CANALS.—The extensive canal navigation of this county, enables the merchants and manufacturers, to transmit by a direct and easy water carriage, the produce of its manufactures to the four great ports of the kingdom. The Birmingham old canal, entering the county near Birmingham, from the Worcestershire and Staffordshire canal near Wolverhampton, terminates in the Birmingham and Fazeley canal, at Farmer's Bridge, near the former place, where it also communicates with the Worcester and Birmingham canal; by this channel coal and iron are conveyed to Birmingham, and other places, from the numerous mines on its banks; and the manufactured goods of that town, are forwarded to Liverpool, Manchester, &c. The Birmingham and Worcester canal, the chief objects in the formation of which were, the conveyance of coal, and the opening a more direct communication between Birmingham and the river Severn, takes its course from Worcester to the Birmingham canal, at Farmer's Bridge. The Dudley extension canal branches from this a little before it enters the county near Birmingham; and the Stratford-upon-Avon canal, commencing in it at Kings Norton, in Worcestershire, soon enters Warwickshire, through the western parts of which it proceeds a little eastward of Henley-in-Arden, to its termination in the navigable channel of the Avon at Stratford; this canal has a short branch to the village of Tamworth, and a longer one to the Grafton lime works; it also communicates by a short cut with the Warwick and Birmingham canal, near Lapworth street. The Birmingham and Fazeley canal, commencing in the Coventry canal at Whittington brook, proceeds near the course of the Tame, which it crosses a little below Aston, to its junction, with the Birmingham, and the Worcester and Birmingham at Farmer's Bridge, a little beyond Birmingham; the great objects of this canal are, the conveyance of the manufactures and merchandise of Birmingham, towards London and Hull, and the supply of Birmingham with grain and other commodities. The Coventry canal, which forms an important line in the communication between London, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, &c., and by means of which great quantities of coal are conveyed from the pits in its vicinity, chiefly to the city of Coventry, enters a little above Tamworth, and pursues its course up the valley of the Anker, by Atherstone and Nuneaton, and thence to Coventry; a branch of a mile in length extends from it to the Griff collieries; and another having several minor branches, runs to those near Leewood, Pool, and Bedworth. The Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal commences from the Coventry canal at Marston Bridge, near Nuneaton, and taking an irregular north easterly course, soon quits the county near Hinckley. The Oxford canal, of which the course is very irregular, commences in the Coventry canal at Longford, about four miles from Coventry, winds south eastward by Brinklow and Brownsover, crossing the Avon near the latter place, to the eastern border of the county, near which occasionally crossing small portions of Northamptonshire, it passes by Wolfhamcote, Lower Shuckburgh, Napton-on-the-Hill, and Merstondale, in this county, which it finally quits a little southward of Wormleighton for Oxfordshire. The Grand junction canal commences in this last mentioned at Brounston, on the eastern border of Warwickshire, but in the county of Northampton. The Warwick and Birmingham canal, commencing in Digbeth, cut off the Birmingham and Fazeley canal, at Digbeth, near Birmingham, proceeds south eastward near Southall to Warwick, whence the navigation is continued by the Warwick and Napton canal, which commencing from the former in the parish of Budbrook, and proceeding westward near Leamington Priors, terminates in the Oxford canal near Napton-on-the-Hill; these two canals, with the few miles of the Oxford canal lying between Napton and Braunston, where the Grand Junction canal commences, form an important part of the most direct line of water communication between Birmingham and London, and the first supplies the town of Warwick with coal.

ROADS.—Of the principal lines of road crossing this County, one enters at the southern angle, near Long Compton, from Chipping Norton, and passing Shipston-on-Stour, divides into two great branches, one of which running nearly due north, passes Warwick, Kenilworth, Coventry and Nuneaton, leaving the County near Hinckley for Leicester; the other passing Stratford-on-Avon, Henley-in-Adren, and Birmingham, enters Staffordshire at Hockley Brook. From Kenilworth the first mentioned road gives off a branch which runs nearly due north to Tamworth. The Banbury and Buckingham road enters the County at Shotteswell, and runs in a north westerly direction to Warwick. The County is also crossed by two great lines of road, which, beginning at Da entry in Northamptonshire, diverge towards Warwick and Coventry, and unite again at Birmingham. From Packington Magna on the Coventry branch, a road diverges to Coleshill, and quits the county near Middleton for Lichfield. A road from Evesham in Worcestershire, enters this county to the west from Salford, running north east to Alcester and Henley-in-Arden, having a branch from Alcester direct to Birmingham. In 1840, out of 33 turnpike trusts, the roads in 19 were in good repair; in 7, in tolerable repair; and 7 they were in bad repair; the returns of turnpike trusts for 1839 shew a total expenditure of £28,384 6s. 8d.; in 1840, 11 of the turnpike trusts had been injuriously affected by the introduction of railways. The highway returns for 1839 shew an expenditure of £36,353. on 1814 miles of road.

RAILWAYS.—Warwickshire enjoys a most complete railway communication, affording to its trade and commerce a cheap and expeditious transit to every part of the kingdom. Rugby, on the eastern, and Birmingham, on the western verge, are busy vortexes. The London and Northwestern railway, or, as commonly called the London and Birmingham line, enters this county from London at Hill Morton, a little south east from Rugby, by which it passes by Brandon, Coventry, Hampton-in-Arden, to Birmingham. The London and Northwestern line, to Tamworth, and the Trent Valley, from Rugby, passes Stretton, Shilton, Bulkington, Nuneaton, Atherstone, Polesworth, and Tamworth, when it enters Staffordshire, proceeding to Lichfield and Stafford. The Midland South Branch railroad, from Rugby to Leicester and Derby, having a line to Nottingham, leaves this county at Willey, about six miles north from Rugby, entering Leicestershire. The Warwick and Leamington Branch, from Rugby, by Bilton, Bourton and Offchurch, to Leamington, also, a branch from Coventry to Leamington by Kenilworth. The Oxford and Rugby railway enters this county a little south of the Oxford Canal, near Fenny Compton, passing Knightcote, Ladbroke, Southam and Hill Morton to Rugby. The Stamford line from Rugby by Clifton, when it enters Northamptonshire, passing Market Harborough to the Syston and Peterborough railway near Stamford. The Birmingham and Derby railroad by Saltley, Castle Bromwich, Water Orton, Lower Whitakr, Kingsbury, Wilnecote to Tamworth, when it enters Staffordshire, passing Burton-on-Trent to Derby. From the Birmingham and Derby line, a Branch from the Lower Whitacre Station by Coleshill, joins the London and Birmingham line at Hampton-in-Arden. The Birmingham and Stafford line enters Staffordshire, near Aston, leaving Wednesbury and Bilston on the west, and Walsall on the east, passing Willenhall and Wolverhampton, to the London and North Western Railway at Stafford, extending to Manchester and Liverpool. The Shrewsbury railroad crosses Birmingham and enters Staffordshire near the Soho, having a Branch to Dudley. The Bristol and Gloucester railroad leaves Birmingham at Deritend, where it has a station, but communicates also with the London station, and enters Worcestershire, passing Worcester to Gloucester, and to Bristol; and by the Bristol and Exeter railway it communicates with Plymouth. The Birmingham and Oxford Junction railway passes southerly from Birmingham, and crossing a narrow angle of Worcestershire, which extends to the north past the London line, it again enters Warwickshire, crossing the Warwick road at the five miles stone from Birmingham, by Solihull and Packwood, crossing the Stratford-on-Avon junction canal to Preston Bagot, Stratford-on-Avon, and entering Gloucestershire, passing the extreme south west point of Warwickshire into Oxfordshire. Direct railway communications being afforded to all the principal inland towns in the kingdom, and all the ports of England and Scotland.

By a calculation made in 1847, Great Britain and Ireland was traversed by 10,322 miles of railway, the British Colonies by 1,000, the East Indies by 500, America by 3,800, France by 2,200, Germany by 1,570, Belgium 1,095, Cuba 800, Holland 200, Italy 115, Denmark 106, and Russia 520. By a return issued Wednesday, August 26th, 1846, it is stated that the total amount of capital authorised by bills passed during that session of parliament, to be raised, amounted to £145,832,405.; and that the total amount of further capital authorised to be borrowed was £33,411,061.; this return being made up to the 2nd of August, when several other railway bills were waiting for second and third readings. The Grand Junction canal shares, which sold at £340. per share, have fallen (1846.) to £94 per share; and the dividend which was £13., is now £6. per share. As there are 11,506 shares, the proprietors have lost £2,828,000 upon their capital; and their annual income is reduced to £80,500., in this canal alone. It may here be worthy of remark, that the rate of wages paid for weaving a certain quantity of cambric, was, in 1798, 15s. for 12 yards; for the same article in 1831, the sum of 1s.7½d. was paid; since which no return for weaving has been made. In 1798, the official value of British produce and manufactures exported, was £19,672,503., and the declared value £33,148,682. In 1841, the official value of the exports was £102,180,517; and the declared value £51,634,623; which should, agreeable to the returns of 1798, have produced £107,069,912., shewing an annual depreciation in the value £118,435,289. In 1798, the amount of taxes raised for Great Britain was £30,492,995, and the committals for crime in 1805, were 4605. In 1841, the amount of taxes raised, was £50,397,738, and the committals for crime, 27,760. Such has been the progress of science and liberalism, with an unrestrained, untaxed, inanimate power. It was stated, in a petition presented to the House of Lords, March, 1847, from the merchants of the city of London, that the trade of England suffered annually to the amount of £24,000,000, by bad debts. These facts are serious, and require great consideration.

COURTS OF LAW.—This county is in the midland circuit; the assizes, and quarter sessions for the county, are held at Warwick, where the county gaol is situated, and by adjournment at Coventry, where there is also a gaol belonging to the county. In 1838, the sum of £23,343 was collected for county rates, of which £21,881 was expended as follows:—on constables and vagrants, £645; Gaols, £475; Prosecutions, £7,565; Prisoners' maintenance, &c., £6,953; Bridges, £863.

The rateable value of lands, manors, tithes, &c., of the county, being £938,543 3s. that of houses, mines, quarries, &c., in the county, £1,425,946. 11s.; making a total of rateable property of £2,364,489 14s. An act of parliament was passed, in 1844, for facilitating the collecting of county rates, and for relieving the high constables from certain duties. The county rates are now collected by the Boards of Guardians of the Poor Law Unions, and by them paid to the county treasurer.

CHARITIES.—The parochial accounts of the posthumous charities, are given from the voluminous reports of the commissioners, deputed by parliament to inquire into the state and appropriation of public charities in England. This commission commenced in 1817, and was not finished till 1839. The reports for Warwickshire were made up at different periods, and extend into several volumes. The charities, bequeathed by numerous benevolent individuals, for the education and relief of the poor of this county, produce, collectively, a large sum, which increases annually. In addition to this, a large sum is subscribed by the benevolent inhabitants, for the support of various charitable institutions; amongst which, are free schools, hospitals, dispensaries, lunatic asylums, and societies for relieving the poor, &c.

PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS.—A great relief to the poor's rate, is that laudable desire which exists amongst the labouring classes and mechanics, to render themselves, as far as possible, independent of the workhouse, by providing funds, for their mutual relief, is the establishment of friendly societies, which are numerous in the county. There are also many money and building clubs.

SAVINGS BANKS give encouragement to the provident habits of the industrious classes, by affording them a safe and profitable investment of what they are enabled to lay by, against a time of need. The amount of deposits, and number of depositors, are given at the places where established.

ENCLOSURE OF COMMONS, STATE OF POOR, &c.—Warwickshire contains only a very small portion of unenclosed land: the dates of many enclosures will be given in the progress of the work. The rapid increase of population, which certainly rendered the improvement of waste lands necessary; has had some effect in deteriorating the condition of many poor persons; to remedy this, in various instances landowners have made small allotments to the labouring poor, at a moderate rent for spade culture, a practice which not only tends to prevent poverty but give encouragement to industry and economy; and, in some measure, supplies the place of that domestic industry which formerly existed in every village, and in every house, but which the great scientific improvements of the last century have swept away.

AREA AND POPULATION OF ENGLAND, WALES, AND SCOTLAND.—In 1841, England had a population of 14,995,138 souls, and 31,770,615 acres of land. Wales, 911,603 inhabitants, and 4,752,000 acres. Scotland, 2,620,184 inhabitants. Islands in the British seas:—Gurnsey, Jersey, and Man, 124,040 inhabitants. Ireland, 8,175,238 inhabitants. The army, navy, and merchant seamen, amounted to 188,453. To the above it is supposed 4,716 were travelling by railway and canal during the night of June, 6th, 1841; making a grand total, for the United Kingdom, of 27,019,670 souls. The general summary of the returns of 1841, classifies the population of England and Wales, and Scotland, with the British Isles, as follows:—10,996,398 are returned as children of all ages; 511,440 as independent persons; 1,123,828 as naval, military, professional or educated persons; 1,165,233 as domestic servants, gamekeepers, grooms and ostlers; 2,260,146 as agriculturists and labourers; 1,969,470 as engaged in commerce and trade; this class includes all the handicraft trades and shopkeepers; 1,149,960 as engaged in manufacturing; 16,959 as government civil service; 25,275 as parochial, town, and church officers, police officers, constables, &c.; 199,069 as almspeople, pensioners, paupers, and lunatics, exclusive of 597 on board of the hulks.

RENT.—By a return made in 1848, the total rent of lands, manors, and tithes, in England, is stated to be £40 123,314 16s. 4d.; and of houses, mines, quarries, &c., £42,213,701 18s. 5d.; that of Wales, for land, &c., £2,560,676 7s. 11d.; for houses, &c., £905,042 11s. 11d.; for Scotland, of land, &c., £5,587,420 9s. 5d.; and for houses, &c., £3,894,332 19s. 4d. Making a total for Great Britain, of rent for land, &c., of £48,271,429 9s. 5d.; and for houses, of £47,013,077 9s. 7d. A return of the amount of capital employed, and of the value of stock in trade, both agricultural, manufacturing, and mercantile, would be interesting.

NEW AND OLD POOR LAWS.—The former passed in 1834, the latter, in the 43rd year of Queen Elizabeth. Much has been said about the mal-administration of the Old Law, and various successive administrations had declared it an evil, that was like a canker eating into the heart of the nation, pauperizing the labourers of the whole country. Many attempts at improvement were made, but to no effect; the evil kept steadily increasing. The Law of Elizabeth ordered the setting to work all able-bodied poor, and the providing for age, infirmity, and youth; declaring every one born in England had a right to a subsistence on the soil of his birth: to carry out this measure, land, buildings, and stock-in-trade were rated for that object. As early as 1759 this law was infringed upon; and in the month of March, in that year, a committee of the House of Commons was appointed to take into consideration the state of the poor in England, as well as the laws enacted for their maintenance. In May, the report of the committee declared that it is contrary to the spirit and intention of the laws for the relief of the poor to give money out of the parochial rates to persons capable to labour, in order to prevent them from claiming an entire subsistence for themselves and their families, and a misapplication of the public money. To remedy this, Workhouses were recommended to be erected, in which the poor might be employed in the several counties and ridings in England, &c., in profitable labour, for fully carrying out the law. However, the difficulty of providing profitable labour kept constantly increasing, and the recommendations of that committee were soon abandoned. The poor rates of the kingdom averaged in 1748, 1749, and 1750, £730,135.; for the year 1776. it was £172,748.; in 1803 the amount was £5,348,204.; in 1817 the amount was £9,320,440. Certainly the time had arrived for a full investigation, and an endeavour to point out the true cause, as the only sure way to order a remedy: to do this, a parliamentary commission was appointed with certain powers; and a mass of evidence, the most appalling, was produced by their report. As no profitable labour could be found, the poor got what he could for his labour, and received the remainder in parish pay; and this degrading state continued increasing both in the agricultural and manufacturing districts. The Parliament framed a law, from the report of this commission of inquiry, which they said would restore the prosperity and independence of the labourers and mechanics. To effect this, they were thrown on their own resources, and refused all relief except they resided in the Union House; the kingdom being to be parcelled into Poor Law Unions, the power of the magistrates to order relief taken away, with various other changes from the wise protective law of Elizabeth. To carry out this great object, a Poor Law Commission was appointed, having three commissioners, who each receive £2,000. a year; eighteen assistant commissioners, who receive together £12,600. a year; with secretaries, clerks, &c., in the whole amounting to £50,173. per annum, paid by government; under whom guardians of parishes and townships are appointed, according to their population, to act with and assist the commissioners in carrying out this great measure. In the session of 1844. the government, by Sir James Graham, passed a bill to make some improvement of that of 1834, which principally consists in giving to the guardians more power to order relief, but still subject to the controlling power of the commissioners; other alterations have since been made, which have added considerably to the expense paid out of the public purse, which the Poor Law for Ire and has greatly augmented. The average annual amount of the poor's rate for three years previous to the New Poor Law, was £5,332,904. In the year 1841, it amounted to £4,082,287; in 1842, £4,172,018.; and in 1843, £4,406,088.; to which, if we add the expense paid out of the general taxes, with the heavy expense of building Union Houses, the ratepayer has not been much benefited, nor the condition of the poor at all ameliorated. It has been found necessary to make several alterations in the law from time to time: and, in 1847, this commission was abrogated, and the law is now to be carried out by commissioners who are to be members of parliament, and as retrenchment is the most incomprehensible thing to the generality of members of parliament, we may fairly calculate that the cost of carrying out the law will not be decreased by the change.

The Poor Law Unions of Warwickshire are described at each of the places where the Union House is erected.

The value at which all the property in England is rated to the poor, is stated to be £62,000,000.

TRADE.—The general trade of England has been rapidly increasing during the last fifty years. In the year 1800, the value of British produce, and manufactures exported, were, at the official value, or a certain value fixed in the year 1694, £24,304,284, of which the declared value, as returned from the customs, was £39,471,203, or the real money value, according to the invoices of the exporters. In 1830, the exports, as above, at the official value, was £61,140,865, of which the declared value was £38,251,503, being a depreciation from the real money value, according to the invoices of the exporters; and in reality in the whole exports of no less than £63,511,499. In 1840, the exports, as above, according to the official value, was £102,705,379; and the declared value, was £51,406,430, of which the annual depreciation of the value, as fixed by the customs in 1694, amounted to £119,536,644. The imports, at the official value, in 1840, amounted to £62,684,587. The exports have, on the whole, kept increasing, till the year 1846, when the return shewed a decrease of 2,000,000 and upwards, from the year 1845. During five months, ending August 16th, 1848, there was, as compared with the same period for 1847, a decrease in the exports of British produce and manufactures of £4,747,588. The import of foreign cattle of all sorts, in 1842, amounted to 5,350 head; in 1843, to 2,100 head; in 1844, 8,167 head; in 1845, 34,426 head; and in 1846, to 17,121 oxen, 22,994 cows, 2,447 calves, 94,567 sheep, 3,443 swine; making a total of 140,572 head.

In 1842, duty was paid on 180,480 cwts. of butter; in 1843, on 148,295 cwts.; in 1844, on 180,965 cwts.; in 1845, on 240,118 cwts.; and in 1846, 257,777 cwts. were imported, and duty paid on 255,130 cwts. The duty on cheese, in 1842, was charged on 179,568 cwts.; in 1843, on 166,563 cwts.; in 1844, on 212,206 cwts.; in 1845, on 258,246 cwts.; and in 1846, 336,185 cwts. were imported, and the duty paid on 327,490 cwts.; since that period the increase in the imports of butter has been considerable; but that of cheese is immense; this great increase has been occasioned by the extension of this trade with America. In 1841, 15,153 cwts. of cheese were imported; in 1846 there were 91,901 cwts. imported from that country. In 1843, there were 1,433,803 quarters of corn imported; and in 1846, 4,777,311 quarters were imported.

THE NEW SMALL DEBTS ACT, OR COUNTY COURTS.—This important Act has created a revolution in law proceedings, on actions for claims and demands not exceeding £20; and by an order of Her Majesty took effect throughout England and Wales, on the 15th of March, 1847. By an order in council, all Courts for Small Debts was abolished, on the 13th of March, with the exception of a few, from which day the excepted Courts are to be holden at County Courts, and governed by the provisions of the Act now enforced. Each District Court is presided over by a Judge, who appoints a clerk, being an attorney, and he appoints other officers. The fees allowed by the Act are to be exhibited. The salaries of the judges and clerks may, by an order, be fixed, so that in no case a judge is to be paid more than one thousand two hundred pounds, or a clerk more than six hundred pounds a year. The jurisdiction of the Court is thus defined in the 58th Section—"And be it enacted, that all pleas of personal actions, when the debt or damage claimed is not more than £20, whether a balance account or otherwise, may be holden in the County Court without writ; and all such actions brought in the said Court, shall be heard and determined in a summary manner, in a Court constituted under this Act, and according to the provisions of this Act, provided always that the Court shall not have cognizance of any action or ejectment, or in which the title to any corporeal or any incorporeal hereditaments, or any toll, fair, market or franchise, shall be in question, or in which the validity of any devise, bequest, or limitation under any will or settlement may be disputed, or for any malicious prosecution, or for any libel, or slander, or for criminal conversation, or for seduction, or for breach of promise of marriage." Demands are not to be divided, but may be reduced to £20. Minors may sue for wages, executors may sue and be sued. The judge is to determine the case where no jury is summoned. In cases exceeding £5 in amount, a plaintiff or defendant may require a jury of five persons on the payment of five shillings; and under that amount the judge as a discretionary power as to a jury. Witnesses are to be paid their expenses, and may be fined for non-attendance. A debt may be paid by instalments, and a judge has power to order an execution against the goods of the defendant, except the wearing apparel and tools, to the amount of £5. A commitment for forty days may be made, and is not to extinguish the debt. Actions, in certain cases, such as where the plaintiff resides more than twenty miles from the defendant, may be brought into the superior Courts; but in other cases it is enacted—"That if an action shall be commenced after the passing of this Act, in any of her Majesty's Superior Courts of Record, for any other cause than those herein before specified, for which a plaint may have been entered into any court holden under this Act, and a verdict shall be found for the plaintiff for a sum less than £20, if the said action is founded on contract, or less than £5; if it be founded on tort or wrong, the said plaintiff shall have judgment to recover such sum, and no costs; and if a verdict shall not be found for the plaintiff, the defendant shall be entitled to his costs, as between attorney and client, unless in either case the judge, who shall try the cause, shall certify on the back of the record that the action was fit to be tried in such Superior Court." THE DISTRICTS are appointed by the Lord Chancellor.

THE NEW LAW OF BANKRUPTCY.

The new Act of Parliament to empower the Commissioners of the Court of Bankruptcy to order the release of Bankrupts from prison in certain cases, which took effect on the 31st of August, 1848, has just been printed, (11 and 12 Vic., cap. 8.) By this Act it is provided that where any person has been adjudged bankrupt, and has surrendered to the fiat, and has obtained his protection from arrest, pursuant to the practice in bankruptcy, if such person shall be in prison at the time of obtaining such protection, any Commissioner acting under such fiat may order his immediate release from prison, either absolutely, or upon such condition as such Commissioner shall think fit, which release is not to affect the rights of creditors detaining him in prison. The second clause is an important one:—"And be it enacted, that if any bankrupt whose last examination shall have been adjourned sine die, or whose certificate shall have been suspended or refused, shall be in execution, or be taken in execution, under a capias ad satisfaciendum, at the suit of any creditor who might have proved under the fiat and detained in prison, any Commissioner acting under his fiat may order his release, after he shall have undergone such term of imprisonment, not exceeding two years, as to such Commissioner may seem a sufficient punishment for such offence as he may appear to such Commissioner to have been guilty of.

THE ACT FOR PROMOTING PUBLIC HEALTH.

The following is an abstract of this Act. This Act applies to all parts of England and Wales, except the City of London, the parts in the limits of the Commissioners of Sewers, and the Regent's Park. The sanitary condition of the various parochial and other districts is to be managed by Local Boards of Health, such Local Boards to be governed by a General Board of Health, which is to consist of the First Commissioners of the Woods and Forests, and two other persons to be appointed and approved by her Majesty. The General Board of Health is to appoint Inspectors for inquiring into the sanitary condition of the various districts. Local Boards are to be elected by the ratepayers of the various districts, and the number of members in each Board is to be regulated by an order in Council, the qualification necessary to be a member not to exceed the possession of £1,000., or the rated value of £30. Local Boards to hold Meetings at least once a month. No new houses are to be built without proper drainage, &c., and if upon inspection by the proper officer, it shall be found that houses are improperly drained, or in such a condition that they are likely to affect the public health, the owner or occupier thereof shall make such reparations as are required, and in default the Local Board shall do so, and the expenses of such reparation may be recovered from the party by whom such reparations ought to have been made. The omission of opaque smoke from the chimneys of factories is prohibited under a penalty of £5. per day after notice; and the keeping of swine in improper places, and running of waste water, is likewise prohibited under a penalty of 20s., and 5s. per day after notice.

All slaughter-houses are to be registered, and the Inspector of Nuisances may at all times enter into the same, and remove any offensive or putrid matter, and the party upon whose premises such putrid matter shall be found, shall be liable, upon conviction, to a penalty of not more than £10. for every animal, or piece of fish, flesh, &c., that may be found. All common Lodging Houses are to be registered, together with the number of lodgers to be accommodated therein, under a penalty of 40s. for every lodger received while unregistered. Cellars, and other underground apartments, are not to be let as dwelling rooms, unless they shall in every part thereof, be at least seven feet from the floor to the ceiling, nor unless three feet above the level of the street or ground adjoining; this section, however, does not come into operation until twelve months after the passing of this Act. By the 57th section, an exceedingly important provision is made, by which the Local Boards may erect water closets, &c., for the public accommodation. Offensive ditches, sewers, drains, &c. are to be covered, or cleansed, &c. And by the 83rd and 84th sections, Burial Grounds may be prohibited by the general board, and local boards are to provide other places for interments; Vaults, &c., within churches, are not hereafter to be built, nor Burial Grounds formed without the sanction of the general board. All damages, costs, and expenses, under this Act, may be ascertained and recovered before two Justices, and if the same be not paid, the same may be levied by distress. Common informers cannot sue under this Act without the consent of the Attorney General, and proceedings for penalties must be taken within six months. In any case in which the penalty adjudged shall exceed 20s., the party may appeal to the General or Quarter Sessions, upon giving notice in writing of his intention, with his ground for so doing.

HISTORY OF WARWICK.

WARWICK, a borough and market town, having separate jurisdiction, locally in the Warwick division of the hundred of Kington, county of Warwick, of which it is the county town; 10 miles S. by W. from Coventry, 20 miles S. E. from Birmingham, 104 miles S. by E. from Manchester, 64 miles S. E. from Shrewsbury, and 92 miles N. W. from London. This place is said by Rous, the historian of the county, to have been a British town of considerable importance prior to the Roman invasion, and this statement is confirmed by Camden, Dugdale, and other writers. The same author relates that, after its devastation by the frequent incursions of the Picts, it was rebuilt by Caractacus, on whose defeat by Claudius, in the year 50, the Romans, in order to secure their conquests in Britain, erected several fortresses on the banks of the Severn and Avon, of which latter, Warwick Castle was one; but this is very doubtful, the nearest Roman station having probably been that at Chesterton. Upon the establishment of the Saxons in the island, this town, included in the kingdom of Mercia, fell under the dominion of Warremund, who rebuilt it, and, after his own name, called it Warre-wyke; it appears, however, from a coin of Hardicanute, that its Anglo-Saxon name was Herhica, but from either of these sources its present name may be derived. Warwick was subsequently destroyed by the Danes, and, according to the most authentic records, Ethelfleda, daughter of Alfred, and Countess of Mercia, restored it about the year 913, and built a fort, which evidently forms the most ancient part of the present castle. At the time of the Conquest, this fortress was considerably enlarged, and the town was surrounded with a wall and a ditch, of which there are still the north, east, and west gates remaining, and other vestiges; and a memorial is preserved in the appellation of a certain part of the town, called "Wall-dyke." In the reign of Edward I., the fortification was repaired by Guy, Earl of Warwick, who, in 1312, with the Earl of Lancaster, having taken Piers Gaveston, the favourite of Edward II., brought him from Wallingford castle, where he was secured for the night under the barons' guard, to Blacklow hill, about a mile from the town, where he was tried and beheaded. In 1556, Robert, earl of Leicester, who had succeeded to the earldom of Warwick, celebrated, in the Beauchamp chapel, in St. Mary's Church, the ceremony of the order of St. Michael, which, by permission of Elizabeth, had been conferred upon him by Charles XI. of France: William Parr, brother of Catherine, the last consort of Henry VIII. assisted at this ceremony, and dying soon after, was buried in the chancel of the church. Queen Elizabeth visited Warwick in 1572, on her route to Kenilworth castle, where she was sumptuously entertained by the Earl of Leicester for seventeen days, and amused with diversions, spectacles, and other pageants of costly magnificence, at an expense of not less than £1,000 per day. In 1617, James I. visited the town, and was splendidly entertained in the great hall of the Earl of Leicester's hospital; in commemoration of which, a tablet, with an appropriate inscription, was put up on one of the walls of that building. During the great civil war, in the reign of Charles I., Robert Greville, Lord Brooke, embraced the cause of the parliament, and defended the castle against the king. Having occasion to repair to London, in order to procure a supply of arms and ammunition, he deputed Sir Edward Peto governor during his absence. The supply being obtained, he was met on his return by the Earl of Northampton, with a considerable force, near Edge Hill; but an accommodation taking place, Lord Brooke deposited his artillery and ammunition in Banbury castle, and returned to London. After his departure, the earl, having attacked Banbury castle, and taken the military stores, advanced to Warwick, and laid siege to the castle, which was defended by the governor for fourteen days, till Lord Brooke, on his return from London, after a successful skirmish with the earl near Southam, came to his assistance, and compelled the royalists to abandon the siege. William III. in 1695, visited the town, of which, in the course of the preceding year, more than one half was destroyed, by a dreadful conflagration, occasioned by a spark from a lighted piece of wood in the hand of a boy, communicating with the thatched roof of a dwelling-house; a great quantity of goods, probably in a state of ignition, having been removed for safety into the collegiate church of St. Mary, set fire to that venerable pile, which, with the exception of the chancel, the Beauchamp chapel, and the chapter house, was destroyed. In a few years after, the town was rebuilt, in consequence of a national contribution, amounting to £110,000, of which £1,000 was bestowed by Queen Anne.

The town is pleasantly situated on a rock of freestone, rising gently from the north side of the river Avon, which winds round its base. The approaches on every side are beautiful, and the surrounding scenery is richly diversified. The entrance from the Banbury road is strikingly picturesque: a handsome stone bridge, of one noble arch, one hundred and five feet in the span, and thirty-six wide, which was completed in 1790, at an expense of £4,000, by the Earl of Warwick, assisted by £1,000 from the Corporation, leads into the town, which rises gradually from the bank of the river, and presents in succession the venerable castle on the left, the spire of St. Nicholas' church in the lower ground, and the lofty tower of St. Mary's in the distance. The entrance from the Birmingham road, after passing through the suburb called Saltisford, commands a view of the priory, and county hall, and the fine tower of St. Mary's church. The entrance from the Stratford road is through a long ancient arched gateway, with a lofty tower on the west; and that from the Emscot road through an archway, which supports the chapel of St. Peter. The streets are spacious and regularly formed, consisting chiefly of two principal ones running east and west, crossed by another inclining to the centre of the town. The houses are in general modern and well-built, interspersed with elegant mansions, and others affording occasional specimens of the style which prevailed before the fire. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and partly supplied with water by pipes leading from reservoirs about half-a-mile distant. The Castle, the seat of Henry Richard Greville, Earl Brooke, and Earl of Warwick, is situated on the south side of the town, is one of the most splendid and entire specimens of feudal grandeur in the kingdom, and is not less remarkable for its stately magnificence, than for the elegance of its architecture, and the beauty of its situation; it encloses within the walls an area of nearly three acres, the plot surrounded by the moat being more than five acres and a half. A winding road, cut through the solid rock, the sides of which are covered with ivy, and skirted with shrubs, leads from the outer lodge to a massive gateway, flanked with two towers connected by an embrasure above, and formerly defended by a portcullis, which leads into the inner court; in the north angle of which is a lofty octangular tower, with a projecting and embattled parapet resting upon corbels; in the south angle is Guy's tower, of nearly similar form, but more ancient, and having an exploratory turret rising from within the battlements; on the north-east side are two low embattled towers, in one of which bears were anciently kept, for the purpose of baiting. The range of state apartments on the east, as viewed from this side of the castle, is strikingly magnificent; the windows are in fine proportion, and every part is in the highest preservation. At the western extremity, and commanding, from its elevated situation, an extensive view of the surrounding country, is the keep, erected by Ethelfleda, as a place of security against any sudden irruption of the Danes, and also as an exploratory tower, from which their movements might be observed. The ascent is by a winding path, now richly planted with forest trees, among which are some beautiful cedars of Lebanon, and laid out in walks and shrubberies. The facade of the castle, rising from the river Avon, is a long line of flat masonry, relieved only by the number and variety of its windows. The broken arches of an ancient bridge, which formerly led into the town, are still preserved, and add greatly to the picturesque beauty of the scene. The state-rooms, the armoury, and the other various apartments, are preserved in a style of appropriate grandeur; the lawns and gardens which surround it are tastefully laid out; and in the green-house, built expressly for its reception, is the beautiful Grecian vase of Lysippus, which was dug from the ruins of Adrian's palace, at Tivoli, near Rome, and brought to England by Sir William Hamilton, under the direction and at the expense of his nephew, the late Earl of Warwick. This celebrated specimen of ancient sculpture is of white marble, and is placed upon a pedestal of the same material; its form is nearly that of a hemisphere with reverted rim; two intertwining vines, of which the stems form the handles, wreath their tendrils, with fruit and foliage, round the upper part of the exterior, and the central part is ornamented with antique heads, and enveloped with a panther's skin with the head and paws, the thyrsus of Bacchus, the lituus of the augurs, and other embellishments. It is of large dimensions, being capable of containing one hundred and sixty-three gallons.

EARLS OF WARWICK.

Rous, the Warwickshire Antiquary, who died in 1491, gravely assures us that Warwick hath had its Earls ever since the reign of the renowned King Arthur, when Arthgal or Artigalth first enjoyed that honour, and furnishes us with a list of the succeeding Earls from the ancient British chronicles. In this he is partly followed by Dugdale. "The former part of Rous's work savours so much of fable and romance that little or no credit can be given to it; and it is certain that, although Warwick, as well as other counties, had its Earls in the period preceding the invasion of this island by William, Duke of Normany, yet these Earls were no more than either Fiduciary Vicecomites, or substitutes to the Earls of Mercia (within whose earldom Warwickshire was included), or immediate officers to the King; and had not in themselves any absolute jurisdiction: neither did they in their own right possess the castle and town of Warwick, or receive the third penny of the county, as would have been the case had they been Earls in fee." We do not consider it necessary to give even a succinct account of the various Saxon Earls mentioned by Rous and Dugdale, but it would be most unpardonable to avoid mention of the redoubtable Guy, who, we are told, married Felicia, daughter and heiress of Rohand, a great warrior in the time of Alfred, and in her right became Earl of Warwick.

This renowned champion is said to have been the son of Siward, baron of Wallingford; and according to vulgar belief his height exceeded nine feet. Amongst other instances of his prowess, it is related that he slew a Saracen giant, in single combat killed a wild boar, an enormous dun cow, and even a green dragon.

After his battle with the 'mighty Colbrand' he retired to Guy's Cliff, near Warwick, where he lived the life of a hermit till his death, in 929. Guy's armour, so called, is still preserved in the Porter's Lodge, at Warwick Castle, and one of the rooms in the castle was formerly adorned with arras, in which the story of the battle was represented. In the reign of Henry VIII, the custody of Guy's sword was granted by patent to Wm. Hoggesson, yeoman of the buttery, with a salary of 2d. a day.

At the time of the conquest Turchill (descended from the famous Guy) was Earl, but, although a nobleman of great power, he did not give any assistance to Harold in opposition to Duke William, for which reason he was allowed quiet possession of his vast estates, and was even employed to enlarge and fortify the castle and town of Warwick, but he was soon after deprived of the Earldom.

The town having been thus fortified, by order of the conqueror, with ditch and gates, and the castle repaired and enlarged, which before consisted of little more than the fortification called the dungeon, built by order of Ethelfleda, 915, upon the artificial mound of earth near the river side: the custody of this strong place was committed by the King to Henry de Newburg, whom he advanced to the dignity of Earl of Warwick, and bestowed on him with the earldom and castle, the manor of Warwick, and the royalty of that borough.

On William Rufus attaining the crown he enriched the newly created earl with the greater part of Turchill de Warwick's inheritance. The earl likewise assumed the Bear and ragged staff (the ancient device of Turchill's family) as the ensign of his family. Thus it became the remarkable badge of the successive earls, and when supporters came in use it was in that shape added to their arms.

HENRY DE NEWBURG, first Earl of Warwick, who took his surname from the Castle of Newburg in Normandy, the place of his birth, was second son of Roger de Beaumont, Count de Mellent, lord of Pontaudemer, &c., and attended William the Conqueror to England. On the quarrel between William I. and his son Robert, this Henry was one of those who in the year 1081 effected the reconciliation between them, and was the chief instrument in raising Henry the king's youngest son, to the throne on the death of William Rufus. He began in the reign of Henry I. making Wedgnoek Park, in imitation of Woodstock Park, made just before by Henry I., which was the first land emparked in England. He founded a priory for Canons of the Holy Sepulchre, on the north side of Warwick, now the seat of the Rev. H. Wise, and still called "The Priory," and endowed the church of St. Mary with several tithes and lands for prebends, intending to make it collegiate, &c., but died before he could complete his designs. He married Margeret, daughter of Rotrode Earl of Perche, by whom he had five sons, Roger, Henry, Geoffrey, Rotrode, and Robert, and two daughters. He died 23 Henry I., 1123, and was buried in the Abbey of Preaux, in Normandy.

ROGER DE NEWBURG, second Earl of Warwick, was a witness to King Stephen's laws; conquered Gowerland, in Wales (which his descendants for a long time enjoyed); founded a Priory at Llangonith, and annexed it as a cell to the Abbey of St. Taurinus, at Fureux, in Normandy; perfected the foundation of the priory begun by his father, founded the Collegiate Church of St. Mary; the Hospital of St. Michael, for lepers, in the Saltisford, and the house of the Templars beyond the bridge, at Warwick; made large grants to religious houses; several times visited the Holy Land, and was accounted a devout and pious man. He married Gundrede, daughter of William, Earl of Warren (who on the arrival of Henry, Duke of Normandy, afterwards Henry II., turned out King Stephen's soldiers who then manned the garrison, and delivered it up to Henry), by whom he had issue, three sons, William, Walleran, and Henry, and also a daughter, Agnes. He died 18 Stephen, 1153.

WILLIAM DE NEWBURG, third Earl of Warwick, 20 Henry II., procured an addition of two knights to the five knights and ten sergeants who kept guard in the moat of Warwick Castle, and appears to have lived in regal splendour. He founded two hospitals in Warwick, the one dedicated to St. John, and the other to St. Thomas, and built a new church for the Templars there. He died in the Holy Land, 30 Henry II., November 15, 1184, without issue, having been twice married—first to Margaret d'Fivill secondly to Maud, daughter of William, Lord Percy; and was succeeded by his brother.

WALLERAN DE NEWBURG, fourth Earl, of whom historians mention little. He had two wives; Margaret, daughter of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, and Alice, daughter of John de Harecourt, and widow of John de Limesi; by the former he left issue, Henry his successor, and Walleran, who died without issue, also a daughter, Grundreda, who became a nun in the abbey of Pinley. by his second wife he had one daughter, Alice, married to William Mauduit, baron of Hanslope. He died 6 John, 1205.

HENRY DE NEWBURG, being a minor at the death of his father, was committed to the custody of Thomas Basset, of Heddington, near Oxford. 13 John he was certified to hold 107 knight's fees of the king in capite. This earl strictly adhered to King John in all his wars with the barons, notwithstanding that monarch had seized on the seignior of Gower, in Wales, during the earl's minority, and bestowed it on William de Braose. 12 Hen. III. he took up arms against the king in behalf of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, but their differences being happily adjusted, he was afterwards firmly attached to the king. He died 13 Hen., III. 1229, leaving issue by his first wife, Margery, eldest of the the sisters and coheirs of Henry d'Oily, one son, Thomas, who succeeded him, and one daughter, Margery, who afterwards became heiress to her brother. By his second wife, Phillipa, daughter of Thomas Basset, he had no issue.

THOMAS DE NEWBURG, though he had attained to his majority at the death of his father, had not full possession of the earldom till four years after. He was girt with the sword of knighthood 17 Hen. III., at Gloucester, where the king then kept his Whitsuntide festival. This earl married Ela, daughter of William Longespe, Earl of Salisbury, natural son to King Hen. II., and, dying without issue, 26 Hen. III., 1242, was buried in the Choir at Warwick; his monument was removed on the new building of the said Choir and never re-erected.

MARGERY DE NEWBURG, heiress to the earldom, was married first to John Mareschal, of the family of the Earls of Pembroke; and secondly, by the special appointment of Henry III., to John de Plessetis, a particular favourite of the king's.

JOHN DE PLESSETIS, in right of his wife, took upon him the title of Earl of Warwick, 1247; and in the month of August following, the king, in giving his permission to fell certain oaks in the forest of Dene, affords him the title of Comes Warwici, which from that time he constantly used. At the decease of his countess, Margery, without children the inheritance reverted to the issue of her aunt, Alice, daughter of Walleran, Earl of Warwick, who had been married to William Mauduit, Baron of Hanslape, by whom she left a son and heir, William Mauduit, and also a daughter, Isabel. John de Plessetis died February 26, 47 Hen. III., and was buried in the choir of Misseden Abbey, Bucks.

WILLIAM MAUDUIT, Baron of Hanslape, on the death of John de Plessetis, became Earl of Warwick, and had livery of the castle, and all manors and lands belonging to the family. In the war between Henry III and the barons he was a firm adherent to the king, and was unfortunately surprised in his castle at Warwick by John Giffard, governor of Kenilworth Castle, on the part of the barons, when the walls of the castle were demolished from tower to tower, the earl and his countess carried prisoners to Kenilworth, and obliged to pay 1900 marks for his ransom. He married Alice, daughter of Gilbert de Segrave, and, dying without issue, January 8, 52 Hen. III., 1267, left Isabel, his sister married to William de Beauchamp, eldest son and heir of Walkeline, Baron of Elmley, Worcestershire, sole heiress to the title and estates. His body was buried in the abbey of Saint Peter, Westminster, but his heart was deposited in Catesby Nunnery, Northamptonshire.

WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP, heir of the noble family of the BEAUCHAMPS (which at the conquest was considered one of the principal families of Normandy, and who, coming over with the conqueror, had, for their services and by intermarriage, obtained immense possessions and privileges in England), became heir to the earldom in right of his wife, Isabel, but she having entered a nunnery at Cokehill, in Worcestershire, they never assumed the title. He died 54 Hen. III., 1269, and was buried in the church of the Friars Minor, Worcester, leaving issue, William, who succeeded him; John, grandfather of John Beauchamp, created Baron Beauchamp of Kidderminster, October 10, 1377; Walter de Beauchamp, from whom Sir Fulke Greville, first Lord Brooke, was lineally descended, and Thomas, who died unmarried; also four daughters, Sarah, wife of Richard, Lord Talbot; Joan, wife of Sir Bart. de Sudley; Isabel and Sibil who died young.

WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP, in right of his mother, Earl of Warwick (which title he enjoyed during his father's life, as appears from the late earl's will, wherein he styles him William Earl of Warwick), was Baron of Hanslape, and one of the chamberlains to the king in his exchequer; in right of his father, Baron of Elmley, hereditary constable of the castle of Worcester and sheriff of that county. He did homage for his possessions February 9, 52 Hen. III. His services were almost continually employed by the crown in Scotland and Wales; and he was one of the governors of Prince Edward, then a minor, during the time Edward I. was employed in the Netherlands. He died June, 1298, 26

Edward I., and was buried in the chapel of Our Lady, in the cathedral of Worcester, leaving issue by Maud, his countess (daughter and coheir of Richard Fitz-John), Guy, Robert, and John; and five daughters, two of whom became nuns at Shouldham, in Norfolk.

GUY DE BEAUCHAMP next succeeded to the earldom, and in the same year attended the king to Scotland, and for his valour in the battle of Falkirk received all the castles and lands of Geoffrey de Mawbray lying in that kingdom, except the lordship of Okeford near Roxborough; and all the lands of John de Strivelin, with the castle of Amesfield, and the lands of Drungrey. He served Edward I. several years in that country, for which he was rewarded with Bernard castle, in the bishopric of Durham, together with the town and lordship; also the manor of Middleton, with its chases; and the manor of Gainsford, with other lands belonging to John de Baliol, then the king's enemy. 5 Edw. II. he was one of the noblemen who seized Piers Gaveston, that monarch's haughty favourite, whom he conveyed to Warwick Castle, and, in conjunction with the Earls of Lancaster, Hereford, and Arundel, from thence to Blacklow Hill, near Warwick, where they beheaded him. Earl Guy long entertained an invincible hatred against Gaveston for having fixed upon him the insulting epithet of "The black hound of Arden." He died at Warwick Castle, 9 Edw. II., Aug. 12, 1315, as most thought, by poison, and was buried at Bordesley, leaving issue by Alice, daughter of Ralph de Tony, two sons; Thomas, who succeeded him, and John (who had the honour to carry the royal standard in the battle of Cressy, was captain of Calais, admiral of the king's fleet, constable of the Tower of London and Dover Castle, warden of the Cinque ports, one of the founders of the most noble Order of the Garter, &c.), who died 34 Edward III., and was buried between two pillars in the south part of St. Paul's London; and also five daughters, Maud, Emma, Isabel, Elizabeth, and Lucia, all honourably married.

THOMAS DE BEAUCHAMP being scarcely two years old at his father's death, Hugh le Despencer had custody of his lands, and probably of his person; but after the ruin of that great favourite in the beginning of the next reign, the custody was obtained by Roger, Lord Mortimer. At the age of seventeen, by special favour, the king received his homage; and, before he was twenty, made him governor of Guernsey and the little islands adjacent. He attended the king in the French and Scottish wars and did great service in the sea fight, 1340. He was one of the marshals of the king's army in France, and one of the chief commanders who under the Black Prince, led the van of the English army in the battle of Cressy. At Poitiers he fought so gallantly that his hand was severely galled with plying his sword and battle axe; at this battle he took prisoner William de Melleum, Archbishop of Seinz, for whose ransom he had £8,000. 37 Edw. III. he made a progress into the east, "warring against the infidels;" on his return he brought back with him the son of the King of Lithuania, who was christened at London by the name of Thomas, the earl standing godfather. He rebuilt the walls of Warwick Castle, founded the choir of Saint Mary's, built a booth hall in the Market-place,* and made the town toll-free. 43 Edw. III., hearing that the English army under the Duke of Lancaster, lay perishing with famine and pestilence in their camp and yet refused fighting the French who pressed them close; old as he then was he hastily collected some choice troops and sailed for Calais, where his bare appearance dispersed the French, whom he pursued in their retreat. This truly great man was seized with the pestilence at Calais, of which he died November 13, 1370, aged 63. His body was brought over and buried in the middle of St. Mary's Choir, Warwick. He had issue by his wife Catherine, daughter of Roger Mortimer, Earl of March, seven sons, viz., Guy, who died before him, in 1359, and was buried at Vendosme, in France; Thomas, who succeeded him; Reynburne,

* It is generally supposed that the chapel over the west gate (now the Earl of Leicester's Hospital) was repaired and the tower built by this earl, as his arms adorn the embattled parapet.

William, John, Roger, and Hierom ; he had also ten daughters, Maud, Philippa, Alice, Joane, Isabel, Margaret, Agnes, Juliana, Elizabeth, and Catherine.

THOMAS BEAUCHAMP, second son of the last earl, in consequence of his elder brother's death, succeeded to the earldom of Warwick. 50 Edward III., he was made governor of the isles of Guernsey, Sarke, and Alderney. 1 Rich. II. he was retained by indenture to serve the King in his wars beyond the seas, with 200 men at arms and 200 archers. having in his retinue 1 banneret, 4 knights, and 144 esquires ; and 2 years afterwards he was chosen governor to Richard II. 11 Richard II. this earl, in concert with the Duke of Gloucester (whose life the king sought), constrained the king to call a Parliament, in which laws were past for the security of the kingdom. In about two years after, the earl was deprived of his offices and dismissed from court ; he then retired to his castle at Warwick, and built that remarkable tower at the north-east corner, called Guy's Tower, the cost of which amounted to £395. 5s. 2d., and finished the body of Saint Mary's Church, 1394. in the meantime, though in retirement, he was an object of jealousy and resentment to his enemies. The king therefore invited the earl to a feast, who (suspecting no harm) came in an unguarded manner, when he was seized as a prisoner and condemned to loose his head for having been in arms with the Duke of Gloucester against the King. This sentence was afterwards remitted, but the earl was banished to the Isle of Man for life, and his castle and lands granted to Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent. In the same year he was brought back and confined in the Tower of London, but at the revolution which happened soon after, he was restored to his liberty, and reinstated in his rights. He died April 8th, 2 Hen. IV., 1401, aged 55, leaving by his wife Margaret, one son, his successor, and two daughters, who died nuns. He was buried in the south part of the Collegiate Church at Warwick.

RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP (who was born January 28th, 1381, and had for his godfather Richard II.) was one of the most considerable persons in this kingdom in the 15th century. At the coronation of Henry IV., he was made Knight of the Bath, being then only nineteen years of age, and Knight of the Garter at twenty-three ; and in the fourth year of the same reign he had livery of his lands. In the next year he marched with the forces to suppress the rebellion of Owen Glendowr, whose standard he took in open battle ; he was also in the battle of Shrewsbury against the Percies. In 1408 he obtained licence to visit the Sepulchre at Jerusalem ; on his return, 12 Hen. IV., he was retained to serve the Prince of Wales in times of peace and war, and to be attended in that prince's court by four esquires and six yeoman. He was appointed in conjunction with the Bishop of Durham and others, to manage the treaty with the King of Scots. At the coronation of Henry V., he was constituted Lord High Steward ; 1415, declared Captain of Calais and Governor of the marches of Picardy ; 1417, created Earl of Albermale ; in May following he was sent to the Court of France to treat of a marriage between Henry V. and Catherine, daughter of Charles VI., in which he succeeded to the satisfaction of his royal master ; 1420, elected a Knight of the Garter ; he was appointed by Henry V. to the tutelage of his son, then an infant ; and called from France by Parliament, after the death of Henry V. to take upon him the government of the young king. On the death of the Duke of Bedford, 14 Hen. VI., he was appointed Regent of France and Lieutenant-General of the king's forces in that realm and the Duchy of Normandy. He founded a Chantry in the chapel at Guy's Cliff, causing the chapel to be rebuilt and the statue of Earl Guy to be placed therein. He died in the castle of Roan, April 30, 1439, 17 Hen. VI., leaving issue by his first wife, Elizabeth, daughter and heiress to Thomas, Lord Berkley, Viscount Lisle, three daughters ; Margaret, married to John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, from whom are descended the Dudleys, Viscounts Lisle, afterwards Earl of Warwick ; Eleanor ; and Elizabeth, married to George Nevil, Lord Latimer, from whom the Willoughbys and Grevilles, Barons of Brooke, &c., are descended. By his second wife, Isabel, widow of Richard de Beauchamp, Earl of Worcester, his uncle's son (for which he had a special dispensation from the pope), he had issue, Henry, who succeeded him; and Anne, who married Richard Nevil, Earl of Salisbury. His body was brought over to England and laid in a chest of stone before the altar of St. Mary's at Warwick, until a chapel and a tomb (the most costly and beautiful in this kingdom, Henry the Seventh's at Westminster excepted) at a cost of £2481. 4s. 7½d., adjoining St. Mary's Church, should be finished, wherein it was then laid with great solemnity.

HENRY DE BEAUCHAMP, though little more than fourteen years of age when his father died, had been for some time married to Cecily, daughter of Richard Nevil, Earl of Salisbury; when he was not yet nineteen years of age he tendered his services to Henry VI. in defence of the Duchy of Aquitain, for which the king created him Premier Earl of England, with leave to distinguish himself and the heirs male of his body from other earls by wearing a gold coronet upon his head; within three days after this he was advanced to the rank of Duke of Warwick, with precedence next to the Duke of Norfolk. After this the duke had a grant in reversion, from the death of Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, of the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Sarke, Erme, and Alderney, for the yearly tribute of a rose. The king, further to express his affection for this nobleman, declared him King of the Isle of Wight, and placed the crown on the duke's head with his own hands. He survived these mighty honours but a short time, dying at his castle of Hanley, Worcestershire, June 11, 1445, 23 Hen. VI., aged 22. He was buried at the Abby of Tewkesbury, in the middle of the choir, leaving issue, an only daughter, Anne, who died before she had attained the age of six years, Jan. 3, 1449, 27 Hen. VI., leaving her aunt Anne, sister to Henry, Duke of Warwick, heiress of the earldom and inheritance of the family.

RICHARD NEVIL now assumed the title of Earl of Warwick in right of Anne, his wife, which right was confirmed by letters patent, obtained from Hen. VI., dated July 23, 1449. This earl, so well known in English history by the title of "The stout Earl of Warwick, the king maker," finding himself of consequence enough to hold the balance between the families of York and Lancaster, rendered England, during the reign of his power, a scene of bloodshed and confusion; and made or unmade kings of this or that house, as best suited his passions, pleasures, or interest. His life was passed in wars and broils, destructive to his country and to his family. He was slain in the battle of Barnet, April 14, 1471, which battle he fought against Edward IV., endeavouring to replace Henry VI. upon that throne from which, but a few years before, he had hurled him. By Anne, his wife, he left issue two daughters, Isabel, married to George, Duke of Clarence, brother to Edward IV.; and Anne, married first to Edward, Prince of Wales, son to Henry VI., by whom she had no issue; and secondly to Richard, Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III., who killed the prince, her first husband, in cool blood, after the battle of Tewkesbury, and, when king, poisoned her to secure the throne by marrying his brother's daughter. To her second husband, Richard, she bore a son, who was successively created Earl of Salisbury, Prince of Wales, and Earl of Chester; he died in his father's lifetime.

GEORGE PLANTAGANET, Duke of Clarence, in consideration of his marriage with Isabel, was by his brother Edward IV., in the twelfth year of his reign, created Earl of Warwick and Salisbury. He began to strengthen and beautify the castle, and projected great and important improvements both in the castle and town of Warwick; but falling under the suspicion of his brother, he was imprisoned in the Tower of London attainted of high treason before Parliament, Jan. 15, 1477, 17 Edw. IV., and on the 18th of Feb. following, drowned in a butt of Malmsey wine, his brother, the Duke of Gloucester assisting thereat. He had issue by his countess (who died of poison not long before him) two sons; Edward, who succeeded him in the earldom, and Richard, who died an infant; also two daughters, Margaret, who was afterwards Countess of Salisbury, and an infant born at sea, who did not live to be christened, and buried at Calais.

In 3 Hen. VII. an act was passed for recalling the Countess Anne, widow of Richard Nevil, from the obscure retreat in which she had for sometime been buried, and restoring her to the inheritance of her family. But this was a refinement of cruelty, for shortly after obtaining possession, she was forced to transfer to the king, by special deed, the immense possessions of her family, amounting at that time to 114 lordships, and the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, Sarke, and Alderney; the time of her death is not mentioned, but in 5 Henry VII. we find that an assignment was made by that king of the manor of Sutton, in Warwickshire, for her maintenance.

After the death of that countess EDWARD PLANTAGENET, eldest son of George, late Duke of Clarence, succeeded to the earldom, but an unhappy fortune pursued him from a child; he was confined by Richard III. in the castle of Sheriff-Hutton, until the battle of Bosworth Field, when Henry VII. caused him to be removed to the Tower of London, and confined more closely than ever, though his only crime was that of being the only Plantagenet living. At the age of twenty-five he was arraigned for high treason, before the Earl of Oxford, and, by a promise of mercy, prevailed upon to acknowledge himself guilty of entering into a conspiracy with Perkin Warbeck; he was thus led into the snare, and convicted upon his own confession. He was beheaded on Tower Hill, 15 Hen. VII., 1499, and buried in the monastery of Bisham; and to prevent the claim of any who might pretend to be his heirs, an attainder was passed against him, January 25, 19 Hen. VII.

After the death of Edward Plantagenet, the title lay dormant till 1547, a period of 48 years, when it was revived in favour of JOHN DUDLEY, Viscount Lisle, who was son of Edmund Dudley, by Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Edward Grey, Viscount Lisle by Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Thomas Talbot, Viscount Lisle, Grandson of John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, by Margaret, eldest daughter of R. Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick; thus descended from the old Earls of Warwick, though not next in blood to this last family, as the immediate descendants of the Countess of Salisbury were still in being. In the year after his father was beheaded he was restored in blood; 34 Hen. VIII. advanced to the title of Viscount Lisle, and by that king left one of his sixteen executors; Feb. 16, 1 Edw. VI., by letters patent, he had the dignity of Earl of Warwick conferred upon him, together with the castle, Wedgnoock park, the manor of Warwick, &c.; he was also made Lord High Chamberlain for life, and elected one of the knights of the Garter; 4 Edw. VI. he was made general warden of the north. Earl Marshal of England, and in the 6th year of the same king was raised to the dignity of Duke of Northumberland. He was attainted in the first parliament of Queen Mary for high treason, in attempting to place Lady Jane Grey, his daughter-in-law, upon the throne, and was beheaded on Tower Hill, August 22, 1553. He had issue by Jane, daughter of Sir Edward Guildford, seven sons; Henry, who died at the siege of Boulogne; John, who was called Earl of Warwick during his father's lifetime; Ambrose, afterwards created Earl of Warwick; Guildford, who was beheaded with his father; Robert who was created Earl of Leicester; another Henry, who was slain at St Quintins; and Charles who died in his infancy; also five daughters, Mary, Catherine, Margaret, Temperance, and another Catherine.

AMBROSE DUDLEY, third son of the last mentioned John, having obtained a reversion of the attainder, was, on Christmas day, 1557, 4 Elizabeth, created Viscount Lisle, and two days after, by a new creation, advanced to the dignity of Earl of Warwick. He was Master of the Ordnance, Lieutenant-General of Normandy, Chief Butler of England, Knight of the Garter, and Privy Counsellor. He married three wives, by neither of whom he had issue, and dying Feb. 21, 32 Elizabeth, 1589, the title again became extinct, and the inheritance reverted once more to the crown.

The title was again revived by James I., who, in 1618, raised ROBERT LORD RICH to the earldom of Warwick, but this earl, not being descended from the old family, never held the estates, nor did he long enjoy his honours, dying about eight months after his elevation, and being succeeded by his eldest son,

ROBERT RICH, who was Lord High Admiral of England, for the long Parliament. He was a man of pleasing and fascinating conversation and manners, witty and handsome, religious in profession, and licentious in practice. He enjoyed the confidence of Cromwell more than any other man; and in the negotiation with the King in 1645, one of the conditions proposed by the Parliament was the elevation of this Earl to a dukedom. He died in 1658, and was succeeded by ROBERT RICH, his eldest son, K. B., who enjoyed his honours but one "short fleeting year," and died in 1659. His only son, Robert, married Frances, youngest daughter of the Protector, Oliver Cromwell, but died without issue in his father's lifetime.

CHARLES RICH, brother to the above, as next heir, succeeded to the title; his only son, Charles, dying before his father.

ROBERT RICH, Earl of Holland, cousin of Charles, succeeded to the earldom, 1673, and united the titles of Warwick and Holland. He died in 1675.

EDWARD RICH, his only son, succeeded to the title and honours, and died in 1701.

EDWARD HENRY RICH, his only son, died unmarried, in 1721, and was succeeded by EDWARD RICH, his second cousin, the last earl of this line; who died without male issue, 1759, whereby the title became a third time extinct.

Of the numerous families which sprang from that of Warwick, and which are now extinct, or have transferred by heiresses their estates and honours into other families, none have been more considerable than that of ALCESTER and POWYKE, from which very ancient and noble family the present Earls of Warwick are descended.

FULKE GREVILLE, the first of his family, ennobled by the title of Lord Brooke, was born in 1554, and received his juvenile education with his cousin, the Great Sir Philip Sidney, at the school in Shrewsbury. He afterwards removed to Oxford, but finally entered of Trinity College, Cambridge. Having finished his academic studies, he went abroad, and, enriching his mind with a store of knowledge, gleaned from observation, he returned to England an accomplished gentleman. Introduced by his uncle, Robert Greville, to the court of Elizabeth, then the most polished court in Europe, he cultivated the acquaintance of the most learned men of his time; "but of all the men of rank who then made a figure at the court of Elizabeth, his kinsman, Sir Philip Sidney, was his darling; he lived the companion and friend of this great man from his earliest youth, and when he died, wrote his life." In 1580, he was appointed, by patent, clerk of the signet to the Council in Wales, and afterwards Treasurer of the Navy. On the 20th of April, 1513, he was appointed, by patent, Secretary for North and South Wales, which office King James afterwards conferred upon him for life. In October, 1597, he received the order of knighthood, and two years after, he was appointed Treasurer of the Navy for life. In 44 Eliz. he bought up claims on the manor of Wedgenock, which were granted in plentitude by the queen. At the coronation of James I. he was made Knight of the Bath, and shortly afterwards appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer and Privy Counsellor. In 2 James, he obtained a grant of Warwick Castle, which was then in a ruinous state, (the stronger parts being used as a county gaol), and, at the enormous expense of £20,000., restored it, and rendered it, to use the words of Dugdale, "not only a place of great strength, but extraordinary delight; with most pleasant gardens, walks, and thickets, such as this part of England can hardly parallel, so that now it is the most princely seat that is within the midland parts of this realm." He also purchased and planted the Temple grounds on the left bank of the river. Jan. 19, 18 James I. he was advanced to the peerage as Lord Brooke, Baron Brooke of Beauchamp's Court, in the county of Warwick, with limitations to his kinsman, Robert Greville, of Thorp Latymer in the County of Lincoln. The reasons assigned in the patent for his creation were "his faithful services to Queen Elizabeth and the present King; and that he was of noble extraction, being descended from the blood of the Nevils, the Willoughbys, and the Beauchamps." In 1621, he resigned the Chancellorship of the Exchequer, and was appointed a gentleman of the bedchamber; he founded the history lecture, at Cambridge, and left a salary for the professor. A lover of letters himself, he sought out and patronized merit in others; through his exertions, Camden obtained the office of Clarencieux, king at arms—Dr. John O'erall was raised to the deanery of Saint Paul's—Coke to the Secretary of State—and John Speed was enfranchised from the trammels of mechanical employment, and enabled to follow historical studies, which have since conferred an honour on his name and country. This great and good man came to a violent death, being stabbed on the 1st of September in his bed room, by his servant Haywood, who afterwards destroyed himself. He died of his wounds, Sept. 30, 1628, in his seventy-fifth year, and was buried in his own vault, on the north side of the choir of St. Mary's Church, Warwick, beneath a tomb prepared by himself, round the verge of which runs this inscription:—"FULKE GREVILLE, SERVANT TO QUEENE ELIZABETH, CANCELLOR TO KING JAMES, AND FRIEND TO SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, TROPHÆVM PECCATI." Dying without issue, he was succeeded by his first cousin's son, ROBERT GREVILLE, who, soon after his accession to the estates, married Catherine, eldest daughter of Francis, Earl of Bedford. He was one of the first who openly exclaimed against the measures adopted by the court of Charles I., taking up arms against that monarch, and joining the standard of the parliamentarians, by whom he was appointed commander-in-chief of the counties of Warwick and Stafford—though, from the honourable feeling that always marked his character, there is not a doubt he would have warmly opposed the headstrong course of destruction and fanaticism afterwards pursued by the unbridled followers of the usurper Cromwell, as did his intimate friend and relative, the Earl of Bedford, not long after his death. The castle of Warwick being besieged by the royalists, under the Earl of Northampton, from the 7th to the 23rd of August, 1642, Lord Brooke hastened from London with reinforcements, and raised the siege, to the great joy of Sir Edward Pieter, who, with a small garrison, and a poor supply of artillery and military stores, had defended it during that period. His lordship held an important post and did great service to the parliamentary army at the battle of Edge-hill; he was killed by a shot in the right eye, on the 1st of March, 1643, while forcing the position held by Lord Chesterfield, at Lichfield. "He deserved," says Sir William Dugdale, "a better fate; at least to have fallen in a better cause." He had five sons:—Francis, who succeeded him; Robert, who succeeded his brother; Edward and Algernon, who died bachelors; and Fulke, born after the death of his father, who succeeded his brother Robert.

FRANCIS GREVILLE, the eldest son, succeeded to the baronage, but dying (the same year as his father) unmarried, he was succeeded by his brother

ROBERT GREVILLE. This Lord Brooke was instrumental in effecting the restoration of Charles II., and was one of the six lords who were sent to Holland with the humble invitation and supplication of the Parliament—"That his Majesty would be pleased to return and take the government of the kingdom into his hands." He was appointed Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Stafford and city of Lichfield, August 20, 1660;—Recorder of Warwick for life, in a new charter granted to the corporation; High Steward of Stafford, and of Stratford-upon-Avon. He married Anne, daughter and sole heiress of J. Doddington, Esq., son and heir of Sir W. Doddington, Knt., by whom he had six sons (all of whom died young) and two daughters:—Anne, married to William, Earl of Kingston, and Doddington, married to Charles, Earl and afterwards Duke of Manchester; he died February 17, 1676, and was succeeded by his brother, FULKE GREVILLE, who soon afterwards was chosen Recorder of Warwick, and on the renewal of the charter of that corporation, was by the charter constituted recorder for life. He married (during his brother's life time) Sarah, daughter of Sir Francis Dashwood, Knt., Alderman of London, by whom he had four sons—Francis, Algernon, Doddington, and Robert—and seven daughters; he died at Twickenham, Oct. 22, 1710, in the 68th year of his age.

FULKE GREVILLE, son of the above-named Francis (who died eleven days before his father), and Anne Wilmot, daughter of John, Earl of Rochester, survived his father and grandfather but five months, dying at University College, Oxford, in Feb. 1711, and was succeeded by his brother, WILLIAM GREVILLE, who, soon after he came of age, was chosen Recorder of Warwick. He married Mary, second daughter and coheirress of the Hon. Henry Thynne, who was only son to Thomas, Viscount Weymouth; by which lady he had three sons—William, who died at the age of four months; Fulke, who died at the age of twenty-two months and six days; and Francis, who succeeded him. He died July 28, 1727, aged 33.

FRANCIS GREVILLE succeeded his father as Lord Brooke at the age of eight years, and, as soon as he came of age, was chosen Recorder of Warwick; July 7, 1746, he was raised to the dignity of an earl, by the title of Earl Brooke of Warwick Castle; July 16, 1749, he was appointed Lord-Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Warwick; in March, 1753, he was made Knight of the Thistle: November 13, 1759, created Earl of Warwick; and obtained a special grant, April 2, 1760, for bearing the crest of the ancient earls of that name; namely:—"a Bear erect, argent, muzzled, gules, supporting a ragged staff of the first."* His lordship married in May, 1742, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Lord Archibald Hamilton, by which lady he had three sons—George, who succeeded him; Charles Francis, and Robert Fulke—and five daughters:—Louisa Augusta, married to William Churchill, Esq.; Frances Elizabeth, married to Sir Henry Harpur, Bart.; Charlotte Mary, married to John, Lord Garlies; Isabella and Anne, who died unmarried. He died July 6, 1773.

GEORGE GREVILLE, Earl Brooke and Warwick, Lord-Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Warwick, Recorder of the borough of Warwick, F.R.S., &c., succeeded his father. To this nobleman the town is indebted for some of its most valued improvements. He erected the beautiful bridge across the Avon, opened the approaches to the town, formed the present rocky road to the castle, enlarged the park, and surrounded the castle with its spacious lawns and luxurious shrubs: he married, April 1, 1771, Georgiana, only daughter of James, Lord Selsey, who died April 3, 1775, leaving one son, George, who died at the age of fourteen. He married secondly, July 9, 1776, Henrietta, daughter of R. Vernon, Esq. and Evelyn, Countess of Upper Ossory, and sister to Granville, Marquis of Stafford. By this lady he had three sons—Henry Richard, the present earl; Charles John, Major-General in the army, (one of England's most intrepid officers during the trying period when she "opposed a world in arms;" he served his country with unflinching assiduity and untiring zeal in her campaigns in India, Egypt, the Peninsula, France, &c., and richly earned his sovereign's thanks, his country's gratitude, and the friendship and admiration of his companions in arms.) Colonel of the 38th foot, K.C.B., &c., and for many years M.P. for the borough of Warwick; who died in London, Dec. 2, 1836; and Robert, who died in 1780;—also five daughters, —Elizabeth, who died in 1806; Henrietta, married to Thomas, Earl of Clonmel; Caroline; Augusta, married to the Earl of Aylesford; Louisa, and Charlotte. His lordship died May 2, 1816.

HENRY RICHARD GREVILLE, Earl Brooke and Earl of Warwick, Baron Brooke of Beauchamp Court, Lord-Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Warwick, Colonel of the Warwickshire Militia, K.T., D.C.L., &c., succeeded to the title and estates on the demise of his father. His lordship married, Oct. 21, 1816, Sarah, relict of John George, fifth Lord Monson, and only daughter of John, second Earl of Mexborough. By this amiable and accomplished lady his lordship has one son, George Guy, Lord Brooke, Hon. M.A., born March 28, 1818—who completed his education at St. John's

* Rous gives the following origin of the device (a bear and ragged staff) used as ensigns by the Earls of Warwick from the earliest periods. "The former" he says "was taken from the name of one of the British Earls of Warwick, ARTHGAL, which signifies in the British language a Bear: and when another British earl, named MORVI, had vanquished a giant in a duel, with a young tree plucked up by the roots, and stripped of its branches, in token of that event, to the bear was added the ragged staff."

College, Oxford, and is now M.P. for the southern division of the county of Warwick—whose high and honourable bearing, and, above all, his kindly feeling towards the poor, have endeared him to the hearts of all who knew him.

The olive branch of peace has long succeeded war and bloodshed in our happy isle—no longer does the trembling serf flee to the embattled walls belonging to his feudal chief for safety and protection. But, amid the change, Warwick Castle has its chief, still bold to shed his blood in the field in defence of his country, and in the senate to maintain his country's rights; while the countess, with heart "open as day to melting charity," employs her fortunes and her interest to alleviate distress, remove want, protect the orphan and the widow, support the aged, and smooth the pillow of dying worth;—these are noble substitutes for feudal pomp, and often cause the eye of the grateful to be "gem'd by a tear," while the heart breathes a prayer to heaven that the noble earl and his benevolent countess may long live to enjoy health and dispense blessings to the poor.

CHIEF SEAT.—Warwick Castle, co. of Warwick.

The town comprises the parishes of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, both in the arch-deaconry and diocese of Worcester; which, together, contains 5,410 acres of land; and, in 1841, 1990 inhabited houses, 334 uninhabited, and 12 houses were building; with 9,775 inhabitants, of whom 4,841 were males, and 4,934 females; of these 2,201 males, 2,140 females, were under 20 years of age; 2,640 males, 2,794 females, 20 years of age and upwards; 7,961 persons were born in this county, and 1814 elsewhere; in 1821, here were 8,235 inhabitants; and in 1831, 9,109. St. Mary's contains 2,908 acres of land, 1,262 inhabited houses, 224 uninhabited, and three building, in 1841; with 6,328 inhabitants, of whom 3,134 were males, and 3,194 females. St. Nicholas contains 2,502 acres of land, and, in 1841, 728 inhabited houses, 110 uninhabited, and 9 building; with 3,447 inhabitants, of whom 1,707 were males, and 1,740 females. The Earl of Warwick is lord of the manor.

St. Mary's Church; the living is a vicarage, valued in the King's books at £20. now £305., in the patronage of the crown, and incumbency of the Rev. John Boudier, M.A. The church, formerly collegiate, of which the tower and greater part was destroyed in the conflagration, and rebuilt in 1704, though comprising various styles, including the Roman and later English architecture, is, notwithstanding, a very stately and magnificent structure; the tower, which rises in successive stages, variously embellished, to the height of one hundred and thirty feet, is supported on four pointed arches, affording a spacious passage underneath, and crowned with lofty pinnacles at the angles, 44 feet in height, with others in the centre of less elevation; containing a peal of ten bells, and a set of musical chimes, forming a prominent and beautiful feature in the distant view of the town. The exterior, in many parts, is strikingly handsome; but the eastern part, in particular, is elaborately embellished with panelled and richly canopied buttresses; and the east front, simple in its arrangement, but elegant in its details, is a beautiful specimen of the original style of architecture. The chancel, which is in its original state, is an elegant and highly enriched specimen of the later style of English architecture, and contains several ancient monuments. The nave, separated from the aisles by lofty clustered columns, is spacious, and well lighted by a range of clerestory windows; and the windows in the aisles and transepts are of large dimensions, but destitute of beauty in the details. In the south transept, is the entrance to the chapel of St. Mary, erected by Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and thence called the Beauchamp chapel: it is an elegant and highly enriched edifice, in the later style of English architecture, and both in its external and internal embellishment, is inferior only to the chapel of Henry VII. at Westminster: the roof is elaborately groined and enriched with fan tracery; the altar is adorned with a well executed representation of the Salutation, in basso relievo, by Collins; behind it is an apartment within the buttresses, said to have been the library of John Rous, the historian; and on the north side is a chantry, from which an ascent of four stone steps, deeply worn, leads into an apartment formerly used as a confessional. In the centre of the chapel, is a splendid monument of the founder, in gilt brass, in which his effigy, recumbent on an altar-tomb, decorated with shields of armorial bearings, and numerous figures, and surmounted by a canopy, is finely executed; on the north side is a large monument, in the Elizabethian style, to the memory of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester. There are also many other ancient monuments, and over the principal entrance is a fine and powerful organ. On the north side of the church is an ancient chapter-house, which has been converted into a mausoleum, with a chapel above it, now in disuse.

St. Nicholas Church, the living is a vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £13.6s.8d. now £218., in the patronage of the Countess of Warwick, and incumbency of Rev. Joshua Rundle Watson; was rebuilt in 1780, the tower and spire having been rebuilt about 40 years previously, and contains a peal of six bells; it is a neat edifice in the later style of English architecture, consists of nave, chancel, and two side aisles; the roof is groined, and supported on clustered columns; the interior is lighted with four handsome windows on each side, and the altar is placed in a recess at the east end.

St. Paul's Church, Friar street, in the parish of St. Mary, erected 1844, at a cost of £3,500., raised by voluntary contributions, the stone being given by the Earl of Warwick; is a neat edifice in the early English style of architecture, with lancet windows, consists of nave, chancel, and transept; containing six hundred sittings, all of which are open and free. Was endowed in May, 1849, by the ecclesiastical commissioners, with £45. per annum. Patron, vicar of St. Mary's; incumbent, Rev. Edwin Trevelyan Smith.

Surrogate, Rev. Joshua Rundle Watson.

Independent Chapel, Brook street, is a good substantial building, erected 1760, and enlarged in 1798. Rev. Joshua Wilcox Percy, is the present minister.

Baptist Chapel, Back hills, erected 1640, was formerly two dwellings given by Mr. Thomas Hard, a native of this place, who also left an estate in trust towards the support of a minister. It was enlarged in 1846, at an expense of £230. Rev. Thomas Nash, pastor.

Unitarian Chapel, High street, built 1780, is a neat building with stone front. Rev. Thomas Lethbridge Marshall, pastor.

Friends' Meeting House, High street, is a small brick building, erected 1671, on a piece of ground given by Mr. Edward Tustin.

Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, Stand street, built in 1838, at a cost of £700, is a neat brick building, with cemented front.

Free Grammar or College School. The Butts (a place formerly set apart for the young men of the town to exercise themselves in the use of the bow, prior to the invention of gunpowder,) was founded by Henry VIII., and endowed with a portion of the lands of the dissolved monasteries. It is under the patronage of the crown, who appoints the master, with a salary of £200. per annum; second master, £100., writing and French masters, £50. each. It is open to all boys of the town on paying £4. 4s. per year. There are four exhibitions of £40. per annum each, to any of the colleges at Oxford, founded by Mr. Fulk Weale, of Warwick, and the school is also entitled to two exhibitions to Trinity College, Cambridge, in failure of candidates from Combbrook school, founded by Lady Verney. The premises occupy a quadrangle, with a cloister on two sides, built by Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, for the dean and canons of the church of St. Mary, in which he founded a college establishment. Rev. Herbert Hill, head master; Rev. William Symons Newman, M. A., assistant master; Mr. Samuel Gwinnett, writing master; and Mons. Cauville, French master. The master takes private pupils, and Mr. Gwinnett has the same privilege, who boards some of the scholars, and has a private preparatory school for pupils, previous to their entering the Grammar School.

Charity School, held in the ancient chapel of St. Peter, over the east gate of the town, in which 39 boys are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic; and 36 girls reading, writing, knitting, and sewing. Of these, 24 boys and 24 girls are clothed in one uniform dress of blue and yellow, and are indebted to the benevolence of the late Hon. Sarah Greville for this charitable bequest; 12 girls clothed in grey, to that of Earl Brooke; 13 boys receive a coat and pair of stockings each per annum, from funds left by Mr. Thomas Oken; and the expense of the other two boys is defrayed by the will of the late Mr. Fulk Weale. The chapel is a portion of charity left by Henry VIII., for the use of which the master pays the nominal rent of five shillings yearly. Samuel and Ann Gazey, master and mistress, whose joint salary is £10. per annum, with a house, and the privilege of taking private pupils.

School of Industry, Castle Street, established about 60 years ago, by the Countess of Warwick, under the patronage of whom, by the aid of subscriptions from ladies in the town and neighbourhood, it is supported. Forty girls are clothed and taught reading, writing, arithmetic, sewing, and knitting; the two latter are done for hire, and each girl's earnings are given to her at the end of the year. Elizabeth Cooke, mistress, whose salary is £30. per annum.

National Borough School, Chapel Street, established 1815, is a large and commodious brick building; will accommodate 800; average, 120 boys and 90 girls; supported by voluntary contributions. William Wyver, master, and Harriet Nash, mistress.

Trade, of which there is very little carried on beyond what is necessary for the supply of the inhabitants; the cotton, worsted, and lace manufactories, which were formerly introduced, have totally declined. The principal trades are hat manufacturing, established 1838 or 9, in Wallace-street, Saltisford, by Messrs. John Molladay & Sons, and gives employment to 300 hands, adjoining which is the extensive brewery of Messrs. Jaggard, Jaggard & Hiorns. On the Coventry road, an iron foundry was begun, in 1810, by Mr. T. Roberts, and is still extant; here is an extensive stained glass and decorative painting establishment carried on, at St. John's, by Mr. William Holland, where every description of design for monumental and baronial windows, enamelled and encaustic painting, gilding, imitations of wood, &c., are executed. Here are several large malting houses, and lime, timber, and coal wharfs, on the banks of the Warwick and Napton canal, which comes up to the northern part of the town; and, communicating with the Oxford and Birmingham canal, affords every facility of inland navigation. There is also an extensive coal company at Emscote, established 1836, who have also works at Milverton, and the Cape. From the wharfs, at Saltisford, fly boats start daily, conveying goods to all the intermediate counties, on their way to London; others proceed to Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Manchester, Liverpool, Oxford, and Banbury.

London and North Western Railway. Coventry and Leamington Branch is at Leamington, about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles east from Warwick.

Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway is in progress, and will pass close on the north side of the town.

The Market, which is abundantly supplied with corn and provisions of every kind, is held on Saturday, in an extensive area, surrounded by respectable inns and shops, in the centre of which is the market house, a neat substantial building of stone, supported on arches, affording a sheltered area for the use of the market; the upper story, which is surmounted by a cupola and dome, is appropriated to different uses.

Fairs are held 2nd Monday in January, 2nd Monday in February, and 1st Saturday in Lent. For Fish, 2nd Monday in March, and 2nd Monday in April. For Cheese and Cattle, *May 12, 2nd Monday in June, and 2nd Monday in July. For Wool and Cattle, 2nd Monday in August, 2nd Monday in September, *October 12, and last Monday in October. For Cheese, Cattle, and Hops, 2nd Monday in November, and Monday before St. Thomas.

*Should either of these days fall on a Sunday, the fair will be held on the Monday following. The Cheese and Wool Fairs are held in the market square.

THE RACES are held in March and September, which are usually well attended ; S. Merry, clerk of the course.

Warwick was made a "mayor town" by Queen Mary, in 1554: by charter of Charles II, in 1694, (confirmed and extended by William III,) the government was vested in a mayor, recorder, deputy recorder, twelve aldermen, and twelve assistant burgesses, aided by a town clerk, a serjeant at mace, a yeoman serjeant, and subordinate officers. The mayor was elected from among the aldermen, by the burgesses at large, annually, on the 29th of September, and sworn into office on the 1st of November; the recorder, who held his office for life, was chosen by the corporation; the deputy recorder, who was also town clerk, was appointed by the recorder; the aldermen, who were chosen by the mayor and the rest of the body, who must fill up all vacancies within eight days; the assistant burgesses were elected by the aldermen, and sworn in by the mayor: three years' residence was requisite to qualify for the office of assistant burgess. The mayor, late mayor, the recorder, deputy recorder, and three senior aldermen were justices of the peace. They held quarterly courts of sessions, for all offences not capital, and a court of record every Wednesday, except in the Christmas, Easter, and Whitsun weeks, for the recovery of debts not exceeding £40. at which the town clerk generally presided. The borough first exercised the elective franchise on the 23rd of Edward I, since which time it has regularly returned two members to parliament: the right of election was vested in the burgesses, and inhabitants generally, paying scot and lot; the mayor was the returning officer: the Earl of Warwick possessed influence sufficient for the return of one member. The Parliamentary Reform act passed in June, 1832; and the Corporation Reform Act, on the 9th of September, 1835. The chief provisions of the Corporation Reform Act are the following:—

1st.—Corporate, after the first election of councillors; the body corporate of all existing cities and boroughs named in schedule A, are to have a commission of the peace, and to take and bear the name of mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the town of Warwick; and by that name have perpetual succession, and be capable in law, by their council, to do and suffer all acts lawful to them or their predecessors, by any name of title or incorporation.

2nd.—The Town Council is to consist of the mayor, aldermen, and councillors, to be chosen on the 9th of November, in every third year following. The councillors to fill up extraordinary vacancies amongst the aldermen within ten days; to elect the mayor every year; to appoint town clerk, treasurer, sheriff, registrar, auditors, and assessors. To take security from such officers, for the due discharge of their duties; and to fill up vacancies, as they may occur in those situations. To give an order, signed by three or more members, for all money to be paid on account of the town council, so that no payment by the treasurer can be lawful without such order. To hold quarterly meetings, and to have three clear days' notice of every other intended meeting of the town council, affixed in or near the Town Hall, and left at the usual place of abode of each councillor, or at the premises he stands registered for; and in case the mayor, upon a requisition to that effect, should refuse to call a meeting of the council, it is lawful for five councillors to call the same, by giving the usual notices of their intentions, signing their own names, and stating the nature of the business to be transacted at such meeting. The council is empowered to appoint committees, to act as trustees, where the body corporate are sole trustees, to appoint a limited number of councillors to be joint trustees, to whom the powers vested in former trustees may be transferred. The council is to appoint a watch, and may order parts of their borough, not included in the local act, to be included in such act, and may have the powers of inspectors, under 3 and 4 William IV, for lighting any part of the borough not included in the local act. The council has also power to make bye-laws but can impose no higher penalty for their infringement than £5. The council may order a borough rate in case of insufficiency, and it has the powers of justices, for such purposes with certain restrictions, and to levy a watch rate. It is authorised to renew leases, in certain cases, but cannot grant leases for a longer term than thirty-one years, or sell, or alienate any corporate lands, without the approbation of the Lords of the Treasury. It is to fix the salary of the police magistrate, to be appointed by the crown, and to provide a police office. To appoint an officer to preside in the borough Court of Record, and also a registrar, &c.; and have power to remove from office every bailiff, treasurer, or chamberlain, or other officer who shall be in office at the time of the passing of this Act; and shall direct where the charters, deeds, or records of the borough shall be kept.

3rd.—The Mayor is a member of the council, ex officio: any councillor is eligible to this office, to which he is elected on the 9th of November. The mayor's duties are to provide polling-booths; to preside with the assessors at the election of councillors; and also with the assessor to revise burgess lists, and appoint clerks for the same. The mayor to sign a declaration of his acceptance of office, and of his possession of the requisite qualification. Any councillor elected mayor, but refusing to serve, is to pay a fine not exceeding £100. Becoming a bankrupt, insolvent, or leaving the town for more than two months, loses office; but is capable of re-election, upon obtaining certificate, paying debts in full, or returning. Any person acting as Mayor without being qualified, is to forfeit £50., but his official acts are to be valid. The Mayor is justice of the peace ex-officio for the year of his Mayoralty, and the year following; and to have precedence within the borough, and to be returning officer at elections for members of parliament; he shall sign the notices of meetings of the council, and in the absence of the recorder, is empowered to open and adjourn the court of quarter sessions.

4th.—Municipal: Aldermen are to be one-third in number of the councillors, elected triennially, on the 9th of November, or chosen from the town councillors, or others having the same qualification; half of their number to go out of office every three years; are not to vote for their successors, but are eligible for re-election. No one can be elected an Alderman, who is not enrolled in the burgess list, nor unless possessed of £1,000. property, or rated at the annual value of £30., or while holding any office in the gift of the council, otherwise than that of Mayor, nor while sharing in any contract or employment from the council; but this qualification does not extend to shareholders of water or insurance companies holding a contract from the council. An Alderman is to preside at elections in case of death or inability of the Mayor; refusing office, to pay a fine not exceeding £50.; and in other respects same as Mayor.

5th.—Councillors are chosen in wards on the 19th of November, by persons whose names are on the burgess roll of such wards; one-third of the council is to go out of office annually, but are capable of re-election; all such elections are to be held before the Mayor and Assessors; voting to commence at 9 o'clock in the morning, and finally to close at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Every burgess entitled, may vote for any number of persons not exceeding the number of councillors to be chosen, by delivering to the mayor or assessor a voting paper, containing the christian and surnames of the persons for whom he votes, and signed with his own name and residence; no councillor is eligible as auditor or assessor. The barristers appointed, have divided the town into two wards, viz., St. Mary's Ward and St. Nicholas' Ward.

6th.—Assessors: Two are elected annually by the burgesses of every corporation, and must have the same qualification as councillors, and in conjunction with the mayor, revise the burgess lists; be present at the election of councillors; and with the mayor, ascertain the result of elections. No treasurer, town clerk, or councillor, can be elected assessor; the assessors are to be elected in wards, by the burgesses of such respectively; and no burgess to vote for more than one assessor.

7th.—Recorder is appointed by the crown; has precedence after the mayor, and is sole judge at the Quarter Sessions; must be a barrister of at least five years standing, to hold office during his good behaviour. His salary is to be paid by the treasurer of the borough fund; but he cannot be a member for the borough, an alderman, or councillor; he is ex-officio, a justice of the peace.

8th.—Town Clerk is elected by the council, and holds office during pleasure; he must be an attorney; the freeman's roll must be made out by him; he must preserve a true copy of the same for perusal, without fee, and keep copies for sale, at a reasonable price. To receive from the overseers, on the fifth of September, a list of burgesses, which he is forthwith to get printed for sale, and expose a copy on the door of the Town Hall; to receive names of persons omitted, publish lists of claimants and persons objected to, and keep a copy for inspection without fee, and for sale at 1s. each. He is ineligible as an auditor and assessor, must submit his accounts to the council when required, and a summary remedy is given against him for not accounting. He is exempt for serving on juries in the borough.

9th.—Treasurer is appointed by the council, of whom he cannot be a member, but can be removed at pleasure; must give security for the due discharge of his official duties, submit his accounts when required by the council, and a summary remedy is to be had against him for not accounting. Keep his accounts open for inspection of aldermen or councillors, and submit them to the vouchers, to the auditors on the first of March and the first of September respectively, and to cause an abstract to be printed.

10th.—Constables are appointed by the watch committee, and have power to act in the county as well as the borough. Magistrates appoint special constables, who have 3s. 6d. for each day of duty.

11th.—Auditors.—Two are elected annually, on the first of March, in form of, and with the qualification of councillors; no councillor is eligible.

12th.—Registrar of the borough court of record, appointed by the council, he is not to practice as an attorney in such court, nor his partner, nor clerk.

13th.—Sheriff.—The council name the sheriff.

14th.—Coroner is appointed by the council, cannot be an alderman or councillor his appointment is during good behaviour; receives 20s., and 9d. every mile exceeding two, and makes an annual return of the inquests held by him to the Secretary of State.

15th.—Clerk of the Peace is appointed by the council; the appointed clerk to justices, his partner, or clerk, are ineligible to the office of clerk of the peace; the duties are to give ten days notice of time and place of holding court of quarter sessions; to summons, at least seven days before, a sufficient number of grand jurors, and to make out a list of the names and descriptions of jurors summoned; the fees paid to this officer are settled by the town council, and confirmed by the Secretary of State.

16th.—Overseers of the Poor to make out lists of persons entitled to be burgesses, which they are to sign and deliver to the town-clerk on the fifth day of September every year.

17th.—Burgesses and Freemen: no one can become such of any borough, by gift or purchase; but all rights of property in common lands or public stocks, money, or chattels, are reserved to all existing freemen and burgesses, and to such persons as might have become freemen or burgesses, had this act not passed; and to their wives, widows, children, or apprentices, a discharge and exemption from all tolls, dues only excepted. Nevertheless, it is provided that freemen to be entitled to the beneficial exemption, shall have acquired their right prior to the 5th of June, 1835. All occupiers of houses and shops, rated for three years for the relief of the poor, are entitled to be burgesses, if resident householders within seven miles; occupancy and the payment of rates are the only qualifications.

18th.—Borough Fund: the proceeds of all corporate property, one moiety of all penalties imposed under this act, and all unappropriated fines and penalties, are to form the borough fund, and to be paid to the treasurer accordingly. Debts, officers salaries, election expenses, the expenses of assize prosecutions, maintaining and punishing offenders, are to be paid out of the borough fund; and a council is to order a borough rate, in case this fund is insufficient.

19th.—Qualifications: Burgesses to be qualified at municipal elections, must fulfil the following conditions:—1st, on the last day of August in any year, he must have occupied a house, warehouse, or other premises in the borough, during that and two preceding years, to the value of £5. and upwards. 2nd, have occupied a house in the borough, or within seven miles of it. 3rd, have been duly enrolled as a burgess. 4th, he must have been rated personally in respect of the premises occupied in the borough, to the amount of £5. and upwards. 5th, have paid before the last day of August, all poor rates and borough rates, except such as become payable six calendar months before the last of August. Such premises need not to have been continuously the same.

The following is a list of the Members of Parliament, the Corporate body, and the municipal officers of the borough of Warwick.

Number of Burgesses on the register in 1849, was, in St. Mary's Ward, 660; and St. Nicholas' Ward, 409. Parliamentary Voters for the Borough, 752. This is a polling station, and principal place of election for the southern division of the county. The black corporation book of King Philip and Queen Mary's time, is still in the hands of the body corporate. There are about 140 acres of common land.

The Court House, Jury street, in which the borough sessions and meetings of the town council are held, is a handsome stone building, ornamented with fluted corinthian pilasters, and having over the entrance a sculptured figure of justice, surmounted by the royal arms, and the borough arms below; on the left hand of the vestibule is the court-room, which, though rather dark, is in other respects well arranged; on the right-hand side is the mayor's parlour, a handsome room, with a portrait of Henry VIII. over the mantel-piece, and the royal arms at the other end. In the upper story is an elegant assembly-room, sixty feet long and twenty-seven wide: the walls are decorated with fluted corinthian pilasters, supporting an entablature and cornice, with an orchestra at one end; from the ceiling, which is lofty, three large and brilliant chandeliers of cut glass are suspended, which cost £300.; adjoining is a card-room, in which is a good portrait of Charles II. It was built about 1730, under the direction of John Smith, an architect of considerable celebrity, at the expense of the corporation; for this, however, under a charge of misapplication of the public money, they were summoned to appear in the Court of Chancery, and were suspended from the exercise of all their power and privileges, to which they were not restored till the year 1738.

The assizes and general quarter sessions of the peace for the county, are held at Warwick and Coventry. The Borough Sessions are held in the county hall, immediately after the business of the County Sessions. Petty Sessions are held at the Judge's house every Saturday, for county business; and at the court-house every Monday, for the borough business.

The County Hall, Northgate street, is an elegant building of freestone, in the Grecian style of architecture; the facade is embellished with pilasters of the corinthian order, and with a central portico of corinthian columns supporting a triangular pediment; the hall which is finely proportioned and handsomely decorated, is one hundred and ten feet long, and forty-five wide, with a lofty coved ceiling; in the centre of the side fronting the entrance is a vestibule, forming an approach for barristers and attorneys to their respective courts: the criminal court is situated on the right, and the nisi prius court on the left hand; both are octagonal in form, and are lighted by a lantern dome, supported on finely proportioned corinthian columns at the angles. On the left of the county-hall is the judges' mansion, a neat stone building with handsome portico, and having communication with the hall.

County Gaol, Northgate street, is a large stone building of the Doric order, with massive columns in front, having a central entrance to the office of the clerk of the peace. The entrance to the prison is in Bridewell lane, through a spacious gateway, over which is the platform for the execution of criminals; the interior is divided into ten wards for the classification of prisoners, with day rooms, work rooms, and airing yards, in one of which is the tread mill, with three compartments; the cells are arranged round the governor's house, which is in the centre, commanding a distinct view of each of the wards; and the greatest order, and, as far as circumstances will allow of it, the greatest comfort and cleanliness, prevail throughout the establishment; a warm bath is appropriated to the use of the prisoners on their entrance, and every precaution is used to prevent contagion. The chapel, capable of containing four hundred persons, is divided by screens, with a view to preserve the same classification. Gaoler, Harry Adkin; Chaplain, Rev. Thomas Laugharne; Surgeon, John Walmshurst, Esq.; Head Turnkey, John Young.

House of Correction or Bridewell, Bridewell-lane, nearly opposite the entrance of the above, and enclosed within a high stone wall; having been enlarged at different times, the arrangement is rather inconvenient, the entrance from some of the wards to the chapel, and other parts of the prison, requiring an ascent of many steps; the same regard to classification, order, and cleanliness, prevails here as in the county gaol. The boys and the women were formerly employed in heading pins for the manufacturers at Birmingham, and the men in drawing and preparing the wire for that purpose, but was found to be attended with loss, owing to the waste of material; consequently was declined a few years ago. A flour mill, worked by a crank, with hand labour, employing one hundred men, who relieve each other at intervals, grinds a sufficient quantity to supply the county gaol and Bridewell, and for hire; the governor's house is a new stone building, fronting Bridewell-lane, was previously in the centre of the prison, and is now converted into cells. Governor, William Townsend; Chaplain, Rev. Thomas Laugharne; Surgeon, John Wilmshurst; Head Turnkey, William Hobley.

County Court, (New), Northgate-street. The Warwick district comprises the following parishes; viz., Ashow, Barford, Bearley, Beaudesert, Baggington, Bubbenhall, Budbrook, Beausall, Cubbington, Claverdon, Eathorpe, Hunningham, Hatton, Haseley, Henley-in-Arden, Honiley, Kenilworth, Leamington, Leek Wootton, Lillington, Langley, Milveiton, Norton Lindsey, Offchurch, Pinley, Preston Bagot, Rowington, Radford, Sherbourne, Shrewley, Stivichall, Stoneleigh, Tachbrook, Ullenhall, Whitnash, Weston, Wappenbury, Warwick, Wasperton, Wolverton, Wootton, Wawen, and Wroxall; Judge, Frederick Trotter Dinsdale, Esq.; Clerk, John Bass Hanbury; High Bailiff, John Archer.

Guy's Cliff, situated $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Warwick, on the Kenilworth road, which was, for some years prior to his death, the solitary retreat of the renowned Guy, Earl of Warwick, of whom so many legendary tales are recorded; the cave in which he is said to have lived in retirement and devotion, and in which he was buried, is hewn in the rock near the bank of the Avon. He is stated to have assumed the disguise of a hermit, and to have daily visited the castle, in which his countess resided, ignorant of his destiny, to whom he made himself known only a few days before his death. Near the cave is a range of cells, having the appearance of a nunnery, and some cloisters hewn in the rock, and rudely arched, called Phillis cloisters, after the countess, who survived him only a few days, and was buried near him. Under a Roman arch, built by the late proprietor, to sustain an ancient pointed one which was falling to decay, are preserved two stone basins called Guy's well, covered with moss, into which a fine spring of clear water is constantly flowing. On this cliff, Richard de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, built a chapel, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, in which he erected a colossal statue of Guy in armour, and in the attitude of drawing his sword; the right arm is wanting, and the left bears a shield, the hand of which is also gone. The chapel, now not used for divine service, was built in the reign of Henry VI., and is in the later style of English architecture, with a very beautiful porch, the roof of which, like that of the chapel, is richly grained. By a survey taken in the reign of Henry VIII., the lands belonging to this chapel were certified to be worth £19. 10s. 6d. per annum, which, together with all its buildings and appurtenances, were granted by royal license 1st of Edward VI., to Sir A. Flammock, Knight, in whose family it continued till the reign of Elizabeth, when it was purchased by William Hudson, Esq., an eminent surgeon of Kenilworth; on the marriage of his daughter to Sir Thomas Beaufoy, Knight, the estate passed into that family: it afterwards became the property of Mr. Edwards, of Kenilworth, from whose heirs it was purchased by Samuel Greathead, Esq., by whom the present handsome modern mansion was built on the cliff, in front of which is a stately avenue of noble fir-trees; he also repaired the chapel, and greatly improved the surrounding grounds. On his death, in 1765, it descended to his son Bertie Greathead, Esq., on whose death it passed into the hands of the Hon. Charles Bertie Percy, in consequence of his marriage with the grand-daughter of the late Samuel Greathead, Esq. The Avon winds beautifully round the base of the cliff and through the grounds, in which is a water-mill for grinding corn, erected prior to the conquest. Nearly opposite to Guy's cliff, on the other side of the road, is Blacklow hill, a rocky eminence planted with forest trees. In the hollow part of the rock, which appears to have been quarried, Piers Gravestone was beheaded, in commemoration of which event, a monument of an upright shaft, supporting a cross, and resting upon a pedestal, with a suitable inscription, has been erected on the summit.

Numerous Monastic Establishments anciently existed in the town. The priory was founded by Henry de Newbury, Earl of Warwick, and completed by his son Roger, in the reign of Henry I., for canons regular of the order of the Holy Sepulchre, and its revenue at the dissolution, was £49. 13s. 6d.: the remains have been converted into a private mansion, but retain very considerable portions of the ancient architecture, and are situated at the entrance into the town from Birmingham, and is the property of the Rev. Henry Wise, but at present unoccupied. The hospital of St. John the Baptist was founded in the reign of Henry II. by William, Earl of Warwick, for the reception of strangers and pilgrims, and, at the dissolution, had a revenue valued at £19. 17s. 3d. The building, which is a fine specimen of the architecture of the times is now occupied as a private boarding-school, and is situated near the extremity of the town, on the road to Leamington. Within the precincts of the castle was the collegiate church of All Saints, of which John Rous relates, that St. Dubricius made it an episcopal seat, about the latter end of the sixth century; the secular priests, or canons, of which establishment were, in 1125, united to the college of St. Mary's. In the north-west part of the town was an abbey, which was destroyed by Canute in 1016; who also reduced to ashes a nunnery, occupying the site of St. Nicholas' churchyard. In the north suburb was the chapel of St. Michael, to which was annexed an hospital, founded about the close of the reign of Henry I., or the beginning of that of Stephen, by Roger, Earl of Warwick, for a master and leprous brethren, the revenue of which, at the dissolution, was £10. 19s. 10d.: the remains were appropriated as an almshouse for aged women, but now used as a smith's shop. Of the hospital of St. Thomas, stated by Rous to have been founded by William, Earl of Warwick, not even the site is known. The convent of Dominican friars, which was situated in the western suburbs, was founded in the reign of Henry III. by the Botelors, Lords Studley, and the Mountforts; the revenue, at the time of the dissolution, was £4. 18s. 6d. Attached to the chapel of St. James, over the west gate of the town, now forming part of the Leicester hospital, was a college for four Secular priests, founded in the reign of Richard II., which continued till the dissolution. There were also numerous churches in the town, of which only St. Mary's and St. Nicholas are remaining; these being found sufficient for the accommodation of the inhabitants, the others, which were greatly dilapidated, were suffered to fall into decay. Edward Plantaganet, son of George, Duke of Clarence, and the last male heir of that family, was born in Warwick castle; he was kept a close prisoner in the reigns of Edward IV., Richard III., and Henry VIII., and, attempting to effect his escape from the Tower, during the reign of the last-named monarch, was beheaded in 1499. Warwick gives the title of Earl to the family of Greville.

Salisbury, an extensive hamlet, forming the northern suburb of the town.

The Cape, a small hamlet one mile north.

Myton, a hamlet pleasantly seated on the Old Leamington road, $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles from the town.

CHARITIES.—St. Mary and St. Nicholas.—KING HENRY VIII. by letters patent 15th May. 37 of his reign, granted to the Burgesses of the town of Warwick certain estates which had belonged to the dissolved college of St. Mary, in Warwick; which said rectories, messuages, lands, tenements, glebes, tithes, and other premises, were then of the yearly value of £58. 14s. 4d.; which were granted by the said King to the burgesses of the town of Warwick, &c., rendering yearly to the said King £6. 13s. 4d. In consideration of all which premises, the burgesses, for themselves and their successors, would for ever yearly pay to the perpetual vicar in the church of St. Mary, and all successive vicars, £20., to be paid at Michaelmas and Lady-day, by even portions, as an endowment of his vicarage; and also 40s. yearly for the tenths of the said endowment; and also that they would yearly, for ever, pay to the Master of the King's school, and to his successors, schoolmasters of the said King's school of the town of Warwick, to be by those presents nominated and incorporated, £10., to be paid at Michaelmas and Lady-day by even portions. And power was given by the charter to grant a convenient habitation for a vicarage-house to the vicars of St. Mary; and also a convenient house and mansion for the master of the said school. The particulars and rent of the estates now belonging to the corporation, as derived from the King's grant, are as follows:—In Warwick, houses and other buildings let for £199. 16s. 10d.; land, 27. a. 3r. 4p. let for £921. 16s. 4d.; tithes, £226. 16s. In Budbrooke, messuage and glebe 107. a. 3r. 10p. let for £192.; tithes £271. 4s. 1d. In Norton and Hampton-on-the-Hill, hamlets in Budbrooke, tithes, £43. 2s.; land, 10. a. 2r. 6p., let for £18. 15s. In Chaddesley, tithes and land 40. a. 2r. 5p., £740.; house and land, 4 acres, £37. In Ilmington, tenement and land 39. a. 0r. 20p. for £74. In Radford, 8. a. 2r. for £25. In Stone, rent charge on vicarage, £2. Free farm rents in Beausall, Norton, Hatton, Henley, and Church Wootton, £5. 5s. 6d.; making a total of £2,756. 15s. 9d. Included in this are several tenements given by Mr. Toloy and others, towards the maintenance of Warwick bridge. Also, the rent of a small house in the Higher Pavement, given by John Fisher, towards the maintenance of the vicar of St. Mary's. Exchanges in the original property has been made by inclosure acts, and by private agreement. From the time of James I. various proceedings have been had in the court of chancery for the application of the increasing revenues of this charity. Upon a petition in 1816, and on an order 22nd January, 1818, the following stipends were ordered to be paid:—to the vicar of St. Mary's £250.; to the assistant, £105.; to the vicar of St. Nicholas, £200.; to the vicar of Budbrooke, £100.; the master of the King's school, £135.; to the clerk of St. Mary's, £20.; to the sexton, £10.; to the Mayor, £150., to the town clerk, £25.; to the serjeant at mace, £25.; to the yeoman serjeant, £15.; to the beadle, £10. 10s.; making a total of £1045. 10s. There is also a weekly distribution of 20s. of bread, £52. The receiver's salary, £50.; organist of St. Mary's, £50.; contract to the Warwick Gas Company, from Michaelmas to Lady-day, £265., and an additional payment for lighting during September, £37. 17s.; expense of the nightly watch, £100.; which, with the original rent-charge paid to the crown, and various other small payments, making the total expenditure £1,705. 12s. 5½d., with various repairs, &c.; and from time to time extraordinary disbursements for the general good of the town. The sum of £2187. 19s. 2d. was expended in fencing a new burial ground for St. Mary's, in Friars lane, and erecting a chapel therein, the land having been given by the Rev. Thomas Cattell; also, £119. 12s. to enlarge the burial ground of St. Nicholas; and £77. for making a plan of the town in 1823, which, with other uncertain disbursements, average about £458. per annum, which will make the total expenditure £2,162. 15s. 5d., leaving a surplus upon the present income of £594., but subject to considerable variations. The premises in which the King's school is held, were purchased by the corporation in 1699, at a cost of £300., commonly called the college, which was the property of Sir Thomas Wagstaff, who abated £40. of the purchase money. Lord Brooke contributed £40., Mr. Colmore, £20.; and Sir Henry Pickering, £10., towards the purchase. The college premises consist of a large old house surrounding a small quadrangle, with a large garden annexed thereto; also, two good school rooms, one of which was built in 1799 by the corporation. These premises are occupied by the master of the grammar school, the corporation externally keeping them in repair. William Vyner, of Warwick, by deed 1636, gave to the bailiff and burgesses of Warwick a rent charge of £6. out of certain lands in Ethorpe, on trust, to pay yearly £4. to the master, and £2. to the usher of the free grammar school, &c. The schoolmaster also receives £2. from the trustees of Oken's charity. The instruction imparted is Latin and Greek. All who have chosen to attend the school have been received. The scholars on the foundation pay £1. 11s. 6d. entrance money, and 5s. each, half-yearly, for firing and cleaning the school. It is much to be regretted that this school is of so little benefit, there being seldom more than 5 scholars on the foundation. The privilege was not limited by the original charter to children born in the town of Warwick; but it appears this restriction was first imposed by the decree of the 13th, of Charles I. If the school was thrown open to the extent the terms of the foundation would seem to justify, it might tend much to its usefulness, especially considering the academical advantages which it possesses; there being two exhibitions in some of the Universities at Oxford, for the term of seven years, which, in the year 1819, were advanced to £70. per annum. These exhibitions were founded under the will of Fulk Weale, of Warwick, woollen draper, in 1729. It appears Lady Tryphena Verney, in 1672, conveyed an estate at South Littleton, in the county of Worcester, for the establishment of two scholarships at Trinity College, Cambridge, to be chosen out of the school of Combrook, or in default there, out of the free school of Warwick, but of this nothing is now known.

The honourable Sarah Greville, by will 1718, bequeathed to her brother, the honourable Doddington Greville, the sum of £1,500. upon trust, to invest the same in the purchase of freehold lands and tenements, and to cause the same to be settled upon nine persons, their heirs and assigns, upon the several trusts hereafter mentioned:—to pay one-third part of the rents, after all reasonable deductions and repairs, to the minister and churchwardens of the parish of Knole; one-third part to those of St. Mary, in Warwick; and the remaining third-part to those of St. Nicholas, in Warwick; to be employed at each place for providing comely and decent apparel, and paying the charges of schooling, for so many poor children of either sex as the said sum would extend to. In 1720, an estate was purchased in the parish of Harbury, for the sum of £1,500., and conveyed to nine trustees, three of each parish, which, at the inclosure of the commons and open fields of Harbury, had several exchanges, &c.; and now consists of a house and buildings and 88a. 1r. 25p. of land, at the yearly rent of £130.; and a dwelling-house and farm buildings, and 78a. 3r. 32p. of land, let at the annual rent of £90; in addition to which, there is a meadow in Long Itchington, said by estimation to contain three acres, let for £6. a year, making a total of £236.; this sum, after all necessary deductions, is divided into three equal parts. The portions received by St. Mary and St. Nicholas, are applied to the clothing and education of 12 boys and 12 girls, poor children from each parish,—for which a salary of £24. is paid to the schoolmaster from each parish,—and stationery to the value of £5. 10s. for each parish; and for clothing, about £32. for each parish is provided. The school is held in a building over the gateway, at the east end of the town, called St. Peter's or East Chapel, and formed part of the property acquired by the corporation under the grant of Henry VIII., and is appropriated by them for the residence of the schoolmaster and mistress, (at a nominal rent of £2. a year, but which is always remitted,) and for the holding the schools; and comprises two school rooms, one of which has lately been added to the dwelling, and new school for the girls erected. They are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, and the girls sewing. The girls of Earl Brooke's charity attend this school.

Lady Elizabeth Guildford, by indenture 1705, settled £5. a year on the corporation, on trust, to place out seven poor boys to school, and towards their clothing, &c. This charity was brought into the general account of Henry VIII. charity estates, and was fulfilled till the year 1736, but owing to certain misapplications, the charity was under a sequestration till the year 1769, when the management of the estates was restored to the corporation. Nothing appears to have been paid on account of this charity since 1736. Certainly the corporation ought to devote £5. a year out of the funds, to this charity.

Robert, Earl of Leicester's, Hospital.—At a Parliament, holden the 13th year of Queen Elizabeth, it was enacted that the said Earl, his heirs, executors, or assigns, should have power to establish an hospital in the town of Warwick, for the sustenance and relief of poor, needy, and impotent people, to be incorporated, and consist of one master and twelve poor brethren, who wear a blue gown, bearing the crest of the founder, "a bear and ragged staff," suspended on their left sleeve behind; to be governed by certain rules and statutes which were provided by the said Earl. The bishop of Worcester, the dean and the archdeacon of Worcester, or any two of them, to be visitors. The statutes to be hung up in the hall, and publicly read every 1st of July. By deed of feoffment, 30th November, 28th Elizabeth, were granted to the master and brethren, the rectory of Napton-on-the-Hill, with various other estates and tithes; the master's salary being limited to £50. per annum, the increase of the rental having produced £130. per annum to each of the brethren. An Act of Parliament passed in 1813, for altering the statutes, and increasing the master's salary, and the number of brethren in the hospital; the master's salary has been increased, but the brethren have not yet been increased. The present income of the hospital is £2015. 16s. Two of the brethren are elected stewards for the year, and receive the rents. The appointment of the master and brethren is vested in the heirs of the founder, who is at this time Lord de Lisle and Dudley. The brethren are recommended by the minister and churchwardens of the several places mentioned in the statutes, in rotation. The master is in holy orders; he resides in the hospital, and reads prayers in the chapel every day, except when there is service in the parish church of St. Mary's. Out of the income, the master is paid a yearly salary of £400., and each of the brethren has £80. a year; these payments were commenced in 1828. The hospital occupies the building formerly used by the ancient Guilds of the Holy Trinity and St. George, which, after being united in the reign of Henry VI., became, at the dissolution, the property of the Earl of Leicester.

Thomas Oken, by deed of enfeoffment, 1st of January, 13th of Elizabeth, granted to Thomas Burgess, bailiff of the town of Warwick, and five others, all his tenements, houses and lands, &c. in Warwick, Badsley, Bewsale, and Harbury, in the county of Warwick; and all other his lands and tenements, in the realm of England; to hold to the said feoffees and their heirs, for the yearly performing certain covenants, grants, and agreements. After various bequests and payments, three houses, parcel of premises in Pebble lane, were to form an almshouse for six poor people, and to pay to each yearly the sum of 24s.; and also yearly to pay so much money as would make six garments, to contain six yards a piece, and ready-made to their backs, to have the letters T. O. of white cloth, as well on their backs as on their breasts; to be given the first year to the alms people, and on the second and third years to others, on the fourth year to the almspeople, and so to continue. And also yearly to pay 40s. to a schoolmaster for the augmenting his wages, which is paid to the Greville school for the education of 13 boys. And 40s. to the vicar of St. Mary's parish, to make some sermons, one to be the first Sunday in Lent; the Sunday next before the feast of St. John the Baptist; the Sunday before Michaelmas; and one at Christmas. The almshouses in Pebble lane were burnt by the dreadful fire, 5th September, 1694, and in lieu thereof, were subsequently built adjoining to Eyfler's almshouses, accommodation for 12 alms people, amongst whom the distribution of the garments is now confined. With the exception of a few exchanges, the property is still supposed to be the same as originally given, of which the total annual value now amounts to £670. 9s. 9d. and the expenditure £551. 5s. 5½d., of which £5. 1s. was paid for the stationery for the 13 boys at the Boblake or Greville school, and £8. 9s. 3d. for clothing for them; and the sum of £300. 18s. for weekly disbursements to the poor of Warwick, as residue, employed agreeable to the donor's intention; leaving a surplus, in 1825, of £119. 4s. 3½d. Many of the buildings are very old.

