ADDRESS.

There are some subjects on which a writer cannot expect to acquire celebrity; he must be satisfied if he is usefully employed, and receives the approbation of his readers.

Dr. Johnson justly remarks, that "in all places, where there are objects worthy of detail or observation, there should be a short printed Directory, for the use of the stranger."

What Dr. Johnson suggests, the Publishers have endeavoured to accomplish for the Inhabitants and Visitors of BATH, &c., by giving plain, but accurate descriptions of each place, followed by copious lists of the commercial and private residents; detailing not only interesting objects and customs of past times, but also directing their attention to the present state of each locality, thus furnishing "A Guide for the Visiter," and "A Book of daily Reference for the Resident," that they hope will be found to answer its intended purposes, although (from the number of persons who have been employed in collecting the names), some little inaccuracies will doubtless be detected, for which the Publishers crave the Readers lenity; and in conclusion, they cannot refrain from quoting the appropriate words of an early author, viz.—

> " Men's works have faults since Adam first offended,
> And much in this may want to be amended."

BATH

WITH THE VILLAGES OF

WESTON, BATHEASTON, BATHAMPTON, AND TWERTON.

THE delectable and ancient City of Bath is situate on the confines of Somersetshire in the hundred of Bath Forum; its site being a beautiful valley, surrounded by breezy hills, and on the line of the Great Western Railway, distant 107 miles W. from London, 12 E.S.E. from Bristol, 19 N.N.E. from Wells, 19 W. from Devizes, 39 S. from Gloucester, 36 N.W. from Salisbury, and 80 N.N.E. from Exeter. In all probability no place in the kingdom enjoys so many natural advantages as Bath; and as these advantages have been aided by the application of art and science, the city presents an appearance of singular grace and beauty.

Both fancy and fable have been actively employed in giving an origin to this celebrated watering place. According to their reports the following tradition was the first cause of this now delightful city.

As early as eight hundred and ninety years before the Christian era, a king of Britain, named Lud, banished his son, Bladud, from court, because the latter was grievously tormented by leprosy—after wandering some time he chanced to reach Bath, and washing himself in a spring that was hard by, he received so much benefit from the medicinal waters, that he was induced to persevere in their use till the loathsome disease had entirely disappeared—grateful for the benefits derived from the springs, the convalescent prince returned home, and in due course of time ascended the throne of his departed sire—it was now in Bladud's power to prove his gratitude; he therefore, after building a palace, took up his residence on the spot which soon became a town of considerable note. This may be true, but it reads very romantic.

We have said that Bath owes much to local advantages, and this we will now endeavour to explain. The valley in which it is situated is penetrated by the river Avon, which places it in direct communication with almost every important city and town in the kingdom; on the one hand, the city of Bristol is within an easy distance, and the Avon perfectly navigable to that port—on the other hand, the Kennet and Avon canal, after passing Bath, joins the river Thames at Reading. Other local advantages to Bath are to be found in the peculiar beauty of its neighbourhood—the sanatory property of its mineral waters—and many others, which have obtained for it a high repute among all civilized nations of the globe; consequently there is a great influx of wealthy and distinguished visitors, whose excursions and refined amusements afford an inexhaustible supply to multitudes of the less opulent members of society.

Bath not only presents her healing springs to the valetudinarian of every clime, but offers an agreeable retirement both to the convalescent and the healthy. These justly celebrated springs, containing medicinal properties superior to any in the kingdom, are perfectly clear, very grateful to the stomach, and create an appetite; indeed, we cannot better explain their virtues than by quoting from a local pamphlet, which states "that the Hot Mineral Waters of Bath possess all the curative properties of the most esteemed mineral waters of Germany; and that the most eminent physicians and surgeons have testified to their valuable curative properties and great efficacy in all disorders originating from indigestion, biliary and glandular obstructions, impaired digestive powers, hypochondriacal and hysterical affections, &c., and in short, almost every disease accompanied by debility, but unattended with inflammation.

Bathing in these hot mineral waters is highly beneficial in cutaneous disorders, paralytic, gouty, and chronic affections, in all contractions or lameness arising from the above disorders; in sprains, or local injuries, from whatever cause, if unattended with inflammation; in bilary and glandular obstructions, and most decidedly in uterine affections. These baths, discreetly used, do not relax the body, diminish the strength, or exhaust the spirits, even in persons previously reduced and greatly weakened by disease, for after remaining twenty or thirty minutes, they come out of the bath refreshed, and their spirits lighter and more cheerful.

Those who do not visit Bath to use the waters, or whose cases do not come within the range of their utility, will here find advantages and resources not to be found elsewhere; and the invalid, whilst enjoying the pure air of the country, has, brought within a small circle, all the elegant amusemeuts, gaieties, and resources of the metropolis. Bath since the introduction of express trains, upon the Great Western Railway, is reached from London in two hours and a half, and from Exeter in one hour and a half."

The city of Bath contains many fine buildings, in almost every variety of ancient and modern style of architecturc, but to attempt a minute description of all would be a work of supererogation; we must, therefore, content ourselves with enumerating those that claim especial notice, the localities of which may be found in the Directory portion of this work. As Bath and Wells unitedly form a bishoprick, and the Episcopal palace being at the latter city (for a description of this place see Wells) Bath possesses no cathedral, it has, however, some ecclesiastical edifices, which are little inferior, either in point of extent or appearance, and among these the Abbey Church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul demands the first attention. This truly venerable pile is a cruciform temple containing fifty-two windows, a square tower with an altitude of 160 feet, and furnished with ten exquisitely toned bells, a clock (illumed at night with gas), and chimes, which perform every fourth hour. The church itself is 210 feet in length, 78 feet in height, and nearly the same in breadth, and built in the gothic style of architecture so prevalent in many of our royal chapels, both the exterior and interior abound in elaborate specimens of art, especially the latter, which has a fine effect, being exceedingly light and containing some good monuments. The abbey is built on the site of an ancient monastic edifice, founded by Osric in the year 676. It is stated that the present building, which was commenced circa 1500, but not completed till more than a century after, was the result of a dream by bishop King, and the church contains some sculptures to that effect. The whole of this edifice was presented to the corporation of Bath by Mr. Colthurst. At one period Bath was divided into four parishes, each of which had a distinct living, but during the reign of Queen Elizabeth these parishes were united and formed a rectory—the corporation were the patrons. The other churches are St. James's, St. Michael's, St. Swithin's, Christchurch, Trinity, St. Saviour's, St. Mary's, Walcot, Lyncombe and Widcombe, St. Marks and St. Matthews. St. James's has been lately greatly improved, the buildings adjoining the tower—which presented a most unsightly appearance—have been removed, the old tower taken down, and one after the Italian style, and in accordance with the general appearance of the structure, is now near completion. It is surmounted by a lantern, and a number of free sittings have been added. St. Matthew's, situated at Widcombe hill, is a new structure in the decorated gothic style, consisting of a nave and chancel, with north and south aisles extending the entire length of the building. It has a handsome tower surmounted by a spire measuring together 155 feet. The interior of this sacred edifice is fitted up in a neat and commodious style, and provides accommodation for 1,250 persons, 500 being free sittings.

St. Stephen's church, a chapel of ease to Walcot, and situated near Beacon Hill, on the road leading to Lansdown, is a beautiful new building, in the shape of a cross, which together with several almshouses, now erecting, are from the design of James Wilson, Esq. of this city.

There are several chapels in connection with the Establishment, viz. Laura Chapel, St. Mary Magdalene's, All Saints', St. Mary's, Margaret Chapel and some others; many of these are chaste buildings and add much to the appearance of Bath. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Unitarians, Huntingdonians, Moravians, Swedenborgians, the Society of Friends and Roman Catholics, have all places of divine service, and the Jews have a synagogue in this city. The Wesleyan Chapel, in New King street, has been rebuilt during the past year. It is a beautiful structure of the decorated gothic style, from a design of James Wilson, Esq. The splendid gothic window, in the front of the building, is considered to be one of the finest specimens in the West of England. This body are also now erecting a magnificent college at the end of Springfield Place. In Henry street is the new Church for the followers of the late Emanuel Swedenborg—this is a remarkably neat and chaste building designed by Mr. Underwood, and in Charlotte street is the Moravian chapel, a handsome new erection. In the suburbs are two cemeteries, which for beauty of locality, graceful display of trees and shrubs, and suitableness for their solemn purposes are not only equal to those around the metropolis, but may even vie in appearance with the celebrated Pére la Chaise near Paris.

Among other public buildings the baths occupy a prominent station, these are respectively named the King's, the Queen's, the Hot, and the Cross Baths. The first of these, which is capable of containing above 340 tons of water, is situated near the abbey. The Queen's Bath is in conjunction with that of the King's; these are supplied with every convenience for the accommodation of visitors. Contiguous to these baths are pump rooms and other offices where the water is dispensed to the drinker, or the bather enjoys the exhilirating ablution. The Cross and Hot Baths are at some little distance from those already noticed, the latter, as its name implies, possesses a higher temperature than the others—3 degrees.

To the eye of a stranger Bath looks more like the work of some powerful and benevolent magician than the labour of human hands—its circus—its crescents—and its squares at almost every quarter of this elegant city, are extremely pleasing to the view. Queen square, with its garden, obelisk, Corinthian ornaments, and other embellishments. The Circus enriched by double pillars, where the Ionic, Doric, and Corinthian beauties unite in supporting an elaborately sculptured frieze. The Royal Crescent,—Lansdown Crescent,—Cavendish Place, Camden Place,—Laura Place, and Great Pulteney Street, have been erected without regard to expenditure, consequently the aid of superior talent was secured and the triumph of art displayed in its happiest phases. To Wood great praise is due for the manner in which he accomplished his arduous engagements. In the neighbourhood of Camden place the uneven surface of the soil proves of great utility in exhibiting the buildings to the best advantage when viewed from a favourable position; they appear to spring from natural platforms gracefully rising one above the other, so as to throw every point of attraction at once within sight. Near the eastern quarter of Bath, Pulteney bridge, consisting of three arches, is situated. This erection has a line of shops on each side, and leads to Pulteney street, and the parish of Bathwick. At no great distance from Pulteney bridge is Pulteney street, at the termination of which are the extensive Sydney gardens and pleasure grounds, two fantastical bridges of cast-iron bestride the Kennet and Avon canal in its passage through these gardens. The old bridge, over which is the entrance to Bath from Wells, &c., has been very much improved, the old stone balustrades having been removed, brackets thrown from each side of the bridge, and a very considerable width of roadway has thus been given. On the sides is a substantial wooden railing.

The Guildhall is another fine public edifice, built of freestone, that being universally the material employed in all the buildings of this city, probably owing to the quantity easily obtained in the neighbourhood; this public hall contains offices for city sessions and county courts, tea-rooms, music gallery, vestibule, and an elegant banquetting hall. The front of this edifice consists of large columns with pediment, cornice, and entablature. Adjoining the guildhall is the market-place, which is both ample and convenient. Another architectural ornament to the locality in which it stands, viz Charlotte-street, is the New Savings' Bank. The City Gaol, situated midway between Bath and Twerton, is considered a model of its kind; the "separate" system is adopted, and the building appropriated to the detention of vagrants, debtors, and persons who cannot obtain sureties to answer alleged crimes; but criminals, when convicted, are transferred to Shepton Mallet, at which place the county gaol is stationed; the annual average number thus transferred, is about 200 persons, this is effected at an expense of three shillings per criminal.

The public places of amusement in the city of Bath are extremely numerous, and embrace every variety of legitimate means to banish ennui; among these, the theatre, pump-rooms, promenades, music assemblies, and concerts, do much to alleviate the despondencies of those suffering from indisposition, as well as to render this fair city a favorite resort of beauty, the healthy, and the "gayest of the gay." The theatre, acknowledged to be the prettiest out of London, is on the south side of Beaufort-square, its light elegancies of decoration enchant the eye and rivet the attention. The boxes are elegantly arranged in three tiers, and as the audience is composed for the greater part of intelligent persons, the performance is generally of the first-order. There are magnificent Assembly-rooms erected by Mr. Wood, near the Circus, with a ball-room above 100 feet in extent, 43 feet inbreadth, and an altitude of 42 feet, the expense of these was £20,000. The gay parties that throng these spacious places of amusement are governed by a master of the ceremonies, to whose authority all must implicitly submit, this enviable situation was first enjoyed by the far-famed Beau Nash, who possessed a happy combination of impudence and good breeding, and beneath whose reign the city was greatly improved; his statue of marble adorns one end of the grand pump-room (the opposite one being fitted up as an orchestra), a minute description of this self-imposed monarch, and the city at large, may be found in Smollett's celebrated novel of "Humphrey Clinker."

The Municipal Government of Bath, as appointed by the "Municipal Act," is vested in the power of a mayor, 14 aldermen, 42 councillors, and the usual number of subordinate officers. The Somerset County Court, to recover debts under £20, is held every Saturday, and four sessions annually, at which the recorder presides to receive charges of misdemeanour; magistrates sit daily at the Guildhall for hearing cases occurring within the jurisdiction of the city—and county magistrates meet also daily at Fountain buildings. Since the reign of King Edward I. Bath has enjoyed the privilege of returning two members to parliament. The boundaries of this city have been greatly enlarged at different periods, and the whole is now guarded by an efficient and well regulated body of police.

Although admirably situated for mercantile speculation by the vicinity of the river Avon, and the addiiional facilities afforded by the Great Western Railway, (which line is carried past the city over a series of free-stone arches.)—Bath never was extensively employed in manufactures, if we except that description of coarse cloth, known as Bath coating, this, however, is now extinct; it is true that almost every variety of fancy goods, and other articles of a more useful nature, are made in considerable quantities; but nature intended that this beautiful site should be devoted to the restoration of health, and the promotion of innocent gaiety and refined bliss. The number of lodging-houses is vast, and comprises almost every description of human dwellings. As the fashionable season commences about Michaelmas and continues until Lady-day, these apartments are generally, during the season, engaged for a period of six months, and the concourse of some thousands of opulent individuals must give an impetus of great importance to the more regular inhabitants of this place, consequently the retail trade of Bath, during that time, must of necessity be greatly improved. In addition to the business of the bazaars and shops in general, the market is open daily for the sale of meat, vegetables, fish (which since the opening of the railway is always to be met with here, both fresh and in abundance), fruit, poultry, &c.; but Wednesday and Saturday are the principal market days, it is then also well supplied with butter, cheese, eggs, &c., from the surrounding neighbourhood. There are annual fairs at Bath, Lansdown and Kingsdown, which are held on the 14th of February, 10th of August, and 2nd of September respectively.

The public charities of Bath are numerous and of great utility, not only to the natives of the city, but in many instances, to strangers in general, these consist of hospitals, infirmaries, and many other beneficial institutions, too numerous to describe at length, we must, therefore, select the more important ones. The Bath Hospital is a benevolent institution. available to poor persons dwelling in all parts of England, whose afflictions are deemed curable by medicinal waters of this city; this excellent establishment is supported by voluntary contributions, and contains accommodation for upwards of 130 patients. The United Hospital is appropriated to both in and out-door relief, and proves of great benefit to many afflicted persons; this institution possesses an anatomical museum, where lectures connected with this branch of science are delivered. There is an hospital founded during the reign of the Sixth Edward, and an Infirmary for Opthalmia. Partis' College is on a magnificent scale of liberality, founded by MRS. PARTIS, relict of Fletcher Partis, Esq., By means of this institution thirty reduced ladies (each of whom must possess an income of £30 per annum), one-third of whom are either widows or daughters of clergymen are accommodated with house, gardens, and liberal funds to maintain their respectability. The hospital of St. John the Baptist was founded by a bishop of Bath named Reginald Fitz Joceline, to accommodate poor patients who sought health at the springs. Many societies are also found in this city to assist poor women during childbirth, an asylum for orphans, a penitentiary, humane society, and many others of a more religious character, as the Bible Society and the Christian Knowledge Society.

