favour of the Lairds of Riccartoun and Barbachlaw. That in favour of the Lairds of Binns and Hopetoun was preferred by the Parliament 18 August 1681.

(6) There was a double election for Peebles-shire. On 5 August 1681 the Lairds of Blackbarony and Stanhope were declared duly elected, signed the Declaration and took the oaths.

(7) Sir Patrick Murray was elected, 18 June, but was declared disqualified by Parliament, 5 August, "in respect he was not a residing traffiquing merchant in the burgh."

(8) There was also a Commission in favour of the Laird of Keir, which was rejected by the Parliament 31 August.

(1) There was also a Commission in favour of Sir George Suttie, of Balgowne; that, however, in favour of Thomas Stewart was preferred by the Estates, 27 March 1689.

(2) There was also a Commission in favour of Lord Livingstoune, which was rejected by the Estates because, being the eldest son of a Peer, he was thereby disqualified to represent a burgh.

(3) David Brodie, of Leathen, was also elected 5 March 1689; but, in consequence of his severe illness, John Hay, of Lochloy, was elected in his room.

(4) There was also a Commission in favour of Sir Patrick Thriepland; but Robert Smith was declared duly elected by a plurality of votes, 16 March 1689.

(5) Two competing Commissions were produced for the shire of Ross, both of which were declared null, 24 May 1689, and a new election ordered. It is uncertain in whose favour this election resulted, as no Commissioner for Ross-shire appears in the Roll of the Convention. A contemporary manuscript list of the Commissions produced at this Convention contains the names of Sir Johne Munroe, of Foulis, and Sir George Munroe, of Culraine, who were probably the Commissioners first elected.

(6) There was also a Commission in favour of Robert Ainslie; but the Estates declared it null, 21 March 1689, on the ground of undue influence exercised by the magistrates of the burgh.

(1) There were competing Commissions, of date 6 October 1702, in favour of Sir John Erskine, of Alva, and Mr. Robert Steuart, of Tillicoultry, as Commissioners for this shire. The former, however, having also a Commission for the burgh of Burntisland, elected to sit for that burgh, and the latter, in like manner, for the shire of Bute. In the Second Session there was also a double election, 6 October 1703, viz., of Andrew Burnside, of Hartshaw, and Mr. Alexander Abercrombie, of Tulliebodie.