Nicholas Eyfler, (Ifler.) by will, 1591, granted all his lands and tenements, (after his death and that of his wife,) and other contingencies; the yearly rents should be received by Mr. Oken's collectors, and accounted for with his benevolence; and he ordered, after his wife's death, John Goldsmith, with the testator's goods, should cause four convenient houses, with chimnies and other necessities, to be made out of the barn at the Back Hills, in Warwick, and that there should be placed therein old maidens, in Warwick, or other old women. The first eight poor women were placed in these almshouses on St. Matthias' day, 1597; every one of them a new frieze gown and 12d. in money given them by the executors at their entrance; and the same number has always continued. Each almswoman receives quarterly 2s. 1d., a gown of brown stuff to each, and eight hundred weight of coals to each; making a total yearly payment of £9. 8s. 8d. The poor women participate in other charities of the borough; and the total income of the charity is £30. 15s.; and there was, 1825, a surplus in hand of £118. 10s. 6d. principally accumulated since 1821, when the rents were increased from £14. to £30. The residue is now appropriated in the same manner as Mr. Oken's charity.

Sir Thomas White, (see Coventry.)—The corporation of Warwick receive, every fifth year, from the corporation of Coventry, four-sevenths of the clear rents of the estates, subject to certain fees to the officers of the latter corporation. The funds derived from these rents are applied by the corporation in loans to young tradesmen of the borough, formerly of £50., but since 1820. of £100. each, for nine years without interest, two or more persons being surety for the repayment; and, in 1825, there was a balance in the receiver's hands of £3,060. 19s. 4½d., and £3,800. out on security, of which £350. was supposed to be irrecoverable.

Sir Thomas Puckering, of the Priory, Warwick, by indenture, 20th April, 9 Charles I. enfeoffed to trustees and their heirs, one tenement in Wallditch street, and two other tenements in Rotherchipping street, and also six several tenements which he had built for the habitation of six several tradesmen, of which three were situated in each of the said streets; upon trust, to make leases of the said six new messuages, to six several tradesmen of the town of Warwick, for 21 years and no longer; such lessee to enter into usual covenants for the taking, teaching of apprentices, (to be nominated by the feoffees,) in the trade or mystery of the said lessee, for the space of seven years; and for the providing of necessary meat, drink, washing, lodging, and apparel. for every such apprentice, &c. &c. By indenture, 1789, the three houses in Wallditch street, but then called Bridewell lane, were exchanged for pasture ground in Budbrook, called Sale's close, containing eight acres, but which, by survey in 1815, was found to contain 5a. 1r. 4p., and is now let (1825.) for £10. per annum. The other five houses in Rotherchipping, now Brook street, produce £19. 8s. per annum. The rent is applied in apprenticing poor children, with premiums of about £10. each, which is agreeable to the donor's intention.

Robert Heath, by will, 1684, gave out of his land in Southam, £5. by the year, to be paid to set forth yearly one poor man's child apprentice, out of the borough of Warwick, by the approbation of his executors, and the mayor and aldermen of the said borough. This annuity is received (1825,) from Mrs. Marcott, the owner of the estate in Southam, and is applied as directed. Robert Heath, grandson of the former, by will, 1737, left £10. out of the same estate for apprenticing two boys, which was void under the statute of 9th George II.

George Webb, by will, 1722, gave Dean's Pool Meadow, in the parish of St. Nicholas, (after the death of his wife,) to the vicars and churchwardens of St. Mary's and St. Nicholas, for ever, on trust; and that they should appoint five persons of the parish of St. Mary's, and two of St. Nicholas, to act together with them, in disposing of the rents and profits in manner following:—and expend, on the second 25th of March after the death of his said wife, £5. or not more than £10. in placing out one poor boy of the parish of St. Mary, apprentice for seven years to some trade; and that after his apprenticeship performed, and in case he could read his Bible, &c., and should bring a certificate from his master or mistress that he had behaved himself soberly and diligently during his apprenticeship, then he should be paid £5. £6. or £7., at the discretion of the said trustees, towards setting him up in business. And he willed that upon every 25th of March after the first mentioned, during the term of three years, there should be one boy of the parish of St. Mary placed out apprentice with the same privileges; and on the next 25th of March, after three years, one poor boy of the parish of St. Nicholas, for two years, with the same privileges; and that upon the 25th of March next, after the said two years, there should be one poor boy of the parish of Maxstoke placed out apprentice, with the above-named privileges; and also, that upon every 25th of March, after the seven years above mentioned, to proceed in the same manner; and in case there should be no boy found in Maxtoke, one poor boy of St. Mary should be substituted. No boy to be apprenticed to his father or brother. The testator's widow died in 1743, when the close was let for £9. a year; and afterwards let on lease, in 1747, for 99 years, at the yearly rent of £10. to Matthew Wise, Esq. In 1803, the trustees exchanged with Henry Christopher Wise, Esq., the aforesaid land, containing 3a. 3r. 2p., for 4 acres of land in the parish of St. Mary, adjoining the road leading to Hatton, receiving also £21. 16s. as a balance for the value of timber. This is now let for £21. a year. Boys are regularly apprenticed, three from St. Mary, two from St. Nicholas, and one from Maxtoke. Annual meetings of the trustees are held with few exceptions, when the expense of £1. allowed by the testator, has been increased to about £4.

Richard Lane, by will, 1723, gave a rent charge of £10., payable out of certain lands and tenements in the borough of Warwick and in Harbury, to trustees, for the paying of £5. for the binding out a poor boy of the borough of Warwick, whose parents should be of the established church, or that he should have been therein educated; and at the end of the first seven years after the death of the testator, £5. more every year, to give to such boys as from time to time so put out, who had faithfully served their apprenticeship, to enable him the better to follow his trade; or if there should want such boys, then to dispose of the same in some other charity. The rent charge of £10. is received from the owner of an estate at Harbury, and applied agreeable to the donor's will. The boys are taken out of the borough at large.

Sir Thomas Delves, by indenture, 1727, released unto Dame Roda, his wife, and three others, all his lands, &c., in the county of Chester, upon trust; within 16 years after his decease, to raise and pay the sum of £1,000., to be laid out in the purchase of land in the county of Warwick, to be settled on trustees; to the intent that one-half the rents should be applied by the vicar, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, of the parish of St. Mary, in Warwick, in placing out poor children apprentices, and in clothing them, and setting them up in trade, or relieving poor persons, &c.; and the other half of the rents to be applied for like purposes in the parish of St. Nicholas; and to pay £30. per annum till the £1,000. was advanced. And the like sum of £1,000. was also left for clothing and teaching poor children of Wybunbury, and £30. a year paid till the said sum was raised. By a decree of the court of chancery, 13th July, 1734, it was ordered that the deed of 1727 should be established; and the master, by his report 10th July, 1735, certified that the sum of £210. was then due for the £30. per annum directed to be raised for the two parishes, and the like sum for Wybunbury; and the sum of £2,540. was accordingly placed in the hands of the Attorney General. On the 10th April, 1749, agreeable to the master's order, an estate in Budbrooke was conveyed, for the sum of £1,000. to certain trustees, their heirs and assigns, for the use of the vicars of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, for ever, to dispose of the said rents to certain charitable purposes within the said parishes. These premises consist of a barn, of which one end has been made into a small dwelling-house, and 36a. 2r. 19p. of land, let at the annual rent of £110. Out of this £4. is paid for land tax, £2. 2s. to the receiver, and 1s. 6d. for receipt stamps, leaving £103. 16s. 6d. which is carried to the credit of the two parishes; which moieties are disbursed by the receiver, under the directions of the respective vicars, churchwardens, and overseers of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, in paying premiums of apprenticeship for poor children, of the respective parishes, and the charge of the indentures. The share of the £540. as before noticed, belonging to these two parishes, had, previously to the purchase of this estate, been applied in apprenticing poor boys.

Ann Johnson, by indenture, 1732, granted to trustees certain messuages, in or near Smith street, in St. Nicholas' parish, Warwick, to hold the same for her use, for her life, and after her decease, on trust, to lay out the rents in clothing, or otherwise relieve ing poor old persons of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, and in placing out poor children of either sex apprentices, they all being of the communion of the Church of England. She also, by her will of the same date, ratified the same, and gave to the said trustees, Thomas Bree, M.D., and two others, all her leasehold estates, her goods and chattels, and other her personal estates, upon trust, to sell the same, and after the payment of her debts, legacies, and funeral expenses, to lay out all the residue of the money in one or more purchase or purchases of freehold lands, in the county of Warwick, and settle the same upon themselves and such other persons as they should think fit, for the same charitable uses as were contained in the above-named indenture. The sum of £2,424. 9s. 5d. was, in 1733. realized from the sale of the above estates, and laid out, under the sanction of a decree in chancery, in the year 1737, in the purchase of a farm called Hogbrook, of which sum £65. 8s. 5d. was for law expenses and in the conveyance. This farm contains 203a. 1r. 4p., besides the homestead and orchard, in 18 closes, and was let, in 1819, at the annual rent of £170., previous to which it had been £200. a year, but, in 1826, the tenant was considerably in arrear. The premises in Smith street produce an annual rental of £88. 10s., making a total of £258. 10s. After deducting various expenses of insurance, land tax, repairs, &c., a sum of £2. 12s. is paid to each of the parishes for a distribution of bread, with occasionally a sum of from £5. to £10. as a premium for an apprentice. The residue is divided amongst the trustees, to be distributed amongst the poor of the two parishes, in sums varying from 5s. to £1.

Rev. John Smith, of Sherborn, encoffed, Powley Ward, serjeant at law, and two others, in a meadow, called Eaves Meadow, within the manor of Knowle, of the yearly value of £5. 6s. 8d., to be for the uses he named in his will; which will, 22nd of James I, desired that the rents of the said meadow should, after his decease, be weekly, upon every Sunday, bestowed in bread, and distributed amongst twelve poor people of the parish of St. Mary, and twelve poor people of St. Nicholas. He also gave to the said trustees a messuage in Knowle, with the customary lands thereto belonging, containing 24 acres, at the least, being of the value of £11. per annum; the rents and profits thereof, after the death of his wife, to be employed for the buying and making up of ten gowns yearly, against the feast of Christmas, to be bestowed upon ten poor men of St. Mary, in Warwick; and it was his desire, that the said rent should never be advanced to Robert Weston, the then tenant, nor his children, or posterity, who should succeed him. By virtue of a surrender of this property, 7th March, 1817, the premises is now subject to the payment of the £11., are vested in John Bott and his heirs. The annual sum of £8. 10s. is all that has been received for several years (1826) in respect of this sum. Mr. Bott pays for the land tax for the whole of his farm, which is assessed at £60.; the sum of £2., which, with the chief rent of 10s., he deducts; but the sum which he is entitled to deduct is only 7s. 4d. per annum; and, consequently, is liable to refund the sum of £1. 12s. 8d. per annum for the years this excessive deduction has been made. With respect to the chief rent upon the Knowle Inclosure, in 1813, that rent was extinguished, and formed part of the compensation for his common right. The charge on the whole estate was £1. 10s.; consequently the charge on the charity part of it should be eleven parts out of sixty; the difference between that sum and 10s., that he has annually deducted, he is liable to refund. Thirteen coats are distributed by the mayor and aldermen. The Eaves Meadow, now consisting of four closes, containing 16a. 2r. 21p., and is let for £25. per annum; of which, after repairs and other payments, the net residue, (1825, £21. 18s. 6d.), is divided betwixt the two parishes, and a distribution of twelve twopenny loaves is made every Sunday at St. Mary's church. The residue is generally given away in 1s. or 6d. loaves, to poor persons in the parish. Similar distributions of bread are made at St. Nicholas's. The Rev. John Smith also in his life time (1694) conveyed certain premises to trustees for the purchase of shoes for the poor of Warwick; now a public house, (The Welsh Harp), with a small garden, let at the annual rent of £24., from which are repairs and some small payments; when the residue, (1825, £20. 12s. 6d.), is divided equally betwixt the two parishes, and applied in the distribution of shoes to the poor.

Mrs. Turnille left 40s. per annum out of her estate at Byfield, in the county of Northampton, to be disposed of by the trustees in buying 24 yards of woollen cloth, at 1s. 6d. per yard, to be given to two poor men and six poor women, of the parish of St. Mary, and to two poor men and two poor women, of the parish of St. Nicholas; the men to have three yards each to make them coats, and the women one yard and a half each to make them waistcoats; the remainder to be given in bread to twelve poor prisoners. Mr. Carter, of Byfield, is the present owner of the estate, and in 1825, paid an arrear of £23. 8s. to the vicar of St. Mary, of which sum, £9. 15s. was paid to the vicar of St. Nicholas, and distributed according to the donor's intention.

Richard Grimes, by will, 1709, declared that his meadow, in the parish of St. Nicholas, should for ever, after the decease of his wife, stand charged with the payment of two several sums of 50s. each, clear of charges; to be paid yearly, upon the feast of St. John the Baptist, or within thirty days after; 50s. each to the minister and churchwardens of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Nicholas; and their successors, on trust, to expend 10s. in twopenny loaves in each parish; to be distributed on Michaelmas day; and 40s. in making three cloth gowns for three poor men of the parish of St. Mary; and the same sum for that of St. Nicholas. The land thus charged, now forms part of the Earl of Warwick's park, whose steward pays the charges, which is distributed agreeable to the donor's intention.

Henry Archer, by will, 1764, gave the sum of £500. to the poor of the borough of Warwick—(from his grateful remembrance of the borough which he represented in parliament for thirty years and upwards)—to be disposed of by his brother, Lord Archer, the Earl of Warwick, and Matthew Wise, Esq., and the respective vicars and churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, of the said borough, for the time being. This sum of £500. was placed in the hands of the Earl of Warwick, at four per cent. on his bond, 1769; in 1783, the Earl voluntarily raised the interest to five per cent. This interest, £25., is paid by the steward; two thirds, £16. 13s. 8d., being given to the churchwardens of St. Mary; and one third, £8. 6s. 4d., to the churchwardens of St. Nicholas. This charity is employed in the purchase of coals, which are sold out at reduced prices, in quantities according to the families, at different times during winter.

John Tolloos, by will, 1548, gave all his lands and tenements in Warwick to Andrew Judge and others, and their heirs and assigns, to bestow the profits of the same on poor men of the town of Warwick. This property consisted of four houses, and land, in Bridge End field, and the houses were, in 1761, exchanged for land at Barford, containing 16 acres, on which a barn has been erected, at an expense of £84., and now lets at the yearly rent of £31. 10s. The land in Warwick was exchanged under the Inclosure Act, of Myton field, in St. Nicholas, and now contains 6a. 2r. 17p., and let at the yearly rent of £11. After some small deductions, the money is equally divided betwixt the two parishes, and given in money, from 5s. to £1. each to poor persons.

Alderman Whately, (see Coventry.)—A sum of £2. is received by the Mayor of Warwick, from the receiver of the charity, which is given to four poor tradesmen of the borough, agreeable to the donor's will.

Richard Griffin, by deed 34 Queen Elizabeth, enfeoffed Job Throckmorton and seven others, their heirs and assigns, with all his lands and tenements, in Myton and the Bridge-end, within the parish of St. Nicholas, in the borough of Warwick, and all others within the borough or elsewhere, (after certain limitations,) that the rents should be yearly distributed to the poor of Warwick, in the week next before Christmas, and the week before Easter, by equal portions, at their discretion. By the award of the commissioners for inclosing the Common Fields, in the parish of St. Nicholas, dated 9th June, 1773, 89a. 3r. 31p. was awarded as a full equivalent for the 74 reputed acres belonging to this church, and the right of common thereto. The whole of the property is now let for an annual rent of £193. 10s. 10d. After various expenses, and 10s. for a service, and expenses of the audit dinner in December, the money is divided amongst the trustees for distribution to poor persons, in sums of from 5s. to 10s. each; some portion is usually given in meat at Christmas.

David Price, by deed, 1625, as well in consideration of a certain sum paid to him by William South, and for other good causes, granted and enfeoffed to Sir Thomas Puckering, Bart., of the Priory, in Warwick, and two others, and their heirs, two messuages, gardens, &c., situate in Castle street, on trust, to distribute the rents and profits at one time in the year, amongst the most needy people of the said borough. The two houses are now (1826,) let for the annual rent of £38. After expenses, the sum of £30. has, since 1822, been paid over to the trustees, in equal shares, which is distributed in sums of £1. and under, to poor people of the parish of St. Mary.

Richard Edgeworth, by will, 21 Charles I. gave to the poor of Warwick £4. a year for ever, the first payment to be given after the expiration of 17 years after his decease; and he further gave the sum of 13s. 4d. a year for two sermons to be preached every year in St. Mary's church, in Warwick, one at Lady-day and the other at Michaelmas; to be payable out of certain lands called Gospel Close. Mr. Freeman, the owner of Gospel Meadow, has annually paid the £4., after deducting 6s. for land tax, in four sums of 18s. 6d. each, to the mayor, the ex-mayor, and the two senior aldermen, to be distributed by them amongst the poor. The payment to the minister has, of late years, not been made.

Countess of Devonshire, by will, gave £50. to be lent at 12d. in the pound. It appears from the corporation accounts, that 50s. the interest of this £50., was annually paid and distributed on Ash-Wednesday, till the year 1736. since which it has been discontinued. The bonds have not been cancelled, and it would be right to distribute the interest as heretofore done.

Jane Tomkys, by will, 1729, upon a certain contingency, gave her messuage in Priors Hardwick, to the Rev. Thomas Norton, vicar of Budbrooke, and his heirs, and to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, of the parish of St. Mary, for the time being, and their successors, for ever, on trust; that they would put out boys apprentice, &c.; and after giving several legacies, she bequeathed the rest of her personal estate to her executor, the Rev. Thomas Norton, to be by him disposed of for such good and charitable purposes, within the borough of Warwick, as he should think fit. The apprentices charity never took effect. Various sums of money were secured under this will, in the whole, with some interest, £300., which was laid out 9th August, 1814, in the purchase of stock, now £325. 3s. 2d. new four per cents. The dividends are given to each of the trustees, and distributed to the poor in sums of from 5s. to £2.

Mr. Lea, a baker, gave a house near the Joyce Pool, towards the relief of poor prisoners in the county goal. About 50 years ago, the house having fallen into decay, was taken down, and a building for a standing for the caravan, used to convey prisoners from the county goal, with a stable, &c., occupies the site; since which nothing has been paid in respect of this house.

George Weale gave £2. 10s. per annum, charged on a house in High street, to be yearly distributed to the two parishes, which house was burnt down in the fire, 1694, and the ground sold for £15. Nothing is now known of this.

West Gate Almshouses, situated without the West Gate, and formerly part of the buildings which belonged to the United Guilds of St. George and the Holy Trinity. Henry Wise, of the Priory, in Warwick, by indenture, 1737, conveyed these premises to William Greenwood and five others, for establishing them pursuant to the design of Sir Henry Puckeridge, Bart., otherwise Newton, late of the Priory aforesaid; and also those other four small cottages in the Saltisford; that they, their heirs, or assigns, should, for ever, with the consent of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, of the parish of St. Mary, relieve poor people of the said parish, with all clear yearly rents of the said premises, or placing such poor people in the said tenements, ^{at their discre-} tion. The West Gate Almshouses are occupied by eight poor women, widows, ^{placed} in them by the owner of the Priory estate, Mr. Henry Wise; the ancient payment of 13d. each, quarterly, is paid to them. The Saltisford Almshouse consists of four houses under one roof, each having two rooms, and are occupied by eight poor women, who each receive 2s. 6d. per quarter. These ancient payments are made by Mr. Wise, who keeps the houses in repair, but there is no other endowment; they participate in the other charities of the parish.

John Yardley gave a house in Saltisford for four poor women; this house appears to correspond with one conveyed by Francis Edward Holyoak, Esq., in 1788, as surviving trustee, to the vicar of St. Mary and others, on trust, to distribute the rents and profits amongst poor people of the said parish. Four poor families of the parish are placed therein by the parish officers, who keep the houses in repair.

Corporation Almshouses.—These were formerly in Rosemary lane, and were taken down about 60 years ago by the Earl of Warwick, and the site inclosed in his garden. His Lordship thereupon had ten others built in the Saltisford; 12 were afterwards built by the parish, into which two of the original ones were taken, and five additional ones have been built, making in the whole 25. They are kept in repair by the parish, and the poor people, parishioners of St. Mary, placed therein by the parish officers.

Matthew Busby, by will, 1723, directed his trustees to secure the sum of £105., and such other sum as they should think fit, to purchase land for the placing out one boy apprentice, of this parish; and further charged the land so purchased with the payment of 1s. weekly, to be laid out in bread, to be distributed every Sunday to the poor. The trustees, after satisfying every other part of the donor's will, by indenture, 11th October, 1740, conveyed to the vicar of St. Mary and others, the house and premises in Swan lane, then known as the Peacock, now the White Hart, and part of the said donor's property, on trust, for the fulfilling of this charity. The house is now let for £16. per annum. A weekly distribution of 12 threepenny loaves is made, and the residue appropriated to putting out apprentices.

Thomas Aylworth, (see Kineton.)—The present rent (1825,) of the charity land is £52., which is received by the trustees of the parish of Kineton, who pay over to the trustees for Warwick, £2. 12s. 0d., for a weekly distribution of bread, and after defraying some small charges, three-sevenths of the net residue of the rent also; which, in 1825, amounted to £18. 2s. 10½d. Six twopenny loaves are given every Sunday at St. Mary's church, to poor persons of the parish; and the residue of the rent is distributed by the Warwick trustees, in coals and gowns, to poor persons of the parish.

Joseph Blissett, by will, 1712, gave the sum of £150. to his executors, on trust, as soon as might be after his decease to lay out the same, with the approbation of his trustees, in the purchase of land, &c., and the profits thereof laid out in bread, by eight threepenny loaves, to eight poor housekeepers of the parish of St. Mary. A charge of £5. 4s. exists upon a house and premises at the corner of Church street, in Warwick, the property of Henry Harper, but who, having built an additional house on the premises, which was sold to Thomas Stiles, it was agreed that the latter should pay the weekly sum of 6d. part of the charge, the remaining part to be paid by Mr. Harper. Eight threepenny loaves are distributed at St. Mary's church, every Sunday, to poor housekeepers.

Nicholas Rothwell, by will, 1729, gave his close called Friar's Meadow, in Warwick, with a stable thereon, to Charles Watts and six others, their heirs, &c., upon trust, to dispose of the rent to poor and needy persons of the parish of St. Mary, in bread and meat, at Christmas. The premises contains about 1½ acre of land, with a stable and cart house thereon, now let at the annual rent of £14. 14s. The land is partly garden ground. The stable has been rebuilt, towards which the trustees allowed the sum of £29. 2s., in 1826. The clear rent is distributed to the poor in bread and beef, at or about Christmas.

Fulke Weale, woollen draper, of Warwick, by will, 1729, left 40s. yearly, payable on the 21st of December, to the minister and churchwardens of St. Mary, for the clothing of two poor boys of the said parish, with coat, waistcoat, and breeches, and for paying for their schooling at the public school, as he had heretofore done. Mr. Thomas Checkley, a hosier, (1826.) pays the rent-charge from his house, Mount Pleasant. Two boys are sent to the school at Eastgate chapel; the sum of 16s. is paid for their schooling, and the residue is applied in providing them clothing.

John Hadley, by will, 1702, left a certain house to his cousin, Elizabeth Marriott, and after her death, to his brother, Richard Hadley, and his heirs, to employ the rents in keeping the said house in repair; and the overplus, after such repairs, to be employed for the same use as £100. which he directed his executors to lay out in the purchase of land, and settle upon themselves and their heirs, on trust; the rents to be employed in binding out a poor boy or girl of the parish of St. Mary, apprentice. Day's Meadow, in Henley-in-Arden, was purchased for £104., containing 2a. 2r. 1p., now let at the clear annual rent of £9. The house is let for £5. 5s., situate in Brook street, formerly called Cow lane; and the clear rents are employed according to the intention of the donor.

John Smith, one of the Barons of Court of Exchequer, by indenture 1st November, 1704, gave to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Warwick, and Fulke Lord Brooke and 14 others, as their trustees, the yearly sum of £5., to be secured on certain tithes, &c., for the placing out yearly, at Easter, one poor boy of this parish, apprentice, &c. This sum of £100. was carried to the general account of King Henry's charity, and the annual sum of £5. was duly applied in the performance of Baron Smith's charity till the year 1736, after which it was erroneously discontinued.

Mrs. Turville, in 1667, left to the corporation £55., for which they paid yearly £3. 7s. 2d. as interest, to the churchwardens of St. Mary, till 1736,—for the purchase of linen or shifts,—since which, on the sequestration of King Henry's charity, nothing has been paid to 1825. As nothing appears to shew the cessation of the liability to pay this interest, the corporation ought to continue the payment thereof.

Mrs. Alice Hammond, by will, 1778, gave to George, Earl Brooke and Warwick, and four others, and their heirs and assigns, £200., which was due to her on mortgage of the tolls of the road from Stratford, through Henley, to Birmingham, on trust; to distribute the interest thereof among six poor widows of the parish of St. Mary, as the trustees, with the vicars of St. Mary and St. Nicholas', should think proper. This legacy still remains on the security of the said road, and the clear dividends given to six poor widows of St. Mary.

Church Estate.—By indenture, 24th April, 1756, certain premises to trustees, on trust, to pay the clear yearly profits towards the repairs of the parish church of St. Mary. These premises, near the church-yard, were let on lease for 35 years, from Michaelmas, 1813, at the yearly rent of £10. to Richard Saunders, who expended, in consequence £400. in rebuilding the house, and was afterwards held by Mrs. Keyte. There is also another house and outbuildings in West street, now the Mermaid Inn, belonging to the church estate, now in the occupation of William Fincher, under a lease of 42 years, from Lady-day, 1802, at the yearly rent of £5.; the lessee having laid out £500. in rebuilding the premises. These sums are both carried to the churchwardens account.

Lady Katharine Leveson, by will, 1670, gave £40. a year for the repair of the chapel on the south side of the choir of the church of St. Mary, where her ancestors were buried; and any surplus to be distributed among the poor brethren of the Earl of Leicester's hospital. Occasionally, after the repairs, sums of money are distributed to the hospital. Dugdale Stratford Dugdale, of Merevale, succeeded as trustee to this charity in 1802, and the accounts are kept in a chest at the church.

Lost Charities.—John and Joan Stanton gave £50. for gowns for the poor in West street Ward; £50. was given to the poor of Saltisford, which, in 1712, had been reduced to £19. in the wardman's hands; also, 16s. was given to the poor of Saltisford out of Ward's close. These are recorded on a tablet in St. Mary's church, but nothing is known about them.

ST. NICHOLAS'S PARISH.

Earl Brooke.—Girl's school; the sum of £7. 16s. a year is paid in half-yearly payments, by the steward of the Earl of Warwick, to the master of the free school at the East chapel, for the education of 12 girls; clothing is also provided for them at the Earl's expense, consisting of gowns, petticoats, caps, and tippets. The girls are appointed by the churchwardens of St. Nicholas.

Henry Furnis charged three of his houses in the Bridge End with £2. 13s. annually, to be distributed in penny bread every Sunday to poor people. The Earl of Warwick pays 20s. from two houses at Bridge End; and £1. 12s. is received from Mr. Radford, of Lellington, from a farm which had come by exchange into his hands. Six twopenny loaves are given every Sunday to six poor persons appointed by the vicar and churchwardens.

John Wilson gave a house and about two acres of land, in Tatchbrook, to be applied to charitable uses in the borough of Warwick. Henry Furnis gave £20., and Thomas Owen £50., which was laid out in a close in Myton; the rents to be employed for the relief of the poor of St. Nicholas. The premises in Tatchbrook are let at the annual rent of £12. 12s. The close in Myton contains 2a. 1r. 24p., and is let for the yearly rent of £10. After deducting for repairs, &c., the residue of these two rents is applied in providing cloth—for coats—for poor men, allowing four yards each, and the expense of making up; and flannel for petticoats for poor women, three yards to each.

Martha Holloock, by will, 1780, devised a close in Saltisford to John Bird and Joseph Lee, their heirs and assigns, in trust; to pay 40s. a year, for ever, out of the rents to the trustees of Mr. Wilson's charity, to be applied with that charity; and to apply the residue of the rents in buying bread, and disposing of a portion every Sunday at the parish church of St. Nicholas. Samuel Kirby, the heir-at-law, in consideration of 5s. confirmed the above bequest. The close contains about an acre, let to Joseph Brookhouse, at the yearly rent of £6. 6s. The sum of £2. 12s. is applied in a weekly distribution of bread to six poor persons, and the remainder is given with Wilson's charity in cloth and flannel.

Edmund Makepeace, by will, 23rd of Charles II., gave to his son Edmund a close of land, at the Bridge End, in Warwick, on condition to pay to the overseers of the poor, of the parish of St. Nicholas, the sum of 52s. at Lady-day and Michaelmas, by equal portions, to buy a dozen of bread against every Sabbath-day, to be given to the poor. Edmund Makepeace, the younger, left a like legacy to this parish, payable out of the same close. The sum of £5. 4s. is annually received from the steward of the Earl of Warwick, as a charge upon a close at Bridge End, and distributed in 12 twopenny loaves to poor persons.

Catharine Burton, by will, 11th of George I., gave £200. to the use of the poor of the Lower Church, in Warwick, to be laid out by her executors, with the approbation of the churchwardens and overseers, in the purchase of freehold land, to be settled in trust, to pay the rents thereof yearly to ten poor widows of St. Nicholas,—that should frequently attend the Divine service of the church,—in equal shares. In 1727. certain premises were purchased, and now consist of a house used (1825,) as part of the workhouse, with a garden and small tenement, let to the overseers for the annual rent of £8. A close near the workhouse, containing 2r. 2p., and a parcel of land in St. Nicholas's Meadow, which was allotted under the inclosure of the open fields in lieu of the leys of that meadow, and let at the yearly rent of £14.; the meadow is Lammas land.

After some small deductions, the residue is distributed about Christmas, amongst poor widows of the parish, in sums of about 10s. each.

Mary Jeacocks, by will, 1787, gave to the vicar and churchwardens of St. Nicholas, and six others, the sum of £60. on trust; which, after being increased to £70. by the accumulation of interest, was, in 1798, placed in the hands of Edward Williams, on his bond, at 5 per cent. interest, which he regularly paid till the time of his death, 1805; and for four years afterwards by his son, after which he became involved, and his property sold, but the bond having been lost and could not be produced, nothing of this sum was recovered.

Allotment Land.—Upon the inclosure of the common fields, of the parish of St. Nicholas', under the act of the 12 George III., a claim having been made for poor persons in the Bridge End Ward, of a right they had of cutting furze upon Warwick heath, in the same ward, the commissioners allotted to the Earl of Warwick, his heirs and assigns, 15 acres as a compensation for their claim, on trust, for the said poor. This land has been cleared and cultivated, and is now let at the yearly rent of £27. 6s., which is received by the churchwardens, and laid out in the purchase of coals, and distributed to poor families in quantities varying from two to ten cwt., according to the numbers in each family.

Church Estate.—This estate consists of various premises, which for a long series of years have been applied to the repairs and uses of the church. These rents, amounting in the whole to the annual sum of £169. 3s., are received by the churchwardens, and applied for the uses of their office, and has wholly superseded the necessity of a church-rate in this parish.

HISTORY OF THE CITY OF COVENTRY.

COVENTRY, an ancient city in the Kirby division of Knightlow Hundred; 10 miles N.E. from Warwick; 18 miles S.E. from Birmingham; 8 mile S.W. by S. from Nuneaton; 5 miles N. by E. from Kenilworth; and 91 miles N.N.W. from London; on the road to Hollyhead; comprises the parishes of Holy Trinity, St. Michael, and St. John the Baptist. The parish of Holy Trinity contains 2,920 acres; in 1841, 12,207 inhabitants, 2,506 inhabited houses, 186 uninhabited houses, and 26 were building. The parishes of St. John the Baptist, with St. Michael's, contains 4,390 acres; in 1841, here were 19,521 inhabitants, 3,960 inhabited houses, 399 uninhabited, and 15 were building. The total population of the city, 31,728; of this number 6,893 males, 7,562 females were under 20 years of age; 8,119 males, 9,154 females were 20 years old and upwards.

In ancient records this place is called Coventre, and also Conventrey, from the foundation of a convent by Canute, of which St. Osburg was abbess, in 1016, when it was burnt by Edric the traitor, who having invaded Mercia, destroyed many towns in Warwickshire. On the site of this convent, Leofric, Earl of Mercia, and his Countess Godiva, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, erected a monastery, which they munificently endowed, and decorated with such a profusion of costly ornaments, that, according to William of Malmesbury, the walls were covered with gold and silver. About this time, Leofric, at the intercession of his Countess, granted the citizens a charter, conferring various privileges and immunities, the same being commemorated in the south window of Trinity Church, by portraits of the Earl and Countess, with a poetical legend. Leofric died in 1057, and was interred in the monastery which he had founded. Shortly after the Norman conquest, the lordship of Coventry became vested in the Earls of Chester, by marriage with the grand-daughter of Leofric. In the contest between Stephen and the Empress Matilda, the Earl of Chester taking part with the latter, his castle of Coventry was occupied by the King's forces: the Earl besieged it, but the King came in person to its relief, and repulsed the Earl after an obstinate conflict. In 1141, Robert Marmion, the inveterate enemy of the Earl of Chester, took possession of this mona tery, from which he expelled the monks, fortified the church, and cut deep trenches in the adjoining fields, concealing them only with a slight covering; on the Earl's approach to dislodge him, Marmion drew out his forces, but, forgetting the exact situation of the trenches, his horse fell with him to the ground, and in this situation his head was severed from his body by a private soldier. In 1355, the city was surrounded with walls three miles in circuit, three yards in thickness, and six yards in height, strengthened with thirty-two towers, and containing twelve principal gates, viz.:—New gate, Cosford gate, Mill lane, or Bastil gate; Cook street gate, Bishop gate, Well-street gate, Hill-street gate, Spon gate, Grey-Friars' gate, Cheylesmore gate, Little Park-street gate, and Swanswell gate, each defended by a portcullis. These massive ramparts were kept in good repair for nearly 300 years; some idea may be formed of the security they afforded to the city, by the defiance returned on the part of the inhabitants to the mandates of Edward IV. and Charles I., when those monarchs appeared before the gates with armed forces.

In 1397, Richard II. appointed this town for the decision, by single combat, of the quarrel between the Dukes of Hereford and Norfolk; and magnificent preparations were made on Gosford Green for this encounter, which, however, was prevented by the banishment of the combatants, a measure which ultimately caused the deposition of the king. In 1404, the Duke of Hereford, who had become Duke of Lancaster by the death of his father, John of Gaunt, on his return from exile, having succeeded to the crown by the title of Henry IV., held a parliament here in the great chamber of the Priory, which, from the exclusion of all lawyers, was called Parliamentum Indocorum. In 1411, the Prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V., was arrested at the Priory by John Horneby, mayor of the city, probably for some tumultuous excess, the particulars of which are not recorded. The City, with the following parishes and hamlets, viz., Radford, Keresley, Foleshill, Exhall, Anstey, Wyken, Stoke, and part of Sowe, were severed from the county of Warwick, and created a county of itself, under the designation of the "City and County of the City of Coventry," by charter of Henry VI., in 1451, and so continued, except for a short period, till after the passing of the Municipal Reform Act in 1835, and the Amendment Act of a subsequent year. Upon these acts, a legal question arose as to the boundary, or interpretation to be given to the term "city of Coventry," as used in those acts; which led to a protracted law-suit between the corporation and certain influential residents in some of the hamlets and villages above-named; it being contended by the former, that such term included the city of Coventry, with its county; while the opponents of the corporation held the reverse. The contest, on this question, continued for several years; the decision upon it being come to by the Judges in the Court of Exchequer, by the delivery of judgment, on the 7th of July, 1842, the corporation being non-suited. This decision breaking up the ancient boundary, the corporation resolved to petition the secretary of state, praying that a bill might be brought before parliament immediately, to incorporate Coventry with the county of Warwick; accordingly an act to that effect was promptly passed, and received the royal assent, and came in operation November 9, 1842.

In 1459, Henry VI. held a parliament in the chapter-house of the priory; which, from the number of attainders passed against the Duke of York and others, was, by the Yorkists, called Parliamentum Diabolicum. In 1465, Edward IV., and his queen kept the festival of Christmas at Coventry; and three years after, the Earl of Rivers and his son, who had been seized by a party of Northern rebels at Grafton, were beheaded on Gosford green. In the war between the houses of York and Lancaster Richard, Earl of Warwick, marched with all his ordnance, and war-like stores, into this city, where he remained for a short time; during which, Edward IV., on his route from Leicester, attempted to force an entrance; but being repulsed, he passed on to Warwick, and thence to London; where, having gained a battle, in which the Earl of Warwick was slain, he returned to Coventry, and deprived the citizens of their charter; for the restoration of which, they were compelled to pay a fine of five hundred marks. In 1472, severe enactments were passed by the magistrates against women of immoral character; who were publicly exhibited in carts on the market days. Henry VII., on his route from Bosworth field, in 1475, was received here with every demonstration of congratulation and respect. In the early part of the sixteenth century, Coventry became the theatre of religious prosecution; the Bishop of Chester, coming to examine persons accused of heresy, condemned seven to the stake, which sentence was executed in the little Park; in 1554, Mr. Hopkins, sheriff for the city, was confined in the Fleet prison, on a charge of heresy, but was liberated after great intercession, and fled the kingdom; and in the following year, Mr. Lawrence Saunders, Robert Glover, A.M., and Cornelius Bongey, were burnt for their religious tenets. In 1565, Queen Elizabeth visited the city; and in 1566, Mary, Queen of Scots, was conducted to this place, where she was detained a prisoner; and in 1569, on her removal from Tutbury castle, she was for some time at the Bull Inn, in the custody of the Earls of Shrewsbury and Huntingdon. In 1607, the city suffered considerable damage from an inundation, which entered two hundred and fifty-seven houses, washing away furniture and utensils of various kinds, the flood arose to the height of three yards; and, after remaining three or four hours, suddenly subsided; clusters of white snails were afterwards found in the houses and in the trees, supposed to have collected prior to the influx of the water; which, though observed at the distance of nearly a mile from the town, was so instantaneous in its approach, as to preclude all means of precaution. King James, attended by a large retinue of the nobility, visited the city in 1617; on which occasion, a cup of pure gold, weighing forty-five ounces, and containing £100., was presented to him by the corporation, which his Majesty ordered to be preserved with the royal plate for the heirs of the crown. During the parliamentary war, Charles I., having erected his standard at Nottingham, in 1641, sent orders to the mayor and sheriffs of Coventry, to attend him at that place; but the majority of the citizens embraced the cause of the parliament; and a party having obtained possession of the magazine in Spon tower, which the Earl of Northampton had directed the aldermen to secure for the royalists, kept it for Lord Brooke, who removed it to Warwick castle. The parliamentary party in the city, having being reinforced with four hundred men from Birmingham, held it against the king, who sent a herald to demand entrance; which being refused, some cannon were planted in the great park, and on Stivichall hill, which played upon the town, but without effect. Finding the citizens resolved to defend their gates, and learning that Lord Brooke was approaching with his army from London, the king drew off his forces, and the city was now regularly garrisoned by the parliament, and further preparations made for its defence. The women were employed to fill up the quarries in the park, that they might not afford any shelter to the royal troops; and for this purpose they assembled in companies, by beat of drum, and marched in military array, with mattocks and spades, headed by an amazon who carried an herculean club on her shoulder, and conducted from their work by another, who discharged a pistol as a signal of dismissal. On the restoration of Charles II., that monarch was proclaimed by the mayor and aldermen, attended by a vast concourse of the inhabitants, with the most triumphant acclamation; the greatest rejoicings took place, and the public conduits of the city were made to flow with wine; a deputation was sent to present him to a basin and ewer, and fifty pieces of gold, and to surrender all the king's lands. In 1662, the Earl of Northampton, with a large retinue of the neighbouring gentry, and a detachment of the county troops, was sent with a commission from the king to make a breach in the walls, as a punishment to the inhabitants for shutting their gates against his father; but the earl so far exceeded the limits of his commission as to leave only a few fragments of them remaining; of the gates, which were only dismantled, there are three yet standing; viz., Cook-street, Chantry place, and Mill lane.

The city is pleasantly situated on a gentle eminence, bounded on the north-east by the river Sherbourne, and the Radford brook, which, running from north to south, unite within the town. In the more ancient part, the streets are narrow, and many of the houses constructed in the style of the 16th century, formed with a ponderous timber frame work, filled up with brick and plaster, the upper stories projecting over each other into the streets, giving to them, in many cases, a dark and gloomy character; though, in some instances, these curious specimens of the antique fashion of building are not destitute of interest to the passing stranger. Of late years the town has been much modernized; many old houses have given place to new and handsome ones; many new streets have been built on Summerland butts and Hill field; each of which forms an extensive suburb. The centre of the town is well paved; the whole well lighted with gas, and supplied with water.

The making caps was the principal trade of the town, prior to the year 1436, when the manufacture of woollen and broad cloth was introduced, and continued to flourish till the end of the sixteenth century; at this time Coventry was celebrated for a peculiar kind of blue thread; which, for the permanance of its colour, obtained the appellation of "Coventry true blue." About the beginning of the eighteenth century, striped and mixed tammies, camlets, shalloons, and calimancoes, were manufactured to a considerable extent; to which succeeded the throwing of silk, the weaving of gauzes, broad silks, and ribbons, and the manufacture of watches; the two latter at present form the staple trade of the town; a great quantity of each is exported; an immense number of pieces of ribbon and watches are sent off weekly, for the supply of the wholesale dealers in London; and a considerable quantity is, by means of travelling agents, distributed in every town in the kingdom.

In 1831, it was said, though the trade was depressed, that the silk trade, by the introduction of French looms and machinery, afforded employment to nearly 16,000 persons.

SILK AND RIBBON TRADE was introduced here, as well as at Spitalfields, by French refugees, after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, in 1685. The throwing of silk, the weaving of silk gauze, broad silks, and ribbons, succeeded. The ribbon trade was for some time confined to but a few hands, but it gradually increased, and became almost relinquished to Coventry, and has spread to so very great an extent, that, in 1838, there were in the Coventry trade, 3,504 plain engine looms, only 50 of which were in the rural weaving parishes, including Nuneaton, Bulkington, Bedworth, Chilverscoton, and Hartshill, as well as the adjoining parishes; 2,228 jacquard engine looms, of which 950 were in the rural parishes; and 7,480 single hand looms, all of which were in the rural parishes, except 129 in the city; making a total of 13,229 looms worked by hand, and nearly all employed. Between 17,000 and 18,000 persons, of whom between 6,000 and 7,000 were in the city and suburbs, and the remainder in the rural parishes, were engaged in the trade. In the city and suburban villages, the numbers employed were 3,222 plain engine, 1,182 jacquard, 123 single hand, in all 4,527 looms; besides 53 power, and 4 alabar looms. The total number of looms, in 1831, was 14,602, but only 5,062 were employed, of which 2,464 were in the city and suburbs. The total number in the city, in 1818, was 3,268, employing 4,973 hands. Thus the trade has constantly, in some degree, been on the increase; and during the year 1838, more goods were made than in any previous year since the commencement of the manufacture, but this partly arose from the increased production by engine looms, wherewith several breadths were made at once; since which the engine looms have rapidly increased through the whole district. The plain engine trade, the fancy engine, or jacquard trade, and the single hand trade, are the three great branches of the Coventry hand-loom weaving manufacture. The plain trade comprises the manufacture of plain satins, sarcenetts, gauzes, and pads, of all colours, and also of 'lovas,' which are chiefly gauze and satin, in stripes of mourning colours. The fancy trade consists in the manufacture of the same fabrics, with figures of various texture applied, when small, to ribbons of a considerable breadth, by a number of treadles in the single hand-loom, but more commonly by means of the jacquard machine attached to the engine looms. One class of fancy ribbons are of pomogeneous texture, but various colours, clouded, barred, or plaided; another consists of the chinas and china gauzes. The introduction of the engine-loom, and afterwards of the jacquard machine, having greatly accelerated the production of ribbons,—but which caused great dissatisfaction amongst the operative weavers, by leaving many destitute of work, and greatly reducing the value of weaving; from which the Coventry weavers were induced to petition parliament for a restriction of the seven years servitude, and for a regulative trades' police, or other magisterial jurisdiction over the trade for the regulation of wages; in point of fact, for an extension of the Spital-fields Act to them. This led to the appointment of a commission of inquiry, but which, contrary to the desire of the trade generally, led to the total repeal of that celebrated Act, in 1824; and to a repeal of the law of prohibition itself, which came fully into operation in 1829. The consequences arising from the admission of French and other foreign goods, have, at various times, led to an almost universal desire of the trade for the re-establishment of some prohibitory system, or other regulative mode of relief and advancement of the trade. The Commissioners, in their report on hand-loom weaving, observe, that "though great distress was felt for a brief period on the introduction of foreign silks, and the highest wear of ribbons is still supplied by France, yet the great body of the trade is now exempt from the immediate pressure of foreign competition;" and the trade which has not been so much depressed as outstripped, "has now met a rivalry much nearer home than St. Etienne," in the "home competition;" whereby the Coventry weavers have been kept in constant trepidation, and in the factory and steam power manufacture at Congleton, Leek, Derby, &c., and Coventry itself, where there are several steam-loom factories; and that, in fact, since the full encounter with French competition, in 1829, the trade, always subject to depressions, has gradually revived and extended in channels collateral with those in which French goods kept possession of the market. Since 1828, a great extension has taken place in the silk manufacture, the introduction of engine looms for ribbons, with steam-power looms throughout the trade, has greatly increased the production; and where science and mechanism can perform the greatest part of the labour that manufacture may extend,—on the other hand, where man must principally perform the labour, that manufacture, under our liberal policy, must decline. If this science and this liberal policy be really productive of good and of prosperity to the nation, certainly England must be in a most prosperous and happy condition; for our mechanical and scientific exertions, during the last 60 years, have been wonderful. Recent occurrences in Europe, and the dreadful distress which has for a considerable period laid prostrate the industry of man, causing the most alarming discontent in England, and which distress, on a careful investigation of the history of the last 30 years, has had only a few short intermissions. It certainly behoves the people calmly to consider whether Man, and the fully devising means for his profitable employment! or the encouraging of science, and the employment of steam-engine propelled machinery, should be the first object of the care of our legislature.

The situation of the town is peculiarly advantageous for trade, being central to the ports of London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Hull, and to the manufacturing districts of England, by means of the London and North Western Railway, which passes the north-west side of the city, and the Oxford and Coventry canals, which form a junction, a little to the north.

The markets, which are held in various parts of the town, Friday for corn, Cross cheaping, now a spacious area, enlarged by the removal of a middle range of old houses, by which it was divided, and in which was the ancient cross, one of the most beautiful in the kingdom, taken down in 1771; for cattle, in Bishop-street; for pigs, in Cook-street; and for butter, eggs, and poultry, in an area behind the mayor's parlour, where a market house has been erected.

Fairs; besides the great pleasure fair, commencing on the Friday in Trinity week, and continuing eight days, there are also two other cattle fairs, May 2nd, and November 2nd; there are also two cheese fairs, established a few years ago by the town council, held in April and September, and monthly cattle fairs. A statute for the hiring of servants has been recently instituted, and is held about the first Tuesday after Old Michaelmas day; this statute exists only by sufferance.

Races. Although the custom of annual races in Coventry park prevailed at a remote date, such races had for a long time sunk into disuse, till the year 1834, when they were resumed at Stoke, just at the east end of the city; but in 1849, a race course was formed at the west end of the city, between Radford village and Allesley road, and opened in March, in which month the races are held annually.

The great shew-fair takes place on the Friday after Corpus Christi day, and continues for eight days, on the first of which, the commemoration of Lady Godiva's procession is occasionally revived, by a representative obtained for that purpose; this ceremony has its origin in a tradition, that the citizens being greatly oppressed by the severe exactions imposed on them by Leofric, his countess undertook to intercede for their relief; but was apparently frustrated in her suit, by a promise of exception only, upon the condition of her riding naked through the city on horseback; it is further recorded in the traditionary legends of the city, that, having obtained her husband's permission, and trusting for concealment to the length of her hair, and to the discretion of the inhabitants, who were ordered, upon pain of death, to shut themselves up in their houses, she performed the task, and obtained for the city a charter of "freedom from servitude, evil customs, and exactions." The tradition also records that a tailor, who disobeyed the injunction, was instantly struck blind; and a figure, called Peeping Tom, carved in wood, and placed in a niche at the corner of a house, situate at the angle of Hertford and Smithford streets, is still preserved in memory of this event, which, whether real or fictitious, is closely interwoven with the history of the place. The city first received the elective franchise in the 26th of Edward I.; but there were partial intermissions until 31st of Henry VI., since which time it has regularly returned two members to parliament; the right of election is vested in the freemen not receiving alms, which freedom is gained by seven years servitude to one and the same trade within the city, of whom there are 3,388, and the £10. householders, which number about 625, making a total of 4,013 electors; the above number of freemen include all who reside within the parliamentary boundary, that is within seven miles of Coventry. Among the privileges enjoyed by the freemen, is that of depasturing cattle upon the "Lammas Lands," which are of great antiquity; and there can be no doubt that, at the time of their bestowal, they were of great benefit to the inhabitants. The Lammas and Michaelmas Lands are about 1,970 acres; the commons, about 300 acres. Custom and usage have, for a long time past, treated these lands as belonging, with a few exceptional cases, to the freemen alone. The Lammas right is that of turning on three head of cattle, from the 13th of August, or in the case of Michaelmas Lands, from Old Michaelmas-day, till Old Candlemas-day. The common right exists throughout the year. As the right of turning cattle on the lammas is, at the present day, of practical use to only about one-tenth part of the freemen, and gives rise to many abuses and much corruption, in what is called the "fathering of cattle," many efforts have been made, from time to time, to get this right commuted into some other form more likely to render service to the entire body of freemen, as well as to emancipate the land itself from a condition prejudicial to its cultivation, and injurious to the city, by presenting an obstacle to the progress of building. The disputes, on this subject, have given rise to fierce contentions and much bitterness, and have hitherto led to no real practical result, although in the year 1845 the matter had proceeded so far as the bringing of a bill before parliament for altering the lammas right, or exchanging it for an equivalent; the object never reached a consummation, and it still appears as distant as ever.

The Seniority Fund was established December 23rd, 1843, with sums derived from the sale of lammass land, taken at various times under acts of parliament, for making railways or turnpike roads. The income arising from this fund, is paid in sums of 6s. per week to the most aged freemen, who may claim the same, according to their seniority upon the corporation admission and enrolment book; such payment to be continued during their respective lives. This excellent resource now affords the weekly allowance above stated, to sixteen aged freemen.

The city received its first charter of incorporation from Edward III., in 1344; the first mayor chosen 1348; in 1384, Richard II. ordered the sword of state to be borne behind the mayor in civic processions, as a mark of disgrace, for his not having duly administered justice in the execution of his office, which order that monarch revoked in 1392. Under the charter of Edward III., confirmed in succeeding reigns, and extended in that of James the I., the government was vested in a mayor, recorder, two sheriffs a steward, (who must be a barrister), a coroner, two chamberlains, two wardens, ten aldermen, a superior council of thirty-one, and a second council, or grand inquest, of twenty-five members, assisted by a town-clerk, sword-bearer, mace-bearer, and subordinate officers, and remained so until the passing of the Corporation Reform Act, 9th September, 1835, (see Warwick, page 461), at which time the town was divided into five wards, viz., Gosford-street ward, White Friars ward, Earl-street ward, and Spon-street ward, each having six representatives, two being elected by the burgesses annually; consequently sitting for three years. There are also two aldermen for each ward, who hold their seats six years, and are chosen by the council, as is also the mayor.

The County Magistrates hold a Petty Session, at the Grand Jury Room in this City, every second and fourth Thursday in each month. Anstey Petty Sessions are held every Tuesday at the Fox Inn. Brinklow Petty Sessions held every Saturday, and Nuneaton every alternate Saturday. Knightlow Hundred Court, holden at the Dun Cow, Dunchurch, every third week:—Steward, W. Wilmot, Esq.; Bailiff at Coventry, William Bourne; ditto at Southam, William Reynolds; ditto at Rugby, Edward Tew. This is a Court for the recovery of Debts under 40s.

Courts of Assize and Quarter Sessions are held here. The County Magistrates meet the second and fourth Thursday in every month, in the Grand Jury Room, in the County Hall.

Police Office, Woman's Market.—Thomas Henry Prosser, superintendent; John Vice, inspector; John Parker and Thomas Coltman, sergeants; and twelve privates.

The County Hall, Bailey Lane, in which the Courts of Assize and Quarter Sessions are held, is a neat, modern building, faced with stone and ornamented with pillars of the Tuscan order, rising from a rustic basement, and supporting a handsome cornice in the centre of the front: adjoining is the gaoler's house, a neat brick building, and behind is the Gaol and Bridewell, which contains a neat chapel and 84 cells, one containing three and another six compartments, a hospital and second hospital, six separate day wards and airing yards for males: the female department consists of two cells for one each, two for two each, and two for four each, with two day-wards and yards where the washing and mending is done for the prisoners: there is also a tread-mill which is used for pumping water for the establishment, and grinding beans and oats for hire, and is worked by from 12 to 18 men; this is used as a place of confinement before trial, for punishment after, and for summary convictions by magistrates for this city and the Northern division of the county. Mr. James Stanley, the governor, who was appointed January 1849, has introduced the classification, the new dietary, and the prison uniform, which varies according to crime, and is attempting to establish work-rooms in which the prisoners are to be employed in their respective trades or callings: the greatest order, and, as far as is compatible, the greatest comfort and cleanliness prevails throughout the establishment, which consists of the following officers: Mr. James and Mrs. Ann Stanley, master and matron, Mr. George Mann, head turnkey, and four others: Rev. Richard Chapman, chaplain, W. Laxton, Esq., surgeon, with schoolmaster, clerk, and night watchman.

St. Mary's Hall, Bailey lane, appropriated to the larger meetings and civic entertainments of the corporation, is a beautiful and magnificent structure in the later style of English architecture: it was originally built by the master and wardens of St. Mary's Guild, in the fourteenth century, and subsequently enlarged and beautified for the use of the corporation: the exterior, with its richly decorated windows, and elaborately groined archway, has an imposing grandeur of effect: the interior, which is replete with the richest ornaments of the decorated style, comprises a splendid banquet hall, adorned with well-painted portraits of several of the sovereigns who have been entertained within its walls; the windows, of which the tracery is gracefully elegant, are ornamented with painted glass: at the upper end is a fine piece of tapestry, elegantly worked in compartments; and on the north side is a small recess, with a beautiful oriel window, above which the original carved roof is still entire: the council-chamber is fitted up in the ancient style, and retains amongst its ornaments, many relics of feudal grandeur.

The Drapers' Hall, Bailey Lane, is a neat building with stone front of the Grecian style of architecture, of chaste and pleasing design, opened November 8th, 1832: it is chiefly devoted to the meetings and festive assemblings of the Drapers' Company, who grant the use of the hall occasionally to parties, and for purposes of which they approve, having a strict regard to the preservation of the property from injury.

Ecclesiastically Coventry formerly formed jointly a diocese with Lichfield, of which the seat was fixed in this city from 1102 till 1188, when it was removed to Lichfield. By the plans of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners the diocese of Lichfield and Coventry has been reduced, and Coventry now forms an archdeaconry in the diocese of Worcester. Of the cathedral, once a sumptuous monastery, founded by Leofric, of which at the dissolution the revenue was £731. 19s. 5d., only the slightest vestiges of this once magnificent building are now discernable, in the mouldings of arches and outlines of windows and doors, worked in with the materials of a modern building, which has been erected on the site of one of its ancient towers, and some indistinct remains of what are supposed to have been the conventional buildings.

Holy Trinity Church is a venerable cruciform structure, in the later style of English architecture, supposed to have been erected at a somewhat later period than St. Michael's, but the precise date cannot be fixed with certainty. The living is a vicarage valued in the K. B. at £10. now £700. in the patronage of the Crown and incumbency of the Rev. John Howells. The tower is well-proportioned, rising from the intersection and surmounted by a handsome octagonal spire; height from the ground to the summit 237 feet; the proportions of the interior are massive and preserves throughout an unity of design; the oak roof is divided into pannels decorated with gilded mouldings; the pulpit is of stone and said to be one of the finest in the kingdom; is similarly ornamented, as is also the font. In the year 1831, in the course of cleaning the church, a very extraordinary fresco painting was discovered in the space above the springing of the arch under the tower, and extending to the roof. It is a curious representation of the "Last Judgment," and, as a relic, is interesting from its antiquity. There are but few monuments in this church, the most interesting one, perhaps, being that to Dr. Philemon Holland, on the south wall of the choir, who exercised the double profession of schoolmaster and physician in this city. Priding himself in having written a large book with one pen only, he thus commemorates the circumstance:

" With one sole pen, I wrote this book,
Made of a grey goose quill;
A pen it was, when I it took,
A pen I leave it still!"

In 1833 some extensive alterations were made at the east end of the church in the improvement of the altar-piece, and beautifying the communion table. At the same time, the window over the altar was filled up with stained glass, exhibiting various religious emblems, and the Royal Arms; in the vestry is a good half-length portrait of Dr. Hook, who formerly held the vicarage. This church is rich in estates bequeathed for its benefit, and which at the present time yield near £1000 per annum. There are also numerous charities left to be disposed of by the churchwardens and overseers in various modes, for the relief of the poor.

St. Michael's Church is a splendid structure, principally in the later style of English architecture, with a lofty tower of four stages, rising immediately from the ground, 136 feet 3 inches from the base to the battlements, containing ten bells, which is considered to be one of the finest peals in England: they were re-hung in 1794 upon a stupendous and most ingenious wooden frame-work rising from the ground, and altogether unconnected with the walls, in order to avoid damage thereto; it is pannelled and ornamented with niches, in which were finely sculptured figures, and surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire, the whole height being from the base of the tower 300 feet, exactly equal to the length of the church: it is questionable whether the entire kingdom supplies a finer architectural specimen, as a parish church; the interior is finely arranged, and derives great beauty from the loftiness of its elevation and the delicacy of the piers which support the roof; the clerestory windows of the nave form a noble range of large dimensions, and are ornamented with ancient stained glass; the chancel, which is of earlier date, was formerly a chapel erected in 1133, to which the nave and aisles were subsequently added; it deviates from a straight line, and forms an angle with the line of the nave, which sensibly offends the eye. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's books at £26. 15s. 5d. now £472., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. J. B. Collisson, B. A. In 1803, Mr. Richard Burgh, a native of Coventry, left by will £1000. for the purpose of new-pewing the church; the legacy was paid in 1817, since which time a considerable amount of interest has accumulated, and in 1849 the work was carried into effect, when the old galleries were taken away. In the vestry are some antique oak furnishings, and a good portrait of the late Rev. Robert Simpson, who held the vicarage for upwards of 52 years. There are a number of charities belonging to this church, chiefly consisting of sums bequeathed for distributing bread, bibles, and clothing to the poor.

St. John's Church, Fleet-street, formerly a chapel, erected in honour of the Saviour, which was constituted a parish by Act of Parliament in 1734: it was built upon ground given by Isabel, queen-mother of Edward III, and is an interesting structure, quadrangular in the lower part, and cruciform in the upper: from the centre rises a square embattled tower, with circular turrets at the angles, and supported on four finely clustered piers and arches of singular beauty; the interior is characterised by a simple grandeur of style which more than compensates for the want of elaborate embellishment. The living is a rectory not in charge, rated at £83. and endowed with £600. parliamentary grant, in the patronage of the Church Charity Trustees of this city, and incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Sheepshanks: this living is always annexed to the head-mastership of the Free Grammar School, and includes also a lectureship for the second master, the former taking two-thirds and the latter one-third of the income. In 1841, the beautiful west window was restored in its original character, and during 1846 the stone-work of the same window was renewed in corresponding good taste. There is a good organ at the north side of the chancel, built 1817, and near the west window is a finely-executed font, erected 1843. There are a few charitable bequests connected with this church, for distribution in bread and clothing to the poor.

Christ's Church, on the south-west side of the city, was erected by subscription and a grant from the parliamentary commissioners in 1832, the living a perpetual curacy value £179. in the patronage of the vicar of St. Michael's, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Truman Harris: this is a pleasing and well-built edifice, the south-west front is in the decorative style of architecture, having a fine arched doorway in the centre, with a small one on each side, and windows over them, the whole surmounted with pinnacles and a cross. This church has been added to the ancient steeple of the church of the monastery of the Grey Friars, the brethren of which were famous for the representation of religious dramas; it was originally founded in 1234, and the church built in 1358, for which Edward the Black Prince granted the friars permission to take stone from the quarries in his park at Cheylesmore; the monastery was destroyed at the disso-tion; all that remains of this establishment is the very beautiful steeple, consisting of an octagonal tower, with a pierced parapet, from which rises a lofty and finely-proportioned octagonal spire; the nave is 101 feet in length, with side aisles and gallery; contains 1500 sittings, 900 of which are free; it also contains a good organ, built by Banfield, of Birmingham.

St. Peter's Church, Hill field or New Town, is a neat brick edifice, with a tower at the west end; the living, a perpetual curacy, value £150., in the patronage of the vicar of Holy Trinity, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Thornhill, erected 1841, on ground given by Mr. Charles Weston, of Cōrley, by whom the first stone was laid, and made a district church in 1842. The building is 131 feet 6 inches long, and 56 feet 8 inches wide, and furnishes 559 appropriated sittings, and 695 free; the burial ground contains about three acres.

St. Thomas's Church. Summerland butts, is a very neat and substantial stone edifice, in the perpendicular style of architecture, erected 1849; the interior is fitted up in the cathedral style; the whole cost £3,300., raised by subscription, aided by £1,200. from the church building societies; will accommodate 600; upwards of 400 sittings are free. The stone was given by Lord Leigh, from a quarry in the immediate locality. The living, a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the crown, and the Bishop, alternately, and incumbency of the Rev. Stephen Cragg, M. A. The district comprises the whole of Spon end beyond the bridge, and all that part of the parish from thence, lying south-west of the river Sherbourne.

Surrogates, for granting marriage licenses for the Diocese of Worcester and Lichfield, Rev. J. B. Collisson, Rev. T. Sheepshanks, and Rev. C. Thornhill.

Roman Catholic Church, top of Hill-street. A Roman Catholic Chapel was erected 1807; its inadequacy to meet the wants of the congregation assembling there, and the inroads of decay, rendered its demolition necessary a few years ago, on the 29th May, 1843, (the Rev. Dr. Ullathorne then holding the priesthood); the first stone was laid of the present modern gothic structure, which, for the durability of materials, excellency of workmanship, and appropriateness of design, supplies conclusive evidence that the roman catholics of the present day are by no means behind their forefathers in the art and true conception of building churches; this church stands immediately adjoining the site of the old chapel, on a commanding eminence, dedicated to "The church of the most Holy Sacrament." It consists of nave, clerestory, north and south aisles, chancel, lady chapel, and sacristies; also a tower at the south-west corner, which is intended to be surmounted by a spire, rising, according to the design, 130 feet from the ground. The entire length of the church inside is 115 feet; its breadth, 50 feet. The interior finishing is highly beautiful, rich in ornament, and abounding in the impressive symbols of the Roman Catholic faith; the lady chapel is a perfect gem of the kind; in a small gallery at the north-west corner is a good organ, built by Messrs. Bevington, of London. The services are performed by members of the order of St. Benedict; and adjoining the church is a house or presbytery, constructed on the principal of a Benedictine Priory. Rev. Michael Sinnott, and Rev. J. A. Clarkson, priests.

There are ten dissenting places of worship in the town, viz., Wesleyan Methodists, Warwick lane, erected 1836.

Independents, West Orchard, erected 1821, Rev. John Jerard, and the Rev. Edward Hickman Delf, are the present ministers. Vicar lane, of which the Rev. John Sibree is minister; and Well-street, erected 1827; Rev. Nathaniel Rowton, minister Baptist, Cow lane, erected 1793, Rev. John Watts, is the present pastor.

Baptist, (General), White Frier lane; Rev. James Levitt, pastor.

Unitarian, Smithford-street, is a large brick building, erected 1701; Rev. — Gordon, minister.

Friends' Meeting House, Vicar lane.

Latter Day Saints, Spon street.

The Cemetery, half a mile S. E. from the town, on the old London road, containing 18 acres of land; the laying out of which was executed from a plan laid down by the well known horticulturist, Mr. Paxton, head gardener to his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, is one of the finest and most picturesque cemeteries in the kingdom; is skirted with tall elms, which form a fine natural ornament to its borders; the interior is tastefully laid out with walks and shrubs of various kinds; it is entered at the north end, and divided by a capacious serpentine walk; the south-west side, appropriated to the Church of England, and the north-east to the Dissenters; the portions are equal. The church is a neat structure, in the Norman style of architecture; the Dissenters' chapel, in the Grecian; the lodge and entrance, in the Italian. The cost of the whole was £12,000., and is the property of the corporation; opened December 19th, 1847; Mr. Richard Ashwell, secretary and superintendent.

The Free Grammar School was founded in the reign of Henry VIII., by John Hales Esq., who endowed it with lands, at that time, of the value of two hundred marks; but which now produce an annual income of £900., of which the head master receives two-thirds, and the second master, the remainder; it is under the management of the corporation, by whom the masters are appointed. There is a fellowship, at Catherine Hall, Cambridge, founded by Mr. Frankland, for persons educated at Coventry school. Electors, the Master and Fellows of Catherine Hall; "careful regard being had to the recommendation" of the Trustees of the Free Grammar School of this city.

There are two Fellowships at St. John's College, Oxford, founded by Sir Thomas White, for scholars from the city of Coventry; they are in the gift of the Trustees of the Free School, Coventry.

Also, Thomas Lane, of Coventry, in 1656, by will bequeathed certain property "for fitting poor scholars of Coventry," for the University, and towards their maintenance there. There are now under this bequest six exhibitions, tenable for seven years; value, £5. per annum for three years, and £56. per annum for the remaining four. It is intended to found additional exhibitions, as the funds admit of it. The school-room is the remaining part of a church which anciently belonged to the hospital of St. John, built in the reign of Henry II., the revenue of which, at the dissolution, was £83. 3s. 8d.; it is a spacious room, lighted with windows in the decorated style, with rich tracery, and fitted up with the ancient carved seats, removed from the choir of the church belonging to the monastery of the White Friars; the west end, taken down to widen the street, has been rebuilt in an appropriate style, and ornamented with two handsome turrets. Sir William Dugdale, the celebrated antiquary, and Archbishop Secker, received the rudiments of their education at this school. Rev. Thomas Sheepshanks, M. A., head master, Rev. William Drake, second master, and the Rev. James William Wright, writing master.

The Bablake Blue Coat School, occupying one side of the quadrangle of the Bablake hospital, was founded, in 1566, by Mr. Thomas Wheatley, ironmonger, and mayor of the city, in consequence of an accidental acquisition of wealth, by the delivery of barrels of cochineal and ingots of silver in mistake for steel gads, which he sent his agent to purchase in Spain. The original endowment, increased by subsequent benefactions, produces upwards of £900. per annum, and furnish the means for a good plain education to about 52 boys, children of the working classes of Coventry, who are admitted when near eleven years of age, and continue two years, or till the usual period of apprenticeship. They are supplied with the principal articles of clothing immediately on admission, and at the end of the first year, are taken into the house and wholly provided for, every attention being paid to secure them personal domestic comfort and salutary moral training. On their leaving school a premium of £4. is given to bind them apprenticed for seven years, to such trades as may be chosen for them by their parents or guardians. This school, which was formerly under the control of the corporation, is now under the management of the general charity trustees of Coventry; Mr. Henry Mander, master; Mr. Henry Mander, jun., second master.

The Blue Coat Girls Charity School, established about the commencement of the last century, stands on the site, and is connected with the remains of the west end of the cathedral, in Priory row; it was supported by voluntary contributions; but its funds have been increased by gifts and bequests, at various times, to the amount of upwards of £1,500. The charity is managed by trustees, consisting of the vicar and vestrymen of Trinity parish, and is for forty girls, children of the labouring classes, who are taught and partly clothed out of the funds of this charity. They are admitted at ten years of age, and remain from three to five years; during which period, they are taught to read, knit, and sew. The six oldest girls are taken into the house the last year, and instructed by the mistress in such duties as may fit them for becoming useful domestic servants; Sarah Gowing, mistress.

Bayley's Charity School, founded by the will of Mrs. Katherine Bayley, in 1723, by which she leaves £600.; the first rules and regulations were established 1733: this charity affords a good plain education for thirty-five boys, who are admitted at eleven years of age, and remain till they are fourteen, when they are apprenticed with a premium of £3. They receive a suit of clothes annually whilst at school, and attend regularly at St. Michael's church, of which parish the founder was an inhabitant. This charity has been augmented by legacies and donations; its income from real and funded property now amounts to nearly £160. per annum, besides the proceeds of a charity sermon annually at St. Michael's church. In 1845 a new and substantial school was erected down a yard in little Park-street, on land belonging to the estate; the expenditure is about £200. per year. Henry Fretton, master.

Baker, Billing, and Crow's Charity School, Cow Lane, was founded in 1690, by Mr. Samuel Baker, of London: its funds have been augmented by various benefactors and now realize about £500. per annum. The property is vested in seven trustees, the boys have each a suit of clothes annually; when bound apprentice a premium of £3. is given with each, the whole attend divine service on Sundays at the Unitarian chapel, Thomas Clarke, master.

Fairfax's Charity School, Spon street, originated in a donation of £100. made by Mr. Samuel Fairfax, in the year 1751: subsequent benefactions have raised its income to about £200. per year, besides the receipt of a charity sermon at St. Michael's church of at least £100.: from these resources forty poor boys are clothed and educated three years. The affairs of this school are managed by eight trustees, resident in St. John's parish. Thomas Bassett, master.

The School of Design, St. John's Bridges, established 1843, entirely from a strong sense entertained by many of the principal inhabitants, that to a city like this, whose interests depend so much upon the silk manufacture, such an institution was of paramount necessity, as a means of cultivating the taste of the youthful part of our artizan population, and instructing them in the art of design, in the hope that in due time its advantage would be felt in that intense rivalry which has so long prevailed between the British and French manufacturer, is aided by grants from government, and its rules and general management are subject to the supervision and inspection of the government school at Somerset House. Mr. Edward Augustus Gifford, master.

Southern and Craner's Charity School, Vicar Lane, established 1729 and 1731, by the wills of Bridget Southern and Francis Craner, both members of the society of friends, for the "education or bringing up of poor children called 'Quakers,' or others, being inhabitants of Coventry." The property is vested in trustees, and yields about £90. per annum, by which means thirty poor girls are clothed and educated for three years. Sarah Burbridge, mistress.

The British School, King-street, founded 1811, on the system and under the direction of the celebrated Joseph Lancaster. The present school is a neat brick building erected 1840, will accommodate 200, average 120. Cornelius Newcombe, master.

National School, (Central,) Union-street, for boys and girls of the archdeaconry of Coventry, erected 1826, will accommodate 200 boys and 96 girls; the bottom part is used for the master's residence. This school is supported entirely by the clergy and members of the church of England; the board of management consists of the Bishop of Worcester, the Archdeaconry of Coventry, the rural deans, and other clergy. Thomas and Sophia Band, master and mistress.

St. Peter's National School, Yardley-street, is a neat brick building with stone facings, erected 1844, by voluntary subscriptions, aided by a grant from the national society, will accommodate about 260. John Tansley, master, and L. Lewis, mistress.

Infant School, Central, Well-street, is a neat brick building, with a house adjoining for the master and mistress, erected 1832, will accommodate 120, average 100. John and Sarah Kinder, master and mistress.

Infant School, Grey Friars Lane, established 1848, supported by the vicar of St. Michael's, will accommodate 150. Elizabeth Smith, mistress.

Roman Catholic School, Hill-street.

Industrial Home, Leicester-street, established 1846, for twenty destitute females, supported by voluntary contributions and their own industry, under the management of twelve ladies. Mrs. Emma Holland, mistress.

Medical Institutions: in the year 1831, a prominent topic of discussion amongst the wealthier classes of Coventry, was that of establishing a dispensary, in order to meet the wants of the poor in time of sickness; and as considerable difference of opinion prevailed as to the principle upon which it was desirable such institutions should be founded, the result was the formation of two, respectively denominated, "The Self Supporting" and "The General Dispensary." As these descriptions imply, the first relied for its maintenance on the small weekly contributions of the working classes who might avail themselves of its advantages, aided by the subscriptions and donations of honorary members. The General Dispensary, on the other hand, was based on the principle of benevolence or charity alone for the support of its funds: both succeeded well, and, a few years ago, the Self-Supporting, or, as it is now called, "The Provident Dispensary," erected for itself premises at the bottom of St. Michael's church-yard, where its business is now conducted. The following statement is copied from the annual report published May last. "The total number of persons who have received assistance since its establishment in July 1831, is 29,561."

The receipts and disbursements of this institution, under the several items of account, is about £600. per annum. Treasurers, The Coventry Banking Company. Honorary Secretary, Mr. Richard Warner. Honorary Physician, Dr. Nankivell. Surgeons, Mr. Bicknell and Dr. Ogilvy. Dispenser, Mr Henry Southam.

Coventry and Warwickshire Hospital, Little Park-street, founded on the principle of gratuitous assistance to the poor, having, as might be expected, in the midst of a dense manufacturing population, found the claims upon its benevolence to increase, turned its attention to a wider sphere of action for augmenting its resources, and thereby extending its usefulness, and, by the perseverance of its original promoters, at length succeeded far beyond the most sanguine expectations that could have been cherished: the plan of founding a hospital, the advantages of which should be open to the county at large, was as warmly encouraged as the want of such an establishment in this neighbourhood in particular, was universally admitted; and, after a year or two of generous exertion, and an effectual attempt to unite the two dispensaries for the purpose, this worthy object was carried into effect. A building of considerable extent, with an enclosed garden, the whole occupying 1600 square yards of land, in a healthy situation close to the Coventry Park, was purchased and fitted up for the purpose, and for some years past the value of this important institution has been realized by thousands of objects in this city and in that part of the county contiguous hereto, whom misfortune, poverty, or accident had placed in need of the assistance which it provides. There is accommodation for a considerable number of in-door patients, and its doors are always open for the reception and treatment of such as may by sudden and unforeseen casualties, become the victims of physical suffering. The expenditure is upwards of £1200. per annum, which is provided for entirely by the voluntary subscriptions and donations of its friends in this city and the adjacent parts of the county. President, Right Hon. The Earl of Craven. Vice-Presidents, Right Hon. Viscount Hood, Right Hon. Lord Leigh, Right Hon. Edward Ellis, M.P., John Little, Esq., Sir J. E. E. Wilmot, Bart., W. S. Dugdale, Esq., M.P., W. Williams, Esq., M.P., and C. N. Newdegate, Esq. M.P. Physicians, Dr. H. Powell, Dr. E. Phillips, and Dr. E. Dewes. Surgeons, J. Bury, W. Laxon, and N. Troughton, House-surgeon. Honorary Secretaries, G. Old, Esq. and W. H. Seymour, Esq. Treasurers, The Coventry and Warwickshire Banking Company. Matron, Mrs Susan Boake.

Lying-in Charities, of which there are two, and both very liberally supported.

The Coventry Library Society, Hertford-street, was established 1791, is held in a neat building in Hertford-street, and contains 8,000 volumes; there is also a news-room in connection, the whole is under the management of a committee of twelve and a president. Joseph Hepworth, secretary and librarian.

The Mechanics' Institution, Hertford-street, established 1828, is now held in a convenient brick building with cemented front, which consists of a good lecture-room, comprising ground-floor and two galleries capable of holding 500 persons, a museum, library which contains about 1,500 volumes, and a convenient reading-room which is well-attended by the middle and working classes, is supplied with four daily and many weekly papers and the best periodicals. Mr. Thomas Walker, secretary, and Joseph Squiers, librarian.

The Religious and Useful Knowledge Society, Little Park-street, was formed 1835, chiefly by the exertions of the Rev. Dr. Hook, who was at that time vicar of Trinity parish; its objects are, in some respects, similar to those of the Mechanics' Institution, but it enjoins with greater strictness a regard to religious teaching in the books forming its library, and is avowedly conducted on the principles of the Church of England.

Banking Establishments, Messrs Little and Woodcock, High-street, The Coventry and Warwickshire Banking Company, High-street, and The Coventry Union Banking Company, Little Park-street, High-street.

Savings' Bank, Hertford street, established 1825; the deposits during the first year amounted to £1,411. 7s. 8d.; the last report (1849,) states the sum of £68,696. 5s. to be deposited, and the number of accounts open 3,290, besides 16 charitable societies, and 107 friendly societies. Hugh Gaskell, Esq., treasurer; and Mr. Luke Dresser, actuary. The Bank is open every Monday from 12 to 2, on Fridays from 2 to 3, and on Saturday evenings, for receiving deposits, from 6 to 7.

The Principal Inns are the King's Head, Smithford street and Hertford street; the Craven Arms, High street; and the Castle, Market place.

Newspapers, of which there are two, the "Standard," (Conservative,) established 1741; and the "Herald and Observer," (Liberal,) 1808. They are both published on Friday, and each circulates about the same number.

The Barracks, Smithford street, is a good stone building, erected 1793, on the site of the once famous "Bull Inn;" the entrance being through an arched gateway, over which are the royal arms; passing onward through a long avenue of stables, a fine spacious yard opens to the view, around which are the usual offices and buildings; this establishment affords good quarters to cavalry, is conveniently and healthily situated; Captain Samuel Chambers, barrack master.

The Post Office, Smithford street, opposite the barracks, is a good, substantial, and convenient building; the business of several villages and hamlets in the immediate vicinity is also transacted here. The letter box is closed at 10 p.m., but letters and papers may be posted at the window box till 11, by one extra stamp being affixed; there are two receiving houses, one at the bottom of Much Park street, and the other in Hill field. Mr. Timothy Peters Glennan, post-master.

Stamp Office, Grey Friar's lane, open from 9 till 5; Mr. A. N. Rollason, sub-distributor.

Inland Revenue Office, Smithford street, Thomas Rayner, Esq., collector; Robert Watson, supervisor; Richard Tindall, chief clerk; and four officers.

The Theatre, is near the Post Office and Barracks, but hidden from public view, up a yard on the south side of Smithford street; it was erected by the late Sir Skears Rew, a member of the corporation, and opened for public performance Easter Monday, 1819. The "Season here is from about Christmas till Easter.

The Parkgate Concert Room, top of Little Park street, opened July 22nd, 1848, by Mr. John Judd, the spirited proprietor, who, for the diversion of his patrons, employs four first-rate vocalists and a pianist; the room is large, and will accommodate 350, open every evening.

The Gas Works, Naul's Mill lane, on the north-west side of the town, erected 1821, by a number of private gentlemen, but before completion, an act of parliament was obtained, and the whole was transferred to a company. The works have been of late years much enlarged, the street mains extended, and the old oil lamps quite superseded. The works are now held on lease by Messrs. Robinson Brothers.

The Waterworks; this important undertaking was commenced in the early part of 1846, and completed towards the close of 1847, according to a plan prepared by Mr. Hawksley, engineer; the site of these works is at the top of Spon street, in a field near the river, a spot where a confluence of springs presented signal advantages for such a purpose; there is also an ample reservoir on an elevated piece of land on the Radford road, about half a mile north from the town. The engine is in the style of Boulton and Watt's rotation condensing engine, and is 40 horse power. The bore of the mains varies in diameter from 2½ to 14 inches, the entire length of which is nearly 14 miles. These works are the property of the corporation, and cost about £22,000.

Railways, London and North-western, opened April 9th, 1838; the station on the Warwick road, half a mile south from the town, is neat, clean, and commodious. The goods station is on the opposite side of the same road. There is a branch line to Leamington, and one to Nuneaton is now in progress.

The Coventry Canal, top of Bishop-street, constructed under the provisions of an Act of Parliament obtained 1768; it is upwards of 32 miles long, terminating at Fradley-heath, and through the medium of various other canals, communicates with London, Liverpool, Manchester, and various other places. The office is a good building facing down Bishop-street. Henry Warner, Esq., agent.

County Court, (The New), Little Park-street, Coventry district, Coventry, Foleshill, Anstey, Exhall, Kersley, Stoke, Wyken, Sowe, Binley, Shilton, Willenhall, and Withybrooke.

Knave's Post is the figure of a man placed in a niche in the wall on the west side of Much Park-street; the origin of which, was parties committing depredations, were tied to a cart's tail, and whipped from the mayor's parlour, in Cross Cheapings, to this figure. The last punished was about twenty years ago.

Union Workhouse, top of Much Park-street, is a fine remnant of the Carmelite Monastery, with portions added, to meet the purpose it is at present used for; this was formerly called the house of industry, and came under the poor law commissioners, 1841; will accommodate 400, average 285, and is only for this city; Mr. William Witheycombe Harris, and Mrs. Sophia Harris, master and matron; Thomas Hine, clerk, Thomas Dewes, Esq., superintendent registrar; Charles Holt, relieving officer and registrar of births and deaths; John Weston, registrar of marriages. Medical Officers, 1st district, Mr. Ashton Barton; 2nd, Mr. Frederick William Barton; 3rd, Mr. Edward Dewes, M.D. House Surgeon, Mr. Edward Bicknell; Abijah Piers, Esq., chairman. This Union is governed by eighteen directors, who hold office two years, half of whom retire annually, no one being liable to re-election under five years.

Radford, a considerable village and hamlet, in the parish of St. Michael, 1 mile N., inhabited principally by plush weavers. Whitmore Park, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. N. by E., contains a few scattered farms; and the seat of Edward Phillips, Esq., is in the hamlet of Radford.

Whitley, a hamlet in the parish of St. Michael, 1 mile S. E., contains Whitley Abbey, and a few scattered houses. Whitley Abbey, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. E., is a large neat mansion, supposed to have been erected in the thirteenth century, in the early English style of architecture; a portion was rebuilt about twenty years ago; the park contains 250 acres, and is the property of the Right Hon. Lord Hood, and the residence of his grandmother, the Hon. Mrs. Caroline Hood.

Claudon, a hamlet, and anciently a chapelry, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from Coventry, was originally a member of that place, and is now included in the parish of St. Michael. This was one of the possessions of the Earls of Chester, and in the time of Richard II., was held by Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, who, on occasion of the intended combat on Gosford Green, between him and the Duke of Hereford, issued from his castellated mansion here, to meet his antagonist. In the 10th of Henry VII., it was owned by Maurice Berkley, whose descendants resided here frequently; but George, Lord Berkley, sold the manor in the 7th of Charles I.; and soon after, it came into the possession of Thomas, Lord Clifford, to whose descendants it has been transmitted. A massive fragment of the original mansion remains, and considerable traces of the moat.

Willenhall, an ancient member of Coventry, from which it is distant about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. is a hamlet in the parish of Holy Trinity, and formed a part of the munificent donation by Earl Leofric, to the priory of Coventry. At the dissolution it was granted by the crown to Sir Richard Lee, knight; but was almost immediately alienated with the tithes to John Hales, whose descendants retained possession of it until the commencement of the 18th century, when Sir Edward Hales sold the manor to the Duke of Montague. The Earl of Craven is the sole owner and lord of the manor.

Directory, George Blundell, blacksmith; John Blundell, tailor; William Cluley, farm bailiff; John Green, brickmaker; Mr. Henry Houghton, Willenhall House; Rev. John Jacques Wedge, curate of Ryton-upon-Dunsmore; and Samuel Buckley, Sarah Hanson, The Hall, and William Smith, farmers.

1043.—About this period Leofric, Earl of Mercia, and his Countess Godiva, founded the Great Monastery in Coventry.

1057.—Leofric, Earl of Mercia, died. The Countess Godiva died some years afterwards, and both of them were buried in the church porch, belonging to the Monastery which they had founded.

In 1218 the Charter for a yearly fair to continue eight days was granted by Henry 3rd.

In 1344, by virtue of letters patent, granted by King Edward the 3rd, a Municipal Corporation, consisting of Mayor and Bailiffs, was constituted in Coventry. The name of the first Mayor was John Ward.

Sept., 1397.—In the reign of Richard 2nd, the preliminaries and “note of preparation” took place for a single combat, to be fought on Gosford Green, between the Duke of Hereford (afterwards Henry 4th) and the Duke of Norfolk (Thomas Mowbray). The former, it was said, betrayed a private conversation, in which Mowbray is represented to have used several expressions of a treasonable nature. The accusation was denied, and Mowbray demanded the privilege of acquitting himself by single combat. Each of the Dukes, agreeably to the laws of chivalry, threw down his glove, which was taken up and sealed before the King (a circumstance which was supposed to prevent all future denial of the challenge.) The King appointed Coventry for the place of combat, and caused a vast and magnificent theatre to be erected for that purpose on Gosford Green. The rival Dukes made every requisite preparation, and particularly in the essential article of armour which in those days was uncommonly splendid and expensive, usually inlaid with gold and silver, and ornamented with most elegant figures and devices. The combatants placed their reliance totally on the skill of the armourer, and cleared themselves by oath from holding any commerce with incantations, or rendering their armour or bodies invulnerable by any charm. Be their cause ever so bad, they must determine to die like good christians, and they therefore disavowed all dependence on the power of Satan, and supplicated the prayers of all pious spectators :—

“Add proof unto my armour with thy prayers,
And with thy blessings steel my lance’s point.”

Henry, Duke of Hereford, advanced from Baginton Castle towards the place appointed, upon his white courser, barded with blue and green velvet, beautifully embroidered with swans and antelopes, and armed at all points. Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, set out from Caludon Castle, on a horse barded with crimson velvet, and embroidered with lions of silver and mulberry leaves (alluding to the name Mowbray—mulberry.)

“At the time appointed, the King came to Coventry,” says Hollinshead, “in great arraie, accompanied with the lords and gentlemen of their linages. The Duke of Hereford armed himself in his tent, that was set up neere to the lists; and the Duke of Norfolk put on his armour betwixt the gate and the barrier of the town, in a beautiful house, having a fair perclois of wood towards the gate, that none might see what was doone within the house.

“The Duke of Aumarle that daie being High Constable of England, and the Duke of Surrie, Marshall, placed themselves betwixt them, well armed and appointed. About the hour of prime the Duke of Hereford came to the barriers of the lists on a white Courser. The constable and marshall came and demanded of him what he was? He answered, ‘I am Henrie of Lancaster, Duke of Hereford, which am come hither to doo mine endeavour against Thomas Mowbraie, Duke of Norfolk, as a traitor.’ Then incontinentlie he sware upon the Holie Evangelists, that his quarrell was true and just. Then putting down his vizor, he descended from his horse, and, with speare in hand, set him down in a chaire of green velvet at the end of the lists, and there reposed himselfe, abiding the coming of his adversarie.

“Soone after him, entered into the field, with great triumph, King Richard, accompanied with all the peeres of the realme, and above ten thousand men in armour, least some fraie or tumult might rise amongst his nobles.

“The Duke of Norfolk hovered on horseback at the entrance of the lists; and when he had made his oath before the constable that his quarrell was just, he entered the field manfullie, saieing aloud, ‘God aid him that hath the right;’ and then he departed from his horse and sate himself downe in his chaire, which was of crimson velvet. The Lord

Marshall viewed their speares, to see that they were of equal length. Then the Herald proclaimed that the traverses and chaires should be removed, commanding them to mount on horsebacke and addresse themselves to the battell and combat.

"The Duke of Hereford was quicklie horsed, and closed his bavie, and cast his speare into the rest; and when the trumpet sounded, set forward couragiously towards his opponent six or seven pases. The Duke of Norfolk was not fullie set forward, when the King cast down his warder, and the Heralds cried 'Ho, ho.' Then the King caused their speares to be taken from them, and commanded them to repaire againe to their chairs, where they remained two long houres, while the King and his counsell deliberatlie consulted what order was best to be had in so weightie a cause."

The result of this deliberation was to prohibit the combat, together with a sentence against the Duke of Hereford to depart the realm, and not to return again for the term of ten years; and that the Duke of Norfolk, because he had sown sedition, should depart the realm for life. The term of Hereford's banishment was subsequently mitigated to six years.

In 1404 Henry 4th held a Parliament in the great chamber of the Priory, in this City, at which no lawyer was suffered to be present. It was styled Parliamentum Indocorum, from its inveteracy to the clergy; whence it was also called the Laymen's Parliament.

In 1771 Spon Gate was taken down. In the same year Grey Friar's Spire was repaired, and a gilt ball and vane placed on its summit.

In March, 1772, one Mary Cloes, of Gosford-street, nearly opposite New-court, was burnt to death by spontaneous combustion. She lived in a room with a brick floor, and had been confined to her bed some time by illness, caused by intemperance. The bed on which she lay had but one curtain, and stood next the window, the fire place being on the opposite side of the room. The evening before the accident, she was left with only two bits of coal in the grate and a rushlight on a chair at the head of her bed. Smoke being seen to issue from her door the next morning, the door was burst open; and her remains lay on the floor, almost reduced to a cinder, while the furniture and bed clothes were scarcely damaged. The deceased was so excessively addicted to dram-drinking, that she occasionally drank a quart of rum, or of aniseed-water, daily; and thus filling her veins with spirits, she became inflammable as a lamp. The belief is, that she rolled out of bed, and took fire from the candle, and thus was totally burnt, her thighs and one leg excepted; and nothing was left but her bones, which were in a complete state of calcination.

On the night of November 2nd, in the same year, Charles Pinchbeck, keeper of the Stoke toll-gate, near Binley, was robbed and murdered in his own house by two burglars named Farn and Howe.

In the same year the Gaol of this City, being in a decayed state and constructed upon a plan too confined, was re-built upon an enlarged scale.

On the 20th of May, 1773, the river Sherborne overflowed, and laid part of the city nearly seven feet under water.

On the 24th of November, the same year, Mr. Siddons, the tragedian, was married to Miss Kemble at St. Michael's Church.

In 1774 the eight bells of St. Michael's Church were re-cast into ten, by Pack and Chapman, and hung by R. Turner, of London. the weight amounted to 6 tons, 18 cwt. 2 qrs. 11 lbs.

In 1779 a new set of chimes were placed in St. Michael's steeple, made by Worton, of Birmingham, at an expense of £300.

In 1780 Messrs. Noxon and Butler, the two Sheriffs of this City, were sent to Newgate, and suffered a short imprisonment, for misconduct at the election of Members of Parliament. The same year took place the "Bludgeon Fight" between the rival electioneering parties, in front of the booth in Cross-cheaping. It was at this election that a number of unqualified persons were admitted to the freedom by the Corporation, on condition of voting for the Corporation candidates. These surreptitious voters were called "Mushroom Freemen."

In October, 1781, Grey Friar's Gate was taken down.

In 1783 a double row of houses, at the south-west angle of St. Michael's Churchyard was taken down.

In 1785 the County Hall was built.

In the same year Sunday Schools were formed in Coventry. The first in connexion with a place of worship was that established at West-orchard Chapel, of which the Rev. George Burder was then minister. This was followed almost immediately by one at St. Michael's Church. The members of the Church of England and the Dissenters were, at that period, united in Coventry in the promotion of Sunday Schools.

In 1786 the east end of Trinity Church was re-built. The same year St. Michael's Church was broken into, and the Communion-plate and other articles stolen from the vestry.

In 1787 St. Michael's Churchyard was enlarged opposite the County Hall.

In 1797 an association of the inhabitants of this City was formed into two troops of cavalry and three companies of infantry.

In February, 1798, a soup institution was first established in Coventry.—In the same year this City and neighbourhood subscribed several thousand pounds in aid of Government, to prosecute the war.

In September, 1800, food riots took place in Coventry in consequence of the dearness of provisions. The disturbance was quelled by the military, with the magistrates and the "Coventry Volunteers."

In 1801 the Act of Parliament for uniting the Parishes for the purpose of providing for the poor was passed.

By the census taken the same year, Coventry was reported to contain 2930 houses, and 16,049 inhabitants. The county of the City 5,547 inhabitants.

On September 3, 1802, Lord Nelson, accompanied by Sir William and Lady Hamilton and other friends, arrived in this City, and alighting at the King's Head Inn, met with the hearty acclamations of the inhabitants. The Mayor and Corporation waited on the gallant hero, who gave them a polite reception.

In January, 1805, a company of volunteers was raised in this City, to join the First Regiment of Warwickshire Volunteer Infantry.

In 1807 the bells in St. Michael's steeple were re-hung, on an improved plan, upon the framework erected within the tower in 1794. The tenor weighing upwards of 32 cwt., was re-cast by Mr. Briant, of Hertford.

On the 18th of September, 1807, The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Sussex passed through this City, on their route from Ragley, the seat of the Marquis of Hertford, to Combe Abbey, the seat of the Earl of Craven. Here they were visited a few days afterwards by a deputation from the Corporation of Coventry, presenting a "loyal and dutiful address," to which a gracious answer was given and the deputation, consisting of the Mayor, (Basil Goode, Esq.,) with four Aldermen and the Town Clerk, were regaled with a sumptuous repast. The Prince gave a donation of 100 guineas, and the Duke a donation of 40 guineas, to be distributed by the Corporation, and the same was given to four public charities in the proportion of 35 guineas to each.

In the same year a second volunteer company was raised in this City, to join the First Regiment of Warwickshire Volunteer Infantry.

On the 24th of November, 1808, Louis the 18th of France and his suite passed through this city.

In 1809 the two companies of Coventry Volunteers, with their Regiment, entered into the First Regiment of Warwickshire Local Militia.

On the 25th of October, 1809 a general festival took place in this City in celebration of the jubilee, or fiftieth anniversary of the accession of George the 3rd. A public subscription, amounting to £756. 5s., was raised and distributed to families, comprising 11,000 individuals, in allowances of bread, meat, and ale. The debtors in the gaol were released; the criminal prisoners were supplied with roast Beef and 5s. each. The Bablake Boys had roast beef, plum-pudding, and 6d. each. The old women at Ford's, and the old men at Bablake, Hospitals, had 2s. each; and a like sum was given to the Blue Coat Girls. The poor at the House of Industry were also suitably entertained by the liberality of Lord Grey and the officers of the 4th Warwickshire Regiment of Local Militia; and a bountiful supply of good fare was given to the soldiers of the 14th Light Dragoons, head quarters of which regiment then lay in the Coventry Barracks. A great dinner of the Corporation took place at St. Mary's Hall. Sheep roasting was general, and in the evening a grand display of Fireworks and bonfires was made in Cross-cheaping and other parts of the town.

In 1812 an Act of Parliament was obtained "for improving the public roads in and through the City of Coventry," and authorizing toll gates to be erected at its different extremities to meet the expense. Under this Act Hertford-street was formed, having been commenced immediately on the passing of the Act, previous to which time all the coaching and carriage traffic in the direction of Warwick was carried on through the narrow and dangerous avenue, Grey Friar's-lane.

1815. This year the Rev. J. Davis, accompanied by the parish officers and others, "walked the bounds" of the Holy Trinity parish, on his induction to the vicarage. Mr. Davis had officiated in the same Church from the year 1811.

In the same year (1815) the Prince Regent (late George the Fourth), visited Combe Abbey, the seat of Earl Graven, on which occasion the Mayor, and a deputation from the Corporation of Coventry, waited on his Royal Highness with a loyal and dutiful address. The Prince Regent, in return, conferred the honour of knighthood upon the Mayor, Mr. Skears Rew.

In 1816 the Chantry Orchard (now Chantry Place) began to be built upon. The foundations of the first eight houses were laid by Mr. A. Sprigg, on the 8th of May, and by the Midsummer following they were inhabited. The Chantry Orchard now contains above 600 inhabitants.

This year 27 feet of St. Michael's Church spire was taken down and rebuilt.

1817. On the 27th February this year, Thomas Lawson, butcher, was killed in his bed, by the falling of his house, in the Great Butcher-row.

In April, Charles Sanders was executed at Warwick, for the murder of an old man named Rogers, at Keresley.

At the Great Fair, in the month of June this year, a bear was shot on Grey Friar's-green, by order of the Magistrates, it having been previously shaved and tortured by some show-people, in order to practice an imposition on the public, by exhibiting it under the name of the "Polo Savage."

1818. In the month of August the weathercock of St. Michael's Church was regilt and replaced.

In the month of September this year, William Law was killed by a man named Jackson, of Foleshill, in a quarrel on the Warwick-road, near Coventry, when returning from Kenilworth Statutes.

1819. 27th October, Prince Leopold (now King of the Belgians), passed through Coventry, and was presented with the freedom of the City.

1820. This year the west side of "Broad-gate," a short narrow street, but a great thoroughfare and seat of trade, was pulled down, together with several houses on the north side of Smithford-street, and the whole thrown open, making a direct communication into Hertford-street, and thence to the Warwick turnpike road. In excavating the foundations of the site of the old Broad-gate, the cellaring exhibited some fine specimens of massive stone arches, remains of the Grey Friars' Monastery on the precincts of the ancient manor of Cheylesmore.

"Union-street" and "White Friars'-street" were built the same year.

1821. April 18, Edward Bradshaw was executed on Whitley Common, for burglary at the Punch Bowl public house, Spon-end, and cutting and wounding Mr. Lines, the landlord.

Moore and Butcher were executed after the Lammas assizes, the same year, on Whitley Common, for burglary and attempt to murder, at Mr Owen's farm, Longford.

The first public Gas-works were this year erected in Coventry.

1828. This year the fields lying between Swanswell-pool and primrose hill began to be converted into building land. The first house erected in Hill Field, or, as it is now called, "New Town," is situate in King William-street, a row of houses adjoining the field, in Harnal-lane, having been reared a short time before. There are now about 2000 inhabitants in this district.

1829. The ball and fan of Grey Friars' or Christ Church spire was taken down and re-gilt. The erection of the Church was commenced in this year.

1830. May 31, Mr. Green ascended from Coventry in his balloon.

At Coventry Fair, June 18, Mr. Green again rose in his balloon from Grey Friars' Green, skimmed over the tops of the houses for a short distance, and came in contact with a chimney near Gosford-bridge, when he alighted.

In the month of November the same year, a new conductor was affixed to St. Michael's steeple from the summit to the base, on which occasion the weathercock was temporarily taken down.

1831. August 11th, Mary Ann Higgins was executed on Whitley Common for murdering her uncle by means of poison, an old man of the same name, residing in Spon street.

The same year the old Bridewell, near Bablake church, was taken down, and the establishment consolidated with the gaol.

On the 7th of November this year, a meeting of ribbon weavers was held in the morning on the subject of wages, and in the course of collecting a meeting for the evening, a party entered the factory of Josiah Beck, down a yard in New-buildings, where the machinery was worked by steam power, and set fire thereto. Several persons were apprehended and tried for the offence, two of whom, named Sparkes and Burbery, were condemned to death, but their sentences were afterwards commuted to transportation for life. The factory destroyed as above stated was the first steam power establishment in the silk trade introduced into Coventry.

In 1835 the Municipal Corporations Act was passed, and came into effect January 1st, 1836: on the 7th of January the Insignia of Office and Civic Regalia were transferred by George Eld, Esq., the last Mayor under the old system, to Henry Cadwallader Adams, Esq., the first Mayor under the new system in Coventry.

1839. On the 1st of November this year Adelaide Queen Dawager passed through Coventry on her way from Gopsal Hall, the seat of Earl Howe, to Warwick Castle. "The Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses," forming the Corporation of Coventry, assembled on this occasion, and proceeding to the Boundary of the County of the City on the Leicester-road, met her Majesty there, and accompanied her in procession to the limit of the Coventry jurisdiction on the Warwick side.

In 1842 the New Boundary Act was passed, putting an end to the ancient jurisdiction of Coventry, and assigning a new Boundary to the City.

In 1844 the Waterworks, the Cemetery, and the Coventry Improvement Acts were passed.

In 1846 the large Nursery Ground at Spon-end was laid out for building purposes; and in 1847 the first houses were erected.

In 1849, August 9th, Mary Ball was hanged in front of the gaol for poisoning her husband at Nuneaton

EMINENT MEN, NATIVES OF COVENTRY.

Coventry has given birth to several persons of eminence in days gone by.

VINCENT of Coventry, who lived in the early part of the 13th century. was distinguished as being the first of the Franciscans who applied himself to academical studies. He was brought up at Cambridge, where he became a public professor, wrote an exposition of the mass, and other theological works.

WILLIAM MAKLESFIELD was a native of Coventry. He was a celebrated scholar in his day, and was general of the order of Dominicans.

JOHN BIRD was educated as a Carmelite at Oxford, and subsequently became head and last provincial of his order. His obsequiousness to Henry the 8th, by preaching against the Pope's primacy, obtained for him in succession the bishoprics of Bangor and Chester; but yielding further to the pursuit of personal interest and aggrandisement, he again became an instrument of the papacy in the reign of Queen Mary.

JOHN GRANT was a native of Coventry, whom it is better to describe as notorious rather than celebrated. He was executed in London in 1606 as a conspirator, after having been tried for stealing horses out of the stables of several gentlemen in this neighbourhood, for the purpose of carrying off the Princess Elizabeth, when on a visit to Lord Harrington's, at Coombe Abbey.

HUMPHREY WANLEY, the son of Nathaniel Wanley, Vicar of Trinity Church, and born about 1672, was distinguished as a scholar and antiquary, though in his youth he had been put to a mechanical trade. He was sent to St. Edmund's Hall, Oxford, and afterwards appointed librarian to the Earl of Oxford. At the desire of Dr. Hicks he made a tour of England in search of Anglo-Saxon MSS., of which he prepared a catalogue.

JOHN TIPPER, the original publisher of the Ladies' Diary, which commenced in 1704, was also a native of Coventry, and master of the Bablake school.

CHARITIES.—Free Grammar School. John Hales, Esq., of the city of London, by deed, 17th December, 1572, granted and confirmed to Thomas Docura, and Bartholomew Hales, and their heirs, the site of the house and church, lately the hospital of St. John, Baptist, in the city of Coventry, with all the houses, lands, and appurtenances within the precincts of the said hospital in Coventry; and all houses and gardens within the said city, which were formerly part of the possessions of the late monastery, or cathedral church of Coventry, and the messuages, lands, and appurtenances, which were lately part of the possessions of the late monastery of Kenilworth, and all his mills, within the said city and suburbs, except the priory mill, which, with the cathedral church, called the priory, and all the estates thereto belonging, was secured to the said John Hales, Esq., to the intent that they should make a good and sufficient estate in the law of the premises to the mayor, bailiff, and commonalty of Coventry, and their successors, for the support of a free grammar school in the said city, and of one master for teaching scholars in the said school, and for other necessary matters relating to the same John Hales, Esq., who had founded and managed the school during his lifetime, under letters patent of King Henry VIII., dated at Portsmouth, 23rd July, 37 of his reign. After his decease the above deed was found to be invalid, and an act of parliament, passed in the 23rd year of Queen Elizabeth, for perfecting the above endowment to the free grammar school of Coventry. The property belonging to this school, in 1743, gave an income of £155. 14s. 8d.; and in 1832, of £890. 4s. 5d. In 1759, Rev. Edward Jackson, the head master of this school, instituted proceedings against the corporation, in the Court of Chancery, for a discovery of the state and condition of the school estate, &c. By an act of parliament, passed in the year 1734, reciting that the corporation were owners of the church of Bablake, by virtue of letters patent of Edward VI., it was enacted, that the said church should, from the 23rd June, 1734, be a parish, by the name of the Church of St. John Baptist, in the city of Coventry; and that there should be a rector and lecturer in the said church; the rector to perform divine service and preach in the morning, and the lecturer in the afternoon, on the Lord's day; and assist the rector in all holy offices of the church, and that the revenue of the head master and usher of the school might be improved, and as a compensation for any misapplication of the school estates, the master of the school should be the rector, and the usher, the lecturer. The income of the rector, is stated to average £130 per annum, and that of the lecturer, about £60. The clear surplus of the school estate, after the payment of a singing master, the repairs necessary, and the baird for collecting rents, &c., is paid two-thirds to the head master, and one third to the usher. But by an order of the council house, in 1832, the bailiff is required also to retain £60.

per annum, to form a fund for repairs. The school is open to all free inhabitants within the city, and the inner liberties thereof, and to none other, they paying 12s. 10d. admission, two parts to the master, and one part to the usher. The head master's residence is an old mansion, with a meadow and garden adjoining; and formerly the master had from 20 to 30 boarders, and as many in the day school. For some time previous to the death of the late master, the school was the subject of complaint, in a great measure occasioned by his great age. The election of a successor was appointed to be 11th of February, 1834.

The Library, attached to the school, was founded in 1602, and consisted of works presented by persons who had been educated at the school, or by the gentry of the city and neighbourhood. An inspection and catalogue was taken by a committee of the corporation, in January, 1831; when it was evident, not the slightest pains had been taken for their preservation; many were missing, and the whole in a state of dampness and decay.

Simon Stone, by will, 1614, directed his trustees to sell the manor of Walburton, in the county of Sussex, and with part of the money arising from the sale, to purchase a rent charge of £3. 6s. 8d., to them and their heirs; which he directed them to pay to Samuel Stoughton, so long as he should continue a student in Oxford; and afterwards for the maintenance of a poor scholar of the free grammar school of Coventry; and he gave his Calepiore's Dictionary for the use of the scholars at the free school. The corporation received £50. from this gift, and secured a rent charge of £3. 6s. 8d., payable out of Prior's Orchard, for the performance of Stone's will, and which, though long suspended, they are willing (1832) to resume to proper objects.

Thomas Lane, by will, 1656, gave all sums, due to him by bonds and bills, amounting to £1,100., or thereabouts, should be laid out in lands by his executors; the yearly rents, together with all his feefarm rents, not disposed of, should be bestowed for the fitting poor scholars for the university, and their maintenance there, during the space of $7\frac{1}{2}$ years, and no longer; and for the relief of ministers' widows, both to be of the county of Warwick, and of the city, and county of the city, of Coventry, viz., three parts for the poor scholars, and one part for the poor widows. He appointed the mayor and the steward of the city of Coventry, and the two ministers, and the lecturer, for the time being, for ever, overseers and trustees of that, his gift, &c. The property now consists of Bradnock's mill farm, and Bradnock's marsh farm, in the manor of Balsall, and parish of Berkeswell; the former containing 34a. 1r. 26p. of land, with a mill and house, &c., on the river Blythe, let for the yearly rent of £124.; and the latter, 63a. 0r. 22p., with the house, let for the yearly rent of £81. These farms are united by an allotment of 8a. 1r. 3p., made on an inclosure of commons, about fifty years ago; and 1a. 3r. 6p. of this land has been sold for £420. to the Birmingham Railway Company. A chief rent of £1. 8s. 4½d. is paid out of the premises to the governors of the Temple, Balsall charity. From the great increase in the income of this charity, the following payments are now made:—Two clergymen's widows, £15. per annum each; and that there shall be four exhibitions of £5. per annum each, for scholars, during the last three years of their time at school; to be increased to about £45. per annum each, for the first four years of their time at college. No exhibitioner to receive the benefit of the charity for more than seven years.

The Rev. Samuel Frankland, master of this school, by will, 1691, left to the master and fellows of Catharine Hall, Cambridge, certain property for the maintenance of a fellow in the said Hall, to be sent out of the Coventry free school, to be called the Frankland Fellowship. The election to be in the said master and fellows.

Sir Thomas White's Fellowship. The corporation of Coventry pay to St. John's College, Oxford, a sum of £40. per annum; in respect of which, they are entitled to have two fellows, on the foundation of that college, from the free school of Coventry.

Bablake Men's Hospital. Thomas Bond, of the city of Coventry, draper, by will, 1506, directed that there should be established a bede house in Bablake, and that there should be built a chapel, and one mass said therein weekly, on the Sunday, and therein to be ten poor men, and one woman, to dress their meat and drink, &c. The testator died on the day his will bears date, leaving his son and executor, John Bond, surviving him. An almshouse was erected by John Bond, in concert with other trustees named in the will; but he died in 1538, before he had completed his object, of establishing the charity, leaving Thomas Bond his son and heir. By his will, he confirmed the will of his father, and directed that it should be fully carried out, &c. There are now, (1849,) forty-six poor men, who receive 6s. per week, twenty of whom are inmates; have fire and washing provided; a nurse and servant to wait upon them.

Richard Baldwin, by will, 1559, gave £60., to be put out on loans of £10. each, of which nothing is now known; and he gave his house, in Fleet-street, in Coventry, and other property adjoining, to his son and the heirs of his body; and for lack of such issue, to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, in trust to apply the yearly rents of the same, for the augmentation of the living of the poor almsmen of Bablake. The Bablake estates were next augmented, by the purchase of the Beech-wood farm, in the parish of Berkswell, for the sum of £1,826. 8s., in 1727, and arising out of a suit in chancery, instituted on account of a sale of timber from the charity estates, whereby £841. 19s. 3d. was paid into court by John Collins, the purchaser of the timber, and £984. 17s. 9d.; the remainder was paid by the trustees of the charity.

William Hindman, by will, 1558, gave 6s. 8d. yearly, to be paid to the poor of Bond's hospital, to be issuing out of a messuage in Well-street; Mrs. Mullies, the present owner, pays the charge. Murdock's gift, paid by the drapers' company, to one of the poor men, on May-day annually 6s. 8d.

Thomas Nicholls, by will, 1584, directed that his executors should pay to the mayor and aldermen £100., to be, by them, put forth in free loan, within this city, to ten clothiers, makers of broad cloth, £10. to each for three years, of good security; of this nothing is now known. He also left 3s. 4d. to the poor men of Bablake's hospital. This sum had not been paid for many years; but in 1833, the corporation promised to resume this payment. Richard Barker, by will, 1604, gave to the poor of Bablake hospital, 13s. 4d.; this is paid by the corporation on Ash Wednesday.

Thomas Bentley, by will, 1604, gave to his son Thomas, and the heirs of his body, his orchard, in Dead lane, in Coventry; and in case his son died without issue, he directed 10s. a year should be distributed in money or bread, to the poor inhabitants in Dead lane; 10s. to the poor men of the hospital of Bablake's; and 6s. 8d. for a sermon at the church of St. Michael, on St. Thomas's day; on which the other distributions were to be made. It does not appear that any distribution has ever been made on account of this charity.

William Wheate, by will, 1615; (see this after), the poor men of Bablake hospital are entitled to one-fourth part of tithes purchased at Keresley under this will; by the report of this charity, in 1833, it was calculated that an arrear of £161. 17s. 10½d. was due to Bablake hospital, which the corporation are ready to pay; and also to pay annually in future £12. 14s. 4d., subject to the increase or reduction of the Keresley tithes. Simon Norton, by will, 1641, (see this after), gave a portion of the interest of 300 marks to provide for an almsman in Bablake hospital; this was paid until 1794, and in October, 1833, the arrears were found to amount to £185. 18s., which the corporation are ready to pay, and also the annual dividends regularly. These two last named charities, with £4. 15s. 4., the interest of stock purchased, with the arrears paid, make an annual increase of £26. 0s. 8d., to be paid by the corporation to this charity. The annual income of the property amounts to £1081. 7s. 9d., with Birchley Hayes wood kept in hand by the trustees, containing 62a. 3r. 25p. These estates, by the decree of 1759, were vested in a body of trustees thereby appointed; the corporation of Coventry, under the same decree, are appointed to nominate the objects of the charity, and apply the rents and profits of the estate. "in the repairs and maintenance of the poor persons." The hospital premises, situate in Bablake-street, have a garden behind them, and form one side of a quadrangle, facing St. John's church; the buildings are very ancient and dilapidated; in 1833, plans and estimates were prepared for their rebuilding; and the gateway tower, which forms a common entrance to both Bond's and Wheatley's hospitals, had been restored at their joint expense. There are, at present, 46 men on this establishment, of whom 15 reside in the house, and the rest are out-pensioners. They all receive 6s. each per week, but do not partake of any other of the city charities. It is not required that the men should be single or widowers, but in general those who live in the hospital are such, and the married men are out-pensioners. They consist mostly of decayed tradesmen, and at least 60 years of age; are appointed by the members of the council in rotation; it is not considered necessary that they should be freemen, though most of them are of that class, but lose their vote on nomination. They all wear black gowns on Sundays, supplied by the charity when necessary. They are assembled at the hospital every Sunday morning, when two members of the corporation attend, and the names are called over. They are then marched to St. Michael's church door; but as many of them are Dissenters, those who chose are allowed to attend their own meeting. In 1831, there were 51 men on the list; but in order to accumulate a building fund, they have been reduced to the present number. There is also a nurse who lives in the hospital, and receives 15s. a week, and a servant, who receives £5. a year. The nurse superintends the bedding and linen of the poor men. The washing for the establishment, and medicine, in case of sickness, are paid for out of the funds of the charity. When a pensioner dies, 25s. is allowed towards his funeral. There is a common sitting-room, for which coals are supplied; and during the winter months, one hundred weight per week is allowed for each of the 15 rooms; also coals for the nurse's room and cooking kitchen. The total expenditure averages about £1,000. per annum. In the year 1832, the account of the trustees stands thus:—balance on hand, £412. 10s. 0.; rents received, £1,166. 1s. 6d.; making £1,578. 11s. 6d. Paid expenses, £130. 7s. 4d.; paid to corporation, £1,212. 10s. 0d.; balance kept in hand, £235. 14s. 2d.; together, £1,578. 11s. 6d.