The public fountains of gratuitous education flow abundantly in every quarter of this city; schools for both sexes, of all stations and conditions of life are spreading moral instruction with an increasing power far and wide. Among these are the Free Grammar School, endowed by Edward VI.; the appointments to this institution are made by the corporation. In addition to the original endowment, the Rev. William Robins made considerable improvements by which ten boys were added, who may slake their intellectual thirst at the classic fountains of Greece and Rome, or obtain a good mercantile education. The Blue-coat School was endowed by Robert Nelson in 1711, and by it 100 children of both sexes are taught, clothed, and receive sums of money for the purpose of apprenticing them to some business when they finally quit the school. Here are also many more public and infant schools, all of which are well sustained and conducted.

Within the last century Bath has established many institutions both for instruction and amusement, the following are some of the most considerable ones:—In 1820, the Bath Literary and Scientific Institution (founded by some influential gentlemen) first threw its light on this ancient city. The Mechanics Institute (now called the Athenæum) possesses an extensive library of good standard works. The Bath Commercial and Literary Institution, on the borough walls, established 1847, (numbering about 500 members) has commodious reading-rooms, and a valuable library, and a chess-club is formed, lectures are given, and the "Bath Discussion Society" holds its meetings here. The Bath Instruction Society is a useful one, but of a more humble character than the preceding; reading-room, classes and lectures are its principal features. The Bath and West of England Society has long distributed medals and pecuniary bounties for the encouragement of art and science, as they bear on agriculture and manufactures. Many clubs, similar to those in London, are established here, and supported by annual svbscriptions.

The city of Bath has, at different periods, suffered much from the ravages of victorious foreigners, and was once defended by a strong fortification and wall, a small relic of which remains, The Romans once held a station here and named it Aquæ Solis, thereby implying it to be the "waters of the sun." By the Britons it was denominated Caer Pallader, because the Romans had in this place a temple dedicated to the goddess of Wisdom; and the Saxons designated it Akemanus Ceaster, by which term they signified a "dwelling of the afflicted." It was invested during the civil wars between Charles I. and his parliament, but it was not till the year 1723, that it approximated to its present splendour and importance. About that time the architect Wood commenced his improvements, which kindled a spirit of generous emulation that has made Bath one of the most fascinating cities in the kingdom: possessing as it now does, so many remarkable buildings and spacious streets, well paved, and illumined by a profusion of gas.

The city of Bath is encompassed by beautiful hills, which render it at once healthy and agreeable; many fine family-mansions are within a few miles distance of the town, among these Prior Park claims especial notice; from this park the prior of Bath Abbey was wont to supply his table with venison; it afterwards became the property of Ralph Allen, whom Pope has immortalized in the well-known couplet.

> "Let honest Allen with an awkward shame,
> Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame."

Fielding has also paid the same gentleman a fine compliment by drawing the character of Allworthy from the same source. This magnificent park is now the site of two Catholic colleges, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, over these establishments the Bishop of Hetalonia and the very Reverend Dr. Brindle preside; the scholastic duties embrace theology, philosophy, science, with ancient and modern languages; by virtue of royal patent, this establishment is connected with the London University. The buildings cover a space of ground a 1000 feet in extent, from the centre of which projects a Corinthian pillared portico, and in other compartments are the residences of native linguists and other tutors for the instruction of pupils; from these buildings many fine views of great variety are obtained.

The tower on Lansdowne, built by the late Mr. Beckford, was, after his decease, submitted to auction sale, but subsequently repurchased by the Duchess of Hamilton (daughter of Mr. B.), and presented to the rector of Walcot, who has given it and the lands adjoining, to be used as a cemetery for that parish. Near this tower lie the downs, where the Bath and Bristol races are held. The Borough of Bath (embracing Bathwick and Widcombe), contained a population of 53,209 individuals in 1841.

The beautiful village of WESTON lies about two miles N.W. by W. of Bath, on the north bank of the river Avon, and on the old Roman fosse way from Walcot to the Severn. The admirer of rural scenery should not forget to visit this retired spot, Leaving Bath by way of Victoria Park, you proceed along a paved foot-path, having on each side a string of delightful villas; a few minutes bring you, shoe-dry, even in winter, to the quiet little village, where the antique cottages contrast agreeably with the more modern villas just left behind.

The most prominent feature in Weston is its church, which stands on an eminence about the centre of the place; it was rebuilt In 1843, by which 453 additional sittings were formed, 227 of these are free; the living is a vicarage, patron the Lord Chancellor. Here are National schools for both sexes, and one for infants. Population of the parish 2,899.

BATHEASTON is situate on the London road, about two miles and a half from Bath. This parish, with Amorel, forms a liberty free from the county jurisdiction, and was divided before the Conquest into two manors, one pertaining to the King, and the other to the church of Bath. The village is formed chiefly of one long irregular street, with a few intersections, or avenues, leading out to dwellings carelessly dispersed on the neighbouring fields. At the last census it contained a population of 2,191, since which time it has increased but little, in consequence of the discontinuance of a silk factory which gave employ to some hundreds of persons.

The parish church, dedicated to St. John, is an old and beautiful building, thickly circled by dilapidated grave-stones, whose crumbling remains seem to crave the leniency which time has shown the ancient pile, but which the less sparing hand of man has denied them. This apparent desire has been responded to by the proper authorities, and the church-yard gates are in consequence closed. The living is a vicarage, in the presentation of Christchurch, Oxford, and the present incumbent is the Rev. Spencer Madan, A.M. Here is also a small chapel for the Wesleyan Methodists. Eailbrook House, in this village, is now an asylum for lnnatics of all classes; it is an extensive building, standing on an eminence about a quarter of a mile from the turnpike road; its commodious internal arrangements, together with the diversity of the attached grounds, and the salubrity of its site are peculiarly adapted "to administer to a mind diseased."

BATHAMPTON is distant about three miles N.E. of Bath, lying on the north side of the river Avon, and immediately opposite Batheaston, it contains but few inhabitants and possesses but little worthy of notice. A church and a chapel are all the places devoted to divine worship, the former, with that of Bathford, which is about half a mile farther from Bath, constitute a living, which is in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth line of Railway branches off from the Great Western at this place where there will be a station.

TWERTON is about two miles W. of Bath and on the the line of the Great Western Railway. This place was formerly noted for its extensive manufacture of superfine woollen cloth. As late as 1838, two mills gave regular employment to upwards of seven hundred persons; at present there is only one mill the productions from which are very limited.

The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a large and ancient stone structure standing on an eminence. Living, a vicarage in the patronage of Oriel college, Oxford. Here are chapels for Baptists and Wesleyans, and several schools for children of both sexes —Population 3,342.

The following would have been inserted in the Descriptive Account of BATH; but it came to hand too late for that purpose.

THE PHONETIC INSTITUTION, 5, NELSON PLACE, BATH, (conducted by MR. J. PITMAN), and the PHONETIC PRINTING OFFICES, 1, ALBION PLACE, UPPER BRISTOL ROAD, (under the management of A. J. ELLIS, ESQ. 4, LANSDOWN CRESCENT), are established for the purpose of reforming the written and printed representation of the English language. This it proposes to effect by the use of a new alphabet of FORTY LETTERS, which represent all the distinct sounds heard in speech, each letter being invariably employed for one particular sound, and each sound being always represented by one particular letter. The art of writing, in accordance with these principles, is termed Phonography, and the art of printing Phonotypy.

The new alphabet assumes three forms, for as many different purposes, two of them being employed in writing, and the other in printing.

1.—The PHONETIC SHORT-HAND ALPHABET is composed of geometrical lines and curves of the simplest formation, similar to other Short-hand Alphabets, but used in a different manner.

2.—The PHONETIC LONG HAND ALPHABET is like the usual writing Alphabet, with the addition of some new letters. Twenty-three of the old letters are retained, and are employed, in their most usual signification (k, q, and x, being rejected), and SEVENTEEN new ones are added.

3.—The PHONETIC PRINTING ALBHABET, is the usual printing alphabet, with the addition of the required SEVENTEEN letters.

The advantages of a Phonetic representation of language by means of these alphabets, are these two: —First, by the employment of Phonetic Short-hand (the learning of which is the work of but a few hours) at least five-sixth of the toil of writing is saved; Secondly, by means of Phonetic Printing, the acquisition of the arts of reading and spelling, are pronounced on unquestionable authority, "the most difficult of human attainments," and which now occupies several years in the life of every person who acquires them in a satisfactory manner—becomes the pleasant occupation of only a few weeks. All difficulties of spelling, and all doubts respecting the pronunciation of a word, are removed, by making its sound and its orthography agree. Every information on this "Writing and Printing Reform" is given in the clearest possible manner in the publications of MR. PITMAN and MR. ELLIS.

Phonetic Societies, in connection with the Bath Central Phonetic Institution, are established in most of the principal towns of Great Britain, and in many smaller places, the members of these Societies, and many other persons not formally united with them, write on the Phonetic principle in their ordinary business and correspondence; and from the rapid progress the system has already made, there is every reason to expect, that at no very distant period, it will be the one generally adopted for every purpose.

ECLIPSE.—Total Eclipse of the Moon, September 12, visible at Greenwich.

BRISTOL,

CLIFTON AND THE HOTWELLS,

BEDMINSTER, ASHTON, BRISLINGTON, KEYNSHAM, PILL AND STAPLETON.

BRISTOL.—Brightstow, Bristolia, or Caer Oder, for by these names this ancient and important city was called by the Saxons, Romans and Welsh, stands on a sandy foundation in the immediate neighbourhood of two rivers, the Avon and the Frome, in two distinct counties, viz. Gloucestershire and Somersetshire, but by far the greater portion belongs to the former. There is much conflicting evidence respecting the origin of this highly enterprising and mercantile city, which has for a long period been the emporium for South Wales. It stands, by railroad distances, 119 miles W. of London, 90 S.S.W. of Birmingham, 37½ S.S.W. of Gloucester, 33 N.N.E. of Bridgewater, 12 W.N.W. of Bath, and by road 30 S.S.E. of Monmouth; contained by the census of 1841—140,158 inhabitants.

This inland port is entirely independent of the two counties in which it is situated, possessing jurisdiction of its own, but is joined to Gloucester for the formation of a Bishop's See. It is the second city in England, and has appropriately been named the 'metropolis of the west.' It has long been celebrated for its venerable antiquity—for the advantages of its situation—for its historical associations—for the beauty of its public edifices—and for the uncompromising energy of its intelligent inhabitants.

By the best authenticated documents it appears that Bristol is indebted for its origin to Brennus, a King of Britain, who flourished 330 years before the Christian era; but at what exact point of time it took its rise is now a subject of small importance, subsequent events having greater claims to attention; and for the purpose of rendering these as lucid as possible we will arrange them in the following order: the historical facts connected with this city—its exportation, importation and home-trade—its internal government—a general description of the place, more particularly the religious and other public buildings—the numerous charities which it contains, and other matters of interest and importance.

The annals of Bristol extend over a very wide period of time, and form as it were a theatre in which a great number of tragical scenes intimately connected with the national drama have been performed. During the sovereignty of the first Edward, who reigned early in the tenth century, this place suffered severely from fierce and numerous bodies of Danes, who in one of their predatory expeditions ventured up the Bristol channel, spreading devastation and death on either shore, but Bristol appears to have been the spot chosen by them for the full development of their truculent and blood-thirsty disposition; and so effectually was their dreadful purpose conducted that several hundreds of both sexes and every age fell victims to their brutal fury, and after ladening themselves with plunder, and destroying a considerable portion of the place, proceeded onward to commit fresh depredations; they were however subsequently defeated with great slaughter by Edward, who some time after erected five castles along the river Avon for the defence of places lying upon its banks.

The chief of these strong holds, according to Bishop Turgot, was the celebrated one of Bristol. Some authorities however maintain that this castle was built by Robert Earl of Gloucester, an illegitimate son of Henry the I., but this controverted point is too deeply involved by time and precludes any satisfactory conclusion. The castle and town (it was not then a city) of Bristol have frequently been the battle grounds of many a fiery chieftain. Henry of Lancaster stormed the castle when defended by the friend of King Richard. Prince Rupert took it from the parliamentary army; they however regained it afterwards, and finally Cromwell razed it to the ground. Within the walls of this once extensive castle Eleanor, princess of Brittany, was incarcerated by King John, during a period of forty years; and within the dungeon of this castle the same tyrannical monarch committed the well-known deed of barbarity on the person of an unfortunate Jew named Abraham, of extracting a tooth per diem until he had payed a sum of ten thousand marks. The unhappy victim withstood this flagrant act of injustice and cruelty till he had sacrificed the whole of his teeth save one, and then complied with the exorbitant demand.

By a charter granted by Edward the III. in 1373, the town was separated from Gloucestershire and Somersetshire, and became a county of itself, but it was not until the reign of Henry VIII. that the place was made a city and the see of a Bishop.

In 1695 a mint for the coinage of money was established in Bristol, but continued only two years; during that brief period however above forty millions of pounds were coined, as were also Wood's copper pence, which called forth all the strength and sarcasm of that celebrated political writer, Dean Swift.

Serious riots took place here in 1749, occasioned by the erection of turnpike gates, and again in 1753, when the price of bread was very high. The principal actors in the last-mentioned insurrection were colliers, and it was not until many lives were sacrificed that a check was put on their proceedings. Another riot occurred in 1792, for the purpose of abolishing the tolls demanded at Bristol bridge, during which several persons were killed and many wounded by the Hereford Militia; and a second bread riot disturbed the public peace in 1801; but these tumultuous bodies were insignificant when compared to those who more recently defaced this fair and venerable city, we allude to the riots of 1831; on this occasion politics were made the pretext for scattering the seeds of anarchy and brutal outrage, the fruits of which cost Bristol a vast amount of capital—some of its fairest buildings—and much loss of life. There are several more historical incidences connected with this place, but they are not important enough to deserve attention; tradition however affirms that a parliament was held in this city so early as the thirteenth century.

We next come to the sources to which Bristol owes its prosperity; these are great and various, and embrace almost every description of mercantile speculation. From a very early period the merchants of Bristol have been engaged in maritime expeditions; it was by them Sebastian Cabot, a fellow citizen, was equipt for his voyages of discovery in the reign of Henry VII., and to that enterprising individual is awarded the honour of discovering Newfoundland, an event that to this day has proved of inestimable benefit, not only to England, but to the world at large. Bristol is still actively engaged in the cod fishery at that place, as well as entering considerably into foreign trade with kingdoms far remote, of which Spain, Portugal, America and the British plantations are of the utmost importance; in fact by the energetic attempts made by this city the commerce of England generally has been greatly facilitated and extended. The exports of this place consist of glass (under a variety of forms), wearing apparel, building materials, &c., which find their way in great quantities to foreign markets; this department of trade is greatly assisted by the application of steam as an agent of transmission. It was from the port of Bristol that those stupendous specimens of intelligent industry, the Great Western and the Great Britain Steam Ships, emanated; the former vessel has traversed the broad Atlantic in the short space of fourteen days, a feat unparalleled in the annals of navigation.

This City sends out vast cargoes of refined sugar, beer, perry, manufactured tobacco, and an innumerable number of home-made bottles, containing medicinal water, procured from the Hotwells, which is highly efficacious in removing a variety of painful and dangerous maladies. The importations are coal from South Wales (although there are many coal mines in the vicinity of Bristol, which yield great quantities), raw sugar from the plantations, tobacco plant from America, and many other articles of general utility. Some have maintained that if the port duties were reduced, the importations of Bristol would be considerably improved—this is a subject on which much argument and some angry feeling have been expended. Without entering into the merits of this controversy, we cannot shut our eyes to the enormous outlay made by the shareholders of this harbour.

Another prolific source of wealth and employment is the extensive inland trade carried on by this city. It would be a useless task were we to attempt a description of every ramification from this tree of commerce, or to point out the manifold benefits derived from its fruits, so various and abundant are the results; we will therefore enumerate a few of its principal and staple commodities. These consist of timber, the various articles manufactured at home, and those obtained by foreign intercourse, viz. glass, shoes, soap, hats, shot, snuff, tobacco (in its manufactured state), saddles, and work from the potteries in an infinite variety of classical taste and exquisite workmanship. Gentlemen connected with Bristol firms are continually travelling for mercantile purposes, neither city, market town, nor village escapes their vigilance; and as the articles manufactured at their respective establishments stand high in public estimation, this branch of commerce must be very extensive and profitable. Another great advantage is, that the modes for transmitting every variety of merchandize are facile and expeditious, as beside the rivers Avon and Frome, which are intersected by a number of canals, the Great Western—the Bristol and Exeter—and the Bristol and Gloucester Railways, convey an immense quantity of goods to and from Bristol daily.

The manufactures of this city are exceedingly numerous, comprising almost every description of articles necessary for public use and domestic comfort. This in all probability may be attributed to the excellent supply of coals obtained in its vicinity: for although South Wales furnishes a vast quantity, the mines of Ashton, Kingswood, Bedminster, Coal-pit Heath, and Nailsea, contribute many hundred tons annually for the general purposes of manufactory. The principal of these factories we now proceed to enumerate.

The foundries, both of cast and malleable iron, are in different quarters of the city on an extensive scale. There is one situated in Cheese Lane, where marine and land steam engines and boilers are made; one in Hotwell Road, that produces similar articles, also iron ships, and a variety of ponderous machinery; another in Marsh Street manufactures anchors, edge tools, chain cables, &c.: and at the Great Western works, near Cumberland Road, all kinds of materials for railway purposes, caissoons, iron ships, and other heavy iron work is manufactured; whilst another in Avon Street is engaged in the making of locomotives; besides these, a number of large foundries and works are stationed in more distant parts.

The flint glass manufactories* and the potteries of Bristol

* Glass was first made in England 1557, at which time the Venetians surpassed all other people in this useful branch of industry. The trade are very considerable, and have long been objects of curiosity to strangers, who are permitted to view the process. The glazing, painting, printing and enamelling of the ware, at the establishment of Messrs. Pountney and Goldney, are executed in a most masterly style; and the articles themselves bear a very striking resemblance to those which issue from the celebrated potteries of Spode or Wedgewood. The above businesses are conducted upon a large scale, both for exportation and home consumption.

The Bristol soap has long enjoyed a wide and high degree of celebrity, as have also the hats, tobacco and snuffs manufactured here. At Keynsham, five miles from the city, the Bristol Brass Battery and Wire Company's manufactory is situated. The quality of Bristol brass very far excels that of any other place, being entirely void of knots, and susceptible of a perfect smooth surface; it is therefore held in great repute by mathematical instrument makers, and for all purposes connected with the magnetic needle and other nautical implements

The lead works of Bristol are very extensive, as are those at Easton, belonging to Messrs. Bayly and Co., where the metal, after being smelted from the ore, is either rolled or cast into sheets, or manufactured into white lead of a high degree of purity. At other works in Avon Street, carried on by Messrs. Riddle & Co., in addition to the above preparations, red lead is also manufactured, and in Cheese Lane are extensive lead and iron rolling mills. Besides the lead works just noticed, a vast amount of this metal is consumed at the Bristol patent shot manufactory, belonging to Mr. Christopher George, and situated on Redcliff Hill. These shots, from their rotundity and equality, have acquired a considerable share of patronage. Sheet lead and pipe also of the same metal are produced at this establishment.

Chemical compounds are very extensively manufactured in Bristol, at the respective works of Messrs. Leonard, Jordan & Co., and Messrs. Tothill & Co.; the former producing alkali and oil of vitriol, and the latter alum, copperas and Epsom salts. Ivory black and oil of vitriol are was introduced into this country at so early a period, in consequence of the cheapness of fuel, and the existence of the best clay in the world for making crucibles, &c.

also made at the works belonging to Messrs. Jones and Prichard.

A vast trade is carried on in manufacturing wine and porter bottles. Crown glass is also made in considerable quantities at Nailsea.

The sugar refiners and distillers of Bristol are extensively engaged in their respective vocations; the spirits and loaf sugar vended by them are considered equal, if not superior to those produced in any part of the kingdom.

The great western cotton works in St. Philip's and Jacob are an assemblage of colossal buildings, erected for the manufacturing of cloth. In different compartments of this establishment, every variety of labour connected with this description of manufacture is conducted with skill and expedition; six engines, of from twenty to eighty-horse power, are continually employed, and the energies of fifteen hundred pairs of human hands are daily put in requisition; these consist of the cotton-spinner, the bleacher, and the clothier. On the same premises is an iron foundry of considerable magnitude, for casting and repairing the varied machinery necessary for the use of this important branch of commerce. A magnificent warehouse, formerly belonging to this firm, but now in the occupation of Mr. Edwards, the extensive corn merchant, is conveniently situated in Redcliff street, for the accommodation of vessels in the float, which is adjoining the premises.

Immediately opposite the Great Western Railway terminus is the painted floor-cloth manufactory of Messrs. Hare, which has excited much attention, as the article produced at this place is of a very superior quality. The gorgeous colouring and pattern, and the durability of the texture of this cloth (some pieces of which are nearly two hundred feet long and thirty feet wide) are universally admitted.

Another most important source of opulence to the city is ship-building, which is conducted on a very large scale in different parts of Bristol. This department of trade, however, has not kept pace with the increased spirit and discoveries of the present day, but from what cause this lethargy springs we are unable to mention. The Great Western and the Great Britain, as before stated, were both built here. The first of these cost £60,000, and the latter £120,000. We now arrive at the government of this city.

In accordance with the Municipal Bill, passed in the year 1835, the administration of Bristol is vested in a mayor, sixteen aldermen, and forty-eight town-councillors. This jurisdiction also embraces the assistance of a sheriff and his deputy, the recorder (no gentleman is duly qualified to hold this situation who has not been a barrister for at least five years), town-clerk, treasurer, coroner, city solicitor, and the various officers usually appended to civic government. The generality of these officials are elected annually, but eighteen magistrates are appointed by the Secretary of State, and upon these devolve a great portion of the affairs connected with Bristol.

In this city (which consists of ten wards) minor offences are determined before the recorder, who is the presiding judge, but all capital charges are referred to Gloucester. The police force consists of two hundred and twenty-five efficient officers, and a superintendent, with the usual complement of inspectors and other superior officers. This force has four station-houses, situated in convenient quarters of the city.

The sheriff, attended by his deputy, holds courts for the purpose of deciding questions of civil law. There is also a Tolzey Court, for the recovery of small debts, the chief officer of which is the recorder; but this court is now nearly superseded by the new County Court, which embraces a wide circuit, and takes cognizance of all demands under £20; the Court of Requests is entirely merged into the jurisdiction of that act.

Bristol sends two members to parliament; the elective power is composed of persons possessing freeholds of the annual value of forty shillings—by a rental of ten pounds—or by hereditary freedom, &c. &c. The number of constituents is about 11,500.

We next come to a description of this celebrated city. To the eye of a stranger, the general appearance of Bristol, with its seven or eight hundred busy streets and handsome squares, presents a happy combination of aristocratical grandeur and commercial activity. Possessing peculiar natural advantages for luxury or commerce, and adorned by every specimen of art, this city must ever continue a place of interest and importance. Its dimensions are three and a quarter miles in length, two and a half miles in breadth, and covers an area of 1,600 acres. The city is built on a variety of acclivities, inclined planes, and vale-like hollows or basins, but these add much to the appearance of the place, by affording a more extensive view of its buildings than if erected on a more level tract of land. From many points of the city objects of singular beauty reward the spectator—venerable churches—handsome public edifices—magnificent buildings devoted to science or intellectual amusement—and the successful application of commercial energies and speculation, happily blend to form a spectacle which excites the feelings and awakens the pride of every lover of his country.

Bristol contains upwards of thirty places of public worship connected with the establishment, viz. :—St. Mary's, Redcliff hill, St. John the Baptist, and Christchurch, in Broad street, the Cathedral, St. Augustin and St. Mark (the latter being the mayor's chapel), situated in College green, St. Thomas, in Thomas street, two named Trinity, respectively, standing in West street, and Hotwell road, St. Andrew's, Clifton hill, and St. Andrew's, at Montpellier, All Saints, and St. Werburgh, both in Corn street, St. Barnabas, in Ashley road, two St. Paul's, one in Bedminster, the other in Portland square, St. Philip's and Jacob, in Jacob street, St. Matthew, at Kingsdown, St. John's old church, in Bedminster, St. John the Evangelist, at Durdham Down, St. George, in Great George street, St. Nicholas, in Nicholas street, Orphan Asylum, at Hooks mill, the Temple Church, in Temple street, St. Michael's, on Michael's hill, St. Mary-le-port, in Mary-le-port street, St. James's, on St. James's parade, St. Luke, Barton hill, St. Peter, in Peter street, St. Stephen's, at St. Stephen's avenue, and Redland Chapel of Ease, in Upper Redland, &c. &c. Several of these churches are deservedly celebrated for their venerable antiquity—their architectural beauty—and for the many noble monuments they contain. The principal one is St. Mary's, Redcliff, which is indeed a glorious pattern of ecclesiastical edifices, and was built in 1293, by a wealthy mayor of Bristol, named Simon de Burton. This church was subsequently enlarged and richly adorned by William Canynge, a very worthy person, who acted such an important part in the tragedy of Chatterton, "The marvellous boy who perished in his pride." This superb church has much the appearance of a cathedral, and is an object of great interest and admiration. Queen Elizabeth was of opinion that this church by far excelled any other in her dominions, and many thousands have corroborated the truth and justice of that assertion, but time and storms have committed fearful ravages upon this noble building; yet by the liberality of many affluent individuals, its entire restoration is in contemplation. The interior of this church is adorned with a richly wrought baptismal font, a magnificent organ, and other articles connected with a Christian temple. The mayor and corporation of Bristol annually visit this exquisitely formed edifice, and this visit is invariably made on Whit-Sunday.

The other parish churches of this place are graceful buildings, as is also the cathedral, which was in days long past a monastery, but some doubts exist as to who was the real founder. This edifice contains many handsome memorials, among which there is one to Bishop Butler, author of the Analogy.

In addition to the parish churches already enumerated, there are chapels for almost every body of Dissenters, together with Catholic chapels, and a Jewish synagogue. In the Catholic place of worship, in Trenchard street, the Irish giant, Patrick Cotter (better known as O'Brien), is interred. This son of Anak was eight feet high, and not being ambitious of posthumous fame, took every precaution while living to enable his monstrous limbs to rest in peace; for this purpose he was buried twelve feet below the surface of a rock.

The other public buildings in Bristol are very numerous, and consist of edifices, chambers, and offices for every department of polity, commerce and science.

The Council House, completed in 1827, is a commodious pile of buildings, surmounted by a statue of Justice, executed by E. H. Baily, R.A. a native son of genius. This edifice is also adorned with various specimens of sculpture; the base consists of the Magistrate's court (in which justice is daily administered), the Town Clerk's offices, &c. The Council Chamber contains many excellent portraits of persons who have benefited the city by their wealth or talents,—these paintings are by the first masters both of ancient and modern schools.

The Exchange is a large and convenient structure, closely connected with the Post Office on the one hand, and the Norwich Union Insurance Office on the other. This Exchange was erected at an expense of £50,000., the cost of which was defrayed by the Chamber of Bristol.

The Guildhall, situated in Broad street, and completed in 1843, from designs by Mr. R. Pope, is in the Tudor style of architecture, with niches in front occupied by statues of Queen Victoria—Edward III., a monarch who granted many privileges to this city—Sir Michael Foster—Edward Colston, Alderman Whitson, and the Rt. Hon. John Dunning. Above the upper windows are carved the armorial bearings of the Lord High Stewards, and on the base those of former Mayors. The centre of this building is at least seventy feet in height, in which is a grand entrance for Judges, Mayor, Grand Juries, Magistrates, Counsellors and other appendages to a Hall of Justice. The Court of Bankruptcy and the new County Court are held within this structure. Connected with the building is a yard for the convenience of prison vans and their loads, by which arrangement prisoners are conveyed to and from the courts with the greatest secrecy.

There are two prisons in Bristol, viz.—Bridewell and the Gaol, both modern buildings—the first is devoted to the confinement of criminals accused of minor offences, but the latter is a place of punishment for offenders of more dangerous character; every attention however is paid to the sanatory and moral condition of its inmates consistent with the well being of society at large.

The Arcades of Bristol add greatly to the appearance of the city, and will suffer nothing if compared with those of London, Dublin, Bath, &c.

The New Branch Bank of England, adjoining the Guildhall (opened November 15th, 1847), is a fine edifice, partly in the Grecian style of architecture, with Doric pillars in front, and surmounted by a handsome pediment.

The Philosophical Institution, the Commercial Rooms, the Great Western Terminus, and many other buildings are worthy of the second city in England.

The Theatre Royal is admirably adapted for "stage struck aspirants," it is situated in King street, and received the unqualified approbation of David Garrick, who frequently performed in it.

The gates and bridges of Bristol are worthy of inspection. The quays and wharfs of this port are very convenient, extending more than a mile, and bounded by a sufficient depth of water to accommodate vessels of almost every burden.

Since writing the former portion of this descriptive sketch, we perceive that the Corporation have agreed to purchase the Docks (subject to the approbation of the Legislature), and that eventually the port dues will be diminished, so as to enable this port to compete with others less advantageously situated —this will in all probability give an impetus to trade, and render the commercial influence of Bristol still more important.

The markets of this ancient city are, one for cattle near to the New Cut, which occupies an area of four acres, with every convenience attached, and capable of containing many thousand sheep, pigs and cattle; one in High street, containing three arcades, for every description of meat, butter, eggs, poultry, &c. on Wednesday and Saturday,—one in Union street, for the same commodities, with an additional supply of fish on Monday, Wednesday and Friday—and one for coals, hay and straw, on Tuesday and Saturday; the latter are held in St. James's Church yard. There is also one under the Exchange piazza, for corn and flour.

The annual fairs occur on the first day of March and the first day of September; these are held in the cattle market, where immense herds of cattle are congregated. Bristol also enjoys a more extensive trade in tanned leather than almost any other city in England.