Edward Lupkin, by will 1632, gave to the poor people of Bablack ward 5s. yearly, to be paid out of lands, and the house where Toby Parr dwelt, "To buy a piece of meat for the old men of Bond's hospital." This seems not now identified.

Enmund Palmer, by will proved 1641, gave a messuage for the better maintenance of the poor people in Bablacke. This house, it appears, was pulled down by order of the council of war for the preservation of the city, and the materials ordered to be sold for £10. and another house was to be set up within the city, to supply so much of the charitable gift as that lost. By an Indenture 1764, a fee farm rent of 25s. appears to have been secured on this site, but up to 1833, nothing appears to have been paid.

Manor of Stoke. By an Indenture 1592, John and Reginald Horne, as well in consideration of the sum of four-score pounds, as also for the better maintenance of the said city, for the relief of the poor of the same, and for the reparation of the Bablacke hospital, and for the relief of the poor of the same, gave and granted, to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, and their successors for ever, the manor of Stoke and messuages, orchards, and lands thereunto belonging, situate in Stoke, and in the city of Coventry, and in Eccleshall and Radford. in the county of the city of Coventry, &c., to hold the said manor and premises, &c., unto the said mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Coventry. From the year 1650 to 1709, the corporation's receipts from this manor amounted to £5. 18s. 6d. of which nothing was appropriated to any charitable use. The only payment now made from Stoke is the sum of 5s. for a stable, and 1s. 6d. per 1000 bricks made from the clay on Stoke heath. The Radford rents are still paid to corporation, and no doubt some of the Coventry rents also, but they are considered as the private property of the corporation. And as there are no uses declared in the deed, neither the Bablacke hospital nor any other charity can be considered as having any claim.

Babylacke Boys' Hospital, founded in 1560, on the place where it now stands, being a house in the city; it was for some years maintained by the charity of the well-disposed citizens and strangers, till Thomas Whateley, by Indenture 1563, granted to Richard Over and eleven others, all his manor or capital messuage in Little Packington, with various other messuages and lands, all of which premises then amounted to the clear yearly value of £49. 11s. To hold the said premises in trust, to hold to him and his assigns for the term of his life, and that they and their heirs had received one year's rent, they would yearly for ever, between the 1st and 24th of December, deliver the same to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty for the time being all the profits, charging for the receipts, reparations, and other necessary allowances, to the intent that they should distribute the same as follows, viz: to every such twelve poor men being householders in the said city most in need of relief, 30s. and every such twelve poor widows being householders 10s., and 10s. a-year to every of like four poor men, householders in the several parishes of Warwick, Rugby, Henley-in-Arden, Tamworth, Solehull, and Nuneaton, and that the said mayor and aldermen should yearly bestow the residue of the rents and profits amongst the poor people that should be brought up in the house called Babylack, or if that should decay and not continue, then to the most needy persons of the city: this property now produces an annual rent of £587. 19s. subject to chief rents, and other payments amounting to £11. 11s. 4d. Henry Over, by will 1567, gave to trustees two tenements in Spon-street and one in Hill-street, on trust to pay the rents thereof in relief of the poor children of Babylacke. John Suede granted 1576 to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Coventry and their successors, a barn and close in Hill-street, to hold the same for the use and maintenance of poor boys in the hospital of Babylacke. Richard Saunders, by will 1595, gave all his tenement, with the shops, &c. then in the occupation of William Randall and himself, unto the maintenance of the poor children of the hospital of Babylacke, provided there should be paid thereout 26s. 8d. yearly towards the relief of the poor men and women in the hospital in Grey-Friars lane. Nicholas Chambers, by will, gave two tenements in Smythford-street, to the only use of the poor children of the hospital of Babylacke, to make them portions of money to give with them to their masters with whom they should be apprentices. Abraham Bowne, by Indenture 1625, granted to trustees his close with the appurtenances lying in or near Radford, in the county of the city of Coventry, to hold after the decease of the grantor and his wife, upon trust to employ the rents for the maintenance of so many poor children as it would maintain in the hospital of Babylacke. Samuel Colins, by will 1721, devised to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, and their successors, one half yard land at Spratton, in the county of Northampton, in trust yearly at the feast of St. Thomas, to apply the clear rents annually in supplying the necessities of the poor children in Babylacke hospital. Mr. Baguel gave a tenement in Cuckoo lane, &c. The house was taken down in 1829 to enlarge the city gaol, and the sum of £200. was awarded by a jury to the corporation, trustees of the charity, as a compensation: this money was laid out in the purchase of £231. 11s. three per cent annuities, and the dividends directed to be paid to the said trustees for Babylacke boys' charity estate. By the omission of the agent, the purchase was not made till 18 months after the order given. His executors have agreed to the trustees £7. 10s. 4d. for the difference of the price of Stocks at the respective periods: these sums will also be invested. John Tallins, by will 1563, left four marks by the year, from a tenement at Fletchampstead, in the parish of Stoneleigh, agreeable to an indenture in 1617: the rent charge was made £4., of which £2. is paid from the Broad lane estate and £2. from the Bayes estate in Fletchampstead, the property of Weaman Lant, Esq. Thomas Dudley, by will 1581, devised certain lands to his wife, upon condition that she granted thereout a yearly rent of £5. to the overseers of his will and their heirs, to the use of the poor children of Babylacke, and should also grant a yearly rent of 6s. 8d. to the same overseers and their heirs, to be employed for the relief of the Gosford street ward for the payment of the fifteenth, when the said ward should be charged therewith. In 1581, Alicia Dudley, the widow, granted a yearly rent charge of £5. and one of 6s. 8d. to be issuing out of all the lands belonging to her late husband in Coventry and elsewhere, to trustees on trust for the above-named purposes. The above sum was by the council-house, divided to several payments and divisions of the property, of which several are not now paid. Richard Smith, by will 1591, willed that there should be yearly paid out of his house at the Little Park street end, and the two stables 20s. towards the maintenance of the poor children in Bablacke : John Lant, Esq. the owner, pays the charge. John Whitehead, by will 1597, bequeathed to the use of the poor children of the almshouse of Bablacke, a yearly rent charge of £3. to be issuing out of the Chauntry close : John Dugdale, Esq. is the present owner, by whose tenant the charge is paid. William Sewall, by will 1624, gave to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, and their successors, one yearly rent charge of 20s. issuing out of a tenement in West Orchard street, Coventry ; also another rent charge of 20s. out of a tenement in the High street : the first is paid by John Rider, the owner of the Thistle public house so charged in West Orchard street ; of the second, John Bunney, the owner of large house in High street, pays 10s., and the remaining 10s. is paid by Messrs. Soden and Iliffe, the owners of a house in the same street.

Drapers' Company. There is annually paid to this charity the sum of £6. 19s. by the Company of Drapers ; besides which, it has £6. 13s. 4d. from certain guild and chauntry lands, £4. 17s. in respect of William Wheates' gift from tithes in Keresley. £1. a rent charge from the gift of Thomas Nichols, 10s. part of a rent charge granted by Richard Baker, 10s. payable under the will of Elizabeth Sharratt, £7. from the will of Isaac Walden, £3. under the will of Simon Norton, 10s. as Davenport's gift for wine on St. Thomas's day, £2. 8s. as the interest of £40. given by Thomas Hunton, cutler, of London, who, being an orphan, born in 1602, was placed in the Bablacke school and afterwards sent to London, gave this £40. to the corporation on the condition that they added one more boy to the hospital. £4. 8s. from a bequest of Thomas Wheatley for loans, £12. the interest of a legacy of £300. bequeathed by the will of William Edwards, and invested in the purchase of £400. Three per cent consols, in the name of the corporation, 9s. 4d. as interest of a residue in the hands of Bunney and Co. Mary Turner, in 1608, gave £10. to this charity, of which nothing is now known. Thomas Saunders gave certain premises, supposed to be some houses in Lichgate. Thomas Scott gave lands, supposed to be in Cow lane and Grey Friars lane. The total income of this charity is £938. 17s. 4d. and the regular expenditure about £920. A new school and residence for the master was built in the years 1832-3, at a cost of near £2000 : it is in character with the ancient buildings by which it is surrounded, and now, 1849, the repairs in Bond's hospital are completed : the whole forms three sides of a very handsome quadrangle, the churchyard and church of St. John forming the fourth side. The sum of £1500. was supplied from the funds of the charity, £118. 6s. from the sale of old materials, on taking down the Ancient Dirge Hall, and £345. for the site to enlarge St. John's churchyard. The number of boys in the old school was 26, all of whom were lodged and boarded : during the progress of the building the vacancies were not filled up, but as soon as completed, the number was increased to 40 ; the school is capable of holding 70 children : they are the sons of respectable poor persons of Coventry, but not necessarily of freemen, and are nominated by the members of the council in rotation. The children are clothed annually in an ancient and peculiar dress ; they are admitted from 11 to 12 years of age and stay till 14 years, when they are bound out to different trades with premiums of £4. each, and clothes to the value of £3. 16s. 6d. It was agreed in 1833, that part of the boys on being admitted shall attend as day scholars for one year, before being taken into the house. The boys are lodged and boarded under the care of a matron who resides in the hospital, and has a salary of £30. per annum, and maintenance for herself and servant. The schoolmaster resides in the house appropriated for him, and has a salary of £38. a-year. The boys are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, using the books supplied by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge: they have also a reading library, supplied from the same society. Two members of the corporation visit the hospital every week, and superintend the laying in of provisions, &c. and report to the council-house the state of the charity. A regular visiting book is kept.

Grey Friars Hospital, so called from its proximity to a monastery of that name, was founded under the will of William Ford, 1509, who, amongst other things, declared that one almshouse should be built beside the Grey Friars gate within Coventry, for five men and one woman to dwell in, and those to have 5d. a-piece weekly for ever, for the payment whereof, he ordered that lands and tenements should be bought by the discretion of his executors. William Pisford, in accordance therewith, erected the almshouses and put therein the five men and one woman, and also with the money of the said William Ford, purchased lands and tenements for the continuance thereof. The said William Pisford, by will 1517, amongst other things, declared that there should be admitted into the same almshouses, by the master of the guild of the Holy Trinity and his successors, six poor men and their wives, being nigh to the age of threescore years or above, and should have 7½d. a week, that if the wife of any should die before her husband, he should have the 7½d. a week; but if any of the men died before their wives, the wife should have but 3½d. a week, and two similar widows should live together; and he further ordered his executors to purchase lands and tenements to the yearly value of 20 marks, to the use and intent that a priest should be founded for ever, to sing for the souls of the said William Pisford, and the souls of others therein mentioned; and the said priest should have for his stipend yearly £6. to be paid to him quarterly, and to be appointed by the master of the said guild, &c. Lands and hereditaments were purchased by William Wigston, an executor, to the value of 20 marks, and he also ordered a yearly obit to be kept at the Grey Friars, &c. The estate was conveyed to 12 persons as feoffees, whereof four were to be of the grocers' company; and he also made ordinances and rules for its government. The uses for which these funds were given, being in part superstitious, were under the statute of 1st, Edward VI, 1547, seized into the hands of the Crown, and partly sold to the corporation. The royal commissioners, "knowing the charity of the hospital to be of a different nature, and not forfeited to the king, made some order for preserving the interest of the poor, and the continuance of the hospital. The present rental of the property of the foundation is £358. 17s. 6d. besides which, the sum of £39. 10s. 4d. is received from other legacies, and in 1827, there remained a balance in the hands of the collector of £911. 0s. 6d., and in 1828 he assigned his beneficial interest in Nalls mill as a security for this balance. The expenditure for the year ending Lady-day 1831, was £451. 5s. 1½d. There are also the following: Christopher Davenport's 10s. per annum. Thomas Jesson, by will 1653, left £200. which was received by the city, and settled Conduit meadow upon feoffees for the payment of the annual sum in charity to this hospital, &c.: nothing appears to have been paid in respect of this, but for the future, the corporation have agreed to pay the interest as directed by the will. William Wight by will gave £5. to the poorest alms-house in this city, and it was brought into the council-house, 1652, and then agreed, that 8s. a-year should be paid to this hospital, but was many years discontinued: in 1833, the corporation signified their willingness to resume the payment. From Thomas Crow's charity 2s. a week is given to each of eight poor women in this hospital. The number of pensioners were, 1833, on this foundation 37, who each receive 3s. 6d. per week and the nurse 6s. a week, amounting to £352. per annum. There are now, 1849, seventeen female inmates and twenty-three out pensioners who receive the same allowance. The hospital is a very ancient building of timber frame-work, erected before the year 1517, and has been preserved with much care in its original state. There is a room used for the purpose of the trustees, and a public wash-house, &c.: there is also a large garden, at the back of which each inmate has a part, and a portion is let for £1. 4s. per annum, and divided amongst the inmates. Twelve of the poor pensioners, with the nurse, reside in the hospital, and the others are out-pensioners, and succeed to vacancies as they occur; they are all appointed by the members of the council in rotation; both the inmates and out-pensioners have each an annual allowance of one ton of coal; on the day the corporation visit the hospital, 10s. is distributed amongst them; the women used to be supplied with cloth gowns every other year till 1829.

Sir Thomas White, Knt., merchant tailor, of the city of London, minding to relieve the commonwealth of the city of Coventry, paid into the hands of the mayor of the said city and of his brethren, the sum of £1400. with which various estates and rents belonging to King Henry VIII., lying as well in the city of Coventry and county of the said city as in the county of Warwick, of the clear yearly value and rent of £70. or thereabouts, as by the letters patent under the great seal dated at Walden, 19th July. 34 Henry VIII., 1542, did fully shew. It was covenanted between the master and wardens of the merchant tailors' company of London, and the said mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the city of Coventry, that they and their successors for ever, should immediately after the death of the said Sir Thomas, yearly pay of the said rents of £70. in manner following: viz., to twelve poor men, householders of Coventry, in free alms, on the 10th of March or within six days, the sum of £24. to each 40s. for their relief; they who had the alms one year should not be elected thereunto again within five years next following, unless it was thought as charitable to help those persons as any other; and also, that the said mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, should yearly, after one full year after the death of the said Sir Thomas, upon the 10th of March, or within one quarter of a year next ensuing, deliver by way of free loan yearly, during the space of 10 years next after one full year ended, the sum of £40. to four young men of the said city of Coventry as were free and had been apprenticed in the said city, each of them £10. for the space of nine years, putting in bond and sureties upon the receipt thereof, for the repayment at the end of nine years to the said corporation; and after the repayment of all such sums, the corporation should again deliver the same to other young men on free loan for nine years, putting in bond, &c.; and also, after the end of the said ten years, the corporation should for the space of thirty years ensuing, deliver and pay to two other like young men on the same condition. £20. each, to have the occupation nine years, on giving sufficient security, &c.; and after the expiration of the said thirty years, the corporation should deliver in free loan the said £40. to one young man of the said city for nine years, finding surety as aforesaid, &c. And it was further covenanted and agreed between the said parties, that the said mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty should pay the sum of £40. which should become due in the second year that should be due in the second year after the end of the said thirty years, to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Northampton. to be lent out in the same manner as above stated, &c. and that the sum of £40. which should grow due in the third year after the said thirty years should be paid to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Leicester for the above-named purposes; and the sum of £40. which should grow due on the fourth year after the said thirty years, the corporation of Coventry covenanted to deliver in like manner to young men of Nottingham, finding sureties to the mayor and burgesses of Nottingham, at ten pounds each, &c.; and the sum of forty pounds growing due in the fifth year next after the said thirty years, the said corporation of Coventry covenanted to pay to the mayor and burgesses of Warwick, to be by them lent in the above manner; and after the said five years should be expired, then one year for the city of Coventry, and one year for every of the said four towns of Northampton, Leicester, Nottingham, and Warwick, the sum of £40. which should be due, should be delivered to one young man, at the end of every nine years for ever, and so to the other four corporations, to be continued in the mentioned order, for the said towns, until 100 years should be expired, after the order and rate of £40. to one young man of Coventry, and also to four several young men of the said four towns, of £10. a man for nine years, for the space of 100 years, in all the said towns; after which, the said sum of £40. which should grow out of the premises, should in the same manner, be delivered to one young man of the said corporations, for the term of nine years, &c., the same young men not again to have the advantage thereof: the said four corporations, upon the receipt of such money, should make sufficient surety to the corporation of the city of Coventry, for the true employing of the same, &c. And it was further covenanted, that 20s., growing out of the premises, should, after the death of the said Thomas White, be paid yearly to the merchant tailors' company, of London, at the feast of Bartholomew, or within twenty days after, for their labour to be taken therein, to see the said charity fully performed. It was further covenanted, that each of the twelve almsmen, and every the said young man, that should receive the loan money within the said city, should be yearly elected on the 10th of March, or within one quarter of a year next after, and that the corporation of the city of Coventry, should receive the sum of £4. for their trouble, &c., parcel of the yearly rents of the said premises, viz. to the mayor, recorder, and ten aldermen, every of them 6s. 8d. each, and to the town-clerk, that should keep the accounts, the yearly payment of 20s., and the like sums to the other four towns: and it was further agreed, that all securities concerning the free loans, should be made without any charge, by the person so receiving the 20s. a year for his labour. The said corporation of the city of Coventry, stood bound to the said master and wardens, in the sum of £4,000. for duly keeping the said covenants, and certain fines for negligence fixed. By a schedule of the lands and tenements belonging to the trust, the total annual income, at the date of the original indenture, was £77. 12s. 4d.: from this sum was to be deducted, a payment of £7. 13s. 2d., reserved as a rent to the Crown: this payment was purchased about the year 1825, by Mr. Joseph Jordau, of Coventry. For a period of about 140 years, the original stipulated payments continued to be made, and the whole surplus was retained by the corporation, for their own use. In Hilary term, 1695, an information was filed against the corporation by the Attorney-General, at the retation of the merchant tailors' company, on behalf of the inhabitants of Coventry and the other four towns. In 1700, the information was dismissed, but, upon an appeal to the House of Lords, that dismissal was reversed, and a declaration was made, that the increased rents of the charity estates, above the £70. per annum, ought to go in augmentation of the several charitable uses and appointments expressed in the said Deed of the 6th July, 1551. The cause, accordingly, came to be heard in the Court of Chancery, on 12th of June, 1703, when the Court decreed the improved and full value of the lands in question, to be applied to the increasing of the said charities and appointments, according to the order of the House of Lords, and referred it to the master, to state the yearly value of the said lands. The master's report, after being twice referred back, certified the yearly value of the charity estate to amount to £858. 15s. 4d., subject to the payment for taxes of £142. and tenths to the Crown, £7. 13s. 2d., leaving £709. 2s. 2d.; to divide which, the first year, beginning from the 25th March, 1709, was wholly to go to the city of Coventry for the following purposes: £243. 3s. 0d. to be distributed among 121 poor men, 40s. each, and the remaining 23s. 3d. to one poor man: £405. 4s. 2d. to be put out in free loans; £10. 2s. 6d. to be paid to the master and wardens of the merchant tailors' company; £40. 10s. 0d. to the mayor; recorder and aldermen, £3. 7s. 6d. each; £10. 2s. 6d. to the town-clerk. The £405. 4s. 2d. for the free loans, to be paid to the other corporations yearly, in succession. The corporation of Coventry were also ordered to pay a balance of £2241. 1s. 3d. into court within three months, the balance of the rent of estates in their hands; until which time, the transfer and settlement of the said trust should be suspended. It was finally also ordered, 27th February, 1718, that the £243. 3s. to divide, instead of £24. should be disposed of to 60 poor men, £4. each, and to one man £3. 3s.; and that the loan money should be lent to eight men, £50. each; and the remaining sum, £5. 4s. 2d. to be kept in the bank. The balance was not paid by the corporation within the time limited, though repeatedly enlarged A sequestration was issued in May, 1712, for levying the said sum of £2241. 1s. 3d. out of the real and personal estates of the corporation, which remained in force for seven years, at the end of which time, the money having been raised and paid into court, a petition of appeal from the decree of the 4th of March, 1711-12, was presented to the House of Lords, praying for a re-conveyance of the trust estate. A more formal application, by bill, was also made to the Court of Chancery, for the above purposes, and judgment of the Lord Chancellor (Macclesfield) upon the whole matter, was ultimately given, 20th December, 1723. whereby it was ordered, that the trustees should execute a re-conveyance of the charity estate to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Coventry, who were to pay the costs formerly ordered by the Court to be paid; that the management of the estate should be restored to them as by the Deed, 6th July, 1551; and the distribution, according to the decree, 27th February, 1810. The corporation of Coventry have been regulated in the administration of the charity funds, by the various provisions laid down by the Lord Chancellor, 20th December, 1723. The present rental of the charity estate, is (1833) £2,158. 11s. 4d. The land-tax, amounting to £143. 9s., was redeemed in 1803, by a sale of property. The corporation are entitled, besides the real estates above noticed, to a sum of £5259. 16s. 8d. three per cent. consols, standing in their names, together with a sum of £400. like stock, belonging to the Bablacke Boys' charity, producing (1833,) a dividend of £179. 3s. 8d. This stock was purchased between the years 1823 and 1833, with the produce from Wyken colliery. On the death of the bailiff of the rents in 1828, it was found a balance of £2941. 13s. 7d. was due from him to this charity, but which, after much trouble, has been settled, and the general account of the charity adjusted.

The share for loans applicable to the city of Coventry, is carried to a separate account, under the control of a finance committee, consisting of the mayor, and other members of the corporation. The loans outstanding in 1723, were £3680., and the proportions received since 1723 to 1830, £14,742. 18s. 8½d.; which, with interest on three accounts, made a total of £18,829. 14s. 10½d.; of this sum, it appeared that £1504. 8s. 1d. had been lost, and £17,325. 6s. 9d. was lent or invested till called for. Gross neglect appeared for many years in the superintendence of this particular branch; but, of late years, much care and great exertions have been used, and the actual diminution, by losses, is not greater than might fairly be expected in so long a period. The corporation assign for the great accumulation of this fund, the difficulty of putting out, on satisfactory security, so small a sum, and the power to raise the loan to £100. or £200., if required, would be much more advantageous.

The proportion, 4-70ths, allotted to the mayor, recorder, and aldermen, is divided equally amongst them; 1-70th is remitted to the warden of the merchant tailors' company, and the remaining 70th is paid to the town-clerk.

Thomas Wheatley, of Coventry, (founder of the Bablacke Boys' Hospital,) by will, 1566, bequeathed to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, of the city of Coventry, £800. to the intent to put forth the same in loan; of which £600. was to be divided amongst the various Fellowships of the said city; £100. to be put forth by the head officer of Northampton, in loan amongst the artificers there; £50. to the corporation of the town of Warwick, to be put forth in loan among the inhabitants; £50. to the town of Atherstone, to be put forth in loan amongst the inhabitants there. Provided always that sufficient sureties from all the parties, for the repayment of the money to the corporation, and fourpence for every pound, to be paid yearly at the feast of St. Michael; the same to be distributed in manner following:—10s. thereof to the mayor of the said city, and to ten aldermen of the said city ten nobles, and for three sermons to be preached within the city 20s., to the clerk of the council of the said city 10s., and the residue to be bestowed upon a collation for the said mayor and his brethren, yearly; the loans to be put forth from year to year. That the said fellowships and towns should, yearly, at the feast of St. Michael, deliver all sums of money as they had in loan; and that the same should be put forth again within one month, for one year, in form aforesaid; provided, should any of the fellowships or said towns not truly perform his will, then the said loan money so delivered to them, then he gave the same to the said mayor and his brethren, to be bestowed in loan amongst the poor inhabitants of the city of Coventry, at their discretion. In 1667, the corporation of Northampton repaid their £100., which they would hold no longer. The corporation of Warwick had previously repaid their £50.; other of the loans were lost by the discontinuance of the fellowships to which they were advanced. In 1753, an order was made to accept a composition of 6s. 6d. in the pound, upon a loan of £50. to Joseph Steill, of Atherstone, whose sureties were insolvent, and who had himself absconded. According to a minute investigation made in 1832, it appears there is still in the hands of the corporation the sum of £415. 5s., applicable in the manner directed by Whateley's will. It is not, however, likely that any portion of it should be claimed.

William Stanley, by will, 1638, gave to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, £100., to be lent to five young men, freemen of the company of Dyers, for three years, gratis, &c. Also £100. to the company of Drapers, to be lent to five young men, gratis, for three years, &c. He also gave £100. to put forth ten freemen's sons, in London or Coventry. And to the Company of Drapers £100. to set to work poor children, when the place called the Drapery should be made a workhouse. He also gave £150. of Nicholas Raby's, he had in his hands, to the company of tailor's and shearmen, to be paid within five years after his decease, &c. Of these sums nothing is now known.

Loan Charities.—John Haddon, 1581, £200., also £100. to repair the roads of the city. Dame Isabel Spencer, 1539, £40. Henry Over, 1543, £500. Thomas White, 1546, £200. William Wellington, 1449, £120. John Tallants, 1562, £40. Sampson Hopkins, 1574, £200. J. Thompson, £40. Simon Parker, £40. 1584, Thomas Nicholls, £100. 1588, William Sale, £20. 1607, Elizabeth Sharratt, £100. 1607, Richard Elkington, £100. 1627, Christopher Davenport, £100. 1634, Thomas Jesson, £20. per annum. 1662, John Armfield, £40. Of these sums scarcely anything is now known. The confusion into which the affairs of the corporation were thrown by the proceedings in the court of Chancery and the sequestration of their estates, may account for much of the loss of this money. The only part known to exist is a sum of £20. lent out many years ago, from Thomas White's charity, and repaid in 1833.

Thomas Warren, by will, left to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, a yearly rent of 41s. 4d. issuing forth of certain lands in Corley, whereof 20s. was to be employed for three sermons in Trinity church, to be preached yearly, and the rest for the maintenance of the obit of the said Thomas Warren. By letters patent, 6th Edward VI., the residue of the above rent charge above 20s. being 21s. 4d. was granted to the corporation; this rent charge is now, by agreement, paid from other lands, and the sum of 20s. is regularly paid to the vicar of Trinity, for three sermons annually, about St. James's day.

John Cockessonne, by deed 1566, gave to Thomas Kervyn and two others, certain lands in the city of Coventry and in Radford, that they, their heirs and assigns, should, after the death of the said donor, yearly give 20s. for preaching three sermons in Trinity church, in the said city; the first on the Sunday next before Michaelmas-day, and the other two on the two Sundays next following, and for ringing to the said sermons 4d. each, and to the mayor of the city for the time being 12d.; to the vicar of Trinity church 12d., and to the churchwardens 12d., to see these things truly performed: and all the residue of the yearly rents and profits of the said premises, deducting for repairs, &c., should be given in free alms to the poor inhabitants at four times in the year, by even portions. The present rental (1833) is £16. 5s., from which £1. 4s. is paid for sermons, and £4. 15s. 6d. for bread for the poor, &c.

William Hopkins, by will 1569, gave his tenement in Little Park street, in the city of Coventry, to the corporation, that they should yearly bestow 20s. thereof to some learned man, for making three sermons in the parish or any other church, in the Lent time, yearly. Richard Hopkins, by deed 1582, in part performance of the above will of his father William Hopkins, confirmed to the said corporation and their successors, the above premises in Little Park street. The corporation pay £2. yearly to the vicar of St. Michael's.

Richard Baron, by will, gave the Little Croft, lying without Gosford gate, to the corporation of the city of Coventry, and their successors, on trust, that they should yearly pay to the minister of Holy Trinity, 6s. 8d. for the preaching of a sermon in the said church, on the 24th of March; and on the same day pay all the rest of the clear rents to the churchwardens and overseers of the said parish, to be given in bread to the poor in New street and West Orchard street. It is now let for £2. a year, and distributed accordingly.

Richard Barker, by will, 1604, gave to his son, Thomas Barker, and his heirs, five messuages in Much Park street, without the New-gate, on condition that he and his heirs should, within four months after his decease, make a good assurance of the said premises to the corporation of Coventry, and their successors, of the said five messuages, or of other lands, for the payment of £5. yearly rent to the said corporation, which he gave as follows:—ten nobles thereof to ten poor widows of the said city, whereof four should be in the Bishop street ward, to every one of them 6s. 8d.; to the the poor men of the hospital of Bablacke, 13s. 4d.; to be equally divided; 10s. to the poor children of the hospital of Bablacke, and 10s. to the poor of the almshouse of Grey Friars; such sums to be distributed upon Ash Wednesday. By indenture, 1623, the above £5. was made to issue out of the Hill Close, lying in Foleshill, in the county of the city of Coventry; and is divided agreeable to the donor's will.

Elizabeth Sharrott, by will, 1607, gave £100. for the benefit of the poor of the city of Coventry, to be put forth in loans, &c.; but this loan money is not likely to be applied for, under the terms prescribed, and the corporation pay £5. annually, in respect thereof, which is divided; to the poor of Much Park street ward, £1. 10s.; of Cross Cheaping ward, 15s.; of Bishop street ward, 15s.; poor children of Bablacke, 10s.; Grey Friars' hospital, 10s.; the mayor and aldermen, £1.

Richard Thkington, by will, 1607, gave to the corporation £50., upon trust, to lend to five poor artificers, &c.; the interest, 50s.; he directed 40s. thereof to be distributed yearly, between the 21st and 25th of December, by the vicar and churchwardens of Trinity parish, to the poor thereof; and the other 10s. to the use of the town clerk, for making the poor men's bonds. The corporation pay 40s. which is distributed, as above directed, on New Year's Eve, in bread.

Rouyer Clarke, by will, 1612, gave £3. to be equally divided among six poor householders within the city of Coventry. Richard Clarke, by will, 1640, gave to the corporation a rent charge of 40s. issuing out of his messuage and garden, in Much Park street, to the intent that on St. Thomas's day, yearly, they should deliver the same to four poor freemen of the said city, that with his father's bequest of £3. there might be 10s. yearly given in each ward, and that ten poor men in each ward receive each 1s. accordingly.

William Wheate, by will, 1615, gave to Edward Stapleton and 13 others, and their heirs, a yearly rent of £6. 13s. 4d. to be issuing out of three meadows, within the liberties of the city of Coventry; £6. thereof towards the maintenance of two poor scholars at the university, to be chosen from the grammar school of this city, &c. and the other 13s. 4d. to the use of the person who should keep the library in the said city. And he devised £80. that the mayor, with eight of the said brethren, should purchase land therewith; and the rent to be divided into four parts; one part to be paid to a minister to preach at Bablacke church; one part to be divided amongst the poor almsmen of Bablacke, yearly; one part, yearly, for the renewing of the bedding of the poor children of Bablacke; and the last part, equally, amongst the poor men and women of the almshouse in Grey Friars' lane: to be bestowed at Michaelmas and Lady day, or within thirty days after. And he devised £40. to be lent to the master of Bridewell, for the setting to work such poor as should be committed to his charge: nothing is known of this £40. By indenture, 1629, in consideration of £250. the tithes of Keresley, in the county of the city of Coventry, were conveyed to the mayor of Coventry, and others, for the charitable uses of Wheate and Stone, and Mr. Gayer's gift. By a decree of Edward Jackson, against the corporation of Coventry, by the Lord Chancellor, 30th May, 1744, it was declared the above three charities ought to be established; and that £80. the sum of Wheates, directed to be laid out in land; that £133. 6s. 8d. being Gayer's charity, directed to be laid out to produce £9. per annum; and Stones' charity, being to purchase a rent charge of £3. 6s. 8d. per annum. In the year 1833, the gross receipts of these tithes were £244. 16s. 3d.; and from the increased value of the tithes, there were various sums due to the different charities, which the corporation expressed their readiness to pay.

Richard Smyth, by will, 1623, granted to the corporation a yearly rent of 20s. to be issuing out of a tenement, in the tenure of Henry Smith, baker, in or near Fleet street, on the west side the same street. This payment was made until 1709, and nothing since appears to have been given away in respect of it.

Thomas Wale, by will, 1625, gave to the mayor and commonalty of the city of Coventry, and their successors, for ever, his manor of Anglesey, in the county of Cambridge, with all his rights, lands, tenements, &c. in "Norton Juxta Twycross," in the county of Leicester, and a messuage in Brinkloe, in the county of Warwick, with an orchard and close, &c. The rents to be bestowed, £20. towards the maintenance of a schoolmaster, in the town of Monks Kirby, in the county of Warwick; and £10. per annum, for an usher for the said grammar school; to be freely taught; for the children of Monks Kirby, Stretton, and Brinkloe, and none else. The mayor and corporation of Coventry to elect the master, and the usher to be chosen by the said master, by the approbation of the said corporation, &c. The residue of the above rents, and profits of the aforesaid manor and premises, to be yearly given toward the relief of poor people within this city, as they should think fit, deducting all necessary charges, &c. By a codicil the testator further willed, that the mayor and aldermen should yearly pay the sum of 40s. to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Brinkloe, to be distributed for the relief of the poor of the said parish. The devise was confirmed 3rd August, 1626. The proceeds of the property now (1833) produce annually £321. 18s. 9d.; besides which, the occasional fines on admission to the copyhold, within the manor of Anglesey, during the last 30 years was £132. 13s. The payments, £30. to the master and usher of Monks Kirby school, £2. to the churchwardens of Brinklow, for the poor, and £1. to three poor widows, which, though not directed by the will, has from a very early period been paid, 6s. 8d. to each; and five per cent. on the gross receipts is paid to the bailiff. The residue being bequeathed to the poor of the different wards of this city, (in 1829,) £480. was given away; 10s. being given in sums of 10s. each by the corporation, on St. Thomas' day and Ash-Wednesday; a separate account will, in future, be kept of this charity; and the residue, after the fixed payments, amounting to near £230., will be given away.

John Gayer, and Katherine, his wife, by Indenture, 1626, gave to the corporation of Coventry 200 marks, in consideration whereof they covenanted that they would buy so much woollen cloth of a "sad peere collar," which, with the making thereof, should amount to £9. per annum, to poor people, &c. on the 19th of October, yearly, or within 14 days thereof, in St. Mary's Hall, in the said city. This sum, as before noticed in Wheate's charity, is secured on the Keresley tithes. This charity is distributed out of the general fund of the corporation. At present 16 coats of the value of 26s. each is given to poor persons of the different wards, of which all above £9. ought to be considered as the charity of Simon Norton, hereafter mentioned.

Christopher Davenport, by will, 1627, gave certain tenements to Agnes, his wife, with remainder to the corporation of Coventry, and their successors, without the Grey Friars Gate, to bestow the rents as follows:—20s. for the preaching of three sermons yearly, in the church of the Holy Trinity, &c.; and the residue of the rents to be employed for the relief of the poor people of the hospital in Grey Friars' lane. The houses were pulled down by order of the council of war, in 1643, and a rent of 10s. paid for the ground, as a close until the year 1660; after which, it appears, with other rents in this neighbourhood, to have been paid to Sir Thomas White's charity; but the corporation express their willingness to pay 10s. per annum to the Grey Friars' hospital out of the funds of Sir Thomas White's charity, and to make good all arrears. Mr. Davenport also had long supported a school for the education of poor children; he assigned to the corporation a security for £200., upon condition that they should pay him 20 marks yearly for his life; he also granted to the corporation a yearly rent of £13. 6s. 8d., out of lands called the Black Orchard, upon trust, to pay a schoolmaster to teach poor children to read and write; £10. per annum, to the city bailiff, for his pains in seeing the said children furnished; 10s. to the mayor and his brethren, for their care; and the residue for books, paper, ink, hose, and shoes, for the poor children. In the year 1714, an information was filed by the Attorney-General, at the relation of Batt and others, for the purpose of rectifying various alleged misapplications of the charities, under the management of the corporation. Nothing seems to have been paid, 1833, for about forty-years to a master, or any other object of this charity, except 10s. given to the mayor and his brethren, which was expended in wine at the dinner of Mr. Thomas Wheatley. The corporation have now undertaken, (1833), to resume the payment of £10. per annum, to a master upon this foundation; and to pay an arrear of six years, at £12. 16s. 8d. per annum, (10s. for refreshment having been deducted) amounting to £77., which has been appropriated to the national school.

James Harwell, by will, 1630, directed his executor, Simon Norton, to pay £20. the poor of the city of Coventry, and lay out £20. in the purchase of lands of the yearly value of 20s., for the preaching of three sermons yearly in St. Michael's church, on St. James's day, St. Bartholomew's day, and St. Matthias's day. Henry Harwell, the brother of the testator, added £15. to this gift; and £5. was also allowed for the interest of the £20. given to the poor, to which Mr. John Clark made a further addition of £5. By an order, 25th December, 1641, a rent-charge of £3. 10s. was made out of Prior's Orchard for these gifts. The corporation pay £2. 10s. annually in respect of this gift to a baker for bread, which is distributed on St. Thomas's day; but nothing has been paid for sermons for many years.

Nicholas Raby, by will, left £150., of which £20. was to buy books for the library of the free school, and the remainder to be put forth for the maintenance of the poor of the company of tailors and shearmen. It does not now appear that this was ever applied.

Isaac Walden, by will, 1632, appointed two years after his decease, £140. to be bestowed in the purchase of lands in the name of the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the city of Coventry, for them and their successors, to pay 30s. for the preaching of three sermons yearly: one on All Saints day, in the afternoon; one on the 17th November; and the third on new year's eve; and to the bell-ringers 12d., and directed that the surplus of rents should be employed in placing out apprentices, the poor children of the hospital of Bablacke. It does not appear this money was ever laid out in land. The corporation regularly pay £7. annually in respect thereof to the Bablacke boys' hospital. The sermons are not preached.

William Burbage, by will, 1633, gave to the corporation and their successors, his messuage in West Orchard, in the city of Coventry, that they should yearly pay, within fourteen days before Easter, to three poor widows, one inhabiting in West Orchard, one in Grey Friars lane, and one in Much Park street, 6s. 8d. a-piece yearly for ever. These are regularly paid.

Thomas Brownrigg by will, 1634, left his messuage in Smithford street, subject to the payment of 6s. 8d. to a poor widow in Smithford street, or one in Broadgate ward, on St. Thomas's day; and also 6s. 8d. for a sermon in St. Michael's church on the same day, and 4d. yearly to the sexton for ringing the bell. The premises so charged were pulled down in 1812, for widening Broad street, under the powers of an act of Parliament. The corporation still continue to pay the sum of 13s. 8d. for the above purposes.

Thomas Jesson, by will, 1634, gave to the corporation of the city of Coventry, the sum of £2,000. to be paid them within two years after his decease, with which they should buy lands, the yearly rent whereof might be £100. for the following uses:—On St. Thomas's day yearly to elect six poor boys, sons of freemen, to provide them masters, and to bestow on each £3. to provide them apparel and master; two of which to be of Little Park street ward. Also, yearly, on St. Thomas's day, to ten poor freemen, 20s. a-piece; also, to give to twenty poor widows, on the same day, 10s. a-piece: two of each to be out of the above ward. Also, 40s. in bread to be given to poor people in St. Michael's church, in Coventry, on St. Thomas's day; also £10. 8s. for bread every year to the poor by 4s. a week, at St. Michael's; also, £5. 4s. for bread, by 2s. a week, to the poor, in Trinity church; also, for a sermon to be preached in St. Michael's church, every Wednesday morning, £6. a year; or, if not so preached, to be given to 12 poor folks on St. Thomas's day. Also, £20 every year, to be lent forth to two tradesmen, freemen of Coventry, &c. By indenture, 2nd November, 1638, the sum of £1,890. was paid for an estate situate in Clifford Chambers, in the county of Gloucester; and £79. 3s., the residue of the £2,000., was paid to the corporation. The estate contains 119A. 2R 7P. of land, let at the yearly rent of £215., the tenant paying land tax, &c. The payments at present made, amount to £182. 6s. The Wednesday sermons are not preached; and there has been no money lent out on loan. Up to Michaelmas, 1830, Mr. Samuel Carter was the receiver of this charity, and it was found there was a balance in his hands of £598. 16s. 1d.; also, a sum of £122. 10s. for returned property tax received by him; the whole of which is in progress of liquidation.

John Duckett, by will, 1638, gave £50. to be paid to the corporation, for the use of the son of John and Mary Wood, and directed that if he should die before he attained the age of 21, the said sum should remain to the corporation, to be disposed of in charitable uses. It was ordered, 1672, that £3. yearly, should be allowed on St. Thomas's day, for placing forth a boy, apprentice; but there appears to have been none so placed out since 1711. certainly this ought to be resumed.

Richard Wright, by will, 1640, gave to the corporation of Coventry, £20. upon trust, that they should, yearly, dispose of 24 dozen of bread, to the poor people of Bishopgate ward. £20. was paid to the city, and a distribution was made in 1686; since which nothing appears to have been paid.

Simon Norton, by will, 1641, after devising certain tithes to the use of the minister of Bablacke church, as noticed with the grammar school, gave to Sampson Hopkyns, then mayor of the city, and eight others, aldermen of the said city of Coventry, and their heirs, certain property, upon trust, that they should, yearly, upon the feast of St. Simon and St. Jude, pay out of the rents, to the vicar and churchwardens of St. Michael, in Coventry, £10. for the buying of 200 dozen of wheaten loaves, four dozen every Sunday, before morning prayer, abating eight dozen in the year, &c.: and, on further trust, that they should employ the residue of the rents in providing of waistcoats and smocks for poor widows, and in cloth, for the clothing of poor children, on the same feast day. He also gave to the corporation 300 marks, upon trust, that they should provide for a couple of almsfolk in the Grey Friars' Hospital, and one man in the Bablacke, and one boy in the Bablacke boys' hospital: this sum was paid to the corporation in 1642. The property devised for bread and clothing, in Far Gosford street, is let for the yearly rent of £88. From this, £10. is regularly paid for bread, and formerly the money was regularly entered for widows' shifts, but for many years this is so blended with Gayer's gift that the exact sum to each is not known. From 1833 the accounts will be kept separate.

Elizabeth, Countess Dowager of Devonshire, by will, 1642, gave £100. to the poor people of the city of Coventry, and £50. to the poor of the town of Warwick, to be employed for their use. The corporation received the legacy of £100. in 1646, and covenanted to pay £5. annually, to ten poor householders, on Ash-Wednesday, which is paid out of their general fund.

Sarah Ward, by will 1662, gave to the corporation of Coventry, £100. in trust, to distribute on New-year's-day yearly; £6. as her gift towards the enlargement of poor prisoners, by the consent of alderman Robert Bedford, her sole executor. Before this money was paid, Mr. Bedford became bankrupt, and the legacy lost.

William Drax, by will 1669, gave to the poor of the city of Coventry £50., to be disposed of as the chief magistrate should see meet. Mr. Drax had, during his life-time, given £100. to be disposed of by the mayor and aldermen, in apprenticing twenty-six poor children: to this legacy, the corporation added £10., and therewith placed out twenty poor boys as apprentices.

William Jelliff, by will 1681, gave to the corporation of Coventry, a messuage and garden in Spon street, Coventry, and a close, called the Stripes, in the parish of Foleshill, in the county of the city of Coventry, to the intent, that the rents should be disposed of as follows: yearly, on the 10th of March, or within six days after, give to two poor housekeepers in Spon street ward, and two in Bishop street ward, and one in Gosford street ward without the gate, 6s. 8d. each, and twelve pence, given in wheaten bread every Sunday, in the Holy Trinity church, and yearly pay to the vicar of Holy Trinity 10s. for preaching a sermon on Friday after Whitsun-week, being the great fair-day, in the church of either Trinity or St. Michael: and on further trust, that they should, on St. Thomas's day yearly, pay 10s. for wine at their dinner on that day, and the overplus be for repairs. The property in Spon street, was in 1833, let on lease to Alderman Vale, for £20. per annum. The close, called the Stripes, is let for the annual rent of £8. 8s. the whole of which rent is now applied to the object of the testator, each receiving a proportionate increase.

Humphrey Burton, by will 1683, gave to the corporation of Coventry, £20. to bestow 20s. interest as follows: 8s. yearly for four dozen of bread, to add to his father-in-law, Simon Norton's gift in the church of St. Michael, and 12s. for bread to be weekly distributed in the parish church of the Holy Trinity, to be added to that of his late uncle, Thomas Jesson. The legacy was paid in 1685, and is distributed as above.

James Nailer, by indenture 1683, gave a rent charge of 10s. to the corporation, after his decease, from a house in Cook street, that they should yearly pay to each of two poor widows, one dwelling in Bayley lane, and the other in or without Gosford gate, in Trinity parish. The corporation, on Ash-Wednesday, pay the two widows.

Joseph Chambers, by will 1684, gave his lands in Foleshill, then of the value of £7. per annum, to the repairs of St. Michael's church: these lands, 5a. 0r. 39p., with an allotment of 1r. 21p. with a barn and hovel, are now let for £20. per annum, which is paid to the churchwarden of St. Michael. And gave to the said corporation, and their successors, a moiety of the capital messuage, called the George Inn, to dispose of the profits thereof (usually £7. yearly), to the poor of the parish of St. Michael, to be distributed at May-day and Martinmas, or soon afterwards. The corporation purchased the other moiety of these premises in 1689, for £41. 1s. 6d. It appears, this house was rebuilt at considerable expense by the corporation, one moiety of which they claimed to be re-imbursed, before making any payment on account of this charity. In 1333, they agreed to commence the payment of one moiety of the rent, as directed by the donor.

William Bird, by will 1686, gave to trustees and their heirs all his real and personal estate, (subject to certain limitations which never took effect), in trust, to pay one moiety of the yearly rents to the mayor and aldermen of the city of Coventry and their successors, to be distributed to the poor inhabitants of the said city, according to their discretion ; and the other moiety, to the ministers of Oakingham, Finchampstead, and Binfield, for the time being, and their successors, for charitable purposes. The property consisted of houses in Milk street and Wood street, London. About the year 1750, an information, at the suit of the Attorney-General, was brought in the Court of Chancery, against the corporation, in the course of which, the property was sold. A final decree was made 27th July, 1779, when the residue of certain balances was ordered to be invested in Old South Sea Annuities, in the name of the Accountant-general, making the whole amount of stock, £1547. 11s. 9d. This sum is now standing in the name of the corporation of Coventry, and yields a yearly income of £46. 8s. 5d. A sum of 20s. is given yearly on St. Thomas's day, to each of 46 poor men, selected from the different wards, and 8s. 6d. to one other person.

Joseph Symcox, intending to settle a certain sum for the use of the poor, but was prevented by death. By indenture 1705, this was carried into effect. That a rent charge of £6. after the death of Samuel Collins, and Mary his wife, should be paid to the corporation of Coventry, and their successors, issuing out of the premises, called the White Bear, in High street, (now the Craven Arms), to be employed in placing out apprentices, two poor boys of this city, which is accordingly done.

Thomas Crow, by will 1707, gave to his brother Robert Crow, certain tenements and lands; and, after his decease, they should, except the house given to Myles Flint, remain to the corporation of the city of Coventry, for certain charitable purposes. This property now produces an annual rent of £147., from which, eight poor widows each receive 2s. per week, and an annual distribution of about £88. to the poor of each ward, principally widows, of 10s. each is made: these, with repairs and other expenses at the distribution on St. Thomas's day, 1832, exhausted the balance in hand.

Samuel Collins, clothier, by will 1716, devised to the corporation of Coventry, and their successors, a yearly rent charge of £3. clear of taxes, to be issuing out of his lands in Foleshill and Exhall, in the county of the city of Coventry, payable on St. Thomas's day, to be employed in putting out a poor boy (the son of a freeman) apprentice; the first boy to be out of Bayley lane ward, in St. Michael's parish, the next out of Gosford street ward in the same parish, and so alternately.

Samuel Collins, (nephew of the above), by will 1721, devised an estate at Fillongley, to apply the rents, after the decease of his wife and the payment of taxes, &c., in putting out four poor boys, the sons of freemen, apprentices for seven years, to be chosen out of the parish of St. Michael. The estate contains 22a. 0r. 18p. of land, let for £40. per annum. He also devised the estates in Foleshill and Exhall, subject to the rent charge of £3. annually, left by his late uncle, to the corporation of Coventry, for putting out four apprentices for seven years, sons of freemen, to be chosen out of the city of Coventry. This estate consists of 28a. 1r. 21p. of land at Rowney Green, let for the annual rent of £60. The apprentices are appointed by members of the council, in rotation. This charity was many years negligently managed: Mr. S. Carter, the collector, was found to be indebted to these two estates a total balance of £457. 4s. 1d. but a bond had been given to the corporation for a sum of £1600. to liquidate this, and other balances owing.

Miles Flint, by will 1727, devised from certain property, two annuities of £5. 4s. 0d. each, to two poor maids or widows in the parish of St. Michael, 2s. each weekly, for life: he gave the said premises to John Fairfax, and the heirs of his body, with divers remainders over. These seem to have been paid by the corporation, in 1761; since which, there is no information respecting them.

Thomas Smith, by will 1728, gave to the alderman of Smithford street ward, 6s. 8d. to be by him given to some poor housekeeper of that ward, on St. Thomas's day, payable out of his house at the south-east corner of Market street in that ward, and is given as directed.

Donor unknown. The corporation hailiff receives a rent charge of 6s. 8d. per annum payable from a house in Smithford street, near the King's Head inn, the property of William Johnson, of Hinckley: the sum is given to a poor widow, on Ash-Wednesday.

Mary Radford, by will 1749, devised certain premises at or near Jordan Well, to be disposed of, and the produce to be placed out, and the interest to be yearly given, on the 21st of December, amongst six poor widows, of the parish of the Holy Trinity. This was, by indenture 1759, converted into a rent charge of 40s. on the premises, which is paid annually, at Lady-day, and given to six poor widows of the said parish.

*. The preceding charities are under the management of the corporation, the following are not.

Cow Lane Charity School was founded by Samuel Baker, of London, in which, during his life, twelve children were educated and clothed, under the management of Major Beak and others, as trustees. By will 1695. Mr. Baker devised all his houses and lands in London, &c. to be sold by his executors, Thomas Gooding and William Empson; and after discharging his debts, funeral expenses, and legacies, to pay the residue to his trustees, at Coventry, for such further works of charity, as they should appoint. By indenture 1704, stating that the executors under the above will refused to act, proceedings were instituted against them in the Court of Chancery, and Robert Beak, John Thompson, and John Collins, the trustees of the school at Coventry, were ordered to sell the estates, &c., and further reciting, that on the 19th of November, 10th of William III., the said persons, with £850. the residue of the above sale, purchased to them and their heirs, certain messuages and lands, in trust, for the maintenance of the said charity, and other works of charity, &c.

Samael Billing, by will, 1708, gave his messuage in Gosford street, Coventry, and his yard land, in Lutterworth, in the county of Leicester, to the trustees of the charity founded by Samuel Baker, and their heirs, upon trust; to employ the rents (except what was expended for taxes and repairs,) in clothing and educating such poor boys in the said city, as should be above the age of 13, and under the age of 16 years, in reading, writing, and arithmetic; to make them to be placed out apprentices, and in placing them out apprentices. He also gave to the said trustees, his house of Cross Cheaping, held of the corporation, at £8. per annum by lease, of which 40 years were to come; also, all the money due upon a mortgage from Thomas Viner, Esq. being about £300., to be laid out in the purchase of lands and tenements, in the names of the said trustees, and to sell the lease of his house in Cross Cheaping, to add to the above money. By indenture 1713, certain premises were purchased by the trustees for the sum of £535. 7s. 6d.

Thomas Crow, by will, 1707, directed that all the residue of his personal estate should be laid out in the purchase of lands to be disposed of to charitable uses; in 1708, an estate called the Stone House, with garden, &c., and other lands, containing together 15 acres, in the parish of Berkeswell, was purchased for £230.; the above residue, and enfeoffed to Joseph Olds and Miles Flint, upon trust, to dispose of the same; to fulfil the will of the said Thomas Crow, by employing the yearly rents in placing one or more not exceeding four boys of the city of Coventry, apprentices at the said city. Elizabeth Grosvenor conveyed to the trustees of Billing's charity £100., for which they were bound for the payment of £4. a year for her life, and after her decease to apply the interest to the like charitable purposes. Thomas Noxon, by will, 1785, gave £20. to the trustees of Baker's charity school, which was received in 1789. William Edwards, by will, 1789, gave £300. to the trustees of the charity school, of Cow Lane, founded by Samuel Baker, and Samuel Billing, for the use thereof. The rental of Baker's charity is £131., besides which, there is £578. 3s. three per cent. consols, yielding a dividend of £17. 6s. 2d. and £203. 4s. 1d. Old South Sea Annuities, yielding a dividend of £5. 2s. purchased with Wm. Edwards' gift, making a total income of £154. 8s. 2d. The rents derived from Billing's estates are £180. besides which, there is a sum of £677. 16s. 9d. three per cent. consols, yielding a dividend of £20. 6s. 8d. per annum, and a sum of £461. 17s. 8d.

Old South Sea Annuities, yielding a dividend of £13. 17s. 2d., making a total income of £214. 3s. 10d. Crow's charity premises are let for the yearly rent of £28, also a sum of £113. 19s. 10d. three per cent. consols, purchased from a sale of timber, yielding a dividend of £3. 9s. per annum, making a total income of £31. 9s.; making a grand total of £400. 1s. 0d: the average expenses, for the last six years, (1833) has exceeded £30. a-year on these three charities. The payments are, 60 guineas a-year to a school-master, by quarterly payments; he resides in the school-house, the trustees paying the assessed and parochial rates. For this salary, the master takes 42 boys from Coventry and the immediate neighbourhood; they are admitted not before 10 or 11 years of age: each remains three years, so that every year fourteen go out and fourteen are received: they are appointed in May yearly, each of the seven trustees naming two: they are children of poor people, not of any particular sect: they are, however, expected to attend the Unitarian meeting, on Sundays: they are taught reading, writing, arithmetic, and geography: each boy receives annually a suit of clothing and two pair of shoes, with a cap and stockings: all who stay three years and can find masters, are bound out apprentice, with a premium of £3., a complete suit of clothes, different from the school clothing. The average annual amount of the premiums with apprentices, is about £40., and the cost of the clothing about £120., and of stationery, including about £20. which includes the price of a bible given to each on being bound apprentice. The boys, also, on receiving their clothing, have 6d. each for a dinner, under Baker's will, with a few other outgoings. As there is a considerable surplus, the number of boys in the school is to be increased (1834) to 50.

John Thompson, by will, 6th Anne, directed his nephew to pay, within 12 months after his decease, £5. to the trustees of Mr. Baker's charity; he also gave, after the death of his wife, £15. to be paid by Mary Clarke, to the same trustees, towards keeping one boy in the school. In 1727, these sums were applied towards liquidating a debt on the school.

John Collins, who died in 1727, gave by will £10. to the trustees of Mr. Baker's charity, to be added to the £15. left by Mr. Thompson; this, with one year's interest, was paid in 1729, and applied in defraying the current expenses.

Bridget Southern, by will 1731, gave to John Gulson and three others, £10., to be by them applied for the benefit of the poor of the people, called Quakers, in the city of Coventry; also, all her messuages, and real estates, and residue of her money, and personal estate, to the said trustees, and their heirs, &c, to sell the same, and invest the money in a purchase of lands and tenements, for the education of poor children of the people, called Quakers, or others, being inhabitants of the city of Coventry, in learning to read and write, and for clothing them with outward garments of a brown-coloured stuff, and see that the poor girls amongst the Quakers should be first provided for, and then as many other poor girls of the city as might be, &c. Francis Craner, by will 1729, left a rent charge of £3. from her house in Bishop street, to be secured to the trustees of Bridget Southern's charity. The trustees now possess property producing £89. per annum. In 1812, the charity being considerably in debt, £90. was contributed by the Society of Friends in Warwick and Coventry, and Mr. Joseph Freeth, a trustee, left a legacy of £50. The schoolmistress has £25. a-year, and educates 30 girls; they are taught reading, writing, knitting, and sewing, and the mistress is allowed to take in work, of which she has the profit. The children are admitted at eight years of age and remain about three years; they make their own clothes, and knit their own stockings. The clothing, which they receive once a-year, costs £20. and £5. is allowed for coals, which, with land-tax and insurance, £3. 12s., makes a total expenditure of £53. 12s. The trustees are all of the Society of Friends, but there are no girls in Coventry, belonging to that society, of a class to require gratuitous instruction.

Katherine Bayley, by will, 1723, gave to the poor of the parish of St. Michael, £10., and to the poor of Trinity parish, £5., both to be distributed in bread; she also gave the sum of £600., and all the residue of her estate, after all payments, &c., unto her executors and trustees, in trust, to be by them laid out, and applied for the educating children in reading, writing, and casting accounts, &c. Francis Blythe, one of the trustees named in the will, established the school in Coventry, in 1733, and in 1735, appointed four co-trustees for its management. The property then consisted of certain tenements in Coventry, let at £24. per annum. There was also a sum of £340. personal estate. In 1742, a collection was first made at St. Michael's church, after a sermon preached for that purpose, which practice has since been regularly continued every year. From time to time, various legacies and donations have been given in augmentation of this charity. The property now comprises a school-house on the east side of Little Park street, containing a residence for the master, with a good garden. The income of the property from rent, mortgage, and dividends on stock, amounts annually to £153. 10s, and the average amount received from the sermon, is about £100. per annum. The school at present (1833) contains 35 boys, having been increased as the funds could afford. They are appointed by the trustees, and admitted at eleven years of age, and remain three years, during which time they receive a suit of clothes annually, and are instructed in reading, writing, and accounts; books, and all school requisites being found them. At fourteen, they are bound apprentice, with a premium of £3., and each boy then receives a bible and prayer-book. The master receives a salary of £50., and occupies his house free of rates and taxes, making a total expenditure of about £190., which leaves a surplus of about £50. to be invested in government securities. The affairs of the school are managed by ten trustees, and on the day of the annual sermon, the acting trustee gives a dinner to the clergyman and his co-trustees.

Fairfax's School originated in a donation of £100, by Samuel Fairfax, in 1751, which was subsequently increased, by collections after charity sermons, which in St. Michael's church averages annually about 100 guineas. In 1761, Rev. Mr. Fairfax gave £100; in 1766, Mr. Samuel Garratt, £200; in 1778, Mrs. Hannah Crynes, 200; in 1790, Mr. William Edwards, £300; in 1793, Edward Atkins, Esq., £500. in the three per cents; in 1828, Sir Skears Rew Knight, £100.; with many intermediate smaller benefactions, which have been invested partly on mortgage, and in the public funds. In 1814, a house on the north side of Spon street, was purchased for a residence for the master, at the cost, including a garden, of £489. 8s., and a new school-room erected in the yard, at the expense of about £370.: the garden did not join the house, and has since been sold for £100. The income of the charity is about £200. per annum. The school (1833) contains 40 boys, the number having been increased with the increase of the funds; the boys are selected by the trustees, from the poor of Coventry, and are admitted at 9½ years old, and remain three years in the school; they are gratuitously instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic; books, and all school requisites, being furnished by the trustees. Each boy receives a suit of clothes every year; and, when bound apprentice, is supplied with a suit of clothes, and a bible and prayer-book: about 14 boys are placed out annually. The master receives a salary of £40. a year, and occupies the house, free of rates and taxes: the expenditure nearly equals the income. The trustees, eight in number, hold their annual meeting in Passion-week, and fill vacancies in the school.

Blue Coat Charity School, for girls, was established about the commencement of the last century, by voluntary subscriptions: its funds have, from time to time, been augmented, by the gifts and bequests of various persons; among whom are, William Edwards, noticed before, £300.; Elizabeth Eglington, £100.; Rev. John Jaques, £50.; Sir Skears Rew, £100.; with many others, amounting in the whole to £1500.; which, at various times was, by the trustees, converted into real property: besides which, they have £750., advanced by the trustees to the churchwardens of the Holy Trinity, Coventry, at various times: for which, an annual interest of £37. 10s. is paid out of the church estates; £432, 8s. stock in the three-and-a-half per cents, producing an annual dividend of £15. 0s. 8d.: also, the trustees receive, as Godfrey's gift, from the churchwardens of Trinity parish, 10s. as the interest of £10.; the whole amounting to a permanent income (1833) of £134. 5s. 8d., which is aided by an annual collection at the church, the average amount of which is £100. The mistress receives a salary of £30. a year and resides in the house, rent and tax free; forty girls are taught and clothed, they are admitted at ten years of age, and stay from three to five years; they are taught to read, knit, and sew; work is taken into the school for their employment, and the mistress receives 5 per cent. on the profits; small sums are allowed out of the earnings for merit. All the girls are clothed once a year, previous to the day on which the sermon is preached. The six oldest girls are taken into the mistress's house, for their last year, to fit them for household servants, 8s. a week being paid for their board, amounting to £124. 16s.; also £5. per annum is allowed for coals. This charity is well-conducted, without any expense. Five of the vestry, with the vicar, act as trustees; one of the vestry goes out every year. On the settlement of the accounts, in July 1833, there was a balance in the hands of the accountant, of £111. 11s. 11½d., which he handed over to his successor, that office being performed in rotation.

National Schools. In the year 1813, a society was established, with a view of forming a central school; it met with liberal encouragement, and shortly some premises in Little Park street, were purchased. These, afterwards found too small, were sold for £191. 1s. 11d., and a new site purchased, upon which were erected the present commodious school-rooms, capable of accommodating 240 each, boys and girls, having a house for the master and mistress, in the centre, at a cost of £1600.; and by the powers of the deed for the erection, dated 10th of March, 1826, the premises were mortgaged to Sir Skears Rew, Knt., for £600. at 5 per cent. interest: of this sum, £300. was paid off in 1827, and the residue (1833) is still due: the schools are fully attended. A sum of £50. has been paid to this school, as the arrears of Brooke's charity; for which, bibles to the amount of 50s. a year, will be distributed by the trustees, among the children of the school. Also, the corporation have agreed to pay six years' arrears of the sum of £12 16s. 8d. due to them in respect of Christopher Davenport's gift, for a schoolmaster, and other objects, to be employed in the reduction of the debt of this school.

Elizabeth Swillington, about the year 1548, paid into the hands of Henry Overy, of Coventry, a sum of seven score pounds, to the intent to purchase land; and that with the yearly rents, the highways near to the city of Coventry, particularly those leading to Stivichall and Warwick, should be yearly repaired; and that, with the surplus of the said rents, the poor of the said city should be relieved. The total income of this charity is (1833) £190. 15s., subject to repairs, &c. The average cost of repairing the roads, is about £70. per annum; after which, the trustees distribute the surplus amongst the poor of the city of Coventry.

John Bohun, Esq., by will 1685, gave £100., to be distributed amongst poor people, of such as his brother George Bohun should think fit, and appointed him as his executor. George Bohun died before he had paid the money; and, by his will 1705, charged his estates with the payment of the said £100., and also bequeathed to the poor of the parishes of Coventry, Keresley, Cowndon, and Newland, £50., to be paid as his executors thought fit, and appointed George Guy and six others, executors. An information was filed in the Court of Chancery, by the Attorney-General, against George Guy and others, the executors, for the payment of the said £150. and the interest due. The cause was heard 13th May, 1718, and it was referred to one of the Masters of the court, to compute what was due for the said legacies, with interest, &c. The Master, by his report, 11th February, 1733, certified, that there was then due for principal and interest, the sum of £386. 11s. 3d., and appointed James Birch and eleven others, to be trustees: and it was afterwards ordered, that the money should be laid out in the purchase of South Sea Annuities, until a purchase in land could be obtained; and that the said trustees should pay one-third part of the dividends to the poor of St. Michael's and Trinity, and the other two-thirds to the poor of the districts of Cowndon, Keresley, and Newland. £346. 6s. 1d. South Sea Annuities, was purchased; and in 1756, new trustees were appointed, and £27. 12s. was paid for the cost of the suit, out of the interest. The interest, £10. 7s. 8d. per annum, is received by the trustees; of which, one-third is distributed to the poor of the city of Coventry, and the remaining two-thirds divided betwixt the three other places.

John Brooke, by will 1679, gave his messuage in Earle street, Coventry, after the death of his mother, to his sister Anne, for life, with various limitations; then to the mayor and aldermen of the city of Coventry. By indenture 1719, the said Anne Brooke, for barring all estates, tail, &c., released to Fetherstone Paston and his heirs, the said messuage and garden, that a recovery might be suffered thereof, to ensure to the said Anne Brooke for her life, and after her decease, to the use of the said Thomas Rigby and his heirs: provided, that he and his heirs, should yearly expend £6. in buying bibles, to be bestowed on the 14th of April, amongst poor children of the city of Coventry. The recovery was accordingly suffered, and the bibles were distributed regularly, till about 1799. Afterwards, Alderman Williamson purchased the premises, but did not resume the distribution of bibles. Mr. Joseph Williamson, the son and devisee, was a minor when he succeeded to the property, and had never heard of the charge; and, on an examination of his deeds in 1833, expressed his regret at the omission, and undertook to pay £50. for the arrears which had accrued since he obtained his majority, and to distribute bibles, properly lettered, as Brooke's charity, to the value of £6. annually. It was suggested, that the £50. should be paid to the treasurer of the National school, towards liquidating the debt, which was acceded to.

Elizabeth Muston, spinster, by will 1718, gave all her property to her mother, during her life; and, after her decease, she gave 20s. yearly, to be paid out of her house in Gosford street, to the minister of the society to which she belonged, so long as the meeting should be kept up; and all overplus rents, besides repairs, she gave to some poor widow or maid belonging to the society; to be paid weekly by 2s., to be of the age of 50 years or upwards, and to be continued for the term of her natural life. The distribution commenced about 1740. the 20s. having been some years previous, on the death of Mrs. Muston. The premises were let on a term of 42 years from Michaelmas, 1804, at an old of £J., on account of money expended in improvements. The premises are considered to be now (1833,) worth an annual rent of £20.

James Smith, by will, 1724, gave after the death of Katharine, his wife, in case of failure of issue of the marriage, &c., after paying various legacies and life annuities, and £500., part of his wife's marriage settlement, which, by the articles, was to return; he gave all the rest to the charitable uses specified in his will, and his will was, that as the said annuities should fall in, the money should be put out at interest, until the yearly profits, besides the outgoings, should amount to £50. per annum, which he then appointed to be distributed to 10 poor housekeepers, having one or more child or children, 8s. 4d. per month, for one year, to be paid on the first day of each calendar month; and after two years expired from the time, the same housekeeper, if still qualified, should be capable of having the same again; but none to have it above one year together, except in extraordinary cases, all the trustees agreeing thereto; but in no year more than three of the said housekeepers should have it again. And when the excess of the yearly income, above £50., should be sufficient to pay for 20 tons of coal, he appointed that such coals should be bought and distributed equally to 20 poor families, inhabitants of Coventry, between the 1st of November and 2nd of February, in every year; and when all his estate that was out on annuity should come in, he appointed that 20 bibles, of not more than 4s. or less than 3s. 6d. price for each, should be given yearly, on the 25th or 26th of March, to 16 young men or young women in the city of Coventry, who could read, and were of the age of 16 years or upwards, and to four such like young men or women of the parish of Bedworth; and that on the same day every year £40.

should be given to 20 poor families, in the said 40s. to each family; provided that where single persons should appear to his trustees to be great objects of charity, such persons, not exceeding ten in any year, should be capable of having the said gift: and appointed 11 trustees for the management of the said charities; and he appointed the sum of £3. to be spent in collations for the trustees, and £5. per annum for entering and keeping the accounts of the trust, each trustee to act in turn; and desired that a strong box with three locks should be provided, for holding the accounts, &c., the keys to be kept by the accountant; the preceding, and the following one, in case of a deficiency of his estate, to answer all the purposes, the loss should fall on such charities as the trustees should think proper; and in case of increase, should go in augmentation of such as they should think fit; and whatever money there was to spare, beyond his said specific charities, should be invested in the purchase of lands, so that the fund for the same might be in yearly rents as soon as possible after his wife's death. The testator died 17th of May, 1730, without issue; after which, an information being filed in the court of chancery, the charity was established by a decree, 18th of January, 1758. By the Master's report, 1st of May, 1760, it was certified that £2,828. 15s. 1d. had been paid into court, and that the real estates consisted of freehold messuages, in the city of Coventry, of the yearly rent of £43. 1s.; and the costs of all parties amounted to £143. 1s. 10d.: new trustees were appointed. James Boydall, by will, 1768, gave the sum of £200., to be placed out on government security, to be placed out by the trustees of Samuel Smith's charity, of which he was one, to be applied by them in augmenting the said charities, &c. The property of the charity now consists of the freehold houses in High-street and Hay-lane, in the city of Coventry, old timbered buildings, let for £65. per annum, a messuage, garden, and back premises, in Little Park-street, let for £20. a year, in good repair. The sum of £3,439. 17s. 2d., Old South Sea Annuities, standing in the name of the Attorney-General, producing an annual dividend of £103. 4s.; of the original sum paid into court £833. 6s. 8d. had been set as a fund for the payment of £25. a year, for the life of the widow of the testator. On her death, in April, 1774, by an order the June following, the above-named sum was carried over to the said charity. The total income, amounting to £188. 4s., is disposed of agreeable to the donor's intention, requiring an average of £181. 18s. per annum.

John Moore, of Coventry, by will, 1729, devised certain estates for charitable purposes, to be employed by his trustees for the use of poor people of Coventry, and directed there should always be five trustees. The property, partly situated in the city of Coventry, partly in the hamlet of Keresley, and in the parish of Foleshill, in the county of the said city, and partly in the parish of Nuneaton, in the county of Warwick, producing an annual rental of £454. 1s. 4d., in (1833.) The income is thus disposed of:—The sum of £40. is given to forty of the poorest tenants, 20s. each from each of their rents. A sum, averaging £190. per annum, is given away in money and coals, at Christmas; to each of the trustees a proportion of the fund is allotted for distribution. The receiver has a salary of £20. a year for collecting the rents; £25. is paid for interest, on money borrowed, for building four new houses; the average expense of repairs amounts to about £135. per annum. An expense of about £4. a year is incurred at the two meetings of the trustees. At the audit, 6th of March, 1833, a balance of £49. 5s. 2d. remained in the hands of the receiver.

The Parish of St. Michael. The Church Estate. From a period, antecedent to the year 1564, the churchwardens of St. Michael have been in possession of premises, in Far Gosford-street, and Little Park-street; of which the rents have always been applied to the purposes of the church rate. The former premises were let on a lease of thirty-years, to serjeant Bushell, from 1804; he covenanted to erect three new brick messuages within three years, at the yearly rent of £16. 5s.; but now (1833) they are worth about £30. a year. The premises in Little Park-street are called Witherley House, now divided into three tenements, and let on lease, in 1832, for twenty-one years, at the rent of £12., payable half yearly, the tenant covenanting to keep and leave the premises in repair. Samuel Collins, by will, 1721, gave to the churchwardens of St. Michael, the sum of £800., to be paid by his executor within two years after his decease, upon trust, to purchase lands within ten miles of the city of Coventry, and employ the rents and profits towards the repairs of the church of St. Michael, as occasion should require. By indenture, 1752, a farm house, and out-buildings, with 68a. 1r. 24p. of land; of which a small portion is tithe free; is in Exhall; the whole being let for £60. per annum. The sum of £20. is also paid from the charity of Joseph Chambers, as before noticed; with various other small gifts to the church, amounting in the whole to £131. There is also two small tenements held at will, under the Bishop of Lichfield, put in repair by the churchwardens, and occupied by their tenants, at rents amounting to £18. 9s. per annum. The whole of the above income is carried to the general account of the church rate. This is aided from rents raised from pews, to the amount of about £150. per annum. Yet this ancient and magnificent fabric constantly exhausts these resources, and render a rate necessary.

Guild Payments. The sum of £6. is annually paid to the vicar by the corporation of the guild and chantry lands, which they purchased of King Edward VI.; and towards the purchase the corporation received from the churchwardens the sum of £100., the corporation covenanting to pay to them the annual sum of £6., by equal portions, at Lady-day and Michaelmas.

Henry Boteler, during his life time, settled lands at Kenwaldsey on trustees, for keeping an obit, &c., and for preaching three sermons on Easter Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday yearly, by three clerks, to be chosen by the mayor; each clerk to have 6s. 8d.; in which sermons he was to be prayed for by name. By indenture, 1492. Isabel, widow of Henry Boteler, conveyed these estates to the corporation. The payment is included in the sum of £2., paid to the vicar of St. Michael's, for preaching three sermons at Easter, by the corporation, who still hold a farm at Kinwaldsey.

John Tallans, by will, 1563, gave to the churchwardens of Trinity church in Coventry, his house in Foleshill, so that they should procure three sermons yearly, two at Trinity church, and one at St. Michael's, and the preachers to have 6s. 8d. each sermons. The house has been pulled down some years; it was situate near Little Heath, upon land now the property of John Butlin, Esq.; nothing has been paid (1833) since 1818. Mr. Butlin's agent agreed to pay the £15. due to the vicars; as directed in this parish the sermon is preached on the 1st. of January.

Sampson Hopkins, in 1623, left 20s. for three sermons, on the 1st and 6th of January, and 5th of November, to be paid by the drapers' company to the vicar of St. Michael.

— Rogerson left 20s. for three sermons at St. Michael's, on the 25th, 26th, and 27th of December, yearly; this is paid by the drapers' company.

Sir Brian J'Anson, by indenture, 1628, in compliance with the godly intent of Henry Breeces, his late father-in-law, secured a yearly rent of 21s., to be issuing out of certain closes at Spon End, for finding three sermons yearly in the city of Coventry; of which 1s. was to go to the bell-ringer. Mr. Joseph Barnes, jun., (1833,) pays the money, and the sermons are regularly preached.

Mary Heath, in 1741, gave £10., the interest to be paid to the vicar, for administering the holy sacrament on Good Friday, annually. Mrs. Anne Allison gave £10. to pay the vicar 10s. for preaching a sermon on the same day. These sums were paid to the trustees of the church estate, and £1. annually is paid the vicar.

Thomas Jesson, James Harewell, Thomas Brownrigg, and Isaac Walden's gifts are already noticed, with others, for bread.

John Skeers, by indenture, 1753, conveyed certain premises to trustees in trust, to permit the vicar and churchwardens of St. Michael to receive the rents thereof; and after payment of the repairs and other out-goings, to retain 10s. every year for their trouble; and to distribute yearly 52s. in bread to the poor inhabitants of the said parish; 12d. every Sunday morning, and the residue of the yearly rents to lay out in bread, to be distributed on the 1st day of January, after morning service. The premises now produce a rent of £9. a year; the whole of which is given away, agreeable to the donor's intention.

William Edwards, by will, 1789, gave to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Michael, £300. upon trust; to place the same at interest, and apply the produce in providing bread in sixpenny loaves; to be distributed every Sunday morning to the poor. He also gave to the said churchwardens £100., the interest to be applied, £2. 10s. for ringing the six and nine o'clock bells, and the residue to the sexton, and the rest of the ringers equally, on New Year's Day, old style; and after the receipt, to ring a peal in remembrance of the donor. The two sums were, 3rd September, 1833, invested in the purchase of £453. 5s. 2d., three per cent. consols, in the name of John Ralphs and three others, producing an annual dividend of £13. 12s., and is divided according to the donor's will.

Elizabeth Eglington, by will, 1822, gave to the vicar and churchwardens of St. Michael, £290. for a distribution of bread, in sixpenny loaves, on Candlemas-day, and a distribution weekly at the church. This legacy was invested in the purchase of £305. 14s. 10d. new three and a half per cents; the dividend, £10. 13s., is received by the churchwardens, of which 50s. is given in bread on Candlemas day, and the remainder in sixpenny loaves weekly, at the church, except 6s. paid to the sexton for his trouble in distributing the bread.

Ann Yardley, by will, 1826, gave £100. new four per cent. annuities, to the rector or minister, and churchwardens, of St. Michael, in Coventry, upon trust; to employ the dividends in the purchase of bread, to be distributed by them on St. Thomas's day; also a similar bequest to the parishes of the Holy Trinity and St. John. The stock is now reduced to three and a half per cent., and the dividend, £3. 10s., is distributed accordingly.

John Downes, by will, 1708, devised an annual rent-charge of 20s. per annum, to be issuing out of the Red Lion, in Grey Friars' lane, for buying 20 dozen of bread, to be distributed by the churchwardens and overseers of St. Michael's, on the 30th January, yearly, among the poor; equally among the poor of Spon street and Broadgate Wards. Joseph Hayes, and Elizabeth Hayes, his sister, are owners of the house, and pay the charge, which is given in bread, 10s. to each ward.

Richard Lea, by will, 1668, gave after the death of two persons, a small rent-charge, &c., which, in 1786, appears to have produced 6s. 8d. per annum, of which nothing is now known.

Elizabeth Wright, by will, 1714, gave to trustees, on trust, to permit (after the death of two persons,) a meadow, called Taylor's Meadow, in West Bromwich, with a barn thereon, to permit the vicars of St. Michael and the Holy Trinity, in Coventry, to let the same, and apply the rents to six poor women of St. Michael, and six poor women of Holy Trinity, frequenting the church; 15s. a-piece to buy a warm petticoat of linsey and a pair of shoes for each. The property is situated in the parishes of Harborn, West Bromwich, and Handsworth, and including some small allotments, and a purchase of 2r. 30p. for £70., under the West Bromwich inclosure Act, in 1801, now contains 10a. 0r. 25p., let at the yearly rent of £32. The vicar of St. Michael receives the whole rent, and pays one half to the vicar of the Holy Trinity; six poor women are provided with about 14 yards each of stuff for gowns and petticoats, with a pair of shoes; the residue is given by the vicar in private charity.

Samuel Edwards, by will, 1729, gave to Lawrence Wright, and six others, all the residue of his estate, and also his house in Smithford street, upon trust, to distribute the income thereof, yearly, on the 18th of November, to honest poor people, in Smithford street ward, having a special regard to widowers and widows, and might spend one guinea at the time of such distribution. The premises form part of the Fleur-de-Lys public house, and are let for £12. 12s., but after Michaelmas, 1834, would be let for the yearly rent of £20., and distributed as above.

Thomas Rigby, in 1777, bequeathed £100., the interest to be applied in purchasing Bibles, to be distributed by the churchwardens. This sum was received by the trustees of the church estate, and £5. a year has been regularly expended and distributed in Bibles.

Thomas Burgh, M. D., in 1772, gave £100. to be invested in the hands of the trustees of the church estate, and the interest to be received by the vicar for his own use until a vicarage house should be perpetually annexed to the church, and then the interest to be applied towards the repairs of the said house.

Richard Burgh, by will, 1803, bequeathed £1,000. to trustees, for and towards new pewing the parish church of St. Michael, agreeable to the majority of a vestry of the parish; and until so applied to remain at interest. The legacy was received about 1817, and £100. deducted for legacy duty. In 1821 it was in the bank of Messrs. Troughton & Co. when they failed. The trustees, in the whole, proved for £1,375. 16s. 3d. and dividends to the amount of £1,008. 18s. 4d. The sum of £1,440. 8s. 6d. New three and a half per cent stock, now, (1833,) stands in the name of the trustees, producing a half yearly dividend of £25. 16s. 9d. This is intended to accumulate till sufficient, without aid from the parish to re-pew the church.

Holy Trinity Parish Church Lands. This parish is in possession of considerable property, for the use and reparation of the church, which has been acquired at various times, of which the total rental and produce of stock was, (1833), £550. 12s. 8d. to which is added the income derived from pews in the church, £64. 14s. 0d. This fund supplied the ordinary purposes of a church rate, prior to 1826, when, from the dilapidated state of the church, a rate was levied on the parish; and in the three following years, and in 1831, the feoffees were obliged to borrow a considerable sum, for which they pay yearly £226., the greater part being on annuities. The total payments in 1833 amounted to £493. 3s. 10d. Sermons.—The sum of £3. 11s. 6d. is paid by the churchwardens to the vicar for three sermons in Whitsun week, from Henry Boteler's charity, 7th of Henry VII. One from £10. left by Samuel Frankland, in 1691, for a sermon, yearly, on the 5th of November; and Mary Pollard, in 1817, paid to the accountant churchwardens £30., to pay annually to the vicar a guinea for preaching a sermon on Good Friday, and 10s. 6d. for a sermon on Ascension Day. Also, the corporation pay to the vicar £3. 17s. 8d. for sermons, noticed before. Bread Charities.—£13. 9s. 0d. is annually paid by the corporation from charities already mentioned.

William Thompson, by will, 1574, gave to trustees, and their heirs, a tenement, with a garden and orchard thereto, situate at Counden-in-Urchenfield, near the city of Coventry, on trust, to permit the churchwardens of Trinity church to receive the rents and distribute them; 9s. thereof to poor people, by 4d. each, and 1s. to them for their pains, and the rest to be applied in repairs to the house. This estate forms part of the church property; 10s. is given away in groats.

Elizabeth Hurt, by will, 1578, bequeathed a rent charge of 20s. yearly, to be issuing out of her house, in Broad Gate street, in the city of Coventry, for the providing of wood and coal. The house is now (1833,) the property of Mr. Thomas Smith, who pays the money, and it is distributed accordingly.

Jane Piggin, by will, 1612, gave £13. 6s. 8d. to the corporation of Coventry, to the use that they should pay to the vicar and churchwardens of the parish of the Holy Trinity, to be distributed, 20s. yearly, to the poor of the said parish. It is given in groats, to 60 poor widows, at Christmas.

Thomas Godfrey gave 10s. for the clothing of some poor boy, on the 29th of September, yearly. This has for many years been applied to the Blue Coat School.

Winifred Younge, by will, gave £50., which was paid into the Council House, in Coventry, in 1706, there to remain, on trust, to pay the churchwardens and overseers of Holy Trinity parish, yearly, 50s., to be distributed equally between 12 poor widows, living in West Orchard street, in the said parish, which is regularly done.

James, Lord Viscount Lifford, by will, 1785, gave to the minister and churchwardens of Trinity parish, and their successors, the annual rent of £5., payable out of premises in Fillongley, in trust, to apply the same in repairing the family vault, &c.; and the residue so be disposed of amongst the poor of Cross Cheaping ward, in the said parish. The £5. is annually received from Lord Lifford, and disposed of accordingly.

Rev. John Rogers, by will, 1735, gave to the parish of the Holy Trinity, in the city of Coventry, £14. towards the support of a workhouse, to be paid out of the Manchester Park estate. This annuity, deducting £1. 6s. 8d. for land tax, is paid by the owner of the estate to the churchwardens of this parish, and paid to the directors of the poor of the united parishes of St. Michael and the Holy Trinity.

West Orchard Almshouses consist of a building of eight rooms, two above, and two below, on either side of an entry, occupied by poor persons, placed therein by the accountant churchwarden, with the sanction of the vicar. By an indenture, 1638, John Clarke purchased these premises; part of the ancient guilds and chauntries, in consideration of £8. paid to the corporation. Several other benefactions are previously noticed as paid by the corporation.

St. John's Parish.—See Downes Gift.—10s. worth of bread is distributed to the poor in Spon street ward, yearly, on the 30th of January.

Collins Charity.—Cloth for 12 or 14 gowns is sent from St. Michael's, made up by the parish, and distributed to poor persons.

Joseph Vernon, by will, 1742, bequeathed three guineas yearly to the lecturer of St. John's church for reading evening prayers, and one guinea for preaching a sermon yearly, on Good Friday. These payments have been discontinued for the last 30 years.

Nathaniel Crynes, by will, 1745, gave to his sister, Hannah Crynes, £150., on condition that she secured it so that after her death the curate who should read prayers at six o'clock every evening, at St. John's church, in Coventry, should receive the interest of it. Hannah Crynes, by her will, 1774, also left £150. to her trustees, on trust, to invest the same in the funds, and pay the dividends to the under schoolmaster of the free school for reading prayers every day in the parish church of St. John. These sums were invested in the three per cent. consols, and produce a dividend of £14. 9s. 8d., standing in the names of the trustees of Fairfax's school, who pay the dividends to the under master, but no evening or daily prayers are now read in the church.

Ann Yardley, by will, 1826, gave £100. new four per cent. annuities, to the rector and churchwardens of St. John's parish, on trust, to apply the dividends in the purchase of bread for the poor on St. Thomas's day. The sum of £5. 5s. as three half-yearly dividends, (the stock, in 1832, having been reduced to three and a half per cent.) which was distributed on St. Thomas's day, 1833, and a tablet set up in the church.

Murdock's Gift.—The Drapers' Company pay 6s. 8d. to this parish for a sermon.

William Wheale.—The Mercers' Company have the management of this.—For these see St. Michael.

KNIGHTLOW HUNDRED

Is the largest division, and forms the principal part of the east side of the county, and is divided into four divisions, viz. :—Kenilworth, lying north from Warwick; Kirby, near Coventry; Rugby, south by east from Coventry; and Southam, south by east from Warwick. The Knightlow hundred contains 182,350 acres of land; and in 1841, 20,740 inhabited houses, 1,534 uninhabited, and 220 were building; with 100,250 inhabitants; of whom 47,860 were males, 52,390 females; of these numbers 22,262 males, 23,269 females, were under 20 years of age; 25,588 males, 29,125 females, were 20 years of age, and upwards; 82,524 persons were born in this county, and 17,726 elsewhere.

THE KIRBY DIVISION

Comprises 24 parishes, 4 perpetual curacies, 1 chapelry, and 1 extra parochial liberty; viz., Allesley, Anstey, Arley, Astley, Bedworth, Binley, Brinklow, Bulkington, Burton Hastings, Combe Fields or Abbey, extra par, City of Coventry, Holy Trinity, St. John's and St. Michael's, and the perpetual curacies of Christ's Church, St. Peter and St. Thomas, Exhall, Foleshill, with St. Paul's, p. c.; Harborough Magna, Keresley, and Coundon, p. c.; Monks Kirby, with Copston-Magna chapelry, Shilton, Sowe, Stivichall, Stoke, Stretton Baskerville, Willey, Withybrook, Wolvey, and Wyken. This division contains 64,990 acres of land; in 1841, 11,982 inhabited houses; 976 uninhabited, and 109 building; 56,308 inhabitants; of whom 27,050 were males, and 29,258 females; of these numbers, 12,668 males, and 13,377 females, were under 20 years of age; 14,382 males, 15,882 females, 20 years of age, and upwards. 37,323 persons were born in this county, and 7,105 elsewhere.

ALLESLEY, a pleasant village and extensive parish, on an eminence 2 miles W. by N. from Coventry, is not mentioned in Domesday. The manor in the reign of Edward III, was vested in the family of Hastings, who had a spacious residence here, "on the brow of a hill in the park;" though Dugdale could discover no record of its being so called. A well, faced with stone, was discovered within the inner moat, early in the last century, which is still open, being the only existing remains of the castle. The manor passed from the Hastings to Sir William Beauchamp, by marriage; and by his granddaughter, to the Nevilles, one of whom, before 1640, sold it to Sir Henry Compton; and from him it passed to the Flints, and thence to the Neales, who have a handsome residence called "Allesley Park."

This parish contains 4242A. 1R. 33P.; of which, in 1840, 2453A. 0R. 28P. were meadows; 1213A. 1R. arable; and 83A. 3R. 20P. were roads and waste. In 1841, here were 202 houses, and 963 inhabitants; in 1801, 752; 1821, 844; 1831, 875: rateable value, £7,143. 10s. 5d. The principal land owners are Francis Blythe Harris, Esq., Henry Greswolde, Esq., Richard Northey, Esq., Rev. William Thomas Bree, and Rev. Edward Neale, who is also lord of the manor. Lord Leigh, the executors of the late Mr. William Docker, Mr. Richard Gilbert, and others have also estates here. The church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, surmounted by a steeple, containing a peal of five bells, is situated on the summit of the village, "embosomed in trees, has a very pleasing and picturesque appearance on the approach from Coventry: a few years ago, the interior underwent some judicious alterations, by means of which, a considerable accession of pew room has been obtained, and the appearance of the church greatly improved. The living is a rectory, valued in K. B. at £17. 18s. 9d., now £749.; Rev. William Thomas Bree, M. A., patron and incumbent. The tithe was commuted April 2nd, 1840, at £786. The Rectory is a good residence near the church. In the diluvial gravel of this parish, specimens of silicious or fossil wood are frequently found, especially in the pits lying between the village and Coventry; some of these are very fine and interesting, exhibiting in their horizontal sections, the central pith, and occasionally knots in the wood, as perfect as in living trees; and in 1831, a butt was discovered, measuring twelve feet in length and five in circumference. These specimens are extremely hard, capable of taking a most beautiful polish, and in that state display the grain of the wood as completely as it is seen in recent timber. They appear to be portions of different species of trees, but whether referable to any now existing, is a vain speculation, and if deposited in their present situation at the Mosaic deluge, it is evident that they must have been then in a fossil state, since the fractures are those of stone, not of wood, and it would be impossible to break wood into such fragments as are regularly discovered.

Brownshill, a hamlet $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. is partly in this parish, and partly in the chapelry of Coundon. Corley Moor, 3 miles N. W., about 50 acres, is in this parish, which was enclosed about 20 years ago, and contains a few scattered houses. Easton Green, 1 mile S. by W. consists of eight scattered farms and a number of cottages. Hawkes End, 1 mile N. W. consists of several scattered farms and a small corn mill. Pickford Green, 2 miles W. on which are three farms. The parish also contains many other scattered farms bearing no name.

Fairs: first Monday in February, first Monday in March, Monday nearest 18th of June, Wednesday nearest 1st of August and September, October 8th, and December 12th, CHARITIES.—Martha Flint, in 1705, conveyed a cottage, in Allesley, and a croft adjoining the said cottage, to Richard Eburne, and two others, and their heirs, on trust, for the benefit of a schoolmaster, to teach poor children to read, write, and cast accounts, and the principles of religion. Also, the said Richard Eburne covenanted to grant an annuity of £6 a year, out of a close in Allesley, called the New Close, for the maintenance of such a schoolmaster. By indenture, 1812, the above premises were conveyed to the Rev. Edward Neale, and fourteen others, on trust, for perpetuating the said school. John Lant, by will, gave to the rector and churchwardens of Allesley, and to the persons seised of his real estate, £100, in trust. This now stands in £105. Three and a half per cent. stock, in the name of William Mister Burton; the dividend, £3. 13s. 6d., is paid to the schoolmaster; making the total income of the school £44. 16s.; when no repairs are required, the whole income is paid to the master. For these emoluments, the master is required to instruct all the sons of parents in Allesley, who do not rent more than £10. a year. The master has also the school with a house and large garden, rent free; Samuel Chapman, master.

William Smith, of Allesley, by will, 1778, bequeathed £20. to Samuel Docker, his executor, upon trust, to place out the same, and pay the interest, to the trustees of the charity school, to buy books for the use of the poor children. The sum of £1. annually was received by the vicar as interest for the above, till 1826, when William Docker, the son of Samuel Docker, discontinued the payment; he discovering the sum was not charged on his estate.

Church Estate. In a deed, 1754, certain estates are described as applied to the repairs of the church; some exchanges were made, and allotments awarded at the inclosure; the whole income (1833) amounts to £39. 14s. 1d., and is laid out in the repairs of the church.

Poors Land. Certain donations, amounting to £98., with which a tenement and certain lands were purchased in this parish; the rent thereof to be given in money, on St. Thomas's Day, excepting 6s., which is to be given in bread on Christmas-day; this property containing 7a. 3r., with an allotment on Brownhill Green, nearly adjoining, is now let for £16. per annum. Robert Moore, by will, 1639, gave £4. to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, which was to be let out at 6s. interest; this sum is supposed to be included in the £98.; and as the value of property has increased, this interest has been advanced; and for which, £1. 4s. is now paid, which is distributed in bread, according to the donor's will, on St. Thomas's day, in sixpenny loaves.

Mary Tallis, by will, 1637, left 15s. yearly out of Berks land to the poor of the town of Allesley. Fillongley and Corley, 5s. to each town, to be paid at Easter; John Awson is the present owner.

Solomon Smith, by will, 1668, devised to the poor of Allesley, the sum of 6s., to be paid out of a house where Richard Gibbs then dwelt; this has not been received since 1786. Mr. Taylor gave 20s., the interest to be given in bread to the poor, on Candlemas-day; nothing is now known of this.

Ann Ebournne, by will, 1745, gave £100. to the poor of Allesley, to be placed out in the name of the minister and churchwardens; one moiety of the interest to be paid on the 1st of March, equally, between four old maids or widows; and the other moiety, to four poor girls, equally, towards clothing them on going out to service.

Martha Wigley, by will, in 1773, after reciting the bequest of Mrs. Ann Ebournne gave to the minister and churchwardens the sum of £100., to be placed out at interest, and the interest to be distributed annually upon the same day among four poor widows and four poor children, of Allesley, equally. These two legacies are now invested in £201. 18s. 4d. Three and a half per cent. stock, in the names of the Rev. William Bree and three others. The dividend, £7. 1s. 4d., is distributed between six poor old women and six girls.

Elizabeth Tristram, in 1754, gave £50. to the poor. Anne Cole, 1759, gave £20.

John Taylor, 1766, gave £20., and Richard Bosworth, 1774, gave £20., to the poor. And John Barber, by will, 1780, gave to the minister and churchwardens of Allesley, £40., in trust, to apply the interest in the purchase of bibles and prayer books. In respect of these legacies, there is now a sum of £157. 10s. Three and a half per cent. stock. The dividends amount to £5. 10s. 2d., of which sum, £1. 13s. 10d. is considered the produce of Barber's charity, and disposed of by the rector in bibles to poor persons of the parish; and the remainder, £3. 16s. 4d., is distributed on Christmas-day, New Years-day, and Candlemas-day, by the rector.

ANSTEY, a parish and small village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. from Coventry, was part of the extensive possessions of the Countess Godiva; and, in the 30th of Henry II., was held by Roger de Burcherville, under a grant from one of the Earls of Chester. The manor subsequently underwent many changes of proprietors, and is at present vested in the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, except the Hall and a small portion of land round it, which is the seat and property of Lieut. Col. Henry William Adams. The principal lessees are Lieut. Col. Adams, John Pridmore, Wm. Fdk. Pridmore, Rev. T. C. Adams. Thomas Reynolds, and several others; the former is lord of the manor. The parish contains 990 acres of land, and, in 1841, here were 54 houses, and 224 inhabitants; in 1801, 189; 1821, 205; and 1831, 268; rateable value £2,722. The Church is a small ancient edifice, built or restored early in the 17th century, and contains nave, chancel, and one aisle; the living is a vicarage, valued at £63, in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Coker Adams, M. A. The magistrates meet at the Fox Inn, every Tuesday. The Oxford canal crosses this parish.

CHARITIES.—Rev. John Millon, by will 1719, left the residue of his property for the purpose of establishing a school, for the benefit of the poor of Anstey and Shilton. It is supposed the whole produce was laid out in building a school on land belonging to the lord of the manor, for which a rent of 2s. 2d. is paid. The house is the residence of the master and mistress, and in which a room is devoted to the use of the school. About 40 children of the two parishes attend, who each pay for their instruction 6d. a week; this school is situate at Shilton.

ARLEY, a small pleasant village and scattered parish, joining Astley, 5 miles E. by N. from Coleshill, was possessed by Christina, a woman of considerable consequence at the time of the conquest; and afterwards devolved to Ralph de Limesy; from which family, by various transmissions, the manor, in 1723, became the joint property of Gerard Lord Kinsale, and Andrew Thornagh, Esq. The old hall, or manor house, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. of the church, is very ancient, was formerly moated all round, and is now occupied by John Lloyd, farmer. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is a small ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and tower, with three bells; on the north wall of the chancel is affixed a monument, in memory of Jane Saynt Andrew, who died 1619, with her effigy in a devotional attitude; there are also several other ancient monuments. The living is a rectory valued in K. B., at £9. 0s. 7d., now £407.; Rev. Roger Ryland Vaughton, M. A., patron, and incumbent. The rectory is a neat residence near the church. Tithes commuted, 1840. at £351. 4s; there are 73a. 3r. 12p. of glebe land. The parish contains 1.929a. 0r. 9p., rateable value, £2,900.; Charles Foulger, Esq., Mrs. Shaw, Alfred Ashley Vaughton, Esq., Samuel Badger, Esq., Lord Aylesford, Lord Leigh, Bishop of Gloucester, C. N. Newdegate, Esq., trustees of Avery's charity; Mrs. Ann Hollick, Thomas Owen, Rev. R. Vaughton, Bond's hospital, Coven-
beth Wright, are the principal owners; the two former, are lord and lady of the manor. Here are also several other small freeholders.

Sloley Hall, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. W., is a large neat house, situated in a beautiful valley, the property and residence of Mrs. Eliza Minett. Sloley hill consists of several scattered farms, 1 mile S. W. Gun hill, two farms $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. Ballard's green, 1 mile N. W.; and Divett's green, one farm $\frac{1}{2}$ mile W.

CHARITIES.—William Avery, by will, 1732, gave all his messuages and lands in Arley, Over Whitaker, Fillongley, and elsewhere, to William Dilke, of Maxtoke Castle, and ten others, and their heirs, upon trust, (among other things), out of the rents thereof, to apply £10. yearly, for the maintenance of a schoolmaster in Arley, for teaching poor boys and girls of Arley, to read, write, and cast accounts. The sum of £10. is paid by the trustees to a schoolmaster, to which a gratuity of £5. is also given, and an acknowledgment of 1s. a year is paid to the parish for a house and garden, for the master. In respect of these emoluments, and £10. a year contributed by the parish, the master instructs all the children of the parish. In 1838, John and Francis Holmes, Esqs., natives of this parish, but who have for many years, and are now residing at Bristol, gave £600., the interest to be paid for the education of the poor of this parish for ever; James Harris, master, whose salary is £35. per annum.

Maunday Money. Out of the hall meadow there issues 10s. a year, to be distributed to the poor, payable on Maunday Thursday; D. S. Dugdale, Esq., as the owner, pays the money to the churchwardens, which is given to a poor widow every six years.

Richard Avery gave 20s., to be paid annually to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Arley, to be distributed in bread, on the first Sunday's of February, May, August, and November, by equal portions, 1s. 8½d. taken out yearly for land tax. The charge is paid from Butler's farm in Arley.

John White gave, 1660, certain bequests, (See Fillongley). This parish receives 6s. 8d. a year; and one moiety of the rent of land, now let for £17., is carried by the trustees to the account of this parish. Also the parish is entitled to one moiety of a sum in the public funds, being applied to the use of the church; for which, 1820-21, £170 was paid in repairs; 1832, £24., then leaving a balance due to the parish of £161. 4d.

Anthony Sadler gave £5., the interest to be given, 25th December, yearly to the poor.

Thomas Avery gave £5., the interest to be given in bread, 25th October, yearly.

James Dufresney gave £10. to the poor. Thomase Avery gave £3. to the poor. Rev. Arthur Miller, also, in 1779, gave £100., the interest to be distributed to poor persons by 5s. each, on Christmas-day and Whit-Sunday. The above sums, £123., were invested in the purchase of £240., three per cent consols, standing in the name of the rector. The dividend, £7. 4s., is annually disposed of by the rector and churchwardens, on Whit-Sunday and Christmas, when bread, to the amount of 10s., is given for Dufresney's gift; and the residue, in sums of 5s. to poor persons of the parish.

Henry Shakespeare. See Fillongley). The sum of £3., as the share belonging to this parish, is received by the churchwardens, and given in bread, on two successive Sundays to the poor.

ASTLEY, a small pleasant village and parish, situate on an eminence 4 miles W.S.W. from Nuneaton, and 8 miles N. from Coventry, was one of the possessions of Earl Mel- lent, and as early as the reign of King John, came to the remarkable family of Astley, one of whom (Sir William) was, in the 8th of Richard II, retained to serve that monarch in a personal expedition into France: and a descendant residing at Pattishull, county of Stafford, was the chivalrous John de Astley, who, in 1438, overcame, in a combat on horseback, at Parish, Feter de Masse, a Frenchman; and in 1441, in the presence of Henry VI, at Smithfield, had a trial of skill at arms, on foot, with Philip Boyle, an Arragonese knight; after which, he was knighted by the king. From the Astleys, the manor passed by marriage to Reginald Lord Grey de Ruthyn, whose decendant, Henry Duke of Suffolk, was father to the unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, and, upon the death of Edward VI, joined the Duke of Northumberland in an ineffectual attempt to place his daughter upon the throne: for this he was pardoned, but having issued proclamations in this and the adjoining county of Leicester, tending to incense the people against the projected marriage between Mary and Philip of Spain, the Earl of Huntington was sent with a powerful force against him; and after concealing himself for some days in a large hollow tree near the church, he was betrayed by Underwood, his keeper, taken to London and there beheaded. The manor came into the possession of the Newdegate family in the last century. C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M. P., and Col. Francis Newdegate, Thomas Lissaman, and John Chaddock, Esq., are the principal owners; the former is lord of the manor; several others have also small estates here. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was made collegiate, and built in the form of a cross, with a lofty spire, in the reign of Edward III., by Lord Thomas de Astley, many of whose family were interred here; the ancient choir, now forming the body of the church, and a strong tower, containing five bells, are the only portions of the building remaining. The spire was originally covered with lead, and so conspicuous, that it was called the "Lanthorn of Arden," which fell down about 1600; and soon afterwards, the western part of the church was taken down, and several monuments removed and defaced. The stalls in the church are curiously painted with figures of saints, and texts of scripture, on scrolls. The revenue of the college, at its dissolution, was £46. 8s. The living is a perpetual curacy, endowed with £16. per annum, and augmented with £400., private benefaction, and £600., Queen Anne's bounty, now rated at £60.; patron, T. Newdegate, Esq.; incumbent, Rev. Robert Freeman. Here is a very ancient school, and house for the master, for boys and girls, principally supported by Mrs. Newdegate; will accommodate 100, average 50; Thomas Robinson, master. The parish contains 2,550 acres of land; in 1841, had 64 houses and 371 inhabitants; 1801, 251; 1821, 298; 1831, 340; rateable value, £3,277.

Astley Castle, situate a short distance N.E. from the church, is very ancient, and surrounded by a moat, crossed by a stone bridge, the entrance to which is beneath an arched gateway. The building is embattled, though probably its castellated towers and defences were dismantled in the time of Queen Mary. The general effect of the castle is rendered highly picturesque by a profusion of ivy; and several of the rooms are ornamented with armorial paintings; in one of them is preserved a coarsely painted but curious portrait of the Duke of Suffolk, with ruff, long peaked beard, and high crowned hat. In the hall are shewn a heavy inlaid table and cumbrous chair, said to have belonged to the Duke. This is now the seat of Lord Viscount Lifford, and the property of C. N. Newdegate, Esq., except the garden and a close, which together contain about five acres, belonging to Francis Newdegate, Esq., of Blackheath.

Astley Hall, an ancient farm house, 2 miles S.E. Duke's Farm is another very ancient house, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. Breach Oak, two farms $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. Howe Green, two farms 1 mile S. Market End also contains two farms $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. Nutter's Heath, 1 mile N.E. Sole End, two farms 1 mile E.

William Beck, who died 1623, gave yearly 6s. 8d. to this parish, which is received by the churchwardens out of a farm called Corley Ash, in the parish of Corley. They also receive, out of certain lands in Corley belonging to Lord Lifford, the sum of 10s. And a further sum of 14s. 6d. out of the Solly end farm, in Astley, now the property of Francis Newdegate, Esq. These sums, amounting to £1. 11s. 2d., are given away in shilling and sixpenny loaves to poor families about Christmas.

BEDWORTH, a parish, and large, neat, and well-built village, on the Coventry and Nuneaton turnpike road, 5 miles N.E. by N. from the former, and 3 miles S. from the latter; the Coventry and Nuneaton branch of the London and North Western Railway passes the north side of this village, where there is a station. Coal and limestone are got here in great abundance; the coal pits which surround this place are known to have been worked for nearly three centuries, and give employment to about 800 persons. The ribbon trade is also carried on to a great extent. In the 44th of Elizabeth, it was granted to Clement Fisher, Esq., together with the advowson of the rectory, and by marriage passed into the noble family of Aylesford, with whom it still continues. Lord Aylesford, the Governors of Chamberlain's Charity, Rev. Henry Bellairs, George Whieldon, Esq., William Thomas, Esq., William Croft, Messrs. Troughton and Lea, St. Michael's Charity, Coventry; C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M.P.; J. R. P. Jarvis, Esq.; and James Edward Piercey, Esq., are the principal owners; the former is lord of the manor. Many others have small estates here. The parish contains 2,145 acres of land; and, in 1841, had 924 inhabited houses, 64 uninhabited, 22 building, and 4,500 inhabitants; in 1811, 3,161; 1821, 3,519; 1831, 3,980. Rateable value £9,393. The church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower with three bells; it was enlarged in 1827, by which means 348 additional sittings were obtained, and in consequence of a grant of £250. from the Incorporated Society, for promoting the enlargement and building of churches and chapels, 300 of that number are free and unappropriated for ever. The living is a rectory, valued in K. B. £10. 3s. 11½d. now £800., in the patronage of the Earl of Aylesford, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Bellairs, M.A. The rectory is a neat residence, 1 mile W. from the church. The Independents have two neat chapels here, erected 1726 and 1844; Rev. Samuel Hillyard, minister of the former, and Rev. Matthew Wellands, of the latter. The Baptists; general and particular Baptists, have each a chapel here; Rev. Wm. Smith minister of the latter. The Wesleyans have also a large chapel in the village, erected 1845. The British School, established 1846, at the Sunday school of the Independents.

Union Workhouse, under Gilbert's Act, is a neat brick building forming a square, will accommodate 200, averages 50; and comprises the parishes of Bedworth, Wolvey, Brinklow, and Pailton, in this county; and Stoke Golding, Sibson, Higham-on-the-Hill, Witherley, Ratcliffe, Harthill, Sutton Cheaney, and Stapleton, in Leicestershire; William Atkins, master; Joseph Taverner, clerk; Richard Dewes, Esq., superintendent registrar; and John Orton, registrar of births and deaths for Bedworth district; Elizabeth Smarth, schoolmistress; and Rev. Henry Bellairs, chairman. Bedworth has two guardians, and the other parishes one each.

Bedworth Heath, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile W. contains 20 acres of land, was enclosed and converted into gardens for the poor of this parish, 1848, who pay sixpence per annum for each rood.

Collycroft, a small village and hamlet $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north, principally inhabited by colliers. Mr. Daniel Rowbotham has a large silk throwsting and trimming manufactory here called Bedworth Mills.

New Town, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. consists of a few neat brick houses, erected 1840.

Woodlands, 1 mile W. consists of a few scattered farms.

There is a small Market held in the centre of the village of Bedworth, on Saturdays, for vegetables, &c. The pleasure fair is held on Wednesday in Whitsun week, and the annual feast on the first Sunday in September.

CHARITIES.—Nicholas Chamberlaine, of Bedworth, clerk, by will, 24th June, 1715, devised to the Hon. William Bromley and six others, their heirs and assigns, certain messuages and lands in Bedworth, upon trust; that they should, out of the rents and profits, build two distinct schools for boys and girls, the schoolmaster and schoolmistress to be appointed by the trustees; the boys to be taught to read, write, and cast accounts, and to pay £10. a year to the master to teach 40 boys; also, to give some ingenious boy 40s. a year to be an assistant to the said master. Also, to pay £5. a year to the schoolmistress, to teach the girls to read, write, sew, knit, and spin. Also, to pay £5. a year for the repairs of the school-house, and the buying of books for the poorest of the boys and girls. And also, at their discretion, give money in charity to the poor. By an Act for enclosing the common fields of this parish, and for regulating this charity, passed in 1769, it was enacted that William Lord Craven, and the others, then trustees, that on the death of any they should elect and make up the number seven; and should be incorporated by the name of the "Governors of the Hospital of Mr. Nicholas Cham-berlaine, and the Possessions and Revenues thereof;" to have a common seal, to sue and be sued, and to purchase lands to them and their successors, to make rules, &c., for the government thereof, &c. In 1830, the Governors purchased the Mill Close, containing 1a 1r. 29p., on account of its lying betwixt two closes belonging the charity, and connecting a valuable bed of coal, for the sum of £605. The property consists of upwards of 215 acres of land, of the House of Industry of Bedworth, and many other houses and cottages, of which the whole rental is £984. 10s., and the land tax is redeemed on the whole. Besides the above, there is a sum of £2,500. three per cent. consols, producing a dividend of £75. per annum; also a sum of £300. advanced to the trustees of Bedworth church, who pay interest at five per cent., making a total income of £1,074. 10s.; besides which upwards of £200. is received from the lessees of a colliery on the estate. The charity comprises two schools, one over the other, and a house for the master and mistress, all under one roof in the Hall yard. These schools were rebuilt in 1845, and is a large neat brick building, quite apart from the almshouses, and consists of two low rooms, one for boys and the other for girls, with the master's house in the centre; Stephen and Emma Cooke, master and mistress. At the south-end of the school buildings was a range of almshouses containing 12 tenements, six above and six below. The tenement at the south end is larger than the others, having two sleeping rooms, was used for the accommodation of a nurse. In 1840, these almshouses were rebuilt of brick, and now forms a beautiful square of 24 houses, and a house at the entrance for the mistress; each house contains one sitting and two bed rooms; there are now 24 widowers and the same number of widows, who live two and two. The schools are taught nearly on the National plan, and are open to as many of the children of Bedworth as the rector appoints; the boys (about 130,) are taught reading, writing, and accounts; and the girls, (100,) the same, with needlework. The master and mistress, who are (1833,) man and wife, reside in the school-house rent free, and have £70. per annum, with a small allowance for extra children. The children are supplied with books. Any boy or girl who has been two years in the school, is completely clothed, with the exception of shirts and shoes; rewards are given in books and money, and they have a dinner yearly on Wednesday in Whitsun week. The 24 almspeople are old widows or widowers, and settled parishioners; they each receive 3s. a week, subject to an increase of 1s. a week, at the discretion of the rector. The nurse receives 4s. a week. They have also an allowance of 1s. 6d. for a dinner on Christmas day, and are supplied with coals. They are clothed yearly on Wednesday in Whitsun week, at the cost of about 50s. for men, and 30s. for women. Linen or bed clothes to the value of £2. is allowed on first coming into the Hospital. Boys having been two years in the school, and reached the first class, are bound out apprentice on application. The following payments are annually made:—10 guineas to the Bedworth lying-in charity; £6. to the Birmingham Hospital; and £1. 1s. to the Clergy charity. The trustees meet annually on Wednesday in Whitsun week at the school, and attend divine service, when a sermon is preached, for which the rector receives one guinea; and a dinner at a cost of about £9. is provided. The agent receives a salary of £60., which, with various other miscellaneous expenses, for dinners to the tenants, a check-taker at the colliery £31. 4s.; charities to the poor of Bedworth, £23. 12s.; and others, amounting in the whole to upwards of £190., making a total expenditure, in 1834, of £1,002. 5s. 3d. On a balance of the banker's account in that year, there was in their hands a balance of £99. 1s. 9½d. due to the charity. The testator also gave the sum of £1,000. to be placed by his executors on good security, to be disposed of by them in charitable uses; and he also bequeathed any residue that might remain of his personal estates, &c., should be delivered up to his said trustees, to be disposed of in charitable uses only. These form a separate fund, under the management of the governors as trustees. Besides the £1,000. the sum of £453. 7s. 8½d. was received as the residue. In June, 1832, a sum of £2,300. three per cent. consols belonging to this fund, was, at a special meeting in 1833, ordered to be sold out, to enable the trustees to lend £2,000. to Mr. Peter Ungar Williams, on mortgage of his colliery lease, and the manor of Bedworth, and other properties belonging to him. The produce of this fund is considered not to be confined to the poor of Bedworth. In the year 1828, a donation of £200. was given from this fund for the rebuilding of the church, and, in consideration, seats were appropriated to the several houses belonging to the governors. In 1832, there was a balance in hand of £102. 5s. 4d.

Henry Smith.—This parish, with 21 others, are entitled to a portion of the Stoughton estate charity, now let for £600. The amount, upwards of £20., is laid out in linen and calico, and given to the poor.

Abraham Hammersley, by will, 1721, left 10s. yearly out of his house and premises to 20 poor widows of the parish. John Sparrow, the owner of the site of the cottage and about an acre of land, in Bedworth, pays the rent-charge which is given in sixpences to poor widows on Christmas day.

BINLEY, a parish and small scattered village, 3 miles E.S.E. from Coventry, containing 1,465a. 1r. 20p. of land; in 1841, 47 houses, and 233 inhabitants; in 1801, 203; 1821, 211; and 1831, 212; rateable value, £2,097. 9s. 4d. This parish was anciently divided between the monks of Combe and Coventry. The Earl of Craven is sole owner and lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a small neat unassuming edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and transept, with a coved roof, appropriately embellished with medallions, expressive of scripture history; and the east window contains the Holy Family, in stained glass, by Pecket. The church was erected by the Earl of Craven, 1772, who is also the patron of the living, which is a donative curacy worth £52.; Rev. Henry Wickens, M.A., incumbent. The parsonage is a good house near the church. Here is a School, supported by Lady Craven, for the poor children of this parish; the mistress receives £20. per annum. Rev. Thomas Wagstaff, who wrote a defence for Charles I., was born here, and died at Rouen, in 1770. The London and North Western Railway intersects this parish on the south side.

CHARITIES.—By a memorandum, commencing 1650, it is stated that Lord Barlett gave £15.; Lord John Craven, £100; Thomas Moor, £10.; and Nicholas Povey, £1.; making £126. Henry Stephens afterwards gave £5.; and there was an accumulation of £9., making altogether £140. William Earl Craven gave by his will £100. to the parish where he should be buried; he died in April, 1697, and was buried at Binley. In 1755 Stephen Sleamaker gave £10. to the poor, which was added to the gift of Earl William, then in the hands of Lord Craven, for which he paid £5. 10s. interest. There was in the hands of Mr. John Watts, steward of Lord Craven, the sum of £140. before mentioned, for which he paid £5. 12s. interest, and in 1760, 5s. additional interest was paid by him for £5. left to the poor of Binley by William Wale. Soon after 1795 Mr. Watts became insolvent and the money was lost. The interest of the £110. in the hands of Lord Craven, is received every two or three years, and given to the poor in clothing, money and coals.

BRINKLOW, a parish and considerable village on the Coventry and Market Harbrough road, 7 miles E. of the former, and 6 miles N.W. from Rugby, was anciently a possession of the respective families of Mowbray, Stuterville and Segrave. In the 18th of Edward III. it was granted to the Monks of Combe, and after the dissolution by Queen Mary, to Lane and Throgmorton, but the present Lords of the Manor, are Sir Grey Skipworth, and A. F. Gregory, Esq.; the principal landowners are the Earl of Craven, J. W. Taylor, Esq., Harry Brierly, Trinity Church, Coventry, Sir Grey Skipworth, and Mrs. Tatlock; several others have small estates here. The parish contains 1480 acres 0r. 30p. of land, of which 32a. 2r. 31p. are roads; 106a. 3r. 34p. woods; and 87a. 3r. 6p. a parochial liberty called Monks Riding, situate about 1 mile W.S.W. from the village, and is the property of Mrs. Tatlock; in 1841, here were 187 inhabited houses, 25 uninhabited, and 1 building, with 797 inhabitants; in 1801, 615; 1821, 757; 1831, 949; rateable value, £2,897. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave, chancel, and tower containing five bells; the living is a rectory, in K. B. at £17. 10s., now £228., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Storey Hodgson, M.A. The rectory, a small neat house, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile W. from the church. The Independents have a small chapel here. On the east side of the village, on the Roman Fosseway, there is an extensive ancient entrenchment, and a high mound, in which several cannon balls have been found; from the top there is a very extensive and interesting view of the surrounding country. The Magistrates meet at the Half Moon and Seven Stars Inn, every Saturday. A statute is held for hiring servants the second day after Michaelmas day. The annual feast is held the first Sunday after Old Michaelmas day.

CHARITIES.—Alice Ausley, in 1635, settled 10s. per annum out of premises at Brinklow, to be paid to the rector, and bestowed on the repairs of the church. This payment goes toward the salary of the parish clerk.

Wales' Charity, (see Coventry.)—The sum of 40s. a year is received from the corporation of Coventry about Christmas, and given away soon after in coals to the poor. The children of this parish are also admissible, gratis, at Monk's Kirby school, founded by the same person.

Muston's Charity.—The sum of 20s. is received annually from the incumbent of Wyken by the minister of Brinklow, which he gives to the poor.

James Hancox, by will, 1752, devised the Potters Close to trustees, on trust, (after payment of charges), to dispose of the rents amongst poor persons of the parish. The close contains about two acres, let for £6. per annum, which is distributed by one of the trustees in sixpenny loaves soon after Christmas.

William Edwards, by will, 1789, left to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor of Brinklow, £500., the yearly interest thereof to be expended in clothing, and in causing the children of the poor of the parish to be taught reading and writing, English; none to remain more than six years. He also left to the same persons the sum of £300., the yearly interest to be distributed in bread, to the amount of 5s. 6d. every Sunday, at church, to poor persons.

The Rev. William Fairfax, 1762, gave £100. for teaching poor children. This sum was reduced to £50. by the failure of an attorney at Coventry, in whose hands it was placed.

Mary Barker, by will, 1721, left the interest of £20. to be paid to the minister and churchwardens, to be given to the poor in bread. Of this sum £10. was lost by the failure of the person in whose hands it had been placed, about 50 years ago. The above three charities, amounting to £860. are placed out together on mortgage of a house and land at Buntingthorpe, at four and a half per cent. From £38. 14s., the interest, £24. 15s. is set apart as the produce of £550., being Edwards's and Fairfax's out of which £17. a year is paid to a schoolmaster for teaching nine boys and nine girls reading and writing, and the remainder is expended in clothing for the boys and girls in alternate years; and occasionally a small sum for books. A new school was erected some years ago by subscription. Many other children attend the school. The free children may continue three years. The remainder of the interest being £13. 19s. is laid out in bread; eleven sixpenny loaves are given away by ticket, to eleven poor persons, for 51 Sundays in the year.

Post Office, at the Half-Moon and Seven Stars Inn, Miss Eliz. Blundell, post-mistress; letters arrive 8,30 a.m., and are despatched 4,30 p.m.

BULKINGTON, an extensive parish 4 miles S.E. by S. from Nuneaton, comprises the hamlets of Barnacle, Bramcott, Marston Jebbett, Ryton or Reiton, Weston-in-Arden, and Wolvershill Hall; the entire parish contains 4,610 acres, of which 2,374a. 3r. 6p. are subject to tithe; and, in 1841, here were 1,831 inhabitants; 1801, 1,311; 1821, 1,679; 1831, 1,792; rateable value, £8,519.

Bulkington is a large, neat, and pleasant village, 4 miles S.E. by S. from Nuneaton, principally inhabited by ribbon weavers; at the north end of the village there is a large pit of water called the sand pit, from which it is said sand was got to build the church. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice, supposed to have been built in the 15th century, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and a tower 23 yards high, in which there is a peal of four good bells; in 1823, there were 350 additional sittings obtained, 300 of which are free; in 1843, William Wood Weston, Esq., gave £75. towards an organ, but instead of which, the vicar, with the consent of the parishioners, took a very wise plan, and fenced the church in with a strong and lofty iron palasading: the living is a discharged vicarage, value K.B. £6. 10s. 7d., now £253., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. William George Parker, M.A.; tithes commuted, 1842, vicarial £21. 1s. 7d., rectorial, £315., which, with a farm of 330 acres, belongs to the Uppingham and Oakham grammar school, Rutlandshire. The Independents have a small neat chapel here, erected 1811; in 1845, Mrs. W. Johnson left the interest of £200. for the minister for ever; Rev. William Rhead is the present pastor. The parish school, erected 1816, by voluntary subscriptions, and is supported by the same and charity sermons; the school and house was built upon a portion of the church yard, consequently belongs to the vicar; the school consists of two rooms, the lower for boys and the upper for girls, and will accommodate 60 each, average 40 each; Mr. Richard Bird and Miss Maria Marlow, master and mistress. The manor was, in the 17th of Edward I. in the possession of John Boys, from whom it descended to his brother William, who settled it upon William-de-la-Zouch and his family, with whom it remained for many years. The present lords of the manor are Richard Brome Debary, and Thomas Woods Weston, Esqrs.; and the principal land owners in the parish are,—Barnacle, William Gilbert, Richard Orton, and John Atkins. Bramcott, Mrs. Simpson, Mr. William Warner, Mrs. Wightman, and Mrs. Tookey. Bulkington, John Johnson, Bond's Hospital, Coventry; Thomas Rogers, Thomas Croft, Charles Babbington, Samuel Nutt, and William Reynolds. Marston Jebbett, St. Alban's Charity, Thomas Orton, and James Hands. Ryton, the family of Cox, Mrs. Slingsby, William Wright, Richard Gilbert, and Daniel Starkey. Weston-in-Arden, Richard Brome Debary, Esq., Thomas Woods Weston, Esq., Thomas Orton, Richard Perkins, the Executors of the late William Spurr, Mrs. Sarah Orton, and Wm. Wright. There are also several other small freeholders in the parish.

Barnacle, a hamlet 6 miles N.E. from Coventry, contained in 1841, 52 houses, and 270 inhabitants, extending into Shilton parish.

Bramcott, a small village and hamlet, four miles S.E. from Nuneaton, contains 400 acres of land, the greatest part of which is in Wolvey parish; and, in 1841, five houses, and 28 inhabitants; the entire hamlet contained 73 inhabitants. Wolvershill Hall is in this hamlet, is a large and very ancient house, pleasantly situate on rising ground, 4 miles S.E. from Nuneaton.

Marston Jebbett, a small hamlet 3 miles S. by E. from Nuneaton, contained, in 1841, 22 houses and 93 inhabitants.

Ryton or Reiton, is a small village and hamlet 4 miles S.E. from Nuneaton, principally inhabited by ribbon weavers; in 1841, here were 95 houses, and 363 inhabitants. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here, erected 1811.

Weston-in-Arden, a small village and hamlet $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. from Nuneaton; in 1841, it contained 28 houses and 140 inhabitants.

Weston Hall, 4 miles S.E. from Nuneaton, is a large ancient mansion pleasantly situate on an eminence, the seat and property of Richard Brome Debary, Esq.

The Annual Feast of this parish is held the last Sunday in July, or the first Sunday in August.

CHARITIES.—Bishop Hickman gave £100. to this parish; William Inceby gave £20.; and other benefactors gave other sums; with which the parish bought lands in Bulkington and Ryeton. By the award of commissioners, made on the inclosure of the common fields, dated 26th February, 1771, certain land was awarded to this charity in lieu of common right. The whole was let in 1786, for £17. 10s. 6d. per annum. they are now (1833,) let for £60. 7s. 6d. per annum; from which 10s. is given at Easter to 10 poor widows, and the rest is distributed on St. Thomas's day yearly, amongst all the settled parishioners of Bulkington, whether resident or not, in sums varying from 3s. to 9s.; about 300 persons partake of the charity.

Richard Johnson, of Marston Jebbett, by will, 1833, devised £10. to be paid from Richardson's land, in the hamlet of Weston, in this parish, to the poor; but this bequest became void under the statute of 9 George II.

The Poor's Piece, a piece of land containing 3a. 3r. 12p., was awarded at the enclosure for the benefit of the poor of Bulkington township, now let for £4. 17s. 6d.; this rent is given in January annually, by the parish officers, in small sums to all the poor of the township.

William Lagoe, by will, 1735, gave to the minister and churchwardens of Bulkington, and their successors, an annuity of 55s. yearly, clear of all deductions, to be applied by them by 12d. a week, in six twopenny loaves, to be distributed amongst poor widowers or widows frequenting the parish church; and for want of such, to other poor of the townships of Bulkington and Ryeton; and that the remaining 3s. should be allowed for the care of the distribution. This annuity is charged on premises in Bayly-lane, in the city of Coventry, now forming part of the White Horse public-house; Mr. Robert Hall, the owner, pays the annuity, which is given in six twopenny loaves to six poor widows every Sunday. The parish clerk receives the 3s. for his trouble.

Post Office, at Mr. William Ward's, letters arrive by foot post from Hinckley at 10 A. M., and are dispatched at 3 P. M.

Burton Hastings, a small pleasant village and parish, four miles E.N.E. from Nuneaton, contains 1,337 acres of land; and in 1841, here were 56 houses, and 276 inhabitants; in 1801, 184; 1821, 241; 1831, 253; rateable value, £2,112. The Church is a small ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Botolph; the living is a perpetual curacy, augmented with £600., Queen Anne's bounty, and rated at £87.; in the patronage and incumbency of Rev. William Bucknill, and Mr. Thomas Gilbert is the impropiator. This parish was granted by the Conqueror to Henry de Ferrers; a part of it was given in the reign of Henry II. to the Monastery of Nuneaton, and the remainder was then possessed by the Hastings family; and, excepting a short interval, when by attainder, it reverted to the Crown: continued with them until the 21st of Henry VIII., at which time, Lord George Hastings sold this portion of the manor to a rich merchant, named Harvey, and, subsequently, it passed by marriage to Thomas Cotton, Esq., an ancestor of Sir Robert Cotton. The part belonging to the monastery, was, at the dissolution, granted to Marmakuke Constable, whose family sold it, and is now disputed. The principal owners are the family of the late J. F. Simpson, Henry Townsend, Thomas and William Gilbert, William Tyers Wells, Thomas Johnson, and John Adcock, Esqrs. Shelford, a small hamlet, 1 mile E. of the church, contains three farm houses and one labourer's cottage.

Charities.—Feoffment Lands.—Robert Somerfield, otherwise Baston, in the 14th year of Henry VIII., granted to Richard Perkins and others, and their heirs, a messuage, &c., which, by survivorship, became vested in William Wale, and the said cottage and premises were by him, 15th January, 1683, granted and enfeoffed to William Wise, and six others, and their heirs, to the use and behoof nevertheless of repairing the causeways and streets in the town of Burton. In 1801 the property was enfeoffed to William Mayne the younger, and ten others. The property consists of two closes, adjoining the town, containing in the whole two acres, called the Blacksmith land, let (1833), at the rent of £10. per annum; there are also 16 cottages adjoining the land, let to various tenants, for £15. 17s. 6d. a year; which, with the £10. rent of the land, is received by the trustees, and applied in the repairs of the pavements and causeways in the streets of Burton Hastings.

Isaac Wells, gent., of Shelford House, by will, 1819, gave £40. to the churchwardens of this parish for the time being, to be by them put out, and the interest to be annually distributed by them in bread at the church door, on Christmas-day, immediately after divine service, to poor persons. The above sum was granted on mortgage, with £20. of Mr. William Tyrer Wells, son of the donor, by the Rev. Thomas South, rector of Burton Hastings, on part of the rectorial lands, and vested, by assignment, in 1820, in Thomas Johnson and John Adcock, the churchwardens. The interest is distributed in sixpenny and shilling loaves to the poor after service on Christmas-day.

CLAYBROOK, an extensive parish, comprising the chapelry of Little Wigston, the townships of Great Claybrooke and Little Claybrooke, the liberty of Bittesby, and the hamlet of Ullesthorpe, in the hundred of Guthlaxton, county of Leicester; and the hamlet of Wibtoft, in the Kirby division of the hundred of Knightlow, which is a pleasant and well built small village and chapelry, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles W.N.W. from Lutterworth, contains 790 acres of land, and in 1841, had 23 houses and 101 inhabitants; in 1801, 75; and 1821, 112; rateable value, £1,047. The principal landowners are J. H. Marvin, Esq., Lord Leigh, Mr. Gibson, and several others have estates here. The chapel is a small plain building on an eminence at the west end of the village: the living is in the patronage of the Crown, with that of Claybrooke. Wibtoft Directory.—Nathaniel Harper, cattle salesman; and Joseph Billing, Mrs. Caldicott, James Simons, Francis Spencer, and William Wakefield, farmers.

COMBE ABBEY and COMBE FIELDS, an extensive extra parochial liberty, 5 miles E. from Coventry, anciently denominated Smite, and at the Conquest was held by Geoffry de Wirce, from whom it passed to Earl Mellent, and thence to Nigel de Albany, whose son gave the church, which was dedicated to St. Peter, and situate 1 mile N.E. from the abbey, the canons of Kenilworth, which has for many years been in ruins; the site of which is now occupied by a farm house, called Peter Hall, the south and east walls of which are the remains of the church; the stone work of the east window is in a good state of preservation; in the dining room is the niche which was used for holy water; the bellfry door is preserved and is in the possession of the present occupant; there are many other evidences of the once ancient edifice. In the reign of Stephen, the lordship was granted to Richard de Camvill, who founded here an Abbey of Cistercian monks, which was subsequently very richly endowed. After the dissolution, the site and possessions of these monks was granted to John, Earl of Warwick, in the 1st of Edward VI.; on his attainder, they passed to Robert Kelway, whose daughter conveyed them to John, Lord Harrington; and by his daughter, Lucy, Countess of Bedford, they were sold to Sir William, ancestor of the present Earl Craven. The mansion was principally built by Lord Harrington, on the ruins of the monastery; the cloisters forming three sides of a quadrangle, being preserved, and exhibit some curious enriched specimens of Norman architecture. An additional range of buildings was erected on the west side, about the commencement of the 18th century; but in a totally dissimilar style to the rest of the mansion; and the late Earl made many judicious improvements, in perfect harmony with the architectural character of the respective parts. The park comprises 500 acres, well wooded, containing about 200 head of deer, and a very extensive sheet of water, 90 acres. Of the fine suit of rooms in this mansion, and the numerous and valuable paintings contained in them, our account must be brief and unsatisfactory; but the pictures may, with truth, be pronounced to be the finest collection in the county. The romantic gallantry of the first Earl Craven is well known, as also the enthusiastic manner in which he supported the cause of Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, whom he protected after her expulsion from the throne, and built Hamstead Marshal, near Newbry, for her residence; it has indeed been said, that she was privately married to the Earl, but that is unauthenticated; by her will she bequeathed to him her pictures, which form a large portion of the fine collection here. The Great Gallery is wholly hung with portraits, many of them by Honthorst and Mervelt, whose portraits are at the upper end of the gallery; by the former artist, there are half-length portraits of the King and Queen of Bohemia, and Princes Rupert and Maurice, Charles II, at the age of 14; Gustavus, Adolphus and William, Earl Craven. There is also a portrait of Sir Kenelm Digby, by Vandyke. In the anti-room to this gallery, are some beautiful cabinet pictures. The Breakfast Room is of large dimensions, and contains, amongst others, 5 very large landscapes, by J. Luytens. The North Parlour, a splendid room, is adorned by whole-length portraits of the King and Queen of Bohemia, by Honthorst; and of Charles I., Prince Rupert, Prince Maurice, and James, Duke of Richmond, by Vandyke. The Vandyke Room contains, in one picture, Charles I. and his Queen, three-quarters length, executed at the desire of the Queen of Bohemia; a most beautiful painting. Vandyke, by himself, and some interesting paintings by Brughel, Teniers, Rubens, and Frank Hals. In the Yellow Drawing Room, are Christ and St. John, in a landscape, by Rubens; and the Duchess of Cleveland, by Lely. The Gilt Parlour contains some splendid productions, by Rembrant, Zoust, Miervelt, and Vandyke, with a whole-length portrait of William, Earl Craven, by Honthorst. The Beauty Parlour is ornamented with 22 portraits of ladies of the time of Charles II. Cedar Room; here may be enumerated a sea piece, by Willarts, being the Queen of Bohemia's passage to Holland; and a splendid landscape, by Rubens, Moses with the brazen serpent. This liberty contains 3,638a. 2r. 15p.; in 1841, here were 37 houses, and 195 inhabitants; 1801, 170; 1821, 173; 1831, 170; rateable value, £7,733. 5s. Earl Craven is sole owner and lord of the manor.

DIRECTORY. The Right Hon. the Earl Craven, The Abbey, Thomas Serjeant Arnold, Esq., Mobbs Wood, 2 miles N.E. from the Abbey; the Arnold family have resided in this house 311 years. Jas. Burdett, park keeper; Thos. Congreve, farmer; Peter Hall, 1 mile N.E. from the Abbey; Edward Dalton Cryer, farmer, Under the Hill, Combe Fields, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. from the Abbey; Francis Grimes, farmer, Combe Fields, 2 miles E. from the Abbey; William Hewat, farmer, Nettle Hill, 1 mile N.E. from the Abbey; John Johnson, farmer, Combe Fields, 2 miles N.E. from the Abbey; John Large, resident agent to the Earl Craven, Hill Field, 1 mile N.W. from the Abbey; John Oliver, gardener, John Wright, farmer, Combe Fields, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. from the Abbey.

EXHALL, a parish and considerable village, $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles N. by E. from Coventry, was probably part of the possessions of the Countess Godiva. A portion of it was given in the reign of Stephen to the monks of Coventry, and the manor subsequently passed to the Bottler's of Lancashire, and from thence to Julian Nethermyll, an Alderman of Coventry, being afterwards sold by Sir Arthur Caley to William Cheshire, Esq. The present Lords of the manors are George Startin, Esq., and Benjamin Parker, Esq., Newland manor; and the principal owners are John Barratt, Henry Bray, John Kelsey, Thomas Neale, John Neale, Benjamin Parker, George Startin, William Wilson, Esq., and Joseph Wakelin. The parish contains 2,033 acres of land, and in 1841 here were 222 houses and 936 inhabitants; 1801, 694; 1821, 775; 1831, 841; rateable value, £3,725. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a neat structure, date of erection is not known. There are registers as early as the fifteenth century; it contains nave, chancel and side aisles. There are several good monuments, one of marble, to John Phillips, gent., who died November 10th, 1762, aged 85 years; and another to James Pickard gent., who died July 13th, 1757; also, Ann, his relict, and daughter of John Phillips, died November 10th, 1762. In 1842 the church was enlarged and re-pewed at an expence of £1,100, by which means 250 additional sittings were obtained; and in consequence of a grant of £150. from the incorporated society for enlarging churches and chapels, the whole of that number are free and unappropriated for ever: previous to the alteration, the church would accommodate 200, only eighteen seats were free. The living is a vicarage, value, £143., in the patronage of Lady Guernsey, and incumbency of Rev. John Thickens, M.A., for whom Rev. Joseph Law Alleyne, officiates. Here is a small Primitive Methodist Chapel, erected 1843.

Union Workhouse, a branch from Foleshill, is a large brick building, for the aged people.

Newland Hall, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. from the church, is a very ancient house, was formerly moated round, but is partly filled up.

William Bentley, by will, 1808, gave £400. to two trustees, upon trust, 'out of the same within 12 months after his decease, to build on the Poor's Land, near the church, a charity school, with a school-house adjoining, at which ten poor boys were to be educated free. The school was built on the north-west side of the churchyard, at an expenditure of about £200. The remainder of the money, £250. 5s. 9d., is now invested in three per cent consols. The dividends are paid to the master. About eight boys are generally on the foundation, who are appointed by the minister, and taught reading writing, and arithmetic. He also gave £100. to the minister and guardians of the workhouse, on trust, to dispose of the produce in providing wheaten bread to be given to the poor at the church on St. Thomas's day. This sum was lent on bond to the guardians of the workhouse, and £5. is annually paid from the poors rate, and given as above.

Poor's Land. By the award of the commissioners under the Exhall Inclosure Act, 4th March, 1763, an allotment of 3a. 0r. 1p. was made to the poor of Exhall, in lieu of certain other lands. The parishioners erected a House of Industry on this land, part of which is occupied as a garden to the house. The parish pay £6. a year in respect of this land, which is given to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

Job Potter, by will, 1686, devised 10s. to the churchwardens of Exhall, to be payable yearly, to the poor on St. Thomas's day, from certain estates at Oldnall End, in Berks-well. The 10s. is annually received from the owner, Mr. John Cole, and distributed as directed.

Mary Farmer, who died 1805, left £20. to the poor of Exhall; this sum was, by the legacy duty reduced to £18., which was in 1833 in the hands of Mr. Joseph Kilsey, at £5. per cent. The interest is given away to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

FOLESHILL, a large scattered parish 2½ miles N.E. by N. from Coventry, containing the following places:—Alderman's green, Bacon's folly, Bell green, Brick-kiln lane, Carpenter's lane, Church end, Courthouse green, Grange lane, Great and Little Heaths, Parting of the Heaths, Hall green, Hawkesbury, Henley green, Holbrook lane, Lockhouse lane, Longford, which is a neat, pleasant, and well-built village, 3 miles N.E. by N. from Coventry; Rowley's green, Swain's bridge, Paradise, Tusses bridge, Windmill lane, and Woodshears green. This was part of the vast possession of the Countess Godiva. The chapel, in King Stephen's time, belonged to the monks of Coventry, being then restored to them; and though the families of Boys and Zouch had afterwards considerable interest in this parish, that of the monks preponderated, and so continued until the dissolution. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was enlarged in 1816, by the addition of a south-aisle and galleries, at an expense of £780., which was raised by voluntary contributions, and the sale of the pews that were then erected; and now consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, in which are five bells; and, in 1833, an organ was purchased by subscription: the font is of great antiquity. The living is a vicarage, value £352. in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of Rev. Thomas Coker Adams, for whom the Rev. William Rawson officiates. Tithes commuted 1838,—rectorial, £75., the trustees of the late Mr. Herbert are the owners; vicarial, £358. 14s.

St. Paul's District Church is a neat brick edifice, in the modern style of architecture, situate on the heath, erected by subscription, and a grant from the church building society, in 1843; the late William Seale, Esq., of this parish, gave the land; the living is a perpetual curacy, value £200. The Vicar of Foleshill, patron; and Rev. Coker Beck, incumbent.

There are also ten dissenting places of worship in this parish, viz., Independents, or Congregational, Little heath; General Baptist, Longford; Wesleyans, Bell green, Alderman's green, Brick-kiln lane, Lockhouse lane, and Holbrooks; Primitive Methodists, Edgwick and Carpenter's lane.

British Congregational School, Little Heath, is a good substantial brick building, erected 1846, at a cost of £300. raised by subscription, will accommodate 150 boys, average 120; George Leonard Withers, master.

The Girls' British School, adjoining the chapel, will accommodate 100, average 50.

National School, Church end, established 1750, for boys and girls; the present school was erected 1814, and is a long brick building, will accommodate 250, average 140. The old school is now converted into a house for the master and mistress, Charles and Mrs. Davies.

There is also a small National School adjoining St. Paul's district church, erected 1847, will accommodate 100, average 60; Wm. Simpson, master.

Infant School, Bell green, erected 1841, is a neat brick building, with a house adjoining for the mistress, will accommodate 160, average 145.

The parish contains 2,594 acres of land, of which 919 acres are subject to rectorial tithe, and 1,616 acres to vicarial tithe; in 1841, here were 1,696 houses, and 7,063 inhabitants; in 1801, 3,026; 1821, 4,937; 1831, 6,969; rateable value, £13,871, 15s. 8d. Colonel Hopkins Northey is lord of the manor, who holds a court leet in June or July. The principal owners are John Butling, Esq.; Rev. John Brown, George Whieldon, Esq.; Mrs. Fraser, Trinity Church, Coventry; Richard Latham, Esq.; H. Greswold, Esq.; Edwards Phillips, Esq.; Rev. Thomas Coker Adams, William Masser, Esq.; Trustees of Collins' Charity, the Drapers' Company, the Charity Trustees, Coventry; Messrs. Atkins and Jephcott, J. Ebborn, Miss Lee, Mrs. Seale, Thomas Worthy, and Messrs. Farmer and Arnold.

Union Workhouse, Brick-kiln lane, is a neat brick building erected 1805, and came under the New Poor Law Commissioners, 1837; about 14 years ago there was a mill erected for grinding barley: will accommodate 66, average 55. There is a branch workhouse at Exhall for all above 60 years of age, which will accommodate 65, average 40. This Union comprises 11 parishes, viz., Anstey, Binley, Exhall, Foleshill, Keresley, Shilton, Sowe, Stoke, Willenhall, Withybrook, and Wyken. Mr. Rufus and Mrs. Marien Sharp, master and matron; Miss Mary Sharp, schoolmistress; Richard Dewes, Esq., clerk and superintendent registrar; Richard Bolton, relieving officer; John Orton, registrar of births, deaths, and marriages, for Foleshill, Exhall, and Keresley; and Charles Henry Parsons for Sowe district; James Woore, assistant overseer; George Whieldon, Esq., chairman. Medical officers, R. A. Lafargue, Charles James Herbert, Mr. Burton, and Charles Henry Parsons. Number of guardians, eighteen.

Here are two extensive collieries in this parish, viz., Hawkesbury colliery, George Whieldon, Esq., proprietor; and the Victoria colliery, Messrs. Troughton and Lea, proprietors. The greatest part of the inhabitants in this parish are employed in weaving ribbon, and in the coal and ironstone mines.

CHARITIES.—Dr. Edward Jackson, in the year 1750, erected a school house partly in the church yard of this parish, and partly on the scite of some old premises belonging the parish, for charitable purposes. Some years afterwards Richard Parrott, Esq., paid to Edward Langford, the schoolmaster then in possession, the sum of £100., to quit the premises and convey them to him, which was done in 1766. He, by will, 1769, devised the said premises to the Vicar of Foleshill and six others, on trust, for the use of a school, for the children of the poor of Foleshill, reserving to his wife and his brother the use of the parlour and stable on Sundays. His widow, afterwards Mrs. Mary Wright, by will, 1794, bequeathed £500. in the five per cent. annuities, of which the interest of £400. thereof, to be paid to the sole use of teaching forty poor boys reading, writing, and accounts, in the said school; and she also directed that 20s. a year more should be paid towards buying books for the said school; and also directed £4. a year to be given to the poor. The stock is now converted into £525. three-and-a-half per cents., and produces a dividend of £18. 7s. 6d. per annum. On the reduction of the five per cent stock, the distribution of bread was discontinued; and on the conversion of the four per cent stock to 3½, that of books was also discontinued. The number of free boys is limited to 40; they are admitted not under eight years of age; they stay two years only, unless, by permission, the committee extend the time to another year. The master is allowed to take twenty pay scholars. The school-house, with 2r. 18p. of land, of which 37 perches was an allotment at the inclosure when the premises were made freehold. The school-room, adjoining the school-house, was erected in 1815, by voluntary contributions, amounting to £150., which is also appropriated to the use of a Sunday school. In 1822, a school-room was erected, for girls, attached to the house, at an expense of £240., of which £100. was given by the National School Society, and the remainder raised by voluntary subscriptions.

Poor's Money. By an old parish book, it appears some persons unknown left £31. 11s., as a town stock, for the use of the poor. By an order of vestry, 7th May, 1724, £21., part of the said stock, was employed in building a workhouse. In 1732, it was in vestry agreed to sell this workhouse, and invest the money in other premises, now called the workhouse, and lands thereunto belonging, containing 1a. 3r. 12p., and one boot of arable land, in the church-fields, and was vested in the hands of five trustees; the vicar to be always one. By indenture 1732, to this messuage and premises 2a. 2r. 18p. of land has been awarded by the commissioners, under an act of inclosure. In the indenture of trust, it is agreed, that the said trustees and their successors shall, out of the rents and profits, yearly, at Christmas, give 10s., as the gift of Stephen Hales, a deceased parishoner, to poor persons of the parish; and also that on Easter Monday, give 30s. as the gift of some person unknown, to poor widows. The Old Workhouse Meadow is let for the yearly rent of £4. 10s., which is received by the churchwardens, and distributed to poor widows, in sums of 2s. 6d. and 5s. each. There are two cottages on this premises with small gardens, have mostly been occupied by poor persons put in by the parish officers. The allotment above-named adjoins the new workhouse, and occupied with it as a garden for the use of the poor.

HARBOROUGH MAGNA OR GREAT HARBOROUGH, a small parish, and neat village, $3\frac{3}{4}$ miles NNW. from Rugby; was, in the time of Henry II., principally held by a family, whose surname (Herdeberg) was derived from this place, and who retained it until the 1st. of Edward IV., when it passed by marriage to the Corbets; Sir Grey Skipwith is now lord of the manor, and principal owner; but the Rev. William Hanbury, Aaron Watson, and others, have also small estates here. Total acres of land in this parish, 1,345. 1r. 12p.; in 1841, here were 77 houses, and 275 inhabitants; 1801, 235; 1821, 319; 1831, 365; rateable value, £2,567. 5s.

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small edifice; in 1829, was enlarged, and now pewed at a cost of £350., and consists of nave, chancel, and tower; the living, a rectory, value K. B., £14. 13s. 4d., new £298. Boughton Leigh, Esq., patron; Rev. William Hunbury, M.A., incumbent; and Rev. John Congreve, M.A., curate in charge.

The Rectory is a neat residence on the south side of the church, and is occupied by the curate in charge.

A National school was erected 1845, at a cost, including fitting, of £290., and is a substantial brick building; Sir Grey Skipwith gave the land; the money was raised by grant from the priory council, and subscriptions in the parish; it will accommodate 90, and is capable of division by screen, attached to which is a library, containing upwards of 160 volumes.

CHARITIES.—Elizabeth Riplington, by will, 1676, gave 20s. a year for ever, two years to be given to the poor of the parish, and the third year towards the repairs of the road leading from this town to Little Harborough. In 1786, it produced £3. per annum; but nothing is now known of it.

Robert Scotton, by will, gave £10. for ever, the interest for the poor of this parish to be distributed by the minister and churchwardens, on Easter Monday, yearly. And also an estate in Long Lawford, let, in 1751, for £8. a year, given yearly for the repairs of the church. The £10., mentioned in the will, was laid out about 50 years ago, with other money, by the parish, in building a house, on land given by Gilbert Thacker, from which 10s. interest is paid and distributed to the poor on Easter Monday. The church land now consists of three parcels, near the town, called the Town side and Brook Furlong, containing about 11 acres. There is also a close on the Heath allotted on the inclosure of Lawford Heath, in lieu of the leys on Smorrill's and Cow's common, on the Heath, and containing 2a. 2r. 21p., and situate about two miles from the old land. The whole is now let for £30. per annum. The rent is by the churchwardens carried to their general account. The church was enlarged and repewed in 1829, at an expense of more than £350.

Gilbert Thacker, by will, 1705, devised a ground, called the Little Mossel, the issues to be applied in putting poor children of this parish apprentice. The land is now in two closes, and contains about five acres, with a dwelling house and sheds upon it, built about 50 years ago; towards which, several charitable funds, amounting to £20., were applied; and for which 20s. is paid as interest. The premises are let for £12. per annum; of which £11. is appropriated to the putting out apprentices; from £8. to £9. is given with a boy, and £5. with a girl.

Mrs. Blake, (see Rugby).—The sum of £5. is received from Henry Grimes, Esq., the owner of the estate, in Churchover, and is distributed on Easter Monday, with the 20s. received from the rent of Thacker's charity, which consisted of £5. from this charity, £5. given by Holy Oak, and £10. given by Robert Scotton; it is distributed at the church, in sums varying from 1s. to 7s., to the poor.

Rev. Mr. Holyoak.—On a tablet, in the church, it is noticed, that £5., one year's pay of Mrs. Blake's charity, was not distributed, and that Mr. Holyoak, schoolmaster, of Rugby, gave £5. more for the poor. This money was laid out on the Little Mossel, and the interest distributed with Mrs. Blake's charity.

KERESLEY, two miles N.N.W., from and formerly a hamlet, in the parish of St. Michael, Coventry; but now, with Coundon, forms a consolidated chapelry, and contains 1,058a. 2r. 8p. of land, of which 29a. 3r. 5p. are public roads; 57a. 3r. 10p. small gardens, tenements, and common lands; and 81a. 0r. 19p. are woods; population, 440; rateable value, £1,988. 8s. The principal land owners are the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford; Thomas Ball Troughton, Esq., William Woods Weston, Esq., Thomas Neale, Esq., and Mr. Joseph Moggs; the former are lords of the manor; several others have also small estates here. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, consecrated September 10th, 1847, is a neat stone edifice, situate on high ground, by the side of the road from Coventry to Fillongley, cost upwards of £3,000., raised by subscription, and consists of nave, chancel, and tower, surmounted with a neat spire, containing a peal of five good bells, which cost £230., also raised by subscription. The living, a perpetual curacy; patron, the Bishop of Worcester; incumbent, the Rev. Wm. Thickins, M.A., value £60. Tithes commuted, 1846, at £230. 5s. 9d., of which the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Coventry, own £228. 13s. 3d., and £1. 12s. 6d. is payable to the vicar of St. Michael's, out of the estate of Thomas Ball Troughton, Esq. The Green, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. from the church, Far or Lower Green, 1 mile N. by E., and the Heath a little S., each contain a few scattered houses.

Keresley House, a neat mansion in a picturesque situation, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. from Coventry, the seat and property of the Rev. William Thickins.

CHARITIES.—Donor unknown.—The sum of 20s. has been given to the poor of this chapelry, charged upon the Ecce Close and Poors' Piece, containing about seven acres. In 1819, Thomas Sparkes purchased this close, now known by the name of Bell Close, subject to the above charge, which he paid for two years afterwards; but in 1833, the payment of ten or twelve years was due.

John and George Bohun, (see Coventry). The share falling to this chapelry is, when received, distributed on St. Thomas's-day to poor families.

COUNDON, formerly a hamlet, in the parish of Holy Trinity, Coventry, now, with Keresley, forms a consolidated chapelry, and contains 1,014a. 2r. 4p.; population, 220; rateable value, £1,956. 1s. 9d.; the principal land owners are the trustees of Sir Thomas White's charity, Thomas Neale, Esq., who are also lords of the manor; and J. P. Wilmot, William Wilson, Esqrs., Captain Elliott, Bonds Hospital, Mrs. Farr, William Bryant, Esq., Mr. Stephen Barnwell, and the Misses Eagle.

BROWNSHILL GREEN, a hamlet partly in Coundon, and partly in Allesley parish, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile W. from Keresley church, and $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles from the latter. Coundon Green, a few scattered houses, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from Keresley church.

MONKS KIRBY is an extensive parish and village, 7 miles N.N.W. from Rugby, comprises many scattered hamlets; the entire parish contains upwards of 10,000 acres of land. In 1841, here were 1,861 inhabitants; 1801, 1407; 1821, 1,659; 1831, 1,637; rateable value, £14,084. 19s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. William the Conqueror, gave this manor to Geoffrey de Wirce, one of his followers, who rebuilt the church, and granted it to the monastery of St. Nicholas, at Angiers; the monks of which place, sent a part of their convent here, and founded a cell or alien priory, whence it was called Monks Kirby. After experiencing the various vicissitudes attending alien priories in England, the manor was granted, after the dissolution, to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, from whose family it came, by purchase, to Basil, Lord Fielding, afterwards Earl of Denbigh, and continues in that noble family; the principal land owners are the Earl of Denbigh, Sir Grey Skipwith, Robert Arkwright, Esq., the Severn Company, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London; Trinity College, Cambridge; W. S. Croft, William Townsend, Joseph Hobley, Mr. Godfrey, John Winterton, and several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Edith, is a large and handsome structure, containing nave, chancel, side aisles, and large square tower containing six bells; and had formerly a tall spire serving as a land mark to the surrounding country, but was taken down about two centuries ago "to save the expense of repairing." The church contains many beautiful monuments and tablets to the memory of the Denbigh family and others. The living is a discharged vicarage, with Withybrook vicarage annexed, value in K.B. £22. 9s. 7d., now £166., in the patronage of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, and incumbency of Rev. Ralph Hutchinson Simpson. The vicarage is a large neat residence at the west end of the village.

Brockhurst, a small hamlet adjoining Monks Kirby, containing a few respectable and well-built houses, and a large school, which is supported by the ladies of the Denbigh family, for 40 girls; also a school adjoining for infants.

Little Walton, a hamlet in the township of Monks Kirby, 3 miles S.E. from Kirby. Street-Ashton contains a few scattered houses, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. from Kirby. Mazzle Leays is a farm 2 miles N.E. from Kirby. Chester's Over, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. from Lutterworth. Street Field, a small hamlet $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from Lutterworth.

Copston Magna, a township and chapelry $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.S.E. from Nuneaton, was given by Geoffrey de Wirce, in the 12th of William I., to the monastery of St. Nicholas, at Angiers, and afterwards passed to the Carthusians of Axholme. At the dissolution, it followed the fortune of the cell at Monk's Kirby; and the Earl of Denbigh is lord of the manor. The chapel, dedicated to St. John, is a neat stone building, in the Norman style of architecture, and cost £1000., raised by subscription; Rev. E. B. Rice, curate. A neat National school, with a house adjoining for the mistress, was erected 1847, by Lady Augusta Fielding, daughter of the Earl of Denbigh. Population in 1841, 113; and 1,081 acres of land.

Easonhall, a small village and township, 4 miles N.W. from Rugby, contains a few good houses; and, in 1841, had 214 inhabitants, 1,111 acres of land; rateable value, £2960. 18s. 0d. Sir Grey Skipwith is lord of the manor.

Pailton, a considerable village and township, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. from Rugby, and 1 mile N.E. from Monks Kirby; in 1841, had 602 inhabitants, and 1,600 acres of land. Earl Denbigh is lord of the manor. The Baptists have a small neat brick chapel here, erected 1844; Rev. James Jones, minister. A neat National School was erected 1848, by subscription, aided by a grant from the National Society, the Earl Denbigh gave the ground, will accommodate 120; Harriet Hinde, mistress.

Newnham Paddocks, 1 mile N.W. from Monks Kirby, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ N.E. by N. from Rugby, was purchased by the ancient family of Fielding, in the 12th of Henry VI. The mansion is large and commodious, and is the seat and property of Earl Denbigh; and contains a valuable collection of paintings, amongst which are many family portraits, several by the pencil of Vandyke. The chapel contains a splendid collection of ancient carving, and the windows are fitted up with beautiful stained glass.

Stretton-under Foss, a small village and township $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. from Rugby, and 2 W. from Monks Kirby, and contains the hamlet of Newbold Revel; in 1841, contained 336 inhabitants, 1,149 acres of land; rateable value, £3,017. 15s. 0d. Sir Grey Skipwith is lord of the manor. The Independents have a small brick chapel here, erected 1789; will accommodate 300, and has a burying ground attached; Rev. John Harrison, minister.

Newbold Revel, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. W. by N. from Rugby, is a large neat square brick mansion, with stone facings, surrounded by a park, containing about 80 acres; this estate was granted to Geoffrey de Wirce, and in the 12th of Henry II., was reputed a member of Wappenbury, being held by the lords of that manor. From the Wappenbury's, it descended to the Revell's and Malroy's; and in 1640, became the property, by purchase, of Sir S. Clarke, Bart. It is now the seat and property of Sir Grey Skipwith, Bart.

CHARITIES SCHOOL, (Wales charity, see Coventry).—The school-house, in which the master resides, has been lately rebuilt by the parishioners. The school-room is under the same roof. The master receives £30. a year from the corporation of Coventry, by whom he is appointed. He takes boarders, and has also pay scholars. The free scholars average about thirty, chiefly from Pailton and Monks Kirby; and a few from Brinklow and Stretton; they are kept separate in the school from the others, and are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic; Henry Townsend, master.

Thomas Cook, of Pailton, by will, 1714, gave an arable land to this church, for the maintenance thereof; this land, now a close in Pailton, containing 1r. 39p., let at the yearly rent of £1. 10s.; which is carried to the churchwardens' account. There was also formerly another piece called Nether Fens Furlong, said to belong to the church; but the parish has no land there now.

John King, by will, 1642, gave yearly, for ever, to the poor of Monks Kirby Town out of lands in Street Aston lordship, called Fat Furlong, the sum of 10s., to be equally distributed at Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide. The Earl of Denbigh's tenant on the estate, pays the 10s., which is distributed in bread to poor widows.

Mr. Henry Gough, steward to the Earl of Denbigh, who died in 1706, gave, by will £10., to be yearly distributed to poor communicants, in bread, at Easter, for ever.

Thomas Sutton, gardener to the Earl of Denbigh, gave, by will, the interest of £5., to be distributed yearly in bread, to the poor of Monks Kirby, and Brockhurst, on Trinity Sunday. The sum of £15. was lent in October, 1811, to Thomas Burbury, upon his note, who failed. The township of Monks Kirby, as the money was lost by their neglect, pay the interest, 15s. out of the rates, which is distributed on Easter Sunday.

Mr. William Miller, (father and son) gave, by will, Gills close, near Pailton, ordering the rent of it (5s. being paid for chief rent) to be yearly distributed to the poor of the Constable ward, of Monks Kirby, at the discretion of their heirs. Gills close is situate in the township of Pailton, and contains 2a. 3r., and let at the yearly rent of £10., which is received by the churchwardens, and distributed in money to the poor of the township of Monks Kirby.

Mr. Lee, of Rugby, gave, by will, £2., the interest to be distributed in bread; in 1786, it produced 1s. 6d. per annum. Nothing is now known of it.

Joseph Bosworth, by will, 1805, gave to the vicar and churchwardens, of Monks Kirby, and their successors, £63., in trust, to place out the same at interest; and to pay the produce of £42., part thereof, to the officiating minister of Monks Kirby, for preaching a sermon in the parish church on Mid-lent Sunday; and another in the afternoon of the Sunday next, after Old St. Swithin: and upon further trust, to pay the proceeds of the £21., residue thereof, towards the support of the Sunday schools of Monks Kirby and Pailton. The said testator, by a codicil to his will, dated March, 1806, granted to the Rev. Robert Beresford Podmore, vicar of Monks Kirby, to the use of him and his successors, vicars of Monks Kirby, Shuckborough close, containing three acres of land. The sum of £63. is in the hands of the Rev. R. B. Podmore, who pays five per cent. interest, which is divided as directed. Shuckborough Close is let to the schoolmaster at the yearly rent of £4. 4s., which is divided in the same manner as the produce of the £63. legacy, which legacy this close was intended by the testator to annul.

STRETTON-UNDER-FOSS TOWNSHIP.

Poor's Land,—On the inclosure of the open fields of Stretton-under-Foss, in 1771, about five acres and a half of the land was originally set out for the poor to cut fuel. It has been cultivated, and is now (1833,) let at the yearly rent of £12. The rent is received by the agent of Sir Grey Skipwith, Bart., and the amount is distributed in coals to all the resident poor. The children of this township are entitled to go free to Monks Kirby school.

SHILTON, a small village and parish $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. from Coventry, contains, with part of the hamlet of Barnacle, about 1,000 acres of land, and, in 1841, 453 inhabitants; rateable value, £2,350.; the principal land owners are Lieut. Col. Adams, John Atkins, Rev. — Smith, and several others have small estates here. The manor now belongs to the Dean and Canons of Windsor: this was formerly included in the parish of St. Michael, Coventry, and the chapel was appropriated to the priory there. The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, built in the 14th century; the north aisle is supposed to be the oldest, in which is a beautiful architectural window; here are several ancient monuments to the Fielding family. The living is a perpetual curacy, rated at £76., augmented with £800. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Coker Adams, M.A. A neat National School, erected 1849, for this and Anstey parish, supported by voluntary contributions; this school was established 1725, will accommodate 120 boys and girls; Charles and Eliz. Simpson, master and mistress. The annual feast is held on the first Sunday after the 24th of June.

CHARITIES.—John Grace, by will, 1715, gave £30. to the poor of Shilton. This money is now in the Coventry Savings' Bank; the interest is regularly distributed on St. Thomas's day. See also Anstey parish.

SOWE, a small village and scattered parish, 3 miles E.N.E. from Coventry, was, in part, given by Earl Leofric to the monks of Coventry, at which time the chapel was an appurtenance to the church of St. Michael. The principal remaining portion of this village was held by the Loge's, a family of consequence long settled here. The parish contains 2,444 acres of land, and, in 1841, here were 1,383 inhabitants; in 1801, 805; 1821, 1,212; 1831, 1,414; living in 174 houses; rateable value, £5,391, 18s. 0d. The principal owners are the Earl Craven, William Wale Brown, Lord Willoughby, and John Watson; the former is lord of the manor; several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat stone edifice, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower containing five bells, supposed to have been built in the 15th century; in 1822, the gallery was extended, and a vestry built, at the expense of the parishioners, aided by a grant of £100. from the society for building and enlarging churches, by which means the free sittings were augmented to 296. At the same time, whole-length figures in stained glass, of our Saviour, St. Peter, and St. John, after Raphael, on pedestals, beneath a rich Gothic canopy, executed by Pemberton, were placed in the east window, the expense being defrayed by voluntary contributions. The living is a vicarage annexed to Stoke, value £333., in the patronage of the crown, and incumbency of Rev. F. D. Perkins: the vicarage is a neat brick building, erected 1819, by the present vicar. National School, with a good house attached for the master and mistress, was erected 1836, by subscription, and a grant from the National Society, will accommodate 120; James and Martha Newman, master and mistress. The General Baptists have a small chapel here, built 1840. The Independent chapel is a neat brick building, 1 mile N. from the village, erected by subscription in 1820; there is a school in this chapel for boys and girls; William and Martha Porter, master and mistress.

Hawkesbury Lane, a hamlet 2 miles N.W. from Sowe, contains several good houses. The Baptist Chapel, erected 1845, is a neat brick building. Here is a small infant school, supported by the Rev. John Brown, vice-master Trinity College, Cambridge; Catherine Mills, mistress. The principal part of the inhabitants in this parish are ribbon weavers and colliers.

CHARITIES.—In the returns of 1786, the names of Lord Berkely, Richard Fielding, and Robert Simmons, are given as donors of £27., then reduced to £10., which has also since been lost. It is also stated that Mrs. Purefoy, in 1740, gave £5. to the poor; this sum was, in 1822, in the hands of Thomas Wale, the churchwarden, when he became insolvent, and the money was lost.

Church Land.—On the general inclosure of the parish, in 1756, between five and six acres of land were allotted to the churchwardens for the use of the church; a portion of this land was taken by the Oxford Canal Company for the purposes of their navigation; and another portion divided from the rest is rented by them at 50s. a year. The residue of the land, upwards of four acres, is let at the yearly rent of £12., and carried to the church-rate account.

Poor's Land.—There was also allotted, at the time above-named, 30 acres to the poor of the parish, on which every settled parishioner has a right to turn on this land, throughout the year, one cow or four sheep. This land is by the Oxford canal, now divided into three parcels, and as a compensation for the land taken, the church-land, for which they pay 50s. a year, is added to the common.

STIVICHALL, a small scattered parish, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by W. from Coventry; belonged to Ranulph, Earl of Chester, in the time of King Stephen, whose son Hugh granted the manor to Walter Durdent, Bishop of Coventry; and through various persons it passed to Thos. Gregory, who died seized of it in the 16th of Elizabeth; and his descendents still possess the same. In 1552, Elizabeth Swillington, of Stivichall, gave £140. to purchase certain lands, the rents of which were to be expended in repairing the roads near Coventry. The ancient church was taken down about thirty-four years ago, and a neat gothic structure erected on its site, dedicated to St James, chiefly at the charge of the late Francis Gregory, Esq., its patron; the living is a perpetual curacy, value £90., and has been augmented with £400., private benefactions; £800., Queen Anne's bounty; and £300., parliamentary grant: A. F. Gregory, Esq., patron; and Rev. A. W. Gregory, incumbent. Near to the church is the handsome family mansion, built of stone, by Arthur Gregory, Esq., about the year 1170, and is now the seat and property of Arthur Francis Gregory, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and principal owner; the parish contains 700 acres of land, and in 1841, had 18 houses, and 99 inhabitants; rateable value, £1826. 12s. 6d.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Naul, by will, 1703, left £5. to the poor of this parish; the interest to be applied in purchasing bread, to be distributed on St. Thomas's-day. This money was placed in the hands of Arthur Gregory, Esq., on bond, in 1707. Mr. Gregory's family still reside here, and make a large distribution of bread and meat to the poor, in which this is considered to be included.

Mary Turner, (see Bubbenhall).—The sum of 6s. 8d., the share belonging to this parish, was many years unpaid. Mr. Lillingstone, the owner of the property, in November, 1832, paid the arrears, £4. 3s. 8d.

DIRECTORY.—Abraham Dunn, tanner, &c., Stivichall Villa; Arthur Francis Gregory, Esq., The Hall; Henry Lambert Horsfall, news agent; Edward Jagger, banker's clerk; Mr. William Davies Jephcott, Mrs. Mary Salmons, John Sparrow, blacksmith; and Thomas Carter, Peter Cheadle, and William Gums, farmers.

STOKE, a parish and well-built village, pleasantly situated, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from Coventry, was an ancient possession of the Earls of Chester; one of whom (Ranulph), in the time of King Stephen, gave the chapel to the monks of Coventry. From the Earls of Chester the lordship passed to the Montalts; after which it was for many generations held by a family, who took the name of Stoke; the last possessor of which name, William de Stoke, sold the manor, in the reign of Henry VIII., partly to a person named Horne; and the residue to the corporation of Coventry. A small portion belonged to St. John's Hospital, Coventry. Another and distinct manor, known by the name of Biggin, in the time of Edward I., belonged to the priory of Coventry, and was afterwards granted to the corporation of that city. The manor house, called Biggin Hall, is of considerable antiquity, and surrounded with a moat; some remains of buildings, evidently of still greater age, were discovered about thirty-five years ago, within the same lordship; amongst which, the walls of a private chapel, with a piscina and locker, were very perfect. The parish contains 920 acres of land; of which, 75a. 1r. 34p. are waste and public roads; in 1841, here were 216 houses, and 936 inhabitants; rateable value, £2,756. : Earl Craven is lord of the manor; the principal owners are William Frederick Pridmore, Rev. F. D. Perkins, T. S. Morris, Esq., and the trustees of Sir Thomas White's charity. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, erected in the 13th century, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, containing three bells; in addition to 40 free sittings, obtained 1819, by the erection of a gallery, had a north aisle built, 1822, partly by subscription, amounting to £200., and partly by a grant of £100. from the society for building and enlarging churches, at which time the chancel window was ornamented with stained glass, by Pemberton, and the building of the vestry completed. A finger organ, purchased by subscription, was put up in the gallery at the time of its erection. The church contains several good and ancient monuments. The living is a discharged vicarage, with that of Sowe annexed; value, £333.; in the patronage of the crown, and incumbency of the Rev. F. D. Perkins, M.A. Tithes commuted 1849: vicarial, at £96. 6s. 2d.; and rectorial, at £106. 1s. 5d.; the owners of which, are William Pridmore, Edward Goodall, Richard Goodall, Charles, John, Mary, Ann, and Joseph Lythall Laing. Here is a small independent chapel, erected by subscription, 1825. The national school is a neat brick building, with a house adjoining for the master and mistress; will accommodate 150; erected 1831, by subscription, aided by grants from the National Society, and from the Committee of Council on education.

CHARITIES.—Lord Berkley, by the returns of 1786, it is stated, gave to the poor of Stoke £16. 10s.; with this sum it is supposed the churchwardens purchased the Cottage Bit, containing about three-fourths of an acre, and let at the yearly rent of £3. 3s.; which they distribute annually, at Lady-day, at the church door, to the poor, in sums varying from 1s. to 2s. 6d. each.

Church House.—A dwelling-house and 1a. 1r. 36p. of land, now let to the drapers' company, of Coventry, for a term of forty-two years, paying a fine of £50.; and for the first twenty-one years, £8. 10s. per annum rent; and afterwards, £13. 10s. per annum, which is carried to the church rate account.

STRETTON BASKERVILLE, a small parish containing seven scattered farms, 3 miles E. by S. from Nuneaton; in 1841, here were 16 houses and 75 inhabitants, and 1,019 acres of land; rateable value, £1,334. 7s. The name of this parish was derived from its proximity with the Watling street, and having the distinctive adjunct from a family who were anciently lords of the place; was given to Ralph de Mortimer by the Conqueror, but soon passed to the Baskervilles. Ralph Fitz Nicholas was lord of the manor in the 4th of Henry III., and had a mansion, with pools, for storing which he had a warrant from the King to receive 100 breams from Kenilworth pool. There was chapel here as early as the reign of King John, appendant to Burton. The depopulation of this place commenced in the reign of Henry VII., in whose time 23 houses and cottages were taken down, and 80 persons constrained to leave; in consequence of which the church became ruinous, not a vestige of which is now to be seen. The inhabitants use Burton Hastings church. The principal land owners are Thos. Brown, the family of the late John Huskisson, William Gilbert, John Colley, George Oldacres, George Engstron, and Mrs. Main.

Directory.—Wm. Arnold, John Colley, Wm. Powers, and Joshua Smith, farmers.

WILLELY, a small village and parish on the Watling street, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. from Lutterworth, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ N. from Rugby, was, at the Norman survey, united with Wibtoft. In the 26th of Henry II., Robert de Wileya had a trial with Simon de Vernon, for the right of this village; and in the 38th of Henry III., Roger de Herdbergh contested with the Abbot of Preaux, in Normandy, his claim to the church in right of the cell at Warmingington, but the suit was decided in favour of the Abbot. The manor passing through the various families of Boteler, Cokesey, Grevile, and Winter, was, in the reign of Elizabeth, sold in parts to various persons. Earl Denbigh is lord of the manor, and the principal land owners are Misses Lakins, Edward Sale, Esq., John Goodacre, Esq., P. E. Townley, Esq., Bent Allin, Esq., Rev. F. Morgan, and several others have small estates here. In 1841, here were 25 houses and 140 inhabitants; in 1801, 111; 1821, 101; 1831, 96; and 756a. 3r. 4p. of land; rateable value, £1,445. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a very ancient structure, consists of nave, chancel, small gallery, and tower containing three bells. The living is a rectory, value K.B. £8.6s. $7\frac{1}{2}$ d. now £291. in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Morgan, M.A. In the church is a neat monument of marble and stone, to the memory of the Rev. Rt. Beresford Podmore, M.A., rector of this parish 40 years, and vicar of Monks Kirby 52 years, died September 4th, 1842, aged 81 years, that being his birthday. The rectory is a good substantial brick building, pleasantly situated about 1 mile N.E. from the village.

Directory.—John Hackett, beerhouse; Rev. Frederick Morgan, rector; Ephraim Spires, blacksmith; John Wright, wheelwright and beerhouse; Thos. Wykes, farm bailiff, George Younge, shopkeeper; and James Booth, Rd. Hy. Goode, Rd. Lakin, Saml. Nichols, Nicholas Walton, Jas. Wright, and Thos. Wright, farmers.

WITHYBROOK, a parish, and small pleasant village, 8 miles N.E. by N. from Coventry, includes the hamlet of Hopsford, and is supposed at the time of the Norman survey, to have been part of Monks Kirby. The manor was, as early as the time of Henry I., in the possession of the Morevill's, one of whom gave certain land here to the monks of Combe; and from the Morevill's it passed to the Castells, who sold it in the 8th of Henry IV. to William Botoner, of Coventry, after which time the Everingham's and Grey's possessed it. At the dissolution, viz., in the 36th of Henry VIII., the land granted to the monks of Combe, passed to Thomas Broke and John Williams. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and a tower containing four bells; was given in the 22nd of Richard II. to the Carthusians, in the Isle of Axholme, the right of presentation of the same having been recovered from the Abbot of Combe, by Nicholas de Withibroc, in the 7th of John. In 1821, the church was re-pewed by subscription; and, in 1848, a new window was put in the chancel by Thomas Arnold, Esq.; in the same year the church was thoroughly repaired by the Masters and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge; during the progress the walls were discovered to be hollow, in one of which was the remains of a confessional containing three figures, an angel in the centre, and a cardinal on each side, which, at the time, were richly ornamented, but in consequence of being exposed to the air, the gilding has totally disappeared. There is an ancient monument to the memory of Christopher Wright, Esq., magistrate in the time of Queen Elizabeth; some branches of this family were connected with the gunpowder plot; two brothers came here, and afterwards went to Coventry armed, and defended themselves until they were taken at Lord Aylesford's. There are also several good marble monuments to the Arnold family. The living is a discharged vicarage annexed to Monks Kirby, value in K. B. £8. 6s. 8d., augmented with £400. private benefaction, and £800. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. Ralph Hutchinson Simpson. The Independents have a small neat chapel here, with a house adjoining for the minister, erected 1840, by subscription, on ground given by S. J. Lloyd, Esq.; Rev. — Stenner, is the present pastor. The parish contains 2,484 acres of land, and, in 1841, had 77 houses and 307 inhabitants; 1801, 294; 1821, 309; 1831, 318; rateable value, £3,780. 8s. 3d. The principal owners are Thomas Arnold, S. J. Lloyd, and William Edwards, Esqs.; the former is lord of the manor. Several others have small estates here.

Hopsford, a hamlet 1 mile N.W., was, at a very early period, possessed by Roger de Mowbray, afterwards came to the Hastings, thence to the Catesby's, and to Edward Belknap, who sold the manor to Humphrey Wright, who resided in the manor house, and his family continued there for some time; a portion of the old house is still standing, and is occupied by Thomas Arnold, Esq.'s. shepherd. Thomas Arnold, Esq., is owner of the whole of this hamlet, and resides at Hopsford House, a neat residence 1 mile N.W. from Withybrook.

WOLVEY is an extensive parish, and large well-built village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. from Nuneaton, was granted by the Conqueror to Robert de Veci, but in the time of Henry II. had passed to William, Earl of Warwick. Shortly afterwards the manor was purchased by Robert Basset, who gave 100 acres of land therein to the monks of Combe, and his son Reginald added pasturage for 500 sheep, together with the church and all its possessions. Reginald seated himself here, and having no male issue, the manor passed by his daughters to Yvo de Dene and Robert de Leicester, the former of whom gave the manor to the monks of Combe. A market and fair were granted in the 19th of Edward II. Sir Thomas de Wolvey had also "a fair estate here," which descended to the Astleys, and was long retained by them, being called a manor. There was, in the 18th of Richard II., an hermitage on Wolvey heath, which had, according to Dugdale, a much earlier origin. The Templars also had certain possessions here, which, at the dissolution, were granted to Aglionby and Hugford, and subsequently descended through Marrow, Newman, and Scarning, to Parker, of Chilvers Coton. The manor possessed by the monks of Combe, was purchased in 1653, by Thomas, Lord Coventry. It may be remarked as an historical fact, that Edward IV. was surprised here by the Earl of Warwick, and carried away a prisoner to Middleham Castle, Yorkshire. The parish contains 3,410a. 3r. 39p. of land, including part of the hamlet of Bramcott; and, in 1841, here were 923 inhabitants, living in 200 houses, and 14 houses, with 45 inhabitants in Bramcott; in 1801, the entire population were 621; 1821, 851; and 1831, 935; rateable value, £5,244. 12s. 0d.; the principal part of the inhabitants are stocking weavers. The principal owners are S. J. Lloyd, Esq., Mrs. Arnold, Wm. Winterton, Willoughby Winterton, Thomas Worthington, and Wm. Warner; the former is lord of the manor. Several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, in which there was a chantry, founded in the 17th of Edward III. within the Chapel of our Lady, by Alice, the lady of Giles de Astley, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and a tower containing three bells. There are also in the church several ancient monuments, one to the memory of the Rev. Thomas Noble, M.A., prebendary of Lichfield, and vicar of this parish upwards of 50 years, who died March 13, 1784, aged 82 years; also two full length figures in alabaster, to the memory of Thomas Astley and his wife, who died about 1603; a tablet to the memory of Elizabeth White, wife of William White, Esq., of Wolvey Hall, who died September 24th, 1756, aged 36; also William White, Esq., who died September 23rd, 1777, aged 48; there are also two full length figures in stone to the memory of Sir Thomas Wolvey and his lady. The living is a discharged vicarage, value in K.B. £6. 6s. 5½d., now £206., in the alternate patronage of the Bishop of Worcester, and James Smith, Esq., of Trinity College; and incumbency of the Rev. John Clementson. The vicarage is a neat brick building near the church. The General Baptists have a large neat chapel here, erected 1789, and enlarged in 1803; a neat brick house for the minister, and a school room, was erected in 1818; the chapel was again enlarged in 1834; Rev. Joseph Knigh is the present minister. The National school is a neat brick building, erected 1838, average attendance about 50; Emma Rowley, mistress. At the north end of the village is Jacob's well, which is very ancient, on the top of which is a stone figure representing Jacob; the water is said to be good for the rheumatism. The Temple at the north end of the village is an ancient farm house. A market was formerly held here, and a fair on the eve of St. John the Baptist, and three following days; both have long since fallen into disuse.

Wolvey Heath, a small hamlet situate ¼ mile from the village, consists of a few scattered houses. Here are the remains of an hermitage, the walls of which are wood, but very little of them remains, it is moated round. Lady Gray was burnt here for murdering her husband, in 1750; her reprieve arrived at Cloudesley Bush, about two miles distant, just as the fire was consuming her. Little Copston, a farm ½ mile N.W.

CHARITIES.—William Willoughby, in 1587, bequeathed £8. 6s. 8d per annum to the parish of St. Mary, Nottingham, and four other parishes in rotation, of which this is one, and the churchwardens receive £8. 6s. 8d. every fifth year from the agent of John Pemberton Plumpton, Esq.; a gown of the value of 10s. is given to each of four poor widows; £6. is divided between six poor decayed tradesmen of the parish—20s. to each; and 6s. 8d. is given to the minister for preaching a sermon.

Joseph Barriatt, in 1801. gave to the vicar and churchwardens of Wolvey, in trust for the poor of the said parish, £50.; the interest to be distributed in bread upon the 2nd of February. This sum, with others, was invested in the purchase of Navy five per cents., of which there is now £52. 10s. three-and-a-half per cents., producing a dividend of £1. 16s. 9d. per annum, which is laid out in three-penny loaves and distributed to the poor at the church on Candlemas day.

Richard Spooner Jacques, Esq., by will, 1803. gave £100. to the churchwardens and overseers of this parish, of the interest 10s. 6d. to be given to the resident minister for a sermon on Christmas day, and the remainder to be distributed in six-penny loaves to poor persons who should attend church on that day. This sum, invested with Barrett's, is now £105. New three-and-a-half per cents., producing £3. 13s. 6d. per annum—and given away in six-penny loaves at the church, on Christmas day.

William Winterton, by will, 1815, directed his executors to purchase, within twelve months after his decease, in the names of the vicar, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor of Wolvey, so much Stock in the public funds as would produce a clear yearly interest of 50s., to be distributed at the church in bread, on the 13th day of February in every year. This also, with the others mentioned, now consists of £52. 10s. New three-and-a-half per cents., producing a dividend of £1. 16s. 9d., which is laid out in six-penny loaves and given as directed.

Post Office, at Mr. George Rowley's.

WYKEN, a small village and scattered parish, 3 miles N.E. by N. from Coventry was formerly in the possession of the Countess Godiva. In the reign of Henry II. it had been granted to Walter Briton, whose widow gave a mill and cottage to the monks of Combe. Walter de Langley was lord of the manor in the time of Henry III., and in his line it remained until their execution, since which it has been held by the Trillows and Frevills. It passed from Sir Baldwin Frevill to Sir Hugh Willoughby, and was, in 1640, possessed by Richard Green. The principal owners are Earl Craven, Rev. John Brown, Thomas Stevens, W. F. Pridmore, Mrs. Arnold, and Mrs. Pridmore; the former is lord of the Manor; several others have small estates here. The parish contains 789a. 1r. 7p. of land, and, in 1841, 150 inhabitants, living in 25 houses, rateable value, £1,649. 4s. 7d. Craven Colliery is in this parish, and very extensive. The church was restored to the monks of Coventry by Ranulph, Earl of Chester, who caused it to be built in the time of Henry I. The living, a perpetual curacy, value £115. has been augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty. The Earl of Craven, patron, and the Rev. Henry Wickens, M.A., incumbent.

CHARITIES.—The Rev. Thomas Muston, rector of Brinklow, by will, 1729, devised to Thomas Green, and three others, a messuage and lands in Foleshill, in trust, to pay 20s. yearly, between the feasts of St. Michael and St. Thomas, to the minister of Brinklow for the time being, 20s. for the use of the prior of the said parish; and also to pay 10s. to the churchwardens of Wyken, for the poor, and he further directed that the residue of the rents should be paid to the minister of the parish church of Wyken as an augmentation to that small living. An Act of Parliament passed in 1774 for enclosing the common fields in the parish of Foleshill; an allotment, consisting of 14a. 2r., to be free, was made to the Church of Wyken, in respect of the lands left by the Rev. Thomas Muston, subject to the above conditions, and the 10s. to this parish is distributed by him to poor persons.

Jane Green is, in 1783, stated to have given, by deed, £5. to the poor; then vested in Lord Craven, and producing 5s. a year; nothing is known of this charity.

Directory.—W. S. and J. Harris, coal masters, Craven Colliery; Thos. and Wm. Wale, corn millers; and John Ashbourn, Hungerly House; Joseph Harris, Wm. Smith Harris, Mrs. Holmes, Thos. Linnell, Mary Pridmore, Wm. Fdk. Pridmore, William Seargent, and John Wright, Hungerly House, farmers.

THE KENILWORTH DIVISION

Comprises fifteen parishes, viz., Ashow, Baginton, Bubbenhall, Cubbington, Harbury, Kenilworth, Leamington Priors, or Royal Leamington, Leek Wootton, Lillington, Milverton, Offchurch, Radford Semele, Stoneleigh, Ufton, and Whitnash. This division contains 39,338 acres of land; in 1841, 4,226 inhabited houses, 390 uninhabited, and 67 building; 22,838 inhabitants, of whom 10,184 were males, and 12,654 females; of these numbers 4,583 males and 5,080 females were under 20 years of age; 5,601 males and 7,574 females 20 years of age and upwards; 16,319 persons were born in this county, and 6,519 elsewhere.

ASHOW, a small pleasant village $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by E. from Kenilworth, was, at the conquest, possessed by Turchil de Warwick; and descending to the Verdens, Simeleys, and others, was granted to the monks of Stoneleigh, and, after the dissolution, came into the possession of the Leigh family. The Right Honorable Chandos Lord Leigh is the present owner and lord of the manor. The parish contains 1,012 acres of land, and, in 1841, 43 houses and 172 inhabitants; 1801, 205; 1821, 178; 1831, 176; rateable value, £1,371. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice, consists of nave, chancel, and tower with four bells; the living is a rectory, value K. B. £6. 2s. 1d., now £295., in the patronage of the Right Honorable Chandos Lord Leigh, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Chas. Saml. Twisleton, M.A., inducted 1831. Tithes commuted, 1843, at £220. There are 11a. 3r. 9p. of glebe land. The Rectory is a neat residence near the Church, occupied by the curate.

CHARITIES.—In 1638, Lady Alice Dudley, (afterwards Duchess Dudley,) gave handsome communion plate to this Church, viz., a Flagon, Chalice, two Pattens, and Alms Basin; 1656, the said Duchess Dudley, by deed of this date, (confirmed by her will, 1668, settled her manor and lands at Bidford, in this county, for certain charitable uses, and that a fortieth portion of the rents, then valued at £5. per annum, should be given annually to the poor of this parish; the said portion has, of late years, amounted to £10. per annum. In 1827, by a decree of the Court of Chancery, another portion which was originally given by the said Duchess Dudley, for the redemption of Christian Slaves in Turkey, amounting to £10. per annum, and also a portion of dividend of stock, arising from the accumulation of money formerly set aside for the above object, (for which now there are no claimants,) amounting to £25. 10s. 8d. yearly, by which decree the above sums are laid out in fuel, clothing, &c., at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens, and distributed by them annually, at Christmas, to the poor of this parish. The poor children of this parish have the privilege of going to the school at Stoneleigh.

Directory.—John Gibbs, butcher; Rev. Henry John Maddock, M.A., curate, Rectory; James Dormer, Dial house, John Hiorns, James Lee, and Wm. Norman, farmers.

BAGINTON, a small pleasant village and parish, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by E. from Coventry, at the Norman survey was possessed by Turchil de Warwick, and in the 6th of Richard II. Sir William Bagot was lord of the manor, and resided in the Castle; he was buried in the Church, where a fine monumental brass with the effigies of himself and family is preserved. From this Castle (of which only some slight traces of the foundations remain,) the Duke of Hereford, in the 21st of Richard II., proceeded to Gosford Green, near Coventry, for his intended combat with the Duke of Norfolk. In the reign of James I. the manor came by purchase to William Bromley, Esq., whose grandson was appointed speaker in the House of Commons, in 1706, and the 9th of Queen Anne; whilst he filled this office, the ancient family mansion was destroyed with fire, and the present handsome edifice was erected by him upon its site, and is now the seat of the Hon. Wm. Yates Peel. It contains a valuable library, and many family portraits, amongst which is a fine one of the Lord Keeper Bromley, and a whole-length painting of the Speaker. This parish contains 1,480 acres of land; and, in 1849, here were 54 houses, and 245 inhabitants; in 1801, 300; 1821, 281; 1831, 257; rateable value, £2,532. The Rev. Walter Davenport Bromley is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a neat and pleasing appearance, and is rendered more interesting by the circumstance of the tower and spire being over-grown with ivy. The living is a rectory, V. K. B., £8. 1s. 8d., now £363; in the patronage of the Rev. Walter Davenport Bromley; and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Gooch, D.C.L.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Lucy Price, of Baginton Hall, by indenture, 22nd of June, 1814, conveyed to the Rev. Walter Davenport, (who afterwards took the name of Bromley) and five others, certain premises then used as a school and a residence for the mistress, which she had previously established, with the stable, garden, and out-buildings belonging thereto, in Baginton, containing 22 perches; and the farm and lands situated in the parish of Wasperton, in the occupation of John Archer, with the farm-house and out-buildings, &c.; and 21 parcels of land, containing together 162a. 2r. 9p., then let at £247. per annum; and the right of fishery on the river Avon, then let at £4. per annum; to hold the said premises on trust, for the firmly establishing and the endowment of a school and other charities, to be applied by the trustees in the manner following:—that the school-mistress should have the use of the school and the house for her residence rent free; and that 21 fiftieth parts of the rents of the farm should be paid to her for the time being for a salary; three other fiftieth parts for the purchase of coals and wood, for the said school and school-house; seven other fiftieth parts for the purchase of books, slates, paper, &c., for the use of the school; 17 other fiftieth parts for the yearly clothing of the said children; such clothing to be given in such articles of dress as should be most required; and the two remaining fiftieth parts towards the purchase of articles, or materials for work for the girls; and it was her intention that, after her decease, the lord or lady of the manor of Baginton, should be the visitor of the said school. The school to be for the benefit of the sons and daughters of the poorest inhabitants of Baginton, not exceeding sixty in all; not to be admitted under the age of six years; to be taught on Dr. Bell's system: the children to be taught reading, writing, and arithmetic; and the girls knitting, and useful plain work, &c. Mrs. Price, died 19th of August, 1822. The farm was let on a fourteen-years' lease, which expired in 1836. at the yearly rent of £228, subject to a land tax of £12. 16s. per annum. The mistress receives all the poor boys and girls of the parish, who are admitted on application to the trustee. She receives £60. per annum, which includes an allowance for an assistant and servant; the children are clothed annually, and are supplied with books and school requisites. In 1833, there was a balance in the hands of Messrs. Tomes & Co., bankers, Warwick, of £333. 9s. 0½d., due to the charity.

Sir William Bromley, knight of the bath, by deed, 1675, granted certain tithes to the incumbent of Baginton; and by the same deed certain rent-charges, which he had purchased; viz., a rent-charge, formerly granted to the priory of Kenilworth, of 20s., payable out of the rectory tithes of the church of Baginton, and 10s. out of the rectory tithes payable to the king, and 10s. issuing out of the mill there, granted the same to the lord of the manor of Baginton, and the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, to distribute the same yearly, on the 1st day of January, to the most necessitous poor, in commemoration of the charity of Katherine Bromley, his mother, and Margaret Clarke, his sister; who, before their deaths, severally desired 10s. a-piece might be given for ever to the poor of Baginton; and out of the 20s., due to him out of the rectory, he desired it might be partly employed on some orthodox divine; and if might be, the rector of Baginton to preach a sermon on the said 1st of January, in pious commemoration of William Bromley, his father, and the aforesaid Katherine and Margaret; of the above sums, 30s. is charged on the rectory, and 10s. on the mill, paid by the lord of the manor; 10s. is paid for a sermon; 30s. given to the poor.

Clobery Bromley, by will, 1710, bequeathed £50. to the poor of Baginton.

Daniel Morgan, by will, 1713, gave to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Baginton £10. to be set out at interest, to be given to poor people in bread, on the 10th of March, annually; and he further gave £10., the interest to be paid to the minister of Baginton, for preaching a sermon yearly, on the 10th of March; or if he should refuse, then to be given to the poor of the said parish on the said day; and he gave all the residue of his personal estate to Thomas Eliot, in trust, to be by him disposed of to the poor. This residue amounted to £59., which, with the two legacies of £10., he, Thomas Eliot, placed in the hands of William Bromley, to be employed for charitable uses, amounting, in the whole, to £79.; and also the sum of £50., left by Clobery Bromley, making £129. paid to William Bromley. On the 16th of May, 1747, the principal and surplus of interest in the hands of the trustee, amounted to £166. 5s. 3d.; which sum was laid out in the purchase of New South Sea Annuities, in the name of Rev. Dr. Francis Bromley and three others. This stock was sold out; but for many years the sum of £10. 11s. has been paid by the owners of Baginton, no doubt as the interest of this money, and distributed accordingly. There is also £5. paid by the same family to the churchwardens every year, for putting out an apprentice.

Mary Turner's charity, (see Bubbenhall).—The parish is entitled to receive 6s. 8d. per annum, which, for many years, had been unpaid; and in November, 1832, an arrear of £4. 3s. 8d., due to this parish, was received from Abraham Spooner Lillingstone, Esq., in whose estate, at Olton End, the Maiden's Close is comprised, and distributed by the churchwardens.

Directory.—Post Office, at Mrs. Hannah Worth's; letters arrive by foot post at 8, 15 A.M., and are dispatched at 5 P.M. James Allaban, farm bailiff; Robert Barnwell, carpenter; George Elliott, parish clerk; Samuel Freeman, shoemaker and shopkeeper; Rev. Frederick Gooch, D.C.L., rector; Timothy Grimes, corn miller; James Lapworth, tailor; William Mills, blacksmith; Hon. William Yates Peel, The Hall; and Martha Greenway, Stone house; Thomas Greenway, Baginton field; Richard Hands, Baginton lodge; Mrs. Newbold, Baginton rock; and Thomas Newbold, farmers.

BUBBENHALL, a parish and small retired village, five miles S.S.E. from Coventry, and near to the river Dove; was, in the 7th of Edward I, held by John Fitzwith; and afterwards came, by marriage, to John Beauchamp, the first baron created in England, by patent of Richard II., who subsequently became involved in the troubles of that monarch; and being attainted of treason, was hanged, drawn, and quartered. In 1841, here were 63 houses and 262 inhabitants; in 1801, 261; 1821, 249; 1831, 233; and 1,290 acres of land; rateable value, £1,141. 9s. 10d.; the principal land owners are the Rev. W. D. Bromley, Mr. George Townsend, Rev. C. J. Penny, Mr. John Satchwell, Mr. William Murcott, and Mr. Thomas Howlett; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient edifice, in the early English style of architecture, and consists of nave, chancel, and tower, containing three bells. The living is a perpetual curacy, rated at £70., augmented with £200. private benefaction, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Bishop of Worcester; and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Joseph Penny. The parsonage house is a neat brick building, at the north-west end of the village. The annual feast is held the first Sunday after the 12th of September.

CHARITIES.—Hannah Murcott, by will, 1775, gave £100. for the establishing a charity school in this parish; Mr. John Bushby Murcott, (1827) holds the legacy, for which he has agreed to pay interest at £5. per cent, which is applied to teach poor children.

Mary Turner, by will, 1607, gave and bequeathed certain estates, being at Oltno End, in the parish of Solihull, one of the fields being called The Maiden's Close, to her cousin William Nevell, merchant of London, and the heirs of his body, &c., to pay yearly after her death the sum of £3. 6s. 8d. at the feast of St. Andrew the Apostle, being the first day of November, or within three next after the said feast, being for the relief of poor needy persons within the following ten parishes, viz.:—Kenelworth, Styvechall, Bagginton, Stoneley, Bubenhall, Ryton, Woolston, Stretton, Marlon, and Wappenbury, the sum of 6s. 8d. to each. In the returns of 25th of George III, this charity is returned as being vested in William Grant. Daniel Palmer Grant sold these estates some years since to the trustees of the marriage settlement of Abraham Spooner Lillingston, Esq., of Elmdon Hall, near Birmingham. Application was made (1827) to Mr. Lillingston, who alleged that the estate was sold free of incumbrance, and therefore should resist the payment; and the case was referred to a court of equity. However, in November, 1832, Mr. Lillingston recommenced the payment; at the same time having paid £41. 16s. 8d. as arrears, which was paid in shares of £4. 3s. 8d. to each of the ten parishes, for distribution to the poor.

Directory.—Thomas Gray, blacksmith; Rev. Charles Joseph Penny, incumbent, parsonage; John Smith, carpenter and builder; Mr. Joseph Williamson, The Cottage; Thomas Gray, Joseph Grimes, Thomas Howlett, John Limber, Cross house; William Busby Murkitt, John Orton, and corn miller; John Satchwell, and Thomas Sprawson, farmers; Moses Satchwell, victualler and malster, Maltshovel; John Satchwell, victualler and brewer, Three Horse Shoes; John Jeaycock, and Samuel Stanbridge, shoe makers; John Sutton, butcher and shopkeeper; and John Walton, baker and shopkeeper; Joseph Twigger, baker, tailor, and carrier to Coventry, Tuesday and Friday.

CUBBINGTON, a parish and considerable village, five miles N.N.E. from Warwick, was, in the reign of Henry III., divided between the prior of Coventry, Roger de Iverie, and Henry de St. Maure; but the latter being compelled to leave the country for murder, his share was seized by Edward I. and given soon afterwards to the Knights Templars. After the dissolution the possessions of the priory of Coventry here were granted to Sir Ralph Sadler, and those of the Templars to Watson and Herdman. In 1841, here were 183 inhabited houses, 12 uninhabited, and 10 building, with 830 inhabitants; in 1801, 140; 1821, 614; 1831, 677, and 2000 acres of land; rateable value, £3,320. The principal landowners are Lord Gurnsey, Lord Leigh, Messrs. Wise, Mrs. Cattell, Messrs. Murcott, Misses Nason, Mrs. Breedon, Mrs. Boddington, Thomas Knight, John Ledbrook; and others have small estates here. The former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, was formerly a chapel to Wootton, and granted to the canons of Kenilworth, is an ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, north and south aisles, and square tower, containing four bells. The living is a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £6. 6s. 8d., now £207., augmented with £200., private benefaction, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; Edward Woodcock, Esq., patron; and the Rev. George Leigh Cooke, B.A., incumbent. The vicarage is a neat residence, situate on an eminence near the church.

CHARITIES.—John Glover, by will, 1762, gave William Murcott, and Thomas Webb, £250. to be paid out of his personal estate, in trust, to place the same at interest, to be paid yearly at the feast of St. Thomas the apostle, to such person as should be appointed by the minister and churchwardens of this parish, to instruct twenty poor children to read and write; to be nominated by the minister and churchwardens. Interest at five per cent has regularly been received, and applied to the purpose of teaching poor children. In the year 1821, a large national school was established for boys and girls, since which it has been applied to the use of this school. All the poor children of the parish may receive instruction free; the above is now used as an infant school and a handsome new one recently erected for the boys and girls, with a neat house.

Hannah Murcott, by will, 1775, appointed that the sum of £100. should be paid by her executor, for establishing a charity school at Bubbenhall, for teaching poor children to read; and that the like sum should be paid by her executor for establishing a like school at Cubbington, &c. Mr. John Busby Murcott has for some time held the money, and paid interest at five per cent, which is applied by the minister in aid of the national school.

Thomas Sotherne, by will, 6th of Charles I., stating that he had, in 1624, enfeoffed David Draper and six others, of a messuage and appurtenances and closes thereto belonging, situated in the town and fields of Cubbington, to the uses and upon the trusts of his will, that they should hold two-thirds of the said property, for the use of his wife, during her life, and afterwards to Gregory Richardson, for twenty-one years; he or his executors, &c., paying the sum of £4. annually, to be employed by his feoffees in manner following:—30s. to the poor of Stonleigh, and towards the repair of Hudson Bridges; 20s. yearly to the poor of Starton, and to the repair of Starton Foot-bridge; and the residue of the said £4. to the poor of Cubbington; and directed that at the expiration of the said twenty-one years, his feoffees should let the said two-third parts to the best value. By the award of the commissioners, for enclosing the common fields of Cubbington, dated 12th February, 1768, some exchanges were made in the property, for this charity, which now consists of a small house and out-buildings, two parcels of old inclosure, containing about 2 acres; and three fields of new inclosure, containing about 21 acres, let on lease for seven years, in 1826, at the yearly rent of £35. The rent is paid to the trustees, and by them to the different parishes, agreeable to the division by the donor of the £4. originally reserved; £13. 2s. 6d., being three-eighths, to the trustees of Cubbington; £13. 2s. 6d. to the trustee for Stonleigh; and £8. 15s. to the trustee of Starton, being the remaining two-eighth part. The money is divided amongst the poor of Cubbington, about Christmas; widows receive from 5s. to 7s. each; and other persons 5s. or under, according to their families.

Church Land.—A small piece of land near the village, containing about three-quarters of an acre, let to Mr. John Bodington, for the annual rent of £2. 10s.; the rent has, from time immemorial, been applied towards the repair of the church.

HARBURY, OR HERBERBURY, is a parish and large scattered village, 3 miles W.S.W. from Southam, was, amongst many other proprietors, held in part by the monks of Coventry; but their portion came afterwards to the canons of Kenilworth, who also had other possessions here, as had the monks of Combe. The Wagstaffs were considerable proprietors of this manor, at and after the reign of Elizabeth. This parish contains 3,233 acres of land; and, in 1841, here were 254 houses, and 1,039 inhabitants;

1801, 857; 1821, 1,045; 1831, 997; rateable value, £4,937. The executors of the late Henry Greswolde, Esq., are lords of the manor; and the principal landowners are Mr. John Sabin, Mr. Thos. Palmer, and Mr. John Heath. The Church, dedicated to All Saints', is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, south aisle, gallery, and square tower, in which is a peal of five good bells; in 1848, an organ was put up in the gallery, at the expense of the Rev. Clement Newsam, and Mr. Sabin. There are several ancient brasses and neat marble tablets in the Church. The living, a discharged vicarage, value K.B. £5., now £268., the Rev. Clement Newsam, patron and incumbent. The Vicarage is a neat residence, pleasantly situate near the Church. Presbyterian Chapel is a neat stone building, will accommodate 300. The Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway passes the north side of this village, the cutting here is one of the deepest in the kingdom, being 104 feet deep and 600 wide.

CHARITIES.—Free School.—Thomas Wagstaff, in the year 1610, purchased a plot of ground on the north side of the church-yard of Harbury, whereon he erected a school, placed therein a master and allowed him £20. a year, and kept the building in repair, but died without endowing of it. That, in a case in Chancery, Thomas Wagstaff, grandson to the founder, being willing to continue the endowment, it was by order, 6th February, 1637, that lands of better value than £20. per annum should be settled for the perpetual payment of the said salary, and repairs. In consequence, the £20. was settled to be paid yearly out of a moiety of the tithes of Harbury, and was so paid, and the school kept in repair, till the year 1738; the then owner, Elizabeth Oughton, discontinued the same; another suit was the consequence, and by an order of the Court, 1759, it was ordered that the charity should be established for ever, for instructing boys, children of the inhabitants of Harbury, having first learned their letters, in reading, writing, and accounts. The annuities of £20., and 20s., is now (1825.) paid by John Heath, Esq., the owner of the moiety of tithes so charged. The £20. is paid to the schoolmaster, who resides in the school-house originally provided; he receives all the children of resident parishioners who are qualified, and instructs them as above. The 20s. is applied by the trustees for repairs. Average attendance, 50. Joseph West, master.

John Jorge left certain lands and premises, either for the repairing and maintaining the Church of Harbury, or for the relief of the poor. The open lands of Harbury were enclosed in the year 1780, and allotments made in lieu of the ancient lands. The property now consists of two cottages, divided into four dwellings, with a small orchard adjoining, and between 24 and 25 acres of land, divided into four fields, let at the yearly rent of £31. 10s. (in 1823.) Occasionally, distributions of money, bread, or clothing, are made to the poor, after attending to the reparation of the church.

Poor Allotment.—Upon the inclosure of the common fields of Harbury, about the year 1780, an allotment of 30 acres was awarded in lieu of the right of the poor to cut furze. The herbage of this allotment is annually let at Easter by the parish officers, and, in 1825, produced £33. Seventy tons of coals were purchased at 1s. 4d. per cwt., and sold to the poor at 1s. 2d., which lots, with the expenses, consumed the money. The poor also cut furze on the land.

Post Office, at Mr. John Cooper's; letters arrive by foot-post at 9 a.m., and are despatched at 6 p.m.

KENILWORTH, a market town and parish, 5 miles N. from Warwick; 5 S. by E. from Coventry; 13 N. by E. from Stratford-on-Avon; 18 S.W. from Birmingham; and 96 N.W. by N. from London. This place, anciently called Kenelworda, is supposed to have derived its name from Kenelm or Kenulph, one of its Saxon possessors, who had on the Avon a strong hold or fortress, which was demolished in the war between Edmd. Ironside and Canute. After the Conquest, Henry I. bestowed the manor upon Geoffrey de Clinton, his treasurer and chamberlain, who built the church and founded a priory for canons regular of the order of St. Augustine, which he dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, the revenue of which, at the dissolution, was £643. 14s. 9½d. The same Geoffrey, soon after the establishment of his monastery, erected the earlier portion of that stately castle, for the magnificent and picturesque remains of which the town is principally distinguished. This castle, which was sold by his grandson, to Henry III., was greatly enlarged and strongly fortified by Simon de Montfort, to whom that monarch gave it as a marriage portion with his sister Eleanor. Simon de Montfort afterwards rebelling against his sovereign, and joining the discontented barons who had taken up arms against the king, took that monarch prisoner at the battle of Lewes, but was afterwards defeated and slain by Prince Edward, at the battle of Evesham. After the defeat of this baron, his younger son, Simon, shut himself up with a party of his adherents, in the castle, which sustained a siege for six months against the royal forces, commanded by the king in person; but the garrison being reduced by famine, the castle was surrendered to the king, by whom it was bestowed upon his younger son Edmund, afterwards created Earl of Leicester. Upon this occasion was issued the "Dictum de Kenilworth," enacting that all who took up arms against the king should pay him the value of their lands for five years. In the 7th of Edward I. the Earl of Leicester held a splendid tournament here, at which one hundred knights and as many ladies assisted. Edward II. having been made prisoner by the Earl of Lancaster, was confined in the castle of Kenilworth, and on his deposition being voted by parliament, a deputation was sent to extort from him an abdication of the throne; soon after the signing of which he was removed to Berkeley castle, where he was most inhumanly put to death. In the reign of Edward III. the castle was considerably enlarged, and in that of Richard II. many additional buildings were erected by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, whose son becoming king, the castle reverted to the crown. Queen Elizabeth gave it to her favourite, Dudley, Earl of Leicester, by whom the magnificent gatehouse was built, and who also erected the gallery tower and Mortimer's tower, at each extremity of the tilt-yard; and after having completed and embellished the castle, at a prodigious expense, entertained Queen Elizabeth and her whole court for seventeen days, with the most splendid pageants and costly magnificence. The expense of these sumptuous entertainments, which included every variety of luxurious gratification, was not less than £1,000. each day. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., Cromwell took possession of the castle, which he gave up to his soldiers, who plundered it of every-thing valuable, destroyed the walls and the park, drained the lake, and divided the lands among themselves into small farms, and after wantonly defacing the building, left it in a state of ruin and desolation. The present remains bear evident testimony of its ancient grandeur and formidable strength; the entrance into the outer ward is through a lofty arch under the gateway tower, a square building of great beauty, with angular turrets, now occupied as a farm-house; in one of the parlours is preserved an ancient mantel-piece of Alabaster, richly sculptured, and surmounted with finely carved oak, which, having escaped the destructive ravages of the soldiery, was removed from one of the state apartments. The ruins occupy three sides of a spacious quadrangle forming the inner ward, and consist of Cæsar's tower, built by Geoffrey de Clinton, a lofty and massive square structure, the walls of which are sixteen feet in thickness, beyond which are the keep or strong tower, and part of the kitchens; the banquet-hall, eighty-six feet long, and forty-four feet wide, with a range of windows of excellent symmetry, ornamented with rich tracery, and a triangular recess of three very beautiful windows, almost entire; and the water tower and lion's tower, which are in good preservation. Opposite to Cæsar's tower, with which it was connected by a range of buildings forming the fourth side of the quadrangle, but of which only the vestiges of the arched entrance are discernible, is Mortimer's tower, extending from which was the tilt-yard, two hundred and forty feet in length, and terminated by the gallery tower. The prevailing character of the architecture is the Norman, intermixed with the decorated and later English styles; the walls included an area of more than seven acres; and the venerable ruins, in many parts overspread with ivy, form one of the most extensive, superb, and interesting memorials of baronial splendour and feudal magnificence. Of the monastery, situate to the east of the castle, only some fragments of the walls and part of the gateway-entrance are remaining. The town consists principally of one street, extending more than a mile along the turnpike-road, and divided into two parts by a small valley, in which are situated the church, and the remains of the ancient monastery; on the higher grounds are some handsome and well-built houses, and crowning the summit are the magnificent remains of the castle. A stream, contributing to the Avon, and abounding with excellent trout, after passing under an ancient stone bridge, divides into two branches, enclosing the castle and town. The parish contains 5649 acres, 3r. 27per. of land, and in 1841, 666 inhabited houses, 69 uninhabited, and one building with 3149 inhabitants, of whom 1520 were males, and 1629 were females, in 1801, 1968; 1821, 2577; 1831, 3097; rateable value £12,283. 9s. 9d. The Earl of Clarendon is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil; several others have also estates here. The principal trades carried on here are the manufacture of horn combs, tanning, currying, and an extensive red stone quarry, which is very durable, and is used for building churches, bridges, &c., situate at Villier's-hill, 1½ mile east, and is wrought by Joseph Sturley. The market is on Wednesday, principally for butter and eggs, and a fair for cattle is held on the last day in April. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a venerable structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles, exhibiting portions in the Norman and in the early decorated styles of English architecture, with a square embattled tower, containing six bells, strengthened with angular buttresses, and surmounted by a lofty spire; the western entrance is through a very fine and richly-moulded Norman archway, and the north porch has two finely-pointed and richly-moulded arched doorways, above which is a small window of elegant tracery; the interior contains an ancient circular font, supported on a single Norman column, and some ancient and interesting monuments. The living is a discharged vicarage, value, K.B., £6. 13s. 4d., now £280.; in the patronage of the crown and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Eardley Wilnot, M.A. The vicarage is a neat residence near the church. A neat school room was erected on Burton green, 1842, and is licensed for divine service; the Earl of Clarendon gave the ground, the expense of the building was defrayed by subscription. The Catholic chapel is a small neat brick building, erected 1841, by Mrs. Amherst, near her own residence, Fieldgate-house; Rev. Geo. Montgomery, priest. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians, have each a place of worship here. For Dr. Edward's Free School, and the School of Industry, see Charities. Here is also an Independent school behind the Chapel, endowed by Abraham Arlidge, Esq., for thirty boys and thirty girls, who are clothed. Rev. John Button, master, and Elizabeth Russel, mistress.

The National and Infant Schools, Townpool, erected 1836. There is a Subscription Book Society at Rosemary hill, established 1848, and contains 300 volumes.

Redfern Manor House, 2 miles N.W., is a very ancient building; near this is the Abbott's Oak, measuring fifty-six feet round the butt, and is said to be the finest oak tree in this county.

Parkfield, a neat brick residence, 1 mile E. from the Church, in the Tudor style of architecture, in a retired situation, on a commanding eminence, erected 1843-4-5, by Thomas Cotton, Esq., whose seat and property it is. Thickthorn Park, a neat stone mansion, pleasantly situate, 1 mile S.S.E. the seat of John Wilkinson, Esq., and the property of Mrs. Wilson, of Leamington. The Spring, a neat residence, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile N.W., is the seat and property of Charles John Wheeler, Esq. Woodland's Cottage, a neat house at the south end of the village, near the Leamington road, the residence of the Hon. and Rev. Charles Samuel Twisleton. There are also several other handsome villas in the parish.

The London and Birmingham Railway, Warwick and Leamington branch, passes through this parish; the station $\frac{1}{4}$ mile N.W. from the King's Arms.

CHARITIES.—William Edwards, of Kenilworth, by will, 1722, devised certain property for the establishment of a school at Halton, (which see,) and also one at Kenilworth; and a fund for the distribution of clothing and bibles to the poor of the said parishes, by the award of the inclosure of Kenilworth, date 28th January, 1756; some allotments and exchanges were made. The Kenilworth School property now consists of a house, malthouse, and various closes, &c., amounting to 19a. 3r. 33p. let in 1824, for seven years, at the yearly rent of £70. which, after deducting for repairs and other expenses, the residue is paid to the schoolmaster, who occupies, rent-free, the school house built by Mr. Edwards's widow, agreeable to the codicil to his will, and instructs, gratuitously, all the poor boys, children of parishioners, who choose to attend. Geo. Evans, master.

The Coat and Gown Charity consists of various particulars, producing in the whole £71. 12s. 1d. The poor of this parish are entitled to receive, in every second year, six coats and six gowns for poor men and women; and the residue of the rents to be given in bibles, as the trustees think fit. From a considerable increase in the value of this property, a scheme was laid before one of the masters in Chancery, which was confirmed 28th July, 1818, for increasing the number of coats and gowns, and the giving of prayer books as well as bibles, to the poor.

William Turner, of Kenilworth, schoolmaster, by will, 1790, directed that £100. should be paid by his executor into the hands of the vicar and churchwardens of Kenilworth, within twelve months after the death of his sister, Ann Turner, upon trust, to employ the interest thereof for the instructing eight poor protestant children to read, thereby enabling them to become pupils of the free school in the said parish. The interest, £5., is paid to a schoolmistress, for teaching eight poor boys.

Thomas, Earl of Clarendon, by will, 1775, gave £200. to the rector, vicar, and churchwardens of this parish, for the use of the poor. This legacy was, in 1789, lent to the vestry, on mortgage of the premises used as the parish workhouse, at five per cent. interest. The yearly interest is applied towards the support of a school of industry for thirty girls of the said parish.

George Denton, of Warwick, by will, 1644, gave to William Phipps and three others, and their heirs, a messuage in three dwellings. in the high town of Kenilworth, which, by his will, to remain let to the widows then residing therein, at the annual rent of 6s. 8d. during their lives, and afterwards let to the best advantage of the poor. Under the Inclosure Act, 28th George II., for the inclosure of the common fields of this parish, an allotment containing 3a. 1r. 25p. was made to the churchwardens and overseers of this parish, being proprietors in trust for one acre and a half of land belonging to the Widows' Charity Houses. The old houses have been rebuilt for the accommodation of four widows. Dr. Butler, the vicar, gave £50. towards the cost, and the remainder was paid by the parish. The allotment is let for the yearly rent of £6. 6s., which is given to the poor.

Duchess Dudley, (see Bidford.)—The proportion of rent due to this parish, amounting, in 1825, to £22. 5s. 6d. is paid to the churchwardens, and by them distributed to the poor. This charity has since received considerable augmentation.

Stephen Waite, by will, 1727, gave £100. to be paid to the minister and churchwardens of this parish; this sum was, in 1729, laid out in the purchase of a meadow, being part of the Wood Closes, in this parish. The property consists of two fields containing 4a. 2r., now let for £8. a year, to be applied in binding out one poor boy of this parish.

Ann Fox, of Kenilworth, by will, 1724, charged her free land, then in the tenure of John Mumford, of the said parish, with the annual sum of 20s. for ever, towards putting a parish boy apprentice. Bayes Cotton, Esq., the owner of certain lands charged as above, pays the annual sum of £1.

Thomas Councill, gave the interest of £10. for ever, to be given in bread on Candlemas day. Francis Power gave the interest of £10. for ever. Thomas Johnson gave the interest of £10. for ever. Joseph Tyrer gave the interest of £6. for ever. Thomas Cook gave the interest of £5. for ever. Thomas Sutton gave the interest of £6. for ever, to be given in bread on Trinity Sunday. And William Brooks gave the interest of £5. for ever, to be given in bread on Christmas-day. The above-mentioned benefactions, amounting to £52., of which sum £40. was, by an agreement, 1794, laid out in the purchase of a close at Castle-end, containing 1a. 0r. 25p., and land in the Cross field, containing 1a. 0r. 33p. Upon the inclosure the commissioners awarded to the minister and churchwardens, in lieu of the land in Cross field, an allotment on the east side of that field, of 3r. 7p., bounded by the new road over Cross field, let for £1. 5s. The land at Castle-end is let for £2. The remaining £12. it is supposed, was employed for the repairs of Denton's houses, and never re-paid. The rents, £3. 5s., is, with other charities, distributed partly in bread, and partly applied in the purchase of coals in the winter, and £5. a year for apprenticing a boy.

The Earl of Clarendon, by will, 1810, gave the sum of £100 to the vicar and churchwardens of this parish for the time being, for the use of the poor of the said parish. This legacy was lent to the parish to be employed towards the re-building of the Denton's charity houses; the parishioners undertaking that the overseers of the poor shall pay interest at the rate of five per cent, to be appropriated to the use of the poor.

Church Lands.—There are various pieces of land, of which the entire rents, amounting to £29. 11s. 4d., are considered to be for the repairs of the church.

Mary Turner, (see Bubenhall).—The annual sum of 6s. 8d., originally paid to this parish, was long discontinued; but in 1832, the sum of £4. 3s. 8d. has been received as arrears.

LEAMINGTON PRIORS, OR ROYAL LEAMINGTON, a parish and fashionable watering place, two miles E. from Warwick, twenty-two S.E. from Birmingham, and ninety N.W. from London, derives its name from the river Leam, on the banks of which it is situated; and the distinguishing appellation of Priors was given in consequence of its being granted to the priors of Kenilworth. This place was one of the numerous possessions of Turchil, the Saxon Earl of Warwick; but soon after the conquest was taken from his son, and given to a Norman Baron, Roger de Montmorency; afterwards Earl of Shrewsbury. From this period, until the year 1166, the lordship had various owners; but then being in the hands of Geoffrey, son of the first Geoffrey de Clinton, he gave it, with the church and mill, to the priors of Kenilworth; and at the dissolution of the monasteries coming to the crown, it was granted by Elizabeth, in her 6th year, to Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick, who dying without issue, it once more reverted to the crown, and continued in its possession till the 2nd of James I., when it was granted in fee, with the Castle of Warwick, and all its dependencies, to Sir Fulke Greville, afterwards created Lord Brooke; since which time the estates of Leamington have been possessed by various proprietors. From a humble and almost unheard of village, Leamington has, within the last forty-years, risen with unprecedented rapidity into a large and populous town, which, from the spaciousness of its streets, which intersect each other at right angles, the elegance of its houses, and the beauty and interest of the surrounding scenery, is not excelled by any watering place in the kingdom; it, however, owes its present flourishing condition mainly to the springs for which it is so justly celebrated. It is visited during the season by numerous families of distinction; and by invalids, who frequent it for the benefit of the waters, and from the salubrity of the air, and the mildness of its temperature, it has become the permanent residence of many noble and respectable families, who have erected handsome mansions and dwelling-houses in various parts of the town and its immediate vicinity. The town is situate in a fine open vale, sheltered from the severity of the winds by gentle acclivities, richly clothed with wood, and surrounded by a fertile and highly-cultivated tract of country, abounding with objects of historical interest, and with scenes of impressive beauty. The river Leam, over which is a handsome stone bridge, connecting the old with the new town; and the river Avon, winding through the adjoining meadows, enlivening the landscape. And in the distance are seen the stately towers of Warwick castle and church, rising above the intervening groves, and presenting themselves in various points of view, with increasing beauty and effect. The mineral springs are of three kinds, sulphurous, saline, and chalybeate; the water of the sulphurous spring, according to the analysis of Dr. Loudon, a resident physician, contains sulphuric acid, chlorine, soda, lime, and magnesia; the gases are oxygen, azote, carbonic acid, and sulphuretted hydrogen; the saline water contains chlorine, lime, sulphuric acid, magnesia, silica, peroxide of iron, and soda; the gases are oxygen, azote, and carbonic acid. The chalybeate water contains chlorine, sulphuric acid, lime, magnesia, sodium, silica, and peroxide of iron; the gases are oxygen, azote, and carbonic acid; the saline and chalybeate waters differ chiefly in the proportion of their respective ingredients. There is a constant and plentiful supply of the mineral waters for drinking and bathing; and the varieties of the eleven different springs comprehend the respective properties, and rival the efficacy of the Cheltenham, Harrogate, and Tunbridge-wells waters. The first spring discovered here, and now called the Original Spring, situate at the west-end of the church in Bath-street, has been used from time immemorial; it formerly flowed spontaneously from a small fissure in the rock; but in 1803, the late Earl of Ayleford enclosed the spring in a small stone structure. Two pipes were affixed to the fount; one of which was ordered by his lordship to be placed outside the building, for the sole use of the poorer classes; a few years ago, the building was taken down and rebuilt upon a more elevated and modern plan, at the expense of the present Earl, whose grandfather was offered £1000. for a lease or grant of the site of the old cottages and this well, by Dr. Holyoake, a physician of Warwick, who no doubt saw the future advantages that would accrue from the spot; the Earl, however, nobly refused it, declaring that he would not suffer the water to be locked up from the public, and more especially from the poor.

The Original Baths are on the west-side of Bath-street; in reference to their origin, it is stated that William Abbotts possessed a piece of ground opposite the old well, and had long wished to discover a second spring; and with that object in view, he had sunk shafts in several places, but without effect. On the 14th of January, 1784, as he was conversing with his friend Benjamin Satchwell on the subject, the latter suddenly observed a bubble in an adjoining pond, which, upon stooping down and laving with his hand, he pronounced to be a saline spring. Abbotts immediately examined the properties of the water and found it an excellent mineral spring; and having sunk a well, erected a building for the purpose of warm and cold bathing. In commemoration of this event, honest Ben. Satchwell wrote the following characteristic and complimentary lines:—

“If Muster Abbotts had not done
His baths of laud and praise,
It must have been poor Leamington
Now, as in former days.”

Subsequent to the decease of Mr. Abbotts, the baths have passed through the hands of several proprietors; and in 1836, the original edifice was taken down to make room for the present appropriate structure; the building is in the Grecian style of architecture, from designs by Joseph Plevins, Esq., of Birmingham. There are eight baths for hot and cold bathing; the same number of shower-baths; a commodious plunging-bath, and a douche-bath, so constructed as to communicate a stroke varying from a fall of five to one hundred and twenty feet, not exceeding three hundred strokes; a small vapour and hot-air bath are attached to this establishment.

Victoria Baths and Pump Room opened 1804, and in 1838 were taken down to make way for the present noble range of building, in which the most extensive and recent improvements have been effected, exhibiting proof of a determination on the part of the proprietor to outstrip all preceding efforts of this nature at rival establishments, and it is equally manifest that an abundant outlay has been judiciously made, to which even the most celebrated for similar purposes should not be pronounced superior. This capacious and elegant structure has its principal entrance at the north-west angle of Victoria terrace, from whence a rich and delightful prospect is commanded, and the main front, towards the Leam reaches to the length of 112 feet, having a wide colonnade of the same extent, along which is a boundary wall, with a stone balustrade coping. The internal arrangements will be found on a par with the external amplitude and style of decoration. The pump-room is a large and well-proportioned saloon, well adapted to the purposes for which it was erected; amongst the latest additions is a superb fountain, procured at considerable expense, from Messrs. Austin's repository, New-road, London.

Royal Baths and Pump Room, on the north side of the river Leam, near the bottom of Lower Parade, is a large stone edifice, cost nearly £25,000.; consists of a central mass, 106 feet in length and 30 in height, supported by two wings, each 30 feet by 20; the main front is surrounded by a spacious colonnade formed by duplicated pillars of the Doric order: this forms one of the most complete structures of the kind in the kingdom; at each extremity of the central building are two entrances into the pump-room, which is of large extent and noble proportions; the ornamental part of the ceiling, the cornices, and all the interior embellishments are chaste and elegant. Some well-executed casts from the antique, placed in various parts of the room, are not among the least interesting of its internal decorations; at the west end of the room is an orchestra, in which a band attends every morning, and at the south is the pump with basin in the centre, standing on an ornamented pedestal of Derbyshire marble, enclosed by a mahogany balustrade. There are twenty baths of every description, and two divisions entirely separate, one for ladies and the other for gentlemen; the entrances are in the wings. The spirited proprietors have laid out several acres of land in spacious walks.

Oldham's Baths, Leam Terrace. These open-air swimming baths are now complete, adjoining the old mill in the lower town; they are enclosed by a high wall, and the water is kept constantly pure by the action of the mill-wheel, and small dressing rooms are fitted up with every necessary convenience.

The Jephson Gardens. These beautiful grounds occupy an extensive area near the bottom of the Lower parade, and are now appropriated to the use of the public, and form one of the most beneficial local schemes of improvement, of which the Spa was susceptible, and one of the most frequented promenades for visitors and residents; within a very recent period considerable improvements have been effected; the gardens have been enlarged and beautified; in May, 1846, the name was changed from the "Newbold Wood Walks" to its present designation, in commemoration of the professional abilities and private virtues of Dr. Jephson, to whom the inhabitants are greatly indebted for the prosperity of the town; at the principal entrance to the grounds are two small handsome stone lodges, of an ornamental construction. Broad gravel paths run in various directions, agreeably interspersed with flowers and shrubs; whilst a large artificial lake, and the peaceful waters of the river Leam give a charming variety to its general appearance; a short distance up the principal walk stands a noble circular-ended eight-columned temple, in the Corinthian order, which contains a finely executed marble statue of Dr. Jephson, from the studio of Mr. Peter Hollins, of Birmingham; the figure is large, the general aspect manly and dignified, and characterized by a natural and unaffected ease of position; the skilfully-managed folds of a cloak, by their amplitude and arrangement are made to contribute largely to the effect of the work; this monument is the result of a public subscription from the inhabitants and visitors to the Royal Spa, as a testimony of his public worth and benevolence. From this point a bridge, which is adorned with shells and pieces of ancient marble, conducts the visitor into a large open space of ground, where a band of music usually plays during the summer months, and is also used for the practice of the interesting and fashionable recreation of archery; from hence on the right, the eye is attracted by a fine grove of stately trees, whose umbrageous foliage and wide-spreading branches, together with the river Leam meandering close by, forms one of the most picturesque and enchanting spots that the imagination could conceive; a great number of rustic seats and arbours are placed in all parts of the gardens, commanding the most beautiful prospects, and affording agreeable retreats to the invalid or contemplative pedestrian. At the eastern entrance, a tasteful cottage has been erected, in the old English style of architecture. The Right Hon. Lord Sommerville, chairman; Mr. Owen White, secretary.

The Parish Church, dedicated to All Saints, was a very small edifice until the year 1816, when a new wing was added, and the old walls repaired; in 1825 alterations on a more extensive scale were effected, by enclosing the seats, so as to accommodate 278 persons, besides 290 free sittings; catacombs were formed under the new portion of the building, capable of containing 180 bodies; a spire was erected on the tower; the three old bells re-cast, and three new ones added, so that scarcely a portion of the old structure remained; in 1830 the south end was brought out to the distance of about 20 feet, and a considerable number of pews added to the body of the church; in 1832 an enlargement was made on the south side of the tower, by which means 200 free sittings were obtained. From 1824 to 1833 the expenses incurred in altering and enlarging this edifice, exceeded £11,000; again in 1834 an important addition was made by widening the whole building towards the east, by which 500 additional sittings were gained. The Rev. John Craig has commenced a long series of improvements, by the completion of which the sacred edifice will assume a most imposing and majestic appearance, and be sufficiently commodious to meet the spiritual wants of an increasing population. Scarcely a vestige of the old building now remains; but the ultimate magnificence of the new erection may be in some measure conjectured from a brief description of the leading particulars as it now stands. The church is being rebuilt, both inside and out, of stone; its plan is that of the cross, and is 130 feet long, 62 wide, and 75 high, exclusive of the transepts; in the centre of the cross a lantern tower is intended to be erected, 120 feet high, supported on four piers and arches, upwards of 60 feet in height; and upon the tower a spire to the height of 250 feet from the ground; the nave, chancel, northern transept, and clock tower, are now completed; the architecture of the nave and side aisles is early perpendicular, on each side being four piers and arches supporting the clerestory, pierced with four five-light windows; those of the side aisles are three lights; the western window over the door is the largest, and said to be the finest in the county, being upwards of forty feet high, and twenty wide; it contains fourteen scriptural subjects, descriptive of the life of our Lord, in stained glass; the roof is open and highly pitched with moulded ribs, purlins and braces; those of the aisles being similar, but of a flatter pitch; the chancel is in the early decorated style of architecture, having an aspidal end, and a large arch separating it from the altar, and is the same width and height as the nave; the part over the altar is somewhat lower; it is lighted by five windows, upwards of thirty feet in height, and two clerestory windows filled with elaborate tracery; the centre window is of painted glass, representing three of the apostles in niches, with canopies, and the upper part is ornamented with rich diaper work. The stones at the altar are of a most costly description; in the northern transept, which has just been completed, there is a splendid rose window, measuring about 28 feet in diameter, filled up with elaborate drapery; the design is from a window in the cathedral at Rouen; in the western wall are two decorated windows of stained glass, presented by the Rev. W. Hopkins, and executed by Mr. Holland, of Warwick; the designs, the richness of the various colours, and accuracy of execution, are such as to call forth the admiration of those who have an opportunity of examining this work of art; the first window represents the entombment of our Saviour, ornamented with rich canopies, and an appropriate pedestal; the figure in the fore-ground is that of the Virgin Mary; the head of Christ being supported by St. John the Evangelist; and the feet by Joseph of Arimathea; the back-ground represents Nicodemus bearing a vessel of myrrh and aloes; and two kneeling figures of Joseph and St. Philip. The top compartment of the window contains the subject of the good Samaritan; the two lower, the emblems of St. Matthew and St. Mark; in the second is represented the resurrection of Christ, ornamented with canopies and pedestals; and the centre contains the figure of St. Mary anointing the feet of Jesus, which is followed by the emblems of St. Luke and St. John. At the north-east angle of the transept is the clock tower, with a spire rising to the height of 145 feet, adorned with rich crockets; the clock possesses three dials looking north, east, and west; each seven feet in diameter. The monumental inscriptions in the church are of modern date; there is one to the memory of Chief Justice Willes, an ancestor of the Willes family, to whom, conjointly with the Rev. Henry Wise, the chancel belongs. There is an inscription on a stone in the middle aisle to the Rev. Dr. Greenwood, formerly vicar of St. Mary's and St. Nicholas', Warwick; the living a discharged vicarage, V.K.B., £6. 10s., now £255., in the patronage of the Rev. Henry Wise, and incumbency of the Rev. John Craig, M.A.