The charitable institutions of this place are so numerous, that to do justice to them all would fill a goodly volume; we must therefore content ourselves with mentioning a few of the principal ones. The Bristol Infirmary, which stands conspicuous as being the first Asylum established throughout the united kingdom for the relief of the sick and wounded poor—the Bristol Dispensary, for poor lying-in-women—the Bristol General Hospital—Institution for Ophthalmia, in Lower Maudlin street—a similar institution in Frogmore street—Asylum for Orphan Girls—the National Benevolent Institution—the Bristol Samaritan Society—the Bristol Deaf and Dumb Institution, and St. Peter's Hospital, with a vast number of richly endowed schools, and other excellent institutions.

Bristol, at the present time, must be considered in a flourishing and improving state; its municipal arrangements are excellent, it is maintained in perfect condition, lighted with gas, well paved and cleansed, and has an abundant supply of pure and wholesome water, from the Mendip hills, about fifteen miles distant, which water is conveyed in a culvert of masonry to the reservoir (which embraces an area of thirty acres) at Barrow, distant five miles from the city; and thence by means of two pipes, one twenty inches in diameter, the other twelve, whose ponderous weight is borne over the Avon, at Bedminster bridge, into the city, by a scientifically constructed wooden arch of 110 feet span. By this ingenious and useful contrivance the inhabitants of both Bristol and Clifton will, ere long, be bountifully supplied with the limpid stream, a luxury hitherto denied them. According to the opinion of the Engineer, Mr. Simpson, (who is engineer of the Chelsea Water Works), the water will, on the gravitation system, after supplying nearly the whole of the city, rise to a height equal to the roofs of the houses at the top of Park street, so that each floor may be supplied by a spontaneous flow, without any machinery or pumping; and by a very moderate use of artificial power, the most elevated houses in Clifton and the neighbourhood of Bristol will have similar advantages. The water is obtained from the river Chew, at Chewton Mendip, at an elevation of upwards of 400 feet above the city, and the Barrow reservoir is 300 feet higher than the floating harbour at Bristol.

The objects of curiosity in this city are very numerous, and of the most diversified character; the Cathedral, the various parish Churches, and almost every street contains something to awaken the attention of the visitor, and to excite a laudable spirit of inquiry; this is more particularly the case as it respects many of those majestic and time-honoured edifices set apart for the services of religion; we have already noticed that ancient specimen of substantial masonry, St. Augustine's gate, situate near the Cathedral: let us now enter the sacred pile, and view the monuments of the dead, who sleep beneath its consecrated dust—one or two of which we will particularize. At the very entrance, stands an unassuming memorial of departed worth—this marble is sacred to the memory of the Rev. Samuel Love, one of the minor Canons of this Cathedral, and is illuminated by the glowing muse of Mrs. Hannah More. Bishop Butler's monument is of Painswick stone, with an inscription by Southey. There is a beautiful monument to a lady, executed by Chantrey—a female figure of exquisite grace personifies Resignation; the effect of this is very pathetic. There are some other tablets, and a few figures in the finely painted windows, deserving a most careful study.

The Church of All Saints contains, among other monuments, one to the memory of Edward Colston, Esq., a wealthy merchant, who died in 1721, bequeathing to Bristol considerable sums of money, to be expended in charitable institutions, and in otherwise benefitting the city; a list of his benevolent actions appears on his monument (which was executed by Rysbrack); among these, the following are conspicuous, on account of their importance and magnificence: £40,000. to endow a hospital, with master, ushers, catechist, and a number of boys; £8,500. to erect an almshouse, to support twenty-four aged men and women; building a school to educate forty boys; £3,000. and several other sums to various charities connected with this city; he also contributed largely to similar institutions in London, Lancashire and Surrey: the whole of these donations amount to nearly £100,000. This Church likewise contains a fine altar-piece, by Simmonds, and a pulpit adorned with handsome carving.

The church of St. Paul has a sublime altar-piece (Paul preaching at Athens). That of St. Peter will be visited by every lover of genuine poetry, for there lies the dust of that highly-gifted, but dissipated and unfortunate poet, Richard Savage. St. Stephen's church should be visited for the sake of its elaborately carved and decorated mahogany pulpit, for its Gothic pillars, Corinthian altar-piece, and many other graceful specimens of art; and a visit to the church of St. Philip and Jacob will amply repay a stranger's time bestowed for this purpose, as will also a visit to the churches of St. James, St. John the Baptist, St. Mary-le-Port, St. Matthew's, St. Michael's, the Mayor's chapel (which is highly interesting), St. Thomas's, &c. &c.; the latter contains a handsome altar-piece.

The Temple church is particularly deserving of notice, both on account of its interior decorations and the singular condition of its tower; this church (which once belonged to the Knights Templar, whose arms are visible in many parts of the building, although they have been somewhat confused by the negligence or ignorance of the innovators) abounds in objects of curiosity, calculated to awaken conjecture in the mind of an antiquarian, and to arrest the attention of the most casual visitor. Within the body of this sacred edifice will be found a brazen sconce, curiously formed of twelve distinct branches, adorned with figures of the Holy Virgin and Child, and St. George destroying the Dragon. The tower, which is quadrangular, and nearly 120 feet high, has by a natural sequence been separated from the church itself, and hangs as it were four feet from its original perpendicularity; the cause assigned for this is, that the building was erected on a soft, marshy foundation; some writers affirm that before this division occurred, the whole fabric rocked to such a degree that the oil was thrown from its lamps, and the lights extinguished. To a stranger, this "leaning tower" appears truly terrific, it has however stood, or rather leaned, for ages, and in all probability will continue to do so for ages to come: in the vicinity of this church are many curious relics of ancient religious houses.

Immediately in front of the Exchange stand four massive tables of bronze, bearing inscriptions explanatory of the names of their respective authors, and the motives which caused their erection; these tables were originally in the Tolzey piazza, but their present position is much more advantageous. To decipher their inscriptions will afford a few moments' gratification to the curious. There are also many other objects well worth the attention of persons visiting this ancient and interesting city; among which we would suggest an inspection of the Bristol Philosophical Institution, situated at the foot of Park street, with its elaborately sculptured portico, and a museum richly stored with models, marble busts and scientific mechanism, while the neighbouring rooms contain a valuable collection of rare specimens connected with conchology, geology, and zoology.

If however the visitor delights in expansive views and beautiful scenery, his fondest dreams may here be realized; here he may ramble at will "from grave to gay"—from the majestic ruggedness of rocky precipices, to the elysian-like softness of "nature's calm retreat," and when fatigued with the crowded city and its undulating mass of human beings—find peace and tranquillity amid the sylvan beauties which surround its boundaries.

The walks and rides in the vicinity of Bristol have long been duly appreciated, both as it regards their comfortable situation, and diversified appearance; among the former the Quays, the Arcades, the Terraces and many other parades equally attractive, are the continual resort of persons who reside in this city, as well as the stranger. To those who are enabled to indulge in the luxury of a coach, and to those who prefer equestrian exercise, there are in the neighbourhood of Bristol many extensive tracts of land admirably adapted for these purposes—the drives over Durdam Down, branching out in almost every direction, have been highly eulogised by persons duly qualified to form correct opinions on such a subject; and there are also many other fascinating localities, which we would joyfully enumerate did our space allow—but in a work like the present the dulce must give place to the utile, we must therefore with the following miscellaneous information bid farewell to this truly venerable city.

The most favourable spots to obtain views are Montpellier, the respective hills of Pile and Brandon, and Bedminster Down (on the Exeter road); the prospects from these points are at once bold and extensive.

The Bristol General Cemetery, in which there are two Chapels to accommodate members of the establishment and those of various dissenting bodies, is situated between Bath and Bristol, one mile from the latter city, and has a graceful sombre appearance, well befitting the solemn purpose to which it is appropriated—every information respecting the regulations of this place can be obtained by applying at the Office, 12, Corn street.

The Banking Establishments are, the Bank of England Branch—National and Provincial Bank—Miles, Harford, Battersby and Co.—West of England and South Wales District Bank—Baillie, Baillie, Cave, Palmer and Edwards, and Stuckey's Banking Company; the situation of these Establishments and the names of their London correspondents will be duly registered in the annexed professional list; we may however here state that the Savings Bank is in St. Stephen's Avenue.

Bristol has five weekly Newspapers, viz. the Bristol Mercury, published on Saturday morning, and the Bristol Gazette, on Wednesday evening, both advocating liberal principles; whilst the Bristol Times, the Bristol Mirror, and Felix Farley's Bristol Journal, each of Conservative politics, are published on Saturday, and a Temperance Journal issues from the press monthly.

Steam Packets leave Bristol daily for Ireland, Wales, Liverpool, and other English ports; and the Mails, both Home and Foreign, are despatched daily, weekly or monthly, according to their destination. Flys, Hackney Coaches and every other description of vehicles are always in attendance, to suit the convenience of those who desire to reach either the Steam Packets or Railway; the fares of these conveyances generally speaking are moderate, although as a matter of course there are some unprincipled Jehus who will prove extortioners if they have the opportunity of doing so—there are also several Omnibuses, which daily ply to and from various villages, situated at an easy distance from this city.

In conclusion Bristol may justly be considered as a place of vast importance in every point of view—its almost unlimited commercial influence and energies—the great advantage arising from its favourable position—the prominent part it has taken in historical and political events connected with the fate of empires—its constitutional forms of government—its strength—its valuable institutions—its endowments and munificence in relieving the wants and ameliorating the condition of suffering humanity—and above all the inflexible spirit of integrity that pervades the greater portion of its inhabitants, have rendered this ancient city well worthy the noble motto it has assumed, viz.

VIRTUTE ET INDUSTRIA.

CLIFTON, or, as it was anciently named, the City of the Chasm, is most delightfully situated on the banks of the river Avon, about one mile distant from Bristol. This celebrated watering place is built on the apex of a cliff or rock, a circumstance by which it acquired its modern name. Surrounded by scenery of the most exquisite description, and embellished by all that art and luxury can supply, it now forms an attractive focus of fashion, wealth, and beauty. The atmosphere being redolent of health, and the mineral waters being deservedly esteemed as highly invigorating, there is a continual influx of affluent visitors, whose attenu-ated frames and shattered nerves render an abode at this temple of Hygea absolutely essential; and numbers who were actually in the hall of death, have, by a brief sojourn in Clifton, experienced all the delightful transports of convalescence.

Few places are so happily situated as this; and the discoveries made in science during the past ten or twelve years have been applied by the inhabitants with great and permanent success. Steam-packets are continually employed in loading or unloading their cargoes of human beings, and vessels of every description are seen at a little distance. Added to these, the artist's skill has been put in unceasing requisition, every aid that could beautify the parish, or conduce to its comfort, has been employed to render it attractive, and thus make it still more worthy of public patronage. The rock upon which Clifton is placed is limestone, very similar to marble, with veins of various hues, very hard, and beneath the lapidary's hands capable of assuming a smooth, mirror-like surface. Concealed among the crannies of this rock, lie an abundance of quartz, crystals, and other native brilliants; many of the spars here found are exquisitely clear and beautiful, rivalling in appearance the most costly productions of the Oriental world. Very many choice specimens of botany are indigenous to Clifton.

On the point of the rocks known as St. Vincent's, and upwards of 300 feet above the main bed of the river Avon, is an ancient and romantic chapel, dedicated to the venerable person whose name they bear. In a suitable building on another part of these rocks are some excellent telescopes, a large camera obscura, and other scientific instruments; and beneath it a circular flight of stone steps leads to a subterraneous passage, ending in a flight of steps at the eastern entrance to a cavern, called Ghyston, or the Giants' Cave, at the western extremity of which an aperture, with iron railings in front, overlooks the Avon, that river being more than of 200 feet below.

The public buildings of Clifton are of a superior order, and consist of crescents, churches, assembly-rooms, billiard and card rooms, reading rooms, zoological gardens and many other places of instruction and amusement. The churches in Clifton are as follow:—St. John's Church, on Durdham Downs, and Christchurch, in Clifton Park a new erection, and two other places of worship in connection with the Establishment, besides a Baptist Chapel, opened about six months since, in Richmond Park. The Victoria Assembly Rooms are a superb and graceful ornament to Clifton; the classical purity of the entrance with its Corinthian columns and sculptured pediments speaks highly for the refined taste and discrimination of its acting committee, and the comfortable description of its internal government is equally convincing of their courtesy and care. The principal hotels and boarding houses are the Bath Hotel, the Royal Hotel, Sion House, and many others of a very respectable order. The following places are well worth the trouble of visiting, viz., Clifton Park, the Crescents, Paragon Buildings, Windsor Terrace, the Mall, &c., while a variety of drives and walks, presenting scenery of singular beauty, are equally attractive. Clifton likewise contains many majestic private residences, among these one near Clifton Church is much frequented by fashionable visitors, who go to view the admirably contrived gardens and unique grotto belonging to its courteous proprietor. There is another on Clifton Down, styled Manilla Hall, and was built by Sir William Draper, the conqueror of Manilla, and uncompromising antagonist of the celebrated Junius. At the entrance of this mansion are two objects well calculated to awaken a glow of patriotism in the coldest bosom; these are an obelisk to that consummate statesman, William Pitt, and a cenotaph in honour of heroes who once belonged to the 79th, and fell at Arcot, Pondicherry, Manilla, and the Philippine Isles. There are many other mansions deserving notice, but we must call attention to the celebrated HOTWELLS.

The medicinal qualities of these springs are too well appreciated to need a long and learned disquisition in praise of their excellent effects in many distressing maladies "which flesh is heir to;" it will be sufficient for our purpose if we state that in consumptions, scrofulas, dysenteries, ophthalmia (or diseases of the eye), ulcers, gout, cholic, diabetes, and other uterine disorders, many medical authorities have pronounced them infallible remedies; while in the more stubborn and deeper-rooted maladies, like consumptive cancers and infected lungs, if they possess not the power to entirely eradicate they are highly beneficial in alleviating the pangs of the afflicted.

Traditional reports ascribe to accident the discovery of the valuable qualities contained in these springs; but this is irrelative to the subject. Of one fact alone we are certain, viz., that in the year 1695 a lease was obtained from the merchant venturers of Bristol (they being Lords of the Manor in this place) by a few enterprising citizens, who established a bath, which was however subsequently removed to a more eligible situation at no great distance from the original site. The present is a place of great resort, the visiters being generally valetudinarians, accompanied by their relations, friends, and confidential domestics; numbers of respectable people also make annual excursions to the Hotwells, attracted by its salubrious atmosphere and the beauty of its surrounding scenery. The air of this place is soft and dry (the wells are so situated as to exclude all winds prejudicial to health or comfort), and the accommodations ample; these visits are ever remembered with gladness.

The mineral springs are tepid and saline, and all those who have drank of them speak highly of their superiority when compared with other medicinal waters, while the pump room, the bath, and every other appendage are conducted with the utmost good taste and decorum. The principal public buildings at the Hotwells are Trinity Church, Dowry Chapel, Hope Chapel, York Hotel, Gloucester Hotel, Cumberland Hotel, the Hibernian Hotel, and some others. The Hotwells abound in private lodging houses of a very superior description. Among other objects of curiosity connected with Clifton we would direct the visiters' attention to the Suspension Bridge, for, although the work is at present incomplete, its romantic situation will afford some degree of wonder and gratification. Total population of Clifton parish (including the Hotwells, which forms a part of it) as returned in 1841—14,177.