The Episcopal Chapel, Beauchamp-square, erected 1825, from designs by Mr. Robinson, of London, in the Norman style; it has a low square tower, which gives it a heavy appearance; the interior is also dull, owing to the ponderous pillars that support the roof; and the deeply-stained glass windows impeding the light; the site was given by Edward Willes, Esq., and the road in front by Bertie Greatheed, Esq., and is the property of the Rev. R. Downes, but held on lease by the Rev. John Craig.

St. Mary's District Church, situate on the south-side of Radford-road, is a neat brick cemented edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side-aisles, and square embattled tower, 75 feet high; E. Willes, Esq., gave the site; it was built 1838-9, from designs by Mr. J. G. Jackson, in the ecclesiastical style of the 15th century; a very handsome stained-glass window, given by a member of the congregation, has recently been placed at the east-end; it contains in the upper central compartment the episcopal mitre, surrounding the arms of the diocese, quartered with those of the late venerable diocesan, Dr. Ryder; the remaining compartments are occupied with those of the trustees, viz., Edward Willes, Esq., Rev. Dr. Marsh, and Alexander Gordan, W. Sherer, and Edwin Woodhouse, Esqs.; this window presents a fine specimen of the skill of the artist, Mr. Holland, of Warwick; in front of the reading desk is a handsome stone octagonal font; around the bowl are carved the emblems of our Saviour's sufferings. The living, a perpetual curacy; the trustees are patrons, and the Rev. Wm. Marsh, D.D., incumbent.

Trinity Chapel, Beauchamp-square, erected 1847, in the early English style of decorated architecture, and cruciform shape; its transepts are of nearly similar proportions; the windows are of large dimensions, filled up with rich mouldings and tracery; the length, from east to west, 70 feet, and 40 high, with a bell turret; it was built by the Rev. John Craig, and the Rev. William Young, L.L.D., and cost about £4,000.; the latter is the officiating minister.

Catholic Chapel, George-street, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat and elaborate building, erected 1828, under the superintendence of Mr. Russell; the west front consists of a pediment, supported by four columns of the Grecian Ionic order, between the centre of which, and immediately over the principal entrance, in a niche, is a finely executed full-length statue of St. Peter, after the antique; on the summit is placed a large gilded cross; the interior is handsomely fitted up; the altar-end, or sanctuary, designed by Pugin, is particularly effective; the decorations are in the early Italian style; the altar was presented by the late Sir E. Moyston, Bart., and is of peculiar stone, elaborately worked, and is surmounted by a beautiful picture, representing the dead Christ; the superstructure, or tabernacle, is of the purest white marble, beautifully executed by Mr. Joseph Fletcher, Lower Parade; Rev. Francis Fairfax, priest.

The Independent Chapel is a large noble brick building, situate on the north side of Spencer-street, erected under the superintendence of J. Russell, Esq., who gave the portico, which is supported by massive columns, and forms its distinguishing external ornament; will accommodate 1,100; there are spacious vaults and a large school-room underneath, and in the rear a neat cemetery, which together cost £6,200.; Rev. Alfred Pope, pastor.

Wesleyan chapels. Portland-st. is a neat brick building, erected 1825, and enlarged by the addition of a gallery, 1834; the front is in the Grecian style. There is also a small one in Clemens street.

Mill-street Chapel is a neat Gothic structure, ornamented with six pinnacles; at the east end is a large stained glass window, and at the west a gallery; erected, with schools adjoining, 1829, at an expense of £2,200., and purchased by the Rev. Rowland Hill, of London, 1832. Rev. Edward Bates, minister.

Baptist Chapel, Warwick street, is a small brick building with cemented front, built by subscription, 1834, in that style of Gothic architecture denominated early English; the interior is neatly fitted up and contains side galleries; will accommodate upwards of 700. Rev. Octavius Winslow, M.A., minister.

Congregational Chapel, Holly walk, erected 1849, is a handsome brick building in the Gothic style of architecture, of the period of Henry VII.; in front is a large window of five lights, filled with tracery, supported on each side by massive and enriched buttresses, surmounted with crocketed pinnacles and finials, the gable end being surmounted by an enriched cross; the ground-floor is fitted up with open seats, which, with the gallery, will hold 600 persons; Rev. Henry Batchelor, minister.

The Leamington College, Binswood Crescent; this establishment was formed in 1845, with a view of providing for the sons of the nobility, gentry, and clergy, a sound classical and mathematical education, in accordance with the principles of the established Church. The course of instruction includes the Hebrew, Greek, Latin, English, French, and German languages, mathematics, civil engineering, and fortification. The present building, however, was not erected till 1847, and cost £6,000.; Henry Jephson, Esq., M.D., laid the foundation stone in April; it is built of red brick, interlaced with grey, in the gothic style of architecture which prevailed in the reign of Henry VII., and after the peculiar construction of Hampton Court Palace; the windows and doors are finished with plinths and quoins, enriched with tracery strings, cornices, and copings in Camden and Portland stone; the front is 155 feet long; the great hall forms the principal feature of the south frontage, measuring 90 feet long, 30 wide, and upwards of 30 in height, and is lighted with five lofty three-light windows filled with tracery; it is flanked with towers, which divide the hall from the wing buildings; it has three entrances, communicating with the museum, library, and masters' private apartments, in the left wing, and the class-rooms in the right, and is approached from the corridor in the centre. Under the hall is a space of the same dimensions, and upwards of ten feet high, opening through ten arches into the play-ground, which affords ample shelter and room for exercise during inclement weather. Other portions of the basement contain apartments for porters, modelling, wash, and other rooms. In the upper floor is a corridor leading to the staircase, right and left. The Lord Bishop of Worcester is the visitor; and H. Jephson, Esq., M.D., chairman of the board of directors, who has handsomely presented the annual sum of £50. for two periods of three years, for an exhibition to one of the Universities. Rev. William Wright, L.L.D., principal master.

The Vicar's Grammar School, Priory terrace, was originated with a view of providing a course of education suitable for the sons of tradesmen and others, resident in the town and neighbourhood, based upon sound Scriptural principles; the foundation stone was laid September, 1847, by the Rev. John Craig, M.A., and the building completed early the following year, in the form of a quadrangle. Rev. John Montague, head-master.

National Schools, Court street; average attendance, 160 boys and 140 girls; Robert Baker, master; Hannah Hull, mistress.

Infant Schools, Ranelagh terrace, will accommodate 200, average 150; and Guy street, with a house attached for the mistress, will accommodate 300, average 150; these schools are supported by subscription.

St. Mary's Parochial Schools, Holly walk, built 1841, is a neat brick building, and, with the house adjoining, cost about £1,200.; average attendance, 100 boys and 80 girls. It is used for Divine Service on Sunday afternoon in summer, and in the evening during the winter months; it will accommodate 500 persons.

St. Mary's Infant School, Cross street, will accommodate 60, average 50; supported by subscriptions.

Catholic Schools, (boys'), is a small brick building, erected 1848, in New street, will accommodate 80, average 50. Girl's, Augusta place, is a neat building, with a house adjoining for the mistress; average attendance, 50.

Independent School, Spencer street, was commenced 1840, in a large room under the chapel; average attendance, 150.

Wesleyan School, Windsor street, for boys, is partly supported by subscription, and the scholars pay twopence per week.

School of Industry, Mill street, established 1836, for clothing and educating 24 poor girls, between the age of seven and fourteen, supported by subscription, except the children pay twopence per week towards books; the course of instruction pursued is free from any party or sectarian bias, attention is wholly directed to a sound Scriptural education; Elizabeth Brown, mistress.

Literary and Scientific Institution, 23, Upper Parade, was established October, 1848, in its present commodious and central situation; during the past year its members have increased to upwards of 300; it has a large and convenient reading-room, which the visitor will find amply supplied with daily and weekly newspapers, magazines, &c.; and the resident finds an agreeable daily resort, and, in patronizing this institution, he has the pleasure to reflect that seeking his own accommodation, he affords the means of spreading instruction to all classes of its members. There is also a good library attached, consisting of works on science, natural history, biography, travels, &c.; its object being to diffuse information by means of lectures, and the formation of classes for instruction. During the last session, about twenty lectures were delivered on Astronomy, Geology, and other branches of science, by some of the most eminent professors. Patrons, Right Hon. Lord Leigh, and the Right Hon. Earl of Buchan. President, Rev. W. Marsh, D.D. Vice-Presidents, Rev. W. Cleaver, M.A., J. Cash, Esq., and J. Hitchman, Esq. Honorary Secretary, Mr. William Gill.

Royal Assembly Rooms; this indispensable appendage to a fashionable watering place occupies a large extent of ground in Regent street, on the east side of the Lower Parade, erected 1833, at a cost of £10,000. The front is spacious, and uniformly built of native stone, while its internal arrangements are surpassed by few structures of a similar description in the kingdom; in the centre is a range of seven windows, supported by light pilasters of the Ionic order, surmounted by a plain entablature; two wings, which project slightly from the main building, and judiciously relieve it form two entrances, one from the Lower Parade, the other from Regent street; to the right of the latter is a private billiard-room of large dimensions, and well fitted up; and to the left, another door leads, by means of a staircase, to the public room of the same description; passing through the hall, the visitor enters the vestibule, from which an entrance on the left leads to the ball-room, the proportions of which are 86 feet long, 36 wide, and 23 high, is greatly admired for chasteness of design, and the beauty of its decorations; each window is surmounted by a beautiful Grecian cornice, with pendant dentals in burnished gold, and crown yellow. The four sides of the room are each thrown into one large panel, by means of double gilt beading; a frieze two feet deep runs round the room, decorated with gold scrawls and patterns, over which another appropriate ornamental appendage of about the same depth meets the ceiling, from which are suspended three beautiful or-molu chandeliers, introducing a brilliant light; at the east end of the room is the orchestra, and on the left folding-doors conduct to the tea-rooms.

Royal Music Hall, Bath street, originally the lower Assembly rooms, erected 1821, at a cost of £25,000.; it has, at various times, undergone considerable alterations, and the internal arrangements of the hall now present a very chaste and elegant appearance, being used for concerts, lectures, &c., and is admirably adapted for the purpose, its form conveying sound remarkably well. The orchestra is enriched by a very fine and powerful organ, built by Hill, of London.

Tennis Court, Lower Bedford street; this new and fashionable place of amusement was erected 1846, and opened early the following year; externally, the building presents a neat and unassuming appearance, while the internal arrangements are on a scale admirably fitted for the purposes for which it is designed; on the ground-floor, in front, occupying nearly the whole length of the building, is the reading and lounging room, which is supplied with every variety of daily and weekly newspapers, periodicals, &c.; the library is in an adjoining room. The tennis court is 93 feet long and 30 wide; there is a racket court also, 62 feet long and 30 wide; two spacious and well-proportioned rooms fitted up with handsome billiard tables, and several anti-rooms complete the internal accommodations.

The Theatre, Clemens street, completed February, 1849; its external appearance is remarkably neat and compact, having, in front, a covered portico, composed of four square pillars, surmounted by a well-proportioned entablature; the internal arrangements differ from most other theatres, and are denominated the drawing-room circle, cabinets, stalls, parterre, and the upper circle; the drawing-room circle consists of a series of raised floors, carpetted, and fitted up with chairs, and the fronts capped with crimson damask cushions, while fire-places, pier glasses, and pedestal lamps, give an air of comfort and elegance to this portion of the building hitherto unknown in theatres of this size and class; the stalls are conveniently arranged; the cabinets, both upper and lower, constitute snug retreats for those who prefer privacy; the parterre and upper circle are eligible situations; the dominant style of decoration is white and gold, relieved with a light blue. The auditory is rendered complete in appearance when the drop scene is exhibited, which represents a large crimson drapery, richly embroidered, having the royal arms emblazoned in the centre, while a medallion portrait of Shakespeare forms a conspicuous object above.

The Cricket Ground, the approach to which is by a carriage drive leading from Dale street to the Warwick road, to the north of which it is situated, is a large field containing 8 acres, having been levelled and prepared under the superintendence of its spirited proprietors, Messrs. Parr and Wisden. From the high position which they occupy in the cricketing world, and the great popularity of the game in this locality, their exertions have been attended with considerable success. The members of the Leamington Cricket Club, consisting of many of the resident gentry, meet here for practice on Tuesdays and Saturdays; and those of the Royal Leamington Town Club, which is principally composed of the trading inhabitants, on Mondays.

The Races and Steeple Chases, which take place at Warwick, may be considered amongst the amusements of the Spa, from their close proximity and the facilities afforded for participating in the sports; the principal meeting takes place the first Tuesday and Wednesday in September, and the Spring meeting two days in March, and followed by the Leamington steeple chase, which has hitherto attracted a large number of spectators, and sustained a well-merited reputation.

The Warwickshire Hunt has long been celebrated in the sporting annals, not only for the splendour and extent of its kennels, and the efficiency of its appointments; but also the excellent quality of the hounds, which consist of near seventy couples, and have been drafted from some of the best packs in the kingdom; they are in high condition, and afford brilliant sport. The days of meeting are Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays. The hunt is supported by subscriptions raised among the resident nobility and gentry in the county, and its affairs are conducted by a committee. The kennels, which are situated at Kineton, cost £4,000. erecting, notwithstanding the whole of the materials were drawn, free of expense, by the farmers of the surrounding country.

The Leamington Hunt Club, consisting of noblemen and gentlemen, who have long threaded the ground, in connexion with the far famed Warwickshire Hunt, has been completely organized in this town; the members conform to a code of observances, which are admirably drawn up, and justify the hope, that the club will long continue to be the means of promoting such healthy and exhilarating pastime; and hold their meetings in rooms appropriated to their use, at the Lansdowne Hotel.

Hotels. The Regent.—This princely hotel was opened August, 1819, the principal facade fronts the Lower Parade, but the grand entrance is at the southern extremity of the house, into which access is obtained through a noble projecting portico, supported by four pillars of the Doric order,

The Bedford Family Hotel presents a neat frontage to the Lower Parade, and for many years has been a favourite place of resort; every care and attention has been taken in its internal arrangements.

The Lansdowne Hotel, situate at the corner of Lansdowne place and Warwick street, presents a neat external appearance; the rooms are spacious and airy, many of them pictorially embellished, and well suited to the accommodation of the fashionable visitors resorting thither.

The Clarendon Hotel, at the north-east angle of Lansdowne place; a noble portico forms the entrance; the internal arrangements are good and worthy the distinguished visitors who make it their occasional residence.

Crown Hotel and Commercial House, situate in High-street, to which it has a long range of frontage; a fine portico forms the entrance; the interior arrangements will be found replete with every convenience for the family or commercial gentleman.

Bath Hotel Commercial and Boarding House. This old-established house, situate in Bath-street, in which will be found both comfort and accommodation suited to the fashionable visitors making it their occasional resort.

The Manor House Hotel and Commercial Inn was, years gone by, the Manor House; has recently been converted into a convenient hotel; is in a retired situation at the top of Spencer-street, adjoining which are beautiful shady walks by the side of the river Leam; and in front an avenue of fine elms leading to the Warwick road. The station on the Birmingham and Oxford, and the North Western Railways, will be within 150 yards south of this hotel.

Local Newspapers.—Leamington Spa Courier; this journal is devoted to a record of the occurrences of the week; is circulated in the town and district; published every Saturday morning by Mr. G. C. Liebenrood, Warwick-street. The Leamington Advertiser and Beck's Weekly List of Visitors, containing all the arrivals and departures of the visitors to the Spa, and the news of the town and neighbourhood, being stamped for post, is a very useful weekly periodical; published every Saturday by John Beck, 8, Upper Parade.

The Warneford Hospital. In 1825 an hospital was founded in Regent-street; being confined in its situation, and too small for the number of patients, at the annual general meeting, in April, 1831, the propriety of erecting a new one having been considered, a subscription was entered into for that purpose; which, in about twelve months, exceeded the sum of £2,500, including the handsome donation of £1,500. by the Rev. Dr. Warneford, rector of Burton-on-the-Hill, Gloucestershire, and his sister, Miss Warneford; the benevolence thus manifested, together with a grant of land on the Radford road by the Earl of Aylesford, was followed by an unanimous resolution, that a new building should be erected on the site named; and in honour of the Rev. Doctor, he designated by the above title. The foundation stone was laid by the Hon. Charles Bertie Percy, April 10th, 1832; in the cavity of the lower stone, in a box, were deposited three gold, eight silver, and three copper coins, of the reign of William IV., and two elegant medals, presented by the late Mr. Bisset; over the aperture of which is a brass plate with the following inscription:—"This, the first stone of the Leamington Hospital, was laid by the Hon. Charles Bertie Percy, April 10th, 1832." The building is pleasantly situate, and of ample size, capable of containing fifty beds, with every other accommodation requisite for such an institution. In addition to the munificent gift of Dr. and Miss Warneford, already noticed, a further donation of one thousand guineas was added by them in June, 1832, on condition that the appointment to five beds should remain in their family for ever. In 1838 the liberal donation of one thousand guineas by Dr. Jephson, and £100. from Mr. John Williams, and a legacy of £500. at his decease were presented, in order that two additional wards might be fitted up; in consequence of which the committee directed that one should be designated "The Jephson Ward." The late Mrs. Kemble also bequeathed £100. towards the institution. In the year ending May 1849, 679 patients were admitted, 458 of whom were discharged, cured or relieved, and 175 still under medical treatment; viz. 38 in and 127 out-patients. A Samaritan fund was established, 1841, to enable those patients who are destitute, when discharged, to return to their homes. A chaplain fund is also open, for remunerating the services of a clergyman as chaplain to the institution; physicians, Drs. Homer and Jeaffreson; surgeons, Messrs. Middleton, Jones, and Prichard; surgeon elect, Mr. J. Hitchman; house surgeon, Mr. James Male; chaplain, Rev. James Pearson; secretary, Mr. T. R. Blayney; matron, Mrs. E. Perkins.

Temperance Hall, built about 1834, in Clemens street, is used by the society for lectures, and is let for any public purpose; the large room will accommodate 600.

The Charitable Repository, 13, Upper Parade, the object of this society is to afford a place of sale for ladies' work, both for those whom distressed circumstances may lead to wish for a means of procuring assistance from their own talents and industry; and also for those who may like to sell their own works of ingenuity for the benefit of any charity; patronesses, The Queen Dowager, The Right Hon. Lady Somerville, and The Hon. Mrs. Bertie Percy; conductress, Miss Mary Emma Soden.

The Benevolent Institution and Clothing Fund, established 1840, under the control of the Rev. John Craig, for the purpose of distributing food, clothing, and medicine. Much comfort is afforded to lying-in-women by the gift of 10s., and the loan of a bag of linen for one month.

St. Mary's District Visiting Society, established by the Rev. Dr. Marsh, for the purpose of administering to the temporal and spiritual wants of the poor; its objects are carried out by a number of ladies visiting the cottagers.

The Female Penitentiary.—This truly charitable institution was opened 1840. In order to give employment to the inmates, and assist in its support, sewing and washing are done for hire; Rev. W. Hopkins, M.A., hon. chaplain; Mrs. Hannah Wiggins, matron.

The Dorcas Society, established 1834, in connection with the Mill-street chapel, but free from any religious sect, for the purpose of relieving individuals whose circumstances require assistance with articles of clothing, blankets, sheets, and by the loan of boxes of linen to lying-in-women.

At the Phusitechnicon, 25, Lower Parade, is the Spar and Marble manufactory of Mr. Joseph Fletcher, in which will be found superb marble tables of Petro Duro work, engraved marble obelisk candlesticks, Egyptian and bell vases, and every other article both for use and ornament made from these beautiful stones and fossils.

Railways.—The Warwick and Leamington branch of the London and North Western Railway was opened December 9th, 1844; the station is situated about midway between Leamington and Warwick; the waiting rooms are replete with every modern improvement. Three large warehouses for the reception of goods, have also been attached. The Rugby and Leamington Railway, which crosses High street and the south end of Bath street, and the Oxford and Birmingham railway, are fast approaching a state of completion. The junction station will be on the north side of the Warwick road, near the west-end of High street.

The parish contains 1720 acres of land, and in 1841. 2308 inhabited houses, 250 uninhabited and 49 building, with 12,864 inhabitants, of whom 5,264 were males, 7,600 females; in 1801, 315; 1821, 2183; 1831, 6,209; rateable value £86,106. 17. 3d.

The Town Hall, High Street, erected 1831, at an expense of £2,000., is a spacious building, used principally for the meetings of the commissioners "for lighting, flagging, paving, and watching" the town, under the local act, the regular meetings of which body take place the first Tuesday in every month. The Magistrates' business is also transacted here every Wednesday, at 12 noon; the usual presiding justices are M. Wise, Esq.; C. Musgrave, Esq.; W. C. Russell, Esq.; Major Moultrie; and Owen Perry, Esq.; Mr. A. S. Field, clerk. The police office, with lock-ups and cells for the prisoners, are within this building. The police-force consists of Wm. Shirley Roby, superintendent; Sidney Mear, inspector; and ten men. Two good fire-engines and a fire-escape are kept here, of which the superintendent has charge.

BANKS.—Warwick and Leamington Banking Company, 43, Upper Parade; Henry Summerfield, manager. Leamington Priors and Warwickshire Banking Company, 44, Bath street; Thomas Henry Thone, manager. The Warwickshire Savings' Bank, (Branch of,) in the Town Hall, High street, open on Mondays from 12 to 2; Mr. Samuel Brown, actuary.

The Gas Works, Tachbrook road, were erected by a number of shareholders on a small scale; Messrs. Charles B. and James W. Robinson, took them on lease a few years ago, who have so materially enlarged and improved them, as to meet every demand with ease.

The Water Works, which are private property, have been constructed at considerable expense by the late Mr. Oldham, who has, at various times, enlarged and improved them, to meet the wants of the inhabitants; and has fixed pipes in various parts of the town at the request of the Commissioners, from which a plentiful supply is obtained for watering the streets. The reservoir is in a very elevated situation, near the top of Newbold hills, from which any part of the town could be supplied. These works are still the property of the spirited projector's descendants.

LEEK WOOTTON, 3 miles N. from Warwick, was formerly a parish of great extent, including no fewer than five parishes, now separated from it, but still comprehends the hamlet of Hill Wootton, 1 mile east from the village. It was at and after the conquest, held by the Earls of Shrewsbury, and subsequently passing through the families of Clinton, Menil, and Lancaster, was granted at the dissolution to John, Duke of Cumberland. Woodcote, a neat stone mansion, in a pleasant and retired situation, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile W. by N. from the village, and three miles N. from Warwick, is the seat and property of Henry Christopher Wise, Esq. This parish contains 2,424 acres, 3 roods, 33 perches of land; and in 1841, 88 houses, and 336 inhabitants: 1801, 406; 1821, 436; 1831, 433; rateable value, £4,236. 5s. 3d. The principal landowners are Lord Clarendon, Rev. Henry Wise, Lord Leigh, and the London and Birmingham Railway Co.; others have small estates here; the former is the lord of the manor. The Grange, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N., is a manor, within this manor, of which Lord Leigh is the lord. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat stone edifice, re-built 1792, principally at the expense of the Hon. Mary Leigh, of Stoneleigh Abbey. It has, however, undergone much alteration within the last few years; the chancel being found inconveniently small, was taken down, and the present one built in 1843. The church now consists of nave, chancel, small gallery, and square embattled tower, in which are five bells. The east window is filled with stained glass, and contains figures of our Saviour, St. Peter, and St. Paul. The two side lights are filled with stained glass, and the two windows in the nave are also filled with stained glass, containing the arms of the Diocese and the Donor. The two remaining windows contain the Arms of Leigh, Warwick, Percy, Clarendon, Ricardo, Wise, Staunton, and Duchess Dudley. The living is a vicarage, V. K. B., £5. 12s. 1d., now £300.; in the patronage of Lord Leigh, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick Leigh Colville, M.A. The vicarage is a neat and good residence, erected 1824, on an eminence, commanding a view of many miles to the south.

CHARITIES.—Duchess Dudley's Charity, (see Bidford.) In 1825, the sum of £11. 1s. 9d. was received on account of this charity, but this sum is now greatly increased; and is distributed to poor widows and families, according to their necessities.

Samuel Mallory, in 1713, gave £10. to the poor of this parish. James Hickin, 1717, gave £12. Robert Mallory, 1759, gave £16. to the poor, half-yearly; and a person unknown, gave 40s., the interest for the poor. These benefactions amounting to £40. The interest, at 5 per cent., being £2., is distributed with the above charity.

Daniel Winter, of Wootton Grange, by will, 1776, gave the sum of £200., secured on the turnpike road, from Warwick road, near Solihull, to Balsall common; to be so continued at interest, in the names of Samuel Butler, and five others, on trust, to be applied by them, and heirs, for the augmentation of the salary of the free English school, in Leek Wootton. The £200. still remains on the turnpike trust. The interest, at 5 per cent., being £10., is paid to the schoolmaster; for this, with further remuneration from private subscription, he teaches all the poor children in the parish reading, writing, and accounts; and the girls to sew by the master's wife. Lord Leigh voluntarily appropriated a house rent free for the purpose. The above interest is not now paid in consequence of the depreciation in the value of turnpike roads. The boys now pay one halfpenny per week, and the girls twopence for needlework; Frederick and Sarah Webb, master and mistress.

Church Lands. Certain lands, formerly let for 14s., belonged to the church. The commissioners for the inclosure, by their award, 27th March, 1822, awarded lands to the vicar and churchwardens, now let for £6. per annum, which is applied to the use of the church.

Post Office at Richard Perk's; letters arrive by foot post from Warwick, at 8.30. a.m., and are dispatched at 5. p.m.; on Sunday at 2. p.m.

Directory. James Bull, blacksmith; Rev. Frederick Leigh Colville, M.A., vicar, Vicarage; Richard Jaggard, brewer and draper; Thomas Morris, vict., Anchor; Thos. Nicks, carpenter; Richard Perk, butcher; Thomas Scofield, carpenter and wheelwright; Sarah Smith, butcher; John Turney, gent., The Villa; Frederick and Sarah Webb, schoolmaster and mistress; Henry Christopher Wise, Esq., Woodcote; Michael Woodhull, corn miller, Guy's Cliff Mill; and Ellen Burbeary, The Grange; Thomas Cook, Woodloes; Joseph Jaggard, Edward James King, Catherine Perkins, and Charles Tidmarsh, farmers. Hill Wootton. Henry Stacey, blacksmith; Thomas Stacey, gardener; and John Harris, John Moore, and cattle dealer, and Wm. Makepeace, farmers.

LILLINGTON PARISH, and small pleasant village, 3 miles N.E. by E. from Warwick, and 1 N.E. from Leamington, was anciently divided between the families of Clinton and Verdon, and the monks of Kenilworth. This parish contains 1,324a. 2r. 26p. of land, of which 40 acres are glebe; and in 1841, 51 houses, and 271 inhabitants; 1801, 178; 1821, 226; 1831, 274; rateable value, £3,077. 17s. 9d.: Rev. Henry Wise, is the principal landowner and lord of the manor. Francis Russell, Mrs. Wills, Joseph Jordan, John Weddell and others have small estates here. The Church, which is a chaste and pleasing structure, delightfully placed on an agreeable elevation, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, formerly belonged to the monks of Kenilworth; a south aisle was added, and considerable alterations made, about the middle of the 14th century; and in 1847, it again went under extensive repairs and alterations in the decorated style of Gothic architecture, at which time a north aisle was added; it now consists of nave, chancel, north and south aisles, and noble embattled tower, in which are three bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B., £5. 13s. 4d., now £250.; patron, Rev. Henry Wise; and the Rev. John Wise, B.A., incumbent. The Vicarage is a neat residence, beautifully situate on a commanding eminence. Tithe commuted, 9th October, 1838; vicarial, at £167.; land was given in lieu of the great tithe at the time of the enclosure.

Directory.—William Chamberlin, gardener; Joseph Godfrey, brickmaker; Thomas Godfrey, brickmaker; James Hewitt, brickmaker; Joseph Jordan and Sons, corn millers, Blakedown Mills; James Montgomery, Esq.; Joseph Morris, brickmaker; Edward Pershore, gent.; Miss Sarah Robbins, John Turrall, butcher and pig dealer; John Weddell, florist and seedsman, Lillington Nursery; Rev. John Wise, B.A., vicar, Vicarage; Fanny Wright, cow keeper; and Mary Beamish, Manor house; Robert Brain, Red house; William Radford, and Francis Russell, The Forge, farmers.

MILVERTON, a parish and pleasant village, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.N.E. from Warwick; this parish separates Leamington from Leek Wootton, and was a chapelry thereto, but in the reign of Henry III. was accounted a Church, and by that name was given to the canons of Kenilworth. The manor was held by William, Earl of Warwick, by the service of holding the Earl's stirrup, when he should mount or dismount his horse. The view from this village is remarkably fine, standing on the centre of an elevated terrace, which rises considerably above the river, here assuming an extensive and graceful sweep, it affords a sort of panoramic picture of the surrounding scenery; on the one hand a magnificent view of Warwick, with its castle, church, bridge, and numerous striking objects; on the other a perfect contrast of quiet, rural scenery, combining wood, water, meadow, and rock, terminating with the bridge, mill, and manor-house at Emscote. Emscote, originally Edmonscote, a hamlet partly in this and partly in the parish of St. Nicholas, Warwick, being divided by the river. When Dugdale wrote his history of the county, it only contained the manor-house above-named, but from its proximity to Leamington and Warwick, seems likely, at no distant period, to become a densely populated district; numerous houses have already been built on the Warwick part; several villas and small mansions have also made their appearance on the Leamington part; the vicinity of the line of road through it from Warwick to Leamington, presents an animated and interesting picture. In ancient times the manor was for many generations possessed by the Hugford's, a family of considerable note in this county. New Milverton, 1 mile S.E., contains several handsome terraces, crescents, villas, &c., and forms a pleasing suburb to Leamington Priors. This parish contains 1,180 acres of land; and in 1841, here were 197 houses, and 831 inhabitants; 1801, 230; 1821, 193; 1831, 537; rateable value, £7,596 10s. 6d. The Earl of Stratford is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone edifice, consists of nave, chancel, small gallery, and low square wood tower, containing 3 bells. The living is a perpetual curacy, rated at £58, augmented with £200, Queen Anne's bounty; and £200, parliamentary grant; Earl of Warwick, patron; Rev. J. H. Smith, M.A., incumbent. Episcopal Chapel, New Milverton, was erected 1835, by the Earl of Warwick; and is a large neat brick edifice; will accommodate about 1800. Infant School, New Milverton, is a neat brick building, erected 1844, by subscription, and supported by voluntary contributions; average number in attendance, 80. National School, New Milverton, is a large neat brick building, erected 1840, by subscription; the Earl of Warwick gave the land; it will accommodate 160; average 70 boys and 60 girls.

London and Birmingham Railway, Warwick and Leamington Branch; station situate at New Milverton; see Leamington Directory.

CHARITIES.—John Eyres gave, by will, to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, £3. a year, out of the meadow lying in the parish of Leek Wootton, called the Island meadow: six children, boys and girls, are sent to school.

Thompson's charity, (see Bishop's Tachbrook).—Bread to the amount of £1. 13s. 4d., in shilling, sixpenny and threepenny loaves, is sent on the eve of Good Friday, to the church of Milverton, which is distributed to the poor on Good Friday, after service.

Those marked 1 live at Old Milverton; 2, at Emscote; the rest at New Milverton, or where specified. For the remainder of Emscote, see Warwick Directory.

OFFCHURCH, a parish and retired village, 5 miles E. by N. from Warwick, and 3 from Leamington, on the river Leam, has the reputation of having been a residence of Offa, the powerful king of the Mercians. In the time of Edward the Confessor, it belonged to Earl Leofric, who gave it to the monks of Coventry; in whose possession it remained until the dissolution; when being seized by the crown, Henry VIII. in his thirty-fourth year, granted it to Sir Edmund Knightly, Knight; one of whose descendants carried the manorial rights by marriage to Lord Guernsey, who is also owner of the soil. This parish contains 2,200 acres of land; and in 1841, had 64 houses, and 367 inhabitants; 1801, 267; 1821, 337; 1831, 350; rateable value, £3,410. 15s. 5d. Offchurch Bury, the seat of Lord Guernsey, is an ancient stone mansion five miles S.W. by W. from Warwick, agreeably situate on the bank of the Leam; and though built at different periods, preserves an air and character of antiquity and consequence. The park contains about 300 acres of land, and is ornamented by several sheets of water, and some venerable trees, especially a remarkably large and fine chesnut tree, which is much admired. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is an ancient stone structure; contains several ancient monuments and marble tablets, and consists of nave, chancel, and square tower, in which are four good bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £7. 7s. 6d., now £140., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; patron, Lady Guernsey; incumbent, Rev. Henry Wise. The vicarage is a good residence near the church. The Roman Foss-way runs from the northern to the southern boundary of this parish, and is intersected by the Warwick and Napton canal.

RADFORD SEMELEY, a parish, and small, well-built, and pleasant village, 4 miles E. from Warwick, obtained the distinctive appellation of Semeley from a family who became possessors of it, and settled here in the reign of Henry I. At the Conquest it belonged to Turchil de Warwick, but afterwards was owned by Geoffrey de Clinton, who sold it to Henry de Semeley, in the 1st of Henry I. This Henry consented that the Church should be given to the canons of Kenilworth, who had a good share of this village. At the dissolution, the manor was granted to Sir Thomas, afterwards Lord Darcy, in the 37th of Henry VIII., from whom it passed to John Brown, whose descendants possessed it many years. It afterwards became, in great part, the property of the late H. G. Lewis, Esq., of Malvern Hall. In 1841, here were 506 inhabitants; 1801, 401; 1821, 472; 1831, 478; and 2,093 acres of land; rateable value, £3,148. The principal landowners are the Executors of the late Hy. Greswolde, Esq.; H. E. Lander, Esq.; Henry Jephson, Esq., M.D.; and the Executors of the late John Greaves, Esq.; the two former are lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was originally of Norman architecture, there is now only one window remaining of the original edifice; the chancel was repaired in 1833, by a bequest from Henry Greswolde Lewis, Esq.; and, in 1837, three stained glass windows, north aisle, and new windows on the south side were added; it consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, small gallery, and a tower containing four bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, value K.B. £5. 16s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., now £200.; patrons, the Executors of the late Henry Greswolde, Esq., and the Rev. Thomas Chapman, M.A., incumbent. The vicarage is a neat residence pleasantly situate near the Church. Tithes commuted 1842, vicarial at £126. The great tithe was emerged in the land at the time of the enclosure. The ancient Roman Foss Way crosses this parish about 1 mile east of the village.

CHARITIES.—Mr. Meadoms gave £10., the interest to be distributed annually to poor labourers of this parish; it is vested in the hands of the churchwarden, and the interest, 10s., is given to ten poor labourers.

Church Land.—On the inclosure of the common fields of this parish, 4 acres of land was allotted to the churchwardens, the rent to be applied to the use of the church. In the year 1819, the sum of £172. 19s. 8d. was expended by the parish in the erection of a house, barn, and hovel, on this land, which is now let for £16. per annum.

Henry Greswolde Lewis, Esq., by will dated August 27th, 1827, bequeathed £1,500. to be vested in real or Government securities, and directed that one-third of the interest should be applied yearly, at Christmas, to purchase a pair of shoes, pair of stockings, 6lbs. of beef, and 2lbs. of bread each, for three poor old men and three aged women of this parish.

STONELEIGH, an extensive parish and small village, situate on the river Sowe, over which is an ancient bridge of eight arches, about half a mile from its confluence with the Avon, 3 miles E. by N. from Kenilworth, and 4 S. from Coventry. On the south side of the river, opposite the Church, is Motstow Hill, where the tenantry used to assemble to render suit and service to the lord of the manor. Stoneleigh was held by the Crown in demesne before the conquest, and so continued until the time of Henry II., in the 1st year of whose reign, A.D. 1154, an abbey of Cistercians was founded here, the monks removing hither from Radmore, in the county of Stafford. In 1245, the abbey suffered greatly by fire, and was repaired by Robert de Hockell, the sixteenth Abbot, about 1300; who built the gate-house, which is entire, and in the early decorated style, leading through a lofty archway, to the lawn in front of the house. The privileges of this monastery were very great, and amongst the rest, in the 12th of Edward I. a market, fair, and free warden were granted them. The ample possessions of the monks here were bestowed, at the dissolution, on Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, at which time the revenues were valued at £178. 2s. 5d.; and one of the subsequent owners, William Cavendish, Esq., in the 3rd of Elizabeth, sold the site of the monastery, and most part of the lands lying in Stoneleigh, to Sir Thomas Leigh. The present handsome modern mansion was erected in 1720, by Edward, 3rd Lord Leigh; its situation, on an extensive plain, rising gently from the Avon, is peculiarly beautiful; surrounded by an extensive park, in which are many fine oaks the growth of ages, and about five hundred head of deer; and is the seat and property of the Right Honorable Chandos Lord Leigh, who has enlarged and greatly improved the mansion. Of the ancient building, the remains are formed into domestic offices, among which are many fine specimens of ancient architecture, of groined and Norman arches and pillars, in that style which prevails generally throughout the lower part of the Abbey. The Abbey contains, besides family portraits, many valuable pictures by original masters; at the north end is the corridor, containing six family portraits, among which are the 2nd Lord Leigh and his Lady, Lord and Lady Rockingham, Sir Christopher Hoddeson; and at the south end is a portrait of a monk formerly resident here. The Billiard room contains fine portraits of James, Lord Chandos, and three Dukes of Chandos, viz., James, Henry, and James; and two fine marble figures of Canova's, and a copy of Venus de Medicis, marble busts of Lord Byron, Cicero, Judge Willes, and the Mother Bacchus, and 8 portraits of the present Lord Leigh's ancestors. On the staircase is a bust of Fox, the great politician; next comes the lobby, in which is some ancient armoury, and rare specimens of birds preserved; at the south end of the lobby is the entrance to the splendid chapel, containing a beautiful altar-piece, representing the descension from the cross, by Rubens, in his best style, and a copy of Pieta. We next enter the dining-room, in which are portraits of Lord Kerry, Lord Stratford dictating to his secretary, three of his lordship's children in group, Lady Ann Wentworth, Charles I. Lewis Lord Rockingham; these five are by Vandyke; the King and Queen of Bohemia, by Honhurst; the Hon. Mr. Wentworth, and the Hon. Mr. Watson, by Sir Peter Lely; Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, the lady Caroline, daughter of Henry Brydges, duke of Chandos, and wife of James Leigh, Esq., of Addlestrop, Gloucestershire. In the morning-room is the portrait of Thomas, first baron Leigh, who entertained at his seat at Stonleigh Charles I, when his rebellious subjects at Coventry refused to open their gates to his majesty. Also, a group in which Garrick is relating a ghost story. The interior of a foreign church, under which are portraits of the Virgin with the infant Christ, by Petro Perrigino. A ruin, by Rembrandt; under this is the Crucifixion, by Albert Duer; a view near Stonleigh, by C. R. Stanley; the Bleaching Yard, by Molinar; Gustavus Adolphus, by Vandyke; Henry VIII, by Holbein; a moon-light Sea Piece, by Vandemeer; between the windows are the portraits of the Hon. Mary Leigh, Hon. James Henry Leigh, and Prince Charles Edward. The saloon, which forms the principal part of the west front, is a splendid apartment, fifty feet long; the top of which is a presentation of Hercules; over the north fire-place the choice of Hercules; and over the south, his return from his labours in Alto-relievo; near which stands a bust of Marcus, the Son of Cicero. Pictures, the Cottage Door, by Gainsborough; a Sea Piece; a Dog and Game, by Baptiste; two children, by Rambrandt; a beautiful Landscape, by Cuype; and a Fruit Piece, by Snyder. A continuation of the west front is the drawing-room, which contains four views of Venice, by Canaletto; Alexander's visit to the Tombs, by Pauini; Sir Thomas Leigh and his Wife, the first possessors of the Abbey after the dissolution; two Landscapes, by Paul Potter; two others, by Paul Brill; two Ladies' Heads, by Sir Peter Lely; and two Scripture Pieces. At the north-west angle is the Young Ladies' Sitting Room, in which is a portrait of St. John; a group, the Father reading to his Family, by Tilberg; a Farrier's Shed, and a Battle Piece, by Wouverman; a Farm Yard, by Tenniers; Cattle Feeding, and a Ruin, by Burghem; Horses Watering, by Crype; two Landscapes; two views in Switzerland, by London; and two portraits of Ladies Leigh. At the north end is the Library, containing a valuable collection of books, and portraits of Byron, by Phillips; Lord Chandos Leigh, and Lady Leigh, by Sir George Hayter; Milton; a group of Pilgrims Reposing, and two Flower pieces; the Head of John the Baptist, by Gudio; Raphael, by himself; Beatrice. In the centre of the room Erasmus, by Holbein, 1530; St. Jerome, by Gudio; our Saviour and St. Catherine by Care Donci; and several small family groups. The rooms are all elegantly furnished and fitted-up, which, for beauty and domestic comfort, are not to be excelled.

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a large and venerable structure, with nave, chancel, side-aisles, and square tower, supported by strong buttresses, and surmounted by another of smaller dimensions, crowned with pinnacles at the angles; between the chancel and nave is a large Norman arch, richly ornamented, and supported by columns of which the shafts and capitals are greatly embellished; round the east-end is a series of small Norman arches. On the north-side of the chancel, is the mausoleum of the Leigh family; the ceiling of which is beautifully worked in groined and ribbed arches. The south-aisle is separated from the nave by three pointed arches supported on octagonal pillars. In the chancel is a splendid monument to the memory of Lady Alice Duchess Dudley. Also, a recumbent stone-figure, found in an upright position in a wall, while digging the foundation of the mausoleum; it is supposed to be in memory of Geoffery de Muschamp, bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, in the reign of John. The living is a vicarage, V.K.B., £6. 15s. 5d., now £510., in the patronage of the Right Hon. Chandos, Lord Leigh, and incumbency of the Rev. Vaughan Thomas, B.D.; tithes commuted, November 24, 1843, vicarial at £470.; rectorial, £533.; Lord Leigh is the impropriator. Mr. Jph. Jeacock, parish clerk, whose family have held the office in this parish four generations. A new district church, dedicated to John the Baptist, erected on Westwood heath, 1843-4, consecrated July, in the latter year, is a neat stone edifice, and consists of nave and chancel; cost £1,580., raised by subscription; Lord Leigh gave the ground, a house adjoining for the residence of the incumbent, and £300., and endowed it with £1,000. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the vicar of Stoneleigh, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Edmund Roy. This parish contains the following hamlets:—Canley, three miles N.W.; Cryfield, three miles W.N.W.; Fletchamstead, four miles N.W.; Fynham, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N.; Hill, one mile N.W. by N.; Hurst, three miles N.W. by W.; Starton or Stareton, one mile S.E. by E.; and in 1841, 292 houses, and 1,371 inhabitants; 1801, 1,347; 1821, 1,391; 1831, 1,298; and 9,907a. 2r. 12p. of land; rateable value, £15,045; Lord Leigh is lord of the manor, and principal owner. Near the boundary of this parish, upon the Grange Farm, about one mile E. by S., is a very fine ancient oak, called the Gospel Oak.

Woberley Hall, four miles N.W., a very ancient manor-house, within the manor of Stoneleigh, was formerly moated round; Mrs. Wade, of Shrewsbury, is owner and lady of the manor.

The London and Birmingham Railway crosses this parish; the station, situate about five miles N.W., called Allesley-lane Station.

CHARITIES.—ALMSHOUSES.—Sir Thomas Leigh, Knight, during his lifetime, erected an Almshouse for the habitation of five poor men and five poor women. Lady Alice Leigh, widow of the said Sir Thomas, by deed poll, 1st March, 21st of Elizabeth, executrix of his will, reciting that upon her supplication, the Queen, by her letters patent, 28th June, 19th year of her reign, had granted that the said house so built, should for ever remain an almshouse, &c.; and that there should be two wardens of the same, and five poor men and five poor women in the same, &c.; and that the wardens of the church should be wardens thereof, and should, with the five poor men and five poor women, form a body corporate, &c.; and should be capable to purchase lands, rents, and hereditaments, to the use of the poor therein, not exceeding £40. in yearly value. And her said Majesty further granted to the said wardens and almspeople license to purchase to the uses aforesaid, of her, the said Dame Alice Leigh, the same almshouses, garden, and orchard, thereto near adjoining; and the yearly rent of £29. issuing out of her Grange of Milbourne, &c., which she, the said Dame Alice, according to the intent of the said Letters Patent, freely granted to the said wardens and poor; and out of all her lands in Stoneleigh, payable yearly at the four feasts. By an endorsement of the deed, it is recited that the churchwardens should have yearly paid to them 6s. 8d. for their pains, to provide preachers to preach sermons quarterly, and to see the poor folks go to church. By a further endorsement, it was declared to be the will of the said Dame Alice, that the almshouses should, from time to time, be repaired by such persons as should be owners of the Grange of Milbourne. The almshouse is a long stone building, containing ten rooms on the ground floor, and ten on the upper floor, with 1r. 12p. of garden ground equally divided amongst them. The almspeople also partake of the other charities of the parish, and in particular the Duchess Dudley's.

Thomas, Lord Leigh, and the Hon. Ann Leigh's School.—Thomas, Lord Leigh, by will, 1710, gave to his cousin, William Bromley, Esq., and others, the sum of £800. in trust, to purchase lands and tenements, to be for the payment of £20. per annum, for the maintenance of a schoolmaster, and for the repairs of a school and school-house for ever; and also to build a convenient habitation for the schoolmaster to inhabit; and desired his son, Edward Leigh, to suffer a certain building called the Court House to be made into a convenient school, and to convey to his trustees certain grounds for a garden and back side thereto. The school to be for the educating of children whose parents were inhabitants of Stoneleigh, Staverton, Wootton, and Ashow.

The Honourable Ann Leigh, by will, 1731, gave the sum of £1,000. to her brother, the Hon. Charles Leigh and two others, in trust, to dispose of the same, within one year after her decease, in the education of youth, both boys and girls, of the parish of Stoneleigh. Thomas, Lord Leigh, willing to promote the charity intended by his grandfather and aunt, gave a convenient piece of ground near the churchyard, for the school and master's house, which, by indenture, 24th December, 1740, was granted to the Hon. Charles Leigh and others for that purpose. The two legacies above-named, were, it is supposed, after the expenses of building the school premises, laid out in the purchase of an estate at Wibtoft, in the county of Warwick, purchased for that purpose in May, 1743, at a cost of about £1,700., and containing 82 acres of land, since which a barn and cow-shed have been erected thereon; and, in 1826, was let at the annual rent of £110., reduced by a land-tax to £102. 0s. 6d. Out of this rent the master and mistress receive £70. per annum. The school premises are large, containing houses for the master and mistress, with a school-room on the ground-floor for boys, and a room above for the girls, which are attended by about 70 of each, part of which are from Ashow. Charles and Mary Elizabeth Gray, master and mistress. There is a school at Westwood heath, supported by Lord and Lady Leigh; Robert Baker, master.

Duchess Dudley, (see Bidford.)—The proportion of rent paid to this parish, in 1825, was £45. 11s., but would, in future, be greatly increased, of which one-half is paid by the churchwardens to the ten poor people in the almshouse, and the other distributed amongst the poor.

Mr. Ryton and Mr. Griffin gave certain sums of money to the poor of this parish, with which, and a large addition made by the Right Hon. Thomas, first Lord Leigh, (1643) was purchased Quarry Close, in the county of the city of Coventry, for the use of the poor, and allowance for two commemoration sermons, one at 3s. 4d., the other 6s. 8d. The Close contains more than five acres, with a barn, stable, and small yard. The land is open from Lammas to Candlemas, for common of pasture to the freemen of Coventry. It is let (1826) for £12. 12s. per annum; which, after paying a quit rent of 3s. 0½d., is distributed to the poor, no payments being made for sermons.

Joseph Simcox, late of Canley, devised a rent-charge of £2. to the poor of Stoneleigh, which was secured for that purpose by indenture 1705, to be issuing from the house, formerly known as the White Bear, in the city of Coventry, now (1826) the Craven Arms, which is paid to the churchwardens, and given to the poor.

Thomas Dunton, gent., gave £4., the interest to be given in bread on Good Friday.

Mr. Francis Cashmore, of Starton, gave the interest of £10. to be distributed in bread on the first Sunday after the Epiphany.

Mr. Fletcher Bates gave £80., the interest to be given to the poor of the parish.

Mrs. Davis gave £20., to apply the interest on keeping in repair the tomb stones over her late husband Thomas Davis, and of her son-in-law, Edward Harper, in the church-yard of Stoneleigh, and the overplus to be given to the poor. A sum of £222. 8s. 1d., three per cent. consols standing in the names of William Henry Butler and three others, which stock is understood to be the produce of the several donations above-mentioned, amounting to £114. The dividends, amounting to £6. 13s. 4d. a year, are received by the churchwardens and given to the poor.

Thomas Sotherne (see Cubbington.) The proportion of rent due to Stoneleigh being £13. 2s. 6d., is received by the trustee; out of this the necessary repairs to Hudson's bridge, a wooden foot-bridge, is defrayed, and the remainder is distributed amongst the poor of Stoneleigh hamlet. Also, the sum of £8. 15s. is received for the hamlet of Starton, by the trustee, of which, after the necessary expense for Starton bridge, the residue is given to the poor of this hamlet.

Mrs. Mary Turner (see Bubenhall). The sum of 6s. 8d., formerly received for this charity, was long discontinued, but in 1832, a sum of £4. 3s. 8d., as arrears, was paid and distributed to the poor.

Marked 1, reside at Broad lane; 2, Canley; 3, Fletchamstead; 4, Starton; 5, Tile hill; the rest in Stoneleigh, or where specified.

UFTON is a small scattered village and parish $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by S. from Southam, situate on a rocky eminence, was one of the places given by Earl Leofric, to the monks of Coventry upon its foundation, but they were soon after disturbed in the possession of this lordship, and did not recover it until the reign of King Stephen. Another claim was set up in the 13th of Edward I. by Robert de Pinkney. After this, however, the monks remained unmolested until the dissolution, when the manor was granted to Lord Chancellor Wriothesley, and in the 1st of Elizabeth, it was sold to Sir John Spencer, of Althorp. In 1841 here were 39 houses and 188 inhabitants; in 1801, 207; 1821, 154; 1831, 166; and 1613 acres of land, rateable value £1602. The principal land-owners are the principals of Baliol College, Oxford, and Sir John Cope; the former are lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, pleasantly situated on an eminence. It consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, in which are three bells; the pulpit is a beautiful specimen of ancient carved work. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £80., augmented with £200. Queen Anne's bounty, and £400. Parliamentary grant, in the patronage of the Bishop of Worcester, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. N. Tilson Marsh, B.C.L. Tithes commuted, 1844, at £400. Sir John Cope is owner.

CHARITIES.—Donor unknown. In the returns of 1786 it stated that a rent-charge of 8s. a year was payable to the poor of Ufton, and was received from the owners of some cottages and buildings in Bascot, which were continued till 1795; part of these were afterwards sold to Mr. Edward Reading, and is now (1826) vested in trustees for the benefit of his grandson. They have been applied to, but do not feel disposed to allow the charge. Thomas, the son of Richard Jeacock, who paid 1s. of the above charge, has expressed his willingness to continue the payment, and also to pay all arrears due.

Directory.—Joseph Dowing, victualler, White Horse; Wm. Field, carpenter; James Elfred, parish clerk; and Thomas Horley, Henry Horley, Ufton-house, and Edmund Evens, farmers.

WHITNASH, a neat rural scattered village and parish, 3 miles E.S.E. from Warwick, was, at a very early period, held by the family of Hastang. In the 7th of Edward I., Sir Thomas de Hasely, Knight, held the manor by grant, from Robert de Hastang; but one of his descendants, in the 20th of Edward III., passed it away to Thomas Savage, of Tachebroke Mallory, who granted it in the 1st of Richard III. to Benedict Medley, of Warwick. Another manor here is mentioned as being held in the reign of Henry VI. by Sir Baldwin Frevill, Knight, which was also sold in the 14th of Henry VII., to the above-named Benedict Medley, one of whose descendants, in the 2nd of James I., passed it away to Robert Wale, gent. In 1841, here were 67 houses and 276 inhabitants, and 2110 acres of land, rateable value £1197. 16s. 6d. The principal land-owners are H. E. Landor, John Little, M. Wise, Esq., Rev. J. R. Young, J. H. Walker, and others; the former is lord of the manor. This parish is being enclosed (1849). The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, consists of nave, chancel, and tower, and contains several ancient brasses and tablets, and a handsome new font. The living is a rectory, value K.B. £5. 9s. 9½d. now £313. Lord Leigh, patron, and Rev. James Reynolds Young, M.A., incumbent. The rectory is a neat brick residence, near the church, in the Elizabethian style of architecture; here is a school supported by subscription; tithes commuted at £280.; there are 50 acres of glebe.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Nicholas Chamberlaine, by will, 1715, gave, after the term of five years after his decease, the yearly sum of 40s., on St. Thomas's-day, to the use of the poor of Whitnash, the place of his nativity, to be paid by his heirs and assigns, out of his estate at Alveston. This estate is now the property of Rev. Robert Barnard, who has recently purchased it from Sir Grey Skipwith, who had been in possession of the estate for 11 years, but not being aware of the charge, which had never been applied for, he has since paid £10. to the churchwardens, which they have accepted in satisfaction of the arrears. It is proposed to appropriate it to the foundation of a Sunday School. Rev. Robert Barnard now pays the rent charge, but there is no evidence of its having been paid for 60 years previous.

Directory.—Thomas Alcock, butcher; Mr. John Cook; John Davis, parish clerk; Thomas Knight, shoemaker; Thos. Mann, butcher; John and Maryann Neale, Free School; Samuel Philpot, shopkeeper and fruiterer; Charles Priest, victualler, Plough and Harrow; Sarah Reading, blacksmith; John Summerton carpenter; John Summerton, jun., milkman; William Treadwell, shopkeeper; Rev. James Reynolds Young, M.A., rector, Rectory; and Thomas Cook, and maltster, Henry William Dilworth, John Green, Hannah Palmer, and John Whitehead, farmers.

THE RUGBY DIVISION

Comprises fifteen parishes, one chapelry, and eight townships, viz., Bilton, Bourton-upon-Dunsmoor, Church Over, Clifton-upon-Dunsmoor, Brownsover Chapelry, Newton and Biggin township, Dunchurch, Thurlaston township, Frankton, Hillmorton, Lawford (Church), Newbold-upon-Avon, Cosford township, Harborough (Little) township, Lawford (Little) township, Lawford (Long) township, Newnham-Regis, Rugby, Ryton-upon-Dunsmoor, Stretton-upon-Dunsmoor, Princethorpe township, Willoughby, Wols-ton, and Marston township; and contains 38,579a. 3r. 24p. of land; and in 1841, 2,677 inhabited houses; 99 uninhabited, and 37 building; and 13,218 inhabitants, of whom 6,583 were males, and 6,635 females; of these numbers, 3,124 males, and 3,032 females, were under 20 years of age; 3,459 males, 3,603 females, were 20 years old, and upwards. 10,181 persons were born in this county, and 3,037 elsewhere.

BILTON is a neat pleasant and scattered village and parish, one and a half miles W.S.W. from Rugby, derives its principal interest from having been the residence of Joseph Addison, Esq., the poet and moralist, who in 1711, purchased the manor from William Boughton, Esq., of Lawford, apparently with a view to his intended marriage with the Countess Dowager of Warwick; and he lived chiefly here during the brief period that succeeded that event. His daughter resided at Bilton during many of the latter years of a long protracted life, and here died in 1797. Bilton Hall, a spacious but irregular mansion, evidently built at different periods, and principally by the Boughton family; though the apartments looking towards the garden were rebuilt in 1831 by the present possessor, the Hon. John Bridgman Simpson. The extensive gardens laid out in straight lines, with thick and formal yew hedges, remain unaltered; and a long walk on the north side of the pleasure grounds is still called Addison's walk; the hall contains many valuable paintings.

BILTON GRANGE, two miles S. from Rugby, is a large and elegant brick mansion, commenced 1846, and finished 1849, in the style which prevailed during the reign of Henry VII; since the reformation there are no buildings in the same pure style of Gothic architecture, the design is by Augustin Welby Pugin, Esq.; and George Neyers, Esq. was the architect; the interior is fitted up with oak floors, pannels, &c., in that chaste style quite in accordance with its external appearance, and is the seat and property of Captain John Herbert Washington Hibbert,

This parish contains 2,222 acres of land, and in 1841, had 121 houses, and 629 inhabitants; 1801, 347; 1821, 401; 1831, 463; rateable value, £4,144. The principal land owners are the Honorable John Bridgman Simpson, Captain J. H. W. Hibbert, Lord John Scott, James Smith Barnwell, William Bennett, Charles Gilbert, James Lawrence, and Richard Abel, Esqs., and Mrs. F. Ward; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mark, is principally a Norman structure, contains several ancient monuments to the Boughton family, and consists of nave, chancel, and tower, surmounted with a spire of later date; the living, a rectory, value K. B. £16. 10s. 7½d., now £678.; Rev. John Thomas Parker, M.A., patron and incumbent; for whom the Rev. George Powell officiates. The Methodists have a small chapel in the village.

CHARITIES.—Poor's Land.—In pursuance of an agreement between the lord of the manor of Bilton and others, about 1660, for the inclosure of Bilton, 42 acres of the common, which were accordingly set out for the use of the poor of the said town for ever. The whole is now cultivated; about eight acres are let as garden ground. There are 16 or 17 houses on the poor's land paying, with their gardens, £1. a year each, 1833; but they are to be advanced. The total rents, about £60. a year, are brought into the overseer's book; and in respect of them, coals are distributed about Christmas, 5 or 6 cwt. to a family, amounting generally to nearly £20. per annum. The repairs of the premises, and the building of cottages, are also paid out of the income. The rents of this property ought to be carried to a separate account, and applied for that purpose only.

Church Land.—At the inclosure, 3a. 7p. of land was awarded for the use of the church. A close containing two acres and a half is known as this land, now let for £6. 10s. by the churchwardens, and carried to their account.

Langton Freeman, by will, 1783, directed his executors to lay out £400. in establishing a charity school in this parish, and the money invested in land. A school-room was built on the poor's land in this parish; the master receives £20. yearly from the estate purchased, to which about £12. in addition is subscribed and paid to the master, who in respect thereof instructs all the poor boys and girls of the parish, who are sent to him in reading, writing, and arithmetic; 40 or 50 usually attend. In 1841 a new school-room was erected at the expense of the rector; the old school is converted into a house for the master, Henry Truslove.

Smith's Charity, (see Dunchurch).—Twenty-four twopenny loaves are given away to the poor yearly at Easter, at the church, by the churchwardens.

Charlotte, Countess of Warwick and Holland, left, in 1731, out of an estate in Bilton, £10. a year to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor. The property charged belongs (1834) to the Hon. J. Bridgman Simpson, by whom the charge is paid at Michaelmas, and distributed to the poor about Christmas, in sums varying from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d.

BOURTON-UPON-DUNSMOOR, a small pleasant village and parish, 6 miles S.W. from Rugby, was anciently held by the Verdon's, Lords of Brandon, and amongst others of their possessions passed to the Stafford family, in the time of Henry IV.; but upon the attainder of Humphrey, in the 1st of Henry VII, was confiscated to the crown, though restored to the family by Henry VIII; about the end of the reign of Elizabeth, Sir Humphrey Stafford sold it to John Shuckburgh of Birdinbury, an ancestor of the present owner, the Rev. Blincow Shuckburgh. The mansion is a large handsome stone building, beautifully situated in park-like grounds, commanding an extensive prospect, and is the seat of John Fullerton, Esq.

Draycote, an ancient member of Bourton, was given by Henry IV. to the collegiate church of Newark-upon-Trent, and at the dissolution Edward VI. granted it to Thomas Fisher alias Hawkins, of Warwick; consists of a few scattered houses, one mile S.W. This parish contains 2,208 acres of land; and in 1841, Bourton contained 48 houses and 248 inhabitants; Draycote, 33 houses and 142 inhabitants, making a total of 390; 1801, 318; 1821, 322; 1831, 367; rateable value, £2,258. 13s. 11d.; the principal landowners are the Rev. B. Shuckburgh, Sir T. Biddulph, and others have small estates here; the former is lord of the manor of Bourton, and the latter of Draycote.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and low tower, in which are three bells. It also contains a font, of the 14th century, and several ancient monuments. The chancel window is of beautiful stained glass: the present rector has recently made considerable improvements in the church. The living is a rectory, V. K. B. £19. 17s. 3½d., now £450., in the patronage of the Rev. B. Shuckburgh, and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Robert Kinney, M. A. The rectory is a large neat brick building, in the Elizabethian style of architecture, pleasantly situate near the church. The Methodists have also a place of worship here. A free school was established, 1836, for boys and girls; the present school, with a house adjoining for the mistress, was built 1847, by John Shuckburgh, Esq., and is now supported by the Rev. Blincow Shuckburgh. Mary Reeve, mistress, whose salary is £20. per annum.

CHARITIES.—William Smith, (See Stockton.) Bread to the value of 4s. is given away by the rector in the church, on Easter day, to the poor.

Richard Grant, by will, 1793, gave to William Bagshaw and William Townsend, and their heirs, &c. the whole of his property, &c. towards the support of his daughter, during her life, or so long as she remained single; and afterwards on trust, to pay the yearly income to the parish of Bourton, for educating the poor. After the testator's death, his house and land in Bourton was sold for an annuity of £16. for the life of his daughter, who died in 1818; after which, from various considerations, the sum of £40. was agreed to be accepted in full satisfaction for this charity, to be placed on sufficient security, and applied to the purposes of education.

Poor's Allotment. In the award of the commissioners for enclosing the open grounds in the liberty of Draycott, in the parish of Bourton, dated 3rd February, 1767, an allotment, containing 10 acres, was set out for the use of the poor of the parish, for their right to cut furze. Two cottages have been built upon the land, let at the yearly rent of 10s. 6d. each; and the remainder of the land is let for £12. per annum. The rents, after paying repairs, are applied in the purchase of coals, which are distributed to the poor at Christmas.

Church Allotment.—Also, the commissioners' award allotted 5a. 1r. 29p. of land for the use of the church, in lieu of certain ancient lands for the same use. The land is (1825) let to the parish clerk, at the yearly rent of £5., which is carried to the churchwardens' account.

CHURCH OVER, a neat, pleasant, and well-built village and parish, situate on an eminence, 4 miles N. by E. from Rugby, a great portion of the lands in which were, at a very early period, given by Robert de Wavre to the monastery of Combe, and confirmed by Henry II. These possessions, after the dissolution, were granted, by the name of a manor, to Mary, Duchess of Richmond, and in the reign of Edward VI. became the property of William Dixwell, Esq. of Coton. This parish is bounded on the west by the river Swift, and on the east by the Watling street road, by the side of which there are the remains of a large tumulus. In 1841, here were 63 houses, and 339 inhabitants; in 1801, 215; 1821, 322; 1831, 295; and 1440 acres of land, rateable value, £3273. Henry Grimes, Esq., the Rector; Sherrier's charity, Lutterworth, Geo. Wade, Esq., and Mr. Wm. Liggins, are the principal land owners; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to Holy Trinity, is a small neat edifice, with nave, chancel, gallery, and tower containing four bells, surmounted by a spire. Here are several ancient monuments to the Dixwell family. The living is a rectory, V. K. B. £15., now £270., in the patronage of Henry Grimes, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. T. C. H. Chamberlain, M. A., for whom the Rev. W. Heygad Benn, M. A. officiates. 150 acres of glebe land was allotted in lieu of tithe many years ago. The rectory is a neat residence near the church. The Baptists have a small chapel here; Rev. James Masters, minister. Here is a free school for all the poor children of the parish; the mistress receives £18. and one ton of coals per annum, towards which Henry Grimes, Esq., gives £10.; the rector and his lady, £3. 10s. 0d.; and the farmers make up the deficiency. Average attendance, 50.

COTON, one mile S. from Church Over, and three and a half N. by E. from Rugby, a member of Church Over; was in the time of Henry II. granted to the monks of Combe, but became the property of the Dixwells soon after the dissolution, and now belongs to their descendent, Henry Grimes, Esq., whose father, Abraham Grimes, Esq., erected a handsome stone mansion about 80 years ago, near the site of the ancient seat of the Dixwells, on a commanding eminence, having picturesque views over parts of the counties of Warwick and Northampton, which is at present unoccupied.

CHARITIES.—Abigail Harcourt, in 1672, gave £50. for which certain lands were conveyed to trustees for the use of the poor. By the award of the commissioners at the inclosure, &c., dated January 6th, 1756, a plot of ground, containing 10a. 1r. 34p. was allotted to trustees for the use of the poor in lieu of the above-named land. This land now produces £24. per annum, which is expended in the purchase of coals, the farmers giving the leading; so that nearly thirty tons are distributed at cost price, and £2. or £3. is given in money to non-resident parishioners.

John Thorp, in 1625, gave £40. for the use of the poor. William Dixwell, in 1675, gave £5. for the poor. Brent Dixwell, in 1690, gave £10. to the use of the poor. Mrs. Ann Dixwell, in 1692, gave £5. for the use of the poor. These several sums were expended on the land awarded for Mrs. Harcourt's charity.

Directory.—Rev. William Heygad Benn, M.A., curate, Rectory; Ann Bishop, schoolmistress; William Burgess, baker and butcher; John Carver, bricklayer; Edward Clarke, carpenter and woodman; John Francis, farmer; William Garratt, shoemaker; W. H. Grimbley, shopkeeper; William Hewitt, senior and junior, blacksmiths; John Haynes, carpenter; James Hinde, Esq.; John Ivens, wheelwright; Martin Ivens, farmer; George Levey, farmer, The Heath; Rev. James Masters, (independent); Mrs. Emma Morris, farmer and victualler, Caves Inn, Watling Street Road; Thomas Sheffield, butcher, farmer and victualler, Greyhound; William Sheffield, shoemaker; John Taylor, shoemaker; Almond Twycross, carpenter; John and Timothy Voile, farmers; Mrs. Elizabeth Ward, and William Buckingham, and Mary Carver, carriers to Rugby Saturday, and Lutterworth, Thursday.

CLIFTON-UPON-DUNSMOOR, an extensive parish $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles E.N.E. from Rugby, comprises the chapelry of Brownsover, and the hamlets of Newton and Biggin, and contains 3464a. 2r. 4p. of land, and in 1841, 699 inhabitants; 1801, 441; 1821, 724; 1831, 597; rateable value, £7722. 17s. 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. This parish was given to the monastery of of Coventry, in the reign of Edward the Confessor; but after the conquest was wrested from them by Earl Alberic. The manor was owned by Arnold de Bois, in the time of Stephen, who gave the patronage of the church and chapel of Brownsover to Leicester Abbey. It continued in this family for several descents, and eventually became the property of Sir John Bridgeman, Bart., of Castle Bromwich. The London and Birmingham and the Rugby and Stamford railways, and the Oxford canal intersect this parish.

CLIFTON-UPON-DUNSMOOR, a small pleasant village, on an eminence, on the south bank of the river Avon, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles E.N.E. from Rugby. In 1841, here were 92 houses and 364 inhabitants, and 1607a. 0r. 14p. of land: rateable value, £3887. 11s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. The principal land owners are Messrs. William Townsend, Joseph Jenaway, Edward Sale, Thomas Townsend, John Hands Townsend, Rev. James Hoare Christopher Moor, James Budd, William England, Henry Hewitt, Mrs. Mary Vann, and several others have small estates here; the former is lord of the manor. Thomas Carte, author of an elaborate History of England, was born here 1686, and died, 1754. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and square embattled tower, in which there are four bells, and had a "fair spire steeple," serving for a land mark to the surrounding country, which was taken down in 1639, "to save the cost of its repair." The living is a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £8. 1s. 8d. now £119.; Earl of Bradford, patron, and the Rev. James Hoare Christopher Moor, incumbent.

BROWNSOVER, a small village and chapelry, 2 miles N. by E. from Rugby. In 1841, here were 16 houses and 90 inhabitants; 1801, 89; 1821, 112; 1831, 90; and 853 acres of land, rateable value, £2115. 3s. The barn-like Chapel, dedicated to St. Michael, appertaining to the mother church of Clifton, was formerly part of the possessions of Leicester Abbey. The manor, in the reign of Edward IV., was released to Richard Boughton, Esq. of Little Lawford, whose descendents possessed it for several generations, until, by marriage with an heiress, it devolved to Sir Egerton Leigh, and now to J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq, who is owner of the soil, except about 37 acres, which belongs to Rugby school; Lawrence Sheriff, the founder of which, was born here.

Brownsover Hall, a good mansion, situate on an eminence, two miles E.N.E. from Rugby, is the seat and property of J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq.

NEWTON AND BIGGIN form a joint township three miles N.E. from Rugby, contains 1,004a. 1r. 30p. of land, and in 1841, 53 houses and 245 inhabitants. Newton, a small straggling village, was a possession of Turchil de Warwick; and by Geoffrey Clinton and others, the greater portion of it was given to the Priory of Kenilworth, the remainder being held by the monks of Combe; the latter possessions were granted at the dissolution to Thomas Broke and John Williams. The present land owners are Messrs. William Martin Parsons, Edward Sale, John Goodacre, Thomas Watson, and others have small estates here; the former is lord of the manor. Edward Cave, the original editor of the Gentleman's Magazine, was born here in 1691, and died 1754.

BIGGIN was, in the Conqueror's time, a village of some extent, though now consisting only of two farms and a corn mill; this was granted partly to the monks of Combe, and the remainder devolved to Henry Leigh, Esq., who held the lands in the 3rd of Elizabeth, and subsequently came into the possession of the Duke of Montague, and now owned by the Rev. John Bateman, Miss Nunnely, and Mrs. Lloyd. In a field, about 400 yards south of Mr. Richard Ladkin's house, on a high hill, is an extensive gravel pit, in which has been found some small mill stones, such as might be used to grind corn by hand with, and both human and animal bones.

CHARITIES.—Town Lands. By an agreement of the lord of the manor and others, freeholders of Clifton-upon-Dunsmoor, a meadow called Morton Myers and other lands adjoining, to make up twenty acres, were set apart for the general good of the town in lieu of certain scattered pieces of land called Town Grounds; which ground should be set by the churchwardens and constables at a reasonable rate to poor persons who had no other lands assigned them, &c. The land consists of one field and a meadow, let for £50. a year, which is distributed as follows:—Twice in the year a distribution is made in coals to the poor of the parish, to the amount of about £25. a year; the remainder is distributed amongst the poor, with the largest families, who have not received relief during the year preceding, in sums of from £5. to 10s. each.

Lawrence Sheriffe, (see Rugby).—Three poor families of the hamlet of Brownsover are eligible to the almshouses at Rugby, founded by this individual.

Abraham Turner left, by will, £21. to the poor of Brownsover; for this sum, £22. 6s. 8d., was, in 1832, placed by the churchwardens in the bank of Butlin & Co., Rugby, at two-and-a-half per cent. interest; with this interest, and the sacrament money, an annual distribution of coals is made to the poor of this hamlet.

Elizabeth Dring left £10. for poor widows, which, in 1786, produced 12s. a year, given to poor widows of Brownsover; nothing has been received for many years.

Town Lands.—At the inclosure of Newton Hamlet, under an act, 18th January, 1757, a piece of ground in the Moor field, containing 2a. 1r., was allotted in lieu of other small pieces of land belonging to this hamlet; a portion of this land is let to poor persons rent free.

Elkington's Almshouses, in Shawell parish, Leicestershire; three poor persons of the hamlet of Newton, are eligible to these almshouses; also the children of this hamlet are free to a school there, founded by the same person.

Marked 1 reside at Brownsover; 2, at Newton; and the rest at Clifton, or where specified.

DUNCHURCH, an extensive parish, considerable and well-built village, 15 miles N.E. from Warwick, and 3 miles S. from Rugby, was held in the reign of King Stephen, by Clement, who gave all his lands in Dunchurch fields to the monks of Pipewell, to which grant his son added the advowson of the Church. This manor was twice confisated to the Crown; and, early in the reign of Mary, was purchased by Sir Thomas Leigh, and subsequently descended to Lord Dunsmore. Lord John Scott is the lord of the manor and owner of the soil, except about 200 acres situate at Toft, which is the property of A. B. Herbert, Esq. The township of Dunchurch contains the hamlets of Cawston, in which is Cawston Lodge, a large and good house, where Lord John Scott occasionally resides, and a few scattered farms, from one to two miles north; and Toft, which contains three farms and five houses, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.W.; and, in 1841, 233 houses, and 1,083 inhabitants, and 3,018a. 2r. 33p. of land; rateable value, £4,797. 8s. 3d. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome edifice consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and well-proportioned square tower, richly decorated, in which there are six bells; an ancient porch is preserved on the south-side, and the fine east window was, a few years ago, restored to its primitive beauty, by the removal of masonry which entirely obscured the tracery, and by the introduction of stained glass, the liberal contribution of Lord John Scott. A new organ gallery has also been erected by the parishioners, into which the organ, presented by Messrs. J. & C. Sutton, has been removed; and accommodation is thus afforded for about 200 Sunday-school children. The living is a vicarage, V. K. B. £14. 10s. 7d., now £320., in the patronage of the Bishop of Lichfield, and incumbency of the Rev. John Sandford, B.D. The vicarage-house is a large neat residence near the Church. The Baptists have a small chapel here. The National School, erected 1837, near the Church. The Hall is a large neat mansion in the village, and is the seat of Frank Samuel Head, Esq. A Court of Requests is held every three weeks, for debts from 4d. to £1. 19s. 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.; also, a Court Leet and Court Baron are held half-yearly at the Dun Cow Inn. In the centre of the village is an ancient stone cross with four steps. Mr. Thomas Maycock, farmer, a native of this parish, and about 49 years of age, lost his sight upwards of 20 years ago, by injuries received from the Rugby school-boys; is extremely ingenious; has, since he lost his sight, erected several buildings, invented and made improvements in agricultural implements; he attends the markets, and is said to be one of the best judges of corn and cattle; and has taught reading, writing, and music.

THURLASTON is a small, pleasant, well-built village and township, 1 mile W. from Dunchurch; here was a chapel as early as the time of Henry III., which was pulled down about the beginning of Elizabeth's reign. A neat brick school-room was erected by subscription, and a grant from the National Society, 1849, and is licensed for Divine service, cost £1,000.; the site was given by Lord John Scott. Thornhill Well, near the above school, is a beautiful saline spring, which flows spontaneously, and has done from time immemorial, of which but little use is made; its qualities are said to be similar to those of Leamington. In 1841, this township contained 67 houses and 307 inhabitants; and 1,714a. 3r. of land; rateable value, £2,076. 5s. 6d. Lord John Scott is lord of the manor, and owner of nearly all the soil. Population of the whole parish of Dunchurch in 1801, 1,087; 1821, 1,251; 1831, 1,310; and in 1841, 1,399.

CHARITIES.—Francis Boughton, by will, 1707, bequeathed £400., then lent on mortgage, with certain interest then due to William Bromley and four others, and their executors upon trust, for the building of a school, and school house. He also ordered his executors to pay to the said trustees so much as would make up any residue of the school charity, a sum of £200. The interest for the binding out apprentices. Ralph Duke of Montague, in consideration of 5s., granted to William Bromley and others in 1708, a parcel of ground, for building a school, and school house, and for a yard and garden thereto, containing in the whole 26 perches; for the better establishing the said charity, paying yearly 1s. at Michaelmas. He also left certain lands for the endowment of the said school, which consists of two parcels of land, the first called the Spittle Moors, in the parish of Holy Trinity, Coventry, is divided into six closes, containing 15a. 3r. 38p., now (1835) let for £50. per annum. The second called the Oak Field, containing 11 acres, in the parish of St. Michael, Coventry. It is Lammas land, and is let for £27. per annum. The school, and school house form one building nearly in the centre of the village; an upper room for a girls' school has been erected over the school room. The master receives the rents, and the school is free to all the children of the parish of Dunchurch, who are admissable when they can read the testament. The National system being in part adopted; each pay 1s. entrance, and 1s. a quarter for cleaning the school. All are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, four or five learn the rudiments of Latin. Rev. Richard Shawcross, master, and Mr. George Pike, assistant.

Thomas Newcombe (printer to King Charles II.) by will, 1690, gave £600. to the minister and churchwardens of Dunchurch, upon trust, to build six almshouses, for as many poor men or widows, being born in, and inhabitants of the said parish, and the rest of the money, after furnishing the said houses, should be laid out in the purchase of some land, and the rents thereof divided among the said alms people. Ralph, Earl of Montague, for the better encouraging the building the said almshouses, and in consideration of 5s., granted land from north to south, four score feet, and from east to west, 43 feet, and the six houses thereupon built, to John Bennett and five others, paying the rent of 12d. at Michaelmas yearly. The almshouses cost £150. Owing to some litigation about the building of the almshouses, the charity was deferred for several years. In 1697 the remaining £450. was received, and land at Shawell was purchased for £530., towards which, £50., being Spier's gift, was made use of, and £30. borrowed. These lands, the Meer Furlong closes, containing 33a. 3r. 14p., with a small farm house; the 8 acre close, 8a. 0r. 36p., and the High Field Gate close, 28a. 0r. 17p.; the whole is let for £74. per annum. The almshouse was rebuilt in 1818, at a cost of £130., of which £75. was paid by a rate from the parish of Dunchurch, and the hamlet of Thurlaston. The Duchess of Buccleuch gave the timber, bricks, slate, and other materials. It now consists of six tenements, two rooms each; four of the inmates are of the parish of Dunchurch, and two of the hamlet of Thurlaston; they each receive a weekly allowance of 3s. 6d.; they also receive, annually, 12 cwt. of coals each.

Poor's Land.—By virtue of the award of the commissioners, appointed by the Dunchurch Inclosure Act, in 1709, the parish is in possession of 20 acres of land near the town, in three closes, and let for £35. per annum; there are some cottages which belong to the parish, let for £24. 10s., making a total of £59. 10s.; from which, after various payments for interest, insurance, and a dinner to the cottage tenants, amounting in the whole to £19. 14s. 8d., the remainder after deducting for repairs, is given away, on St. John's day, to all the poor, in sums of 1s. a head.

William Fawkes, in 1731, bequeathed 40s. to be distributed on St. Thomas's day, for ever, to poor men and women, at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens, charged on lands in Grandborough. John Cornborough, the owner, (1835,) pays the rent-charge, which is distributed to the poor with the poor's land money.

William Smith, (see Stockton, in this county.)—The sum of 4s. is received on account of this charity, and distributed in bread at the church on Easter-Sunday.

A faculty, 1st December, 1767, was granted by the bishop for erecting a gallery in the church, 16 feet long and 6 feet wide, for the accommodation of the school. Certain premises were, for the sum of £350., (being partly the £200. for the apprenticing charity, with interest due thereon, and a further sum advanced by the trustee,) purchased at Stretton-on-Dunsmore, now consists of the Black Dog Inn, with land, containing 25a. 2r. 11p., let at the yearly rent of £30., for the residue of a term which expired at Lady-day, 1840. Boys, on application, belonging to the parish, are apprenticed, with whom premiums of £12. or £14. are paid.

John Spiers, by will, 1618, gave to his executors the sum of £100., to be set forth after the rate of £6. by the year, to the use of the poor of the parishes of Dunchurch and Newbold; he also gave £50. towards making a stone bridge and causeway at Kayne Brook; and, by a codicil to his will, it was declared the money left to Newbold should not extend to the hamlet of Cosford. In respect of this gift, £2. 10s. is now annually received by this parish from the trustees of Newcombe's almshouses, with whom the £50. was invested for the purchase of land; and it would appear this charity ought to receive its full proportion of the rent.

Church Lands.—Under the award before mentioned, two acres and a half of land, on the south-side the town, was allotted for the use of the church, and now let for £10. per annum, and received by the churchwardens.

HAMLET OF THURLASTON.

Church Land.—Under an agreement for inclosing the common fields of Thurlaston, 20th of April, 1728, a plot of land containing 8a. 0r. 24p. was awarded in lieu of certain Church lands, the rents to be employed in the same manner as heretofore employed. The land is let for the yearly rent of £15., from which certain expenses belonging to the hamlet are paid, and the remainder is applied towards one-fourth of the expenses of the parish church.

— Hurdlestone left £10. to the poor of Thurlaston. John Barnwell, who holds the money, pays 8s. interest, which is given away on St. John's day to the poor.

John Spier, (see Dunchurch.)—16s. 8d. is received in respect of this gift, and given away on St. John's day.

Poor's Land.—By the award above-mentioned, it was adjudged that a plot of land containing 43 acres, laid out for the poor, of which the rents were for the finding fuel in winter, yearly, for the said poor; who also had free liberty to cut bushes therefrom. The land is now divided into five fields; there are four cottages also, now let for £4. 5s. yearly, and the land at the yearly rent of £42. Of this rent, £12. or £13. is given away in May, and the same sum in November, annually, by 2s. a head for each family, and the remainder is given away in coals at Christmas. It was recommended to the churchwardens to divide this land in small allotments, at low rents, for the use of the poor.

FRANKTON, a small village and parish, 4 miles W. by S. from Dunchurch, was one of the early possessions of the priory of Coventry, and was granted by the Crown, in the 32nd of Elizabeth, to Thornton and Woodcock; from whom it passed to John Temple, and, in 1680, became, by purchase, the property of Sir Theophilus Biddulph, an ancestor of the present baronet of the same name, with whom the manor still continues. In 1841, here were 66 houses and 282 inhabitants; in 1801, 273; 1821, 253; 1831, 261; and 1680 acres of land, rateable value, £2,166. 14s. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a very ancient edifice, containing several ancient monuments and tablets, and consists of nave, chancel, one aisle, and low tower, in which there are four bells; the living, a rectory, value K. B. £5. 12s. 1d., now £110. Rev. James Biddulph, patron; and the Rev. Wm. Percy Powlett, incumbent.

CHARITIES.—Ann Biker, in 1736, granted to John Shuckborough, and five others, a yearly rent charge, clear of all deductions, out of certain closes called the Heath Pieces, and £7., clear of all deductions, out of the Wasts and Holts land, in the parishes of Shilton and Sowe, payable at Lady-day and Michaelmas; to hold the said annuities on trust, that £10., part thereof, should be paid for the maintenance of a charity school at Frankton-on-Dunsmore, &c., and that 40s. should be yearly paid to the rector and churchwardens of Frankton, to be disposed of on Candlemas day, unto poor ancient maids and widows of this parish; and 20s., the remainder, to answer the expenses of their meetings, &c. The £6. rent charge of the land in Frankton, is paid from land belonging to Rev. John Biddulph, and Mrs. S. Biddulph. The land in Shilton, charged with the £7., belongs to Richard Richardson, Esq., of which £4. is, with the other £6., paid to the schoolmaster, and £2. to widows and old maids above fifty years of age, in sums from 2s. 6d. to 10s. each. The 20s. allotted to the trustees, has, of late years, been given to widows at the same time. The schoolmaster occupies a house and garden, and small field, rent free, belonging to the rector. He instructs the poor boys of the parish in reading, writing, and arithmetic.

Jane Leeson.—The sum of £2. per annum, due to this parish, is paid whenever the churchwardens apply for it. The amount is given among the poor in shillings and sixpences.

Thomas Johnson left 40s., the interest to be given in two dozen of white bread on St. Thomas's day. It has been lost many years.

Directory.—Mrs. Sophia Biddulph; Chas. Blundell, baker; Jph. Reeve, shoemaker; John Sharman, tailor; Isaac White, carpenter; Thomas White, beerhs., shopkpr., and coal dlr.; and John Blundell, George Dalton, and Frankton Lime Works, John Hands, Jph. Harris, Frankton grounds; Maria Harris, Samuel Heath, Marton bridge; James Painton, Edward Sabin, and Edward Shephard, farmers; and Thomas White, carrier to Coventry, Friday.

HILLMORTON, an extensive parish and considerable village, two miles E.S.E. from Rugby, on a branch of the river Avon, partly in a vale, and partly on an acivity, from which circumstance it has received its present appellation, was given by the Conqueror to the Norman Earl of Warwick, Henry de Newburgh. The manor was held for many years by the family of Astley. In 1841, here were 222 houses, and 953 inhabitants; 1801, 620; 1821, 779; 1831, 873; and 3150 acres of land, rateable value, £8477. 1s. 1d. The principal land owners are Thos. Townsend, Esq., Rev. Wm. Sutton, Mr. Riddle, The and Jas. Cooke, Geo. Worth, Esq., Rose Holding, Mr. Allibone, Wm. Higgins, Joseph Burrell, John Wm. Lambley, John Perkins, and Wm. Geo. Rose, Esqs.; the former is lord of the manor. Several others have small estates here. The Hall is a neat mansion situate near the church, the seat and property of Thomas Townsend, Esq. The Church, dedicated to John the Baptist, is an ancient Gothic edifice, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and low tower, in which there are five bells. In the time of Henry III. a monument was erected to Thomas de Astley, representing him cross legged and in armour; and near to it is another, supposed to be that of his mother Edith. The living is a vicarage, V. K. B. £6. 10s. 6d. now £202., augmented with £400. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of R. Stanley, Esq. and incumbency of the Rev. John Giles Powell, for whom the Rev. Francis Hugh Deane officiates. The Baptists and the Wesleyan Methodists have each a chapel here.

CHARITIES.—Church Lands.—By the award of the Commissioners, under the Act of Inclosure, 20th March, 1754, a parcel of ground, now called the Great Church Close, containing 19a. 3r. 10p., in lieu of certain odd pieces of land, vested in the churchwardens and constables, in trust, to appropriate the rents for the repairs of the church, bells, frames, ropes, bread and wine for the communion, repairs of ways and causeways to the church, for relief of the poor, and mending the highways of Hillmorton. This land is (1835) let at the rent of £43. per annum. Also, an allotment now called the Small Church Close, containing 3a. 1r. 12p. was awarded to the churchwardens and constables for the relief of the poor, for the repairing of the roads, and other parish uses; this piece is let at the rent of £15. per annum. These rents are carried to the churchwardens' account, out of which all the ordinary charges are defrayed. The sum of £8. 8s. per annum is paid to a Sunday schoolmaster; the interest of a debt of £291., which was incurred by building a parish school, in the year 1814, at an expense of £700., which, with the exception of the sum yet unpaid, was paid from this account. It is recited in an indenture, 1818, that the trustees of certain property conveyed by Mary Ireson to Nathaniel Sutton and five others, had, at the request of the parish officers, been taken down, and a school and residence for a schoolmaster erected thereon, at an expense of £700., which were mortgaged for the sum of £246., 15th October, 1831.

Edward Abbot, by will, 1799, gave £150. to Nathaniel Sutton and two others, and their assigns, upon trust, to place out the same, and pay the interest arising therefrom for the instructing of 12 poor children of both sexes, of this parish, in reading, writing, and arithmetic. He also gave £50. to the same trustees upon trust to purchase bread with the interest thereof, to be distributed to the poor at the parish church about Christmas yearly, at the discretion of his trustees and their successors. The legacies were by the legacy duty, reduced to £180.; which now stands £194. 7s. 1d. three-and-a-half per cent. stock, and produces an annual dividend of £6. 16s. of which £5. 2s. is applied to the schooling account, and £1. 14s. to the distribution of bread.

James Thompson, parish clerk and schoolmaster, gave, by will, 1821, to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of this parish, and their successors, £50. upon trust, to place out the same, and apply the interest for the education of, and in purchasing books for, two poor orphan children; or if none such, then other poor children, to be taken in at five years old, and continue till 12 years of age; to be instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic; four-fifths of the interest to be given to the master, and one-fifth to provide books. Of this legacy, £45. was, 25th March, 1824, lent to the churchwardens, and £2. 5s., as interest, is paid out of the rents of the church close, and applied as above.

Sir Edward Astley, Bart., desirous that the ancient charity of 2s. a week, laid out in bread for the poor, as directed by his ancestors, conveyed, in 1770, to the Rev. Thos.

Smith, vicar of this parish, and six others, certain messuages and lands, on trust, out of the rents thereof, weekly, to lay out 2s. in the purchase of a dozen twopenny loaves, and distribute the same every Sunday, after divine service, to poor persons who had attended church, (unless disabled by sickness.) The property consists of a close called Smith's Moors, containing about three and a half acres, let for £16.10s. per annum; also, Palmer's close, containing about an acre of ground, with a barn, let for £11. per annum: and two other tenements, let at the yearly rents of £2.12s. These rents, amounting to £32. 14s. are received by one of the trustees, and bread to the amount of 11s. a week, in twopenny loaves, is given away on Sunday morning, after service. Poor persons once on the list, continue to receive the bread for life, if deserving.

LAWFORD (CHURCH) is a small pleasant village and parish, on the south side of the Avon, four miles W.N.W. from Rugby. Robert de Lalleford held this place in the 14th of Edward III.; afterwards it was possessed by the Staffords; and upon the attainder of Edward, Duke of Buckingham, in the 13th of Henry VIII., coming to the crown, it was granted to Thomas, Marquis of Dorset; but, by the attainder of Henry, Duke of Suffolk, it again reverted to the crown. In the second of Mary, licence was granted by the Queen to alienate the same to Thomas Leigh, alderman of London. In the 11th of Elizabeth it was settled upon his widow, with remainder to his youngest son, William, whose grandson, Lord Dunsmore, succeeded thereto. The Right Hon. Lord John Scott is the Lord of the manor and owner of the whole parish. Within this parish many elephants, rhinoceros and hyænas's bones have at different times been found in the deluvial deposit. In 1841 here were 71 houses and 333 inhabitants; 1801, 302; 1821, 351; 1831, 320; and 1,826a. 2r. 24p. of land; rateable value, £2,948. 10s. 8d. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, consists of nave, chancel, side aisle, and low embattled tower, in which are three bells. The living, a rectory, V.K.B., £11. 15s. 5d., now £196., with the vicarage of Newnham Regis annexed; patron, the Right Hon. Lord John Scott, and Rev. Robert Edmonds, M.A., incumbent. By the act of commutation, 1849, there is an additional £100. rent charge. There are 84a. 3r. 3p. of glebe land. A neat school with a house at each end for the master and mistress was erected 1849, and is supported by the Right Hon. Lord John Scott; will accommodate 100; average 80; the children pay three-halfpence per week; Leonard Twining, master. In the centre of the village is a fine old elm tree, which measures 18 feet round the butt, supposed to be 300 years old, and another 150 years old.

Directory.—William Barnwell, tailor; Mary Benn, cowkeeper; Josiah Billingham, victualler, White Lion; William Bird, blacksmith; William Burton, carpenter;

William Bushel, bricklayer; Walter Cooke, carpenter and wheelwright; Sarah Dalton, shopkeeper; William Dalton, butcher; John Doshier, shoemaker; Rev. Robert, Edmonds, M.A., rector; James Frankton, shoemaker; William Hiron, woodman and grocer; Joseph Mann, cowkeeper and parish clerk; William Nicholas, bricklayer, and Richard Barnwell, Mount Pleasant; William Benn, John Billingham, William Crofts, Rookery Hall; John Dalton, Limestone Hall; Jonathan Downing, Lawford lane; Joseph Line, Ling Hall; William Line and John Hands Townsend, farmers; William Gibbins, carrier to Rugby, Tuesday and Saturday, and Coventry, Wednesday and Friday.

NEWBOLD-ON-AVON is a neat pleasant village and parish, two miles N.W. by N. from Rugby, containing the following hamlets and townships, viz., Cosford, Little Harborough, Little Lawford, and Long Lawford; and in 1841, 1,248 inhabitants; in 1821, 968; 1831, 1063; and 4893a. 1r. 23p. of land: rateable value, £10,771. 0d. 3d. This was held at the Conquest, by Geoffrey de Wircce, who gave certain tithes, &c. out of it to the monks of St. Nicholas, at Angiers. In the reign of Henry I., the manor was owned by the Pantolfs; and, after the dissolution, that portion of it which was given to the monks of Pipewell, in the 35th of Henry III., was granted by the Crown to Edward Boughton, Esq., and Thomas Wightman, the latter of whom sold his portion of the manor to Sir Thomas Leigh. The other manor, which belonged to the monks of Kirby, was obtained by the Boughtons, of Lawford. The principal land-owners of the township of Newbold, are John Ward Boughton Leigh, Esq.; Thos. Walker, Esq.; and Mrs. M. Norman; the former is lord of the manor. Several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is a neat edifice, on an eminence, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, which contains a peal of six good bells. In the Church are several monuments to the memory of various branches of the Boughton family. The living is a vicarage, V. K. B. £14. 12s. 1d., now £382., in the patronage of J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Thomas Parker, M.A. The Vicarage is a neat residence near the Church. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. The township of Newbold, which includes the hamlet of Little Harborough, contained, in 1841, 110 houses, and 507 inhabitants, and 1,427a. 3r. 25p. of land; rateable value, £5,522. 0s. 5½d. A neat brick National School for boys and girls, and a house for the master and mistress, was erected by the vicar in 1847; John and Ann Goslin, master and mistress. Here are extensive lime-works, wrought by Thomas Walker, Esq., and Mrs. Mary Norman. This parish is intersected by the rivers Avon and Swift, the Oxford Canal, and the Trent Valley Railway.

Cosford, a small village and township, three miles N. by W. from Rugby, contained, in 1841, 16 houses, and 82 inhabitants, and 484a. 2r. 16p. of land; rateable value, £1,429. 9s. 6d. The owners are Mr. Edward Norman, Mr. Edward Bates, and J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq.; the latter is lord of the manor.

Harborough (Little), a small hamlet in the township of Newbold, 3 miles N.W.; in 1841 it contained 5 houses and 31 inhabitants. Cathiron, several scattered houses in this hamlet, 1 mile N.W. This hamlet, which contains about 500 acres of land, keeps its own roads, but its poor with Newbold. The owners are J. W. Boughton Leigh, C. M. Caldecott, H. Grimes, — Benn, — Butlin, Esqs., and Mr. Daniel Martin; the former is lord of the manor.

Lawford (Little), a small hamlet and township, 3½ miles W. from Rugby, had, in 1841, 5 houses, 34 inhabitants, and 410a. 0r. 5p. of land, rateable value £759. 4s. 0d.; was a possession of Turchil de Warwick, before the Conquest, and descending to the Earls of Warwick, was granted by Earl William to Robert de Craft, in whose family it continued till 1441; when Geoffrey de Craft died, leaving a daughter, who married Thomas Boughton, a Bedfordshire gentleman, who seated himself here, and whose descendants resided at the family mansion, until the melancholy event which has given such sad celebrity to the place, the well known murder of Sir Theodosius Boughton, in 1788, by poison, administered by Captain Donellan, who had married his only sister.

A few years afterwards the manor was sold to John Caldecott, Esq., and the mansion taken down. C. M. Caldecott, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of the soil, except a small portion, which is the property of J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq., and the heirs of Thomas Norton.

Lawford (Long), a considerable village and township, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W.N.W. from Rugby, contained in 1841, 141 houses and 625 inhabitants; in 1821, 474; and 1572a. 3r. 17p. of land, rateable value £3060. 6s. 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; was at the Conquest possessed by Geoffrey Wirce, and from him descended to Nigel de Albany, whose son, early in the reign of Henry II., granted it to Robert de Stuteville, and his brother John bestowed the same upon the monks of Pipewell, in the county of Northampton. At the dissolution, these possessions were granted to Edward Boughton, Esq., and the manor, in the 7th of Edward VI., to John Green and Ralph Hall, of London; from whom it passed, with the manors of Newbold and Cosford before mentioned, to the Leigh family. The principal land owners are now J.W. Boughton Leigh, Esq., C. M. Caldecott, Esq., Mr. Thomas Crofts, William Townsend, George Worth, Thomas Walker, Henry Townsend, Esqs., Mr. William Elkington, and Mr. Thomas Lane; the former is lord of the manor; several others have small estates here. A neat Chapel of ease, which will accommodate about 200, was erected in 1839, by the late John Caldecott, Esq., in which there is divine service once every Sunday. The Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a small Chapel here. The Parochial School was established 1824, and was rebuilt in 1844, supported by subscription; Richard Bird, master. Here are extensive Lime Works belonging to Thomas Walker, Esq. The London and North Western and the Rugby and Leamington Railways intersect this township.

CHARITIES.—Richard Fostord, by will, 1508, gave a house, with all the lands thereto belonging, in the lordship of Frankton, to the parishes of Rugby and Newbold-upon-Avon; the yearly rent to be divided equally between them; and he willed the portion of rents received by Rugby should remain to the maintenance of so much of Rugby Bridge as they were bound to repair; and the portion the parish of Newbold should receive, should remain to the maintenance of the Long Bridge betwixt Long Lawford and Newbold; and he appointed feoffees, two of each parish. The property consists of a cottage house and premises, and eight acres of land at Frankton; let for £16. per annum; the tenant undertakes the ordinary repairs; applied according to the testator's will.

John Spier, by will, gave £50. noticed in an old book in 1665, the interest of which £3. to be paid on St. John's day yearly, of which Newbold and Little Harborough poor are to receive £1. 13s. 4d. and Long Lawford £1. 6s. 8d. The sum of £50. was in the hands of individuals, and the greater part lost. The inhabitants, by subscription, made up the loss, and advanced it to the churchwardens for the repair of the church in the year 1822, and the interest £2. 10s. paid out of the church rates, and distributed to poor persons of the two parishes.

George Millington, in 1734, gave 5s. annually on Good Friday, to be distributed at the parish church of Newbold by the minister and churchwardens to the poor, after divine service. The court yard and premises charged with this payment belong (1835) to Thomas Walker, by whom the 5s. is paid, which is laid out in bread, and distributed as above.

J. Oneley, in 1766, gave to minister and churchwardens of Newbold £14. to be placed out at interest; of which 5s. was to be given in cakes to children of Newbold for saying catechism on Palm Sunday, the remainder to the poor attending service on the two St. John's days, or Sundays following. The churchwardens pay 14s. interest as a debt upon the church rate, which is distributed as above.

LONG LAWFORD HAMLET.

The Poor's Plot.—According to a lease granted to Thomas Bagshawe of this land in 1719, it is stated to contain about 20 acres, and to have been formerly set out by the freeholders of Long Lawford at the inclosing of the said liberties, for the benefit and use of the poor of the said liberties, and commonly called the Poor's Plot. In 1822 this plot was let on a lease of 14 years, at the annual rent of £45.; this rent was till 1833, as all former rent had been, carried to the account of the Poor's rate. In consequence of various complaints a parish meeting was held 27th November, 1833, to consider the best method of appropriating the rent, when it was resolved to give it away in coals and bread, and to apply £4. per annum for the rent of a school. In future the whole rents are to be given away, and no part carried to the poor rate. It seems desirable that industrious cottagers may be accommodated with small allotments under the provisions of an Act of William IV. The poor considered they had a right to cut furze on a certain strip of land awarded to them at the enclosure, which bears date 23rd March, 1774; no such right, however, was awarded them.

Sir Edward Boughton conveyed certain premises, let for £3. a year, in Rugby, to feoffees, in trust, to apply the rents amongst the poor of the town of Long Lawford, in the parish of Newbold. By an indenture, 1787, it is recited that the said charity premises were ruinous and could not be let at a rack rent; and at a vestry meeting of the parish it was agreed that in consideration of a sum of money to be expended on the estate, the same was devised for the term of 121 years, paying the said trustees at Long Lawford, the yearly rent of £4. 10s., on the 5th of April, every year, free of all expences or repairs, to Mr. Wratislavia, who afterwards changed his name to Wratislaw. He laid out in building the house £1200. and has since expended more; it is now let for £80. per annum by the representatives of Mr Wratislaw. The rent of £4. 10s. is regularly paid, and distributed to the industrious poor of Long Lawford.

Smith's Gift, (see Bilton.)—The churchwarden of Long Lawford receives from a baker, at Thurlaston, 4s. worth of bread, which is distributed at the Church at Newbold, on Easter Sunday, amongst poor persons of of this hamlet attending the sacrament.

Samuel Wilson, who died about 40 years ago, left by will, £5. to the poor of Long Lawford. This money was in the hands of Daniel Dalton, one of the executors, who failed, and afterwards died insolvent.

NEWNHAM REGIS, or KING'S NEWNHAM, so called from its having in early times belonged to the King, is a small pleasant village and parish, $4\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.W. by W. from Rugby, on the south bank of the Avon, and was held by the canons of Kenilworth from the reign of Henry I., to the dissolution, at which period it was granted to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, but upon his attainder reverted to the Crown, and was afterwards purchased of Sir Rowland Hill, by Sir Thomas Leigh. The Church long since desecrated, and the Cemetery converted into a rick yard, nothing now remains but the ivy-clad tower, presenting a very picturesque appearance. The walls of the building were ornamented with fresco paintings, described by Dr. Thomas as representing the offering of the Magi, the descent from the Cross, and whole length figures of the four Evangelists, all now destroyed. The living, is a vicarage united to the rectory of Church Lawford, value K. B. £5. Here, in 1815, (says Dr. Buckland), "two magnificent heads and other bones of the Siberian rhinoceros, and many large tusks and teeth of Elephants, with some stags' horns, and bones of the ox and horse, were found in a bed of deluvium, which is immediately incumbent on stratified beds of lias, and is composed of a mixture of various pebbles, sand, and clay, in the lower regions of which, where the clay predominates, the bones are found at the depth of fifteen feet from the surface; they are not in the least degree mineralized, and have lost almost nothing of their weight or animal matter. One of these heads, measuring in length two feet six inches, together with a small tusk and molar tooth of an elephant, have been deposited in the Radcliffe Library, at Oxford. The other large head has been presented to the Geological Society, at London." In 1841 this parish contained 35 houses and 156 inhabitants; in 1801, 117; 1821, 134; 1831, 139; and 1,421 acres of land, rateable value £2,111. 1s. 6d.; The Right Hon. Lord John Scott is lord of the manor and owner of the soil. The Oxford canal crosses the north-east angle of this parish; here are extensive lime works, wrought by Mr. Henry Townsend.

DIRECTORY.—Post Office at Eliz. Colledge's; letters arrive from Rugby, at 8. 45 a.m. and are despatched at 6 p.m. The farmers are William Bradford, The Lodge; Edward Brierly, and corn miller, The Hall; Harry Brierly, George Dalton, Grounds, Henry Townsend, and lime burner, Well Farm; and George Worth, Esq., and John Farmer, baker.

RUGBY, a parish and market-town, 16 miles E.N.E. from Warwick, 29 E. by S. from Birmingham, and 83 N.W. by N. from London, was a place of little consequence at the Conquest, at which time it belonged to Turchil de Warwick. One of the numerous castles erected during the turbulent reign of Stephen, was built a furlong north of the Church, some traces of which remain. The manor passed from the early Earls of Warwick, to the ancient and important families of Rokeby and Stafford; and, upon the attainder of Edward, Duke of Buckingham, was granted to Sir Gilbert Talboys, Knight, whose daughter marrying Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick, it became his property; but, in the 2nd of Elizabeth, he sold it, with the advowson of the Church, to John Wyrley, Esq. The town is pleasantly situated on high ground, upon the south-eastern bank of the river Avon, and consists of several good streets; the suburbs are interspersed with handsome terraces, mansions, villas, &c., and is still rapidly progressing; several new streets and houses are now in course of erection. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water. In 1841, here were 759 inhabited houses, 23 uninhabited, and 21 building, with a population of 4,008 persons, of whom 2,024 were males and 1,984 females; in 1801, 1,487; 1821, 2,300; 1831, 2,501; and 1,617 acres of land; rateable value, £13,619. 14s. 9d. The principal land owners are Messrs. Round, Oliphant, and Co., and Thomas Caldecott, Esq., who is also lord of the manor; there are many small freeholders. This town is governed by a Committee, under the Act of the general board of health, which came in force on the 18th September, 1849; the following gentlemen compose the first committee, and retire three each year, in turns:—H. S. Gibb, Esq., chairman; W. F. Wratlaw, Esq.; Rev. Henry Highton; James Butlin, Esq.; David Torrance, Esq.; Messrs. John Reynolds, William Colledge, Richard Bromwich, and John Richardson. The Markets are on Tuesday and Saturday; the former for corn, which was established about 3 years ago, and is well supplied. Thirteen fairs are held annually, the greater part of them are cattle markets, and are held on the second Tuesday after the Twelfth-day, February 17, March 31, the last Monday in April, May 5, chiefly a pleasure fair; the second Monday in June, July 7, August 21, Monday before New Michaelmas-day, the Monday before the 22nd of October, November 16, which is a very great horse fair, lasting eight days; the Tuesday before St. Thomas'-day, and the Monday after Christmas-day.

The Church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, partly in the early English style of architecture, with a massive square embattled tower, in which are five bells, strengthened by buttresses, and a turret at the south-east angle, to which there is no entrance but from within the Church, and which appears to have been erected as a place of security after the demolition of the Castle. The roof of the nave is supported on massive octagonal pillars and sharply pointed arches, of which those nearer to the chancel are much more lofty than the others. In 1831 the Church was enlarged by the addition of a south-aisle, from a plan by Mr. Rickman, and now consists of nave, chancel, and side-aisles. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £17. 19s. 2d., now £500.; Earl Craven, patron, and the Rev. John Moultrie, M.A., incumbent.

St. Matthew's District Church, Warwick street, is a handsome edifice, built of Yorkshire stone, in the early English style of architecture, consecrated Oct. 1841; since which time galleries have been erected, and contains a good organ; cost about £4,000., raised by subscription, and will accommodate 950. The boundary of the district is Dunchurch road, Drury lane, Swan street, Queen street, and down to the brook. The living is a perpetual curacy, endowed with £1,000. by the Rev. J. H. C. Moor, Rev. William Chambers, and Miss Marriott; and is rated at £32. gross income, including seat rent £300.; in the patronage of the Trustees, and incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Page, M.A.

Catholic Church, situated on the Dunchurch road, dedicated to St. Marie, founded in the year 1846, by John Herbert Washington Hibbert, Esq., of Bilton Grange, and Julia his wife, to the honour of God, under the patronage of the ever Blessed Virgin. The building was designed by the celebrated architect, Augustus Welby Pugin, Esq., and with all its furniture in detail, is executed in the purest style of Gothic, or Christian art. It consists of tower at west end, a nave, chancel, and side aisle; the stained-glass with which all the windows are filled was executed by Hardman, of Birmingham; the east window especially is much admired, exhibiting, as it does, a most successful specimen of artistic execution and colouring, equal to some of the most exquisite work of the ancient artist. The Church is surrounded by a cemetery, entered by a lych-gate, and within the enclosure stands a rich stone cross, from which sermons are sometimes delivered. At the north-east side of the church, and connected with it by a cloister, is intended to build a Presbytery for the accommodation of the clergy attached to the church. The Catholic congregation of Rugby was founded in the year 1844, by the Rev. John Nickolds, of St. Marie's College, Oscote, being chaplain at Bilton Grange. The Church is now served by the Fathers of the Order of Charity. The Rev. Dr. Beitettie and Rev. William Lockhuet, being the resident priests.

The Baptist Chapel is a small building in Gas street; Rev. Henry Angus, pastor. Independent Chapel, North street, a small neat building; Rev. Henry Ollard, minister. The Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, Chapel street, is a large neat building.

College for the Deaf and Dumb, Castle street, was opened 1841, for the education of the higher classes of society, by Mr. Hy. Brothers Bingham, formerly assistant to Mr. Thos. Braidwood, and successively head master of the Exeter and Manchester Deaf and Dumb Institutions. St. Matthew's District School, Pennington street, is a neat brick building, erected 1845, by subscription, at a cost of upwards of £700., will accommodate 100, average 70. Caldecott's Schools, Church street, with a house in the centre for the master and mistress, forms a good range of substantial brick building, erected 1830, and cost £1,000., by Thomas Caldecott, Esq., by whom it is supported, except a small weekly stipend paid by the children; each room will accommodate 100, average 50. William Ironside Tait, and Mrs. Euphemia Tait, master and mistress.

Subscription News Room and Library, Messrs. Crosley and Billington's, Market place, is well supplied with daily and weekly papers. The library contains a valuable collection of books. The Clerical Book Club is also held here, in which there are about forty members.

Mechanics' Institution, High street, established October, 1846; Rev. J. Moultrie, president; G. Ramsay, Esq., treasurer; Luke Jeayes, secretary.

Benefit Building and Investment Society, High street, established 1847, and is progressing favourably; Mr. William Sale, president, and Mr. James Ward, solicitor.

County Court, Church street, comprises the parishes, townships, &c., of Barby-with-Onley, Bilton, Birbury, Bourton, Brandon, Bretford, Brinklow, Brownsover, Church Lawford, Churchover, Clay Coton, Clifton, Combe Fields, Cosford, Crick, Draycott, Dunchurch, Easenhall, Elkington, Flecknoe, Frankton, Grandborough, Harborough Magna, Hill, Hillmorton, Kilsby, Kites Hardwick, Leamington Hastings, Little Lawford, Long Lawford, Marton, Newbold-on-Avon, Newton-with-Biggin, Princethorpe, Rugby, Ryton-on-Dunsmoor, Stanford, Stretton-on-Dunsmoor, Willoughby, Wolfhamcote, Wolstone, and Yelvertoft. F. T. Dinsdale, Esq., judge; Alex. McKay, high-bailiff; Charles Edward Wratlaw, assistant clerk.

Petty Sessions are held every Tuesday, at the Bull Inn, Sheep street, at 11 a.m. The Magistrates are J. W. Boughton Leigh, Esq., chairman; Harry Scott Gibb, Esq.; James Atty, Esq.; C. M. Caldecott, Esq.; John Fullerton, Esq.; and the Rev. Richard Lickorish. Matthew Holbeche Bloxham, Esq., clerk.

Railway Station, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. E. The London and North Western main line from London to Liverpool, and branch to Birmingham, (and branches will shortly be opened to Royal Leamington and Stamford,) and the Midland terminus all unite here, by which there is railway communication to all parts of the kingdom.