BEDMINSTER is situated in the hundred of Hartcliffe and Bedminster, Somersetshire. This populous parish constitutes an important suburb of Bristol, on account of its collieries and some extensive tanneries which exist there. There are two parish churches, one dedicated to St. John the Baptist, the other to St. Paul—a modern erection; there is also an Independent and a Wesleyan Chapel. This place has wonderfully improved during the last few years, and contained, by the census of 1841, 17,862 inhabitants. Situated in the same hundred stands—

LONG ASHTON; it is three miles from Bristol, and produces good supplies of strawberries and cream. The parish contained, in 1841, 17,862 inhabitants, and the church is dedicated to All Saints. Ashton Court is an ancient building belonging to Sir John Smyth, Bart., it is located on a rising spot of ground in a fine park, and surrounded by majestic woods. This domain was granted the Ashton family by Richard the Second. The arms and devices of Ashton appear in the orginal portion of the building; a part of the more modern building was executed by Inigo Jones.

STAPLETON is another suburb of Bristol, being two miles distant from that city. This place is situated in the hundred of Barton Regis, and contained by the last census, 3,944 inhabitants; there are many delicious walks and some fine scenes in the neighbourhood, which induce persons of taste to reside here.

BRISLINGTON, this parish, situated in the hundred of Keynsham, is distant from Bristol three miles; it is bounded by the river Avon, and contains a church (dedicated to St. Luke), and a private Lunatic Asylum. Population of the parish in 1841—1,338.

KEYNSHAM, in the same hundred, is five miles from Bristol, and between seven and eight miles from Bath. The church is a neat, commodious pile, truly English in appearance, and the living is a discharged vicarage, patron the Duke of Buckingham. Population in 1841—2,307. An endowed school for twenty boys, and almshouses for six widows, both owe their existence to the benevolence of Sir Thomas Bridges. There is also a spring of mineral water highly beneficial in some diseases of the eye.

ST. GEORGE'S PILL is in the parish of the eastern hundred of Portbury and county of Somerset, seven miles N.W. of Bristol. From its proximity to the Avon it forms an excellent pilot station for that city. It contains an Episcopal place of worship, and chapels for various bodies of dissenters. Population about 3,000.

LEIGH COURT, this truly noble establishment is about three miles distant from Bristol, it is the seat of William Miles, Esq., and has long been an object of great attraction to all who admire the mighty conceptions of sublime genius. Its exterior possesses the beauty of a Grecian temple, and its interior is enriched by every art; here may be viewed the most rare and costly productions of human ingenuity—brilliant vases, intricate mechanism, and a collection of paintings worthy of a regal palace.

BRADFORD.

BRADFORD—named by the Saxons Bradenford, which signified a broad river, or broadford—is an ancient market town in the county of Wilts, distant 100 miles W. by S. of London, 8 S.E. of Bath, and 23 W.S.W. from Marlborough. It is situated in a basin-like hollow on the Lower Avon, and is well defended from easterly and northerly winds by surrounding hills, from which many views of great beauty are discernible. The town of Bradford is principally built of stone. An excellent bridge of the same material and consisting of nine spacious arches divides the town into two parts. There is also a minor bridge at a lower point of the river.

Bradford contains two Churches, and several Chapels for the accommodation of various dissenting bodies. The parish Church—which is embellished with stained windows and contains many monuments of interesting character—is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and the living is a vicarage in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The other church is of a more recent date, erected about six years since by voluntary contributions, and named Christ Church, built by Mr. Manners, of Bath, in the perpendicular style of Gothic architecture. To this church Captain Palairet, a resident in the neighbourhood, has presented a fine-toned organ; the same gentleman is now erecting at his own cost school-rooms adjoining the sacred edifice. The patronage of the living of Christ Church is vested in the Vicar of Bradford.

By virtue of a local Act of Parliament the government of Bradford is vested in the hands of magistrates, who hold petty Sessions once in every month, and commissioners, selected from the most influential of the inhabitants, who preside at special sessions as occasion may require. This town formerly returned one member to Parliament, but the privilege has long been abrogated.

The antiquity of Bradford is unquestionable, as its name occurs in the works of Tanner, Leland, and other early writers. It at one period was extensively engaged in the manufacture of broad cloth, which was held in the highest estimation; but notwithstanding this, and its advantageous position on the line of the Kennett and Avon canal for the transmission of merchandise, the trade has undergone a fearful diminution and almost fallen into disuse. But as the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway Company are forming a line from the Great Western station at Bathampton, which will pass through this town in the direction of Corsham, branching off to Trowbridge, Warminster, Salisbury, and other places, it is probable that Bradford by these means may regain much of its original mercantile importance.

There are two markets in this place, the first for corn and cattle (toll free) is held on each alternate Tuesday; the other is a weekly one for meat, fruit, and vegetables, held on Saturday. There are likewise two annual fairs: one on Trinity Monday, for cattle and articles of various description, and another called the Leigh fair, which occurs on the first Monday after the 24th of August, except that date falls on a Monday, when it is held on that day.

Among other public charities appertaining to Bradford some alms-houses situated on the Frome road claim a passing observation. In the year 1600, John Hall, Esq., of this place, endowed asylums for four old men, with an allowance of twenty pounds per annum, derived from an estate called Poxcroft farm, being in the immediate neighbourhood of Bradford, and now the property of the Earl Manvers, who is patron of the charity. The other alms-houses are for the maintenance of three aged women, both the founder's name and the period of endowment are buried in oblivion. The Right Hon. Sir John Cam Hobhouse (Lord of the Manor of Bradford) is patron of this charity.

The town contains a curious relic of antiquity in the ruins of a once fine mansion erected in the reign of Henry VIII., by John de la Véle, or the "man of a thousand," and was frequently the residence of the Kingston family. There are also some other time-honoured buildings closely connected with historical events.

Great Bradford embraces the chapelries of Atworth, Limpley Stoke, Holt, South Wraxhall, and Winsley, to which the tything of Leigh and Woolley is annexed, and contained in 1841 a population of 12,734 souls.

The course of the Avon all the way from Bradford to Bath abounds in the most rich and beautiful scenery—the valley is very narrow and diversified with wood, rock and meadow, divided by natural and artificial water, as the canal runs parallel with the Avon throughout this delicious vale. About two miles from Bradford in the course of this valley, the river Frome flows into the Avon at Freshford, where at the foot of a hanging-wood is a beautiful and picturesque "meeting of the waters." Opposite on the north and fronting the south of this valley is a hamlet, formerly designated Sum-mer-hill, but now by vulgar abbreviation called Murhill; this very warm and exceedingly healthy place is so completely protected from the north, east, and west winds, that the climate is as mild as in any part of the south of Devon. The earliest fruit and vegetables are supplied to the Bath market from this truly fertile and luxuriant spot, by the cottagers, and some of the fruit are even sent to London. The proprietor has lately converted some woody land of little worth into orchards, and there are now about 30 acres cultivated in the French style for the growth of apples, pears, and other fruit, and contain upwards of 25,000 trees, all table fruit of the choicest sorts that can be obtained from this or other countries, indeed, it has been pronounced by some of the most scientific gardeners of the present age as being the finest orchard in England, or perhaps in the world. A few years back a gentleman entertained the cottagers of this hamlet, which then contained ten cottages, and six of the occupants were then present whose united ages exceeded 500 years, being at once a convincing proof of the healthy state of this charming locality.

CALNE.

The once flourishing parliamentary and market town of CALNE is a borough and parish in the hundred of its own name, 6 miles E.S.E. of Chippenham (where is a railway station), 30 N.N.W. of Salisbury, and 88 W. by S. of London, rising on the river Calne, near a branch of the Wilts and Berkshire Canal. It is governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and 12 councillors, and returns one member to parliament; but from the first Edward's reign till the "Reform Bill" came into operation the town returned two members. The Lord of the Manor occasionally holds courts of baron and leet—present Lord of the Manor, the Marquis of Lansdown, who has an elegant mansion, named Bowood, standing near the town. His noble seat is on a scale of great magnitude, and surrounded by grounds laid out with consummate skill and taste.

The town of Calne consists principally of one long thoroughfare on the post road, is lighted with gas and paved. It is cleanly and agreeable in appearance, and contains many excellent houses (of stone), which are supplied with good water from an abundance of neighbouring springs—some of which help to augment the river Avon. At one period Calne was the seat of Royalty, some of the Saxon Monarchs having resided here. At that time the town possessed a castle the remains of which are no where visible, but many antique Roman curiosities have been found in different parts of the place. In the year 977 a synod was convened here, by the then Archbishop of Canterbury, to hear certain claims made by the monks in opposition of the secular clergy—during this sederunt the floor of the apartment fell with such violence as proved fatal to several of the latter party, the monks took advantage of this accident, making it appear as an instance of Divine justice on their adversaries, and thus obtained the victory.

The parish Church of Calne, dedicated to St. Mark, is a graceful pile, ornamented with a fine tower possessing a peal of 8 exquisitely toned bells and a perfect set of chimes—the benefice of which is a Vicarage. Patron, the Treasurer of Salisbury Cathedral. The chapel of ease, named Christ Church, is a perpetual curacy. Patron, the Vicar of St. Mark's. The Society of Friends and Methodists have each a place of worship, and the Baptists have two. There are here some excellent schools—the free grammar, now called the middle school, being entitled to exhibitions at the Universities. There is a market on Wednesday, and fairs for cattle on May 6th and September 29th. The population of the parish in 1841 (being the last census), 5,128.

Money orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. till 6 p.m. Letters to be registered must be presented at least half an hour before closing the box.

CHIPPENHAM,

WITH THE

VILLAGES OF CORSHAM AND LAYCOCK.

The market town of Chippenham, Wilts, is a corporate and parliamentary borough, situated on the Avon, in a parish and hundred of its own name, incorporated during the reign of Queen Mary, and now governed (in accordance with the Municipal Reform Act,) by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors. The borough of Chippenham has possessed the privilege of returning two members to Parliament (the bailiff or mayor being returning officer), since the reign of Edward I., and at one period was a place of considerable importance, its inhabitants being extensively engaged in the manufacture of superfine broad cloth, but like many other towns of the West of England it has now only the shadow of its former trade. It is distant 13 miles N.E. of Bath, 33 N.W. of Salisbury, 94 W. of London, and the parish, which includes several hamlets, contained in 1841 a population of 5,438.

The appearance of Chippenham is highly attractive; the town being lighted with gas, well-paved, and possessing some public buildings worthy of notice. The parish Church, which is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient Gothic structure with an elevated spire. The living is a discharged vicarage; patron, the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is also a neat stone chapel connected with a general cemetery recently established and used for public interment by all the religious denominations of the town. The other public buildings are an elegant stone bridge over the river Avon, and a commodious new Town Hall, erected at the sole expense of Joseph Neeld, Esq., M.P. for the borough. This building is placed over a spacious market-place; the hall contains an extensive ball-room, with a suite of smaller rooms communicating. The county courts, petty sessions, and other public meetings, are held in this building. The market is well supplied weekly with poultry, eggs, butter, cheese, &c. Adjoining the market house is a large cattle yard, used for the annual cattle shows; and likewise a corn market is held on Fridays—there is also a large market held regularly on the second Friday in each month, reported to be more extensively supplied with cheese than any other in the West of England. It is also largely supplied with cattle, sheep, and pigs. The wool markets occur on the second Fridays in the months of April, July, August, and November. The four hiring markets for servants are held on the Friday before and after Lady day, and on the Friday before and after Michaelmas day; and fairs for cattle, &c., are held annually on the 17th May, 22nd June, 29th October, and 11th December.

The trade now conducted at Chippenham is principally confined to malting, tanning, and the fabrication of fine cloth, some flour mills, a silk mill on a small scale (which has been for some years in operation), and the retail business of the town.

The Great Western Railway has a station at Chippenham, and the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway forms a junction with the Great Western about 3 miles from the town. The former railway company have erected considerable buildings adjacent to their station, where, under their auspices, a new town will, in all probability, soon grow up. As admirers of uniformity, we cannot, however, but condemn the irregular manner in which the houses have been placed.

Chippenham possesses a literary and scientific institution, with a reading room liberally supplied with periodicals, &c.; lectures are occasionally delivered to the members. There is also a newspaper room in the town, which has been established for several years.

CORSHAM is a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, and is situate at a small distance from the Great Western Railway. The parish Church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, and the living a discharged vicarage; patron, the Lord of the Manor, at present Lord Methuen, before whose steward the court leet is held. Both the offices of sheriff and coroner for the liberties of Corsham are vested in the bailiff of the manor, elected by the tenants, and chosen from among themselves. In addition to the parish Church the Baptists and Independents have each a chapel. The public charities are lady Margaret Hungerford's alms-houses, with a chapel and school for both sexes, founded and endowed by that lady in 1688. There are two annual fairs, one held on the 7th March, the other on September 4th. The population of the parish in 1841 was 3,842.

LAYCOCK is a parish in the same hundred as Corsham, the village being distant 3½ miles S. from Chippenham, on the banks of the Avon, and in the line of the Wilts and Berks canal. The Church is ancient and contains many curious monuments. The Independents have also a place of worship. Here formerly was a very extensive nunnery, dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. Bernard, the remains of which have been altered into a private dwelling, and has been occupied for a considerable time by the Talbot family. In one of the rooms of this Abbey is a copy of the Magna Charter (as confirmed by Henry VIII.), and many ancient deeds. Laycock at an early period was a market town. Fairs for horned cattle, sheep and horses still take place on July 7th and December 21st. Population of the parish in 1841, 1,780.

DEVIZES.

The ancient market town of DEVIZES is a corporate and parliamentary borough in the hundred of Potterne and Cannings, which hundred is situated in the northern division of Wilts, and is 19 miles E. by S. of Bath, 22 N.W. by N. of Salisbury, and 89 W. by S. of London. The town rises gracefully from a considerable acclivity, and is surrounded by highly cultivated lands abounding in scenes at once rich and diversified. The name Devizes is a compound derived from the words De and Vies (or Divisio), which signifies a portion or division, and the occasion of this name was that the town acknowledged the authority of two distinct rulers—to wit—the King of England and the Bishop of Salisbury, by whom the revenue of Devizes was enjoyed.

Perhaps there are but few places in the British nation that have figured more frequently or more prominently in the annals of history than this town. At various epochs of time it has been the scene of successful tyranny or intense slavery—it has been the battle-field of mail-clad warriors, and the tristing place for disputatious zealots. Its castle built by Roger, Bishop of Salisbury, during the reign of Henry I. was extremely large, and such was its strength that for a long period it was deemed impregnable: within this stronghold, Nigel, the Bishop of Ely, entrenched himself with a number of his friends and a body of his soldiers, when that prelate was condemned to perpetual imprisonment by Stephen for contumacy. The enraged monarch quickly besieged the refractory bishop, who, nevertheless, maintained his position for the space of 12 days, when Nigel surrendered in consequence of a vow made by Roger, Bishop of Lincoln, who—to save his son from the disgrace of dying on the public scaffold—had bound himself by oath to take no food till the castle was delivered into King Stephen's hands. When this vow was accomplished a vast amount of money and other effects belonging to the Bishop of Ely was seized upon by the successful monarch. Not long after the affray between King Stephen and Nigel, the castle of Devizes was again forcibly taken possession of by Robert Fitz Hubert, under a false plea of holding it for the service of Queen Matilda, for which act he was denounced as a traitor—by both parties, who were then contending for regal power—and finally hanged. In the early part of the thirteenth century, Henry the Third's prime minister (Hubert de Burgh) was incarcerated within these walls; but, fearing the enmity of Peter de Rupibus who bore him strong hatred and was newly appointed governor, Hubert, by the connivance of his guard, effected his escape from the castle and sought safety in the parish church; but the sanctity of the altar availed him nought, and he was dragged from its precincts with the emblem of salvation in his hands; but this act of sacrilege was too glaring to be overlooked, and by the influence of the clergy Hubert was reinstated in his sacred shelter. The rancour of his implacable foe, however, almost rendered the refuge of no effect, for Peter de Rupibus placed sentinels around the altar—the fate of Hubert seemed now drawing near, either by the sword of his enemy or by the lingering pangs of hunger—he however eluded the vigilance of his foe and ultimately found safety in Wales.