CHARITIES.—Grammar School.—Lawrence Sheriff, of London, grocer, but a native of Brownsover, a hamlet in the parish of Clifton, by deed, dated July 22nd, 9th Elizabeth, 1569, conveyed certain premises to trustees, on trust, after the death of the said Lawrence Sheriff, with the profits thereof, to cause to be built a school-house, and near thereto four convenient distinct lodgings, for four poor men to lodge in; and should be called the Almshouses of Lawrence Sheriff. The grammar-school is a noble establishment, and has for many years maintained a high degree of reputation. It was endowed with a house and land in Clifton parish, and with about eight acres of land in Conduit Close, near the Foundling Hospital, London. At that time the income was inconsiderable, and, in the year 1780, the rental did not exceed £116. per annum; but the subsequent improvement of the estate, by the erection of houses, and the laying out of several new streets upon the site, the revenue has been augmented to more than £5,000 per annum. The school is under the superintendence of twelve trustees, who appoint the head master, with a fixed salary of £113. 6s. 8d., a house and some land, and an annual payment of £16. 5s. 6d. for every boy on the foundation; from which latter sum he pays £6. 6s. to the six assistant classical masters, £2. 2s. to the master of modern languages, and £1. 11s. 6d. to the mathematical master; instruction in these two last branches of literature, forming a part of the regular course of education pursued in the school. The assistant classical masters also receive severally from the trustees a permanent salary of £120. per annum; and salaries are also given to a writing master and a drawing master. By a regulation of the trustees, the number of boys not on the foundation is never to exceed two hundred and sixty. The school-premises were taken down and rebuilt in 1808; they form a splendid range of buildings, in the Elizabethan style of architecture; the principal entrance is under a square gateway tower, with octagonal turrets at the angles, through a richly groined archway, above which is a beautiful oriel window, embellished with stained glass, looking into a spacious quadrangle, of which two sides are cloistered. The school-rooms are lofty, and the great school, in which the annual prize compositions are recited, on the Wednesday in Easter-week, is of large dimensions, and of stately elevation. The room in the gateway tower, over the principal entrance, is appropriated to the school library. Through an archway, diagonally, opposite to the principal entrance, is the approach to the chapel, a detached and elegant edifice, in the later style of English architecture, to which there is also an entrance to the public road. The sides of the building are strengthened with ornamented buttresses, and relieved by three elegant windows, with dripstones resting on antique heads; and the east and west ends are decorated with crocketed pinnacles at the angles, and a cross on the apex of the gable. The interior is fitted up like the choir of a cathedral. The roof, which is flat, and painted to resemble oak, is pannelled and ribbed with diagonal intersections. The east window is enriched with tracery, and at the west end are two canopied seats, for the head master and the chaplain, above which is a gallery, with an organ of appropriate design. On the south side, near the altar, is a white monument of marble, by Chantrey, erected to the memory of Dr. James, late head master; he is represented in a sitting posture, reading, with several volumes at his feet. The entrance to the master's apartments is through a large octangular turret, forming the hall and staircase; and the whole range of buildings is relieved with turrets at various intervals. Belonging to this magnificent establishment are 21 exhibitions of £60. per annum, tenable for seven years, in either of the Universities; and several fellowships, varying in value from £100. to £300. per annum, but not exceeding £1,000. per annum in the aggregate amount, which are given exclusively to the head master and others who may choose to retire after having been ten years in the establishment. The trustees are, 1849, Earl Denbigh, Earl Aylesford, Earl Brooke and Warwick, Earl Howe, Lord Leigh, Sir Gray Skipwith, Bart.; Sir Francis Lawley, Bart.; Sir Theophilus Biddulph, Bart.; William Holbech, Esq.; Evelyn John Shirley, Esq.; William Stratford Dudgdale, Esq.; Head Master, Rev. A. C. Tait, D. C. L. For assistant masters see Directory. By the recitals in an Act of Parliament, passed 21st George II., 1748, for the regulation of the school and almshouses in Rugby, it was ordered by the founder, that out of the rents of the trust estate, £3. should be paid to the schoolmaster every quarter; and to the almsmen 7s. 6d.; and after the payment of all necessary charges, the residue was ordered to be divided in the same proportions. The almsmen, at that time, 1748, received £31. 13s. 4d. yearly, besides what was expended in clothes. By another Act of Parliament, 17th George III., 1777, the old almshouse had become ruinous, and the trustees had purchased other premises for them; and by this act, were empowered to build four more for old men of Rugby and Brownsover, who should be provided with a gown, of the value of 30s., and a load of coals, not less than 40 cwt., to each of them yearly; and should be paid such weekly allowance, not less than 3s. 6d., nor more than 4s. 6d., as the trustees should direct. By an Act of Parliament, 1814, the trustees were empowered to build any additional number of almshouses, at an expense not exceeding £2,000. A fourth act was passed, 7th of George IV., after which, the trustees built, with the £2,000. allowed, four additional almshouses, adjoining the eight before existing; and the old houses were fronted, so as to make one uniform range of buildings of stone, having a room above and one below, with a yard and coal-house and good garden behind. Each person receives 7s. a week, by quarterly payments, being the full allowance by the Act of Parliament; a blue cloth gown, with the letters L. S. on the body of the gown, and 44 cwt. of coals. If married, their wives are placed in the almshouse with them; and if single, and very infirm, some other person is placed with them. They are selected from the oldest men of good character in Rugby and Brownsover. There are now 9 of Rugby, and 3 of Brownsover. The weekly payments amount to £218. 8s. per annum.

Richard Elborow, of Rugby, by indenture, 1707, conveyed to Francis Burden, rector of Rugby and five others, and their heirs, the school-house and almshouse lately built in Rugby, a tenement on the north side of the school-house court, a tenement on the south side of the schoolhouse court, and two other tenements on the town's-end towards Bilton; a tenement in Cosford, in the parish of Newbold, with six closes called the Cow Pasture, containing 12 acres; the Pease Close, containing 10 acres; Great Foxholes and Little Foxholes, containing 18 acres; the New Close Meadow, containing 7 acres, Bennett's meadow, 3 acres; a cottage or barn in Cosford, called Brunt's House, with a close thereto; and an annuity of £10. out of a farm in Long Itchington, in the county of Warwick, to be paid at Lady-day and Michaelmas, upon the following trusts, viz.:—That the school-house should for ever be used for the teaching of 30 poor children of the parish of Rugby. That the tenement on the north side of the school court, should be for the habitation of the schoolmaster, freed from all taxes and charges; (Luke Jeayes, master.) That the almshouses should be for the habitation of six poor widows of the parish of Rugby. That the rents and profits, after paying all repairs, taxes, and charges, should be applied by the trustees to the uses of the school and almshouses. No boy to be admitted under the age of eight years, or girl under seven years of age. That the schoolmaster should be fully qualified to teach reading, writing, and arithmetic; and that he should be serviceable in teaching in the Latin school. No widow to be admitted to the almshouses under 60 years of age. That the master should read prayers to the children and widows, in the school, between eight and ten the morning, on days when there should be no service in the church, which they are to attend on Sundays and other days. The rents of the estate amount to £120. 8s. per annum; and the expenses amount to £90. 5s. The trustees meet twice a year at the school house.

John Woodford, by will, 1680, gave to the poor of Rugby, £60., provided the churchwardens and others of the town should buy £3. a year land, and dispose of it in the following manner, viz.:—10s. every quarter in bread to the poor; and on the last Sunday in May, 10s. to the minister, for preaching a sermon to excite the people to charity; and the other 10s. to be given in bread on that day. The land now called the White Bread Close, in Rugby, containing 2a. 2r. 8p. let at the yearly rent of £7. 10s., which is paid to the overseers, and given as directed.

Henry Holyoake, by will 1731, left £200. to go to the poor of Rugby, after the death of Elizabeth Holyoake. Mary Brooks, of Rugby, by will, 1738, gave to the churchwardens and overseers of Rugby, £20.; the interest to be distributed to poor widows of Rugby, in sixpenny loaves, on St. Thomas's day. By indenture, 1750, Joseph Bray conveyed to the churchwardens and overseers for the sum of £220., the above two legacies, several parcels of arable and meadow land, lying dispersedly in Sapcote, containing three-fourths and one-eighth of a yard land, or thereabouts, to the use of themselves, their heirs, &c., subject to the yearly payment of 1s. 3d. a chief rent, upon trust, to dispose of the rents in manner following to the poor of this parish, viz.:—20s. a year for sixpenny loaves, to be distributed to poor widows on St. Thomas's day, and to apply the residue for the use of the poor. The property at Sapcote consists of a barn and outbuilding, with land called the Well Springs and the Ransdells, and containing 24 acres, which were awarded at the enclosure of the open fields, in lieu of the original pieces: they are let for £45. per annum, which is given according to the intention of the donors.

Richard Elkington, by will, 1607, gave £50. to the mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Coventry, to be lent to five poor artificers or tradesmen of the town of Rugby, &c. This sum is still in the hands of the corporation of Coventry, by whom it is occasionally advanced in sums of £10. each, to poor men of the town of Rugby, recommended by the rector and churchwardens, at 4 per cent. The interest, £2., is paid to the churchwardens, and it is distributed equally to five poor persons on St. Thomas's day.

Edward Tyrrell, by will, 1614, gave to the parson and churchwardens of Rugby, to the use of the poor there, 20s. yearly, to be issuing out of his dwelling house in the parish of St. Dunstan, in Fleet street, London, and 2s. more, yearly, out of the said house, to pay for the distribution thereof; to be paid at the first of St. Andrew, the apostle, and is given to four poor women by the overseers.

Thomas Shingler, in 1616, gave to the Haberdashers' Company, of London, £100., in consideration whereof, the master and wardens were content to pay yearly, for ever, the sum of £5., whereof £4. 15s. was to be paid yearly to the parson and churchwardens of the town of "Rokbey," to be by them disposed of for the buying of twenty pennyworth of bread, to be weekly distributed to the poor at the church, which would amount to £4. 6s. 8d., and 6s. 8d. to be paid for a sermon yearly on the Saturday after the Epiphany, and distribute twenty pennyworth of bread to the poor after the sermon. The other 5s., the residue of the £5., of which 3s. 4d. to be for the four wardens of the said company, 1s. 4d. to the clerk of the company, and 4d. to his servant, which is distributed as directed.

Thomas Coxon, by will, gave £30., the benefit thereof to be distributed to the poor of Rugby, where he was born. Of this money £15. was lost prior to 1786, and the remainder was laid out on the workhouse; but was afterwards invested, with other monies, in the purchase of three pews in the parish church, and the income is carried to the general charity estate.

T. Wheatley. (See Bablake Boys' Hospital, Coventry.) The churchwardens receive £2. annually from the corporation of Coventry, which is given away to four poor men of Rugby, one named by the rector, two by the churchwardens, and one by the overseers.

Henry Jackson, by the returns of 1786, is stated to have given 10s. a year to the poor, but nothing is now known of this charity.

Mrs. Vaughan, by will, gave 10s. for a sermon on Whit Monday, and 10s. to the poor of the parish. This is chargeable on property belonging to William Cowdell, Esq.; 10s. is paid to the rector for a sermon, and 10s. is given in bread.

Mrs. Knight, by will, gave £10., which the churchwardens made up £12. This is supposed to have been employed in the purchase of the pews in the church, noticed with Coxon's charity, and since 1816, the interest is considered to be included in the £6. 4s., the rent of them.

William Strong, by indenture, 1716, in pursuance of the desire of his late son, Thos. Strong, gave 5s. a year to the poor of Rugby on St. Thomas's day, yearly, in white bread; and also for a further charity of 5s. a year, as his own gift, granted to the churchwardens, and their successors, an annuity of 10s., to be issuing at the feast of St. Thomas, from a little close in Dog lane, now the property of William Cowdell, Esq., whose tenant pays the charge, which is given in bread on St. Thomas's day.

Anne Blake, by will, 1724, gave £5. per annum to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of Rugby, to be by them distributed amongst the poor of the said parish, charged on an estate in Churchover, now the property of Henry Grimes, Esq. This sum of £5. is paid by the tenant, and forms part of a sum of £25. appropriated out of the general charity fund, assisted by private subscriptions to the amount of about £10. more, which is given in prizes to the industrious poor on the first of June yearly. This plan was introduced about 20 years ago, and has produced beneficial effects.

Miss Catherine Butlin, of Rugby, in 1848, erected six neat cottages, near Walker street, for six poor widows of Rugby, who pay only sixpence per week each, as an acknowledgment.

RYTON-UPON-DUNSMOOR, a pleasant village and parish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. from Coventry, was one of the twenty four places given by Leofric to the monks of Coventry; but they soon disposed of it, and in the Conqueror's time, Turchill de Warwick was the owner. In the 7th of Edward I., Thomas de Arden held the manor under the Earl of Warwick, and certain lands and two mills belonged to the Abbey of Thorney and the Hospitalers. At the dissolution the manor was granted to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, and on the death of his son again reverting to the Crown, Elizabeth granted it to Crew and Cartwright, who sold it to Thomas Dilke, Esq., an ancestor of the present lord of the manor. In 1841, here were 127 houses and 534 inhabitants, 1801, 324; 1821, 498; 1831, 510; and 2063 acres of land, rateable value, £3008.16s. 9d. The principal land owners are Capt. Thomas Dilke, the Dean of Litchfield, Mr. Francis Eburne, Stephen Freeman, Esq., the former is lord of the manor, several others have also small estates here. This parish is tithe free. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is partly in the early English style of architecture, consists of nave, chancel, gallery, and tower, in which there are four good bells; it also contains several ancient monuments. The living, a perpetual curacy, V. K. B., £11.6s. 8d., now £113., augmented with £800. private benefactions, and £1400. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of the Prebendary of Ryton, in the Cathedral Church of Litchfield, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Lickorish, for whom the Rev. John Jaques Wedge, officiates.

Knightlow Cross, about a mile distant from the village, formerly stood upon the summit of a tumulus, close to the turnpike road; a large block of stone still remains, into which the shaft was fixed; in the hollow of this stone certain payments from 35 various places in the hundred of Knightlow, to the lord of the manor, called wrath money, are obliged to be made before sunrise on Martinmas day, or a forfeiture of 30s. and a white bull, is incurred. From this tumulus the surrounding country, with the graceful spires of Coventry in the distance, produce a very pleasing effect.

CHARITIES.— Dilke, gave by deed, £30. to the poor. William Dilke, Esq., of Maxtock Castle, who is the owner of an estate in Ryton, pays 30s. annually to the churchwardens and overseers, which is distributed in bread at Christmas.

Thomas Bayes left a close in Ryton, called the Poores' Meadow, containing about one acre, now let for £3. 10s. per annum, which is given away in bread with the preceding charity.

Dorothy Radbourne gave £1. 10s. to the poor, which, in 1786, produced 1s. 6d. a year; but nothing is now known of it.

STRETTON-UPON-DUNSMOOR, a parish and large well-built village, 6 miles S.E. from Coventry, was held at the Conquest by Rodger de Montgomery. The manor was, in the reign of Edward I., sold to Robert de Herig, and afterwards passing through the families of Hastings, Bray, Starkey, and Longvile, was purchased in 1620, by Richard Taylor, of Binley. This township contained in 1841, 165 houses, and 802 inhabitants; and 1,794a. 0r. 33p. of land. The entire parish, including the hamlet and township of Princethorpe, contains 2,788a. 3r. 27p. of land; and in 1841, 1,080 inhabitants; 1801, 634; 1821, 760; 1831, 817; rateable value, £4,395. 10s. 8d. The principal land owners for the township of Stretton, are Messrs. Draper and Herbert, Mrs. Noyes, Alfred Caswell, D. J. Robinson, and several others have estates here; Lord John Scott is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a beautiful stone edifice, situate on a commanding eminence, the first stone of which was laid on Whit-Tuesday, June 9th, 1835, and consecrated Whit-Tuesday, May 16th, 1837; and cost £5,232. 14s. 2d. The Rev. William Daniel, formerly vicar of this parish, left, by will, £4,000., subject to the life of his widow, for the above purpose. The living is a vicarage, value £438. in the patronage of F. Fauquier, Esq., for two turns; and the Rev. Harry Townsend Powell, M. A. one, who is the present incumbent. The vicarage is a neat brick building, pleasantly situate opposite the church. Gardeners' Allotment Association, under the superintendence of the Rev. H. T. Powell, established 1825, for the benefit of the poor cottagers, each having about 20 perches.

Warwick County Asylum, for Juvenile Delinquents, is a neat brick building, pleasantly situate about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E., established 1818, for boys, convicted criminals from all parts of the county, from 14 to 16 years of age, who are kept two years, and are employed in making shoes and clothing; it is supported by voluntary contributions, and is managed by a committee of Magistrates; Rev. H. T. Powell, honorary secretary and chaplain; William and Eliza Harvey, master and matron.

PRINCETHORPE, a township and small scattered village, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. by W. from Southam; in 1841, here were 38 houses and 278 inhabitants, and 994a. 3r. 4p. of land; rateable value, £1,803. 14s. In the time of Henry VI. this came to the Hugfords, of Emscote, and remained in that family until the 9th of Henry VIII., when John Hugford sold it to Sir Wm. Compton. This hamlet, together with Stretton, was included within the parish of Wolstone, until the 7th and 8th of William and Mary, when for the convenience of the inhabitants, and upon the endowment of Stretton with £40. a year, by Wm. Herbert, an act was passed to separate them. The principal land-owners are William Peareth, Esq., — Whieldon, Esq., and the ladies of St. Mary's Priory; the former is lord of the manor. St. Mary's Priory, for Nuns of the order of St. Benedict, situate $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. W., forms an extensive range of brick buildings, commenced July, 1833, and contains now upwards of 100, most of whom are of the above order. The buildings comprise an area of two acres, and the gardens, which are surrounded with a high wall, are about the same extent; there is also a pleasant walk one mile long for exercise. The Church is built in the gothic style of architecture, on the south side, and is a neat edifice, with a low steeple, in which are three small bells and a clock; at the south end is a beautiful altar piece, richly inlaid with marble, sculptured in Rome; the interior is fitted up with carved oak sittings, and canopies over the doors richly carved; there are also several marble figures, a handsome stained glass window, and a good organ. The Mortuary Chapel, which is used on funeral occasions, is fitted up in the Norman style, and contains a neat stone altar. The Cemetery is a neat circular building, in the vaults of which several have been interred. The school is commodious, will accommodate 40; there are pupils from various parts of England and from abroad, Rev. George Turner, and Rev. Dr. Ackurone, priests. St. Mary's School for boys and girls, opened 1843, is supported by the ladies of the Priory; Miss Taylor, mistress. The Bazaar, in the strangers' apartment, contains some beautiful specimens of work by the ladies.

CHARITIES.—Rev. William Daniel, by will, 1812, bequeathed £4000. to his wife, Sarah Daniel, her executors, administrators, and assigns, upon trust, at her discretion, to invest the same upon securities, for her own use; and, after her decease, upon trust, that her executors, &c. should transfer such sum of £4000. to the Lord Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and the Archdeacon of Lichfield and Coventry, and their successors, upon trust, to receive the dividends thereof, and from time to time to invest the same in the public funds; and when such £4000., with the accumulations thereof, should become sufficient, then to dispose thereof in taking down the parish church of Stretton-on-Dunsmore, or such part as was necessary, and rebuilding of it. Mr. Daniel died in 1816, and his executrix invested the said £4000. in the purchase of £4885. 10s. Three per cent. consols. Mrs. Daniel died in 1829, after which the Stock was transferred, leaving, after the payment of the legacy duty, for which a part was sold, £4285. 10s. remaining. Proceedings were afterwards instituted in the Court of Chancery for the due administration of the Charity, and an Act of Parliament for taking down the old parish church, and building a new one received the royal assent, April 20th, 1833. The trustees, after the payment of all the expenses and costs, were, in February, 1834, possessed of £4278. 13s. 7d. in the Three per cent. consols, which if sold at £90., would produce about £3,850.; the estimate for a new church being only £4,200.

Poor's Plot.—By indenture, 2nd June, 1704, for the enclosure of 1700 acres of land in this parish, with the common pasture on the heath and other places, in which were certain pieces of land belonging to the poor of this parish, and by which it was agreed that John Shuckburgh, Esq. and seven others and their heirs, should stand seised of all the plots laid out for the use of the poor, in lieu of the ancient lands mentioned, and should have power, or depute the parish officers the power, to let the said lands, who should be accountable to the trustees. These estates are now let for £168. 8s. 6d. After deducting expenses for repairs, the remainder is divided, on St. John's day, 27th of December, among all the poor of the parish, and given in coals, according to the number in each family, varying from 11s. to 30s. The total sum given in 1831, was upwards of £90.

Church and Poor's Land, of which the origin is unknown. Three closes of land containing about 12 acres in the whole, and known by the name of Denchwood, comprise this property; they are let for £26. 3s. 6d. One half of the clear rents is carried to the church rate account and the other half carried to coal distribution account.

William Herbert, by will, 1694, devised to his cousin, Francis Chamberlain and his heirs all his lands and tenements in Stretton, in the county of Warwick, in trust to pay yearly out of the rents and profits, £12. to three aged men and three aged widows, and upon further trust to pay 20s. for the yearly preaching of two sermons at Stretton Church, one on Ascension day, and the other on the 21st. of October. And upon further trust, to employ the residue in putting out one poor boy or girl of Stretton to some trade every two years. At the inclosure of Stretton, in 1772, certain lands were, for the Stretton charity lands, awarded to Francis Fauquier and three others and the churchwardens of Stretton and to their heirs and assigns. The property contains 30a. and 30p. and is let for the annual rent of £105. Under the sanction of an opinion of the Attorney General, part of the income since the year 1786 has been applied to the use of a school. The expenditure is as follows :—£35. a year is given in annuities to poor persons of Stretton, £1. 10s. is paid for two sermons, £43. is the schoolmaster's salary, £9. 6s. 8d. for other contingencies of the school and for insurance, £7. is given towards the fund of a clothing society, and £4. for apprenticing, making a total of £99. 16s. 8d. The school house and school room were built before the year 1786 by a subscription of the parishioners, and a donation of £50. from the Rev. William Daniel, then vicar, and on land conveyed by Mrs. Smith to the trustees for that purpose. The school is in union with the National School Society; it contains 34 boys and 33 girls all of Stretton, who are taught free and are supplied with books and all school requisites, they are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, and the girls sewing by the master's wife. One apprentice is put out every two years. Edward Fossey, master; and Mary Ann Johnson, mistress.

Mary Turner, (see Bubbenhall.) The sum of £4. 3s. 9d. was received for arrears in 1832, and the annual payment of 6s. 8d. has since been paid and given to the poor.

Elizabeth Taylor, by will, left the sum of £3. from an estate in Stretton, now (1833) the property of Mrs. Noyes, to be paid every seventh year, and applied towards putting out an apprentice; due in 1848.

Henry Johnson, by will, 1719, gave 10s. yearly to the poor of this parish, charged on his lands and tenements there. Mr. Timothy Johnson, the present (1834) owner, pays the 10s. yearly for bread, which he distributes at the church on the first Sunday in the year.

Allotment Lands.—By an award, under an Act of Parliament, for the inclosure of Princethorpe Commonfield, 18th December, 1762, certain lands were awarded to the trustees of the poor of Stretton and Princethorpe, in lieu of ancient lands belonging thereto. These estates, now, (1834) are let for £16. 10s. per annum, of which £12. is applied in the purchase of coals for the poor of Stretton; and £4. 10s. is divided amongst the poor of the hamlet of Princethorpe.

William Smith. (See Stockton.)—Four shillings worth of bread is brought annually at Easter, by a baker of Thurlaston, to the parish clerk, which he distributes; sixteen to the poor of Stretton, and eight to the poor of Princethorpe.

WILLOUGHBY, a parish and pleasing rural village $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. from Rugby; this place, in the neighbourhood of which many Roman antiquities have been discovered, is in Domesday-book called Wilbere and Wilebei, from which its present name is derived. It was a royal demesne in the reign of Henry I., who gave it to Wigan, one of his servants, by one of whose descendants it was granted, in the reign of Henry III., to the hospital of St. John, founded by that monarch, without the east gate at Oxford, in the 17th year of his reign. On the dissolution of which, in the reign of Henry VI., William de Wainfleet, Bishop of Winchester, having obtained a grant of the site for a foundation of Magdalene College, procured from the master and brethren the manor of Willoughby, which at present forms part of the endowment of that institution. The parliamentary army, in their retreat from the battle of Edge Hill, passed through the village, and fastened a rope round the ancient cross, with the intention of pulling it down, from which they were dissuaded by the vicar. Willoughby was formerly a place of much more importance than it is at present, having enjoyed a market and fairs, to which, from the name of a small hamlet in the parish, called "Pie Court," probably a court of pie-powder was attached; part of the foundation of a public gaol was discovered by some labourers, in digging for gravel near the Church. The village is situated near the high road from London to Hollyhead, and extends in a westerly direction, for nearly three quarters of a mile; the houses, which are chiefly ancient with thatched roofs, occasionally interspersed with a few of more modern construction, have a very rural appearance, and the whole village has a pleasing air of tranquility and retirement. The lands in the neighbourhood are fertile and in a high state of cultivation, and the environs abound with pleasing scenery and with various objects of interest. Within the last thirty years, Willoughby has been growing into notice from the discovery of a powerful sulphurous and saline spring, which was first discovered about 50 years ago, whilst boring for soft water to supply the farm house; the well is 104 feet deep, and affords an abundant supply of water, its most distinguishing feature is the quantity of sulphuretted hydrogen gas dissolved in it; but with this there is also present a large proportion of saline matter, containing, amongst other substances, a small quantity of carbonate of iron. The gases contained in the water, are sulphuretted, hydrogen, and carbonic acid, with a trace of nitrogen. The salts are muriate of soda, and sulphate of soda, these forming by far the largest proportion of saline matter present; sulphate of lime is also in abundance, the water appears to be nearly saturated with it, but is not an abundantly soluble salt; there is also a minute trace of muriate of magnesia, a small quantity carbonate of lime, iron and soda. The baths are 7 miles S. from Rugby, 16 S. E. from Coventry, and 5 from Daventry; comfortable accommodation, with board and lodgings on reasonable terms, are afforded by the proprietor, Mr. Edmund Edmunds, at his farm house, which is large and commodious, adjoining the baths and springs, delightfully situated on a commanding eminence on the bank of the river Leam, affording a beautiful prospect of the hills of Shuckburgh, Flecknoe, and Napton in this county, and Staverton, and Catesby, in Northamptonshire.

This parish contained in 1841, 108 houses and 446 inhabitants, in 1801, 319; 1821, 421; 1831, 376; and 1,674a. Or. 32p. of land, rateable value, £2964. 5s. The principal land owners are the President and Fellows of Magdalene College, Oxford, Richard Sprengatt, Thomas Drayson, Thomas Newbold, George Mallarber, William Ellard, and Samuel Walker, Esqs., the former are lords of the manor, several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small neat structure, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and low square embattled tower, in which is a peal of 6 good bells and a set of chimes; the church has recently been restored, and contains several ancient monuments. The living is a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £9. 4s. 4d., now £217., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the President and Fellows of Magdalene College, Oxford, and incumbency of the Rev. T. H. Whorwood, D.D., for whom the Rev. J. R. Quirk, B.A., officiates. The Vicarage is a large and commodious residence near the Church, built 1836, by the Rev. Richard Tawney. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here.

CHARITIES.—John Hayward, and Margaret his wife, by deed, in the 15th year of King Henry VI., did give all their lands and tenements in Willoughby, and Woolscott, Wallcott, Little Hardwick, Bradwell and Thurlaston, to William Bartlett and others, their heirs and assigns, in trust, to employ yearly the issues thereof towards the repairs of the church of Willoughby, the payment of the fifteenths, and relief of the poor there, setting forth of soldiers, mending highways and causeways, and part of Sawbridge bridge in Willoughby. William Flavell, by deed 11th of Henry VII., gave to Thomas Watson and others, their heirs and assigns, one yearly rent of 4s. issuing out of his lands in Woolscott and Wallcott, payable at Michaelmas and Lady day, to the intent that when any fifteenth should be granted to the King, the said rent should go to the discharge of the tenants of Willoughby, and to the repairing the causeways &c. Also, the Trustees of Hayward's charity purchased in the 27th year of Henry VIII. of John Brookes, certain lands in Thurlaston, as feoffees in trust, to employ the yearly issues thereof to the said charitable uses. By the award of the Commissioners, March, 8th, 1760, under the inclosure act, there was an allotment to the trustees of the poor of Willoughby, in lieu of certain other lands containing 83a. 2r. 4p. The property consists of other estates at Kites Hardwick, at Foxley in Thurlaston, at Sawbridge and others at Thurlaston, and a rent charge of 4s. a year out of a farm at Woolscott; the entire annual income being £452. 11s. 2d. The average annual expenditure for six years previous to 1832, was £478. 4s. 8d.

A school was founded 1816, and a house for the master and mistress, at the cost of £430. paid by the trustees; children of both sexes are gratuitously instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic, and the girls in needle-work, by a master and mistress appointed by the trustees, with a salary of £58. per annum; John and Eliza Steane. The remainder of the income, after deducting the expense of repairing the church and roads, is appropriated to apprenticing children, as gratuities to females entering service, weekly payments to the poor, donations of coals, and other charitable distributions.

The affairs of this charity have been the subject of much litigation at law and in equity; and, in 1831, owing to a dispute with the schoolmaster, several of the trustees have been ruined.

Captain George Watson, by will 1674, gave to the poor of this parish the sum of £50. to be disposed of according to the will of the minister for the time being. After the death of the testator, in 1677, the minister appointed the said legacy to be paid into the hands of the trustees of Hayward's charity, on trust, to lay out the same in the purchase of land, and out of rents to pay, on the 23rd of April and the 15th of July, 10s. at each time to the poor people of the parish, at the discretion of the minister and overseers; and should also, on the first Sunday in every month, after evening service in the parish church, deliver to the value of 3s. 4d. in bread, or such other quantity as the income would bear; after some delay the money was paid to the trustees above named; and as nothing further appears respecting it, it is supposed to have been blended with the general accounts of that trust; and it is recommended to the trustees to appropriate the interest specifically agreeable to the decision above named.

Bridget Freemante, by will 1772, gave £20, to the poor; this, in 1773, was vested with the trustees of Hayward's charity, and 20s. as interest to be paid on St. Thomas's day. No specific payments appear to have been made for this charity, and it is recommended to the trustees the making a distribution on St. Thomas's day in respect of it.

WOLSTON, a large cheerful village and parish, situate on the banks of the Avon, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. S. E. from Coventry, is partly in the Kirby but principally in the Rugby division, and includes the hamlets of Brandon, Bretford and Marston, and was a possession of the Norman Earl, Roger Montgomery, who passed it away to the founder of the Fitz Alan family. In the 33rd of Henry I., the lordship belonged to Roger de Fredvill, who gave certain portions of land to the monks of Burton, and subsequently other portions to those of Kenilworth, Alcester, and Combe; soon afterwards the manor was possessed by the Turvills, and in the 10th of Richard II. came to Sir William Bagot, whose daughter, in the time of Henry V., passed it to the Canons of Kenilworth without license, and being seized into the King's hands in the 6th of Henry VI., was granted to Verney and Throckmorton, and in Dugdale's time the owner was George Warner, gent. Here was an alien priory, supposed to be founded by Earl Roger Montgomery, and subordinate to the abbey of St. Peter, super dinam, in France, one of whose abbots, in the 18th of Richard II., sold this cell to the Carthusians, near Coventry. In 1841, the entire parish contained 1,137 inhabitants; in 1801, 577; 1821, 945; 1831, 965; and 4,497a. 2r. 33p. of land; rateable value, £7,769. The principal land owners are Jeremiah Birditt, James Beach, W. K. Rose, Esqrs., Lord Kendlesham, Edward Ousman, H. Seymour, Esqrs.; Rev. Richard Lickorish, and William Wilcox, Esq.; the latter is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a large cruciform structure, was evidently built at various periods; the tower, probably of Norman architecture. On the south side is a very ancient round headed doorway, the interior is plain, but in the south wall of the chancel are three stone recesses, with seats for the priests. The living a vicarage, V. K. B. £15. 10s. gross income not returned; Lady Scott, patron; the Rev. James Currall Roberts, for whom the Rev. Randolph Skipwith, officiates. Tithes commuted, 1849, at £79. 15s. The Particular Baptists have a large neat chapel here, erected, 1818, Rev. George Jones, minister. The parish school for boys, was built by subscription, 1834, is a neat brick building; average attendance, 60, Charles Branstons master. The girls' school, erected 1838, by Mrs. Ann Congreve Seymour, and is supported by subscription, average attendance 60, Caroline Shettle, mistress.

Wolston Heath Cottage, 8 miles E. from Coventry, is a handsome brick building, in the gothic style of architecture, in front of which is a lawn tastefully arranged, and is the seat and property of William Rose, Esq.

Wolston Manor House is a large neat brick building near the church, is the seat and property of William Wilcox, Esq.

Brandon, a joint hamlet with Bretford in the Kirby division, 6 miles E.S.E. from Coventry; in 1841 here were 55 houses and 252 inhabitants, and 1,782 acres of land; was at the Conquest, a possession of Turchill de Warwick, and descended through a female Clinton to the Verdons, who, it is supposed built a castle here, the remains of which are still visible near to the Avon, consisting of some massive fragments of rude masonry. Early in the reign of Edward IV. the manor devolved to Sir Robert Willoughby, of Eresby, a member of which family sold it to Sir Henry Yelverton, whose descendants, Viscounts Longueville, retained it for several generations. James Beach, Esq., is lord of the manor, and principal owner.

Brandon Lodge, a neat residence, 6 miles S.E. from Coventry, the seat of John William Rhodes, Esq.

Bretford, a joint hamlet with Brandon, is a small village $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. from Coventry; contained, in 1841, 33 houses, and 148 inhabitants; was held by the celebrated Geoffry de Clinton whose son, in the time of Henry II., founded "a cell of two or three black nuns here," and Farmer mentions an Hospital or Chapel of St. Edmund also, in the 34th of Edward III.

Marston, a hamlet, township, and small village, 6 miles E. by S. from Coventry; in 1841, here were 53 houses and 250 inhabitants; was, early in the reign of Henry IV. called Breton's Manor, being then held by Guido de Breton; it afterwards came to Thomas Wodelow, thence to Medley and Hugford, and has since gone with the manor of Wolston.

CHARITIES.—School Payment. A payment of £5. is annually made by the vicar, out of the Glebe lands awarded to him in lieu of the great tithes arising out of three yard lands given by Paul Wentworth. This sum is paid to a schoolmaster, who also receives £25. a year from voluntary subscriptions, for teaching all the poor children of the village.

Clerk's Close.—By Indenture, 1831. the close supposed to have been set out at the inclosure, upwards of a century ago, was conveyed to the Vicar of Woolston and four others, in trust, to permit the churchwardens of Woolston to receive the rents, and apply the same as follows, viz: three fifth parts thereof to the reparation of the parish church, and the other two fifths to the use of the parish clerk. This, the church land, contains 8a. 0r. 15p., now (1833) let for £20. per annum, which is carried to the churchwarden's account, out of which the clerk's salary is paid.

Sir Peter Wentworth. On account of this charity £9. is received from John Ridge, resident at Lillingstone Lovell, on St. Thomas's day. This money has always been applied in putting out apprentices.

Mary Turner, (see Bubbenhall.) In 1832, the sum of £4. 3s. 9½d. was received on account of arrears, since which the annual sum of 6s. 8d. is received and distributed to the poor.

Dorothy Radburne gave £1. 10s., for which, in 1753, the sum of 1s. 6d. was paid as the interest; but nothing is now known of it.

Comprises eighteen parishes, and seven extra parochial liberties, viz., Birdingbury, Chapel Ascote, extra par.; Granborough, Hardwick Priors, Hodnell Lower or Wells Pastures, extra par.; Hodnell Upper, extra par.; Hunningham, Hydes Pastures, extra par.; Itchington (Bishop's), Itchington (Long), Ludbrooke, Leamington Hastings, Marston Priors, Marton, Napton-on-the-Hill, Radbourn (Lower), extra par; Radbourn (Upper) extra par.; Shuckburgh inferior, Shuckburgh superior, Southam, Stockton, Wappenbury, Watergall, extra par.; Weston-under-Weatherley, and Wolfhamcote. In 1841 here were 1,886 inhabited houses, 80 uninhabited and 8 building, and 9,018 inhabitants of whom 4608 were males and 4413 females; of these numbers, 2,028 males and 1,971 females were under 20 years of age, 2,580 males and 2,442 females were 20 years and upwards, 7,900 persons were born in this county and 1,118 elsewhere; total acres of land, 41,500.

BIRDINGBURY, a parish, and small straggling village, $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles N. by E. from Southam, containing 1034a.1r.34p. of land, in 1841, 66 houses, and 201 inhabitants; 1801, 121; 1821, 213; 1831, 212; rateable value, £1346.9s.9d.; was given to the monastery at Coventry by Earl Leofric, and sold by the monks to the Hastings of Allesley. After various transfers it was obtained by Sir Charles Wheeler, Bart, in 1674; and in 1687, Lady Dorothy Wheeler conveyed it to Simon Biddulph, Esq. The land owners are now Sir Theophilus Biddulph, Bart., Rev. Henry Biddulph, Mr. Thomas Masters, and Mr. Thomas Bond; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a small ancient edifice, and consists of nave, chancel, and gallery, in which there is a good organ. The living, a discharged rectory, value K.B. £7. 10s. now £140., augmented with £200. private benefaction, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of Sir T. Biddulph, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Biddulph. The Rectory is a neat stone residence on the South side of the church.

Birdingbury Hall, $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles N. by E. from Southam, is a large ancient stone mansion, with projecting wings, and small portico in the centre; is pleasantly situated, and is the seat and property of Sir Theophilus Biddulph, Bart.

Here is a small wharf, 2 miles S. by E. which is used for coal and corn.

Directory.—Sir Theophilus Biddulph, Bart., The Hall; Rev. Henry Biddulph, B.A., Rectory; Thos. Chambers, bricklayer; Geo. Creed, vict., Boat Inn; Jph. Lane, parish clerk; John Munro, carpenter; and Thos. Alibone, Rd. Blundell, Fields; Thos. Bond, and maltster, T. Masters, Isaac Steane, Wm. Steane, Hy. Truslove, and Wm. Warr, farmers.

Chapel Ascote, an extra parochial liberty, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by N, from Southam, contains 605 acres of land, and, in 1841, one house, and ten inhabitants. Wm. Palmer Morewood, Esq., owner, and Nathaniel Stilgoe, farmer, is the occupier.

GRANDBOROUGH, a parish and small scattered village, 6 m. N.E. from Southam, and has, with the hamlets of Woolscott and Calcutt, 4,205 acres of land, and, in 1841, 111 houses, and 532 inhabitants; 1801, 407; 1821, 483; 1831, 528; rateable value, £3972. 9s. 8d. This was given by Leofric to the priory of Coventry. A part of the manor was held by the King, and, after various transmissions, was, in Dugdale's time, the property of John Hill. The possessions of the priory were granted, in the 7th of Edward VI., to Edward Aglionby and Henry Hugford. The principal owners are Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart, Wm. Lucas Sutton, Philip Duncombe, Wm. Wratishaw, Peter Henry Fuller, and Chas. Robinson, Esqs.; the latter is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and having a neat spire, in which there are five bells. In 1848, the spire was repaired at a cost of £80.; and, in 1849, a beautiful altar piece, and stained glass window were added. The living is a discharged vicarage, V. K. B., £5. now £185., augmented with £600. private benefactions, and £600. Queen Anne's bounty, (in 1804 the Bishop presented by lapse) Mrs. Halse, patron and the Rev. Wm. John Wise, M.A. incumbent. The Vicarage is a neat brick residence, a little south from the church, was erected by the present vicar. A National School was built 1844, cost £260., raised by subscription, and a grant from the National Society; Charles Robinson, Esq., gave the site. It will accommodate 90; average, 50. John Lawrence master; and Elizabeth Eayles, mistress.

Woolscott, a small hamlet, consisting of a few scattered houses, one mile N. by E. Calcutt, another hamlet, consists only of three farms, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N. E. by E.

CHARITIES.—Donor Unknown. The sum of £3. is annually paid from a piece of ground at Woolscott, in this parish, called Levell's Close, which was purchased by Mr. Atkins, in 1814, subject to this payment. It is given away by the churchwardens, at Easter, to the poor.

John Goode gave £5. to the poor, the use to be given at Easter. Joannah Goode, daughter of the said John Goode, gave £10.; the use to be given to the poor, at Easter; also, a sum of £43. 10s., rendering an interest of £2. 3s. 6d., had been given by an unknown donor. These sums, with a small addition from the parish funds, were, in 1822, lent to the parish of Leamington Hastings, to be applied in building a house of industry. The interest, at five per cent., being £3. a year, is regularly paid, and given away to the poor at Christmas.

William Smith. (See Stockton.) Four shillings worth of bread is sent to the parish on Easter Sunday, which is distributed, by the churchwardens, to the poor who attend.

HARDWICK (PRIORS), a parish and small village, $5\frac{3}{4}$ miles S. E. from Southam, was, until of late, in the Burton Dassett division of Kineton hundred. In 1841, here were 60 houses, and 280 inhabitants; in 1801, 228; 1821, 263; 1831, 296; and 1600 acres of land; rateable value, £2,628. 3s. 4d. This was one of the 24 places given by Earl Leofric to the monks of Coventry. After the dissolution, it was in part granted, together with Offchurch, to Sir Edmund Knightly, Knight, and Valentine, his brother; the latter of whom alienated the estate to Sir John Spencer, Knight; and after several changes, it became the property of William, Lord Spencer. The Right Hon. Lord Chandos Leigh, John Hall, Esq., Mrs. Beck, and George Wells, Esq., are the principal owners; the former is lord of the manor; Mr. William Fairbrother and Mr. William Burden are also freeholders. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice; consists of nave, chancel, and tower. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Priors Marston and the perpetual curacy of Lower Shuckburgh annexed; value in the King's Book, £23. 16s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; now, £480.; Earl Spencer, patron, and the Rev. John Monkhouse Knott, B.A., incumbent. Great tithe, £46. 10s., is the property of Mrs. Beck. The vicarage, a neat and good house.

CHARITIES.—By the returns of 1786, a sum of £30., for the use of the poor, was then vested in Thomas Heyrick. It is said to be the residue of £60. bequeathed by a labouring man of this parish; the other part having been lost. It is now vested in the hands of the overseers of the parish; and the interest, 30s., is distributed at Lady Day, amongst poor labourers of the parish, in small sums.

Directory.—John Burden, butcher; Wm. Burden, vict., Butchers' Arms; Rd. Haynes, blacksmith; Rev. John Monkhouse Knott, B.A., vicar, vicarage; Thos. Mole, blacksmith; John Prestage, grazier; Mrs. Sarah Reading, Mr. Wm. Reading, Thos. Sharp, carpenter; John Smith, grazier; and Rd. Bolton, Edward Burden, John Fessey, Thos. Luckuck, John Reading, sen. and jun., and Wm. John Reading, farmers. Carriers.—Geo. Hancock and Geo. Prestage, to Banbury, Thur.; Leamington, Thur. and Sat.

HODNELL LOWER, OR WELLS PASTURES, an extra parochial liberty, 4 miles S. from Southam, containing 146 acres of land, 40 acres of which are glebe, belonging to the living of Wormleighton. In 1841, here were 2 houses, and 13 inhabitants; rateable value, £177. Mr. Wm. Sutton Crofts is the owner. Mr. Wm. Kingerlee, farmer, The Hall.

HODNELL UPPER, another extra parochial liberty, 3 miles S. by E. from Southam, in which are 511 acres of land, and in 1841, two houses, and 14 inhabitants; rateable value, £606.; "was once a place of large extent," says Dugdale, having a great population and a Church. It is mentioned in Domesday; and in the time of Henry II. was principally possessed by the nuns of Nuneaton, and the monks of Combe; the latter portion, which was reputed a manor, was disposed of in the 16th of Edward IV., to William Catesby, Esq.; but the nuns retained their manor until the dissolution. Here was anciently a chapel, dedicated to St. Helen, which was standing in the time of Henry VIII., but now there are no remains. Henry Thomas Hope, Esq., is owner; and Thomas Russell, farmer, Manor House, is the occupier.

HUNNINGHAM, a parish and pleasant scattered village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by N. from Southam; in 1841 here were 63 houses and 224 inhabitants; 1801, 185; 1821, 193; 1831, 212; and 1089 acres of land; rateable value £1742. 11s.;—derived its name from a Saxon owner, and was, at the Conquest, possessed by the family of Corbican, one of whom, in the reign of John, on account of the dangerous passage to the mother church when the "Leame exceeded its bounds," gave certain lands, &c. to the rector of Wappenbury and his successors, for the maintenance of a priest to perform Divine service in his chapel at Hunningham; which was soon afterwards appropriated to the Priory of Monks of Kirby, and subsequently to the monks of Sulby, in the county of Northampton. The manor, after being held during several reigns, by the families of Cotes and Cokesey, was sold, in 1695, to Thomas, Lord Leigh. The principal landowners are the Rt. Hon. Chandos Lord Leigh, Rev. W. Cleaver, the Misses Watson, Hon. Lord Clifford, and Mr. Joseph Ball; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Margaret, consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, and small wood tower, in which are two bells. The Church contains several ancient monuments. The living, a perpetual curacy, V.K.B. £5., now £68., augmented with £30. private benefactions, £200. Queen Anne's bounty, and £200. parliamentary grant, in the patronage of the Right Hon. Chandos Lord Leigh, and incumbency of the Rev. George Leigh Cook, B.D.

Private Asylum, a neat brick building, established 1846, by Mr. James Thomas Harcourt, will accommodate 78.

CHARITIES.—Richard Cox, by will, 1700, gave 10s. to the poor of this parish, to be paid them on the 24th of February, out of his cottage there. This is now the property of Mr. George Watson, whose tenants pay the rent charge, which is distributed to poor parishioners.

Mary Garlick, by will, left £10., to the use of poor distressed widows; this sum remains in the hands of the overseers for the time being, being annually handed over to them; the interest 10s. is given away at Easter, to poor widows.

Church Land.—A parcel of land containing $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres, let at the annual rent of £5., is received by the churchwardens and carried to their church account. They also receive a payment of 2s. 6d., and one of 5s. a year, in respect of certain small portions of land, but how they have been obtained is unknown.

Directory.—Jph. Ball, carpenter and parish clerk; John Barnacle, vict. and maltster, Red Lion; John Berry, wheelwright, The Hill; Thos. Campbell, baker and shopkeeper; Wm. Claridge, tailor; Wm. Gibbins, carpenter; Jas. Thos. Harcourt, private asylum; Thos. Russell, baker and shopkeeper; John Sylvester, shoemaker; Chas. and John Watkins, shoemakers, and John Coleman, The Hill; Bethell Geo. Garlick, Snowford, Wm. Hall; Edward Shepherd, Hunningham House; and Wm. Cattle Smith, Hunningham Hall, farmers.

Hydes Pastures, an extra parochial liberty, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from Nuneaton, contains 160 acres of land, and in 1841, 4 houses, 21 inhabitants. T. B. Troughton, Esq., owner, and George Gilbert, occupier.

ITCHINGTON (BISHOP'S) a parish comprised of the hamlets of lower and upper Itchington, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. from Southam, contains 3026a. 2r. 8p. of land, and in 1841, 118 houses, and 463 inhabitants; in 1801, 370; 1821, 430; 1831, 421; rateable value, £3,235 10s.; this was one of the 24 places given by Earl Leofric, to the monastery, founded by him at Coventry. The parish church was formerly at Lower Itchington, but was pulled down on the depopulation of this part, in the time of Henry VIII., and the chapel of ease, at Upper Itchington, became the parish church. In the reign of Henry III. it was a market town, and had a fair, lasting three days. This village being the property of the Bishops of Coventry and Litchfield, was granted by Bishop Sampson, early in the reign of Edward VI., to Thomas Fisher, Esq., who pulled down the church for the building of a large manor house, and in vain endeavoured to perpetuate his memory there; actually changed the name from Bishop's to Fisher's Itchington, but is only remembered as the ruthless depopulator. The principal land-owners are H. T. Chamberlayne, H. T. Hope, John Taylor, Esqrs., and Rev. Geo. Buckridge; the former is lord of the manor; several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, situate in upper Itchington, was formerly the chapel of ease, is an ancient stone structure, and consists of nave, chancel, small gallery, and small brick tower, which was added in 1834; and in 1835, 70 additional sittings were obtained, in consequence of a grant from the Incorporated Society for Building and Repairing Churches; 50 of that number are free and unappropriated for ever. The living a vicarage, V. K. B. £10., now £416. in the patronage of the Bishop of Litchfield, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Lea, for whom Rev. James Frith, officiates. Tithes commuted 1843, rectorial at £455., vicarial £192. 18s. 6d. The Independents have a chapel here.

A small National School built 1838, will accomodate 70, average 60; Sarah Keyte, mistress.

LOWER, OR BISHOP'S ITCHINGTON, 1 mile S. from Upper Itchington, was formerly the old town: here is a ancient house, occupied by Mr. John Spraggett, farmer, near which, there were many old coins, bones, musket balls, and foundations of stone found during the year 1849.

CHADSHUNT and GAYDON were formerly hamlets and chapelries in this parish, but are now returned as parishes in the Kineton Hundred and Division.

CHARITIES. Poor's Allotment.—By the award of the Commissioners for Inclosing the Common Lands within this parish, dated 29th May, 1775, an allotment containing 8a. 0r. 1p. was made for the poor, as an equivalent to their custom of cutting furze on the Heath. This land was let in 1823 at the annual rent of £13. 13s. This is distributed, with Holt's charity, in sums of about 3s. 6d., among the poor of the parish.

Dr. Holt, by will, 1734, gave £20. to the poor. Mr. John Spraggett holds £20. on the security of his promissory note, at 5 per cent interest.

John Huckson anciently gave certain lands for repairing the bridges and highways of Over Itchington, and to the poor of Bishop's Itchington. On the inclosure of Bishop's Itchington, certain exchanges took place, and the property now belonging to this charity is let at the yearly rent of £8., which is expended in repairing the causeways in the parish, under the direction of the minister.

John Cooper, by will, 1628, gave £10. for purchasing hemp and flax, and setting the poor to work. Nothing is now known about this.

ITCHINGTON (LONG), a large parish and considerable village, two miles N.W. from Southam, with the hamlets of Bascote and Stoneythorpe, contains 4,800 acres of land; and in 1841, 247 houses and 1,272 inhabitants; in 1801, 704; 1821, 836; 1831, 910; rateable value, £6,412. 4s. 2½d. This was given by the Conqueror to Christina; and previously to its becoming the joint property of the families of Leigh and Newdigate, was singularly unfortunate in several of its owners. John de Pinkney, one of them, was hanged for felony, in the time of Edward II.; John de Odinsells, in the following reign, was outlawed; and his son John convicted of housebreaking and robbery; and a remote descendant, of the same name, reduced himself to extreme indigence in the reign of Elizabeth, and sold the estate to the Earl Leicester, who entertained her Majesty under a splendid tent here, on her progress to Kenilworth Castle, in 1575. The principal owners are Lord Guernsey, Sir George Sitwell, Bart., T. W. Oldham, Esq., H. T. Chamberlayne, Esq., the former is lord of the manor; several others have small estates here.

The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, consists of nave, chancel, south aisle, and tower, which contains four bells: here are several ancient monuments to the memory of Richard Cleaver and his sister Elizabeth, and John Bosworth. The living is a vicarage, value in K.B., £7. 1s. 8d., now £210.; in the patronage of Lord Leigh and C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M.P., alternately; and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Philip Cooper, B.D., for whom the Rev. Cooke Otway, M.A., officiates. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. The school is a small brick building, near the Church, will accommodate 50, average 40; is endowed, but conducted on the national principle. Wulfstan, Bishop of Worcester, was born here, 1062.

Bascote, a small hamlet, consists of a few scattered houses, two miles N.W. from Southam. Stoneythorpe, or Thorpe, a hamlet, 1 mile N.W. from Southam. Stoneythorpe Hall, an ancient stone mansion, one mile N.W. from Southam, is the seat and property of Henry Thomas Chamberlayne, Esq.

CHARITIES.—John Bosworth, of Yardley, in Worcestershire, by will, 1674, gave to certain trustees, and their heirs, his messuage and lands, known by the name of the Browns, in Bickenhill, a close of land called the Waddice, in Yardley, with a small close called Bradcroft, and other sections of land at Yardley, on trust, to employ the rents as follows, viz:—£5. 4s., part thereof, to be bestowed in bread to the poor of the town of Long Itchington, for a distribution every sabbath-day of twelve twopenny loaves and £10., further part thereof, to be paid to a schoolmaster; and the remainder he gave to Emma, the wife of Richard Arch, her heirs and assigns. The premises charged with this annuity of £15. 4s., consisting of land in Bickenhill and Yardley, are now the property and in the occupation (1825) of William Allday, butcher, of Birmingham. The trustees of the school receive the money, of which £10. is paid to the schoolmaster, who has the use of a school, built by subscription about twenty years ago; and the parish also make him a voluntary payment of £10. He teaches all the poor children, boys and girls, who come, reading, writing, and arithmetic. £5. 4s., the residue, is given away in twelve twopenny loaves, every Sunday morning, at the church, to poor widows of the parish, or other old people.

Elizabeth Tompkins, by will, 1825, gave one share in the Warwick and Birmingham Canal, to William Banbury and Richard Allen, upon trust, to receive the dividends, and pay the same to her brother, Edward Tompkins, during his life, and after his death, she gave the same to the trustees of Long Itchington school, to apply the dividends to the advantage of the master thereof. In 1825 Mr. Edward Tompkins was living. The shares produced about £11. annual dividend.

Richard Cleaver, by will, 1745, gave £20. to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, and their successors, the interest to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day, for ever. Elizabeth Cleaver, who died in 1757, gave by her will, £20. for the above purposes. Ann George, who died in 1782, gave by her will, £20. to the same parties, the interest to be distributed in money every St. Thomas's day, to poor widows. Joane Goode and John Goode, it is also stated, gave £40. to the poor of this parish, which, in 1786, produced an annual interest of £1. 12s. This sum of £40., with the other three, amounting to £60., have been placed on mortgage of nine houses in Southam, at the interest of 5 per cent. The interest, £5., is regularly received, and distributed in bread and money on St. Thomas's day to the poor.

LADBROOKE, a parish and pleasant scattered village. $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles S. from Southam, contains 1918a. 0r. 2p. of land; in 1841, here were 62 houses and 252 inhabitants; 1801, 235; 1821, 251; 1831, 268; rateable value, £2701. 14s. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; was held by a family of the same name in the reign of Henry II., whose descendants were the possessors of it until the 46th of Edward III., when Thomas de Ladbroke gave up his interest to William de Catesby. In the 40th of Elizabeth, Sir Robert Dudley obtained it by purchase, and in the 18th of Charles I., a descendant of his sold it to Sir William Palmer. The principal owners now are William Palmer Moorwood, Esq., and Mr. John Smith; the former is lord of the manor. Ladbroke Hall is a large neat mansion, $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles S. from Southam, is the property of Wm. Palmer Moorwood, Esq., and the residence of Charles Rowland Moorwood, Esq. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and embattled tower, surmounted by a neat spire; in the chancel are three beautiful stained glass windows. The living, a rectory, value K.B., £13. 10s., now £441.; patron and incumbent. Rev. Arthur Turner, M.A. Tithes commuted, 1839, at £330. The Rectory is a neat residence near the church.

Town Lands. Certain lands and tenements have, from time immemorial, belonged to this parish, for maintaining decayed ways and bridges, and for the reparation of the parish church, of which the rector has the management. The property consists of two closes of land, containing 15a. 2r. 35p., let at the annual rent of £37.; and of two cottages, one of them divided into three tenements, let to the parish for the yearly rent of £4. 10s. The clear proceeds applied as above. The church was re-pewed in 1821; the sum of £150. was borrowed towards the expense.

Directory.—Charles Rowland Palmer Moorwood, Esq., Wm. Dering, tailor; Sophia Gobley, milliner; Wm. Grant, baker; Charles Griffin, vict., Bell Inn; Jas. Hayes, blacksmith; Mrs. Hannah Mann, Jas. Paine, vict., Crown; My. Ann Paine, milliner; Philip Plummer, tailor; Rd. Spawson, grocer; Jph Spawson, butcher; Jph. Thacker, wheelwright Rev. Arthur Turner, M. A., Rectory; and Charles Griffin, John Mann, The Grove; Wm. Moore, Jph. Plummer, The Hill; and John Smith, farmers.

LEAMINGTON HASTINGS, or HASTANG, a small village and parish, including the hamlets of Bradwell, Hill and Kites Hardwick, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. from Southam, contains 3235 acres of land; in 1841, 509 inhabitants; 1801, 503; 1821, 444; 1831, 464; rateable value, £4834. This place derived its distinguishing appellation of Hastang, from a powerful family of that name who had a seat here. From this family the manor passed to the Staffords, and a descendent of that family sold it in the 5th of Charles I., to Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, who bequeathed it to Sir Charles Wheler, Bart. The principal land owners are Rev. Hervey Wilmot Sitwell, B.A., Sir Wheler Trevor, Bart., and Robert Sitwell, Esq., the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles and square tower, in which there are five good bells, the interior was refitted in 1829, at a cost of £100., by subscription, and from the charity estates; in the chancel are several ancient monuments to the Trevor and Wheler families. The living, a vicarage, value K. B., £20., now £690. 10s. 6d.; Edward Degge Sitwell, Esq., patron, and the Rev. Henry Wilmot Sitwell, B. A., incumbent. The vicarage is a neat stone residence, a short distance east of the church. National School, a good stone building, erected 1839, will accommodate 80.

BROADWELL, a scattered hamlet, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.E. by S., was part of the possessions assigned to Maud de Hastang. Dr. Thomas states that within memory, there was a chapel here, "which was entirely demolished, upon the report of its being like to be turned into a meeting-house."

HARDWICK (KYTES), a small hamlet, $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles E., was, at a very early period, possessed by the Hastang family, and passing to the Harwicks, continued in that line for many generations, eventually came to Baron Trevor.

HILL, another hamlet, on a declivity, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. E. William the Conqueror granted four yard land here to the abbey of Abington, which, in the time of Henry III., was sold to Robert de Hastang, and on the marriage of Maude de Hastang with Ralph de Stafford, in the 49th of Edward III., was assigned to her, and continued in that family until the 5th of Charles I., when it was purchased by Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight.

ALMSHOUSES.—Humphrey Davis, by his will, 5th of James I., gave to Edmund Davis, his nephew, all his estates, &c., subject for lives, and to the raising certain legacies, and after payment thereof, he directed the yearly rents of his lands and hereditaments in the parishes of Leamington Hastings, Birdingbury, Martin and Eathorpe, to eight poor people, inhabitants of Leamington Hastings, that should be placed there by Edmund Davis and his heirs for ever, in his house, which he had prepared for those poor people and their successors.

The income of these Alms-houses from the different parishes amounts in the whole to £167. 12s. The eight almspeople receive weekly pensions of 5s. 6d. each amounting to £114. 8s. per annum. Thirty cwt. of coals and 20 faggots are annually allowed to each, which, in 1825, cost £15. 16s.; 10lbs. of beef given to each at Christmas, which, with attendance during sickness, and repairs, make a total expenditure of £139.; leaving an annual surplus of about £28. which it is intended to accumulate (being in 1826, £133. 15s. 10d.) till they can be applied to some substantial improvement of the charity.

Dame Dorothy Wheler, by will, 1687, directed her executors to raise the sum of £260. out of her estates, to make a purchase of lands and tenements, to be settled upon the trustees, for the alms-houses of this parish, for a daily allowance to two poor men, at 4d. per diem, and for erecting a piece of building to the said hospital for them. Sir Francis Wheler, her son, died soon after his mother, and the Rev. William Binks, D.D., the remaining executor, laid out, in 1720, the sum of £200., in the purchase of a piece of land called Lingham, and a piece of meadow ground thereto in Kites Hardwick in this parish; and the further sum of £30. in the purchase of a cottage, and a close, also in Kites Hardwick, and the further sum of £30. in erecting 2 dwellings for 2 poor men adjoining the hospital of Leamington Hastings; which were afterwards settled upon the trustees of the said hospital. The income of this property is £25. 0s. 6d., and the two almspeople have weekly pensions of 3s. each, being yearly £15. 12s.; coals and faggots £3. 19s.; Beef, 10s. 10d.; tithe to the vicar, £2. 2s.; making a total of £22. 3s. 10d. The Hospital consists of 10 dwellings; 8 of them under one roof, 4 on the ground floor and 4 on the first, and the 2 subsequently added, one on the ground floor and one above,

The almspeople are selected from the resident parishioners of Leamington Hastings; and if there be any such as have been reduced from better circumstances.

Poor's Land described as containing 108a. 2r. 19p. of land, with a new erected messuage, barn, stables, &c., let at the yearly rent of £100. From this rent £25. a year is paid to the schoolmaster, for instructing in reading, writing, and arithmetic, as many poor children of either sex, residing in the parish, as choose to go; generally about 30 attend; he also receives £5. a year, for teaching a Sunday school.

Coals are distributed to the poor, in quantities varying from 10 to 12 and 14 cwt. to each family, according to their number, amounting in 1826 to £43. 10s. It is usual also to allow £5. towards putting a boy out apprentice, and £10. towards the repairs of the church.

William Smith, (see Stockton.) Bread to the value of 4s. is received in twopenny loaves, and distributed in the Church, on Easter Sunday, by the churchwardens, to the poor.

Post Office, at Mrs. Ann Spraggett's; letters arrive by foot-post at half-past 11 a.m., and are dispatched at half-past 3 p.m.

MARSTON (PRIORS), an extensive parish, and considerable village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. by E. from Southam, was until recently in the Burton Dasset Division of Kineton Hundred; in 1841, here were 147 houses, and 701 inhabitants; in 1801, 538; 1821, 593; 1831, 655; and 3386a. of land; rateable value, £4235. 5s. 9d. At the dissolution, this being part of the possessions of the monks of Coventry, the manor was granted to Sir Edward Knightley, and passed from him to William, Lord Spencer. The principal land owners are Earl Spencer, Lord Leigh, Henry Hall, Esq., Rev. William Cotton Risley, Misses Colings, E. S. Barton, Esq., Rev. J. W. Knott, and Messrs. Parkington, the former is lord of the manor; Messrs. Thomas Johnson, J. P. Knight, and others have freehold estates here. The Church an ancient structure. The living a perpetual curacy, annexed to the living of Priors Hardwick. The Wesleyans and the Moravians have each a place of worship here.

CHARITIES.—James West, by will, 1705, appointed the sum of £100. to be paid within twelve months after his decease to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, and their successors, upon trust, &c. Aholiab West, by will, 1729, gave to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, the sum of £100., to be laid out in the purchase of lands, &c., and the interest to be distributed to the poor. In consideration of the sum of £225. 5s. comprised of the above-mentioned £200., and £15. thereof given by Thomas Baseley, and Job Baseley, deceased for the use of the poor, and £10. 5s. the residue being lent, a property called Grove Polle Close, in the parish of Charwelton, in the county of Northampton, was conveyed to the minister and churchwardens for the trust above specified; the premises now consists of four closes of arable, and one of grass land, containing 29a. with a barn and stable, let at the annual rent of £65. 1s. subject to deduction of £1. 10s. for land tax. Of this income 15s. is expended in the purchase of bread, in consideration of the charities of the Baseleys, and given to the poor, on St. Thomas's day. The remainder of the rent is distributed to the poor, in money, varying from 2s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. each, and is usually made on the 29th of April. Thomas Baseley, in 1764, gave £5. to the use of the poor. Of this nothing is now known.

John Kay gave £5., the interest to be distributed in bread on St. John's day yearly; this is received from the Pot Ash farm in this parish, the property of Mr. John Webb, and is distributed in bread by the churchwardens, on St. Thomas's day.

Josiah Kay, by will, 1711, charged certain lands, which he devised to his nephew, Thomas Kay, with the payment of 6s. yearly, for the poor of this parish, to be given in bread or money, on St. John's day; this being according to the will of his brother, John Kay; and he also charged the premises with payment of 40s. a year, for the benefit of a charity school, in the parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, in the county of Middlesex; and in default of heirs male according to certain limitations not yet fulfilled, the estate charged as above, to be for the schooling and putting forth apprentice the poor people's children of this parish. He also charged the sum of £20. annually, to be paid from an estate left to his nephew, Richard Wills, for the schooling of 10 poor boys of this parish; and £10. thereof for putting forth some of the boys apprentices; subject to similar limitations and effects as the former estate, not yet fulfilled. The annuity of £20., is now received from Mr. George Wills, the owner of the estate.

Aholiab Bradshaw, at a meeting convened 6th January, 1818, for inspecting his accounts of Josiah Kay's charity, and for directions as to the application of the balance in hand, it was found that the balance in his hands, for himself and his late brother, William Bradshaw, amounted to £240. 16s. 6d. He proposed at the said meeting that if the said balance was advanced to and vested in the hands of the minister, churchwardens, and overseers, and himself, and three others, &c., he would vest in the same trustees a further sum of £259. 3s. 6d., making up the sum of £500. Whereupon it was agreed to place out at interest the said sum of £500. in their own names, upon the bond of Aholiab Bradshaw, bearing interest at 4 per cent., &c.; to divide the interest into five equal parts, and apply two-fifth parts to the schoolmaster of this parish, under the will of Josiah Kay, for the education of two poor boys and five poor girls, in addition to the ten boys before appointed; two other fifth parts of the interest to be applied in putting out such poor boys to be apprentices; and the remaining fifth part to be paid to such of the girls who should go to service, or to be put out apprentices, &c. From the funds of this school, now £40. a year, £18. is paid to the master for teaching 12 boys and 5 girls reading, writing, and arithmetic. In 1826, there was a balance of £112. 16s. due to the charity. The present school is a neat stone building, erected 1847, by subscription; Stephen Hart, master, and Anne Imply, mistress.

John Bethel is stated, by the returns of 1786, to have given, by will, £5. to the poor; nothing now is known of this.

MARTON, a small parish and scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by W. from Southam, was probably a part of the possessions of the ancient Earls of Leicester, as they granted the church to the monastery of Nuneaton at its foundation. In the time of Charles I., the lordship was chiefly vested in the family of Walter, from whom it passed to the Biddulphs, of Birdingbury. Sir Theophilus Biddulph, Bart., is the principal owner and lord of the manor. Mr. John Russell, and others, have estates here. In 1841, here were 80 houses and 324 inhabitants; in 1821, 317; 1831, 311; and 1,800 acres of land; rateable value £1,826. 9s. The Leam is crossed here by an ancient bridge, and toll was taken from passengers as early as the 7th of Henry III.; but in the reign of Henry V., John Middleton, a wealthy mercer, of London, and native of this place, erected "a fair bridge here of lime and stone," probably the existing one, and obtained a remission of the toll. The Church, dedicated to St. Esperit, is a stone gothic edifice, and consists of nave, chancel, small gallery, and tower, which contains three bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £7. 14s. 8d.; now £160.; in the patronage of Lord Guernsey, and incumbency of the Rev. Randolph Skipwith, for whom the Rev. Henry Freer Radford officiates. National school is a small brick building, will accommodate 60; average 50; and is principally supported by the Rev. Randolph Skipwith; Elizabeth Collett, mistress.

CHARITIES.—William Fawkes, by will, 1730, gave land to the poor, which in 1786 yielded £2., and was vested in Mrs. Ashby. The sum of £2. is now paid by Mrs. Bailey, owner of a farm at Grandborough, and distributed to the poor, in bread, on St. Thomas's day.

Donor Unknown.—The sum of £5. 10s. as a gift to the poor, now remains, at the interest of 5s., in the hands of William Roadknight, which is given in bread on St. Thomas's day.

Mrs. Mary Turner (see Bubenhall,) The sum of 6s. 8d., formerly paid on account of this charity, was many years discontinued; but in 1832, the sum of £4. 3s. 8d. was received as arrears.

Church Lands. On the inclosure of the common fields of this parish, about the year 1803, an allotment of 3a. 3r., was awarded for the use of the church, in lieu of other lands for that purpose; now let for £10. per annum, which is carried to the churchwardens' account, as well as two other small rents of 8s., and 2s. 6d.

NAPTON-ON-THE-HILL, an extensive parish and considerable scattered village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. from Southam; in 1841, here were 227 houses and 951 inhabitants; 1801, 787; 1821, 892; 1831, 833; and 3665 acres of land; rateable value, £8,026, 18s. 6½d. This was held by Earl Mellent, at the Conquest, whose tenant Robert, assumed the name of Robert de Napton, and a descendant, of the same name, who was made a knight, obtained a charter for a market and fair, in the 15th of Edward II. In the tenth of Henry VI., William Shuckburgh, of Shuckburgh, was owner of the manor, and its possession has continued ever since in the line of his descendants; the principal owners are Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart., the Earl of Leicester's charity, Rev. Isaac Debbois Winslow, and Mr. William Edwards; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, two galleries, and a tower containing five excellent bells; the parish register is dated as early as 1604. The living, a discharged vicarage, V. K. B., £9. 14s. now £345.; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Isaac Debbois Winslow. This parish is tithe free, except a few houses, which produce £8. per. annum to the vicar. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, erected 1840, cost £140., raised by subscription. National School for boys, erected 1821, by subscription, and a grant from the National Society, and cost about £130., will accommodate 80, average 50; Benjamin Town, master. Another for girls, built 1843, at a cost of £112., raised as above, will accommodate 70, average 60. Charlotte Whitehead, mistress. An Infant school was added in 1849, the ground was given by the present vicar, will accommodate 50, average 40; Matilda Fuller, mistress. The Oxford and Warwick and Napton canals form a junction here at which there is a wharf.

CHARITIES.—Town Lands.—These lands, mentioned by deed as early as 1629, of which the rents were applied for the benefit of all the inhabitants of the parish. By an act passed in the year 1778, for inclosing the open fields of this parish, after reciting that half a yard land, lying in the fields thereby directed to be inclosed, vested in trustees for repairing the springs, water courses, ponds and pools, &c., in the parish; the uses whereof would cease after the said inclosure, &c. By the award dated 26th of July, 1779, a piece of ground in Rowden quarter, containing 9a. 0r. 2p., exclusive of roads, was allotted to the trustees of the town lands, in lieu of the above land. By an indenture, 21st June, 1805, the Warwick and Napton canal company purchased 1a. 3r. 34p., part of the above allotment, for the purpose of an addition for the reservoir for supplying the said canal, for the sum of £117. 15s., which sum was laid out in the purchase of 4a. 0r. 3p. of land, adjoining the said reservoir, thereby making the town lands to contain 11a. 0r. 11p., now let at the yearly rent of £17.; in addition to which, the trustees also receive the annual sum of £3. 10s. for the use of their fishery over that part of the land which was sold to the canal company, a right of fishery having been reserved. The rents of this land have, for many years, been applied to the use of the poor; £6. is applied towards the support of a National and Sunday School, and the residue in coals.

Fuel Allotment.—By the award of the commissioners, as above, 12a. 0r. 26p. of land was allotted to the overseers of the poor, in lieu of the right of the poor to cut furze; now yielding an annual rent of £13. 14s. which, added to the residue of the Town Lands, makes a fund of £31. 16s. 2d.; and applied in a distribution of coal, under the direction of the vestry, in quantities varying from two cwt. to half a ton.

Church Allotment.—Under the above-named enclosure, 23a. 0r. 3p. of land was awarded to the churchwardens of Napton, in lieu of certain church balks, dispersed over the open fields; the annual rent being £26. 6s., which is carried to the church account.

Thomas Meddoms, by will, 1761, gave £50. to be laid out in land, for the use of the poor; the income to be given by the vicar and churchwardens, and their successors; by equal payments on Christmas eve and Easter eve, yearly. This sum, with £5. also belong to the poor, and the interest distributed at St. Thomas the Apostle and Good Friday, by the vicar and parish officers, were laid out on the purchase of a tenement, with the fore-yard and garden adjoining, in this parish, to the use of the vicar and parish officers, and their successors, on trust, to pay 40s. thereof to the poor, as above stated, and 5s. thereof for the interest of the £5., as above-named. This message is appropriated by the overseers of the poor to the habitation of paupers, for which they pay an annual rent of £2. 10s.; the whole being added to the coal distribution.

Rev. Colliston Carr, as noticed, in 1716, left 4s. 8d. in bread, to the poor, which is received from Thomas Fancourt, the tenant of a farm in this parish, formerly the property of the donor. Also it is mentioned, that £7. 10s., given for bread, but by whom, or when, not specified. This sum was given into the hands of the vicar, 9th of July, 1793, and the interest, 7s. 6d., added, with the one above, to the coal fund; since which, it was advanced towards erecting a school room, and the interest paid by the parish.

Joseph Adams, in January, 1816, gave £10. to the poor of the parish, now in the hands of Mr. Richard Harper, the churchwarden. The interest, 10s., is added to the coal fund.

RADBOURNE, an extra parochial liberty, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. S. E. from Southam, contains 515a. of land, and in 1841, 2 houses, and 13 inhabitants; rateable value, £589. This was formerly a considerable village; William de Arden, in the time of Henry II., gave the Church and certain lands here, to the nuns of Henwood, and his son enlarged the grant. The present owners are Mr. Smallwood, and Mr. Robert Garner, and the occupiers are John Pearson, New House, and William Pearson, Old House, farmers.

RADBOURNE UPPER, another extra parochial liberty, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S. S. E. from Southam, contains 645 acres of land, and in 1841, 2 houses and 13 inhabitants; rateable value, £775. Col. North, and William Montgomery, Esq. are the owners, John Corbett, and Edward Pearson are the resident farmers.

SHUCKBURGH, Inferior, a small village and parish, 5 miles E. from Southam, having 509 acres of land, and in 1841, 35 houses, and 154 inhabitants; 1801, 144; 1821, 166; 1831, 165; rateable value, £1670. 15s. 6d.; was held at the Conquest, by Richard Forestarius, and passing through the various families of Broe, Bentley, and Catesby, came to the Shuckburghs. Sir Francis Shuckburgh is the present owner, and Lord Willoughby de Broke, lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small ancient edifice, consisting of nave and chancel, with a low tower; the living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the living of Priors Hardwick. Charity.—Smith's Charity (see Stockton,) bread to the value of 4s. is supplied to the Churchwardens, at Easter, in threepenny loaves, and distributed at the church to the poor of the parish.

Directory.—Wm. Bailey, grocer and farmer; Wm. Ball, schoolmaster; Fanny Berry, shopkeeper; James Hall, blacksmith; John Jackson, vict. Black Boy; Wm. Jackson, grazier and coal dealer; Wm. Steel, maltster, beerhouse, and farmer; Frederick Thorne, gardener to Sir Francis Shuckburgh; Mrs. Ann Tibbits; Mrs. Ann Watson, and John Page; Wm. Roberts, and Wm. Walker, farmers; Wm. Bilson, carrier to Coventry, fri.; and Daventry, wed. & sat.

SHUCKBURGH, Superior, a small parish and village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from Southam, in 1841, here were 11 houses, and 46 inhabitants; 1801, 28; 1821, 47; 1831, 40; and 1086 acres of land; rateable value, £1553. This lordship passed from Earl Mellent, to the ancient family of Danvers, and at a very early period was held by Thomas de Shuckburgh, one of whose descendents in the 10th of Henry VI. possessed a manor here. Another manor, which in the time of Edward III. belonged to the Dive family, passed in the 32nd of Henry VIII. to Thomas Shuckburgh, Esq., then lord of the manor, already mentioned, from which time they have continued the joint property of his descendents. Richard Shuckburgh, Esq., joined the standard of the unfortunate Charles, who conferred upon him the honour of knighthood, a distinction his subsequent gallant conduct richly merited. The family mansion, 6 miles E. from Southam, is spacious and handsome, the seat and property of Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart., who is lord of the manor and owner of the soil; it is surrounded by an extensive park, affording many fine prospects, diversified by fine old timber, some of which are upwards of 200 years old; the appearance of the park was much altered some years ago by felling a portion of timber, and taking down the summer house, which had acquired a painful celebrity, from the perpetration of a rash and fatal deed there, in 1809. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a stone structure of the 12th century, consists of nave, chancel, and tower, and is now undergoing repairs, at the expense of Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart. The living, a perpetual curacy, Sir Francis Shuckburgh, patron, and the Rev. Charles Reading Bucknill, officiating curate. Here is a small free school, supported by Miss Shuckburgh, daughter of Sir Francis, who clothes 8 boys, and 8 girls.

Directory.—Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart., The Park; Thomas Goode, grazier and parish clerk; Luke West, farmer, and John Ball, schoolmaster.

SOUTHAM, a parish and small market town, 10 miles E.S.E. from Warwick, 12 S.W. from Coventry, 30 S. E. by E. from Birmingham, and 80 N.W. from London, is pleasantly situated on an eminence, rising from the eastern bank of the river Watergall, over which, near the west extremity, is a neat stone bridge of two arches. It consists of two streets, one of which forms the road to Daventry, and the other from Banbury to Coventry. The houses are mostly modern and well built, with some ancient ones interspersed. On the rising ground on the western side of the river, stands the abbey, which is a very ancient stone mansion, the residence of Mrs. Neamiah Longshaw.

This town, anciently called Suthu, is a place of great antiquity, and had formerly a mint. In an old mansion in the centre of the town, which appears to have been built prior to the reign of Elizabeth, King Charles and his two sons are said to have slept, on the night before the battle of Edge Hill, in which a son of the Earl of Pembroke, whose monument is in the church, was slain. The parochial register for the year 1641, contains an entry of money paid to the king's footman, for opening the church doors, which had been locked up and sealed by the king's orders, as a punishment to the inhabitants for not ringing the bells on his entering the town. The monks of Coventry had a religious establishment here; and in Bury orchard, near the church yard, foundations have been discovered, and many skeletons dug up. In 1741, a considerable part of the town was destroyed by fire. At Haliwell, in this parish, was a cell of black canons, subordinate to the abbey at Rowcester, in Staffordshire, whither it was removed in the 19th of Edward II. The market, formerly on Wednesday, is now held on Monday, and is well supplied with corn and cattle; fairs are held on Easter Monday; and for hiring servants, the Monday after Holy Thursday; and July 10th for cattle and horses. The original show fair is at intervals, held on the first Monday in June, in imitation of that at Coventry; the procession of Lady Godiva is celebrated. A cattle fair is also held on the first Monday in every month. Statutes are held for hiring servants, first Monday after the 11th October, and two following Mondays. In 1841, here were 321 inhabited houses, 24 uninhabited, and two building; and 1670 inhabitants, of whom 817 were males, and 853 females; 1801, 935; 1821, 1,161; 1831, 1,256; and 2,976 acres, 3 roods, 5 perches of land; rateable value, £5,382. 10s. 10d. The principal land owners are Hy. Thos. Chamberlayne, Esq., A. N. Nourse, Esq., and the Rev. Thomas Lea, who are joint lords of the manor; several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. James, is a stately structure, principally in the decorated style of English architecture, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and gallery, with a fine tower surmounted by a lofty spire; in the roof of the nave, which is lighted with eight clerestory windows, adorned with tracery, is some tabernacle work, well carved in oak. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £22. 17s. 6d., now £534.; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Temple Hillyard. The rectory is a good residence, near the church. The Independents, Baptists, and Methodists, have each a place of worship here.

Mutual Improvement Society, established 1847, at the National school, has a good library; J. C. Read, secretary, and W. G. Tretton, librarian.

A Self-Supporting Dispensary, for the relief of the sick poor, was established here, on a peculiar plan, by Mr. H. L. Smith, resident surgeon, who has been the means of forming similar institutions in different parts of the country. An Infirmery, for curing diseases of the eye and ear, established by the same indefatigable gentleman, in 1818, under the patronage of the nobility and gentry of the neighbourhood, is supported by annual subscriptions and donations; it is under the management of a president, vice-president, treasurer, and committee; the building is in the later English style, and is highly ornamental to the town. Mr. Henry Lilley Smith, resident surgeon. Here is a mineral spring, of similar properties to the waters at Leamington; and another called Holywell, of considerable antiquity, remarkable for the intense coldness of the water. The Rev. Mr. Holyoake, author of the first collection of English words ever published in the form of a dictionary, was, at one time, rector of this parish.

Petty Sessions are held on the first and third Monday in every month, at the clerk's office; the magistrates are Rev. Chas. Pilkington, Henry Thomas Chamberlayne, Esq. and Wm. Taylor, Esq. Edward Poole, Esq., clerk. New County Court, Church hill, Frederick Trotter, Dinsdale, Esq., judge; Geo. Spraggatt, high bailiff; Alfred Charles Coles, assistant bailiff; John Bass Hanbury, assistant clerk. Excise Office, Craven Arms, Market hill. Stamp Office, Church hill, John Charles Read, sub-distributor.

Union Workhouse, opened 1838, will accomodate 180, and comprises 19 parishes, viz., Burton Dasset, Chadshunt, Chesterton, Fenny Compton, Gaydon, Harbury, Priors Hardwick, Bishop's Itchington, Long Itchington, Ladbroke, Lighthorne, Priors Marston, Napton-on-the-hill, Southam, Lower Shuckburgh, Upper Shuckburgh, Stockton, Ufton, and Warm Leighton, John and Mrs. Parrott, master and matron; Elizabeth Griffin, schoolmistress; Rt. Frederick Welshman, Esq., clerk and superintendent registrar; Wm. Taylor, relieving officer, and registrar of births and deaths; and John Chas. Read, registrar of marriages.

CHARITIES.—Town Lands. As early as the 16th of Charles I., certain lands and tenements are noticed by this title for various charitable uses, repairing of bridges and highways, &c. By an Act of Parliament, 33rd George II., the open and common fields of Southam were inclosed; and the commissioners, by their award, 7th May, 1761, allotted the Right Hon. Fulwar, Lord Craven, and others, the then feoffees of the said town lands, in lieu of their one yard and half land, 49a. 2r. 5p.; and, also, allotted to the said feoffees, 9a. 1r. 15p. of land, in lieu of a quarter yard land, given by the Rev. Henry Edmunds, 1650, for clothing 10 poor men; also certain school premises, and other premises, were awarded to the said feoffees, upon trust, for the above charitable uses. The land and premises now (1826) produce a rental of £179. 12s., but the houses are mostly very old and in bad repair. From this sum, an annual payment of £30. is made in aid of the schoolmaster's salary; £30. is given to the poor at Christmas, by the minister and parish officers, in sums of from 2s. 6d. to 15s., and three having the largest families are selected who receive £1. 10s. each. £31. 10s., as an average for the last five years, was appropriated for the repair of the roads and foot-paths of the town, which with repairs and other expenses made the disbursements £150. 19s. It is desirable for some time to come to make as great a reserve as possible of the rents, to raise a fund for rebuilding and completely repairing the houses. The land awarded for Edmunds' charity is let at the annual rent of £14., from which £10. 10s. is annually paid for the purchase of coats or linen, for ten men and eight poor boys, who are appointed by the minister and churchwardens.

School, now taught on the National plan, was founded by deed, 6th April, 1762, by Lord Craven and others, &c., for the children of the poor inhabitants of Southam, for instructing them in the principles of the church of England, and in reading, knitting, spinning, working plain work, &c.; for the buying of books for their improvement; and for that end certain premises were conveyed to the feoffees of the town lands, in trust, for the use of this school. The premises held under this indenture for the use of the school, consist of two closes of pasture land, containing 27a. 0r. 6p., let at the yearly rent of £30. 16s. 2d.; out of this rent £20. is paid to the minister, and appropriated by him, with £30. received from the Town lands, in aid of the salaries of the master and mistress of, and the expense of providing books and other necessities for the use of the school. The present school was erected 1816, with two houses in the centre for the master and mistress, the whole forms a large neat building in the Gothic style of architecture, will accommodate 300; average 60 boys and 40 girls; Wm. Geo. Fretton, master, whose salary is £50. per annum; and Elizabeth Ann Innocent, mistress, £30.

Alice Goode, by will, 1727, gave £5. for bread to poor widows; Mr. John Charles Oldham, in 1826, held the sum, for which he paid 5s. a year interest, which is given on St. Thomas's day, to poor widows, in bread.

STOCKTON, a parish and small village, 2 miles S.E. by E. from Southam, contains 1220 acres of land; and, in 1841, 94 houses, and 452 inhabitants; in 1801, 274; 1821, 344; 1831, 350; rateable value, £1,947.18s. This appears to have been, at the Conquest, a member of Long Itchington, and soon afterwards was in the possession of the powerful family of Limesie. In the reign of Edward I. it passed, by marriage, to Sir Robert de Somerville, and, in succession, became the property of the various families of Griffiths, Smith, Purfey, and Clapham. The principal land-owners are Mr. William Bayes, Mr. John Bayes, Miss Lovell, Rev. C. Pilkington, Mr. John Greaves, Mr. George Nelson, Mr. Rd. Hawkes, and Mr. Wm. Hodgson, who is also lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, anciently belonged to the priory at Hertford; it consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, gallery, and tower, in which there are three bells. In the chancel is a five-light window, which is filled with stained glass. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £10. 7s. 1d., now £280.; in the patronage of the Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxford; Rev. Charles Pilkington, B. C. L., incumbent. The Rectory, a neat brick residence, a little S. W. from the church.

The blue lias limestone abounds in this parish, and is considered to be the best in England. The lime works are very extensive, and are the property of Mr. Richard Greaves, and Mr. Richard Griffin.

CHARITIES.—William Smith, by a codicil to his will, 10th of Queen Anne, charged certain messuages and lands with the several yearly sums following, viz.:—4s. to the poor of each of the parishes of Dunchurch, Bourton, Leamington, Birdingbury, Grandborough, Stretton-upon-Dunsmoor, Stockton, Nether Shuckburgh, Bilton, and Long Lawford, to be paid for ever, on Easter-day, to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the several parishes, to be by them laid out in bread, and distributed among the poorest people of the said parishes. These annuities, amounting together to the sum of £2., are paid out of a farm situate in Thurlaston, in the parish of Dunchurch, and in Kites Hardwick, in the parish of Leamington Hastings, the property of Major Henry Smith. A baker of Thurlaston delivers four shillings worth of bread to the aforesaid parishes, on or before Easter Sunday. In this parish it is received in threepenny loaves, and given at the church among the most deserving poor.

Church Allotment.—Upon the enclosure of the common fields of this parish, in the year 1792, there was awarded to the churchwardens, in lieu of several green slades, dispersed over the said common fields, a plot of land, lying in Long Highlands, containing 13a. 2r. 4p. It is not known how the original slades were acquired, but the rents had always been applied to the repairs of the church. Some time afterwards, it was discovered this allotment contained a rock of limestone, of which, a part was sold to the Warwick and Napton canal company, for £52. 10s. and the remainder to Messrs. Tomes and Handley, of Warwick, for £885.; but of this land about nine acres has been left in so bad a state that it is let at the yearly rent of £2. 10s. The residue of the allotment, 4a. 2r. 24p., being required for the purposes of the Warwick and Napton canal navigation, was conveyed to them in consideration of the annual rent of £9. 6s., to be paid to the rector and churchwardens, and their successors. Of the money received for limestone, all but £440. was immediately laid out in substantially repairing the parish church. This sum, afterwards reduced by other repairs, to £400., was invested in 1807, in the purchase of two closes in the parish of Napton-on-the-Hill, containig together 7a. 2r. 35p., let at the yearly rent of £12. At a vestry meeting, held in April, 1807, the Rev. Charles Crane proposed to convey to trustees a house in Stockton, for the use of a school, with a plot of ground adjoining the street; and it was also agreed the £400. residue of the limestone money, should be appropriated towards supporting a schoolmaster of the church of England, for teaching the children of the inhabitants of the parish reading, writing, and arithmetic. The school is kept in the house given by the late Dr. Crane, and fitted up at the parish expense; and £12., the above-named rent, is paid to a schoolmaster, who engages to teach 33 boys and 19 girls, upon the national system. The present schools were built, boys', 1844; girls, 1841. Richard Haysman, master; and Mary Eagles, mistress.

Directory.—John Batchelor, beerhouse; Michael Bishop, foreman lime works; John Cleaver, shopkeeper; William Cleaver, shopkeeper and coal dlr.; *Rd. WAPPENBURY, a parish and small scattered village, $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. from Southam, containing, with the hamlet of Eathorpe, 1414 acres of land; and in 1841, 64 houses and 260 inhabitants; in 1801, 282; 1821, 284; 1831, 252; rateable value, £1126. 2s. $6\frac{1}{2}$ d.; was given by William the Conqueror to Geoffrey de Wirce; was next held by the family of Mowbray, and in the reign of Charles I. was possessed by Thomas Morgan, Esq., from whom the lordship passed to Lord Clifford, in whose family it still continues. The executors of the late Thomas Umbers, Esq. have also an estate here. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave and chancel, with a low embattled tower, containing three bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, value in K. B. £8., now £60., augmented with £400., private benefactions, and £1000. Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of the Right Hon. Lord Clifford, and incumbency of the Rev. George Stabb, B. A.

Catholic Chapel, dedicated to St. Ann, a neat brick building, erected 1846, by subscription, Lord Clifford gave the site; the old chapel was converted into a house for the priest, Rev. Richard Austin Marsh.

EATHORPE, a hamlet, township and small village, 1 mile E., contains 501 acres, 37 houses, and 175 inhabitants; rateable value, £947. 7s. 5½d. The principal landowners are Mrs. Vyner, and Mr. George Hull; Sir Grey Skipworth is lord of the manor. Eathorpe Hall, 6 miles N. by W. from Southam, is a neat brick mansion, and is the seat of Edward Horsman, Esq.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Mary Turner. (see Bubenhall.) The sum of 6s. 8d. originally paid to this parish, was many years discontinued. In the year 1832, the arrear was paid, of which £4. 3s. 8d. was paid to this parish for the use of the poor.

EATHORPE TOWNSHIP.—Town Land, a piece of land, containing 4A. 1R. 6P., now (1833) held by Robert Welchman, at the annual rent of £9. applied to the repair of bridges, or to the use of the poor, and given in coals to poor families, supposed to have been allotted at the enclosure, above a century ago.

DIRECTORY;—Wappenbury.—John Bathaldore, parish clerk; Wm. Bennett, grocer, and carrier to Coventry, fri., and Warwick, sat.; Rev. Rd. Austin Marsh, catholic priest; and Edward Umbers, Elizabeth Umbers, and Samuel Umbers, farmers. Eathorpe.—John Hands, blacksmith; Geo. Harris, corn miller; Charles Herritage, vict., Plough; Edward Horsman, Esq., The Hall; Thomas Page, shoemaker; John Paget, carpenter; Abraham Parker, woodman; Mary Satchwell, grocer, Simon Steane, butcher; and Geo. Hull, Edward Russell, and Wateley Welchman, Hockley, farmers.

WATERGALL, an extra parochial liberty, 4½ miles S. from Southam, contains 507 acres of land, in 1841, 2 houses and 14 inhabitants, rateable value, £679. Lord Leigh is the owner, and Wm. Ledbrook, and Wm. Herbert, resident farmers.

WESTON-UNDER-WETHERLEY, a small parish and scattered village, 6 miles N. E. by E. from Warwick, contains 1,200 acres of land, and in 1841, 46 houses, and 203 inhabitants, 1801, 207; 1821, 232; 1831, 208; rateable value, £1893. Obtained its distinctive appellation from some adjoining woods, which at the time of the Conquest were named Wethele Woods, and then belonged to Earl Mellent, under whom Weston was held by Robert de Napton, whose descendants retained the manor until the time of Henry IV.; early in the reign of Henry VIII. it belonged to Edward Belknap, who rebuilt the manor house. The subsequent owners were Sir Thomas Newham, Sir Edward Sanders, and Thomas Morgan, Esq. The present landowners are Lord Clifford, Lord Leigh, and Mr. John Watts; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, and square embattled tower, in which there are four bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £5. 9s. 2d., now £90., augmented with £400. Queen Anne's bounty; Lord Clifford, patron, Rev. Thomas Ward, M. A., incumbent, for whom the Rev. Geo. Stable, B. A., officiates.

CHARITIES.—Richard Hancox gave £30. in money, date unknown, producing £1. 4s. annually. Daniel Simpson, by will, 1770, gave £10. These two sums, with accumulations of interest, amounting to the respective sums of £48. and £22., making together £70., were, in 1808, advanced to Edward Steane of Eathorpe, on mortgage of premises then in his occupation, at five per cent interest. The interest, £3. 10s., is given away in bread to poor families.

Church Lands.—Upon the inclosure of the common fields, about the year 1776, an allotment of land was awarded in lieu of other land, which had immemorially been applied towards the repair of the Church. This allotment is now let for the yearly rent of 16s., and is carried to the churchwarden's account.

Directory.—Wm. Boyes, timber merchant; Thomas Campbell, vict. Bull Inn; Thos. Flint, timber merchant; Thomas Humphreys, parish clerk; Thomas Muddiman, shopkeeper; Wm. Rogers, grocer; Rev. Geo. Stable, B.A., curate; Thos. Walter, butcher; John Wootton, shoemaker; the farmers are Wm. Cotterill and miller, Eliza Farmer, Wm. Harris, Ann Page, Joseph Roberts, and blacksmith, Mary Sammons, Abraham Umbers, Weston Hall; and John Watts.

Carriers.—Geo. Gasey & Thos. Humphreys, to Leamington, wed. and Warwick, sat.

WOLFHAMCOTE, a small village and extensive parish, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles, N.W. by N. from Daventry, and 8 m. E. by N. from Southam, contains with the hamlets of Flecnoc, Nethercote, and Sawbridge, 3729a. 2r. of land, and in 1841, 96 houses, and 432 inhabitants, 1801, 371; 1821, 413; 1831, 372; rateable value, £7,055. 10s.; was part of the extensive possessions of Turchill de Warwick, whose son, Siward de Arden, granted the lordship to the wife of Norman de Verdon; in the reign of Henry III. it passed to Walter de Langley, and afterwards came by marriage to William de Peto. The principal landowners are Charles Robinson, Esq., Mr. Edward Sale, Lady Hood, and the Oxford Canal Company. The executors of the Hon. Lord Hood are lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, consists of nave, chancel, side aisle, and embattled tower, in which are two bells; the whole was restored in 1848, at the expense of Lady Hood. The living, a discharged vicarage, value in K. B. £12. 18s. 4d., now £73., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty. Lady Hood, patroness, Rev. Charles Reading Bucknill, incumbent.

KINETON HUNDRED

Forms the south part of the county, and comprises the divisions of Brailes, which is the southern extremity; Burton Dasset, Kineton, and the Warwick, which forms the north side of the hundred. The Kineton Hundred contains 119,690 acres of land; 5080 inhabited houses, 190 uninhabited, and 13 building, with 24,043 inhabitants, of whom 12,247 were males, and 11,796 females; of these numbers 5747 males and 5545 females were under 20 years of age; 6560 males and 6251 females were 20 years of age and upwards; of these 19,949 persons were born in this county, and 4094 elsewhere.

THE BRAILES DIVISION

Comprises 15 parishes and 2 townships, viz., Barcheston, Barton-on-the-Heath, Brailes, Burmington, Cherrington, Compton (Long), Compton Wynyates, Honington, Idlicote, Pillerton Hersey, Pillerton Priors, Stretton-on-Foss, Whatcott, Whichford, Stourton township, Welford (Great), and Welford (Little), township; and 31,094 acres of land; in 1841, 1,237 inhabited houses, 47 uninhabited, and 4 building; 5,801 inhabitants, of whom 2,944 were males, and 2,857 females; of these numbers 1,412 males, 1,373 females, were under 20 years of age; 1,532 males, 1,484 females, were 20 years old and upwards; 4,613 persons were born in this county, and 1,188 elsewhere.

BARCHESTON, a small village and parish, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E.S.E. from Shipston-on-Stour, contains, with the hamlet of Willington, 1,448 acres of land, and, in 1841, 44 houses and 193 inhabitants; 1801, 180; 1821, 184; 1831, 198; rateable value, £2,049. 19s. 1d. This parish was, at the time of the Conquest, of sufficient importance to give name to one of the Hundreds into which the county was then divided. In the 23rd of Henry VII., William Willington, a wealthy merchant, purchased this manor; and in the following year depopulated the town, making an enclosure of 530 acres, and leaving 64 for tillage, which were attached to and used for his manor house. He left seven daughters who all married into good families, and by a petition amongst the co-heirs after his decease, the manor of Barcheston came to the Sheldon family. The principal owners are John Staunton, Esq., Samuel Guest Guest, Esq., Mr. William Baker, Mr. Richard Fowler Price, Magdalen College, Oxon, and Edward Welchman Wright, Esq., M.D.; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a neat ancient edifice, consists of nave, chancel, two transepts, with a tower, has lately been considerably restored; the chancel contains a neat stained glass window, and a rich altar monument with figures to the Willington family. The living, a discharged rectory, valued in the King's books at £13. 6s. 8d., now £193., in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. George Domville Wheeler, M.A. The Rectory is a neat residence pleasantly situated near the Church. Tithes commuted 1839, at £200. 4s. 6d.

WILLINGTON, a small village and hamlet $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S., is noticed in Domesday, and, in the time of Henry III., was held by Robert de Hamme, in whose family it remained for some generations. In a list of the Knight's fees, held of the Lord Stafford, the depopulation of this village is stated to have been very ancient.

Directory.—Wm. Dimbee, hosier, Willington; Rev. Eardly C. Holt, curate; George Pain, corn miller; Thos. Rouse, shoemaker, Willington; the farmers are Charles Jas. Canning, Rd. Harris, Jph. Kearsey, Willington; Rd. Penson, Willington; John Smith, grazier, Willington; Wm. Taylor, Willington; and Wm. Taylor, jun., Willington.

BARTON-ON-THE-HEATH, a parish and small village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. from Shipston-on-Stour; in 1841, here were 39 houses, and 212 inhabitants; 1801, 137; 1821, 201; 1831, 208; and 1540 acres of land; rateable value, £2975.; is chiefly celebrated as having been the residence of Robert Dover, an attorney; less known from the remarkable circumstance of his having tried only two causes in the course of his life, than for being the institutor of the annual festivities which during the reigns of James I. and Charles I. were held on the Cotswold Hills; but terminated with the commencement of the civil war. The principal land owners are Robert Bird, Esq., Mr. Thomas Baker, and Mr.

John Shirley. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has nave, chancel, and transept, in which are some ancient brasses and stained glass windows. The living, a rectory V.K.B. £12. 17s. 11d. now £364.; in the patronage of the President and Fellows of Trinity College, Oxford; and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Peter Guillemard, B. D.; Tithes commuted 1839, at £337. 15s. Two miles W. is the remarkable Shire Stone, which serves as a boundary point to the Counties of Warwick, Worcester, Oxford, and Gloucester.

Directory.—Frederic Colville, Esq., Rev. Henry Peter Guillemard, B. D., Rector; Mr. Benj. Sedgley, Eliz. Simms, shopkeeper; William Simms, carpenter; James Taylor, shoemaker, and shopkeeper; and John Cook, Rd. Gilkes, Wm. Hy. Goffe, Jno. Hambridge, John Mitchell, Wm. Henry Stockes, Thos. Such, and John Webb, farmers.

BRAILES, an extensive parish and large pleasant village, 4 m. E. by S. from Shipton-on-Stour, and 10 S.E. from Banbury, including the hamlets of Chelmscote, Winderton, and several scattered farms, contains 5,396 acres of land; and in 1841, 297 houses, and 1,284 inhabitants; in 1801, 980; 1821, 1,233; 1831, 1,272; rateable value, £6,874. 14s. 3d. Before the Conquest, the manor was part of the possessions of Edwin, Earl of Mercia; and it appears to have been given by the Conqueror to Henry de Newburg, Earl of Warwick, whose posterity retained it till the reign of Henry VII.; the manor having devolved to the Crown, was in the 21st of Henry VIII., leased to William Willington, for 21 years, with the market, fair, water mill, and rabbit warren. A guild was founded in the Church, by Richard Nevill, Earl of Warwick. The principal land owners are Henry James Sheldon, Esq., and Lord of the manor; the Trustees of the late Dr. Bishopp, and the Marquis of Northampton. The Church, dedicated to St. George, is a commodious and handsome structure, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and lofty tower, which contains a peal of six good bells, and a set of chimes; here is also an ancient font. The living, a vicarage, value in the King's Book, £25., now £344.; patrons, the Trustees of — Thornton, Esq.; Rev. Cornwall Smalley, M. A. incumbent, for whom the Rev. John Limerick, B.A., officiates. Tithes commuted 1784; the Trustees of the late Dr. Bishopp owns the great tithe. The vicarage is a neat residence near the Church.

Catholic Chapel, erected 1726, by the Bishopp Family, is a neat and commodious building, Rev. James Duckett, priest. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, built 1847. The Friends' Meeting House is a small neat edifice, erected in the time of George Fox, the founder.

Chelmscote, a small hamlet $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north, contains 241 acres of land, was not recorded before the 20th of Henry III. In the reign of Henry VI. Eustace de Greneville began the depopulation of the village, an example that was followed by one of his descendants, and others. Here was a chapel, in which a chantry was founded, anno. 1322, by Thomas de Pakinton, of Brailes. Winderton, another hamlet 1 mile N.N.E., contains 522 acres of land; is first found on record with Chelmscote, in the 20th of Henry III., when it was possessed by one of the D'Eivilles, and by various transmissions came to the Marquis of Northampton. This parish contains several scattered farms, viz., All-meadow, or Brail's Buildings, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. Aylesmoor House, $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles N.W. by N. Chin Slade, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. Coombe Slade, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. by E. Gally Hill, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.E. Mine Hill, 1 mile S. And New House, or Brail's Grounds, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. A pleasure fair is held on Easter Tuesday.

CHARITIES.—Free School. Queen Elizabeth, by letters patent, 27th of October, in 23rd year of her reign, endowed this school with the sum of £8. 1s. 8d., being an annual sum payable out of the rectory of Brailes, which is now the property of the Bishoppes. By an indenture of feoffment, 18th of James I., certain premises and lands, late belonging to a guild there, for the reparation of the church, for the poor, and for the better maintenance of a free school there. By trust deeds, 20th June, 1812, the property was transferred to the Rev. Francis Bishopp, and seven others, by which certain lands, &c., were granted to the school, and all other rents and profits whatsoever to the old guild belonging, particularly the £8. 1s. 8d. as payable from the rectory. Three allotments were awarded by the commissioners for the Brailes inclosure, for the lands called the Old Guild Land. The property now belonging to the school, produces an annual income of £64. 8s. 2d.; from which, the crown rent, payable by Dr. Bishopp, as rector, was unjustly withheld for the five years previous to 1827, and if still persisted in, this will be a proper case for the interference of the Court of Chancery. The school is conducted on the National plan, for reading, writing, and arithmetic, and is open to all the male children of the parishioners of Brailes, who are taught gratis; but they find their own bibles, testaments, and prayer books. In 1819, the school and part of the school-house was rebuilt. The master receives £33. per annum; and stationery and slates are found for the school, with some other small charges about the school. After some of the dilapidated cottages have been rebuilt, there will remain a considerable surplus, applicable to the improvement of the charity. Jeremiah Henry Long, master.

William Willington, Esq., by will, 1555, gave to his cousin, William Barnes, all his lands and tenements, &c., to hold the same, to him and his heirs, for ever, on condition of paying to the poor people of Brailes, 33s. 4d.; to the poor people of Shipston, 33s. 4d.; and to the poor people of the town of Tysoe, 40s., yearly; to be paid within ten days before the feasts of Easter and Christmas. An annual sum of £2. is now received by the churchwardens of Brailes, from a farm in Tysoe, late the property of Mr. Ivins, and is understood to be in respect of Willington's charity.

James Cooper, by will, 1678, appointed £100. to be paid to his two friends' trust, to be disposed of by them or their heirs, &c., that out of the interest there might be, once in every two years, for ever, a coat of cloth, of about 8s. the yard, to contain two yards and a half, given to as many of the poorest men of the parish as it would admit; and in case there should be sufficient of his estate remaining, then he gave to the minister and churchwardens, the sum of £50., on trust; out of the interest there should be at Christmas, yearly, a quarter of either steer or heifer beef bought, and distributed amongst the poor of Brailes. The Poor's Close, containing about 4 acres, was purchased in 1684, with this money; now let for £12. a year; of which, £4. is paid to the vicar, and distributed in beef to the poor, allowing to each family about one pound of meat per head. The rest of the rent is applied by Dr. Bishopp, in an annual distribution of eight coats, of the value of £1., to poor men.

Mr. Francis Capell, by will, 1704, bequeathed to fifteen of the poorest protestants' widows, 12d. a piece, yearly; to be paid them on the 5th of November. He also gave to two poor protestant widows, two gowns of 10s. each. He also gave to twenty of the poorest protestant families, 12d. a piece, yearly, to be paid them on the 5th of November; and also 5s. worth in bread more at the same time. The sum of £3., in respect of these legacies, is annually received by the vicar of Brailes, from the tenant of a farm in the parish, belonging to the Rev. Dr. Bloxham, of Rugby; £1. is laid out in the purchase of gowns, and the remainder given in bread, annually, on the 5th of November, to protestant parishioners.

William Prestidge, by will, 1732, gave to Walter Evans and Joseph Hunt, the sum of £500., in trust, that they should lay out the same in purchasing lands, &c., to them and their heirs, &c.; and after paying all necessary expenses for the said trust, the residue of the rents and profits to be applied for the benefit of the poor of Brailes, as they should think fit. No land has been purchased. In the year 1770, it appears the fund consisted of £925. 4s. Out of this sum, £809. was invested in the three per cent. consols; and the sum of £70. placed in the hands of William Sheldon, Esq., at interest; leaving £46. 4s. in the hands of the trustees; and in the following year, £30. was distributed to the poor. Subsequent investment of surplus being made, 1793, the fund was £1231. 2s. 8d. The stock was transferred in 1824, into the names of the Rev. Thomas Lambert Snow and two others. The dividends, £36. 18s. per annum, are received by the Rev. T. L. Snow, and 30s. is paid to each of 20 poor persons of the parish, recommended by the overseers. The sum of £5. is also annually paid in apprenticing a boy, to which the parish make an addition. The £70. in the hands of Mr. Sheldon, who died in 1781, since which nothing has been recovered.

Fuel Land.—Upon the enclosure of the common field lands of the parish, in the year 1786, four acres of land was awarded to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, for fuel, to the poor of Upper Brailes, in lieu of their right to cut furze, &c.; and also four acres was awarded for the poor of Lower Brailes, for the same purpose. The first allotment is let for £8., and the other for £5. 5s. per annum. The money is laid out in the purchase of coals, which are distributed to the poor of each division.

BURMINGTON, a small village and chapelry, in the parish of Wolford, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. from Shipston-upon Stour, contains 790 acres of land, and in 1841, 40 houses, and 188 inhabitants; 1801, 100; 1821, 176; 1831, 205; rateable value, £1,231. 19s. 7d.; was in the possession of Sir Humphrey Stafford, in the reign of Henry VI. The Chapel is a small neat edifice, rebuilt in 1693. The living, a curacy, annexed to Wolford. Tithes commuted, 1842, at £223. Here is a small infant school, erected by John Stanton, Esq.; Sir George R. Phillips, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal owner.

J. Court, Esq., left £10. to the care of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, for the use of the poor of this parish; 10s. is paid as interest, by Mr. Thomas Sheldon, of Burmington, who holds the money. To this, a contribution is made by the parishioners, with which a distribution of coals and meat is made to the poor at Christmas.

CHERRINGTON, a small parish and pleasant village, 4 m. S.E. from Shipston-upon-Stour; in 1841, here were 79 houses and 340 inhabitants; 1801, 290; 1821, 316; 1831, 328; and 824 acres of land; rateable value, £1,183. 13s. 6d.; this was originally a member of Brailes, and the property of the Earl of Warwick. The principal owners are now Sir George R. Philips, Bart., William Dickinson, Esq., and Rev. P. Turner; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower, in which are five bells. The living, a rectory, value in K.B., £11. 10s. 7½d., now £300.; Rev. Power Turner, patron and incumbent. The rectory is a commodious residence. National School, established about 10 years ago, John and Elizabeth Mills, master and mistress.

Thomas Holtom, by will, 1789, gave the yearly sum of 12s. to the churchwardens of this parish, to be distributed amongst the poor of the parish in bread on Easter-day. This payment is resisted under the statute 9, George II.

Directory.—Thomas and William Attwood, carpenters; Thomas & William Clarke, masons; Mr. Richard Day, William Dickinson, Esq., Richard Godson, tailor; John Hall, plumber and glazier; Joseph Jarrett, carpenter and shopkeeper; Wm. Jarrett, farm bailiff; John Long, wheelwright; John and Elizabeth Mills, school; James Righton, beerhouse and miller; Thomas Salmon, post office; James Stockley, beerhouse and butcher; Rev. Power Turner, rector; and Thomas Bury, Francis Holtom, George Holtom, and Edward Timms, farmers.

COMPTON (LONG), an extensive parish and considerable village, at the southern extremity of the county, 4½ miles N.N.W. from Chipping Norton, and six S. from Shipston-upon-Stour, contains 3,750 acres of land, including the hamlet of Weston; and in 1841, 177 houses, and 829 inhabitants; 1801, 751; 1821, 860; 1831, 801; rateable value, £5,378. 19s. 2d. This is included in the Norman survey, and the manor was granted in the reign of Edward I., to John de Mohun, in which family it continued till the time of Henry IV., when, for want of male issue, it came to Richard le Strange, and afterwards to Thomas, Earl of Derby, who disposed of his share to William, Earl of Northampton. The principal landowners are Sir George Richard Philips, Bart., and the Marquis of Northampton, the former is lord of the manor. The township of Long Compton was enclosed, by virtue of an Act of Parliament, passed 1811; at the enclosure, the land was exonerated from payment of all manner of tithes in kind, by allotments, to the Provost and Fellows of Eton College, as Improprate Rectors, and to the Rev. Francis Ellis, as the then Vicar. It contains 2,981a. 2r. 36p., of land, of which 53a. 28p. are public roads. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a large ancient edifice, with a square tower. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books, £12. 15s. 7½d., now £191., augmented with £200, private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College, and incumbency of the Rev. Francis Ellis Jervoise, for whom the Rev. Narcissus George Batt, officiates. The vicarage is a good residence, pleasantly situate near the church. A Free School, supported by Sir G. R. Philips, the Marquis of Northampton, and the Rev. Francis Ellis Jervoise; Thomas and Elizabeth Wilkins, teachers. The Independents and the Wesleyans have each a Chapel here.

WESTON, a hamlet, 2 miles north, contains 768a. 2r. 24p. of land, of which 11a. 3r. 21p. are roads; was for several generations the property and residence of the Sheldon family, who built a noble mansion here, about the latter end of the 16th century, surrounded by a park of 300 acres. William Sheldon, who erected the seat, being a great encourager of the Flemish tapestry weavers, on their coming to England, employed them to make a curious series of maps, consisting of three pieces of tapestry, covering two sides of a spacious room. On the sale of the furniture, in 1781, this tapestry was purchased for 30 guineas, by Horace Walpole, and presented by him to the Earl Harcourt, in whose seat at Nuneham Courtenay, it is carefully preserved. The ancient mansion of the Sheldon's has been taken down, and a splendid and picturesque edifice, from a design by Shaw, erected upon its site about twenty years ago, by Sir G. R. Philips, Bart., whose seat and property it is; having purchased the whole hamlet upwards of 30 years ago, of the late Ralph Sheldon, Esq. Tithes commuted under the tithe commission, as follows, by a certain ancient customary payment of £19. to the Provost and Fellows of Eton College, in lieu of the great tithe; and £20. to the Vicar of Long Compton, in lieu of the vicarial tithe.

CHARITIES.—John Hunt, by deed, 21st October, 1632, granted to John Harris and others, one cottage, and one close, and two acres of land, in Long Compton, upon trust, to be bestowed by the churchwardens upon poor people. The cottage is now divided into four tenements, and the close, about a quarter of an acre, forms a garden annexed to them, which are let to poor people at very low rents. The two acres was "Lands" in the open field. Upon the inclosure in 1812, these four lands were inclosed, to which four acres allotted to the poor in lieu of their right to cut furze for fuel, which was inclosed with the former lands, now containing nearly six acres, and is let for the yearly sum of £11., which is applied, with the produce of the other charities, in a distribution of coals.

Richard Mellor, of Woolford Parva, by will, 1657, gave 40s. yearly to Long Compton, payable out of four acres of land in the open fields of Little Woolford, belonging to Lord Redesdale, and of six cottages the property of George Crossley; of this sum 6s. 8d. was for a sermon on All Saints' day, £1. 10s. to the poor on the same day, 3s. for the trouble of the distribution, and 6d. to the clerk. The whole £2. is now added to the coal fund.

Richard Fowler, by will, 1712, left £20. to the poor of Long Compton; this sum is now placed in the Shipston Savings' Bank, and the interest added to the coal fund.

John Rawlings, who died in 1778, left to the poor of this parish £20.; this sum is also in the Shipston Savings' Bank, and the interest carried to the coal fund; for which the minister, at intervals, during the winter, provides coals, from which poor families in the parish are allowed to purchase at half price, and the sacrament money is applied to supply any deficiency.

COMPTON WYNIATES, a small parish, (the adjunct, Wyniates, appears to be derived from a Vineyard anciently cultivated here;) 5 miles E.N.E. from Shipston-on-Stour, contains 997 acres of land; and, in 1841, 9 houses, and 46 inhabitants; 1801, 41; 1821, 28; 1831, 23; rateable value, £1223. 11s. From the 7th of Edward I. to the present time, has been possessed by the very ancient family of Compton. The family mansion was built in the reign of Henry VIII. by Sir William Compton, the materials being chiefly removed from the ruins, of Fulbrook Castle; and he obtained leave to enclose 2,000 acres of land and wood, for a surrounding park, which he commenced making in the 11th of Henry VIII. This splendid mansion is the occasional residence of its illustrious owner, the Marquis of Northampton. It is an extensive but irregular edifice, built round a large court, and was originally surrounded by a moat. Over the porch of the principal entrance are the Royal Arms, surmounted by a crown, and supported by a Greyhound and Griffin, with a rose and crown on each side. The chimney shafts are much ornamented, it is said they were brought from Fulbrook in their present state, and the gables are enriched with elaborate carved work. Within the mansion is the ancient Chapel, formerly enriched with "a costly window of rare workmanship." Compton House narrowly escaped demolition during the civil war, in which its noble owners acted so conspicuous a part; it was garrisoned by the Parliament army in 1646. The Church was reduced by the opposing army to a heap of ruins, whilst, with a strange perversity of feeling, they mingled with the fragments the monumental memorials of the family, broken to pieces by their ruthless hands. After the restoration, the Church was rebuilt by James, third Earl Northampton, who was afterwards interred in it; it contains a mural monument, and several broken figures of the family; it is a small neat edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisle; the ceiling is beautifully painted to imitate day and night. The living, a rectory, with the vicarage of Tysoe, united, in the patronage of the Marquis of Northampton, and incumbency of the Rev. S. Y. Seagrave.

HONINGTON, a parish and pleasant village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. by E. from Shipston-on-Stour, contains 2,424 acres of land, of which 50 are glebe; and, in 1841, 70 houses and 335 inhabitants; 1801, 287; 1821, 331; 1831, 341; rateable value, £2632. 6s. 4d. This was one of the places given by Leofric, to the monastery founded by him at Coventry. The manor and advowson were sold in the 3rd of Henry VIII. to Robert Gibbes, in whose family it was in 1640; and was subsequently purchased by Sir Henry Parker, Bart., who erected a handsome mansion here, and rebuilt the Church at his own expense, wherein he is interred. The Rev. Henry Townsend is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat edifice, consisting of nave, side aisles, and a Gothic tower; and contains two handsome monuments to the Parker family, and some rich tablets to the Townsend family. The living, a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £9. 6s. 8d., now £125. Rev. Henry Townsend, patron, and Rev. John Wright, M. A., incumbent. The vicarage is a good residence near the Church. The Hall is a spacious handsome mansion, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Stour, near the church, and is the seat and property of the Rev. Henry Townsend.

St. Denis, two farms 2 miles S.E., anciently known as the Chapelry of Bradmore. Fell Mill, a farm 1 mile S. Knowlands, a farm 2 miles N.E.

Directory.—Mr. Wm. Cluff, John Gardner, carpenter; John Gardner, blacksmith; Thos. Lidzy, maltster; Mr. Edwd. Sale, Mr. Jph Sale, Mr. Jonathan Smith, Rev. Hy. Townsend, The Hall; Rev. John Wright, M. A., vicar; and the farmers are Charles Davis, St. Denis; Wm. Fortnum, Granby Farm; Jph. Hancox, Littleworth; Jph Holton, St. Denis; Geo. Marshall, Knowlands; Wm. Marshall, Timothy Mason, Fell Mill; and Rd. Rinnell.

IDLICOTE, a parish and small village, 3 miles N.E. from Shipston-on-Stour; in 1841, here were 20 houses and 82 inhabitants, 1801, 106; 1821, 88; 1831, 82; and 1330 acres of land, rateable value, £1,595. At the conquest was held by Robert de Stadford, whose son Nicholas passed it to Geoffery de Clinton, by whom it was given to the monks of Kenilworth. In the 4th of Queen Elizabeth the manor was granted to Ludovic Grevill, and was subsequently sold to William Underhill. Henry Peach Keighly Peach, Esq., who is a minor, is lord of the manor and principal owner of the soil. The Church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient Gothic edifice, in a good state of preservation; consists of nave and chancel, which contains a neat monument to the Peach family. The living, a rectory, V.K.B. £13. 6s. 8d.; patron, H. P. K. Peach, Esq., and Rev. Wm. Godfrey Huet, M. A., incumbent. Tithes commuted 1842, at £300. The Rectory is a small neat residence, pleasantly situate near the Church.

Mrs. Margaret Underhill, by will, 1780, bequeathed £100. to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, upon trust, for the use of the poor. This money was invested in the purchase of £175. 1s. 6d. consolidated three per cent. annuities, and now stands in the name of Samuel Peach, Esq.; the annual dividend, £5. 5s. is distributed by Mr. Peach, about Christmas, in articles of clothing to the poor.

Directory.—Rev. Wm. Godfrey Huet, M. A., rector; and Wm. Batsford, Manor House; Rt. Davis, White House; Hy. and Jph. Hancox, The Hill; and Wm. Harris, farmers.

PILLERTON HERSEY, or Lower Pillerton, a small village and parish, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles S. W. by W. from Kineton, contains 1346 acres of land, and, in 1841, 56 houses, and 217 inhabitants; 1821, 268; rateable value, £1300.; at the Conquest, belonged to the Earl of Chester and Hugh de Grentemaisnill. In the 1st of Richard II., the manor was forfeited by the owner for committing felony, and given to Hugh de Hercy, whose posterity enjoyed it for many years; and from that family it obtained its present appellation, to distinguish it from Pillerton Priors. After various changes, the manor was, in 1580, owned by Thomas Throckmorton, and from 1593 to 1638, was in the possession of the Underhills, who sold it to Sergeant Ward. The Rev. Henry Mills is the principal owner, and Rev. Francis Mills is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, which has lately undergone considerable improvements. The living, a vicarage, with the perpetual curacy of Pillerton Priors annexed, value in K. B. £8., now £120., augmented with £643. private benefactions, and £1200. Queen Anne's bounty. Patron, Rev. Francis Mills, and Rev. Henry Mills, incumbent. The manor house, situate a short distance from the church, the residence of the Rev. Henry Mills. The free school is a neat brick building, erected 1811, by its supporter, Rev. Henry Mills, and was incorporated with the National Society, in 1818: Charlotte Turpin, mistress. Foss Bury, a farm on the Foss road, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by N. Pillerton Leasow, another farm, $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile S. E.

Poor's Allotment.—By Inclosure Act for this parish, passed in the 34th year of the reign of George III., land was to be set out for poor persons to the value of £5. In consequence, the commissioners awarded 8a. 2r. 22p. to the churchwardens and overseers on trust, for the use of the poor. The land is now let at the annual rent of £9., which is applied in the purchase of coals, which are distributed at Christmas.

Directory.—Wm. Allibon, wheelwright; Hy. Burbidge, painter, &c.; Robert Flint, shoemaker; Wm. Hambidge, cattle dealer: Rev. Henry Mills, M. A., vicar, Manor House; Charlotte Turpin, schoolmistress. The farmers are Thos. Anderson, Mary Astley, Edward Humpriss, Foss Bury; William Lowe, John Newland, and John Smith. Carrier to Stratford, Tues.; and Warwick, Sat.: William Baylis.

PILLERTON PRIORS, OR OVER PILLERTON, a small village and parish, 4 miles S. W. by W. from Kineton. In 1841, here were 42 houses, and 183 inhabitants; 1821, 211; and 1484 acres of land; rateable value, £1697. 15s. Was, at the Conquest, called Pillerton Parva, and was the property of the Earl of Chester. The manor having been given to a monastery in Normandy, came to the crown at the dissolution, and was sold to Geoffery Sackerley, Esq., after which it descended, through the families of Holt, Cliff, Lee, and Ward, to William Compton, Esq., who sold it to the Earl of Rutland. The Rev. Henry Mills is the present owner, and the Rev. Francis Mills, lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, was destroyed by fire in 1666, of which there is no remains. The living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the living of Pillerton Hersey.

Poor's Money.—It is stated by the returns of 1786, that there was a sum of £30., belonging to the poor of this parish, then in the family of the late Thomas Gardner. In the year 1809, William Gardner gave a bond for the payment of this money, with interest at five per cent.; but after two years payment he became embarrassed. But from the expectations arising from an aged Aunt, it was expected the money and the arrears would be recovered.

Directory.—Richard Hemming, blacksmith; David Reading, carpenter; Thomas Shepherd, road surveyor, and John Gardner, John Miles, Foss Farm; John Toy, John Walton, and Thomas Walton, Cadbold, farmers. Carriers, to Banbury, Thos. Lamb, and Thos. Stock, Thur.; to Warwick and Leamington, Tues. and Sat., Thos. Lamb; and Stratford, Thomas Stock, Fri.

STRETTON-ON-FOSS, a parish and village, forming a detached portion of the Brailes division of the Kineton hundred, situated in the county of Gloucester, 3 miles W. S. W. from Shipston-on-Stour, containing 1978a. of land, of which 244 are glebe, and in 1841, 96 houses, and 434 inhabitants; 1801, 292; 1821, 410; rateable value, £1549. 15s. 5½d. Was held in the 36th of Henry III. by William de Bretun, of Ralph de Todney; and, after various transmissions, came into the hands of the monks of Bordesley, lords of the place; in the 27th of Henry VIII., it was the property of Thomas Badger, and others; and, about the reign of Charles II., came to the Sheldons by purchase, and is now the property of Sir George Richard Philips, Bart., and William Dickinson, Esq. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat edifice, rebuilt in 1841, and consists of nave, chancel, and small spire. The living, a rectory, with that of Ditchford annexed, value, in the King's books at £11., now £288. Patron, Mrs. Fitzgerald; and Rev. Charles Causton, M. A. incumbent. The rectory is a commodious residence near the Church. The Baptists have a small chapel here. Ditchford, Lower, a hamlet, contains three farms; one mile S. E.

Poor's Land.—A deed, dated 16 James I., notices certain lands held to the use of the poor, and another in 1574, and are now managed by the minister and one or two parishioners. The land consists of about 14 acres, let at the yearly rent of £14. The tenant bringing the amount in coals, at two different times during the winter; which are distributed to poor parishioners, in proportion to their families.

Directory.—Giles Archer, beerhouse and blacksmith; John Bumpus, coal dealer; Rev. Chas. Causton, M. A., rector; Miss Sarah Grimmett, Mr. Richard Hathaway, John Hitchman, vict., Golden Cross; Mrs. Eliz. Johnson, Mrs. Eliz. Mander, Richard Rouse, blacksmith; Wm. Shephard, carpenter; Mrs. Ann Tarplett, John Tarplett, shopkeeper; Thomas Tarplett, shoemaker; Wm. Wells, carpenter. The farmers are Rd. Anchor, Mary and Rd. Bye, Ditchford; Rd. Gibbs, John Grimmett, Rd. Grimmett, Geo. Haynes, Geo. Hopkins, Edward Hurlston, Ditchford; Charles Longford, George Longford, Stretton cottage; and Wm. Hawes, Longford.

WHATCOTT, a parish and small village, 4 miles N. E. from Shipston-on-Stour, contains 840 acres of land, of which 220 are glebe; and, in 1841, 44 houses, and 182 inhabitants; 1801, 199; 1821, 199; rateable value, £886. This was, at the Norman survey, in the possession of Hugh de Grentemaisnill. The descent of this manor is not very clear, but in the time of Henry IV., it was owned by Edmund, Earl of Stafford, by whose posterity it was enjoyed until the 12th of Henry VIII., when it passed to Sir William Compton; Sir Adolphus Dalrymple, Bart., is the present owner, and lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and tower, in the church are two brasses, to the memory of Thomas Nelle, who died 1480; and William Auldington, who died 1511; both rectors of this parish; and in the chancel is a Latin inscription, recording the death of John Davenport, in the 101st year of his age; having been rector here for the extraordinary period of 70 years and 6 months. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £12. 13. 7½d., now £213., in the patronage of Sir Adolphus Dalrymple, Bart.; and Rev. James Gorle, M. A., incumbent. The rectory a neat house near the Church. Directory.—John Batsford, carpenter; Rev. James Gorle, M. A., rector; and James Marshall, Thos. Marshall, and Wm. Marshall, farmers.

WHICHFORD, a parish and pleasant village, 6 miles S. E. from Shipston-on-Stour, includes the hamlets of Ascott and Stourton, which together, in 1841, had 691 inhabitants; 1821, 583; and 1996 acres of land; rateable value, £2259. In 1841, 79 houses were returned for Whichford, with 344 inhabitants. The family of Mohun were early possessors of the lordship. William Mohun, prior to the reign of Henry I., gave the church to the monks of Bridlington; the manor continued in this family till the time of Henry V., when, upon the failure of male issue, it came to the Strange's, and thence to the Earl of Derby, from whom it passed to Ralph Sheldon, Esq., in the 17th century. Sir George R. Philips is the principal owner and lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, in which are five bells; the whole has recently undergone considerable repairs, at a cost of about £1,000., defrayed by Sir G. R. Phillips, Bart., Rev. R. B. Pinniger, M. A., and the parishioners. The living, a rectory, value in the King's book, £19. 8s. 6½d., now £623., in the patronage of the Earl Beauchamp, and Rev. Richard Brown Pinniger, incumbent. The rectory is a neat residence, pleasantly situated near the church. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here.

Ascott, a hamlet and small village, ¾ mile east; in 1841, had 32 houses and 158 inhabitants. Stourton, another small village and township, 2 miles N.; in 1841, here were 51 houses and 189 inhabitants, with 960 acres of land, rateable value £1148. 10s. The principal land owners are the executors of the late John Webb, Mr. R. B. Shaw, Rev. R. B. Pinniger, Mrs. Ann Woodcock, and lady of the manor; Mr. Edward Rouse, Mr. John Rouse, Mr. John Jaques, Sir G. R. Phillips, Bart., and Mr. Henry Timms; several others have small estates here. The Methodists have a small chapel here, erected 1809.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Mr. Watkins, in 1708, gave £10.; John Timms, 1711, gave £5.; Rev. Mr. Ingram, 1752, gave £10.; John Timms, 1764, gave £10.; an unknown donor, £10.; to these the parish added £5., making £50., which, by the returns of 1785, are stated to be in houses and land, and to produce £2. 10s. per annum. It appears from living witnesses, that £50. was expended in a purchase by the parish officers, and that £2. 10s., as the interest, was many years distributed under the superintendence of the minister, among the poor, at Easter, but was discontinued about the year 1800. The property now consists of seven tenements, in which the parish officers place poor persons rent free. It also appears that the Rev. Mr. Watkins, in 1708, gave, by will, £10. for the use of the poor of Stourton, the interest to be given to 10 poor families on Easter Monday. This money was lost by the failure of John Marshall.

Those marked * reside at Stourton, and † Ascott, the remainder at Whichford.

WOLFORD, (GREAT,) a parish and small village, 4 miles S. by W. from Shipston-on-Stour, contains with the hamlet of Little Wolford, 2,671 acres of land, and, in 1841, 583 inhabitants; 1821, 529. Great Wolford contained, in 1841, 58 houses and 311 inhabitants; in 1801, 278; rateable value, £2,247. 12s. 4d. Robert de Stafford held this at the Conquest, and it continued with his descendants until the reign of Henry VIII., when Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, transferred it to Sir William Compton and his heirs. Lord Redesdale is lord of the manor, and principal owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, consists of nave, chancel and spire, was rebuilt in 1835, and will accommodate 460, of which 338 are free. The living, a discharged vicarage, value in K. B. £8. now £170. augmented with £400. private benefactions, £200. Queen Anne's bounty, and £300. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of the Warden and Fellows of Merton College, Oxford; and incumbency of the Rev. Domvile Wheeler, M. A. The vicarage is a neat residence. A neat school, with a house for the master, was erected 1821, by the late Lord Redesdale, and is chiefly supported by subscription.

WOLFORD, (LITTLE,) a township and small pleasant village, ¾ mile S.E., and 4 miles S. from Shipston-on-Stour, contains 1,320 acres of land, and, in 1841, 53 houses and 274 inhabitants, in 1801, 229. Was possessed by Earl Mellent in the Conqueror's time, and afterwards devolved to the Barons Stafford and Ingrams. Sir George Richard Philips is lord of the manor, and sole owner.

Hasting Ingram, by will, 5th August, 1746, gave to the vicar and overseers of Woolford, and their successors, a rent charge of 40s., clear of all deductions, on trust, for the use of the poor of Little Woolford; and also a clear yearly rent charge of 10s. for the use of the poor of Great Woolford, payable out of certain lands in Little Woolford. The agent of the Ingram Estates pays the charges, and generally a much greater amount is distributed at Little Woolford.

Great Woolford Directory.—Wm. Clifford, schoolmaster; James Dyer, vict., Fox and Hounds; Thomas Dyer, carpenter; Edward Randall, corn miller; Mr. Joseph Smith, Richard Walker, carpenter; Rev. Geo. Domville Wheeler, M.A., rector; the farmers are, Ann Badger and Wm. Gillett, Eliza Fletcher, John Fletcher, Rd. Green, John Hurlstone, John Shephard, and Wm. Shephard.

Little Woolford Directory.—John and Edward Barrett, corn millers; Jonth. and Wm. Crossley, carpenters; Wm. Dyer, blacksmith; Thomas Greenhill, brickmaker; Rd. Hall, shoemaker; William Hunt blacksmith; the farmers are James Walker Dyer, Thos. Edgington, junr., John Rainbow, and Thomas and Parsons Shirley.

THE BURTON DASSETT DIVISION

Comprises eight parishes and one chapelry, viz., Avon Dasset, Burton Dasset, Fenny Compton, Farnborough, Mollington Chapelry, Ratley, Shotswell, Warmington, and Wormleighton, and 18,406 acres of land; in 1841, 718 inhabited houses, 25 uninhabited, and 1 building; 3,412 inhabitants, of whom 1706 were males, and 1706 females. This is probably the only division in the Kingdom, where the males and females are equal in number.

AVON DASSETT, a parish and small pleasant village, 5 miles E. by S. from Kineton, contains 1331 acres, and in 1841, 51 houses, and 287 inhabitants; 1821, 242; 1831, 226; rateable value, £1847. 7s. 0½d. This was, in the Conqueror's time, held by Earl Mellent, and descending through the Cantelupes, Bishopdens, and Peechys, came to the Montforts, of Coleshill, from which family, with some intermediate, it passed to Sir Ralph Saddler, who sold the manor to the Woodwards, of Butler's Marston. The principal land-owners are Wm. Holbech, Esq., and Rev. Robert G. Jeston, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, and contains some tablets to the Woodward family. The living, a rectory, value in K.B. £13. 8s. 9d., now £450.; the Rev. Robt. G. Jeston, patron and incumbent. The rectory, a good residence, situated on a commanding eminence, having a fine view of the surrounding country, This parish enjoys the privilege of sending 15 children to the free school at Farnborough.

CHARITIES.—John Freckleton, by will, 1754, gave to certain trustees, including the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, certain lands in this parish, the rents after the death of his wife, to be appropriated to the use of a school in this parish; but this devise was considered void under the statute of 9th of George II. This parish has, however, the privilege of sending ten boys and five girls to the free school of Farnborough.

Rev. John James, of the rectory of Avon Dasset, who was buried, 10th December, 1617, gave by will, to the poor of this parish, 20s. yearly, for ever, out of certain lands in the parish, to be distributed by equal portions on Good Friday and St. Thomas's day. It is now paid, 10s. from land belonging to John Spencer, 5s. from land belonging to John Haines, 2s. 6d. from land belonging to Margaret Barnes, and 2s. 6d. from land belonging to John Cooper; and is mostly given in money to the poor, by the minister and churchwardens.

Rev. Thomas Hindes, by will, 1768, gave £50. to the rector and churchwardens of this parish, to distribute the interest thereof in equal portions on Midsummer-day and Christmas-day, to poor parishioners. This legacy is now £100. three per cent. consols, standing in the names of the Rev. Humphrey Jeston, and two others. The interest, £3., is distributed to the poor with the other charities.

Poor Allotment.—Upon the inclosure of the open and common lands in this parish, in the year 1780, two allotments were awarded, in trust, for the poor, in lieu of all right of cutting furze, &c.; one in Church Hill quarter, containing 3a. 1r. 16p., and the other in the same quarter, containing 3a. 1r. 25p. These allotments are now (1825,) let at the yearly rent of £21. 5s., which is distributed to all the poor at 2s. or 3s. a head. Those who occupy land are excluded.

Directory.—Thos. Abbotts, beerhouse; Chas. Barnes, beerhouse; Charles Cooper, corn miller; Jph. Cooper, maltster; Jas. Garner, farrier; John Haines, gentleman; Geo. Howtin, shopkeeper; Rev. Robert Green Jeston, M.A., rector; Daniel Jobson, blacksmith. The farmers are Wm. Cory, Thos. and John Griffin, Thos. Hawtin, John Huggins, Ann King, Ann Maycock, and Joseph Russell.

BURTON DASSETT, an extensive parish, 5 miles E. from Kineton, though now a scattered village, was formerly a market town of some note; it comprises the hamlets of Knightcote, Little Dasset, Northend, and many scattered farms, and contains 4807 acres of land, 90 of which are glebe; and in 1841, 143 houses and 614 inhabitants; 1801, 600; 1821, 670; 1831, 673; rateable value £5335. 19s. 2d.; this was formerly called Cheping Dasset, on account of its market; in the 51st of Henry III. a Charter was granted to the lord of the manor for a weekly market and a fair; in the reign of Henry VII. Sir Edward Belknap, who then possessed the manor, greatly depopulated this lordship, but obtained an act of indemnity, being in office under the king. The manor afterwards descended to the Temples, several of whom are interred in the Church. Lord Willoughby de Broke is lord of the manor and principal owner; Mr. James Yardley, Mr. William Ledbrook, Thomas and Daniel Ledbrook, Mr. John Robinson, and several others have freehold estates here. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower containing six good bells. The living, a vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £14.; now £167. Patrons: Lord Willoughby de Broke and R. W. Blencowe, Esq.; and Rev. W. D. Sheard, M.A., incumbent. The vicarage, a neat residence near the Church. A school, supported by the freeholders, for the poor children of the hamlets of Knightcote and North End.

HAMLETS.—Knightcote, a hamlet, two miles north, in the time of Henry III. belonged to a family of that name, at which period there was a Chapel in the village. The Wesleyans have a place of worship here, erected 1837. Here is a mineral spring called Stockwell. Little Dasset, another small hamlet, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile west. North End, a hamlet which had formerly a Chapel, but it was long since desecrated. Here is a small Wesleyan Chapel, erected 1831. Bedlem, a farm, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. Burton Hill, a farm, 1 mile S.W. Frog Hall, another farm, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. Marlborough Farm, 2 miles W. And Owlington, a farm, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W.

CHARITIES.—John Kimbell, by deed, 14th of Edward IV., conveyed a messuage and two yard lands in Mollington, to Ralph Wallis and his heirs, in trust, that the rents should be employed as follows: 7s. towards the use and repairs of the parish church of Burton Dasset; and 2d., in bread, to be given to all the poor householders in Knightcote and North End, in the name of Dole; and all the residue to be employed in such manner as the trustees and inhabitants should direct. The estate was, 7th March, 1815, conveyed to Thomas Ledbrooke and seven others, on trust, reciting that the open fields in Mollington had been enclosed, and that certain exchanges had been made. The premises now consist of the old house and barn, &c., and four parcels of arable land, containing 47a. 2r. 37p., let (1825) at the yearly rent of £70. In addition, the trustees are possessed of a house in Knightcote, with a small garden, and about a quarter of an acre of land besides, which they purchased in 1815, for the use of a schoolmaster, which he occupies at the rent of 1s. per week. Out of the rents, 7s. is paid to the churchwardens, and a dole of bread, now a fourpenny loaf, to every house in the two hamlets, which, in 1825, cost £3. 2s. The rest is applied to the schooling of poor children in those hamlets. For reading and writing, 6d. per week is paid; and when arithmetic is added, 7d. per week. The rest is applied to the reparation of roads, and a dinner at the annual meeting.

Marked 1, reside at Knightcote; 2, at North End; and the rest where specified.

COMPTON FENNY, a parish and considerable village, pleasantly situated in a valley, 6 miles E. by N. from Kineton, contains 2068 acres of land; and in 1841, 147 houses, and 614 inhabitants; 1801, 383; 1821, 572; 1831, 565; rateable value, £3282. 14s. 2d.; was held, in part, at the Conquest, by Turchil de Warwick: the manor subsequently came to Sir Thomas Montfort, and in the 13th of Henry VIII., was the property of John Spencer, Esq. Amongst the incumbents of the Church here, it may be remarked, was Aimer, brother, by the mother's side, to Henry III., who was presented thereto by the canons of Kenilworth; he was afterwards Bishop of Winchester. The principal land-owners are William Bech, Esq., who is also lord of the manor, Rev. J. M. Knott, and Rev. Chas. A. Heurtley; and Mr. Thos. Reading, Mr. Daniel Knibb, Mr. John Matthews, Mr. Thos. Rocketts, and several others are freeholders here. The Church, dedicated to St. Clare, has a square tower, surmounted with a spire, and consists of nave, side aisles, and chancel, which has recently been refitted and beautified. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £15. 8s. 4d.; now, £600.; in the patronage of the President and Fellows of Corpus Christi College, Oxford; and Rev. Chas. Abel Heurtley, B.D., incumbent. The Rectory, a good stone residence near the Church. The Wesleyans have a Chapel here, built 1838. Parochial School, supported by subscription, is a small neat brick building, erected 1833; cost £138. 10s. 4d., raised by a grant of £54. from the National Society, and subscriptions from the Rev. C. R. Watkins and others; Benjamin Gulliver, master.

On Gredenton Hills are the remains of an encampment, supposed to be of the ancient Britons. The Oxford and Rugby Railway and the Oxford Canal intersect this parish.

CHARITIES.—Poor's Money. A sum of £22., for the use of the poor, (the origin unknown,) is now placed in the hands of Edward Pettifer Reading, at the interest of 4 per cent. per annum, making 17s. 6d., which is applied to the use of poor widows.

Richard Reading, by will, 1816, gave £100. to the poor of this parish, the income to be given to the poor on Good Friday, in what the parish should think best. This sum is placed in the Banbury Bank; but it is intended, with the surplus accrued since the payment of £10. for legacy duty, to place it in the public funds.

Richard Tucker, by will, 1817, gave £100. stock in the Navy five per cents., to the poor of this parish. It is now reduced to £105. four per cents.; some legal expenses occurred in getting possession of this charity. The dividend, £4. 4s., is now distributed to the poor.

James Archer, by will, 1611, gave £20. to the use of 20 poor cottagers of this parish. Nothing is known of this.

FARNBOROUGH, a parish and pleasant village $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. from Kington, contains 1,953 acres of land, and in 1841, 74 houses, and 367 inhabitants; 1801, 214; 1821, 350; 1831, 365; rateable value, £3,751. 9s. 9d.; was held by a family named Say, from the reign of Richard I. to that of Edward III., when it came, by purchase, to the Ranleighs; and about the commencement of the 18th century was sold to Ambrose Holbech, Esq., an eminent lawyer, in whose family it continues. William Holbech, Esq., is the lord of the manor and principal owner; T. Rudge, Esq., has also an estate here. The Church, dedicated to St. Botolph, was considerably enlarged in 1830, and consists of nave, chancel, and tower; it contains some good monuments to the Holbech family: the living, a discharged vicarage, value, in K.B., £5.12s.1d., now £304., augmented with £200., private benefactions, and £200., Queen Anne's bounty; William Holbech, Esq., patron; Rev. Charles William Holbech, M.A., incumbent. The vicarage is a neat house adjoining the church. Tithes commuted 1841, rectorial, £5. 11s.; vicarial, £385. 5s. Here is a handsome mansion, the residence of William Holbech Esq.

CHARITIES.—John Freckleton, by a codicil to his will, 1764, bequeathed the residue of his estate to William Holbech, Esq., John Bull, and the vicar of Farnborough, for the time being, on trust, to be applied, after the death of his wife, in such charitable uses for the three parishes of Avon Dassett, Farnborough, and Cloydon, as they, their heirs and assigns, should, by deed, direct. The sum of £1,057. 7s. 1d., Old South Sea Annuities, was realized from this bequest, now forming part of a fund £1,398. 2s. 6d., Old South Sea Annuities. A further part of this fund, amounting to £169. 9s. 4d., arose from accumulations of interest after the death of Mrs. Freckleton, who died in 1783, and was added to the former sum in 1788. The residue of the stock, £171. 6s. 1d., was purchased with a gift, in 1812, of Viscount Andover, of £100. These funds were applied to the establishment of a school at Farnborough for the benefit of the three parishes above-named. Mr. Holbech agreed that his school should be used for this charity, on condition that he should name five children in addition to Mr. Freckleton's, the trustees repairing the school, which he would afterwards keep in repair. The whole amount of annual dividend is £41. 18s. 10d. In 1813 it was fixed for the schoolmaster's salary to be £40. a year, and that he should teach as many children of the parish of Farnborough as the trustees should think fit. There are now about seventy children, boys and girls, in the school, of these, thirty are from the parishes of Avon Dassett and Cloydon, fifteen from each, the remainder being from this parish. The school is now conducted on the National School system. The school was rebuilt in 1831; Daniel Cotton, master.

William Holbech, by will, 1716, gave £30., as a stock for the poor of this parish, the interest arising to be disposed of to such poor persons as the owner of his manor-house there, and the vicar there, for the time being, should think fit. In 1723 the executors of Mr. Gibbs paid a sum of £35. 14s. 6d. as his legacy, for the use of the poor of this parish. In 1771 these two sums, with savings, in the whole, £105. 6s. 6d., was placed in the hands of William Holbech, Esq., on his note, at five-per cent. interest. William Alcock, by will, left £100. to the poor of this parish; but his estate proving insufficient, only £50. 18s. 9d. was realized. This sum was also placed in the hands of Mr. Holbech, at five-per cent. The interest of these three sums, £7. 16s. 2d. per annum, is received by the vicar, and distributed amongst the most needy poor of the parish, in small sums of money.

Directory.—Samuel Arnott, baker; John Chater, blacksmith; Daniel Cotton, schoolmaster; John Dury, butcher and grazier; William Fessey, maltster; Mr. Robert Marris, Rev. Charles William Holbech, M.A., vicar; William Holbech, Esq.; John Manning, carpenter; Thomas Welch, beerhouse; Thomas Welch, jun., butcher; and Elizabeth Bates, Thomas Cooknell, William Cooper, Mary Curtis, James Griffin, farmers; and John King, grazier.

MOLLINGTON, a small village and chapelry, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Banbury, containing 1,354 acres of land, and in 1841, 385 inhabitants; rateable value, £2,112. 14s. 11d.; this is in the parish of Cropredy, Oxfordshire: William Bech, Esq., is the principal owner. The chapel, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, and tower. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here.

Directory.—Thomas Archer, blacksmith; John and Uriah Boot, coopers; George

RATLEY, a small village and parish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. from Kineton; in 1841, here were 82 houses, and 397 inhabitants; 1801, 221; 1821, 402; 1831, 376; and 1,635 acres of land; rateable value, £2,072. 11s. 4d.; this was long in the possession of the Earls of Warwick, who derived their right from Turchil de Warwick, the owner of it, at the Conquest. In the reign of Henry VIII. the manor was purchased by John Warner, whose descendants held it many years; the Earl Jersey is the principal landowner and lord of the manor; and Walter Sandor, Rev. Edward Miller, and Rev. E. B. Pursey, have estates here. On the brow of Hedge Hill, within this parish, is a large triangular fortification, called Nadbury Camp, supposed to be of Roman construction. This hill commands a delightful prospect of a fertile country, in a high state of cultivation, including the vale of Red Horse, which skirts its base; it is further celebrated, in the annals of history, as the scene of a sanguinary battle, between the royalists and the parliamentary forces, September 2nd, 1642, in which, though several hundreds were slain on both sides, and among them many of the nobility, both armies kept the field. Numerous fragments of skeletons have been found in the vicinity. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B., £16. 12s., now £110., augmented with £400., Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of the crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Miller, M.A. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. Upton, a small hamlet, 1 mile S.W. Upton House is a handsome spacious mansion, the seat and property of Viscount Lord George Augustus Frederick Villiers.

Poors Land.—Upon the inclosure of the common fields, of Radway, about 80 years ago, 9a. 2r. 15p. of land was allotted to the trustees for the poor of the parish of Ratley, in lieu of one quarter of a yard land in the said common fields. Upon the Ratley inclosure, about 50 years ago, 1a. 2r. 28p. of land was allotted to the vicar and churchwardens, and overseers of the poor of the parish in trust, for the poor thereof; and also, by the same award, six parcels of land were set out for public stone and gravel pits, of which the herbage was for the use of the poor. The Radway allotment is let for the annual rent of £16., and the Ratley allotment, with part of the herbage of the gravel pits, for £5. About thirty years ago a school was established, and £15. of this income was paid to the schoolmaster, for instructing about 60 children of both sexes, in reading, writing, and arithmetic. The vicarage house, which is small, was given up to the master, rent free. A new school is now in course of erection; will cost £340., defrayed by voluntary contributions, and a grant from government. The residue is applied in a distribution of bread at Easter.

Directory.—Viscount Lord George Augustus Frederick Villiers, Upton House; John Coles, vict., Rose and Crown; Geo. England, carpenter; Mr. Josiah England, James Haynes, quarryman; Thos. Jackson, schoolmaster; Wm. Neavel, shopkpr.; Mr. Jph. Timkins, Rt. Stanley, quarryman; John Tummerton, corn miller; Daniel Woodfield, blacksmith. The farmers are Sl. Berridge, Upton; Thos. Brown, Wm. Graves, Manor House; John Harbage, and George Watts, and maltster.

SHOTSWELL, or Shottiswell parish, and irregularly built village, on the brow of the elevated range called Edge Hill, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m N.N.W. from Banbury; contains 1,232 acres of land; and in 1841, 73 houses, and 366 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,445. 12s. 4½d.; it is supposed to have belonged to Warrington at the time of the Norman survey. A native of this place, named John Shottiswell, was prior of Coventry, from 1453 to 1460. Colonel North is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, consists of nave, chancel, side-aisles, and tower, surmounted with a spire. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued, in K.B., at £5. 13s. 6d., now £157.; Colonel North, patron; and Rev. Edward Gibbs Walford, incumbent.

Maidens' Dole.—Upon the inclosure of the common fields of this parish, in 1794, 1a. 1r. 7p. of land was allotted in respect of the Maidens' Dole, of which the origin is not known; a further allotment of 3r. 13p. was also awarded to the lord of the manor, vicar, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, and their successors, for the use of the poor inhabitants of the parish, in compensation for their rights of cutting furze, &c. These allotments, being contiguous, have been inclosed together, and make one field of 2a. 0r. 20p., let at the yearly rent of £11. 15s., of which £7. 1s. is reserved for the Maidens' Dole, and £4. 14s. for the Poor's Lot. The former is distributed on Good Friday in bread, and the latter is usually given in money.

CHARITIES.—Rev. William Harrison, by will, 1786, gave to John Callow and two others, and the vicar of Shotswell, who should immediately succeed him in the vicarage, the sum of £20., upon trust, to place the same out and pay the interest amongst all the poor of Shotswell. This legacy was invested in the purchase of £28. 6s. 4d., three per cent. consols. The dividends are applied for every two or three years, and are distributed by the minister and churchwardens to the poor.

WARMINGTON parish, and pleasant village, 5½ miles N.W. by N. from Banbury, containing, with the hamlet of Arlescote, 1701 acres of land; and in 1841, 112 houses, and 496 inhabitants; in 1801, 395; 1821, 437; 1831, 470; rateable value, £2,051. 3s. 11d.; was given at the Conquest to Earl Mellent, and came, with his other possessions in this county, to Henry de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, who founded here, and endowed with the manor, a small alien priory of Benedictines, which, according to tradition, stood near the centre of the village; the possessions being seized upon by Henry IV., the manor was, in his 6th year, granted to the Carthusians of Witham, in the county of Somerset, confirmed by Henry VI., in his 10th year. At the dissolution it was obtained by the Sheldon family; but soon passed from them, and in the 5th of Edward VI. was granted to William Birt and others. The principal land owners are J. Loveday, Esq.; Rev. William Harrison, Mr. William Ledbrook, William Holbech, Esq.; Mr. John Cambery, Mr. Samuel Huggins, Mr. R. Hollaway, and the Earl Jersey, who is also lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, on a commanding eminence, consists of nave, chancel, side-aisles, and tower; the chancel has been furnished with open pews; but the body of the church is in great want of repair. In an attached building, used as a vestry, is a stone altar, consisting of a slab resting on brackets; in the upper room is an opening like a niche; it is supposed this was a vestry and temporary abode of the priest. In the grave-yard is a stone to the memory of Captain Alexander Gourdin, who was slain at the battle of Edge-hill. The living, a rectory, value, in K.B., £16. 13s. 11d., now £450.; in the patronage of the trustees of Hulme's exhibition, and incumbency of the Rev. William Harrison, M.A. The rectory, a good residence. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. Here is a small free school, supported by voluntary contributions; John Haynes, master.

Arlescote, a small hamlet, 1½ miles N.W. by N., contains 9 houses, and 43 inhabitants, and maintains its own roads. Stoneton, an extra parochial liberty, consisting of one farm in this parish, 1 mile N.E., in the county of Northampton; the house is surrounded by a moat.

Robert Gardner, by will, 1727, gave to the value of 6s. from three estates, to be given in bread, in twopenny loaves, on Easter-Sunday, Whit-Sunday, and Christmas-day. These sums are paid from land in this parish, by three different owners, Mr. Braggins, Mr. Bruerton, and William Holbech.

WORMLEIGHTON, a parish and small pleasant village, 6 miles S.S.E. from Southam, contains 2,302 acres of land, of which 700 are in the extra parochial liberty of Stoneton, in Northamptonshire; and in 1841, 34 houses, and 98 inhabitants; rateable value, £3,871. 11s. At the Conquest, was one of the possessions of Earl Mellent; but soon afterwards belonged to Geoffrey de Clinton. It subsequently passed through the various families, of Walsh, Peche, and Montfort, to William Cope, who sold it in the 22nd of Henry VII., to John Spencer, Esq., who was afterwards knighted; and hence the manor descended to its present noble owner Lord Spencer; Sir John Spencer built a magnificent mansion here, in the reign of Henry VIII., in which he resided, with a household of sixty persons. There are considerable remains of this mansion still existing. Gough, in his additions of Camden, mentions the discovery, between this place and Stanton, of a coffin hewn out of the trunk of a tree, and containing bones and coins, some of which were of the age of Constantine. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, consists of nave, chancel, which are divided by an ancient screen of beautiful workmanship, side-aisles, and tower, with three bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, rated, in K.B., £6. 13s. 4d., now £80., augmented with £200., private benefactions; and 200., Queen Anne's bounty. Earl Spencer, patron; Rev. Robert Maynard, M.A., incumbent. Charity school, endowed by Mrs. Catherine Arnold. The present neat school, with house for the mistress, was built 1839, at the sole expense of Earl Spencer; Jane Turner, mistress, whose salary is £20. per annum.

Directory.—Thos. Fabling, grazier, Manor House; John Fessey, farmer, Stoneton; Rd. Fessey, farmer, The Lodge; Rev. Robert Maynard, M.A., Vicarage; David Selby, farmer; John Selby, farmer; John and Thomas Turner, carpenters; Thomas Walton, farmer, New House; Eli Warren, stonemason; and James Welch, grazier.

THE KINETON DIVISION

Comprises 14 parishes and one chapelry, viz.:—Atherstone-on-Stour, Butler's Marston, Chadshunt, Compton Verney, Easington, Gaydon, Halford, Ilmington, Kineton, Combrook chapelry, Lithorne, Oxhill, Radway, Tysoe, and Whitchurch; and 30,600a. of land in 1841, 1,356 inhabited houses, 50 uninhabited, and 3 building, with 6,388 inhabitants, of whom 3,298 were males, & 3,099 females; of these numbers, 1,589 males, 1461 females, were under 20 years of age; 1,700 males, 1,638 females, 20 years old and upwards; 5,205 persons were born in this county, and 1,183 elsewhere.

ATHERSTONE-UPON-STOUR, a small village and parish, on the banks of the Stour, from whence its distinguishing appellation is derived, 3 miles S. from Stratford-on-Avon, containing 1042 acres of land; in 1841, 22 houses, and 93 inhabitants; 1801, 112; 1821, 94; 1831, 87; rateable value, £1,400. The manor was held in capite, by John de Langley, in the 7th of Edward III., "by a pair of gilt spurs;" and his descendants enjoyed it for many generations, subsequently to which, in the 12th of Henry VII., it was conveyed to Richard Empson, and, after a few subsequent changes, came to Sir Thomas Samwell, Bart. The principal claim of this village to notice is derived from the circumstance of Dr. Thomas, the continuator of Dugdale's antiquities of the county having resided here some years; he also possessed property in the neighbourhood, in right of his wife. James Robert West, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of the soil. The Church, a small ancient structure, consisting of nave and chancel, with small wood tower, in which there are three bells. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Book, £13. 1s. 8d., now £288.; Rev. Thomas Cox, D.D., patron and incumbent. The rectory is a neat brick residence near the church. Tithes commuted 1844, at £253.

BUTLERS MARSTON, a parish and small village, on a branch of the Avon, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. W. by S. from Kington, contains 1,800 acres of land; and, in 1841, 68 houses, and 313 inhabitants; 1801, 200; 1821, 275; 1831, 332; rateable value, £1,677. This is called by Dugdale, Merston Boteler; was, in the Conqueror's time, part of the possessions of Hugh de Grentemaisnill, but in the reign of Stephen, appears to have been granted to Ralph Boteler, of Oversley, who gave the church to the monastery of Alcester. Subsequently John Woodward, of Peter Temple, purchased these estates, with a large portion of the demesne, at the beginning of the reign of Queen Mary, and died in the 3rd year of the same reign, and was succeeded by Richard, his heir, who dying two years afterwards, the estates were possessed by John, his son and heir, with whose descendents it still remains. Richard Woodward raised a troop of horse for King Charles I., at the battle of Edge hill, where he and his younger brother were both slain. The principal land owners are Mrs. L. A. and Miss Woodward, who are also ladies of the manor, and Christ's Church, Oxford; Mr. Edward Ivins, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Thomas Middleton, have also estates here. Manor House, the ancient and commodious family mansion of the Woodwards, pleasantly situated on a commanding eminence near the Church, is the seat and property of Mrs. L. A. Woodward, whose good taste and exertions have been employed in restoring the ancient seat of her family. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a neat edifice, rebuilt 1838, by the Incorporated Society, and consists of nave, chancel and side aisle, with square embattled tower, in which there are five bells; it contains a neat marble monument to the Woodward family. The living, a discharged vicarage, value in K. B., £8. 3s. 4d.; now, £89.; augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Christ's Church, Oxford, and incumbency of the Rev. George Fuller Thomas, M. A. The vicarage, a good residence, was restored and enlarged by the present vicar in 1846. The Wesleyans have a place of worship here.

William Loggin, by will, 1635, gave 20s. yearly, for ever, to the poor of Butlers' Marston, to be paid out of his rectory of Easington. This annual sum is now received from the owners of tithe in Easington, in two sums of 10s. each, which is applied every four or five years, when it is distributed by the churchwardens to the poor.

Directory.—Wm. Butler, shoemaker; James Coles, baker and grocer; Wm. Ledbrook, beerhouse and grocer; Thos. Mason, blacksmith; Major Righton, carpenter; Rev. Geo. Fuller Thomas, M. A., vicar; James Walker, corn miller; Thomas Walker, baker; Mrs. Letitia Adkin Woodward, Manor House. The Farmers are Robert Ashby, Elizabeth Baughan, Geo. Griffin, Tub's End; John Hall, Moorlands; Edward Ivins, Daniel Munford, Herdhill; William Parker, and butcher; John Sarjeant, Ox House; John Sarjeant, Blacklands; and Thomas and George Fennell Wesson, Tub's End.

CHADSHUNT, a small parish, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. E. by N. from Kington. In 1841, here were 8 houses and 36 inhabitants; 1821, 37; 1831, 45; and 1334a. 2r. 14p. of land; rateable value, £1706. 13s. This was formerly a hamlet in Bishop's Itchington, and was given by Leofric, to the monks of Coventry, before the Conquest, who passed them to the bishops of Coventry and Lichfield. Robert Knight, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner. Here is a handsome mansion, the property of Robert Knight, Esq., and the seat of Edward Bolton King, Esq.

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, and tower, in which are six bells. The living, a curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Bishop's Itchington, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, and incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Lea.

Directory.—Edward Bolton King, Esq., and Isaac Greaves, farmer, Kineton Farm.

COMPTON VERNEY, a small parish, 2 miles north west from Kineton, contains 1740 acres of land; in 1841, 12 houses and 34 inhabitants; 1801, 49; 1821, 37; 1831, 56; rateable value, £1072. The manor, in the Conqueror's time, was passed to Henry de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, and in the latter end of the reign of Henry I., to Robert Murdack. In the 20th of Henry V., it was in the possession of Richard Verney, Esq., afterwards Knight, who built the principal part of a mansion, which was standing in the early part of the 17th century. About the middle of the last century, an elegant and spacious family mansion was erected here, from a design by Adams, surrounded by extensive pleasure grounds, and well ornamented with water, and is the seat and property of Henry Verney Lord Willoughby de Broke, who is lord of the manor and owner of the soil. There is not a Church in this parish; the inhabitants attend his lordship's private Chapel, which is a handsome and commodious building, near the mansion.

Directory.—Henry Verney Lord Willoughby de Broke, Compton House; Chas. Mann, farmer, Hill Field; and Thos. Perkin, farmer, The Lodge.

EATINGTON, a parish, comprised of Lower and Upper Eatington, bounded on the S. W. by the river Stour, contains 3,441 acres of land; and in 1841, 158 houses and 704 inhabitants; in 1801, 509; 1821, 641; 1831, 728; rateable value, £4,290. 12s. 2d.; E. J. Shirley, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner; Lady Mordaunt, Lord Willoughby de Broke, and several others have estates here.

EATINGTON (UPPER,) a considerable and pleasant village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. by W. from Kineton, had, in former times, a Chapel, dedicated to our Lady, in which a chantry was founded in the 4th of Edward I. Some remains of the chapel are still visible in a dwelling-house, into which it was converted in the 17th century. Dugdale observes of this place "that it is the only one in the county which glories in an uninterrupted succession of its owners for so long a tract of time;" Henry de Ferrers possessed it at the Conquest, and it has continued with his descendants in the male line ever since. The Church, dedicated to St. Thomas a Becket, is a neat modern edifice, erected 1802, consists of nave and chancel, and contains several handsome monuments to the families of Shirley and Underwood. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's books at £12. 0s. 7½d., now £154.; patron, Evelyn John Shirley, Esq.; and Rev. Richard Morris, M.A., incumbent. The vicarage, a good residence, pleasantly situated, near the church.

EATINGTON (LOWER), $6\frac{3}{4}$ miles W.S.W. from Kineton. Until the reign of Henry III. this was the principal seat of the Ferrers; but they afterwards fixed their seat at Shirley, in the county of Derby, and thence assumed their present surname. The family has, however, again resumed as their seat, Eatington Hall, which is a large but irregular building, having been constructed at different periods; some parts appear very ancient. It contains a fine collection of paintings, a good library, and some specimens of ancient armour; the mansion is surrounded with a well-planted park of considerable extent, and is the seat and property of Evelyn John Shirley, Esq.

In 1795, an act was obtained to desecrate the ancient church, and build a new one, in the hamlet of Upper Eatington. The tower, with some portions of the nave and chancel, are preserved, and have a very picturesque appearance, being profusely covered with ivy. In the south transept, which is fitted up as a private chapel for the family, is preserved the splendid monument of white marble, erected to the memory of Robert, Earl Ferrers, great grandfather to the present owner. The Society of Friends, the Independents, and the Wesleyans, have each a place of worship here. Here is a Free School, with a house for the master, supported by Mrs. Shirley; about sixty children attend; Mr. George Moore, master, HAMLETS.—Fullready, 2 m. S.E. Lambcote, 1 m. S.; and Thornton, 1 m. N.E. by E.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Margaret Underhill, of Loxley, by will, 1780, bequeathed to the minister and churchwardens of Eatington, the sum of £100., upon trust, to place the same at interest on real or government security, and distribute the proceeds year by year to poor people of this parish. This money was placed in the hands of Mr. Charles Hunt, of Stratford-upon-Avon, who kept a bank there, and for some years paid the interest; but afterwards became bankrupt, and the money was lost. A dividend of 4d. in the pound was declared; but this debt was never proved.

Allotment for Fuel.—By the act for inclosing the open and common fields, in the hamlets of Upper Eatington and Fullready, passed in 1795, it was directed that four acres of furze, or heath-ground, should be allotted to the vicar, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, and their successors, in trust, to appropriate the same to the poor fuel. The four acres, so set out, are now let at the yearly rent of £5., and the money now distributed to the poor in coals.

Donor Unknown.—By the returns of 1786, a rent-charge of £1. was paid to the parish, and vested in the minister, churchwardens, and overseers. The sum of 15s. is received from William and George Horneblow out of an estate in this parish, their property; and 5s. from the trustee (1825) of Mr. William Bacon, the owner of lands in this parish, then a minor; it is now given in coals.

Mrs. Sarah Roberts, of Upper Eatington, by will, 1807, bequeathed to Thomas Parsons and six others, the sum of £450., to be invested in the purchase of stock, for the better support of a minister for the time being, of a congregation of Dissenters, meeting for divine worship in the meeting-house erected by her late husband. She also bequeathed £200. to the same trustees, upon trust, to dispose of one moiety of the dividends to a person for teaching a Sunday-school under the care of the minister of the aforesaid meeting-house, and to employ the other moiety in providing two dinners for the said children, one at Midsummer and the other at Christmas. By a codicil, in 1810, she directed that there should be only one dinner, and that at Christmas; and gave the remainder for books for the school, firing in the winter, and candles for the chapel. The above sums, after paying the legacy-duty, amounted to £675., of which £405. was invested for the minister; £180. for the Sunday school; and £90. for the poor; and after paying £1. 12s. 6d. for expenses, now stands £713. 5s. 7d. new 4-per cents; the dividends £28. 10s., are paid over by the trustees to the minister of the meeting-house; of this he retains 9-15th for himself, 4-15th he pays to the Sunday school, and 2-15th he distributes in bread to the poor. Of the money applied to the Sunday school, one-half is given to a schoolmaster, and the rest in providing a dinner on Christmas-day, and supplying coals and candles for the school and meeting. The bread is given away in sixpenny loaves at one distribution, and is not confined to the poor who attend the chapel.

Post Office, at Mr. James Rogers'; letters arrive at 10-30 a.m., and are dispatched at 3 p.m., (except Sunday) when they are dispatched at 11-30 a.m.

GAYDON, a parish and small scattered village, 3 miles N.E. from Kineton, contains 1,453 acres of land, and in 1841, 56 houses, and 276 inhabitants; in 1801, 219; 1821, 187; 1831, 213; rateable value, £1,405. 4s. This was originally a member of Chadshunt, and was one of the possessions of the Bishops of Coventry and Lichfield; but in the 1st of Edward VI. was granted to Thomas Fisher, by one of whose descendants it was sold, in the 27th of Elizabeth, to John Askell. The principal land-owners are Mrs. Philmore, E. Bolton King, Esq., Rev. Thomas Lea, George Engstrom, Esq., Mrs. Eliz. Brooks, and Mrs. Haynes. The Chapel, dedicated to St. Giles, consists of nave and chancel. The living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Bishop's Itchington. The inhabitants marry and bury at Chadshunt.

Directory.—Wm. Arnold, sexton; Thos. Fleming, wheelwright; Mr. Thos. Garratt; Charlotte Hollier, vict., Gaydon Inn; Thos. James, shoemaker; Chas. Jelfs, blacksmith; Edward Neale, maltster and beerhouse; Thos. Upton, grocer and baker; Hannah Watts, grocer and baker; Mr. Thos. Wesson; the farmers are Henry Ball, Castle farm; Wm. Edwards, James Hopper, Gaydon Hill; Jas. Spraggett, John Masters Taylor, and Wm. Whieldon.

HALFORD, OR HALFORD BRIDGE, a parish and considerable pleasant village, 4 miles N. from Shipston-on-Stour; in 1841, here were 77 houses and 425 inhabitants, and 909 acres of land; rateable value, £1104.; this was one of the numerous possessions of Henry de Newburgh, Earl Warwick, and probably derived its name from a ford over the Stour, called Aldford (Old Ford). The principal owners are Thos. Mason, Esq., Rev. Chas. C. Crump, B.A., Mr. Thos. Alford, and Mr. Edwin Brooks. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles and tower. The living, a rectory, V.K.B. £10. 9s. 9½d., now £186.; patron, Bishop of Worcester, and Rev. Charles Collins Crump, B.A. incumbent.

Elizabeth Mason, spinster, who died in 1704, gave £5. to the poor of Halford. Mrs. E. Halford, left at her decease, £10. to the use of the poor of Halford. William Halford, gent. gave £20. at his decease in 1718, to the poor of this parish. These sums, amounting together to £35., have been lent to the parish officers, to be employed towards the building of cottage houses for the poor, about the year 1821, since which the annual sum of £1. 15s. has been paid off the poor's rates, as the interest, and distributed by the churchwardens to the poor, under the superintendence of the minister.

Directory.—John Alcock, tailor; Thomas Alcock, grocer; Mr. William Bartlett; Richard Baylis, maltster and butcher; Misses Hannah and Lucy Bemen; Mr. Edward Brooks; Mrs. Elizabeth Court; Ann Fincher, victualler, Bell Inn; William Hill, gardener; John Hine, pig dealer; Joseph Hirons, blacksmith; James Hunt, wheelwright; Mrs. Mary Ann Hunt; James Lomas, blacksmith; John Lomas, victualler, Lion Inn; Joseph Lomas, shoe maker; John Porter, gentleman; Miss Mary Scarlett; William Scarlett, corn miller and baker; William Thomsett, surgeon; John Trinder, corn dealer; Rev. William Turbitt, curate; Mr. Thomas Wells; Mrs. Mary Wright. And the farmers are Thomas Halford, Joseph Higgins, John Hitchcox, Mark Marshall, and Walter Tyrell.

ILMINGTON, a large village and extensive parish, including the hamlets of Compton Scorpion, and Foxcote, 4 miles N.W. by W. from Shipston-on-Stour; it also includes the hamlet of Lark-Stoke, in the upper division of Kestgate hundred, Gloucestershire; and contains in the whole 3,651 acres of land, and 891 inhabitants; of which 3,175 acres are in Warwickshire; and in 1841, here were 193 houses, and 873 inhabitants; in 1801, 656; 1821, 729; 1831, 836; rateable value, £4,685. 10s. At the conquest it was almost entirely in the possession of Earl Mellent; but in the 7th of Edward I. was held by Peter de Montfort; and subsequently at different periods possessed by various members of that family; and also by Sir Reginald Bray, and Sir William Sands, whose son Thomas, Lord Sands, sold it to Thomas Andrews, Esq. About ½ mile N.W. from Ilmington, is a strong chalybeate spring, which, in consequence of a recommendatory treatise by Cole and Derham, was for a few seasons in great repute; the ground about the spring was given by Lord Capel to the public for ever; he also erected a tenement for the use of the water-drinkers. The principal landowners are Philip Henry Howard, Esq., Rev. E. J. Townsend, Mr. F. J. Insull, executors of Thomas Eden, Mr. Robert Slater, Mr. Thomas Garrett, Sir G. R. Philips, C. L. Greaves, Esq., executors of Jane Sansom, and Mr. John Green. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, was repaired, enlarged, and new-pewed, in 1846, at a cost of £1,000., defrayed by the church fund property and subscriptions; it is a handsome edifice, consisting of nave chancel, (in which is a beautiful stained-glass window, by Mr. Holland, Warwick,) two transepts, and a square embattled tower, in which are five bells; here are several ancient brasses, one as early as 1487. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £30., now £624.; Rev. E. J. Townsend, M.A., patron and incumbent. The rectory is a commodious and handsome residence. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here, erected 1848. Here is a school principally supported by the Rev. E. J. Townsend. Cathole, a farm 1 mile S.

COMPTON SCORPION, a hamlet, consisting of three farms, 2½ miles S. by E., was owned by Thomas Burdet, Esq., in the time of Edward IV., whose great grandson Robert, sold it, in the 37th of Henry VIII., to William Sheldon, Esq., and Robert Palmer. Anthony Wood says, that the celebrated Sir Thomas Overbury was born here. Downs, a farm, 1 mile W. Forcote, a hamlet, 1 mile S. Dugdale says, from the time of Henry VI. this was successively held by the families of Montfort, Marshall, and Canning, one of whom (William) was five times mayor of Bristol. Forcote House, a commodious mansion, the seat of John Vincent Gandolfi, Esq., and the property of Philip Henry Howard, Esq.

LARK-STOKE, a small hamlet, consisting of two farms, 1 mile N.W. by W., situated in the upper division of Keftsgate hundred, Gloucestershire, though in this parish; it contains 476 acres of land. Southfield, a farm, 1 mile S. by E.

CHARITIES.—William Harbidge, gent., in 1728, gave £5. to the churchwardens of this parish, for the use of the poor. In 1821, this sum was placed in the hands of the rector, who pays 5s. as interest, which is given to poor widowers or widows.

John Bartlett gave 5s. a year for poor widowers or widows of this parish, to be issuing out of certain land in Ilmington. The annual sum of 5s. is regularly paid, and given as directed.

Frances Rose, by will, 1741, gave 40s. a year to the poor of Ilmington, to be laid out in bread, and distributed to the poor, 25th March, 24th June, 29th September, 25th December, 10s. each time, yearly. This charge was secured on the House Close, in Ilmington, now the property of Mr. Green. The annuity is received about Lady-day, and given in bread to the poor.

Church Land.—Upon the enclosure of the common fields of this parish, in the year 1781, an allotment of 32a. 1r. 30p. was awarded to the rector and churchwardens of this parish, in lieu of three quarters of a yard land; and the rights of common to the same; to be held on trust for the repair of the church; and a further allotment of 4a. 0r. 10p. was awarded in exchange for the Church Close, containing 1a. 0r. 7p. There are also five cottages belonging to the Church Property. The land is let for the annual sum of £43., and the cottages are held by the parish officers at the annual rent of £8. The clear rents are carried to the churchwardens' account, and supersede the necessity of a church rate.

Furze Land.—At the inclosure, five acres was awarded to the rector and churchwardens for the use of the poor of Ilmington, in lieu of a right of cutting furze. This land is still covered with furze, which is cut by the churchwardens, and distributed amongst the poor in kids, at the rate of two kids a head; the herbage is let for £3. a year, which is divided amongst the poor.

KINETON, or KINGTON, is an extensive parish, and small market town, 10½m S.S.E. from Warwick, 10 S.E. from Stratford-on-Avon; 12 N.W. from Banbury, and 85 N.W. by W. from London, including the hamlet of Little Kineton and the Chapelry of Combroke; it contains 3432 acres of land, and, in 1841, 296 houses and 1248 inhabitants; 1801. 779; 1821, 1071; 1831, 1102; rateable value, £3986. Of these, 2314 acres of land, and, in 1841, 232 houses and 966 inhabitants; rateable value, £3019., were in the township of Kineton, which is of considerable antiquity. Henry I. gave the Church to the canons of Kenilworth; a gaol was made here in the 12th of Henry II.; a market was granted in the 4th of Henry III.; and a castle, which formerly stood on the west side of the town, is said to have been built by King John. About four miles to the south of this town is Edgehill, rising abruptly from comparatively level ground, and extending nearly five miles; upon the declivity of this hill, 23rd October, 1642, the first battle between the forces of King Charles and those of the Parliament, was fought; an event that has given a lamentable celebrity to the spot. About 20,000 men were engaged in this battle; the numbers being about equally divided, and the slain, according to cool and dispassionate investigation, fell short of 2,000, of whom about 500 were thrown into a contiguous pit, the site of which is marked only by a small plantation of firs. A beautiful natural terrace is formed on the edge of the hill, commanding most extensive and magnificent views. Several pleasing walks, at intervals sheltered by trees and shrubs, were made from hence, by F. Miller, Esq., who also erected a tower and artificial castled ruins on the hill, immediately above the spot where the battle took place.

The town is pleasantly situated on a small river, running into the Avon, and on the high road from Banbury to Warwick, and is irregularly built; the houses, in general are ancient, and of stone; many of them have thatched roofs, and bear some resemblance to the rudest features of the Elizabethian style; but in detached situations there are some handsome modern houses, built of stone and of brick; the inhabitants are amply supplied with water from wells; the air is salubrious, and the environs abound with pleasant walks. There is no branch of trade or manufacture carried on, the inhabitants being principally employed in agriculture. The market, which was held on Tuesday, and was very considerable for grain, has long since fallen into disuse; the market house was taken down, and a National School built on its site in 1840; the fairs are: St. Paul's, Feb. 5th, which formerly regulated the price of beans for seed, but is now very thinly attended; and October 2nd, which is principally a statute fair for the hiring of servants; and December 19th. Petty Sessions for the Kineton and Burton Dassett divisions of this hundred are held the last Monday in each month, alternately, at the Red Lion and Swan Inns. Samuel Coleman, Esq., clerk. Mr. Joseph Woodley, high constable and inspector of weights and measures for Kineton division, and J. M. Brown, Esq., registrar of births and deaths for Kineton district. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient cruciform structure, in the early and decorated styles of English architecture, with some remains of the later Norman style, and having a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles; in the tower are windows of elegant tracery, and under the battlements is a band of antique heads and bosses. The western entrance is through a richly-moulded and deeply-receding arch, in the most finished style of later Norman architecture; the chancel was rebuilt in 1315, and the nave, aisles, and transepts in 1755; under an arch at the western extremity of the north aisle is the recumbent figure of a monk, removed from the chancel on the rebuilding of the church. The living, a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £8. 6s. 8d., now £97., augmented with £200. private benefactions, £400. Queen Anne's bounty, and £1,400. Parliamentary grant, in the patronage of Lord Willoughby de Broke, and incumbency of the Rev. Francis Richard Miller, M.A. The vicarage, a small residence near the church. The Wesleyans have a neat chapel, erected 1842, and the Independents have a small chapel at Little Kineton. The National School, a neat brick building, erected on the site of the old market house, in 1840, and is supported by subscriptions, will accommodate 110, average 65. Caroline Blunt mistress.

LITTLE KINETON, a hamlet $\frac{1}{4}$ mile south, in which the splendid kennels of the far-famed Warwickshire hunt were built about ten years ago, with a convenient range of stabling, consisting of loose boxes, &c., for 25 horses; the stud consists of 16. The kennels contain a pack of about 60 couples of good hounds, which have been purchased from some of the best packs in the kingdom; convenient houses are attached for the huntsman and groom. The whole cost £3364. 10s. 6d., exclusive of two acres of land, given by George Lucy, Esq., and the leading, which was done gratis by the neighbouring farmers. The affairs of the Hunt are managed by a committee of spirited gentlemen, and is supported by subscription. The days of meeting are Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays. The hounds are in high condition, and afford brilliant sport. Mr. Luke Latham, groom; and Mr. Edwin Stevens, huntsman.

Battle Farm, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.E. Pattern Hill, two farms $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N.W. Red House, a farm $\frac{3}{4}$ mile S. Starvall, another farm 1 mile S. and Thistle, or New Farm, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.E. Lord Willoughby de Broke is the principal owner and lord of the manor. Messrs. F. Smith, Thos. Blakeman, John Hall, Richard Page, J. B. Lowe, Esq., H. S. Lucy, Esq., Mrs. Welch, J. W. Wateley, Esq., R. J. Barnard, Esq., Messrs. Josiah Woodley, Thos. Canning, Geo. Court, and others have estates here.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Aylworth, by will, 1660, bequeathed £200. for the purchase of four gowns yearly for two poor men and two poor women, inhabitants of Great Kineton, upon St. Thomas's-day, and for one dozen of bread to be distributed to the poor every Sunday; and for three gowns to be given on the same day to two poor men and one poor woman, in the Castle-street Ward, in the parish of St. Mary, Warwick; and one dozen of bread to be distributed every Sunday to the poor of that Ward, if any; if not, to any other in that parish. Charles Bentley and others exhibited an information in the Court of Chancery against one Thomas Aylworth, &c.; and by a decretal order, made 1st of George I., it was ordered that the said principal of £200. should be laid in the purchase of land, &c. The master, by his report, 30th August, 1716, certified that he charged him only with the sum of £12. for interest, making the sum of £212., which he appointed to be brought before him on a certain day, &c. In consideration of the above sum, William Harbert and Elizabeth, his wife, and Thomas Harbert, released certain lands, accounted to be one half quarter of one yard land; and also one quarter and one half quarter of one yard land; all in the commonable fields of Staverton, to the trustees of this charity, for the uses above-named. This land is now (1825) let at the annual rent of £52., which, after certain deductions, £5. 4s. is set apart for bread, one half for Kineton, and the other half to the Warwick trustees, and the residue between the Kineton and Warwick trustees; in the proportion of four-sevenths to Kineton, and three-sevenths to Warwick. The trustees meet on St. Thomas's-day. In 1825 there were given in this parish 17 coats of stout kersey, which cost 16s. a-piece, beside the making; and 23 gowns of gingham, which, with the linings, cost 6s. 6d. a-piece, and given to poor women to make them up themselves.

Mrs. Frances Bentley, who died in 1684, left £30. to be added to the poor's stock of this parish, to be given yearly to the poor, at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens. R. Burbridge also gave £30., the interest to be distributed to the poor of Great and Little Kineton, on St. Thomas's-day and St. John Baptist's-day, in equal portions. Mrs. Norton also gave £10. to the poor of this parish. These sums are invested upon a mortgage of a copyhold property in Little Kineton, the property of Daniel Pinfold. The interest, £3. 10s., is paid to the churchwardens and overseers, and given away in bread to the poor.

Bentley Family. A house and land situate in the Back Lane, said to have been given by some of the Bentley family; the house was burnt down about the year 1800; the land, 3r. 7p., is let at the annual rent of £6. 5s., which is applied in apprenticing poor boys of the parish.

Charles Bentley, Esq., of Little Kineton, by will, 1726, gave to John Venour, and the minister of the parish of Kineton gave 50s. per annum, until his son should attain the age of 21 years, or should die; then he gave the sum of £50., to be laid out in a purchase, the rent to be applied in buying bread for the poor of Little Kineton. Mrs. Elizabeth Bentley, by will, 1735, gave £20., to be put out at interest. Mrs. Diana Bentley, by will, 1736, gave the sum of £20. for like purposes. Mrs. Charlotte Bentley, spinster, by will, 1765, gave to her trustees, Edward Gibbs and others, the sum of £150., in trust, for the use of a school at Little Kineton. In the returns of 1786 it is stated the three first of these charities had not been paid for twenty years; and also that Charlotte Bentley's legacy had never been paid, though legal proceedings had taken place. Jane Baker gave £10., to be added to the poor stock; but this was lost with the Bentleys' charities.

John Venour, by will, 1727, bequeathed to Little Kineton £30., to be laid out by his executor within six months after his decease in some purchase, to be settled upon the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor; and the profits annually in buying three cloth gowns for two men and one woman of Little Kineton, &c. The will contains a similar bequest to the poor of Wellsbourn. Up to the year 1788 both these bequests were paid by Thomas Venour, and John Venour, his son, of Wellsbourn Mountford, since which they have not been paid; but certainly Mr. Venour's estate, at Wellsbourn, is liable to the payment.

Church Land.—A parcel of land, 2a. 2r. 16p., was allotted under the Kineton inclosure in lieu of some land in the open field; and let at the yearly rent of £7. 15s. There are also certain other payments amounting to £2. 4s., paid from certain unknown lands. Also 10 cottages rented by the parish at £10. a year, used for dwellings for the paupers. These sums, in the whole, £19. 16s. are carried to the churchwardens' account.

COMBROOK, a township and chapelry, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by N. from Kineton, contains 1,118 acres of land; and in 1841, here were 64 houses and 212 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,000. 10s.; Lord Willoughby de Broke, lord of the manor and principal owner. The Chapel, dedicated to St. Margaret, consists of nave and chancel; the latter was rebuilt 1831; the Incorporated Society for Building Churches gave £100. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here, erected 1840. Brokhampton, a farm one mile S. by E. Foss Farm, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile W. Red House, another farm $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E.

Free School.—The first mention extant of this school is by deed, 1641, whereby Sir Grevill Verney, of Compton Verney, granted to the parish Church of the said Compton £22. yearly, for ever, to be paid at Lady-day and Michaelmas, in equal portions, to find a minister there; and he moreover granted to the same minister £8. yearly, in consideration of his executing the place of schoolmaster in the free school at Combroom, erected there by the commandment of his mother, his constant dwelling being at the school. The annual sum of £25. is paid out of the rents of the estate of Lord Willoughby de Broke, at Compton Verney, to the master of a free school at that place; the master resides in an old house kept in repair by Lord Willoughby, and is appointed by him. All the poor children of Combroom and Compton Verney, between the ages of six and twelve years, are admitted to the school, and taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, free.

Verney Exhibitions, (see Warwick).—Two scholars at Trinity College, Cambridge, may be sent from this school, or in default of them, from the grammar school at Warwick.

Lady Margaret Grevill Verney gave the interest of £5. for the benefit of the poor of this parish. Bread, to the value of 5s., is paid for by the bailiff of Lord Willoughby de Broke, and distributed by the chapelwardens to the poor.

LIGHTHORNE, a parish and considerable village, 4 miles N. by E. from Kineton, contains 2,007 acres of land, including 118 acres, 2 roods of glebe; in 1841, here were 78 houses, and 384 inhabitants; 1801, 323; 1821, 316; 1831, 346; rateable value, £1,714. 15s.; this was included in the Conqueror's survey, and at an early period came to the Mundevile family. In the time of Edward I. the manor was purchased by William de Beauchamp, and is now the property of Lord Willoughby de Broke. Here are two petrifying springs, one, half a mile north, and the other, Shadwell, one mile west. In Mill field, near the rectory, some curious Roman and Druidical antiquities have been found, skeletons, coins, and beads, in various parts of the parish. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a neat commodious edifice, on a commanding eminence, was entirely rebuilt in 1774, and consists of nave, chancel—in the window St. Sebastian is represented shot with arrows—and a tower ornamented with turrets. The living, a rectory, valued, in the King's Books, at £14. 7s. 3½d., now £322.; Lord Willoughby de Broke, patron, and Rev. Charles Palmer, M.A., incumbent. The Rectory, a handsome and commodious residence near the Church. Tithes commuted in 1840, at £347., including the income from the glebe land. Heath, a farm half a mile S.E. Redlands, another farm half a mile N. And Westfield, one mile W.

Directory.—Samuel Aubrey, butcher; Thos. Aubrey, butcher; Wm. Herbert, blacksmith; Rt. Hortin, beerhouse and carpenter; Phoebe Lattimer, beerhouse; Thomas Mountford, shoemaker; Rev. Chas. Palmer, rector; James Payton, shoemaker; Jas. Roddis, butcher and farmer; Jas. Ward, shoemaker; Edward Whitehead, bricklayer; Geo. Wilkins, baker; Thos. Wilkins, builder. The farmers are, John Bishop, Edward Franklin, Westfield; John Harper, Westfield; Henry Mann, Wm. Pratt, Joseph Smith, Redlands; Thomas John Whiteman, Heath Farm; and William Wilkins. Carrier, to Warwick and Leamington, Saturday, William Powell.

OXHILL, a parish and considerable village, 4 miles S.W. from Kineton, contains 1,618 acres of land, and, in 1841, 77 houses and 348 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,996.; was, soon after the Conquest, in the possession of Hugh de Grentemaisnill. In the 18th of John, the manor was granted by that monarch to Theodoric de Whicheford, and subsequently passed through the families of Penton, Keynes, and Bishops. The principal land-owners are Rev. W. D. Bromley, Rev. Dr. Cox, Misses Badcocks, Mr. John Ward, senr., E. J. Shirley, Esq., and lord of the manor, Edward Dodd, Esq., and Mr. James Gardner, seur. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, consists of nave and chancel, with a tower. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £14. 10s.; now, £350.; patron, Rev. Walter Davenport Bromley; and Rev. Thos. Cox, D.D., incumbent. The Rectory, a good residence near the Church. Here is a free school, supported by the rector and E. J. Shirley, Esq. The Wesleyans have a small Chapel here.

Directory.—William Berry, carrier; John Powell Gardner, baker; Miss Sarah Gardner, Mr. Robert Gardner, William Groves, schoolmaster; Robert Harris, beerhouse and grazier; Charles Holland, relieving officer, and registrar of births and deaths; William Holland, grocer; Richard Hunt, shoemaker; Clark Middleton, beerhouse and grazier; Rev. Edward Rolls, curate; William Rouse, junr., maltster; George Summerton, watch maker; John Summerton, corn miller; William Summerton, carpenter; Joseph Walden, blacksmith; John Ward, junr., gent.; William Watts, luther; Joseph Wilkins, shoemaker; and the Farmers are John Allitt, John Fisher, Harrod's farm; James Gardner, senr.; James Gardner, junr.; John Golding, Shill farm; Thomas Lines, Bog farm; Samuel Middleton, William Middleton, John Parker, Thomas Rose, William Rouse, James Gardner Ward, Oxhill Villa; John Ward, senr. Carrier, William Berry, Banbury, Thursday, and Stratford, Friday.

RADWAY, a parish and pleasant village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by E. from Kineton, contains 1360 acres; and in 1841, 76 houses, and 374 inhabitants; in 1801, 237; 1831, 315; rateable value, £2066. 16s. 6d. The manor, after being for some time in the possession of the Bigods, came in good part to the monks of Stoneleigh; but at the dissolution, most of the land here was sold to different persons. The principal land-owners are Lieut. Col. F. S. Miller, and lord of the manor; Messrs. Wm. and John Hoare, Mrs. Ann Hall, and Mrs. Beesley. The Grange, a neat mansion, the seat and property of Lieut. Col. F. S. Miller. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with tower; was repaired and enlarged in 1841, at the expense of Charles Chambers, Esq., R. N. The living, a vicarage, value in the King's books, £5. 12s.; now, £111; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Miller, M.A. The vicarage is a neat residence, in a retired situation near the Church.

Directory.—Thos. Astill, shopkeeper; Rt. Buffery, maltster; Chas. Chambers, Esq., R. N., Ivy Cottage; Geo. Coles, shopkeeper; John Coles, vict. Castle Inn; John Coles, baker; Wm. Cotterill, beerhouse; Wm. Holloway, mason; John Hunt, shoemaker; Mr. Joseph Hunt, Rev. Edw. Miller, M.A., Vicarage; Lieut. Col. Fiennes Sanderson Miller, The Grange; Thos. Norton, grazier; Miss Hannah Palmer, Rose Cottage; Robt. Smith, carpenter; Thos. Smith, shoemaker; Wm. Smith, carpenter; Richd. Spencer, tailor; Samuel Strong, wheelwright; John Woodfield, blacksmith; Wm. Woodfield, blacksmith; and the Farmers are Valentine Bates, Town's end; William Bull, Radway fields; John Hoare, Wm. Hoare, and Thos. White. Carrier, Rd. Tugwood, Banbury, Monday and Thursday; and Warwick, Wednesday and Saturday.

TYSOE, an extensive parish, and considerable village, 5 miles S. by E. from Kineton, and is divided into the hamlets of Church, Lower, Middle and Upper Tysoe, and Westcott, and contains 4,600 acres of land; rateable value, £4,991. 15s., and was, in the Conqueror's time, possessed by Robert de Stafford, which noble family, in conjunction with several religious houses, held this extensive lordship until the dissolution, when it was granted to Sir William Compton. Opposite the church there is cut on the side of a hill, a rude figure of a horse, which, from the colour of the soil has obtained the name of the Red Horse; and the adjacent low lands are called the Red Horse vale. The dimensions of the horse are small compared with the White Horse of Berkshire; and it is a generally received opinion that the figure was cut in commemoration of the gallant conduct of Richard Nevile, Earl Warwick, in the battle of Touton. The principal land owners are The Marquis of Northampton, and lord of the manor, Earl of Jersey, Lord Leigh, Mrs. Hannah Dodd, Mr. Simon Nicholls, Mr. Geo. C. Nicholls, Lord Redesdale, Sir John Cope, Bart., Mr. Wm. Middleton, Mr. Thomas Middleton, and Mr. Phillips. The Church, dedicated to St Mary, is an ancient edifice, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with tower, containing six bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, united to the rectory of Compton Wynyates, V. K. B. £10. now £266., augmented with £200. private benefactions and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; Earl of Northampton, patron; Rev. Samuel Young Seagrave, incumbent. The Wesleyans have a small chapel at Middle Tysoe. Sun Rising, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. a commodious Inn, situate on the commanding brow of Edge Hill, having one of the most beautiful prospects in the county, is resorted to by the nobility and gentry during the summer and hunting seasons; here are extensive lawns, walks, and a good bowling green; early in the summer season is still practised the scouring of the Red Horse in a field belonging to Mr. Nicholls. Brizfield, a farm 2 miles N.N.E. Edge Hill farm, 2 miles E. Hardwick house, 2 miles N.E. Lower Tysoe, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. by E. Tysoe Hill, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile E. Upper Tysoe, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile S.W. Westcott, a farm $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.

Town Lands.—John Middleton and Edmund Richards, by deed, enfeoffed Hy. Clerke, and eight others with certain lands and tenements, to their use on trust, to take the profits, and bestow and employ the same to the common utility of the parish of Tysoe in such necessities as should be thought convenient by the inhabitants. In 1796, the Rev. John Seagrave, and five others, were enfeoffed with the above named estates. The commissioners, under the act of inclosing the common fields in the parish, by their award, 17th January, 1798, allotted to the feoffees of the poor of the parish, in lieu of certain lands, with all right of common, &c., one plot of land containing 34a. 0r. 37p. exclusive of all roads. The property now (1826) produces £116. per annum, of which £83. 19s. 5d. is the clear rental of a farm house and the above allotment; £6. 2s. 7d. a clear receipt from certain estates in Upper and Lower Westcott, and £25. 18s. for a house and shop, and eleven other cottages. After the payments for repairs, quit rents, and a dinner at the annual meeting, amounting to upwards of £17.—£21. per annum is paid to a schoolmaster, for teaching 20 poor boys of the parish, in a school-room belonging the charity. The school-room was rebuilt about the year 1816, with the house adjoining, for which Wm. Ward the master, pays a rent of £5. The free boys are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic; they are received from the ages of eight to ten, but are only permitted to continue two years. The residence of the rents is divided among the poor of the three divisions viz.: Upper, Middle, and Lower Tysoe, in proportion to the population of each.

William Willington, (see Brailes).—The poor of Tysoe receive 40s. per annum from this charity, given away in coals.

Fuel Land.—By the award under the Tysoe enclosure act, the commissioners awarded to the Earl of Northampton, his heirs and assigns, in trust, to poor persons, in lieu of a right to cut furze or gorse upon the waste lands in the parish, twelve acres of land in Church Tysoe, now let for £20. per annum, and six acres in Lower (or Temple) Tysoe, let for £6. 10s. These sums, with 40s. from Willington's charity, are applied in the purchase of coals, which are distributed in the winter season till exhausted.

WHITCHURCH, a parish containing the hamlets of Broughton, Crimscott, and Wimpston, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.E. from Stratford-upon-Avon; in 1841, here were 55 houses and 247 inhabitants, and 1095 acres of land; rateable value £2029. 5s.; this was held by Earl Mellent at the Conquest, and described as two manors. Peter de Montfort held the lordship at the time of the battle of Evesham, and though confiscated, it was soon restored, and descended to his son, continuing in their line until the 9th. of Richard II. when it was allotted to Boteler, thence came to Edward Belknap, Esq., and was sold in 1582 to Thomas Marriett, Esq., Leigh; in which family it remained many years. James Robert West, Esq. is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, consists of nave and chancel, was repaired in 1844 and 6, at an expense of £142. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £20. 17s. 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., now £341.; James Robert West, Esq., patron; and Rev. Richard Pritchard, incumbent. The Rectory a commodious residence, Tithes commuted 1842, at £302. 2s.

Broughton, a small hamlet, 2 miles S. W. Grimscott, a small village and hamlet, 1 mile S.E.; and Wimpston, a small village and hamlet, in which the church is situated.

CHARITIES.—John Ayscombe, by will, 1810, gave to the rector and churchwardens of this parish, and their successors, the sum of £100. clear of all taxes, to be paid to them within one month after the decease of his sister Ann Ayscombe, upon trust, to place the same on government security, and apply the dividends in the purchase of bread to be distributed to the poor on Christmas day. Ann Ayscombe, by will, 1816, gave to the minister and churchwardens and their successors, £100. clear of all taxes, to be paid within six months after her decease on trust &c., to lay out the dividends in clothing to be distributed to the poor, on Christmas day. Mrs. Ayscombe died in December, 1816. The legacies now form £219. 13s. 4d. three per cent reduced annuities, into which they were transferred in 1824; the dividend £6. 11s. 8d. is distributed, one half in bread, and the other half in clothing to the poor, by the minister and churchwardens.

THE WARWICK DIVISION

Comprises 12 parishes, viz.:—Barford, Budbrook, Charlecote, Chesterton, Moreton Morrell, Newbold Pacey, Norton Lindsey, Sherbourne, Tachbrook, (Bishop) Walton, Wasperton, and Wellesbourne; 23,386 acres of land, and, in 1841, 1111 inhabited houses, 29 uninhabited, and 3 building; 5,176 inhabitants, of whom 2592 were males, and 2,584 females; of these numbers, 1,000 males, 1,130 females, were under 20 years of age; 1,592 males, and 1,454 females, were 20 years of age and upwards.

BARFORD, a parish, considerable and well-built village, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the Avon, 3 miles S. by W. from Warwick; contains 1,600 acres of land, and, in 1841, 190 houses and 849 inhabitants; in 1801, 485; 1821, 671; 1831, 748; rateable value, £3,807. 15s. In Domesday Book this is called Bereford, and a family of that name possessed the lordship in early times, from whom it passed to that of Nasford, and was by one of them sold to Guy de Beauchamp. The principal owners are Hon. and Rev. William Somerville, Mrs. and Miss Ryland, Edward Greaves, Esq., Earl of Warwick, Capt. Elliott, and Capt. James Rattray. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, in which are three bells; the whole was rebuilt, except the tower, in 1844, at a cost of £2350., defrayed by subscription, and a grant from the Society for Building and Repairing Churches. The living, a rectory, value in K. B. £11. 11s. 0½d., now £990., in the patronage of John Mills, Esq., and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Wm. Somerville. The rectory is a handsome residence, near the church. The glebe lands consist of 380a. 3r. 8p. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here, erected 1840.

Avon Side, 3 miles N. E. from Warwick, the seat and property of Edward Greaves, Esq., is a neat mansion, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Avon, having a view of the lofty tower of St. Mary's. and the town of Warwick. Barford Hill House is a handsome residence, commanding extensive views of the surrounding country, 3 miles N. E. from Warwick, is the property of the Hon. and Rev. Wm. Somerville, and the residence of Mrs. Ryland. Barford House, on the south-eastern side of the village, 3 miles N. E. from Warwick, is the seat and property of Capt. James Rattray, R. N. Debden, a farm, 1½ miles N. E. Hareway, another farm, 1 mile east. Plestow's Farm, 1½ miles east.

CHARITIES.—John Beale, by will, 1672, gave £60., which was laid out in the purchase of land in Leamington Priors. By the award of the Leamington Inclosure Act, dated Dec. 22nd, 1768, a parcel of land, containing 8a. 1r. 5p. to the trustees of charitable lands in the parish of Barford. By an indenture of bargain and sale, 26th August, 1807, two closes of the above land, containing 7a. 2r. 17p., of the yearly value of £12., were exchanged for 8a. 3r. 20p. of land, of the yearly value of £20., situate in the parish of Kenilworth. A small portion of the Leamington was taken previous to the exchange, for the purpose of the Warwick and Napton Canal, for which the company pay an annual rent of £1. 14s. 8d. to the trustees. The land in Kenilworth is now let for the annual rent of £20.; which sum, with the £1. 14s. 8d., are applied towards the maintenance of a free school at Barford.

Rev. Thomas Dugard, M.A., rector of Barford, by will, 1677, gave to the poor of Barford, £5. for ever, issuing out of certain lands, now belonging to Mr. John Whitehead; £4. to such person as should teach 14 poor children, and the other £1. to teach two poor girls. To this small endowment, the rents of Beale's charity have been added; and since the year 1784, the income has been augmented by the dividend of £504. 14s. 7d. in the 3½ per cent. consols; the dividends of which are £17. 13s. 2d. per annum. This stock has been produced partly by savings during suspensions of the school; and in 1787, by a gift of £100. by the Rev. John Mills, the then rector; and in 1826, a legacy of £200. by the late Charles Mills, Esq.; since the year 1819, a further addition has been made, by the addition of a house for the master, through the interest of the Rev. F. Mills, the rector; making a total income of £48. 7s. 10d. From this income, the master receives £40. a year, he allowing £4. thereout, for the rent of the house; about £3. a year is allowed for coals. The school is open to all the children of the parish, being parishioners; about 30 boys and as many girls usually attend. In 1820, William Mills, Esq., left a legacy of £50. to the vicar of Barford, to be laid out as he might think fit to the benefit of the school, which was employed in the repairs of the school. Charles Thomas, master, and Jane Rose, mistress.

John Overton gave 10s. a year to the poor of Barford. James Morris pays the 10s. as charged upon some tenements belonging to him. It is received by the rector, and given to poor widows.

Church Land.—This land consists of about 3½ acres in this parish, let at the yearly rent of £11. 5s., which is carried to the churchwardens' account. How the land was acquired is unknown.

BUDBROOK parish, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. from Warwick, including the hamlets of Hampton-on-the-Hill and Lower Norton, contains 3216 acres of land, and, in 1841, 508 inhabitants; rateable value, £5882. This was, in the 23rd of Henry I., the property of Roger, Earl of Warwick; and passed from him to Geoffrey de Clinton; Edward VI. granted it to John Dudley, Earl of Warwick; since that time it has had various possessors. Lord Dormer is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Rev. John Boudier and the family of Westons, are also small owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, consists of nave and chancel, with tower. The living is a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. at £8., now £354.; in the patronage of the Mayor and Corporation of Warwick, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Cardall, M.A. The vicarage house is a small residence near the Church. The present vicar is about to build a new one. Tithes commuted, great at £426. 18s. 1d.; the Corporation of Warwick are lay-impropriators; vicarial, at £322. This parish was in the Snitterfield division of Barlichway hundred till June 29th, 1846.

HAMPTON-ON-THE-HILL, 1 m. S. from Warwick, is a small pleasant village, on a commanding eminence, having an extensive prospect and the town of Warwick in view. The catholic chapel, erected about the year 1820, and enlarged in 1830, by Lord Dormer, at an expense of upwards of £1,200., is a neat Gothic edifice. Rev. Thos. Revill, priest. Here is also a Catholic school, erected and supported by Lord Dormer.

Job Marston bequeathed, in 1701, ten acres of land and five cottages, which produce £46. per annum; one half is given to the poor and the other to the master of the free school.

LOWER NORTON, a small hamlet 3 miles W. Grove Park, 2 miles S.W., is a handsome and spacious mansion of considerable antiquity, and was formerly surrounded by a moat; it contains several valuable paintings; the view from the front of the house over a rich and well-wooded park, includes a portion of the town and Castle of Warwick. Elizabeth granted this property to her favourite, Dudley, Earl Leicester. It is now the property of Lord Dormer and the residence of Thomas Gladstone, Esq. Stank-hill House is pleasantly situated on an eminence, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile east, and is the residence of George Lloyd, Esq., M.D. Norton Lodge $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W., is pleasantly situated on an acclivity, and is the seat of Captain Macclesfield Wm. Heath, R.E. Hampton Lodge, 2 miles S.W., the property of the Weston family, and residence of Charles Ferrers, Esq. Church Farm, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.W.; Hill Farm, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.; and Stanks' Farm, 1 mile E.

CHARLECOTE, a parish and small village, pleasantly situated on the eastern banks of the Avon, 6 miles N.W. by W. from Kineton, and 5 from Warwick, contains 1929 acres of land; in 1841, 59 houses and 269 inhabitants; 1801, 265; 1821, 331; 1831, 297; rateable value, £3034. 5s. About the close of the 12th century, William, the son of Walter de Charlecote, assumed the name of Lucy; and ever since that time, this family have been lords of Charlecote; one of them, Sir William Lucy, founded the Priory of Thelesford, in the reign of Henry III.; and the succeeding heads of the family have borne eminent sway in the county. The memory of Sir Thomas Lucy, who was knighted in the 7th of Elizabeth, will be handed down to latest posterity, immortalized by the pen of Shakspeare, under the character of Justice Shallow. The family mansion was rebuilt by Sir Thomas Lucy, about the 1st of Elizabeth: it is a fine specimen of domestic architecture of the period, built of brick, with stone coynes, and consists of a centre and two wings, flanked with four octagonal turrets. The principal front has a stone porch, elaborately ornamented, and the gate-house standing a short distance before it is a good and perfect specimen of the prevailing style of architecture in the latter end of the 16th century. The general effect of this fine old mansion, notwithstanding various alterations, is highly venerable and impressive. The hall is a good room, having a spacious gallery, enriched with stained glass and numerous paintings, including several portraits of the Lucy family, the oldest of which is that of Sir Thomas Lucy, and the arms of the family, placed there at the time it was rebuilt. George Lucy, Esq., who died 1845, made many judicious improvements, both in the exterior and interior of the house, and enriched it with valuable paintings and furniture; amongst the rest, with the celebrated costly and splendid mosaic table formerly at Fontbill. The park is well stocked with deer, and adorned, amongst other trees, with elms of unusual growth and vigour: the Avon, winding through the park and pleasure grounds, adds much beauty to the scene. The present heir, Heney Spencer Lucy, Esq., is a minor. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is being entirely rebuilt; several fine monuments to the Lucy family are carefully preserved; that of Sir Thomas Lucy, an altar tomb, having the effigies of himself and his lady, is somewhat remarkable, since, although there is a warm memorial of the merits of his lady, written by himself, there is no epitaph to his memory. The living, a discharged vicarage, value in K. B., £6.; now, £183.; augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Trustees of Henry Spencer Lucy, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Lucy, M.A., for whom the Rev. Henry Bromfield, M.A., officiates. The Vicarage is a handsome residence, erected in 1835. Coppington, a farm, one mile east. Huntscore, a hamlet, containing three farms, 1½ mile W. Little Hill, a farm, 1¼ mile E.; Middle Hill, another farm, 1½ mile E.; and Thelsford Farm, 1 mile N.E.

CHARITIES.—Grammar School, (see Hampton Lucy.) This parish participates in the school founded by the Rev. Richard Hill, at Hampton Lucy.

Rev. William Lucy, D.D., by will, 1723, gave to the poor of the parishes of Charlecote, Hunscott, and Hampton Lucy, the yearly sum of £10., to be paid out of the said manors, and to be distributed by his heir or trustees, every Christmas, to poor housekeepers. The moiety appropriated to this parish is distributed on St. Thomas's day, at the Church. Rev. John Lucy, by will, 1821, gave to the trustees of the charity of the late Rev. Dr. Lucy, the sum of £5. annually, to be distributed to the poor of the parish of Charlecote; and appointed George Lucy, Esq., the lord of the above manors, his executor, who pays the £5., which is distributed with Dr. Lucy's £5. to the poor.

Directory.—Rev. Henry Bromfield, M.A., curate, Vicarage; Mrs. Lucy, Charlecote House. The farmers are John Brown, Huntscore; Geo. Court, Middle Hill; Geo. Court, jun., Coppington; Wm. Dilworth, and maltster; Charles Hunt, farm bailiff, Huntscore; Geo. Wallington, Rd. Malins, Thelsford; Geo. Wallington, Jas. Wallington, and Wm. Witherington, and miller.

CHESTERTON, a parish, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by E. from Kineton, contains the hamlet and township of Kingston, or Little Chesterton, and 3552a. of land; in 1841, 38 houses and 192 inhabitants; in 1801, 205; 1821, 231; 1831, 188; rateable value, £3534.; though at present a small village, had, in its vicinity, a Roman camp; and probably was a summer station of that warlike people. The Foss Road passes through the parish, and the remains of the Castrametation, which forms a square of considerable extent, together with the name of the place, evidently derived from the Roman Castrum, clearly indicate its origin. Here was seated, from the time of Edward III., through several successive ages, the rich and powerful family of Peyto, amongst whom Peter de Peyto was created a Cardinal, in the reign of Henry VIII., being also Confessor to his daughter Mary. Lord Willoughby de Broke, is lord of the manor and owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Giles, consists of nave, chancel, in which are some fine monuments to the Peto family, and tower ornamented with turrets. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £82., augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £600. Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of Lord Willoughby de Broke, and Rev. Charles Palmer, M. A., incumbent. Tithes commuted 1849, Chesterton, at £449. 13s. 6d., and Kingston, at £208. 11s. 7d. Upon a hill near the village, is a remarkable windmill built of stone in 1632, by Sir Edward Peto, from a design by Inigo Jones.

Kingston, or Little Chesterton, a hamlet and township, consisting of three farms $\frac{1}{2}$ mile south east; here are several petrifying springs. Chesterton Fields, a farm two miles south, Edwe Fields, another farm half a mile west, and Harwood House, two miles west.

Directory.—Jas. Beck, corn miller, Wind Mill; Wm. Kite blacksmith; Mr. Thos. Ryton. The farmers are, Geo. Adkins, Kingston; Jesse Bradley, Kingston; Wm. Bradley; Chas. Griffin, Lodge Farm; Edwd. Mann, Chesterton Fields; Thos. Mann; Thos. Pratt, Edwe Fields; Wm. Pratt, Kingston; Rt. Righton, Harwood House; and Rt. Righton, jun., Red House.

MORETON MORREL, a parish and small village, $3\frac{3}{4}$ miles N.N.W. from Kineton, contains 1568 acres of land; in 1841, 56 houses and 253 inhabitants; in 1801, 183; 1821, 257; 1831, 298; rateable value, £1564. 5s. The manor, in the 19th of Edward III., was sold by John Triminell, a distinguished soldier, to Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and afterwards disposed of by John Dudley, Earl of Warwick, to John Colburne. The principal land-owners are, John Little, Esq., Rev. Hy. Wise, and Capt. Ward. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, consists of nave and chancel, in which there is an ancient monument to Richard Murden and his lady, and a small embattled tower, containing three bells. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £55., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty. John Little, Esq., patron, and Rev. John Clavering, M. A., incumbent. The Wesleyans have a small Chapel here, erected 1843. Moreton Hall, an ancient mansion near the Church, once the property of Earl Leicester; it is asserted that Amy Robsart, his supposed wife, was confined here, during the visit of Queen Elizabeth to Kenilworth castle; in a large room is a fine antique carved oak mantel piece; it is the property of the Rev. Henry Wise, and occupied by a farmer.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Thos. Harbidge, formerly minister of this parish, left the sum of £40. for the purpose of putting to school six poor children of this parish. The above sum was placed in the hands of Thomas Ward, Esq., and the interest regularly paid till his death, and his executor agreed to make an investment to secure the regular payment of it. Six poor children are taught to read and the girls to sew. Eliz. Ariss, mistress.

Edward Slade gave £10. to the poor of this parish. The interest to be distributed annually at Christmas. This sum was also in Mr. Ward's hands, and Mrs. Ward distributed the money on St. Thomas's day.

Directory.—Eliz. Ariss, school; Ann Carter, farmer, Morrells; Rev. John Clavering, M.A. Mr. Wm. Harper, farmer; Clement Hurlston, farmer; John Jordan, farmer, Moreton Wood; John Seeley Oldham, farmer, Moreton Hall; Wm. Pratt, shoe maker; Thos. Whiteman, farmer, Morrel Farm. Carrier to Banbury, thur., and to Warwick, sat., John Wincott.

NEWBOLD PACEY, a small village and parish, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by N., includes the hamlet of Ashorne, and received its appellation from the family of Pacey, who were anciently lords of the manor; in 1841 here were 56 houses and 357 inhabitants; in 1801, 349; 1821, 331; 1831, 341, and 1774 acres of land; rateable value, £2,765. 18s. the principal land-owners are Jno. Little, Esq., and lord of the manor; Rev. Jno. Gibson, Geo. Cattell Greenway, Esq., Mr. Thos. Garner, Rev. Power Turner, Mr. Henry Moulton, and Thos. Ward, Esq. The Earl of Warwick is lord of the manor of Ashorne. The Church, dedicated to St. George, is a small humble edifice, consisting of nave and chancel. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £8. 3s. 9d.; now £639; augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford; the Rev. John Gibson, incumbent. The Vicarage is a neat residence adjoining the Church. Tithes commuted 1843, rectorial at £266. 14s.; vicarial, £118. 6s.; here are about 50 acres of glebe. A neat British school was erected 1843; will accommodate 100; average, 20. Ashorne, a hamlet and small village, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile north east. Ashorne Hill, a farm, one mile N. by E. Bronston Hill, another farm, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. by N.

CHARITIES.—Sundry Donors. The sum of £77., given at various times, by nine different donors, was, by the advance of £3., by William Little, Esq., and the Rev. Joseph Golding, the vicar, made £80., and placed in the hands of the said vicar on his promissory note, at five per cent. interest; which, being £4., is distributed annually, at Christmas, in small sums of 1s. or 2s., among the poor of the parish.

Directory.—Cathrn. Enston, beerhouse, Ashorne; Mrs. France, Ashorne; Rev. John Gibson, Vicarage; John Hopkins, blacksmith, Ashorne; John Little, Esq.; Joyce Luckett, schoolmistress. The farmers are German Dodwell, Bronston Hill; John Ford, William Hambidge, John Hands, Glebe Farm; Wm. Knight, Ashorne Hill; Hy. Moulton, Ashorne; Henry Rawlins, Ashorne; and William Reading, Ashorne.

NORTON LINDSEY, a small parish and village, 4 miles W. S.W. from Warwick, contains 610 acres of land; in 1841, 47 houses and 176 inhabitants; rateable value, £928. 18s. 8d. The principal land-owners are Mr. Thos. Canning, Mr. John Jackson, Mr. Thos. Gibbs, Mr. Hy. Johnson, and Lord Dormer; the latter is lord of the manor. This is considered a chapelry, in the parish of Claverdon, but in the national census it is denominated a parish, and was in the Snitterfield division of Barlichway hundred until June, 1846. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small edifice; consists of nave and chancel. The living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the living of Claverdon, augmented with £200. Queen Anne's bounty; Rev. Andrew Arthur Onslow, incumbent. Church Land, about three quarters of an acre, let at the yearly rent of £1. 10s., which is carried to the churchwardens' account.

Directory.—Mr. Thos. Brooks; Thos. George, blacksmith; Edwd. Mann, vict., New Inn; Thos. Percy, shoemaker; John Penn, tailor; Geo. Smart, grazier; John Troth, bricklayer; Jph. Walker, corn miller. The farmers are Thos. Canning, Saml. Gibbs, Big House Farm; John Jackson and Hy. Johnson. Carrier to Warwick, sat. Jph. Court.

SHERBOURNE, a parish, and small pleasant village, $2\frac{3}{4}$ miles S.W. by S. from Warwick, contains 1,088 acres of land, and, in 1841, 209 inhabitants; rateable value, £2,176. 1s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; formed a part of the possessions of Henry de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, soon after the Conquest, whose son Roger gave the lordship to the Collegiate Church of Warwick, and to the Knights Templars. Upon the suppression of the Templars, their portion was seized upon by Guy de Beauchamp, but it afterwards passed to the Hospitallers; and, at the dissolution, the entire manor was granted to Thomas Lucy, Esq., of Charlecote. Mrs. Ann Ryland is lady of the manor and owner. This parish was, until June, 1846, in the Snitterfield division of the Barlichway hundred. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, small gallery, and tower; was rebuilt in 1747, by Thomas Webb, Esq., and repaired about ten years ago, by Samuel Ryland, Esq. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's books at £1. 15s., now £110., endowed with £16. per annum, augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £800. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of Mrs. Ann Ryland, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Grice. The Free School is a neat brick building erected about ten years ago, by Samuel Ryland, Esq., and supported by the family. About half a mile S.W. rises Coplow Hill, commanding from its summit a pleasing and diversified view of the surrounding country.

Directory.—Isham Baker, gent.; Walter Hy. Bracebridge, Esq.; John Canning, farmer; Wm. Caper, gardener; John Drinkwater, Esq., Sherbourne House; Sarah Dunn, schoolmistress; Gad Goold, farmer; Jph. Heydon, blacksmith and wheelwright; Ann Horton, farmer; and James Woodyatt, farm bailiff.

TACHBROOK (BISHOP'S), a parish and scattered village, $3\frac{3}{4}$ miles S.E. from Warwick. In 1841, here were 135 houses and 648 inhabitants; which, with the hamlet of Tachbrook Mallory, in the Kenilworth division of the Knightlow hundred, containing 950a. of land, 10 houses, and 75 inhabitants, making a total of 723 inhabitants, and 3,466a. of land, of which 25 are glebe; rateable value, £5151. 1s. 6d. This was in the possession of the Bishops of Coventry and Lichfield, from about the Conquest to the reign of Edward VI., which circumstance accounts for the distinguishing adjunct to its name. In the reign of Charles I., the Wagstaff family was seated here, from whom the estate passed, by the marriage of an heiress, to the Bagots, of Blithfield, in the county of Stafford, from whom it passed to the Earl of Warwick. The Church, dedicated to St. Chad, consists of nave, chancel, in which are three handsome monuments to the Wagstaff family, side aisles, and tower, containing three bells. The living, a vicarage, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Prebendary of Tachbrook, in the Cathedral Church of Lichfield; valued in the King's books at £5. 13s. 4d.; now, £293.; in the patronage of the Bishop of Lichfield, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Proby, for whom the Rev. H. Skipwith officiates. Tithes commuted 1843; rectorial, at £964. 8s. 7d.; the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the impropiators, and the Earl of Warwick, lessee; vicarial, £290. St. James's Chapel, of which a great part of the walls still remain, situate on an eminence, a short distance from the Church, is converted into a dairy, and in the occupation of Mr. Thomas King.

TACHBROOK MALLORY, a small village and hamlet, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by E. from Warwick.

CHARITIES.—School. A certain sum of money, raised by subscription, was, by indenture, April, 1766, invested in the four closes called the Gorsley Closes, containing together, by estimation, $18\frac{1}{2}$ acres, lying in the parish of Sutton Coldfield; and further reciting that Sir William Bagot conveyed a messuage school and buildings, and a little garden, in the whole 22 perches, for the use of a schoolmaster, purchased with other parts of the said subscription, which were all conveyed to trustees, on trust, to appoint a proper schoolmaster, to teach reading, writing, and arithmetic, and that the said trustees, after necessary incidental expenses, the rents and profits of the above-named estate should be applied to the use of the said schoolmaster. The land at Sutton Coldfield is let for the annual rent of £35., from which £1. is deducted for land-tax. There is also the sum of £100. belonging to the trustees, supposed to be the gift of Mr. Thos. Thompson, about the year 1765. The school is now conducted on the National plan, at which about 100 children, boys and girls, attend; and the entire rent, and the £5. interest, are paid to the master, who occupies the school house and premises, rent free; his wife assisting in teaching the girls. James Gazey, master.

Mr. Thos. Thompson, of Milverton, gave, in 1784, £100. into the hands of trustees, and ordered two-thirds of the produce of his gift to be distributed annually among the poor of Tachbrook, and one third among the poor of the parish of Milverton. This sum was placed in the hands of the Earl of Warwick, whose steward pays £5. a year as interest. The Tachbrook portion, £3. 6s. 8d., is distributed in sixpenny loaves at the school-room, on Good Friday, to poor parishioners.

Directory.—Post Office, at Mr. James Gazey's. Mr. John Commander, James Gazey, schoolmaster; Wm. Harwood, gamekeeper, Asps; Hy. Evers Landor, Esq.; Jas. Palmer, butcher; Jno. Percox, vict., Leopard; Thos. Reading, blacksmith; Rev. Humberstone Skipwith, curate, Vicarage; Wm. Smith, vict. and butcher, New Inn; Mrs. Louisa Waller, The Grove. Farmers, Jas. and Jph. Archer, Red house; Jph. Ashford, Rectory house; Jno. Barnett, Thos. Blakeman, Hogbrook; Benj. Dudley, Jno. Doughty, Jno. Garner, White house; Saml. Humphriss, Thos. King, Wm. Lees, Jph. Middleton, Hy. Pratt, Highdown; Thos. Rainbow, Asps; Cath. Robbins, Asps; Geo. Summers, and Thos. Summers, New house.

WALTON D'EIVILE, a small village and parish, includes the hamlet of Walton Mauduit, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles W.N.W. from Kineton, keeps its poor and roads with Wellesbourne Hastings, with which the area and population are included. This appears to have been granted by Henry de Newburgh to Nicholas D'Eivile, one of whose descendants, in the reign of Henry III., sold the manor to Simon de Wauton, whose daughter marrying John le Strange, it came into that family, and, with Walton Mauduit, was eventually possessed by the Mordaunt's. Sir Charles Mordaunt, who is a minor, is the present owner and lord of the manor. The Hall, a large handsome mansion, surrounded by an extensive park, is the seat of Lady Caroline Sophia Mordaunt. The Church, dedicated to St. James, situate in the park adjoining the Hall, is a neat Grecian stone edifice, rebuilt in 1843, by Sir John Mordaunt, at an expense of £1,700., and endowed with £3,000., was made a separate benefice at the same period; it consists of nave and chancel, and contains an ancient Norman font, and 140 sittings, all of which are free. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £113., in the patronage of the Trustees of Sir Charles Mordaunt; Rev. Wm. Duckworth Furneaux, incumbent. The Parsonage is a neat residence, half a mile north-east from the Church. Tithes commuted, 1843, at £227. Here is a free school, supported by the Mordaunt family. Furzy Hill, one mile north. Mount Pleasant, a farm, half a mile north. Walton Hill, half a mile east. And Walton Wood Farm, half a mile south.

WASPERTON, a parish, and small scattered village, 4 miles S.S.W. from Warwick, contains 1,602 acres of land, of which 46a. 2r. are glebe. In 1841, 62 houses, and 282 inhabitants; 1801, 212; 1821, 271; 1831, 292; rateable value, £2197. 1s. 11d. Was given to the monks of Coventry by Earl Leofric; in the reign of Henry II. the monks disposed of this lordship, but became re-possessed of it some time afterwards, and held it till the dissolution, when it was granted by Henry VIII. to his Solicitor-General; and, in the 29th of Elizabeth, it passed by marriage to Sir Simon Fanshaw. The Fellows of St. John's College, Oxford, the Trustees of Bagington School, Mr. Thomas Garner, and Rev. T. L. Lane, are the principal owners. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a neat edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and south aisle, has been recently rebuilt. The living, a discharged vicarage, value in K. B. £5., now £230., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the rector of Hampton Lucy, and Rev. Thos. Loveson Lane, M. A. incumbent. The vicarage is a neat residence, near the church. Tithes commuted, rectorial, £290; vicarial, £112. Heathcote, a farm $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles east. The Farm, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile north east. Wasperton Hill, another farm, 1 mile east. Free school, a small neat brick building, for infants, erected 1843, at a cost of £300., by the Rev. Thomas L. Lane, and is supported by voluntary contributions.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Geo. Hammond. (See Hampton Lucy.) The portion received by this parish is £5. 0s. 2½d. Mrs. Alice Hammonds, by will, 1778, left £100. to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, for the use of the poor, and which was invested in £168. 17s. 9d. New South Sea Annuities, and produced a dividend of £5. 1s. 4d. These two sums, being £10. 1s. 6½d., are given away to the poor half-yearly, at Christmas and Midsummer.

Rev. Richard Hill, Grammar School. (See Hampton Lucy.) This parish is entitled to participate in the benefits of that school.

Directory.—Rev. Thos. Loveson Lane, vicar, Vicarage; Mary Ann Taylor, school-mistress; Hy. Wilkins, blacksmith, Holloway; and Rd. Archer, Th. Garner, The Hill; W. Hurlston, Heathcote; and Wm. Seeley Oldham, The Farm, farmers.

WELLESBOURNE HASTINGS, a considerable village and parish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. from Kineton, contains two townships:—Wellesbourne Hastings, with Walton; and Wellesbourne Mountford, which are parted by a small stream. The Wellesbournes, at the time of the Conquest, were united, and so given by King William to Henry de Newburgh; and by one of the Earls of Warwick, his successor, seems to have been granted to Robert de Hastang, from whose family the adjunct to the name of the place was derived. Though now a moderate sized village only, it had a charter for a market and fair, granted in the 18th of Edward I. In 1841, the whole parish contained 1,434 inhabitants; 1801, 1,096; 1821, 1,125; 1831, 1,357; and 4,581 acres of land, rateable value, £6,833. 17s. 9d.

WELLESBOURNE HASTINGS, with WALTON, contains 2,888 acres, and, in 1841, 164 houses and 694 inhabitants; rateable value, £3,316. 3s. 9d. Sir Charles Mordaunt, Bart., and the Lucy family, are the owners; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome spacious edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with tower, in which are six bells; was rebuilt, except the tower and chancel, in 1848, at a cost of £3,200., defrayed by the friends of the late Sir John Mordaunt. The Church contains several ancient monuments and brasses. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £7. 11s. 8d., now £422., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Lord Charles Paulet. The Vicarage is a neat residence near the Church, has been enlarged and beautified by the present vicar.

WELLESBOURNE MOUNTFORD, a hamlet and township, 5 miles N.W. by W. from Kineton, contained, in 1841, 166 houses and 740 inhabitants, and 1,693 acres of land; rateable value, £3,317. 14s. This was granted by Henry de Newburgh, to Thurston de Mountford, in whose family it continued, with a short interruption until the time of Edward III., towards the end of whose reign it passed, by default of issue, to the Boteler's, and subsequently to the families of Belknap, Bray, and others. The principal landowners are now, Bernard Granville, Esq., The Mordaunt and Lucy families, Mrs. Venour, and several others have small estates here; Sir Charles Mordaunt, Bart., is lord of the manor. The Independents have a small Chapel here.

Richard Boyse, by deed, 1723, granted to Sir Charles Mordaunt and others, a house in Wellsbourne Mountford, which he had converted into a school house; and also a house in Warwick, known as the King's Head Inn, in trust, to pay £15. a year out of the rent of the said house to the master of the boys' school, and the residue of the rent to the mistress of the girls' school. In 1739, by another indenture, it is set forth that Richard Boyse was desirous of settling lands and tenements for the endowment of the said school, and also for endowment of another school in Wellsbourne Mountford and Wellsbourne Hastings, for instructing poor girls in the English tongue and also to knit and sew plain work. In 1788, The King's Head Inn and premises, in Warwick, having become ruinous, were exchanged for 5a. 1r. 32p. of land in the parish of Kenilworth, called the Broomfields, then held at the yearly rent of £9. Also a fourth part of certain premises in Ashorne, accounted to be worth £8. a year; of which a partition was made in 1819, when 27a. 0r. 34p. was awarded to Sir Charles Mordaunt, Bart., and others trustees of Richard Boyse's charity; they paying the sum of £6. 4s. 10d. to William Dodwell, in order to balance the respective values of the premises. The property belonging to this charity now produces (1825) £58. 10s. per annum, to which is added an annual subscription of £24., making a total income of £82. 10s.; from this the school-master receives £40. a year, and the school-mistress a salary of £30. a year; and both have their residences rent free, and £2. a year is allowed the mistress in compensation for a garden. Copy books, slates and other requisites are provided for the use of the school, which with land tax and repairs makes an average expenditure of £80. 15s. 10d. All the poor children of Wellsbourne and Walton are admitted on application to the vicar or curate, and receive instruction gratis, Edward and Ann Moody, master and mistress.

John Venour, of Great Kingtown, by will, 1727, bequeathed to the town of Wellesbourne Mountford, the place of his nativity, the sum of £30. to be laid out by his executors, within six months after his death, in some safe purchase, and conveyed to the minister, churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and their successors, to be disposed of in buying three cloth gowns, for two men and one woman of the town of Wellesbourne Mountford. No investment was made of the £30., which probably remained in the hands of the late Mr. Venour, who, by his will, 1787, devised his personal estates and certain real estates, to trustees, for the payment of his debts; but this sum appears not to have been known as a debt due, and no provision was made for it.

SHIPSTON-UPON-STOUR, a market town and parish, in the upper division of the hundred of Oswaldslow, county of Worcester, being locally in the Kinton division of the hundred of Kinton. 16 miles S. by W. from Warwick; 32 E.S.E. from Worcester; and 83 N.W. from London; containing 1,140 acres of land; and in 1841, 1805 inhabitants; rateable value, £4,793. 18s. 5d. This town is said to derive its name from having been one of the largest markets for sheep in the kingdom; it is situated on the river Stour, in a fertile and rather hilly country; there was, formerly, a large manufacture of shag, which has quite declined; and it has now little trade of any description. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester, who possess the manorial rights, hold a court annually, at which a constable is appointed. The market is held on Saturday; and fairs for horses, cows, and sheep, June 22nd, and the Tuesday after October 10th. The Church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient structure. consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with tower. The living, a rectory, with the rectory of Tidmington annexed, value in K. B. £5. 7s. 8½d., now £700.; in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester, and incumbency of the Rev. William Evans, B. D. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Friends, have each a place of worship here. National School, for boys and girls, John and Elizabeth Stokes, teachers. The Union Workhouse comprises 37 parishes, Thos. Liscombe Goss, master; Edwin Tilsley, clerk and superintendent registrar; Charles Wright, registrar of marriages; registrars of births and deaths, William Simeox, Camden dist.; Charles Holland, Halford dist.; Edward Rouse Wheatcroft, Moreton dist.; and Stephen Jarrett, Shipston dist.; relieving officers, Edward Rouse Wheatcroft, Campden dist.; Charles Holland, Brailes dist.; Stephen Jarrett, Shipston dist.; James Hunt, auditor; and The Right Hon. Lord Redesdale, chairman.