During the civil wars between Charles and his parliament Devizes once more became the theatre of deadly strife. After the battle of Lansdown, Prince Maurice and the Marquis of Hertford for some time maintained possession of the castle and town—the latter being defended by entrenchments—against the parliamentary chief, Sir W. Waller: the garrison was on the point of surrendering (from a want of powder), when Lord Wilmot and a body of Royalists saved the town. In this action the parliament lost upwards of two thousand men, together with a large quantity of ordnance; this appears to have been the last military evil sustained by the town—its castle and fortifications being ultimately dismantled and destroyed.

Devizes has enjoyed the benefit of many valuable charters, but at present it is governed by a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, together with a recorder, (who presides at the Borough Quarter Sessions,) and the usual municipal subordinate functionaries; the Act of Parliament which appointed these officers also divided the borough into two distinct wards. The Summer Assizes and the Epiphany Sessions are also held in this town, and the County Court for the recovery of debts under £20 takes place at the Town Hall monthly, the presiding judge of which is Joseph Grace Smith, Esq.

At one period Devizes entered very largely into the manufacture of cloths and serges; but the town, in common with many others, has suffered a serious decrease in this branch of business, still there remains a silk throwing manufactory, and an iron foundry; snuff and tobacco are manufactured to some considerable extent, and a good retail trade is conducted in the town. Another prolific source of wealth enjoyed by Devizes is the facility of conveyance by the Kennett and Avon canal, which runs at no great distance from the town—on this canal boats laden with coals, corn, flour, malt, free-stone, and many other commodities, are continually passing and repassing, or disembarking their cargoes at Devizes and other towns; besides which a railway communication will shortly be established by the formation of a branch from Staverton, out of the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth line, now in active progress, and which is to join the proposed Hungerford Extension close to the town—this will, in all probability, produce a new and invigorating impetus to the trade of this locality.

Devizes presents an appearance of a more than ordinary pleasing character—many fine modern buildings are interspersed with quaint relics of by-gone years—the inhabitants are cheerful and industrious—the principal streets spacious, paved, illumed by gas, and possessing a good supply of water from wells—the commercial inns are large and convenient, and the retail shops numerous and respectable.

Here are two parish churches respectively dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. John—these are a united rectory to which presentation is made by the Crown: besides these the Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have places of divine worship. Moral instruction is dispensed by the Bear Club Charity (an institution of the past century, but still liberally supported), and other public schools. There are several public edifices belonging to Devizes—those of most importance are a literary and scientific institution, a house of correction, a lunatic asylum, the town hall, a council house, and a large commodious market house surmounted by a stone turret containing a clock. In addition to these an elegant stone cross stands in the centre of the Market place, erected in 1811, by Lord Sidmouth, who for a series of years was recorder of the borough and for six parliaments one of its members, Devizes having possessed the privilege of returning two members from an early period. The cross on the N.E. front exhibits an inscription as follows—"The mayor and corporation of Devizes avail themselves of the stability of this building to transmit to future times the record of an awful event which occurred in this Market place in the year 1753, hoping that such record may serve as a salutary warning against the danger of impiously invoking Divine vengeance, or of calling on the holy name of God to conceal the devices of falsehood and fraud. On the 25th of January, 1753, Ruth Pierce, of Potterne, in this county, agreed with three other women to buy a sack of wheat in the market, each paying their due proportion towards the same. One of these women collecting the several quotas of money discovered a deficiency, and demanded of Ruth the sum which was wanting to make good the amount. Ruth Pierce protested she had paid her share, and said she wished she might drop down dead if she had not—she rashly repeated this awful wish, when, to the consternation and terror of the surrounding multitude, she fell down and instantly expired, having the money concealed in her hand."

A very extensive corn market is held on Thursday, and the quantity here disposed of is almost incredible. Annual fairs take place on February 14th, April 20th, and Holy Thursday, for cattle horses, and sheep, July 5th, for wool, Oct. 20th, for cattle, sheep, and hogs. Population of Devizes (in 1841), including the chapelry of St. James, 6,478 souls.

Improvements are continually being effected, and a spirit of generous emulation seems to prevail in this truly delightful locality. The town and neighbourhood abound with noble mansions and extensive domains (surrounded with scenes of exquisite loveliness) and support two weekly journals, the respective titles of which are the Devizes and Wiltshire Gazette and the Wiltshire Independent.

Post-Office, Market-place, Post Master, Thomas Borough Smith. Letters are delivered daily at 7 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Money orders are granted and paid between the hours of 9 and ½ past 11 morning, 12 to 3 and 4 to 6 afternoons.

FROME,

WITH THE

VILLAGES OF BECKINGTON, MELLS, NUNNEY AND ROAD.

The ancient market town of FROME (or as it is sometimes named FROME SELWOOD) is a parliamentary borough, situated in a parish and hundred bearing its own name, and standing 13 miles S. S. E. of Bath, 9 S. of Bradford, and 108 miles W. S. W. of London. The town is built on each bank of the river Frome, from whence it has obtained the first portion of its name—the addenda of Selwood from a royal demesne bearing that appellation laying in the immediate vicinity, a very small part of which now remains. At two miles distance from the town, an extensive forest, forming a portion of the above-mentioned royal demesne, was for a long time the haunt of a desperate gang of robbers, who laid every traveller under contribution, but whose predatory practices were checked by felling large quantities of timber, and establishing small farms in many parts of the forest.

Although many of the streets in this town are narrow, its general appearance is attractive, the land on which it is built being undulated, and many considerable improvements effected thereon within the past few years—particularly an entire new street, adorned on either side by elegant mansions of stone obtained in the neighbourhood, and roofed principally with slate; but most of the other houses in the town are covered with thin cakes of stone, which bear a strong analogy to slates. In this street, which constitutes the chief thoroughfare, stands the market-house, a handsome, convenient and modern building.

The parish church of St. Peter is a large antique edifice of no distinct order of architecture, which may be attributed to the frequent repairs it has undergone; a handsome new front of freestone and some gothic arches have a good effect; the living is a vicarage—patron, the marquis of Bath. There are two other churches, named Trinity and Christchurch. The Baptists have three chapels; the Independents two; the Methodists and the Society of Friends one each. The other public buildings are: some almshouses for aged women and a school for boys; an asylum for old men and poor girls, who are maintained, and the latter prepared for situations; the free grammar school, founded by Edward VI. (now fallen into decay); the union workhouse; and a substantial stone bridge of five arches, that spans the river Frome at the south end of the town.

Frome is governed by local magistrates, a bailiff, and constables, —the latter selected at court leets held for the hundred—and returns one member to parliament.

The town has long been celebrated for manufacturing kerseymere and woollen cloth, which were once produced in vast quantities, and gave employment to nearly 5000 individuals. In the town and neighbourhood the manufacture of agricultural and other tools is carried on to a considerable extent; wool cards are also made here; and Frome enjoys a high reputation for its good malt liquors.

There are many fine mansions in and around this town; and, in the churchyard lie the remains of Dr. Ken, afterwards bishop of Bath and Wells, whose name is still popular as an author.

In addition to the free grammar school already mentioned, there are some excellent public schools and respectable private academies; efficient and well conducted charities also abound in almost every quarter of the town; the principal is a charity school, which supplies clothing, education, and funds for apprenticing 37 boys, the children of persons in indigent circumstances.

There are two large weekly and one monthly market held in this place, that on Wednesday is devoted to corn and cattle—another on Saturday affords an abundant supply of vegetables; the other market occurs on the last Wednesday of the month, and fairs take place on Feb. 24th and Nov. 25th for cattle, cheese, pedlary, and toys. Population in 1841, 11,500.

About 2½ miles from the last-mentioned town stands the pleasant little village of BECKINGTON, where, some years since, a good business in the clothing trade was conducted, which however has suffered a serious diminution. Near the village a battle was fought between King James II. and the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth. The parish church is dedicated to St. Gregory; living a rectory—patron, Henry Sheppard, Esq., who is Lord of the manor.

At an equal distance from Frome, stand the two villages of MELLS and NUNNEY, in each of which the Messrs. Fussell's have extensive iron works for the production of agricultural tools. Fuller's earth is obtained at Mells, and at no great distance a peculiar kind of marble is found. Population in 1841, Mells 1260—Nunney 1185.

Between Bradford and Frome, and four miles from the latter place, is the village of ROAD; it is situated in the hundred of Frome, and contains besides other buildings a parish church, and two chapels respectively belonging to the Baptists and Wesleyans. A cattle and cheese fair occurs on the 29th August. Population by the last census, 858 souls.

LAVINGTON,

EAST AND WEST.

EAST LAVINGTON or MARKET LAVINGTON is a small market town in the parish of its own name, hundred of Swanborough and Union of Devizes; 94 miles S. W. of London, 6 S. of Devizes, and 18 N.N.W. of Salisbury; situated in a pleasant and well cultivated vale at the base of the northern boundary of Salisbury plain, and consists mostly of one street, the dwelling houses in which are tolerably well built. The principal employment of its inhabitants is in agriculture and malt making: here is an iron foundry for the manufacture of steam engines, implements of husbandry, &c.

The church dedicated to St. Mary—placed on rising ground—is an ancient structure in the early pointed style of architecture, and much decayed by time, but the entire fabric is shortly to undergo a complete repair; the living is a vicarage; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford; and the present incumbent the Rev. M. W. Mayow. Here are also places of worship for persons of the Independent and Baptist denominations.

The Earl of Radnor is lord of this manor, and courts under his jurisdiction are periodically held. Wednesday is market day, if so it can be called, the market merely consisting of a few farmers who meet at the Green Dragon Inn in the evening with samples of wheat, oats, &c. This market has been established for four centuries, and was formerly an extensive one. An annual feast is kept on August 22nd. Here are two public schools for instructing the rising generation, viz. the National and Free Schools; the former is a good and commodious brick erection, completed in 1844.

The population of the parish, which also comprises the tything of Easterton, was in 1841, 1525. West Lavington is about one mile from East Lavington; its parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious edifice, the body of which has lately been re-constructed, and the interior improved and repewed. In 1542 a school was founded here and liberally endowed by Alderman Dauntsey; here are also 12 almshouses, bequeathed by the same benevolent person, for 6 men and 6 women, who each receive 5s. weekly with many other perquisites. A lunatic asylum for 200 patients is situate at Fiddington, in this parish; the building is placed on an eminence and commands pleasing and picturesque prospects.

Post-Office, East Lavington, at Henry Philpott's. Letters are delivered daily at 8 a.m. and despatched to all parts, via Devizes, at 7,20 p.m. Box closes at 7, but letters may be posted until 7,15 by paying a fee of 1d.

POST-OFFICE, West Lavington, at William Baker's. Letters are received daily at 8 a.m. and are despatched to all parts, via Devizes, at 7 p.m.

The nearest town where there is a Money Order Office is Devizes.

MELKSHAM,

WITH THE

VILLAGE OF SEMINGTON.

The pleasant market town of MELKSHAM is a parish in the hundred bearing its own name, 96 miles W.S.W. of London, and 12 E. by S. of Bath. The town is delightfully situated on a portion of the river Avon, contiguous to the Wilts and Berks Canal, and on the line of the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth railway. That the town is of great antiquity little doubt need remain, since its name is a compound of milch and ham, which in the Saxon language signify milk and a dwelling; but at what period the place was first inhabited there is little or no authentic account. Some antiquarians have asserted that Melksham was orginally a city of about one third the size of Salisbury; but these assertions are unsupported by evidence—this, however, is immaterial as we have to describe the present condition of the town.

Melksham is almost comprised in one continuous street, extending nearly a mile in length; the family residences which constitute it are good substantial mansions of free-stone, and although uniformity has not been the chief object of their architects, the town presents an appearance of comfort and respectability, being well paved and illumed by gas. Melksham, like Bradford, Chippenham, and many other towns in the neighbourhood, has suffered from the vicissitudes and fluctuation of trade; at one period of its history it was extensively engaged in manufacturing broad cloth—it still continues to supply a considerable quantity of woollen goods. Malt, tarpawling, sacks, round and flat ropes are also made in the town, and on the river are some extensive flour mills.

The town and parish of Melksham includes the chapelry of Seend, and is a polling station for the northern division of Wilts. The county magistrates hold petty sessions here monthly: a court leet is held twice a year by Walter Long, Esq., Lord of the Manor, and a new County Court for recovering amounts under £20 takes place every fourth Friday.

Among the public buildings worthy of particulars are the places devoted to divine worship and some others. The parish church is dedicated to St. Michael, and is a commanding and interesting edifice of freestone, with a newly erected elaborate castellated tower at the west-end—living a vicarage, to which are added the curacies of Seend and Earl Stoke—patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. A new church has been erected at Shaw. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, and the Society of Friends, have each a chapel. The fountains for moral instruction are lucid and numerous, consisting of British and Foreign, a National, two Infant, and several Sunday schools.

About 30 years since some excellent medicinal springs, possessing saline and chalybeate properties, were discovered in the neighbourhood of Melksham, in consequence of which a pump-room, with proper appurtenances, and some comfortable mansions were erected for those who might seek health from these waters; but although the springs fully equal those of many famous watering places, the success of Melksham in this respect has not approximated its deserts. In the centre of the town is a handsome new town hall and market-house (connected with which is a reading room), and adjoining is a new police-station—both these are built of freestone and form an attractive feature to that locality. Another modern freestone structure is the North Wilts Bank in Bank street. The other public buildings are the bridge and Union workhouse—the first is a fair specimen of masonry—the latter is situated at Semington, a small village which will be presently noticed.

In the neighbourhood of Melksham are many elegant mansions, together with some scenery of more than ordinary beauty, particularly along the river Avon. A market takes place every alternate Tuesday for cattle, sheep, &c., and another on the first Tuesday in each month for cheese and general produce; there is also an annual fair for live stock on the 27th July. Population in 1841 (being the last census) 6234 souls. The union of Melksham is formed by 6 parishes, which extend over a surface of 22 square miles, and contains upwards of 20,000 individuals.

Midway between Melksham and Trowbridge, being 3 miles distant from each of the above towns, stands the chapelry of SEMINGTON; this little village is situated in the parish of Steeple Ashton, and contains a district church, and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel—the Union workhouse for Melksham (as above stated) is in the village. Population in 1841, 484 individuals.

Post-Office, Market-place, Post Master, John Bullock. Letters are delivered daily at 7 morning.

SHEPTON MALLET,

WITH THE

VILLAGE OF CROSCOMBE.

The market town of SHEPTON MALLET,—consisting of a variety of streets,—is a parish situated in the hundred of Whitestone, distant from Bristol 20 miles, from Bath 18, from Wells 5, and from London 115; the place is snugly seated in an isolated valley, on the South side of the Mendip Hills, near a portion of the river Brue, and was at an early period of English history a town of considerable importance, being extensively engaged in the manufacturing of woollen cloths and fine knit hose, the latter of which is still continued in the town and neighbourhood; but the principal manufactures at present carried on is crape and silk velvets—these articles rank high in public estimation, both for their superior quality and beautiful appearance.

The government of Shepton Mallet is vested in a high constable, his assistants, and tything-men—the magistrates of the division hold their petty sessions in the town every fortnight; it is also the head of the Shepton Mallet Poor Law Union.

The town is famed for the longevity of its inhabitants; the principal streets are spacious, and many of its buildings are modern erections; it is well lighted and drained; indeed few towns have been improved so much as this during the last 20 years. Several of the public buildings are very curious, and possess attractions of no mean order to both historian and antiquarian. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a time-tinted and majestic looking temple, enriched by a variety of monuments beautifully executed; its lofty roof is within richly fretted over with wood work curiously carved and exquisitely wrought, and an antique stone pulpit stands beneath it. William of Worcester stated that in the year 709 the bones of St. Indvactus and his hundred martyred brethren, murdered by How and his band, were buried here. The church was enlarged and re-pewed in 1837—the living is a rectory in the gift of the Prince of Wales (as Duke of Cornwall), and the Wickham family alternately. In addition to the parish church is one of the old Nonconformist meeting houses, handsomely endowed, and contains monuments of some of the old families who formerly resided in the town, one of which is to the memory of the Rev. Simon Brown, the author of several celebrated works in defence of the christian revelation, in answer to Tindall—the Congregationalists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics have spacious chapels. Here are also a grammar school, and alms-houses founded by the Strode family.

The other public buildings are the Market-cross—which was built in the 15th century and has been restored within the last few years —and the County Bridewell, which is now very extensive, having been recently enlarged. Previous to the establishment of County Courts, one for the recovery of debts under 40s. was held in Shepton Mallet from a very early period. There is an excellent weekly market held here on Friday, where large quantities of butter, eggs, and poultry are sold for the London, Bath and Bristol markets; there is also the largest 'pitched' corn market in the counties of Somerset or Dorset held here weekly, and three good fairs annually—namely, one on the 18th of June, one on the 8th August, and another on the 10th of November; these are all well attended and supplied with various articles of commerce. Population by the census of 1841 5265 souls.

The village of CROSCOMBE is about two miles distant from Shepton, and like that place, is situated in the hundred of Whitestone. This village was once a flourishing market town, the charter having been granted during the first Edward's reign. There is still a silk throwing mill, and the villagers employ themselves in manufacturing hose of a fine texture. The parish Church, which is a minute but compact edifice, is dedicated to St. Mary—the living is a discharged rectory. The other place of divine worship is a small neat chapel belonging to the Baptist persuasion. Croscombe contains a curious antique cross, its altitude being at least 14 feet. There is an annual fair on Lady-day, but its once flourishing market has entirely disappeared. Population 800.

Post-Office, High street. Postmaster, Elijah Merchant. Letters are delivered daily at 8 a.m. and at 1 p.m.

Money orders are granted and paid from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Letters to be registered must be presented at least half an hour before the closing of the box.

DESPATCHES—To

London and all parts of England—except to the undermentioned places—at 8,15 p.m. Box closes at 7,30. Letters may be posted until 8 by paying a fee of 1d.

Bruton, Blandford, Wincanton, Wells, Weston-super-Mare, Glastonbury, and Shaftesbury at 4,15 a.m. Box closes at 9 p.m.

POST-OFFICE, PILTON, at Charles Grant's. Letters are delivered at 8 a.m. and despatched to all parts via Shepton Mallet, at 6 p.m.

TROWBRIDGE.

TROWBRIDGE is a populous manufacturing and market town in the hundred of Melksham, most delightfully situated on a portion of rocky soil immediately adjoining the river Were, which is a tributary to the Avon. Trowbridge is 100 miles W. by S. of London, 10 from Bath, the same distance from Warminster and Devizes, 3 miles from Bradford, and 30 N.W. of Salisbury. The manor of Trowbridge has been frequently held by many distinguished individuals, among whom are the Earls of Salisbury, the Dukes of Lancaster and Somerset, and many of the Rutland family; it is now held by Mrs. Louisa Timbrell, of Bath, relict of the late Thomas Timbrell, who resided in Trowbridge, and who was last Lord of the Manor.

The town was built without the least regard being paid to architectural rules—utility, rather than appearance being the object sought—and it an early period entered very largely into the manufacture of kerseymere, broad cloth, and other woollen articles of merchandise, but this description of traffic has long since suffered a considerable diminution, yet this declension has in a great measure been repaid by the formation of canals which have given a new stamina to activity. These canals, the work of the past half century, have afforded Trowbridge the power of a direct and facile communication with every city and considerable town in the kingdom, by which means coals and other articles of commerce find an easy transmission. The Kennet passes within a mile of the town and this river, being well supplied from the Somerset canal and the Severn, pours an abundant store of mineral and other merchandise into Bath, Bristol, London, Reading, Oxford, Newbury, and hundreds of other places of importance. In addition to this the Great Western Railway has a station at Box, 8 miles distant, and the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Company are now engaged in forming a junction with the Great Western line at Thingley, near Chippenham, and will have a station at Trowbridge.

The town possesses no local government except the usual county magistrates; there is, however, a court for the recovery of debts under £20—the judge is Joseph Grace Smith, Esq., and the court sits every fourth Friday, alternately with Bradford, Melksham, and Westbury.

The public buildings of Trowbridge are few, and comprise places of divine worship, a neat bridge over the river Were, and some almshouses. The parish church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. James, possessing a quadrangular tower, filled with a peal of 6 exquisitely-toned bells, and crowned with elaborately wrought pinnacles, and has recently undergone a thorough repair, the expence of which (£5,000) was defrayed by voluntary contribution—living, a rectory connected with the chapelry of Staverton: patron, Duke of Rutland. Trinity church, or chapel, was erected in 1838, at a cost of £4760. The other places of worship are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Wesleyan Methodists. These, together with some excellent schools and a scientific and literary institution, supply the religious and moral education of Trowbridge.

The market days are Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, all of which (particularly the latter) are well supplied. There is also an annual fair on the 5th and 6th of August, where large quantities of cheese and pedlary, with numbers of horses and cattle are disposed of. The population of Trowbridge in 1841 was 11,050.

Post-Office, Back street. Post Master, David Walker. Letters are delivered at ½ past 7 a.m. and 10 a.m.

Money orders are granted and paid between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. Letters to be registered must be presented at least half an hour before closing the box.

WARMINSTER,

HEYTESBURY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WARMINSTER is a well-built town, situate near the western extremity of the county of Wilts, distant 96 miles W.S.W. from London, 21 W.N.W. from Salisbury, 16 S.S.E. from Bath, and 7 S.E. from Frome. The river Willy (or Wiley) rises near the town, and pursues a south-west course until it forms a junction with the Avon at Salisbury.

Warminster is a place of great antiquity, and supposed to have been a Roman station, called Verlucio or Verlusio. Near the town are a great many tumuli and ancient fortifications. A handsome tessellated pavement was discovered some years since in Pitmead,—56 feet by 10 feet,—and removed to Longleat; a variety of sacrificial instruments, armour and coins have been discovered at various periods, besides an ancient Roman fortification or camp called the 'Berries.' In 1780 a small pot of silver denarii, from the reigns of Trajan to Alexander Severus, was found in good preservation near the common; and about 1790, three large vases, containing several thousand coins of the lower empire: indeed, the whole neighbourhood abounds in relics of the Danes, Saxons and Romans, which the ploughshare from time to time has brought to light.

The only manufactures of the town carried on at present, are, in connection with the silk trade, hair seating and sieve making; stock-foundations are also made in large quantities, and furnish employment for many hundred children. The malt manufactured here is considerable; indeed few towns in the kingdom are superior in this respect. The corn market has been celebrated for its extent from the time of Leland and Camden, who both make mention of its magnitude; it still recommends itself to the buyer and seller by its long established custom of 'pitched' sacks, the bulk being ready for immediate delivery, and the sales being for ready money.

The town has undergone considerable improvements of late years —a handsome town hall, in the Elizabethean style of architecture, was erected by Thomas, marquis of Bath, in 1830, and is an ornament to the locality in which it stands. The quarter sessions of the peace take place at Warminster in July, and justice is administered by the resident magistrates, who hold a petit session once a month, and occasionally sit between these periods. The county constabulary have almost superseded the ancient manorial officer, who now only exists in name.

The parish church, a handsome structure, with a tower rising from its centre, is dedicated to St. Denis, and contains nearly 1500 sittings. The new church, called 'Christchurch,' was erected in 1830, and affords accommodation for 750 persons. Here is also a chapel of ease, dedicated to St. Lawrence, and places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, and Wesleyans.

Warminster possesses an elegant literary and scientific institute, in which is a spacious reading room and a handsome museum. Here is likewise a free grammar school, built and endowed by one of the Lords Weymouth; it is under the patronage of the marquis of Bath, and in connection with the Salisbury diocesan board of education. Large and elegant national schools (of recent erection) are supported by voluntary subscriptions, and which, with the sunday schools, educate about 800 children on the principles of the church of England.

Warminster will shortly enjoy the advantages and conveniences to be derived from a modern, cheap, quick, comfortable, and humane mode of travelling, as the Wilts, Somerset and Weymouth railway, now in active progress, will pass through the town, and join the Great Western at Thingley, near Corsham; thus furnishing ready transit to and from Bath, Frome, Weymouth, Southampton, Salisbury, &c.

The market is held on Saturday; and fairs take place April 22nd and August 11th for cattle, and October the 26th for cheese, cattle, sheep, &c. Population of the parish in 1841, 6211.

The seat of the marquis of Bath, called Longleat, stands about 4 miles west of the town, and is a truly magnificent building, surrounded by a noble park 20 miles in circumference, and well stocked with fallow deer—a branch of the river Frome forming several fine cascades, adds much to the beauty of this princely domain.

HEYTESBURY, once a market town and parliamentary borough, is pleasantly situated 3½ miles E.S.E. of Warminster on the banks of the Willey, that river dividing the village into two parts. The houses are modern in appearance, having been re-built since the year 1776, at which period the town was destroyed by fire. Heytesbury returned two members to parliament from the reign of Henry VI. up to the passing of the reform bill, when it was disfranchised. The Empress Maude resided at Heytesbury during her struggle for the monarchy with King Stephen. The only manufacture carried on at Heytesbury is that of broad cloth and kerseymere, but to a limited extent.

The church—formerly collegiate, but now a rectory in the presentation of Lord Heytesbury—is a handsome and convenient structure. An almshouse or hospital (with school attached) was founded and endowed by Walter, Lord Hungerford, for 12 men and 1 woman. The market has been discontinued for many years, but fairs take place on May 14th for cattle, sheep, and pedlary, and September 23rd for pleasure and pedlary.

WELLS.

The City of WELLS, situated beneath the Mendip hills, and watered by the river AX, is a place of considerable antiquity, and, in conjunction with Bath, a bishop's see—distant from London 127 miles, and standing to the W. by S. of the great metropolis. It is 20 miles S. of Bristol, and 19 miles S.S.W. from its sister, Bath. Up to nearly the close of the eleventh century, Wells (independent of any auxiliary), was the see of a bishop, and enjoyed many ecclesiastical privileges, but about the year 1087 the mitre was worn by John de Villula, a prelate whose predilections ran strongly in favour of Bath, and who therefore resolved to transfer the bishopric to that city. With the assistance of some monks of Bath this task was achieved very much to the displeasure of his former see, which stoutly contended for its original honour and advantage; and so acrimoniously and fiercely did the contending powers urge the strife that many other bishops advised a compromise, for the peace and well being of the church, and as John de Villula possessed sufficient policy to view the local advantages of this, the bishopric has since been recognised as that of "Bath and Wells."

According to popular tradition this city derived its name from a celebrated well, which, rising to the earth, entirely encompasses the bishop's palace with a graceful and sanatory stream. Wells enjoys an independent jurisdiction, the local government consisting of a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councilmen, with other inferior officers usually granted to corporations in general. As in the case of most bishops' sees the cathedral forms a very prominent feature in the history and beauty of a city, and the Cathedral of Wells is exceedingly rich in these qualifications. The greater portion of this ancient edifice (erected circa 1239 by bishop Joceline de Wells), still maintains its original grandeur—it stands on the eastern confines of the city, and is dedicated to St. Andrew. To give a minute description of this superb Gothic pile would far exceed our space—its elaborate façade—its brilliant stained windows, and its truly venerable air, would separately demand a volume; we must, therefore, content ourselves with a bare outline of its elegant proportions—built in the form of a cross it extends from east to west 380 feet, and 180 from north to south, and crowned with three towers, one of which far excels the others in appearance and dimensions. Within the spacious area there are nine chapels, some of which are curiously adorned, particularly one dedicated to the Virgin, which possesses some peculiarly chaste and beautiful Gothic windows of stained glass—and in some other portions of this truly noble edifice windows of the same material are seen. Great taste and architectural skill are obvious in every quarter of the sacred pile, and no expence has been spared in decorating both its exterior and interior—recesses abound filled with statues, once of great beauty but now defaced by the ravages of time; and along the entire front of the building the same profusion of art is visible—statues of the apostles, and a unique specimen of the sculptor's skill intended to represent the resurrection, are well deserving the antiquarian's attention, and the monumental dust that lies below is equally worthy the study of divines, since many of their predecessors are here interred, together with Ina, by whom the church was founded. Intimately related to the Cathedral are the chapter house and bishop's palace, the latter bearing a striking resemblance to the stronghold of some ancient Welch prince.

The other places of worship connected with the establishment are the parish church of St. Cuthbert, and three Chapels of Ease, respectively situated at Coxley, East Harrington, and Easton, all in the out parish of St. Cuthbert. The living of St. Cuthbert is a vicarage—patron, the bishop of Bath and Wells. The dissenting chapels are those belonging to the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Irvingites.

The other public buildings are the County Lunatic Asylum (on the Bath road about two miles from the city)—two Alms Houses—the City Conduit—the Market Place, a most commodious building—and the Town Hall, where all offences, except capital ones, are tried. Here, too, the summer assizes for the county are held; Wells, Bridgewater, and Taunton holding these courts in succession—but commissions of the peace for Wells are altogether independent of other places.

The city of Wells is a small but well arranged assemblage of buildings, the streets well lit by gas, cleanly, and the pavement maintained in an admirable condition. The principal manufactories are those for knitting stockings, which at one period were very flourishing, as was also an extensive wholesale trade in brushes, but the latter has altogether disappeared. Some paper mills in the neighbourhood, however, are still actively employed, and the retail trade of this city is somewhat considerable. There are also two markets well supplied and attended, respectively held on Wednesday and Saturday, together with an extensive monthly market where large quantities of cattle, corn, and cheese (especially the latter), are disposed of—and the annual fairs for cattle, horses, and pedlary, are held on January 4th, May 14th, Whit Tuesday and Wednesday, July 6th, October 25th, and November 30th.

From an early period in English history Wells has returned two members to serve in parliament, the elective franchise having been granted during the reign of Edward I.

The Wells literary and scientific society was established six or seven years since, and its success has been gradual, but progressive. About two miles distant from the city is a curious cavern or grotto known as "Wookey Hole cave," and at seven miles distance are the romantic Cheddar cliffs, both of which are much frequented by strangers, and those who admire the fantastical works of nature. The population of Wells, which is continually on the increase, was in 1841, 7,040, but in this number both the city and its suburbs are included.

There is at present no railway to Wells, but we believe that the Bristol and Exeter Company contemplate a branch from their line at Bleaden which will run direct for Wells.

WESTBURY,

WITH THE

VILLAGE OF BRATTON.

The market town of WESTBURY is a corporate and parliamentary borough, situated in the hundred bearing its own name, and in the county of Wilts, 100 miles from London, 26 from Salisbury, and 15 miles from Bath and Chippenham. The site of this town is the banks of a small stream which is tributary to the river Avon, and the local government is vested in the hands of a mayor, recorder, and 12 capital burgesses, with the usual assistants—tythingmen and constables. Although none of these officers hold commissions as magistrates, the mayor by virtue of his office, holds a court leet in November, and the Lord of the Manor's steward in May. There is also a court held for the recovery of debts below £20 once a month on Friday.

Westbury is composed of three principal streets, and these three streets form as it were avenues of the main roads to neighbouring towns. This place was once highly celebrated for its excellent broad cloth of which vast quantities were then manufactured. It still continues the same branch of merchandise, but on a much smaller scale. Malting houses and corn mills are likewise found in the neighbourhood.

There are two churches in Westbury and another is about to be erected at Heywood by H. G. G. Ludlow, Esq., of Heywood house. The parish church is dedicated to All Saint's—living a discharged vicarage; patron, the Bishop of Salisbury. Trinity Church is situated at Dilton Marsh, and St. Mary's chapel of ease at Dilton. There are likewise chapels for various bodies of Dissenters at Westbury, three of which belong to those of the Baptist persuasion. There are also some well conducted public schools on both the National and Lancasterian principles; the latter was endowed by a benevolent individual, the late John Matravers, who has likewise instituted other offices of great local utility.

The Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway Company is engaged in forming a junction at Westbury with the Berks and Hants line. The market is held on Tuesday, and the annual fairs on Easter Monday, Whit Monday, and the first Friday in Lent. Population, by the last census, 6732.

The village of BRATTON, situated at three miles distance from Westbury, is a chapelry of that town containing some ancient relics worthy the attention of travellers and antiquarians; these consist of Castellian ruins, an encampment supposed to be Danish, and the outlines of a gigantic horse carved on the side of a chalk hill, which is discernible at some miles distance. Bratton is a place of little or no importance in a mercantile point of view, and even the population is suffering a serious diminution, since during the last 20 years it has decreased one half, as will be seen by the annexed statistics. In 1831 it contained 1237 inhabitants, but in 1841 there were only 719.

COTTERELLS'

PAPER HANGINGS,

5, BRIDGE STREET, BATH,

AND 46, BROADMEAD, BRISTOL.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

PAPER HANGINGS.—Among the effects of our Tariff, that upon Paper Hangings is very conspicuous. The French Patterns and execution have given a stimulus to British energy which has produced specimens unrivalled for effect and economy. In the West of England, the Establishments of Messrs. Cotterell, at Bath or Bristol, are worthy the attention of all who are about to paper their dwellings. We have had the advantage of a personal inspection, and we have no hesitation in stating, that for beauty, variety, and cheapness, there are no stocks of the kind in the kingdom by which that of Cotterell Brothers can be surpassed.—Devonshire Chronicle.

FRENCH PAPER HANGINGS.—Of the purely vegetable designs, copied strictly from Nature, we may instance one composed of the flowers and a few of the leaves of the horse-chestnut, remarkable for natural truth. But it is enough to speak generally of these works—of the spirit which characterizes them. Many of the panels are white, and contain bouquets of flowers, remarkable for their severity of truth, richness of colour, and charming arrangement.—Art Union Journal.

RULE.—Find the height of the Room between the skirting and cornice, in the left hand column, and the nearest figures to the measure round the Walls, on the top line: the figures where the two lines would cross, or meet, will shew the number of Pieces a Room will take. Thus, a room not exceeding 60 feet round the walls, and not exceeding 8½ feet between the skirting and cornice, will take eight pieces; and a Room 92 feet round the walls, and not exceeding 11½ feet height, would require seventeen Pieces, &c. &c.

Should the space occupied by windows and doors exceed 100 square feet, one Piece less than stated on this Table may be allowed for every 60 square feet more than 100 feet. In all other cases, allowance is made in this Table for the space occupied by doors and windows.

For Stripe, Granite, Lining, or Oak Papers, &c., where there is no match to the pattern, one Piece in ten less than stated in this Table may be allowed, except on Staircases.

To find the quantity of Paper required for CEILINGS, multiply the length of the Ceiling in feet by the breadth, and divide the sum by 50; the product will be the number of Pieces required.

☞ The space occupied by windows and doors must invariably be included as part of the measure round the walls.

"An Annual division distributes the profits with more regularity and justice than any other." Professor Babbage on Life Insurance.

The important advantages offered by the plan and constitution of the Life Department of this Society, are,

That Insurers are entirely exempted from all personal liability, and that they are protected by a large invested Capital upon which there is no Interest to pay, and for which no deduction of any kind is made; which enables the Directors to give the whole of the profits to Insuring Members.

That the profits are divided annually amongst all Members of Five Years' standing, and applied towards reducing Life Insurance to the lowest possible rates of Premium, the abatement for the years 1842, 1843, and 1844, being at the rate of £45. per cent., and for the years 1845, 1846, and 1847, £50. per cent.; that is, a Policy taken out on or before the 24th June, 1842, at an Annual Premium of £100, will be charged £50. as this Year's Premium; and it is expected that an equal abatement will in future be annually made.

That Persons insuring their own lives, or the lives of others, may become Members.

That persons who are willing to forego participation in the profits, can insure at a lower rate than that charged to Members.

That Persons are not required to appear before the Board, an appearance before the Physician being considered sufficient.

The business of the Society comprises not only insurances on lives, but also the granting of immediate, deferred, and contingent annuities, either by single or annual payments.

The following Table will show the effect of the reduction of Premium made by the Society on Members' Policies that have been Five Years in force:

Age when Insured.	Sums Insured.	Annual Premium for first Five Years.	Reduction made on the Sixth Premium.
30	£100	2 13 5	1 6 8
40	100	3 7 11	1 13 11
30	500	13 7 1	6 13 6
40	500	16 19 7	8 9 9
45	1000	38 19 2	19 9 7
40	2000	67 18 4	33 19 2
45	5000	194 15 10	97 7 11

This system of reducing the Premiums affords immediate benefit to the Members, or enables them to insure a further Sum upon their Lives equal to more than one-third of the present Policy, without any additional outlay.

THE LONDON ASSURANCE CORPORATION,
By Charter of King George the First,
FOR LIFE, FIRE, & MARINE ASSURANCE,

Granted upon their first Life Policy on the 7th of June, 1721.

Their new Prospectus embraces a variety of very eligible plans for Life Assurance at moderate premiums.

Two-thirds of the gross profits are awarded to the assured by a bonus added to the policy—a payment in cash—a new policy without premium, or by a reduction of the future annual premiums.

The expenses of managing the Life Department are not, as is usual, taken from the premium fund, but are defrayed by the Corporation out of their share of the profits, thus giving the assured all the advantages of Mutual Assurance without liability of partnership, and the security of an ancient and opulent Corporation.

Assurances without participation, and short period assurances, are effected on very advantageous terms.

Parties proceeding abroad are liberally treated.

Fire Insurances on every description of property at moderate rates.

Prospectuses may be had at their offices, 7, Royal Exchange, Cornhill, and 10, Regent Street; or sent free on a written application.

RUPTURE.

COLES'S PATENT TRUSSES are universally admitted to be the most complete and effective Instruments now in use for the Relief and Cure of HERNIA. The pads move imperceptibly with the body when stooping or coughing. The following opinions are selected from a list too numerous for insertion in a single advertisement:—

"This is the only real improvement in the construction of a truss that ever came under my inspection."—George Birkbeck, M.D. John Borthwick Gilchrist, Esq., a friend of the doctor's, gave Mr. Coles a handsome testimonial of his case, in which he says—"I may add, that this truly scientific discovery justly entitles the inventor of such an instrument to universal confidence."

"The pressure upon the ring is not merely equalised, but adjusts itself, without inconvenience to the wearer, to the different attitudes in which the body may be placed."—Wm. Thos. Brande, Esq., Royal Institution.

"They make a more uniform pressure on the ring than the ball-and-socket pad can effect."—Sir A. Cooper, Bart. F.R.S., in his Treatise on Hernia.

"The varied positions of the body in stooping and coughing do not alter the position of the pads, nor displace them."—Thomas Callaway, Esq., Guy's Hospital.

"It is my firm conviction that his trusses will be found more efficacious than any at present employed,"—Henry Earle, Esq., F.R.S.

"They are the best trusses that have ever yet been got up."—Aston Key, Esq., Guy's Hospital.

"I consider these trusses calculated, beyond every other truss I have seen, to cure this disease in its earliest and simplest form."—Gideon Mantell, Esq. F.R.S.

THE GREAT WESTERN, NORTH WESTERN, SOUTH WESTERN, & ALL THE RAILWAYS,

And by the most eminent members of the Royal Agricultural Societies of England, Scotland, and Ireland, at whose great national shows it has been exhibited, and OBTAINED THE PRIZE, for being the best and cheapest article for Roofing; also used for under-slates at the Royal Agricultural Societies' House, in Hanover Square.

Its advantages are lightness, warmth, durability, and economy. It is impervious to rain, snow, and frost, and a non-conductor of heat and sound. The felt can be cut to any length, by thirty-two inches wide.

THE PRICE ONLY ONE PENNY PER SQUARE FOOT.

Samples, with full directions as to its uses and the manner of applying it, with TESTIMONIALS, some of them of seven years' experience, from Architects, Builders, Noblemen, and Gentlemen, who have extensively used it, sent free to any part of the town or country.

A DRY HAIR FELT, for covering Steam Boilers, &c. is also manufactured, by which a saving of about 25 per cent. in fuel is effected. ALSO THE HAIR FELT FOR DEADENING SOUND IN THIN PARTITIONS AND UNDER FLOORING.

The TRADE are respectfully enjoined to send their orders DIRECT to the FACTORY, as the surest means of being supplied with the genuine article, and in lengths best suited to their roofs. They are likewise cautioned against Misrepresentation, as the only Works in Great Britain where the above Roofing is made are F. M'NEILL AND Co.'s Manufactories, LAMB'S BUILDINGS, BUNHILL ROW, LONDON.

Roofs covered with the Felt to be seen at the Factory, also the new Vice-Chancellor's Courts; the Passages and Offices leading to Westminster Hall; the Committee Rooms and other buildings at the New Houses of Parliament; and for four very large Ceilings underneath the slates to the Indigo Warehouses, London Docks, as a preventative to the heat of the sun.

Every assistance and information afforded for any new and particular application of the Felt, and Workmen sent out, if required, to put it on, &c.—A liberal Discount allowed to the Trade.

THE GENTLEMAN'S REAL HEAD OF HAIR, OR INVISIBLE VENTILATING PERUKE, is so close a resemblance to Nature, as to defy detection; and to enable Gentlemen to see the effect, a large assortment is always kept for inspection, any one of which, if approved of, saves the purchaser both time and trouble. These elegant Specimens of the Perruquean art, superior to any to be obtained elsewhere, either in Paris or London, have only to be seen to be admired, and are the sole invention of ROSS & SONS, 119 & 120, Bishopsgate Street, London.

Ross and Sons' infallible mode to Measure the Head.

	Inchs	8ths.
Round the Head in the manner of a fillet, leaving the Ears loose, 1 to 1
From the Forehead over to the Pole, as deep each way as required, 2 to 2
From Ear to Ear across the Forehead, close down to the point level with the Whiskers, 3 to 3
FOR SCALPS, OR PARTIAL BALDNESS.
From the Front as forward as required to the Hair behind, 1 to 1
From one side to the other across the Forehead, as far as bald, 2
Across the Crown or rise of Head, 3

TO THE LADIES.

It is universally acknowledged by every one of taste, that however beautiful a woman may be, if her hair is deficient, either in quantity, quality, or colour, that one of her greatest charms is wanting. A complete remedy for all this is to be found by visiting the Establishment of ROSS AND SONS, and choosing either Head-dresses that surpass Nature herself, Fronts, Bands, or Ringlets that assist her, or splendid Plaits that, encircling the thin hair, give it all the appearance of a luxuriant growth. The Partings are so admirably contrived, that the nearest inspection is confounded; the transparency of the web admitting the skin of the head to be seen through; they may be described as being as light as a feather. Address, Ross and Sons, 119 & 120, Bishopsgate Street, London, who have lately invented the Depinguitory, for Cleaning the Skin, Partings of Fronts, &c.

THE ATRAPILATORY, OR LIQUID HAIR DYE,

Is the only Dye that really answers for all colours, and does not require re-doing, but as the hair grows, as it never fades or acquires that unnatural red or purple tint common to all other dyes. Ross and Sons can with the greatest confidence recommend the above Dye as infallible, if done at their establishment; and ladies or gentlemen requiring it, are requested to bring a friend or servant with them to see how it is used, which will enable them to do it afterwards, without the chance of failure. Several private apartments devoted entirely to the above purpose, and some of their establishment having used it, the effect produced can be at once seen. They think it necessary to add, that by attending strictly to the instructions given with each bottle of Dye, numerous persons have succeeded equally well without coming to them. Address, Ross & Sons, 119 & 120, Bishopsgate St., London, the celebrated Perruquiers, Perfumers, Hair Cutters, and Hair Dyers. N.B.—Parties attended at their own residences.

SPLENDID ARRANGEMENT OF LOOKING-GLASS,

Producing the effect of a long arcade, and so bewildering as to cause a doubt whether you are in London or in Old Rome—

"Arch follows arch, and pile succeeds to pile."

This unique apartment is devoted to Cutting and Arranging the Hair in, and, with another having a beautiful View of Naples, are on the ground floor. In calling attention to their establishment, Ross and Sons beg to notice the advantages of their system—viz. they never take apprentices nor young men from the country, nor object to customers asking for the same man to wait upon them; every person has clean brushes, they never being used twice without being washed; and parties are not pressed to buy things they do not want. Address, Ross and Sons, 119 and 120, Bishopsgate Street, London.

BOTANIC WATER AND BEARS' GREASE.

When the hair is becoming thin, and falling off, the only effectual remedy, besides shaving the head, is the use of the two above-named articles, applied alternately; the botanic water to cleanse the roots from scurf, and as a stimulant, and the bears' grease as a nourisher. If any further evidence was required of the virtues of bears' grease for renovating and preserving the hair, Mr. Catlin's account of the quantity used, and the length of hair obtained, by some of the North American Indians, would be a sufficient answer. Ross and Sons, 119 and 120, Bishopsgate Street, London, who first introduced the use of bears' grease in this country, and who fat and kill the animals, recommend the public to purchase none other but with their names and address printed on the pot, or the chances are their obtaining a spurious article. All vegetable oils applied to the hair are worse than useless.

THE NEW TOOTH BRUSH,

Made on the most scientific principle, thoroughly cleaning between the teeth when used up and down, and polishing the surface when used crossways. This brush so entirely enters between the closest teeth, that the inventors have decided upon naming it the Tooth-pick Brush. Therefore ask for it under that name, marked and numbered as under, viz. full-sized brushes, marked T. P. W. No. 1, hard: No. 2, less hard: No. 3, middling: No. 4, soft: the narrower brushes, marked T. P. N. No. 5, hard: No. 6, less hard: No. 7, middling: No. 8, soft. These inimitable brushes are only to be had at ROSS & SONS, 119 & 120, BISHOPSGATE STREET, LONDON, and they warrant the hair never to come out: at 1s. each, or 10s. per dozen in bone: and 2s. each, or 21s. per dozen in ivory.