The County Court comprises the following places, viz.:—Admington, Batsford, Bourton-on-the-Hill, Campden, Clopton, Ebrington, Hidcote, Leamington, Mickleton, Moreton-in-Marsh, Quinton, and Todenham, in the county of Gloucester; Barchester, Brailes, Burmington, Butlers Marston, Cherrington, Compton Wynyates, Halford, Honington, Idlicote, Ilmington, Oxhill, Pillerton Hersey, Pillerton Priors, Stretton-on-Foss, Stourton, Sutton, Tysoe, Whatcote, Whichford, Wolford Great, and Wolford Little, in the county of Warwick; Blockley, Shipston-on-Stour, Tidmington, and Tredington, in the county of Worcester: Frederick Trotter Dinsdale, Esq., judge; Edw. This Hundred contains an area of 100,310 statute acres ; 5,945 inhabited houses, 293 uninhabited, and 23 building ; with 14,434 males, 14,527 females, making a total population of 28,961 souls ; of these 6,679 males, 7,735 females, were under 20 years of age ; 7,755 males, 7,771 females, 20 years old and upwards ; 23,255 persons were born in this county, and 5,706 elsewhere.

THE ALCESTER DIVISION

Comprises twelve parishes, three townships, and one chapelry, viz. :—Alcester, Alne (Great,) Arrow, Coughton, Ipsley, Kinwarton, Morton Baggott, Spernall, Studley, Tardebigg, Bentley township, Redditch chapelry, Tutnall-with-Cobley township, Webbeath township, Weethley, and Weston-upon-Avon ; 24,070 acres of land ; in 1841, 1,588 inhabited houses, 62 uninhabited, and 5 building ; with 8,039 inhabitants, of whom 3,963 were males, and 4,076 females ; of these numbers 1,900 males and 1,888 females were under 20 years of age ; 2,063 males, 2,189 females, 20 years old and upwards ; of these numbers 6,097 persons were born in this county, and 1,942 elsewhere.

ALCESTER, a small market town and parish, pleasantly situated in a fertile valley, on the east bank of the river Alne, near its junction with the Arrow, surrounded with richly wooded eminences, 15 miles W.S.W. from Warwick, 8 miles S.W. by W. from Stratford-on-Avon, and 103 N.W. by W. from London ; and consists principally of one long street, from which, near the market place, several smaller ones diverge. Here is a good stone bridge over both the rivers ; some of the houses are ancient, with projecting upper stories, though, in general, they are modern and have a handsome appearance. The inhabitants are well supplied with water from springs. This parish contains 1,530 acres of land ; and, in 1841, 499 occupied houses, and 38 unoccupied, with 2,399 inhabitants, of whom 1,134 were males and 1,265 females ; rateable value, £7,214. 12s. 10d. In 1801, the population was 1,625 ; 1821, 2,229 ; 1831, 2,405. The town is situated on the Ikeneld street road, and was, as its termination indicates, a Roman station ; coins, urns, and other vestiges of that people, are frequently discovered in the town and neighbourhood. A general Synod was held here early in the 8th century ; and in the reg of Henry I. Alcester was styled a Borough. The manor was granted temp. Henry I, to Sir Robert Corbit, Knight, afterwards was held by Earl Reginald, and in the 56th of Henry III. was in part purchased by Walter de Beauchamp, whose posterity enjoyed it for many generations, having "a goodly manor-house here;" and the Greville family succeeded to the lordship temp., Henry VIII., by marriage with a daughter of Sir Richard Beauchamp. The other moiety of the manor was possessed by the Botreaux family, until the 26th of Henry VI., when it was sold to Sir John Beauchamp. In the 5th of Stephen, Ralph Boteler founded a monastery, about half a mile from Alcester, the site of which, now called the Priory Close, was granted, with its possessions, to Thomas Cromwell; but soon after his attainder, came by purchase to Sir Fulke Greville. The principal landowners are the Marquis of Hertford, and lord of the manor; Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart.; and Richard Fisher, gent.; many others have small estates here. The principal branch of manufacture is that of needles, in which about 500 persons are employed. The corn market is on Tuesday; fairs are held on the Tuesday before 29th January, Tuesday before Lady-day, third Tuesday in April, May 18th, last Tuesday in July, third Tuesday in September, October 17th, and first Tuesday in December. Statutes for hiring servants, Tuesday before Old Michaelmas day, and first Tuesday after. A Court Leet is held annually, in November, at which a bailiff and deputy bailiff are appointed; but the town is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who are Thomas Brown, Esq.; Sir F. L. H. Goodricke, Bart.; Rev. G. R. Gray, and H. and C. Millward, Esqs.; and meet every Monday and Thursday. A new lock-up was erected in Henley street, 1848. New County Court is held once a month, F. T. Dinsdale, Esq., judge; Mr. Chas. Jones, clerk; Mr. Jph. Overbury, high bailiff; and Mr. Charles Sommons, under bailiff. Stamp Office, High street, Mr. Henry Overbury, distributor. The Church, formerly dedicated to St. Andrew, was, except the tower, rebuilt in 1732, and dedicated to St. Nicholas; it is partly in the early, and partly in the decorated styles of English architecture, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, with a fine embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles, containing six bells. In the Church are some splendid monuments. The living is a discharged rectory, V.K.B. £14. 18s. 10d., now £260.; Marquis of Hertford, patron, and Rev. Frederic Alfred Crow, M.A., incumbent. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Presbyterians, have each a place of worship here. The National School, erected at a cost of £600., defrayed by subscriptions, on land given by the Marquis of Hertford, with £50., and the payment of £11. annually; will accommodate 300, average 150. The Union Workhouse, erected 1837, is a large and commodious building, will accommodate 200, average 80; situated $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. by E., in the hamlet of Oversley, in the parish of Arrow; comprises twenty-two parishes, four of which, viz., Abbots Morton, Feckingham, Inceborough, and Oldborrow, are in Worcestershire; and the remainder in this county, viz.:—Alcester, Alne (Great,) Arrow, Aston Cantlow, Bidford, Coughton, Exhall, Haseler, Ipsley, Kinwarton, Morton Baggett, Oversley, Salford, Sambourne, Spennall, Studley, Weethley, and Wixford; and is divided into two relieving districts, viz.:—Alcester, Mr. Robt. Turner, officer; Studley, Mr. Francis Mander, officer; it is also divided into four registrars' districts. Christopher Thompson, master; Harriet Pinton, matron; Charles Jones, clerk and superintendent registrar; registrars of births and deaths—Hy. Overbury, Alcester dist.; Wm. Ainge, Bidford dist.; Fras. Mander, Feckenham dist.; and Thos. Richards, Studley dist. James Hunt, auditor; Rev. Thomas Roberts, chaplain; and Rev. George Robert Gray, chairman. In 1842, a neat brick chapel was added by Sir Francis L. H. Goodricke, Bart.

CHARITIES.—Newport's Free School.—Walter Newport, by will, 24th of Elizabeth, gave the sum of £400. to buy land or annuity of the value of £20. a year, or more, to be employed for the use of a school for the teaching of poor men's children of this parish, or of Harberie, as his cousin Fortesque, and Thomas Wagstaffe determined. William Fortesque, the executor of the said will, and Thomas Wagstaffe appointed that a school should be built in this parish, with lodging chambers over the same, for the schoolmaster, which was done. William Fortesque, by his will, appointed his son, Sir Nicholas Fortesque, to charge the manor of Weethley, and other messuages and lands therein, with a rent-charge of £20. per annum, to be applied according to the last will of Walter Newport. The manor of Weethley, &c. now (1826) belongs to the Dowager Countess Howe, whose tenant pays the rent-charge. In 1808, it was found the school-premises were greatly dilapidated, and it was resolved to completely repair and partly rebuild the school-house, which was done at an expense of £300., which was raised by mortgage of the school premises, and it was resolved that the rent charge of £20. should be applied to the payment of this debt and the interest thereon, until the whole should be liquidated. The present master (1825) keeps a school for pay scholars, which is well attended; he educates 6 boys free, for the use of the premises, and when the debt is paid off the number will be increased.

Brook Bridge's Free School.—Brook Bridges, Esq., by a codicil to his will, in 1700, left £400., and, by another codicil, he added the sum of £600. thereto, and appointed his trustees to lay out the said legacy of £100., in the purchase of lands of inheritance, and out of the yearly rents to pay 40s. yearly to each of the persons that should be placed in the almshouses in Alcester, that were given by his late father, and his uncle, Mr. George Ingram, and the residue of the clear rents should be applied to the repairs of the said almshouses, and distributed to poor persons of the parish. The said sum of £1000. was laid out in an estate which was conveyed to the trustees, by deed, 24th November, 1759. This property now consists of 126a. 1r. 31p. of land, called the Dingle farm in Great Alne, let at the yearly rent of £136. 10s.; out of this rent £2. is paid in quarterly payments of 10s. each to the four almspeople in the Priory alms houses, and the like sum to each of the four almspeople in the Bleachfields almshouses, making an annual payment of £16. The further annual sum of £20. is paid by quarterly payments to a schoolmaster for teaching twelve poor boys and twelve poor girls of the parish reading, writing, and arithmetic. The residue was distributed to the poor, about St. Thomas's day, but this distribution has, since 1822, been discontinued on account of the repairs and improvements in the farm buildings, at a cost of about £500., and on account of a considerable loss sustained by the failure of Mr. Edward Butler, the acting trustee. In the year 1821, timber was sold from the farm for £154. 13s. 4d. It is proposed to liquidate the debt by annual instalments of £25. per annum, in order that the distribution to the poor may be resumed as speedily as possible.

Priory Almshouses.—John Bridges, gent., in 1659, gave a close called Maggotts, and the four almshouses thereunto adjoining, in Priory lane, for the use of four poor widows for ever. The close called Maggotts contains about one acre and a half, let at the yearly rent of £8., which is paid every Lady-day, in equal sums, amongst the almswomen.

Bleachfield Almshouses.—George Ingram, gent., in 1659, gave the four almshouses in the Bleachfield, and a close adjoining, for the use of poor unmarried men or women, aged 50 years or upwards, for ever. The close adjoining contains not quite half an acre, and is occupied as garden ground, at a yearly rent of £4., which is divided in equal proportions amongst the four inmates at Christmas. Each of the almshouses consist of four houses under one roof, containing an upper and a lower room for each of the inmates; and they are kept in repair from the rents of Bridge's charity. Small plots of garden ground are attached to the respective houses.

Thomas Lucas, in 1706, gave a house in Feckenham, in the county of Worcester; the profits to be equally distributed amongst the four poor people inhabiting the Bleachfield almshouses; 15s. a year is received from this house and paid the almspeople. The Bleachfield almshouses also receive the rent of the Spittlebrook Close, containing 3r. 10p. of land, let at the yearly rent of £5. 5s. to the Marquis of Hertford, and which, in the year 1802, he gave in exchange for two cottages, but it is not known that they belong to the almshouses.

William Earnshaw, by will, 1684, bequeathed £140. to the town of Alcester, to be disposed of in lands or let out to interest, to be employed in putting out apprentices, natives of the said town. In 1693, an estate in Great Alne, containing, by estimation, 30 acres, was purchased by the trustees of Earnshaw's charity, now (1825,) let at £23. per annum. Apprentices are placed out with premiums, from £5. to £8. each, the parents generally procuring the masters. John Brandis, by will, 1724, gave to the poor of Alcester the sum of £100., to be laid out in land, &c., and the rent applied, for ever, in placing out poor boys, natives of the parish, at the discretion of the rector, churchwardens, and bailiffs, for the time being; such boys not to be placed out to any person belonging to the said town. In 1735, Brooke Bridges, Esq., sold to Brandis's trustees, for the sum of £105., certain sellions of arable land, containing 12 parcels, lying in Alcester field, to apply the rents, &c., in placing out poor boys, according to the will of John Brandis.

Elisha Yarnold, by will, 1710, gave £100. for apprenticing poor children; by the return in 1786, it is stated that this was invested in land annexed to Brandis's charity. John Reynolds, by will, 1670, gave a messuage in Alcester, the yearly profits to be employed in putting out of poor boys apprentices.—In 1784, by consent of the rector and the parish, this house was given to John Langston in exchange for another house in High street, then in the occupation of Thomas Millward, baker; he also paying the trustees £20. in money, &c., for employing the same according to the will of John Reynolds. The premises are (1825) let for the yearly rent of £8., but are about to be advanced to £14. Under the Alcester Inclosure Act, dated 1st February, 1771, the commissioners awarded to Brandis's, Yarnold's, and Reynold's charities, in three respective portions, containing altogether 6a. 3r. 8p. To the trustees of Yarnold's charity, 1a. 1r 20p.; to the trustees of Reynolds's charity, and to the trustees of Brandis's charity, all that the remainder of the said allotment. There seems something strange in these allotments, and they are now considered as belonging to Brandis's charity. The land is now let by the rector and churchwardens, at the yearly rent of £37., and the three are carried to one account, and applied to the apprenticing of poor children, giving premiums varying from £4. to £8.

Lady Elizabeth Greville, in 1562, gave twelve black gowns to twelve poor widows, for ever, being a rent charge of £5. 10s., paid by the Earl of Warwick, in 1786. The annual sum of £6. is now paid from premises conveyed about the year 1812, by the Earl of Warwick to the Marquis of Hertford; whose agent pays the money to a draper, who furnishes black serge sufficient to make twelve gowns for poor widows of the parish. This payment being 10s. more than the original gift, probably it may arise from the Gift of Sir Fulke Greville, of 10s. to the poor of Alcester, originally paid out of the Angel Inn, from which nothing has been received for many years.

Penelope Morgan, by will, 1720, gave £10. to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, and their successors, to be set out at interest for the poor at Easter-day. Saml. Dobbins, by will, 1766, bequeathed £20. to the said parties, &c., the interest to be paid yearly to the poor of this parish, on the 1st of January. William Oaks, by will, 1766, gave to the same parties £100., to be laid out in land; the rent to be given in bread to the poor of this parish. Elizabeth Oaks, by will, 1769, gave £100. to the said parties, to be laid out in land; the rents to be given to the poor in bread. In consideration of the sum of £260., certain premises were conveyed to the parish, and occupied as a work-house; of the above sum, £230., the amount of the above charities, was borrowed from the rector and churchwardens, and security given on the premises, at the interest of 4 per cent. per annum, which, amounting to £9. 4s., is regularly paid, and distributed in bread to the poor at Christmas, at the church, in quantities according to the number in family.

William Gibbs, by will, 1759, gave 40s. per annum, for ever, to the poor of this parish, to be distributed on Christmas-day by the minister and churchwardens; and charged a messuage, situate in Evesham street, with the payment. The sum of 40s. is now paid from the house known as the White Lion in that street, and applied to the purchase of bread, and distributed at Christmas.

Robert Wilcox, by will, 1627, gave his house and close to the town of Alcester, for ever, during the lease, which was for 1,000 years, for the maintenance of three sermons in the year, viz:—upon the 5th of November, in remembrance of the happy deliverance from the Papists in the powder plot; one on the 17th of November, in remembrance of that good Queen Elizabeth, her entrance unto the crown; the third upon the last day of July, in remembrance of the Lord's gracious deliverance from the Spanish Armada. And, whereas the rent was then 10s. a year, but after the death of the good wife, Lilly, who had her life in it, the house and close would then be worth 30s. a year; then his will was that the said overplus should be given to the poor every year. The house is now let for £2. per annum, and the close for £4. per annum. Out of these rents 20s. is paid to the rector for preaching the three sermons specified in the will, and bread to the value of 20s. is distributed on the 5th of November, and the like quantity on the 17th, amongst the poor of the parish, on the occasion of the sermons preached on those days. These not having exhausted the rents since their increase to the present amount, and in the absence of any clearer rule, the donor seems to have had in view two-thirds to the minister, and one third to the poor.

Church Land.—Hawes's close, adjoining Priory Lane, and one ridge of land in the field were purchased, 1655, by the town stock, and the yearly profits to be applied to the use of the church, for ever. Hawes's close is supposed to comprise the ridge of land alluded to, and is now let at the annual rent of £13. 10s., which is carried to the churchwardens' account.

ALNE (GREAT) a parish and village, 2½ m. N.E. by E. from Alcester, on the west bank of the river Alne; the manor was, at an early period, given to the monks of Winchombs, and has had, since the dissolution, various owners; in 1841, there were 85 houses and 404 inhabitants; 1801, 290; 1821, 317; 1831, 343; and 1694 acres of land, rateable value £2,492. The principal land-owners are W. C. Hemming, Esq. Sir F. L. H. Goodricke, Bart., and Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart. The former is lord of the manor; several others have also small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, consists of nave and chancel, was enlarged in 1837, by which means 86 additional sittings were obtained; 61 of which are free. The living is united to that of Kinwarton. Tithes commuted, 1837, at £306.

CHARITIES. The benefaction table records the following gifts. William Parker, in 1606, gave £2. Edward Green, £10. Richard Parker, 1607, gave £1. Thomas Green, 1615, £2. Richard Williams, 1616, £4. John Greatwich, £1. Mrs. Vernon, £20. Rev. Mr. Burton, £30. To these sums was added £10. as interest, making in the whole £80., which sum, agreeable to a public meeting, held 27th March, 1717, was laid out in the purchase of certain lands called the Church Meare, during the residue of a term of 1,900 years, granted from Lady day, 15th of James I. The land consists of about 4 acres of pasture, let at the annual rent of £22. The money is distributed half-yearly; there are between 50 and 60 poor families in the parish, and those most in want have the largest proportions.

John Smith, of the Wood house, gave two pairs of shoes yearly, for ever, to two of the poor widows of this parish, issuing out of a piece of land called the Four Lands, of about two acres, near the Wood House in this parish. The tenant of Mr. Field, of Chipping Norton, pays the charge, and two pair of shoes, or two sums of 3s. 6d. each, in money, are yearly given to two poor widows.

Edward Green, in 1666, gave 2s. a week, to be distributed to the poor in penny bread. Two dozen of penny loaves are sent to the church every Sunday by the tenant of a farm belonging to Francis Holyoake, Esq., and distributed by the churchwardens to the poor, according to their wants and families.

Joyce Greenhill gave the sum of £2., which was in the overseers' hands for the time being, the interest to be given to seven poor widows on Good Friday. Seven groats was paid as interest, till an overseer who held the money became insolvent, and it was lost.

George Smith, in 1622, gave a cottage for the use of the poor during a term of 1,000 years; this cottage cannot now be identified. Several cottages, occupied rent free, belong to the parish.

Directory.—Post Office, at Thos. Edwards; letters arrive from Henley at 9.30 a.m. and are despatched at 3 p.m. Mrs. Ellen Buddicombe, Thomas Edwards, constable; John Elvins, miller; Wm. Garner, tailor; Thos. Goodway, millwright; Jas. Green, vict., Root Inn; Rt. Lane, shoemaker; Thos. Lane, vict., Mother Huff Cap; Eliz. Leeke, shopkr.; Jas. Mason, blacksmith; Rt. Poole, gent. The Farmers are Edwd. Allen, Eliz. Cook, John Elvins, John Wm. Field, Jas. Green, Saml. Heming, Thos. Hutton, Wm. Ivens, Thos. Matthews, Ann Rufford, Edwd. Wilkes, and Hannah Wilkes.

ARROW, a parish and straggling village, 1 mile S.W. from Alcester, is partly in the Stratford division; comprises the hamlet of Oversley, in the Stratford division. The entire parish contains 4,220 acres of land; in 1841, 543 inhabitants; rateable value £5797. This was given by the Conqueror to his half-brother, Odo, Bishop of Baieux, but soon afterwards came into the possession of the Marmions, and passing through the Camvilles, went by marriage, in the time of Edward I., to Robert Burdet, whose family had their seat here, and with whom the manor continued until the reign of Henry VIII., when a dispute having arisen respecting this and other property, it was settled by arbitration, that the manor of Arrow (inter alia), should be appropriated to Edward Conway, who had married an heiress of the Burdets. The principal owners are the Marquis of Hertford and Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart.; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, consists of nave, chancel, and tower. The living is a rectory, V.K.B., £10. 10s. 7½d., now £300., in the patronage of the Marquis of Hertford, and incumbency of the Rev. H. C. Carleton, M.A. The rectory is a neat residence, delightfully situated in a vale near the church. Ragley, once a village in this parish, half a mile south west, descended, through the Marmions, Camvilles, Botelers, and Rouses, to the Bromes, one of whom sold the manor to Sir John Conway, in the 33rd of Elizabeth. The only residence here is Ragley Hall, the splendid seat of the Marquis of Hertford, built by Lord Conway, about the middle of the last century; but greatly improved by the late Marquis, under the direction of Wyatt. A good collection of portraits and other paintings are disposed in some apartments in this elegant and spacious mansion, and the extensive park is well wooded and watered.

OVERSLEY, a hamlet and small village half a mile north east, contains 1,660a. of land, and, in 1841, 242 inhabitants.

William Layton, by will, 1811, bequeathed to the poor of the hamlet of Oversley, the sum of £100., to be distributed amongst them at the discretion of his executors; and who, accordingly, have distributed the interest amongst the poor; and the principal was (in 1825,) about to be invested in Government security.

DIRECTORY. Arrow. Wm. Atkins, joiner; Hy. Thos. Bayley, Esq.; Rev. Hugh C. Carleton, M.A., Rector; Richard Cooper, blacksmith; Michael Griffiss, vict. and wheelwright, Rose and Crown; Miss My. Hemming, Thos. Hemming, tailor; Marquis of Hertford, Ragley Hall; Edwd. Locke, gardener; Hy. Sisam, corn miller; Sarah Slade, shopkeeper; John Smith, shoemaker, and Joseph K. Bazzard, Wm. Chattaway, John Gilbert, Mary Ann Hunt, Henry Hunt, and Benj. Proctor, Thornhill, farmers. Oversley: Wm. Blackland, shoe-maker; Wm. Hall, needle maker; Wm. Hopkins, corn miller; Fdk. Huxley, wheelwright; Wm. Huxley, timber merchant; Jph. James, vict., Cross Guns, Chpr. Thompson, master, Union Workhouse; and John Avery, Park Farm; Sl. Collitt, Charles H. Haywood, Lower Lodge; Sarah Johnson, Rd. Morgan, and Richd. Silvester, Upper Lodge, farmers.

COUGHTON, a straggling village, and extensive parish, 2 miles, N. by W. from Alcester; includes the hamlet of Saubourne, and contains 3,070 acres of land; and, in 1841, 955 inhabitants, rateable value, £4,173. 1s. 2d.; this is supposed by Dugdale to have been part of the lands belonging to Turchil de Warwick. In the reign of Henry IV., it came by marriage to John Throckmorton, Esq., and has since continued in that family. Robert Throckmorton made a park here, in the 2nd of Henry VII., and the ancient mansion was apparently erected about the time of Henry VIII. The fine turreted gateway to this edifice is stated to have been removed from Evesham Abbey, by Sir George Throckmorton, at the dissolution, but Dugdale merely says, "that it was built by Sir George Throckmorton, who intended that the rest of the house should be finished in the same style," which was not the case. The mansion, in its original form, was a quadrangle enclosing a court, and surrounded by a moat, the entrance being by a bridge, which led to the turreted gate-house. Considerable alterations were made by Sir Francis Throckmorton, in the time of Charles II., the house having been plundered by the parliamentarians, who ejected Sir Robert, the then proprietor. About the year 1780, Sir Robert Throckmorton took down one side of the quadrangle, filled up the moat and amongst other alterations, enclosed the gateway, fitting it up as a hall; this work was removed by the late Sir Charles Throckmorton, who made great improvement in the mansion. Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart., is the present owner, who resides here occasionally. Here is a Catholic Chapel, at the west end of the hall, Rev. Richard Francis Davis, priest. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, situated near the west bank of the River Arrow, is a very ancient edifice, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles and tower in which there are six bells. In the Church are several fine monumental memorials of the Throckmorton family. The living, a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £9. 10s. 7½d., now £161.; augmented with £400. Queen Anne's bounty. Sir Robert Throckmorton, patron, and Rev. Robert Tomes, incumbent. Here is a free-school, supported by Lady Throckmorton.

Sambourne, a township, and considerable village, 1 mile N.W., contains about 2,000a. of land, and one of the finest oak trees in the county. In 1841, here were 131 houses, and 662 inhabitants; rateable value, £4,653. Was, in 1704, given to the monks of Evesham, who retained possession of it until the dissolution, when it was sold to Robert Throckmorton, Esq., and still continues in the family.

CHARITIES.—Wm. Dewes, Esq., by will, 1715, bequeathed the sum of £50. to the town of Great Coughton, &c., on trust, for providing one dozen of penny wheaten bread weekly; to be distributed at the Church, to such poor as should duly resort thither to hear divine service. By indenture, 5th January, 1718, Court Dewes, Esq., in consideration of the sum of £50., conveyed to Sir Robert Throckmorton, and five others, their heirs and assigns, a yearly rent charge of £2. 10s., to be issuing out of a messuage and lands, situate in Long Marston, in the county of Gloucester, upon trust, to pay the said rent charge to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Great Coughton. Mr. Fincher, the occupier of the farm, pays the money to a baker in Alcester, who sends 36 twopenny loaves every other Sunday to Coughton Church, which are given to the poor.

Dorman Curry, by will, 1688, bequeathed £20. to be set forth at interest, to be employed from time to time in setting boys apprentice. This money is supposed afterwards to have been employed in the purchase of No Man's close.

John Smith, in 1768, by will, gave £100.; one shilling of the interest to be given every Sunday in bread; the remainder to be disposed of among the poor on St Thomas's day, at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens. This £100. was placed, on the behalf of the parish, on the security of the tolls of the Birmingham turnpike road. It was afterwards in contemplation to apply this money in the purchase of the remaining part of No Man's Close, adjoining the school in Alcester, and the terms agreed upon, and the parish put in possession of the land; and the interest of the £100. remaining on the turnpike security, was paid to Gregory Watkins, the owner of the land, but who had failed to give a sufficient title. The land is about three quarters of an acre, and is let at the yearly rent of £6., which is partly given away with Dewes's charity, and the remainder in bread, on St. Thomas's day, to all the poor of the parish.

Throgmorton Almshouses.—There are in the parish five almshouses, which were built by the late Sir Robert Throckmorton, in lieu of others erected by some former member of the family, and which had fallen down. They are inhabited by five poor persons, who receive from the agent of Sir George Throckmorton, the annual sum of £4., by quarterly payments, but has always been considered as a private charity. By the will of Sir Robert Throgmorton, 1518, left certain lands, then of the yearly value of £16., of which sum £8. was to pay 7d. a week each to the five almspeople, amounting yearly to £7. 11s. 8d.; the remaining 8s. 4d. to go to the reparation of the said almshouses; and the sum of £8. a year was to be paid to a priest, to sing perpetually in the north aisle, at Coughton, for my soul and for my ancestors', which priest was to keep a school and teach grammar; but of this nothing is now known.

William Wheeler, by deed, 26th Henry VIII., released certain premises and lands to trustees, on trust, to pay taxes, tollages, subsidies, &c., which might happen to the parishioners of Coughton. By deed, 23rd July, 1745, the above premises and lands, containing in the whole about 30 acres, were demised to Sir Robert Throckmorton, and George Throckmorton, his only son and heir, their executors, &c., for the term of 4,000 years; paying therefore yearly to the said trustees and feoffees of the said premises, and their heirs and assigns, the yearly rent of £10. by half yearly payments, for the benefit of the reparation of the church, and for the relief of the poor. The sum of £8. 4s. is annually received in respect of this reserved rent, and carried to the churchwardens' account, £1. 16s. being withheld for land tax. These lands, known as the Church or Poor lands, are in the possession of Sir George Throckmorton, or his under tenants; the land is said to be worth 20s. an acre, and the granting a lease for 4,000 years was an excess of the power of the trustees, and its validity is a fit subject for the consideration of a court of equity.

Robert Haynes, by will, 1710, gave £20., the interest to be applied in setting poor children of the Hamlet of Sambourne apprentices. Joyce Whoman, gave 40s. to the intent that the interest should be yearly, on Good-Friday, given to seven poor widows of Sambourne. William Hemming gave £4., to the intent that four widows of Sambourne should have one shilling each on every Good-Friday. Mrs. Anne Ganton left £100. towards the relief of her niece, who, dying soon after, the said £100., with the above mentioned three charities, was laid in the purchase of an estate, in Sambourne, in 1731, for the use of the poor of Sambourne, for ever. This estate consists of about six acres of land and three cottages, comprising five dwellings. The land is let for the yearly rent of £9. 9s., and the cottages are let to the parish officers for £6. 3s. a year; but this rent of the cottages will be advanced by £6. a year. The rents are expended agreeably to the intentions of the donors.

John Hobbins, by will, 1735, gave 20s. a year, to find two gowns for two widows of Sambourne yearly, on the 1st day of May, charged on Brook Meadow, a close in Great Alne. This annuity is paid by Richard Heath, of Salford Lodge, the owner of a farm in Great Alne, to two poor widows, in money.

IPSLEY, a parish and considerable village, on the east bank of the river Arrow, $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by W. from Alcester, contains 3,500 acres of land; and in 1841, 1,029 inhabitants; 1801, 478; 1821, 754; 1831, 830; rateable value, £5,300. This manor was possessed by a family of the name of Hubaud, from the time of Stephen, until the 17th century. Walter S. Sander, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner; T. Entwisle, Esq., — Stokes, Esq., and several others have estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, consists of nave, chancel, and embattled tower, in which there are three bells. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's books at £11. 10s. 7½d. now £685.; Rev. Charles Dolben, B. A., patron and incumbent. The rectory is a neat residence, a little east from the church. A Chapel of ease, dedicated to St. Luke, was erected at Headless Cross, in 1843, at a cost of £1,000. Here is also a neat Catholic Chapel, situated at Redditch, but in this parish. This parish has of late years greatly improved, and comprises part of the township of Redditch, and the hamlets of Headless Cross and Crabbs Cross, about three miles from Ipsley.

CHARITIES.—Mr. Joseph Slepper, in 1711, gave £30. to this parish, the interest thereof to clothe, yearly, two poor widows, or in want of such, three fatherless children. In 1823, an arrear of interest had accrued from the late rector, in whose hands the money had been vested; of this sum, £5. was applied in gifts of clothing, and £10. was added to the principal. The Rev. Thomas Dolben Dolben, now (1826) curate of Ipsley, and only child of the late rector, is responsible for the £40.; and £2. a year is applied by him in clothing, or sheeting, to poor widows of the parish.

Mrs. Mary Dolben, by will, 1787, after bequeathing to three trustees, £300., for the benefit of three widows of clergymen of the church of England, gave to her said trustees the residue of her personal estates, &c., to apply the same to the use of her mother for life; and then of her brother, the Rev. Thomas Dolben, for life; and in the event of his dying without children who should attain the age of twenty-one, then in providing a small house for the residence of a schoolmistress, in Ipsley, for teaching twelve girls of the said parish to read, spin, and knit; and paying £21. a year to the schoolmistress, and providing bibles and clothing for the scholars, &c. The testatrix's property at the time of her death consisted of £1,000. secured on a mortgage of an advowson, and £100. three per cent. consols. This bequest appears to have been considered void, under the statute, 9th George I., at least so far as related to the £1,000. mortgage; and of the £100. stock, which, in the year 1818, after various expenses, was reduced to £46.15s.11d., was carried by Mr. Lea, solicitor, who had received the money to the account of Thos. Dolben Skynner.

Marked 1, reside at Redditch; 2, at Headless Cross; 3, at Crabbs Cross; and the rest at Ipsley, or where specified.

KINWARTON, a parish and small village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. from Alcester, contains 480 acres of land; and, in 1841, twelve houses and 67 inhabitants; rateable value £709. 14s. 6d. The monks of Evesham Abbey held this from 714 till the dissolution. The principal land owners are Thomas Brown, Esq., Marquis of Hertford, and the Rev. Richard Seymour; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in the 13th century, consists of nave, chancel, and aisle. The living, a rectory, with Great Alne and Weethley annexed, V.K.B., £17. 11s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., now £438.; Bishop of Worcester, patron, and Rev. Richard Seymour, M. A., incumbent. The rectory is a neat house at the west end of the church.

CHARITIES.—Isaac Dipple, by will, 1729, left £10. to the poor of this parish; this sum was paid by Sarah Caulton, the sole executrix of Isaac Dipple, April 19th, 1731, into the hands of Jeffrey Hopkins, the churchwarden. It is now in the hands of the rector, and also another £10., both of which he received from his predecessor; of which one £10. is supposed to have been the gift of Sarah Caulton, in 1735. The annual sum of 20s. is paid, as the interest of these two sums, which is given away to the poor at Easter, by the rector and churchwardens, in the church.

Directory.—Thos. Brown, Esq., Joseph Fryer, parish clerk; Saml. Heming, farmer; John Hodges, farmer; and Rev. Richard Seymour, M. A., incumbent.

MORTON BAGGOTT, a small village and parish, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.S.W. from Henley-in-Arden, contains 1,160a. of land; in 1841, 35 houses and 170 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,309. 7s. 9d. This place obtained its adjunct of Baggott from a family of that name, who for many generations resided here, and were owners of a portion of the property. Sir F. L. H. Goodricke, Bart., is the present lord of the manor and owner. The Church, dedicated to Holy Trinity, is a small structure, consists of nave and chancel; was repaired and re-pewed in 1848. The living, a rectory, V. K. B., £6., now £188.; Sir F. L. H. Goodricke, Bart., patron, and Rev. Samuel D. Pearshall, incumbent, for whom the Rev. Edward Wheatley officiates.

Directory.—Joseph Arnall, shoemaker; John Elvins, joiner; William Elvins, joiner and shopkeeper. The Farmers are, Stephen Aldington, Thomas Holyoake, and corn miller; William Smallwood, and Richard Stiles.

SPERNALL, a parish and small straggling village, 4 miles N. from Alcester, contains 1,110 acres of land; and, in 1841, 22 houses and 107 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,238. Supposed by Dugdale to have been part of the possessions of the Norman Earls of Warwick, and held in serjeantry from them by the Durvassals, who resided here; the service being to perform the duties of chief butler upon Christmas-day, Easter-day, and Whit-Sunday, at their castle, at Warwick, or their manor-houses at Claverdon, Tanworth, or Sutton, at whichever they might happen to be; the manor was held in this way many years. Afterwards possessed by the families of Holt, Reve, and Webbe; was purchased in the reign of Henry VI. by John Throckmorton, Esq.; Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart., is now lord of the manor and owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is a small edifice, consisting of nave and chancel, was repaired and re-pewed in 1844. The living, a discharged rectory, V.K.B. £3. 18s. 1½d., now £160.; Charles Chambers, Esq., R.N., patron; and Rev. Charles Dolben, incumbent, for whom the Rev. James Sheppard, officiates. The Rectory is a neat residence near the Church.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Allen, by will, 1723, gave to the poor of this parish 10s. a year for ever, to be paid out of his estate at Great Alne, by two equal portions, on St. Thomas's-day and Good-Friday. This annuity is now paid by Mr. Stephen Morgan, the owner of the estate so charged, who, with the assistance of the minister, distributes it on Good-Friday, among the poor.

John Saunders, who died in the year 1709, left the sum of £10., the yearly interest of which was to be given to the poor of this parish for ever. This money is in the hands of the rector, who pays interest at the rate of 5 per cent., which is distributed on Good-Friday among the poor of the parish.

Mrs. Ann Bates, in the year 1806, gave £20. into the hands of the rector, Rev. Mr. Chambers, to be applied to the use of the poor of the parish, at his discretion. This sum was, in 1806, invested on the security of the tolls of the turnpike road, from Stratford to Bromsgrove, at 5 per cent., but which, by notice, 1824, is reduced to 4½ per cent. The interest is distributed among the poor, in June.

STUDLEY, a parish, and considerable village, pleasantly situated on the river Arrow, 4 miles N. by W. from Alcester, comprises the hamlets of Outhill, Mappleborough Green, Clarks Green, Washford, and part of Littlewood Green; this parish is noted for the manufacture of needles, about 800 hands are employed. In 1841, here were 398 houses and 1,992 inhabitants, 1801, 1,037; 1821, 1,338; 1831, 1,903; and 5,070, acres of land, rateable value, £8,065. 1s. 2d.; at the Conquest this was almost entirely in the possession of William, the son of Corbicon, whose son Peter passed away a considerable portion of it with his daughter in marriage to Henry de Montford, and the remainder to William de Cantilupe. Montford's portion came afterwards to William Beauchamp, Lord Abergavenny, and eventually was possessed by the Knights Templars. The above named Peter founded a priory of regular Augustine canons here, in the reign of King Stephen, which was so amply supported and endowed, that, in 1399, the monks were enabled to begin rebuilding the Church constructed at their foundation. After the dissolution of this priory the site of the monastery, manor of Studley, and other lands, was granted to Sir Edmund Knightly, sergeant at law, in the 30th of Henry VIII., and it subsequently passed by marriage to John Knotsford, sergeant at arms. The principal-land-owners are, Robert Knight, Esq., Sir F. L. H. Goodricke, Bart., and Theodore Moilliet, Esq., the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, has lately been repaired and consists of nave, chancel and side aisles, a stained glass window has recently been put in the east end by the patron. The living, a vicarage value in K. B. £8., now £120., augmented with £200. private benefaction, £600. Queen Anne's bounty and £1,250. parliamentary grant; Robert Knight, Esq., patron, and Rev. John Finley, M. A., incumbent, for whom the Rev. H. H. Jones, officiates. The General Baptists, the Particular Baptists, and the Wesleyans have each a place of worship here.

Studley Castle is a noble edifice, erected 1833, situated $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. from Alcester, on a commanding eminence having an extensive prospect and is the seat and property of Sir F. L. H. Goodricke, Bart. Hamlets.—Outhill, a few scattered houses, 3 miles E. Mappleborough Green, several scattered farms, 2m. S.E. Clarke's Green, several scattered houses, 1 mile E. Washford, a farm and several cottages on the Birmingham road, and Littleworth Green, a small village, 1 mile S.W.

CHARITIES.—Lord Abergavenny gave to this parish £80. out of a sale of timber, from Mappleborough Green. Thomas Robbins gave £20. Edmund Court, by indenture, 1658, granted to trustees certain closes of pasture and wood ground, with a messuage lately erected on the same, and the tithes of the said lands, for the payment of 40s. a year, to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day and Good Friday, and for disposing of the rents towards the repair of the parish church of Studley, or relieving the poor, or for such charitable uses as the feoffees should appoint. — Kendal, about the year 1684, gave £5. to the parish, for the poor.

William Moore, by will, 1714, gave £5.; the interest for a sermon on Good Friday.

William Eyres, by will, 1739, gave a piece of land, called Blockhill, to be secured to the feoffees of the poor's land, to pay for schooling of two poor boys of this parish.

William Mortiboy, by will, 1733, gave £175., to remain as a stock to be paid into the hands of Edmund Chambers, Esq., and the rest of the feoffees of the poor's land, and the vicar for the time being, to apply the interest or rent of as much as should arise from £100.; one part for clothing four poor men or women, and the other part to be every year given to poor families, on Good Friday, at sixpence a house; and what should arise from the said £75., it was to be applied for teaching two poor children of the parish. Thomas Slipper gave £20. in 1711; the lawful use thereof to be laid out by the minister and churchwardens, in clothing two poor fatherless children of this parish, a boy and a girl, on St. Thomas's-day. Joseph Slipper, in 1711, gave £10. for the use of the poor of this parish, who should receive the holy sacrament at Easter and Christmas. A school-house was built in the year 1810, by subscription, upon part of the waste land of the manor; but the conveyance not having been perfected, this piece of land, 2r. 34p., with the school-house, was some years afterwards, upon the inclosure of the parish, allotted to the feoffees of the poor estates; the whole of which have arisen principally from the above-named benefactions, and, with the school land, amounts to 30a. 1r. 7p. The school-house and garden are occupied rent free by a schoolmaster, who teaches eight poor boys of the parish free, in consideration thereof, and he also instructs the Sunday school. The other property is let at the yearly rent of £38. The land is tithe free. Part of the tithe being derived from the gift of Mr. Edmund Court, and the other was purchased in 1799, for the sum of £20. 16s. The clear income is distributed by the feoffees, in accordance with the wills of the donors.

William Feltherstone, who died in 1760, devised certain lands at Merce Green, to John Phillips and his heirs, upon trust, to provide four dozen of penny white bread, to be distributed to poor persons attending divine service at the church. Mr. John Bate, the owner of an estate in this parish, called Merce Green, pays £10. 8s. a year in respect of this charity, and 12s. worth of bread is distributed every third Sunday.

Edmund Court, by will, 1671, gave 20s. to poor householders, on St. Thomas's day, to be distributed by the churchwardens and overseers. This is received from an estate called Fields Farm, in which is a meadow called Round Meadow, particularly charged with the payment; the property (1825), of Mrs. Burton, and given as directed.

Court Dewes, Esq., by will, 1721, gave to poor householders of this parish, 20s. per annum, to be issuing out of Puchen's Fields, in this parish, to be distributed by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor on Good-Friday. By an indenture, 1758, John Dewes, Esq., of Wellesbourne, to fulfil the further charitable intentions of his brother, who, by the draft of a subsequent will not completed, was desirous to give £200., the produce to be laid out in clothing poor people belonging to the parish, granted an annuity of £8., to be issuing out of a farm called Puchen Fields in this parish, containing 30a. This, as well as the preceding rent charge, is received from Mr. Freeman, the owner of the farm, and given to the poor, in coats of 10s. or 11s., and gowns 8s., appointed at a parish meeting, held on St. Thomas's day.

John Hobbins, by will, 1735, gave 20s. a year, charged on a close in Great Alne, called Brook Meadow End, to find two gowns, to be given to two widows of this parish. Mr. Heath, of Salford Lodge, is (1825) the present owner of the close, and pays the charge, which is distributed to widows accordingly.

Thomas Chambers, by will, gave 40s. per annum, charged on his messuage, close, and garden, in Studley, to be paid upon Easter and Christmas sacrament days, by 2s. 6d.

to the minister, 1s. to the clerk, and 16s. 6d. to the poor communicants, to be distributed amongst them by the minister, which is accordingly done.

John James, by will, 1774, bequeathed to the Rev. Edward Davies and two others, and their heirs, the sum of £100. to buy yearly, with the interest thereof, Bibles and Testaments, to be given to the poor inhabitants of this parish. This was invested in £152. 10s., Three per cents, producing an annual dividend of £4. 11s. 6d., which, when received, is distributed as directed.

Nathaniel George Petre, by will, 1789, gave £27. 10s. in the Four per cents. to Phillips Lyttleton, Esq. and two others, and their successors, to receive the dividends, and lay out the same in bread annually on Christmas Day, to be given to the poor. The dividend, £2. 2s., when received, is distributed accordingly.

John Knottesford, by will, 1777, and a codicil thereto, 1780, gave the sum of 200 guineas to the Worcester Infirmary, upon condition that they admit all patients, sick or lame, from this parish, and the parishes of Alcester and Teddington.

Rev. John Moore, by will, 1729, gave £10. to the town of Wootton Wawen, and the parish of Studley, share and share alike, to be placed out at interest, and the interest laid out in bread and given to the poor on Good Friday. Nothing is now known of this charity.

Those marked 1 reside at Littlewood Green, 2 Mappleborough Green, 3 Outhill, 4 Clarke's Green, 5 Washford, and the rest at Studley.

Earl Amhurst is lord of the manor, and owner. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave, chancel, and embattled tower; it contains two ancient brasses, and three neat monuments to the Adkins. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £7. 14s. 7d, now £80., augmented with £200, parliamentary grant; in the patronage of the Earl and Countess of Amhurst, and incumbency of the Rev. James Davenport.

MILCOTE, a small hamlet, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. contains 480 acres of land, 4 houses, and 25 inhabitants.

Directory.—John Adkins, Upper Milcote; Wm. Baldwin, Weston Farm, Betty Chambers, Lower Milcote; John Hornby, and John Tomes, Weston Sands, farmers.

THE HENLEY DIVISION

Comprises eight parishes, two townships, and three chapelries, viz.:—Beaudesert, Claverton, Langley township, Lapworth, Packwood, Rowington, Pinley township, Tanworth, Slater street chapelry, Wootton Waven, Henley-in-Arden chapelry, and Ullenhall chapelry; 30,422a. 2r. 16p. of land; and, in 1841, 1,589 inhabited houses; 70 uninhabited, and 6 building; with 7,507 inhabitants, of whom 3,845 were males, and 3,662 females.

BEAUDESERT, or BELDESERT, a parish and small village half a mile E. from Henley-in-Arden, contains 1,242a. 2r. 19p. of land, and, in 1841, 44 houses and 205 inhabitants; in 1801, 150; 1821, 209; 1831, 199; rateable value, £1,813. 5s. 11d. A strong castle was erected here shortly after the Conquest, by Thurstan de Montford, and his descendents made it their chief residence for many generations; during the wars between the Houses of York and Lancaster, it was dismantled, and at this time, scarce a trace of its site can be distinguished. In the reign of Stephen, the lord of the manor obtained a grant for a market and fair; both have long since fallen into disuse. Here are two statutes for hiring servants, October and November. Near to this village, was born one of our native poets, Richard Jago, who, during his residence at Snitterfield, of which place he was many years vicar, composed various poems, the principal one being entitled "Edge Hill;" but some of his minor works, especially his Elegies on the Black-birds, the Swallows, and Goldfinches, have been greatly and deservedly admired. The principal land owners are Sir Edward Joseph Smythe, Bart., and Earl Cornwallis; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is partly in Norman and partly in the early English style of architecture, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and embattled tower, containing three bells. The living, a rectory, V. K. B., £7. 16s. 0½d.; now, £293.; in the patronage of the crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Samuel Holland, M.D. The glebe land consists of 3 acres 15 perches.

CHARITIES.—Mary Weale, by will, 1680, gave £15. to the poor of this parish; the interest to be paid on St. Thomas's day. Ann Cowper, (mother of the above,) by will, 1685, gave £5. to the poor; the interest to be given every Good Friday. Joseph Morteboys, by will, 1727, gave the interest of £10., to be paid yearly, to the poor, on Good Friday, and nominated Mary Randall, sole executrix. Mary Randall, in consideration of the said several sums, amounting, together, to £30., granted to the Rev. Richard Jago, rector of this parish, and seven others, an annuity, or rent charge, of 30s., clear of all deductions, to be issuing out of four pieces of land, called Lodge Close, Holme's Close, or Hill Goose-tree Meadow, and Whateley's Meadow, all adjoining, and in this parish, payable 1st of March and 1st of December, in equal proportions, on trust, to be distributed by the minister and churchwardens, to the poor, upon every Good Friday and St. Thomas's day. Mr. James Gruby, of Wootton, is the owner, and pays the charge.

Mary Grimshaw, by will, 1762, gave a rent charge of 10s., to be laid out in a gown, for a poor woman of this parish, yearly; and by the returns of 1786, vested in the minister and churchwardens. This has not been paid for many years. The owner of the small farm in this parish, so charged, having refused payment.

Elizabeth Reeve, by will, 1770, bequeathed to the poor of this parish, the yearly sum of 16s., to be paid them by her executor, at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens, on St. Thomas's day. Richard Reeve, the executor, paid the rent charge; and by his will, proved 1811, left £50., which was to include the gift of Elizabeth Reeve, to trustees, upon trust, to place the same on proper security, and pay the interest among the poor of this parish, annually, on Christmas day. The legacy (1825) remained in the hands of Mr. Thomas Tidman, of Warwick, one of the trustees, from whom the interest, 50s., is regularly received, and given away on St. Thomas's day, together with the 16s. before mentioned.

Directory.—Jph. Bench, sawyer; Jph. Biddle, vict., Bird in Hand; Geo. Chambers, horse breaker; Wm. Ingram, bricklayer; Wm. Welch Lea, Esq., The Park; Jno. Shephard, vict., Cross Guns; Thos. Vaughn, gent.; and James Bradbury, and maltster; Dnl. Chesshire, Pinks Farm; Geo. Daws, Buckley Green; John Foreman, Mobb's Farm; Wm. Mander, Park Farm; Fdk. Richards, and preparer of constitution water, Camp Hill Cottage; and John Tight, Loveridge Hill, are the farmers.

CLAVERDON, a small village, 3½ miles E. by S. from Henley-in-Arden; in 1841, here were 118 houses, and 532 inhabitants, with 2,566a. 2r. 29p. of land; rateable value, £3,367. 2s. 4½d. This was at an early period in the possession of the Earls of Warwick, and so continued until the reign of Henry VII.; since the dissolution, it has had various owners. This village was distinguished by being the residence of Thos. Spencer, Esq., (a branch of the now ennobled family of the Spencers, of Althorp, in the county of Northampton,) who built a spacious mansion here, and after residing in it many years, died in 1580. The principal land owners are C. C. Musgrave, Esq., Hon. Fras. Gough, and Darwin Galton, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a neat stone edifice, rebuilt in 1841, in the Tudor style, and cost £1,400.; now consists of nave, chancel, side aisle, and gallery. The living, a discharged vicarage, with the perpetual curacy of Norton Lindsey, valued in the King's books, at £5. 12s. 1d.; now £300.; and has been augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty. The Archdeacon of Worcester, patron; and Rev. Arthur Andrew Onslow, M.A., incumbent. The National School is a neat brick building, erected 1848; will accommodate 140; average, 80; Hy. Hunter, master, and M. M. Heritage, mistress.

LANGLEY, a township and small village, one mile S. W. by W. and four miles S.E. from Henley, contains 993 acres, 3 roods, 7 perches of land; and in 1841, here were 38 houses and 179 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,132. 15s. 9½d. The principal landowners are R. H. Solly, Esq., who is also lord of the manor; Mr. Thos. Matthews, and William John Hooper, Esq. Yarnagall, a hamlet, consisting of a few houses, 1½ miles S. E. by E.

CHARITIES.—John Matthews, alias John Smith, by will, 17th of Henry VIII., enfeoffed George Throckmorton, and others, with three messuages, &c., in the town and field of Claverdon, in trust, to pay for the use of an Obit Dirge, with masses for his soul, and all Christian souls, in the parish church, by the vicar for the time being; and in other necessities for the said church. The premises and lands belonging to this gift are now let for £78. 4s. per annum; from which, after paying for repairs, and 12 guineas to a schoolmaster, who instructs the poor children of the parish in reading, writing, and arithmetic, in the vestry of the church, where upwards of 30 are instructed. The residue is applied to the repairs and other uses of the church. In 1825, a fall of timber took place, by which a sum of £514. was realized, which it is intended to let remain, until, by means of accumulations, a sum shall be raised for making improvements in the church.

Sarah Walford, the wife of Thomas Walford, gave the interest of £30., for ever, to be laid out in bread, and distributed to the poor of this parish twelve times in the year. William Parker gave, by will, 20s., for ever, to be given to four poor widows of this parish, on St. Thomas's Day, and 9s. for bread, and 1s. to the clerk. These sums are stated by the returns of 1786, as vested in Henry Gough, yielding the annual produce, respectively, of 30s., 20s., and 10s.; and are now (1825) paid out of a farm belonging to John Calthorpe Gough, Esq., in this parish. The clerk distributes the bread on the first Sunday in the month.

Matthew Walford, who died in 1722, gave, by will, 20s. out of his estate, called Nunhold, in Hatton parish, to be distributed yearly on St. Thomas's day. The sum of 20s. is annually received from the owner of the estate, and given in bread amongst the poor of this parish as above.

John Parker gave, by will, 10s. for ever, out of his estate called Cordisonall, to be distributed by his heirs, or their assigns, three days before Christmas, yearly. Sir Jph. Scott is the owner of the estate, whose tenant annually pays the rent charge to the churchwardens, which is given in bread.

Directory.—(LANGLEY.) James Matthews, vict., Harrow; and William Gibbs, Sunger Farm; Charles Hy. Jackson, Thos. Leeson, Edwd. Lurkings, Thos. Matthews, The Hill; Thos. Moss, John Newberry, Yarnigale; James and William Palmer, Yarnigale; and Wm. Rawlins, are farmers. Carrier to Warwick, sat., William Stanley.

LAPWORTH, a parish and well built village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. N. E. from Henley-in-Arden, contains, with a portion of Kingswood, 1,700 acres of land; and in 1841, 151 houses and 729 inhabitants; rateable value, £4,035. This lordship was possessed by the families of Brandestone and Montfort, from the reign of Henry III., to that of Henry V., when it was purchased by John Catesby, whose descendent, William, being taken prisoner at the battle of Bosworth, was beheaded, and the manor granted to Sir James Blunt, since which time it has had various owners. The principal land owners are Mrs. Cooper, Earl Cornwallis, John Fetherston, Esq., Edward Devett, Esq., Mrs. Martha Hildick; the former is lady of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, with a spire, which contains five bells. The living, a rectory, V.K.B., £9. 9s. 7d., now £428.; in the patronage of the Warden and Fellows of Merton College, Oxford; and the Rev. Arundel St. John Mildmay, M.A., incumbent. The rectory is a neat residence near the Church. Kingswood, a hamlet and small village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by N., partly in the parish of Rowington.

CHARITIES.—George Ashby, 1440, gave lands for the maintenance of this church. John Hill, 1479, rector of this parish, purchased lands and tenements lying in Lapworth, Nuthurst, and Beaudesert, for the maintenance of this church. Elenor Ford, 1454, gave two closes and a meadow, called Ford Fields, to this church. Thomas Underwood, and Catherine, his wife, 1511, gave lands to the church, the poor, and the highways. Roger Sly, 1527, gave a cottage and lands to the poor and the highways. John Collet, of Nuthurst, 1568, gave a close for the relief, either of the poor, or repairs of the highways and churches of Lapworth and Nuthurst. John Mouniford, 1570, gave 3 messuages and a close for the relief of the poor. Richard Thorneal, 1599, of Shrewley, gave 5s. a year to the poor of this parish; and the like to the parish of Rowington. Isaac Morteblys, 1701, of Nuthurst, gave 5s. per annum to the poor of this parish. Humphrey Shakespear gave 20s. per annum to the poor of this, and the like sum to the poor of Rowington. The property belonging to the combined charities of this parish, contains upwards of 180 acres of land, with various houses and cottages, producing a rental of £412. 5s. 3d. per annum, exclusive of 21 dwellings, occupied by parish paupers. The premises were, in 1823, granted to Charles Fetherstone and seven others, as trustees, on trust, that the rents and profits should be employed for the necessary reparations of the church of Lapworth; towards the mending the highways within the parish; towards the relief of the aged, impotent, and poor, and other charitable uses for this parish, &c. A school has been erected (1825) on a plot of land, 1r. 1p.; and comprises apartments for the residence of the master and parish clerk, at each end, which consists of a parlour, kitchen, and brewhouse, on the ground floor; and three bed rooms on the upper floor. The school-room, in the centre, has a piazza in front, intended as a place of exercise for the children in rainy weather. It is a brick building, covered with blue tiles, under one roof, and cost about £800. For many years the sum of £20. had been allowed to a schoolmaster for teaching, gratis, the children of resident parishioners to read, write, and cypher; about 60 attend, and the present school is much larger; also, a part of the funds were applied to the support of a charity school for poor girls, who are provided with books, as wanted, and are taught to read, knit, and sew, and clothed every second year; between 20 and 30 girls attend, William and Mary Ann Cattell, master and mistress. A further part of the fund is applied in the purchase of coals in the winter season, and occasionally to the purchase of linen, flannel, and other clothing, for such as are most needy; and an annual distribution in money amongst the poor at Christmas, varying in amount, but seldom exceeding £4.; and occasionally relief is advanced: sums of £5. and £10. have thus from time to time been advanced in cases of urgency. An annual payment of 18s. is paid to Nuthall, in respect of Collett's gift; and £1. to Rowington, in respect of Shakespear's gift. The church and chancel are repaired, and the necessary ornaments provided from these funds; and the reparation of the highways. A salary of £5. is yearly paid to the treasurer, for receiving the rents and keeping the books; and £8. is paid to the parish clerk for his annual service at the church.

John Shakespeare, by will, 1627, gave 12d. yearly, to be paid at the discretion of John Twycross, and his heirs, for ever, from certain lands in Lapworth, at the parish church of Lapworth, on All Souls' day; and the like sum to the poor of Packwood, in penny loaves, on the same day, yearly. The sum of 2s., in penny loaves, is now paid from a farm, the property of Mr. John Burman, of Tanworth; and twelve loaves are distributed in each of the above parishes Marked * reside at Kingswood, the remainder at Lapworth, or where specified.

PACKWOOD, a parish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. from Henley-in-Arden, containing 1,655 acres, 2 roods, 1 perch of land; in 1841, 63 houses and 350 inhabitants; 1801, 305; 1821, 279; 1831, 319; rateable value, £1,512. 7s. This was a chapelry in the parish of Wasperton, but in the National Census denominated a parish; anciently belonged to the monks of Coventry, but after the dissolution, was granted to William Willington and John Sheldon. It subsequently, in the time of Edward VI., passed to Robert Burdett of Bramcote, whose grandson sold it to Thomas Spence, Esq.; after which, it came into the possession of Mr. Russell, of Warwick. The ancient mansion or manor-house here, called Packwood House, has for many years been the seat and property of the Fetherston family; it is pleasantly situated half a mile S.E.; is surrounded by a well wooded park, and is the seat and property of John Fetherston, Esq.

The principal land owners are Earl Cornwallis, Wilson Aylesbury, Esq., and Mr. Samuel Fullard; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisle, with an embattled tower, in which are five bells; here are several beautiful monuments to the Fetherstons. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £108., augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £800. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Earl Cornwallis, and Rev. Robert Wm. Johnson, M.A., incumbent. The parsonage is a neat brick residence, pleasantly situated near the Church. The Stratford canal, and the Birmingham and Oxford railway, intersect this parish.

CHARITIES.—Church Land.—By a deed, 1653, a certain parcel of ground, containing half an acre and half a rood, was given for the repairs of the parish church at Packwood, and, in 1817, this land was conveyed to John Heath and others, on trust, for the above use. This land, by admeasurement, contains 3r. 24p., lies at the west corner of Meadow, now in the occupation of Nathaniel Vyse, and is divided by three boundary stones, for which Mr. Vyse pays the churchwardens two guineas a year. In respect of this land, a small allotment was awarded, on the inclosure of Packwood common, to hold the same on the like trusts as expressed in the deed of 1653; this is a very small piece, containing about four perches, let for the yearly rent of 2s. 6d. These rents are carried to the churchwardens' account, and applied to the repairs of the church.

Thomas Harborne, by will, 1710, gave to the poor of this parish £40., the interest to be paid in bread; this was, by indenture, 1719, paid to Edward Welchman, in consideration of an annual rent charge of 40s., for ever, for the above-named purpose; to issue out of Rowley Meadow, lying in the hamlet Knowle, containing five acres; yearly on the 25th day of March. The sum of £1. 15s. is received yearly from the tenant of the Meadow, 5s. being returned for land-tax and chief rent. The money is applied in the purchase of sixpenny loaves, which are given away by the overseer at the Church, about Lady-day, to poor parishioners; notice being given of the day the previous Sunday.

John Shakespeare. (see Lapworth.) Twelve penny loaves are sent by the tenant of the land about All Souls' day, and given to the poor at the Church on the Sunday following.

Directory.—Thos. Alward, sen. and jun., carpenters; John Bishop, vict., Nag's head; Rev. Sl. Crowther, M.A.; Dvd. Dukes, blacksmith; Thos. Emms, grocer; John Fetherston, Esq., Packwood house; John Gazy, shoemaker; Sl. Gazy, carpenter and parish clerk; Rev. Rt. Wm. Johnson, M.A., incumbent. The farmers are Jph. Ball, Thos. Compton, Jph. Fullard, Sl. Fullard, and miller; Thos. Wright Gibbs, Aylesbury house; Edmd. Pearman, Light Farm; Wm. Roe, John Tallis, Jph. Taylor, Marlpit farm; and John Wakefield. Carrier to Birmingham, thursday, Charles Taylor.

PRESTON BAGGOTT, a parish and small scattered village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. from Henley-in-Arden, contains 1,173 acres of land, of which 137a. 3r. 1p. are glebe; and, in 1841, 49 houses and 238 inhabitants; 1831, 219; rateable value, £1,724. Was, at the Conquest, the property of Earl Mellent, whose descendant, William, Earl of Warwick, sold it in the time of Henry II., to Ingram Baggott, from whom the distinctive appellation arose. At the dissolution it came to the Crown, (having been granted to the Knights Hospitallers), and was purchased by Edward and Henry Clement Throckmorton. The principal landowners are John Mills, Esq.; Sir Edwd. Jph. Smythe, Bart.; and Lord Leigh; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small stone edifice, on an eminence, consists of nave and chancel. The living, a rectory, V.K.B. £4., now £385.; Rev. Theodore John Cartwright, patron and incumbent. The rectory is a neat residence pleasantly situated on an eminence.

Poor's Land.—This land, containing about half an acre, is supposed to have been awarded by the Commissioners under an Act of Parliament for inclosure, in 1741, and vested in the Overseers; a house has been erected on part of the land for the residence of six poor families, and the rest has been converted into gardens for them.

Directory.—Hy. Broome, vict., Crab mill; Rev. Theodore John Cartwright, incumbent; Wm. Daffern, blacksmith; and the farmers are James Adams, John Aron, and maltster; Isaac Butwell, Jph. Cattell, Thos. Middleton, Whiatley farm; Thos. Moore, and miller, maltster, and wharfinger, Manor house; John Richmond, Joseph Shakespear, Jph. Whittington, Preston hill. Carrier, Wm. Shakespear, to Birmingham, Monday and Thursday, and Warwick, Saturday.

ROWINGTON, an extensive parish and small pleasant village, on an eminence near the Birmingham and Warwick canal, 6m. N.W. by W. from Warwick, containing, with the hamlets of Kingswood and Pinley, 3,400 acres of land; and, in 1841, 1046 inhabitants; 1821, 888; rateable value, £5310. The lordship was granted by Elizabeth, in her 6th year, to Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick. The principal owners are John and Mary Patrick, W. A. Roberts, Esq., John Aston, Esq., Mr. Thos. Wells, Mr. W. Bradbury, and the Executors of Mrs. Baker; the two former own the manorial rights. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a cruciform structure, principally in the Norman style, contains several neat monuments, and consists of nave, north aisle, and chancel, in which there is a beautiful stained glass window, added in 1845; with square embattled tower. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £7. 11s. 8d., now £116.; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Gem, M. A. The vicarage is an ancient house. High Cross, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. W. consists of a few houses. Here is an Independent Methodist chapel, erected 1840. Kingswood, a small hamlet, 2 miles N. W. which is partly in Lapworth parish; M. E. Ferrers, Esq. is lord of the manor. Pinley, a hamlet and township, about 6 miles from Warwick. In 1841, here were four houses, and 23 inhabitants. Pinley Priory, a small monastery, was founded by R. de Pillardinton, about the time of Henry I., and subsequently received various benefactions, amongst others, from Henry II. and III. Upon the dissolution, the site and manor, with its possessions, were granted, in the 36th of Henry VIII., to William Wigston, Esq. and has since had various owners. The Birmingham and Oxford Railway intersects this parish.

COMBINED CHARITIES.—The charitable estates of this parish have, for many years been combined under one set of trustees, and, in 1811, were vested in John Bradbury and eleven others. The total rent of the estates (which are described in 26 articles) is £230. 10s. 8d.; which, after defraying the expenses of the meetings of the trustees, and repairs of the trust premises, &c., the income is applied as follows:—For Schooling: all the poor children of the parish, boys and girls, are sent to a school in the village, and are taught to read, write, and cast accounts; the girls are also taught to sew and knit. The average number who attend is about 50, at a charge of about £9. per quarter, 3d. a week being paid for reading, and 6d. for writing and arithmetic; £2. is also allowed for coals to the school room. A Sunday school is also kept. The trustees allow £3. to the master, £2. to an assistant, and 10s. for coals per annum. Saml. Plant, master, salary, £42. per annum. Gifts of Money, Clothing, Coals, &c. are paid to the old, sick, or distressed poor, in sums of from 10s. to £1. each. Shoes and other articles of clothing are occasionally given away, and coals about Christmas, from 4 cwt. to 10 cwt. to a large family, or money to the non-resident poor. Apprentices are occasionally put out, with premiums of about £10. each, so as fully to expend the income. Besides the premises mentioned in the trust deed, the trustees possess Barnmoor close in Claverdon parish, which was purchased in 1825, partly with £160. received from the Stratford Canal Company, for sand taken out of the field called the Moreland, in the parish of Lapworth; and £92.17s. 6d. from the funds of the charity. The close contains 3a. 3r. 10p. and is let for £9. per annum.

John Knight, by will, 1681, charged Grimshaw Hill, a close in Ullenhall, with the annual payment of 50s. of which 10s. was to be applied in providing a gown annually against Christmas, for a poor woman, an inhabitant of Rowington. Robert Knight, Esq. the owner had not been aware of the charge till 1825, but has engaged to pay the annual amount, for the purposes directed by the donor.

Cattern Smith, by, will, 1818, gave the yearly sum of £1. payable out of her piece of land, in the parish of Beaudesert, to the poor widows of Rowington. The payment of this annuity has been resisted, as void, under the statute of 9th of George II.

Post Office at Mrs. Sarah William's. Letters arrive at 10 a. m. and are despatched at 3.30, p. m. mingham Mon. & Th.

TANWORTH, an extensive parish and considerable village, situated on an eminence, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. W. by N. from Henley-in-Arden, containing 9,391 acres of land, and, in 1841, 432 houses, and 1,925 inhabitants; in 1801, 1695; 1821, 1993; 1831, 2201; rateable value, £9,933. 6s.; was, in former times, a member of Brailes, and one of the numerous possessions given by the Conqueror to Henry de Newburgh, on his advancement to the Earldom of Warwick, and was held by many of the succeeding Earls. Sir Thomas Throckmorton, in the 2nd of James I., sold the lordship to Andrew Archer Esq., whose descendents, in the male line, held it until 1778. No fewer than seven ancient manors and places are enumerated by Dugdale, as being within this parish, none of which contained more than one house. The principal owners are Edward Bolton King, Esq., Lord Viscount Holmsdale, Earl Cornwallis, Miss Mills, Mr. John Burman, Mr. John Beach, Mr. Thomas Burman, Mr. John Horton, W. S. Colmore, Esq., Misses Burman, and J. B. Freer, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor. In the farm house occupied by Mr. John Izod, is a small portion of stained glass, representing a warrior in mail armour, with the inscription, "Sometime was I, therefore pray to God," in old English characters; and in the attic is an ancient oak chair, which appears to have belonged to royalty, having the rose and crown, with the initials J. R. carved on the back. On the farm a little east of the church, called the Leasows, many skeletons of men and horses, with swords, cannon balls, and other instruments of warfare, have been dug up. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a large ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower surmounted by a spire, which contains a peal of six good bells. Here are several ancient brasses, and a neat monument to the Archer family. The living is a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £6. 13s. 4d., now £380., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty. Viscount Holmesdale, patron, and Rev. A. P. Saunders, D.D., incumbent. The vicarage, a neat residence near the church. Tithes commuted, 1839, rectorial, £1223. 5s. 8d.; and the vicarial, £507. For parochial purposes, this parish is divided into the Town, Box Tree, Codbro, and Heath quarters; and was, until lately, in the Warwick division of the Kineton hundred. The Stratford-on-Avon Canal intersects this parish. Fairs are held: 23rd April, pleasure; and September 29th, statute fair, for hiring servants.

HAMLETS.—Aspley, partly in Wootton Waven parish, which see. Hockley, or Hockley Heath, a small pleasant village, 3 miles N. E. The Independents have a small chapel here; and a small free school, built 1837, and supported by E. B. King, Esq. Kern's Green, a farm 2 miles E. Monkspath, a small neat village, 4 miles N. by E. Tanzy Green, 1 mile S. E., and Waring's Green, 2 miles north.

Umberslade Hall, 2 miles E. is a large and handsome stone structure, erected about the later end of the 17th century, is of square form, with two wings slightly projecting from the main building. The principal or western front has a good portico, of the Doric order, surmounted by a bust of Titus, the Roman Emperor. A similar one, at the southern front, has the family arms above it; situated in the midst of an extensive park; is the property of Edwd. Bolton King, Esq., and residence of Edwd. Johnson, Esq., M.D.

Salter Street, a hamlet and small village, 3 miles north. Here is a small neat church, dedicated to St. Patrick, built 1839, of brick; consists of nave, chancel, and gallery, in which there are 390 sittings, 228 of which are free. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £150. Vicar of Tanworth, patron; Rev. Thos. Hassell Maynors, incumbent. The parsonage is a neat brick residence.

CHARITIES.—There have been numerous benefactions given at different times to the church and poor of Tanworth, which are now all vested in one set of trustees, and comprise about 43 acres of land, with various tenements and rent charges, producing a total income of £127. 8s.; of which £10. are for rent charges, and 11s. for interest of money in the churchwardens' hands. Also, there are 24 cottages occupied, rent free, by poor parishioners, placed there by the parish officers, the trustees considering it as beneficial to the poor as any other mode of distribution. Out of the above money, £8. 1s. is, for four of the charities, distributed on St. Thomas's day; and £5. 1s. for three of the charities on Good Friday. From Job Burman's gift 10s. is paid to the poor of Aspley: one side of the street of Tanworth is in that hamlet, 10s. is also paid to the poor of Feckenham, and a coat and shirt to two poor men, and a gown and linen to two poor women of Tanworth. The residue of the rents is devoted to the maintenance of two schools for reading, writing, and arithmetic, one on each side the parish. The schoolmaster, Insull Burman, on the Town or Clay side, receives £50. a year; about 40 children attend: and Philip Biddle the other, on the Heath side, £40.; about 60 attend this school. The surplus remaining after these payments is exhausted by repairs.

Post Office at Edw. Copage's, Tanworth. Letters arrive at 8 p. m., and despatched at 4.30 p. m. And at Matthew Wood's, Hockley, where letters arrive at 4.30 a. m. and 8.30 p. m., and are despatched at 8 p. m. in winter, and 7 p. m. in summer, Those marked 1 reside in the Town, 2 Box Tree, 3 Codbro' quarters; * are in Wootton parish, and the remainder are in the Heath quarter.

WOOTTON WAVEN, or WAWEN, an extensive parish, including the chapelries of Henley-in-Arden and Ullenhall, and the hamlets of Aspley, Ford Hall, Mockley, Botley, Whitley, and Forwood; contains 8,302 acres of land, and, in 1841, 2,303 inhabitants; rateable value, £13,083. 9s. It was bestowed by the Conqueror on one of his followers, named Robert de Stadford, who took that name in consequence of making Stafford his seat, where he likewise built a castle; from whom descended the noble and powerful family of Stafford, who retained possession of the manor until the attainder of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, in the time of Henry VIII. The King shortly afterwards granted this manor to the Marquis of Dorset; and Mary, on his attainder, gave it to Sir John Grey, from whom it was purchased by Agnes, the widow of Sir John Smythe, in whose family it still continues. Sir Edward Joseph Smythe, Bart., is the principal owner, and lord of the manor. Mrs. Phillips, Chas. Mills, Esq., and A. R. Tawney, Esq., have estates here. Another and small manor in this lordship was long possessed by the Harewells, which also came, by purchase, to the above-named Agnes Smythe, and her descendants have a handsome mansion here, called Wootton Waven House, the seat of Carrington Smythe, Esq., and the property of Sir Edward Smythe, Bart. A small Benedictine priory, (a cell to the abbey of Conches, in Normandy,) probably founded by Nicholas Stafford, existed here, and after experiencing the usual vicissitudes of these alien priories, was granted by Henry VI., in his 22nd year, to his newly founded college, at Cambridge.

WOOTTON WAVEN is a pleasant village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile S. from Henley-in-Arden, containing 4,843 acres of land, and, in 1841, here were 133 houses, and 619 inhabitants; rateable value, £5,838. 19s. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a noble cruciform edifice, principally in the later style of English architecture, containing several ancient monuments, and consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a fine tower, in which are six bells; the south door is in the decorated style; at the east end of the north aisle there is a large desk containing twelve expositions, by various authors, on the Four Gospels and other subjects; each volume is secured by a chain of sufficient length to reach outside of the desk. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £11. 9s. 7d., now £379., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, and incumbency of the Rev. John Ellis, M.A. The Vicarage is a commodious residence near the Church. Tithes commuted 1842,—rectorial, £581. 4s. 6d.; vicarial, £111. 11s. 5d.

“ Here Hoit, all his sports and labours past,
Joins his lov'd master, Somerville, at last;
Together wont the echoing fields to try,
Together now in silent dust they lie.
Servant and Lord—when once we yield our breath,— Huntsman and poet, are alike to death:
Life's motley drama calls for powers and men
Of different casts to fill each changeful scene;
But all the merit that we justly prize,
Not in the path, but in the action lies,
And as the lyre, so may the huntsman's horn,
Fame's trumpet rival and his name adorn.”

Catholic Chapel, adjoining the Hall, is a fine edifice, in the style of an Italian temple, dedicated to the blessed St. Peter, St. Paul, St. Austin, and St. Gregory, the two latter being the patron Saints of England: it was erected by the Dowager Lady Smythe, in 1813; the altar is of rich Italian marble worked in Rome; in the chancel is a beautiful stained glass window, representing the Virgin Mary. Rev. Joseph Short, priest.

EDSTONE, a hamlet, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S., and 5 miles N. from Stratford-on-Avon. Edstone Hall is a fine stone mansion, in the Grecian style of architecture; Somerville, the celebrated author of The Chase, and other poems, was born here in 1692; now the seat and property of Mrs. Phillips.

Whitley, a hamlet consisting of one farm about 200 acres, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. Wavensmore, another hamlet, in which there are three farms, 2 miles W.

CHARITIES.—Church Lands.—A piece of land about three quarters of an acre, let for the yearly rent of £1., which is applied to the repairs of the Church; also a small piece about the sixteenth of an acre, let at the yearly rent of 4s., which is applied to the same purpose, but how acquired is unknown.

Ann Haywood, by will, 1714, gave to the poor of Wootton £20. Thomas Malbon, by will, 1715, gave £5. to the poor of Wootton. Nothing is known of these,—tradition says the money was lost by the failure of a churchwarden. Rev. John Moore, by will, 1723, gave £5., the interest to be distributed in bread to the poor of this parish, and also a similar gift to that of Studley; nothing known of this.

HENLEY-IN-ARDEN, a market town and chapelry, in the parish of Wootton Waven, 10 miles W. by N. from Warwick, 18 S.W. from Coventry, and 101 N.W. by W. from London, on the road through Oxford to Birmingham, containing 340 acres of land, and in 1841, 279 inhabited houses and 18 uninhabited, with 1,223 inhabitants; of whom, 583 were males and 640 females; rateable value, £3,746. 11s. This town takes the adjunct by which it is distinguished from other places of the same name, from its situation in the Forest of Arden, a large tract of woodland, extending over part of this and the adjoining counties. A considerable part of it was burnt at the battle of Evesham, in the reign of Henry III., from which injury, however, it had recovered in that of Edward I. Henry VI., in the 27th of his reign, granted to Sir Ralph Boteler, Knight, lord of the manor, a charter reciting and confirming previous charters, by which it had view of frankpledge, a market and other privileges, that monarch adding power to hold courts of pleas of the crown and common pleas, exemption from tolls, and from the jurisdiction of the sheriff for the county, with the right to the chattels of all tenants of the manor wheresoever condemned, with other grants and privileges, which have become obsolete. Christopher Musgrove, Esq., is lord of the manor.

The town is pleasantly situated near the confluence of the rivers Arrow and Allen, or Alne, and consists principally of one spacious street, extending for more than a mile along the turnpike road; the houses in general are neat and well built, but of ancient appearance, occasionally interspersed with handsome modern buildings; the inhabitants are amply supplied with water from pumps and wells. The market is on Monday; the fairs are on the Tuesday in Whitsun week, a pleasure fair; October 29th, a large fair for hops; and March 25th, for cattle and sheep, a statutes for hiring servants is also held on the 11th October. The market house is a neat building of stone, supported on pillars; and near it a handsome ancient cross, of which the shaft, of one entire stone, rises from a pedestal and terminates in a rich canopy at the summit. By charter of Henry VI., the government is vested in a high and low bailiff, appointed at the court leet of the lord of the manor, when constables and other officers are chosen; a petty sessions is held at the White Swan every second and last Monday in each month, for this division of the Barlichway hundred. Mr. E. Cooper, clerk to Magistrates; H. F. Burman, Esq., M. D., high bailiff; Mr. Richard London, low bailiff; and Mr. S. Hoitt, high constable. About a quarter of a mile to the east of the town, on the summit of a bold and lofty eminence, called, from its beautiful situation, Bel Desert, or Beau Desert, is the site of a castle, which was erected prior to the reign of Stephen, and demolished during the war between the houses of York and Lancaster; the site of the draw-bridge and some other parts may be traced, and there are faint vestiges of the ancient moat, but no remains of the building. About two miles to the north-west of the town are the Leveridge hills, where there is a Roman encampment, intrenched with a double moat and high ramparts of earth; and about a mile to the east is Henley Mount, said to have been thrown up by Cromwell, as an exploratory station during the parliamentary war. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small but elegant structure in the later style of English architecture, consisting of nave, chancel and gallery, with square embattled tower, the porch at the west entrance is a high, enriched, and beautiful specimen of the later period of that style; the old roof, of ribbed and carved oak, is still preserved in the chancel; and throughout the whole of the building the traces of pure and elegant design are discernable. The living is a perpetual curacy, rated at £104., augmented with £400., Queen Anne's bounty, and £1,400. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of the householders in the chapelry. Rev. Thomas Jones, M.A., incumbent. The Baptist Chapel is a neat brick building, Rev. Wm. Clayton Bottomley, pastor.

A private lunatic Asylum established about half a century ago, for ladies and gentlemen afflicted with insanity in all its stages, under the superintendence of H. F. Burman, M. D., and Mr. W. B. Diamond, F. R. C. L., surgeon.

Hurst House, a private Asylum, for the reception of nervous and mental invalids, adapted for the accommodation of ten patients of either sex, in the higher or middle classes; this establishment is in a salubrious situation, with extensive gardens and pleasure grounds, constructed by Mrs. Herbert.

CHARITIES.—George Whateley, of Stratford-upon-Avon, by an indenture, 28th of Elizabeth, granted to John Whately and eight others, a tenement in the High street of Henley, and a rent charge of 20s. issuing out of a croft in Ullenhall, called Ford end and two other little crofts, &c. Also, an annuity of 10s., issuing out of a house and garden, in Bridge street, Evesham, in the county of Worcester, upon trust, to bestow the yearly profits thereof, one half to the endowment of a schoolmaster in Henley, and the other half to the poor of the said place. The house in Henley is now appropriated to the residence of the schoolmaster rent free. A school room has been added upon the land belonging to the house, erected, and the house repaired, partly from the charity fund and partly by subscription. The rent-charge of 20s. is received from Rd. Green, the occupier of the land called Muck close. The house in Evesham: upon the site of these premises are now standing three houses to the front of the street, and one behind, which now belong to this charity, and produce an income of £27. 10s. These rents, with other charities of this town, are carried to one fund, amounting to £74. 1s. 5d. out of which £26. is paid to a schoolmaster, who resides in the house rent-free, and instructs 30 children in reading, writing, and arithmetic; they are not admitted till eight years of age, and remain three years in the school. William Field, master. The rest of the fund is given away in money. Each poor widow in the town receives 1s., and shares also in the distribution of the rest.

John Whateley, by will, 28th of Elizabeth, devised his house and garden, after several contingencies, to be enfeoffed, on trust, for the neediest inhabitants of Henley. It is a very old timber house, let at the yearly rent of £8., carried to the general fund.

Thomas Whately covenanted with the mayor, bailiffs, and commonality of Coventry, that one year after his decease, they should, out of certain estates, among other things, pay yearly to four old men of Henley-in-Arden 10s. each; the high bailiff of Henley receives the £2., which is carried to the general fund and given to the poor.

John Hemmings, in 1620, gave two cottages, for the use of the poor of Henley-in-Arden, and in 1737, consisted of four tenements; these houses now let for the annual rent of £10. 4s., which is carried to the general fund.

John Randall, in 1626, gave a rent-charge of 20s., to be issuing out of the Lankford meadow and Godson close, situate in Bagot, upon trust, for providing yearly, two gowns of frieze, or some other convenient cloth, which should be given on All Soul's day, (Nov. 2nd) to two poor widows, inhabitants of Henley-in-Arden. Charles Fetherstone, the owner (1825) of the premises, pays the sum of 18s. 6½d., for this rent-charge, deducting the 1s. 5½d. for land tax; the gowns are given at Christmas; the same widow not being eligible to receive the gowns more than once in five years.

Oliver Dalton, by will, 1636, gave to the minister and churchwardens of Henley-in-Arden, for the time being, the sum of 20s. yearly, to be issuing out of a house and land in Packwood, called the Ivy House, on trust, to distribute the same, to twenty poor people of the said town. The sum of 17s. 5d. is received from W. A. Roberts, Esq., the owner of the estate, 2s. 7d. being withheld for land-tax; and it is divided amongst twenty poor persons.

Lady Fullwood. By the returns of 1786, a rent charge amounting to £1. 15s. 9d., payable from various sources, was given by Lady Fullwood; of this sum 18s. is payable to Atherston, and 17s. 9d. to Henley-in-Arden, which is added to the general fund and distributed to the poor.

William Chambers gave to the poor of this town, 1641, the yearly sum of 6s. 8d., to be issuing out of a house and garden, and to be distributed by 4d. a-piece to 20 poor widows on Good Friday or Easter Eve. This annuity is now (1825) paid by Mr. James Thomas Philip Burman, the owner of the property, and is carried to the general fund.

Simon Bellars, by will, 1642, gave 12s. a year to the poor of Henley, to be paid out of lands in Evesham and Henley. It is now (1825) paid by J. Jarrett, builder, from two houses in Evesham, and carried to the general fund.

Barbara Ingram, by will, 1698, devised to be paid from her cottage at Ullenhall, 6s. to the Overseers of the poor of Ullenhall, to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day; and the like sum of 6s. to the high bailiff of Henley, to be distributed to the poor of Henley, on St. Thomas's day. This also forms part of the general fund. Robert Knight, Esq., of Barrels, is the owner of the property so charged.

John Hemmings, by will, 1783, devised, out of his house and land, at Beaudesert, 40s. a year to Henley-in-Arden, for setting poor children to school, to be paid half-yearly without deductions. Mrs. Elizabeth Tarlton, of Beaudesert, pays the charge, which is carried to the general fund.

Rev. Devereux Wilson, by will, 1725, devised to Daniel Mander and another, his close in Ullenhall, on trust, to pay, after his decease, certain annuities for 30 years, and then the close was for the augmentation of a school at Henley. It contains two acres, now let for £5. a year, which is carried to the general fund.

Edmund Fullwood, 13th of William III., in consideration of £55. 7s. 6d., the proper moneys of the poor of Henley, conveyed to Simon Kempson and others two little grounds called Little Whistons, in Tanworth, containing 4 acres, on trust, for the use of the poor of Henley; part of this land was sold to the proprietors of the Stratford-upon-Avon canal, for £20., which was distributed by the high bailiff to the poor; the remainder of the land is let at the yearly rent of £6., which is carried to the general fund; but, from some unknown cause, is subject to a payment of 18s. to the chapelwarden of Henley, and carried to his account.

Christopher Baker, by will, 1716, devised two tenements in Henley and another to which he was entitled, in reversion, to trustees, &c. on trust, out of the rents, to pay 20s. clear to the parson at Henley, and also yearly to lay out 5s. in books for poor children at Henley, at Easter; and the remainder of the rents, after repairs, &c., to such poor people of Henley as they should think necessary, at Easter and St. Thomas's day. The premises are held by the officers of Wootton parish, as houses for the reception of the poor of the parish, for which a yearly rent of £8. 10s. is paid, which is carried to the general fund, out of which £1. per annum is paid to the minister, in respect of this charity.

William Randall, by will, 1642, ordered a rent out of certain lands which he possessed, for divers years, his executors to sell such rent of the yearly value of £100., the money so raised to be applied, one third part thereof towards the maintenance of a school at Preston, in Northamptonshire, one third part as a stock for the town of Banbury, and the other third part to remain as a stock to the town of Henley, to be employed there in setting the poor on work. This rent-charge was sold for the sum of £324.; of this sum £108. the share belonging to Henley, was expended by £100. in the purchase of certain lands, and £8. disbursed in selling the said legacy. The land consists of two closes in the parish of Alveston, and four leys of land in the said parish, in a place called the Pasture, awarded to the feoffees of Randall's charity, on the enclosure of the common fields of Alveston, let at the yearly rent of £34.. and contains 13 acres of land, with a barn, which is applied to the purpose of apprenticing poor children, £10. being now paid with each.

John Knight, see Ullenhall. The sum of 20s. yearly was to be applied in providing a coat and a gown for a poor man and woman in Henley. Robert Knight, Esq., of Barrells, the owner of the land, was not aware of this charge (1825), but in future the charity will be fulfilled.

Joseph Williams, by will, 1796, by the desire of his wife, gave to the chapelwardens of Henley, the sum of £50. ; the interest thereof to be disposed of yearly on Christmas day, to the poor ; one half in money and the other in bread. This was invested in £50. old 4 per cent. stock, which, in 1824, was reduced to 3½ per cent., and this sum to be paid off and re-invested ; the dividends being applied as directed by the donor.

Simon Kempson, in consideration of the freeholders and inhabitants of the town of Henley having consented that he and his heirs might from thenceforth (1674) hold enclosed a piece of land belonging to the common field, called Tenter Close, granted a yearly rent charge of 10s. out of the said close, and also out of a tenement and garden extending eastward to the said close, for the benefit of the inhabitants of Henley. Robert Knight, Esq., the present owner pays the 10s., which is carried to the chapelwarden's general account for the repairs of the chapel.

Foulke Bellers gave, by will, 1633, the sum of 12s. to be given to ten poor widows of Henley. Of this, nothing is now known.

Nicholas Smith gave, in 1629, £10. to the bailiffs and churchwardens of Henley to be lent to tradesmen or artificers two years, giving their security and paying 10s. interest for the same every Good Friday. No trace of this exists.

OTHER LOST CHARITIES.—Sarah Allen, by will, 1752, gave £6. to the poor.—Margaret Preston gave £4. John Harborne, by will, 1777, gave £5. for books to the charity boys. These sums came into the hands of a high bailiff who became insolvent, and they were lost.

ULLENHALL chapelry and small village, 2½ miles N.W. by W. from Henley-in-Arden, containing 3119 acres of land; in 1841. 97 houses and 461 inhabitants, rateable value, £3497. 19s.; this was a possession of Robert de Stafford, and afterwards of the Montforts; Queen Mary granted it to Michael Throckmorton, Esq.; from which family it was sold to the Smythes. Sir E. J. Smythe is the principal owner and lord of the manor. King's college, Cambridge, Miss Mills, and Edward Bolton King, Esq., have estates here. The Chapel of Ease, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small neat edifice, consisting of nave and chancel, in which there is a handsome monument to Francis Throckmorton, Esq. The free school is principally supported by the Rev. John Ellis and Miss Knight. £2. is paid annually from Wm. Morteboy's charity for six poor children.

Hamlets.—Apsley, 2½ miles N.W. forms a portion of Tanworth village. Botley, a farm, surrounded by a moat, ½ mile N.E., once a considerable hamlet. Ford Hall, (Great and Little) two farms, 2 miles N.W.; here was once a monastery, at Great Ford Hall; the entrenchment which surrounded the buildings still remains. Hall-end, a farm half a mile E.; Heath Farm, one mile N.W.; Impsley, another farm, 1½ miles E. Moat House, ¼ mile S.W.; Mockley Manor Farm, 1 mile N.W.; Mockley Farm, 1 mile N.; Mount Pleasant, a farm ½ mile north, and Nutlings, a farm 1 mile N.W.

CHARITIES.—John Knight, of Barrells, in the parish of Wootton, by will, 1681, gave to the poor of the parishes of Henley-in-Arden, Ullenhall, and Rowington, the yearly sum of 50s., to be issuing out of a close in Ullenhall, called Grimshaw's hill, free of all payments. The estate called Barrells comprises a close called Grimshaw's Hill, containing about twelve acres, now the property (1825) of Robert Knight, Esq., who was not aware of the existence of this charity, but, on information, admitted his liability; and since, the rent charge has been specifically appropriated.

William Morteboys, by will, 1733, gave 40s. a year out of lands called Barclays, in this parish, to the chapelwardens and overseers, on trust, to be applied to the teaching of six poor children of Ullenhall, to read, which is accordingly done.

Barbara Ingram, by will, 1698, gave 6s. a year, to be distributed in bread on St. Thomas's day, to the poor of Ullenhall, to be issuing out of Perry Mill House. Robert Knight, Esq., is the owner of the house, and the 6s. is duly received and distributed to the poor at Christmas.

Francis Brittain, by will, 1774, devised from his premises, known as the sign of the Boot, in Henley, the yearly sum of £3., to be given to six poor women of Ullenhall; the premises so charged are now (1825) the property of Samuel Koit, and the rent charge regularly paid. One gown and one petticoat is given to each of six poor women of the hamlet.

Chapel Lands. Certain lands enfeoffed as early as 1683; these premises are all in Ullenhall hamlet, and are together let at the yearly rent of £44. 15s., which is carried to an account from which the expenses of repairing the chapel, the roads, and other charges are defrayed. There is also £2. paid annually for schooling six poor children of the hamlet, in addition to the six from Morteboy's charity, who are taught to read.

THE SNITTERFIELD DIVISION

Comprises 11 parishes and two townships, viz. Alveston, Bearley, Fulbrook, Hampton Lucy, Haseley, Hatton, Beausall township, Shrewley township, Honily, Loxley, Snitterfield, Wolverton, and Wroxhall; and 21,584a. 3r. 23p. of land; 792 inhabited houses; 20 uninhabited, and two building; with 3,764 inhabitants; of whom 1,937 are males and 1,823 females.

ALVESTON, a parish, considerable, well-built and pleasant village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. N.E. from Stratford-on-Avon, containing 2,599 acres, 3r. of land; and, in 1841, 164 houses and 793 inhabitants; 1801, 465; 1821, 603; 1831, 650; rateable value £6217. 10s. 5½d. This village is delightfully situated on an eminence near the banks of the Avon, and is surrounded by a beautiful woodland country. The principal owners are the Rev. F. Knotsford, Lord Lifford, Thos. Hiron, Wm. Heming, Jas. Maloney, Wm. Judd Harding, Thos. Webb, Esqrs.; Mr. Thos. Knight, and Mr. Hy. Smith; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. James, is a neat stone edifice, in the Gothic style, with lancet windows, erected 1839, and consists of nave, chancel, in which is a beautiful stained glass window, representing St. James; side aisles, and square embattled tower, in which are three bells. The living, a vicarage, V.K.B. £6., now £240.; the Rector of Hampton Lucy, patron; and Rev. John Peglar, M.A., incumbent; for whom the Rev. H. B. Faulkner officiates. The free school is a neat brick building, with a house for the master; will accommodate 150 boys and girls; average 90; supported by subscription; Wm. Fowler, master. Bridgetown, a small hamlet, adjoining Stratford Bridge, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.W. by W. Tiddington, another hamlet, and small neat village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. by W.

CHARITIES.—Rev. G. Hammond, by will, 1755, (see Hampton Lucy) the sum of £5.0s. 2½d. Mrs. Alice Hammond, by will, 1778, gave £100. to the vicar and churchwardens of the parish; the interest to be distributed to the poor in such manner as they should think fit; this legacy was invested in the purchase of £168. 17s. 9d. New South Sea Annuities. The dividends, £5. 1s. 4d., annually are given away together with Mr. Hammond's legacy, and whatever is in hand of the Sacrament money, about Christmas. Mr. Hammond's desire was that the interest should be distributed to four poor men or women of the parish, who should frequent the communion of the Church of England at least four times in the year.

Sir Wm. Bishop, Knt., of Bridgetown, in this parish, by will 1679, gave £50. for the use of the poor of Alveston, the interest to be laid out in bread for ever, to be given to the poor on Christmas day. The interest of this legacy, 50s., is paid by the Rev. Francis Fortesque Knottesford, now (1825) the owner of the Bridgetown estate; of this, 3s. worth of bread is given away in the church on the first Sunday in every month; and on Christmas day a further sum of 14s. worth is given away at the church.

John Knottesford by will, 1777, and codicil, 1780, gave to the Worcester Infirmary 200 guineas, on condition that they should admit all the patients, sick or lame, from the parishes of Alveston, Studley, and Tiddington, to be certified as objects by the clergyman and overseers of the parish, and not being possessed of £10. a year. He also gave to St. George's Hospital, Hyde Park Corner, 100 guineas provided his representatives should be permitted to send two patients yearly to that infirmary.

Anonymous.—It is stated, in 1786, that Edward Stanley had £20. in his hands, left to this parish for the use of the poor, yielding 16s. interest, which he used to give away in bread to the poor. Mr. Stanley died about 1820, since which nothing has been paid. Mrs. John Mills, of Stratford, his only child, supposes that the gift was voluntary on her father's part.

Mrs. Jenkinson's Charity.—Mr. Charles Wyatt and Lieut.-Gen. Jenkinson, in the year 1814, invested the legacy, together with half a year's interest thereon, amounting together, after deducting the legacy duty, to £460. 2s. 4d., in the purchase of £681. 13s. 4d. Three per cent. consols, in their joint names. The dividends thereon, to the 5th of Jan., 1831, were invested in accumulation, the whole stock then being £1253. 4s. 3d. Three per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities. On the 29th April, 1831, (the above-named trustees being dead) an order was made, on petition, by the Master of the Rolls, that this charity should be referred to one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, and he should approve of a scheme for the application of the funds. By his Report, 22nd Nov., 1831, Sir Gray Skipwith, Bart. and four others, together with Henry Jenkinson, Esq., were appointed trustees, and a scheme was agreed upon; by which the trustees were empowered to take land, to under-let in small parcels, to poor parishioners, either at an equal or less rent, to be cultivated on certain principles. Or, in case the dividend cannot be so employed, either in part or in the whole, advantageously, the said trustees for the time being shall apply such dividends, or such portion thereof, in the purchase and distribution of clothing, bedding, food, coals or money amongst the poor parishioners. A portion of the stock was sold to pay the expenses £119. 12s. 2d., with a balance in hand; the residue, £1153. 4s. 3d. was transferred to the above trustees. The dividends amount to £34. 11s. 10d. per annum. A field, containing nine acres, near Tiddington, being part of the vicarage land, has, from Michaelmas, 1832, been rented by the trustees, at the yearly rent of £20. 5s., and let in small allotments, to 36 poor parishioners at rents amounting in the whole to £18. 16s.; the trustees paying the excess, and also the poor rates. The residue of income is given in coals to poor persons.

Rev. Richard Hill. (see Hampton Lucy). This parish is entitled to participate in the Grammar school founded by the Rev. Richard Hill, at Hampton Lucy.

BEARLEY, a township, chapelry, and small scattered village, in the parish of Wootton Waven, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m N.N.W. from Stratford-on-Avon, containing 933a.3r.9p. of land; 1841, 59 houses and 231 inhabitants; 1801, 165; 1821, 230; 1831, 230; rateable value £1,049.4s.2d. Part of the lands here were given in the reign of Henry II., to the monks of Bordesley, which, at the dissolution, was purchased by Clement Throckmorton, Esq., and Alex. Avenon, "by the name of the mannour grange, frame of Bryley." Mark Phillips, Esq., and lord of the manor, Mr. John Worsey, John Rich, Esq., and Mrs. Phillips, are the principal owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small brick building, consisting of nave, and chancel, with low tower, in which there are two bells. The living, a perpetual curacy, value, £64., has been augmented with £200., private benefactions; and £600., Queen Anne's bounty: in the patronage of the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge; Rev. Thos. Jones, M. A., incumbent.

Directory.—Rt. Bonhill, shoemaker; Jas. Davis, shopkeeper; Thos. Davis, baker and beerhs.; Ann Hunt, shopkeeper; Eliz. Puncker, vict., Golden Cross; John Shakespear, tailor; Wm. Troth, blacksmith and implement maker; the farmers are Fras. Badger, Jesse Badger, Hy. Bellamy, and baker; Jas. Hope, and shopkeeper; Wm. Hill Jorden, John Rich, Geo. Woodward, and John Worsey. Carrier to Stratford, fri., Jas. Davis.

FULBROOK, a small parish 5 miles N.E. by N. from Stratford-on-Avon, containing 822 acres of land, and in 1841, 15 houses and 79 inhabitants; 1801, 81; 1821, 77; 1831, 77; rateable value, £1,057. Here John, Duke of Bedford, Regent of France, built "a little castle of brick and stone" to which was attached an extensive park. After his decease, this edifice, which Leland says was a great eye-sore to the Earls of Warwick, fell into such neglect and decay, that Sir Henry Clopton, having the custody of the park, in the reign of Henry VIII. pulled it down, and used the materials in building his mansion at Compton Wynyate. The manor was subsequently purchased by the Lucys of Charlecote. The trustees of Henry Spencer Lucy, Esq., and Mrs. Ryland, are the principal owners; the former are lords of the manor. The Church has long been demolished. The living, a rectory, united in 1428 to the perpetual curacy of Sherbourne.

Directory.—Ann Court, Lower Fulbrook; Rd. Perks, Middle Fulbrook; Thos. Rose, Northbrook; and John Smith, Upper Fulbrook, farmers.

HAMPTON LUCY parish, and pleasant village, $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles E.N.E. from Stratford-on-Avon, contains 2,989a. 1r. 14p. of land; and in 1841, 99 houses and 458 inhabitants; 1801, 514; 1821, 554; 1831, 540; rateable value, £4,299.5s. This was anciently called Bishop's Hampton, as belonging to the Bishops of Worcester. In the 3rd of Edward VI., John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, obtained this manor, by exchange with Heath, Bishop of Worcester; and upon his attainder, it was granted by Queen Mary, together with the advowson of the rectory, to Thomas Lucy, Esq., of Charlecote, in which family it still continues. The trustees of Henry Spencer Lucy, Esq., are the present owners and lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome stone structure, in the Gothic style of the 14th century; was rebuilt in 1826, at a cost of £14,000. The widow of a former rector left £9,500. for this purpose, and the deficiency was supplied by the present rector; it consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower, ornamented with pinnacles; will seat 400: 150 sittings are free; the chancel contains a beautiful painted glass window, representing the principal events of St. Peter's life, by Williment, of London; the clerestory windows are enriched with designs by Holland, of Warwick. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books, at £51. 6s. 8d., now £1,147.; in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Rector; but wills are always proved in the presence of the Bishop's Registrar, at Worcester, and are deposited in the registry there. Henry Spencer Lucy, Esq., patron, and Rev. John Lucy, M.A. incumbent. Tithes commuted, 1847, at £598. 10s. The rectory is a good brick residence, adjoining the Church. A handsome cast iron bridge, with stone abutments, was erected in 1833, by the Rev. John Lucy, adjoining the village, and cost £2,672.

CHARITIES.—Grammar School, founded and endowed by the Rev. Richard Hill, rector of Hampton Lucy, by indenture of covenant, 20th July, 11th Charles I., by which, a school-house which he had built, was conveyed to Sir Thos. Lucy, of Charlecote, and fourteen others, and was minded that there should be lands laid thereto, which should be competent for the maintenance of the master of the said school; to be for ever supplied, from time to time, with an able and learned schoolmaster, for the teaching of children and youth, in grammar, and in the Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and English tongues, or any of them; all the children of the parishes of Hampton Lucy and Charlecote, and the parishes of Alveston and Wasperton. This school for many years has ceased to be classical, though the head master has always been qualified to give classical education; he occupies a house of the yearly value of £20., with land to the value of £8. 16s. 9d. The under-master occupies premises of the value of £5. 5s. a year. The income of the school is £93. 10s. in rents, of which, to the value of £75., is in Wellsbourn, and the sum of £18. in Norton Curlew; there is also a piece of woodland, containing 2a. 2r. in Wellsbourn, called Loxley Pastures, kept in hand by the trustees; and a rent charge of £16. a year, now paid by Francis Holyoak, Esq., of Wolverhampton, the present owner (1825) of the property. As an English school it is very efficient, about 60 children attend the school. The children are to be of the age of seven years when taken into the school, and are required to be able to read a verse in the Bible. The parents provide books, but in other respects, the education is quite free. Rev. John Buck, M.A., head master, and Mr. John Tandy, assistant.

The Rev. William Lucy, D. D., by will, 1723, gave to St. Mary Magdalen's Hall, in Oxford, the sum of £2000., the yearly interest to go towards supporting four young gentlemen's education for eight years, from their first admission, and no longer; and that this benefaction, to be distinguished by the name of Lucy's Scholarship, should be confined to such children as should have their education (three years at least before they should go to Oxford,) at Hampton Lucy school; the nearest relations of the Lucys to be preferred.

Rev. William Rogers, 1749, founded a Scholarship at Hertford College, Oxford, for a boy from this school, but that college has been dissolved, and the endowment escheated to the crown.

William Rogers, Esq., by will, 1749, left to the lord of the manor, rector, and overseers of this parish, the sum of £120., the interest to be paid to a schoolmistress, to educate ten poor girls of the parish. The money was vested in the hands of George Lucy, Esq., the lord of the manor. The present George Lucy, Esq., still continues to pay £5. as the interest to a schoolmistress.

Rev. William Lucy, D. D., by will, 1723, gave to the poor of the parishes of Charlecote, Hunscoth, and Hampton Lucy, £10., to be paid out of the said manors, to be distributed by his heirs, or trustees, every Christmas. George Lucy, Esq., the present lord of these manors, pays £5. a year for the use of the poor of this parish, of which Hunscoth is a hamlet, which is annually distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Rev. John Lucy, by will, 1821, gave to the trustees for the time being, of the charity of the Rev. Dr. Lucy, the sum of £5. annually, for ever, for the poor of this parish, to be distributed on St. Thomas's day; George Lucy, Esq., the executor of the testator, distributes the £5. accordingly.

Rev. George Hammond, rector of Hampton Lucy, by will, 1755, gave the rector and churchwardens of this parish, for the time being, the sum of £400., to be paid them within three months after the death of his wife, Alice Hammond upon trust only, that they and their successors should place the same out at interest, &c., and distribute the interest thereof unto eight poor old men or women of the parish of Hampton Lucy; four poor men or women of each of the parishes of Wasperton and Alveston, real objects of charity, and such as should frequent the communion of the church of England at least four times in the year; to be paid upon Christmas day and Midsummer day, yearly, by equal portions. This legacy was invested in the sum of £668. Old South Sea annuities, now standing in the name of George Lucy, Esq., and affording dividends of £20. 0s. 10d. per annum; one moiety whereof is distributed to the poor of this parish, and the other moiety is equally divided between the parishes of Alveston and Wasperton.

Alice Hammond, widow of the above, by will, 1778, gave to the rector and churchwardens of this parish, for the time being, the interest of £100., to be given to the poor of the parish, as they should think most convenient. This legacy was invested in the sum of £168. 17s. 9d., New South Sea annuities, standing in the names of the rector and churchwardens, yielding annual dividends of £5. 1s. 4d., which is distributed annually on St. Thomas's day, to the poor.

HASELEY, a parish, and small village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. by W. from Warwick, containing 1,121 a. of land, and in 1841, 42 houses with 188 inhabitants; 1801, 199; 1821, 210; 1831, 194; rateable value, £1,474. 13s. This is of remote antiquity, the manor was granted by Queen Mary to Michael Throckmorton, Esq., and by a descendent of his was passed in marriage to William Bromley, Esq., of Baginton. The principal owners are Wm. Hy. Comins, Esq., Mr. John Radford, and A. Annesley, Esq., the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of nave, chancel and square embattled tower, in which are three bells. The living a rectory, V.K.B., £4. 9s. 4d. now £235., patron, Sir Edmund Antrobus, Bart., and Rev. William T. Hadow, M.A. incumbent. Tithes commuted, 1845 at £235. The rectory is a neat brick residence, pleasantly situated near the the church. Statute for hiring servants is held October 14th, at the Honiley Boot Inn, when the host has an ox roasted whole.

Town Close.—This close is estimated to contain about $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres, relating to which the parish is in possession of a deed as early as 1574; it is let at the annual rent of £4., which is applied towards the support of a school, principally maintained by voluntary contributions.

Directory.—Arthur Annesley, Esq., The Hall; Wm. Brown, butcher; John Edwards, clerk, The Mill; George Gilks, shoemaker; Rev. Wm. T. Hadow, M.A. rector; Thos. Harvey, bricklayer; John Onion, shoemaker; Wm. Page, shoemaker; Thos. Williams, beerhouse; The Farmers are Thos. Bray, and corn miller, The Mill; Samuel Crookes, John Elkin, John Fellows, Geo. Follett, and vict., Honiley Boot Inn; Jno. Radford, The Grange; Jno. Salisbury Richards, Haseley House; Rd. Steel, and Thos. Taylor and vict., Falcon.

HATTON, a small, scattered and pleasant village, and extensive parish, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. W. by W. from Warwick, including the township of Beausall and Shrewley, and the hamlets of Hatton Green, Hatton Hill, Brown Lloyd Green, Old Folly, New Folly, and Waste Green; contains 4,096a. 2r. 20per. of land, and in 1841, 954 inhabitants; 1801, 680; 1821, 806; 1831, 815; rateable value, £4,699. The township of Hatton contains 1,273a. 2r. 20per. of land, 63 houses and 346 inhabitants; rateable value, £1778. This was anciently a part of the vast possessions of Henry de Newburg, Earl of Warwick. For some time the manor was held by the Clintons, who obtained it by marriage, but it again reverted to the Earls of Warwick under the line of Beauchamp, and with the exception of a portion granted to the nuns of Wroxhall. The village of Hatton has however, obtained a celebrity and distinction from the circumstance of the late Dr. Parr having resided here many years. The principal land owners are Owen Pell, Edward Arkwright, W. H. Comins, and John Mollady, Esqrs., the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, consists of nave, chancel and embattled tower, in which are eight bells; the church contains several marble tablets, and exhibits many proofs of the worthy doctor's liberality, particularly in the numerous and splendid specimens of stained glass, with which he ornamented it; in the centre of the east window of the chancel is a representation of the crucifixion, and whole length figures of St. Peter and St. Paul, in the side compartments, executed by Eginton, in 1812; the north and south windows of the chancel are also enriched with stained glass, the subject being the Agony of our Saviour in the Garden, and the Ascension; here are also portraits of Archbishops Cranmer and Tillotson in painted glass, by Eginton, and, in 1810, a fine specimen of the ancient art of glass staining was put up, being the joint contribution of Dr. Parr and Mrs. Price, then lady of the manor; it consists of the twelve Apostles, and in the opposite window are figures of Faith, Hope, and Charity. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £158., augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; Miss Stafford Southwell, patroness, and the Rev. Thomas Hope, M.A., incumbent. Tithes commuted 1842 at £280. The Parsonage, a good residence, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile north west from the Church.

The County Lunatic Asylum is in course of erection, 1 mile east, will accomodate about 300, the whole encompassing about forty acres of land, tastefully laid out in pleasure grounds, and places of amusement. The Oxford and Birmingham railway intersects this parish on the south east side. Hatton Green, contains a few houses, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile N.N.W. Hatton Hill, a few houses, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile S.E.

BEAUSAL, a hamlet and township, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. from Warwick, contains 1,600 acres of land, and, in 1841, 60 houses and 292 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,661. Within this hamlet is an oak of great antiquity, called "Bull Oak," from the remarkable circumstance of a male calf having been calved within the hollow of its trunk. Within this lordship was anciently a Chapel, belonging to the Collegiate Church of Warwick. The principal landowners are Owen Pell, Esq.; Earl of Warwick; G. H. Briggs, Esq.; and the Rev. W. T. Bree; the former is lord of the manor. This township is now in the Kineton Hundred.

HAMLETS.—Brown Lloyd Green, 1 mile S.E. Old Folly, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.E. by E. New Folly and Waste Green, 2 miles N.E.

SHREWLEY, another hamlet and township, 4 miles N.W. by W. from Warwick, containing 1,223 acres, and, in 1841, 74 houses and 322 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,260.; was held, in the Conqueror's time, by Hugh de Grentemaisnill; and from the reign of Edward III. to that of Henry VII., belonged to the Lucy family. Mrs. Ann Chattaway and Rev. Geo. Bell are now the principal landowners; the former is lady of the manor.

CHARITIES.—(HATTON PARISH).—Catherine and Job Throckmorton conveyed certain premises and lands, of which the earliest document is an indenture, 27th May, 1652, to certain trustees, for the purpose that the rents and profits should be bestowed upon the reparation and maintenance of the church of Hatton, and the relief of poor persons, and other charitable uses, as the said feoffees should think meet. The above estates now (1825.) are let for £28. 8s., which is expended in the repairs of the Church, and for Bibles for the Church, and Prayer Books for the minister.

William Edwards, of Kenilworth, by will, 1722, devised all his messuages, mills, lands, cisterns, and vats, commonly called Guise cliff, in Leek Wootton and Milverton; and also his meadow ground, lying in the borough of Warwick, called Savage's Piece, in fee, subject (among other things,) to the payment of £20. per annum, to be paid half-yearly for ever, free from all deductions, to Thomas Bree, senior, and others; to be received and applied by them and their heirs, &c., to a schoolmaster, to teach all boys within the liberties of Hatton, Shrewley, and Bewsall; and his desire was that his trustees should meet once in every year to inspect such school, and for their pains, and for the other trusts reposed in them, should be allowed twenty shillings yearly, out of the £20. so to be given to the schoolmaster. Also, he gave and devised unto his said trustees, and survivors of them, for ever, all his messuage, malthouse, lands, &c., situated in Kenilworth, then in the occupation of Thomas Toone, to be applied for the benefit of a school to be settled in Kenilworth, in such manner as at Hatton. Also, he gave to his said trustees all his undivided moiety of certain meadows and pastures, &c., being in Stoneley, and in Ashoe, and all waters and fisheries thereto belonging; and also his piece of land lying in St. Nicholas's meadow, within the borough of Warwick; and also his tenement in Kenilworth, called the Hospital House, and lands thereto belonging, in trust; that the rents and profits, for ever, should be employed for the buying of grey cloth, for the clothing of six poor men and six poor widows of the parishes of Hatton and Kenilworth, alternately, with coats and gowns, to be provided against Christmas. And he gave to his wife his meadow called Rookefields, for her natural life, she paying the yearly sum of £3. to his said trustees; and after her decease he gave the same to Thomas Bree, the younger, and his heirs, for ever, on paying the said sum. By a codicil to his will, he willed that his wife, Mary Edwards, should, out of his personal estate,—given unto her by his will,—erect at Kenilworth, buildings convenient for the said school. After the death of Mr. Edwards, in 1723, a division was made of the premises noticed as undivided. The commissioners for the inclosure of the open fields and commons of Kenilworth, by their award, 28th January, 1756, made some alterations in the property. The present state of the charities established by Mr. Edwards, is as follows:—for the School at Hatton, the rent-charge of £20. given for its support, is received from the owner of the estate called Guy's Cliff; the Hon. Chas. Greathead Bertie Percy, being the owner. After deducting £1. towards the expenses of the annual meeting, the remainder is paid to a schoolmaster, who instructs all the poor boys of the parish, comprising also the hamlets of Bewsall and Shrewley, whose parents choose to send them. The master occupies (rent free) the school-house, a commodious dwelling, erected by the widow of Mr. Edwards. Wm. Dunn, master. For the school at Kenilworth, and other portions of the trust, see Kenilworth. Coat and Gown Charity.—The portion of the trust estates applicable to this distribution produce an annual rental of £71. 12s. 1d., which is distributed according to the donor's will. Occasionally, surpluses are expended in Bibles and Prayer Books, and given to the poor.

Mrs. Jane Norcliffe, by will, 1748, gave £100., and willed that her executor should put the same to interest as soon as might be after her death, and that the yearly interest should, for ever be laid out in bread, to be distributed to the poor of Hatton every Sunday, in the church there. This will was proved in 1749, by Edward Mundy, Esq. From some cause this legacy remained unpaid, till the year 1787, when it was paid up with the addition of £110. for interest, by Edward Philip Mundy, Esq. In January, 1824, the sum applicable to this charity was £400., which had been increased by savings, under the care of Dr. Parr; of this sum £350. was secured by the bond of Edward Miller Mundy, at 4½ per cent., January, 1824; and the residue, £50., with a further saving of £20., is now invested in the Warwick Savings Bank. The interest received is £18. 18s., and bread is given to poor persons, or families, in the proportion of 28 to Hatton, 14 to Sprewley, and 11 to Bewsall.

HONILY, a small parish, 6 miles N.N.W. from Warwick, contains 635 acres of land; and in 1841, 9 houses, and 50 inhabitants; 1801 77; 1821, 63; 1831, 60; rateable value, £761. 2s. 8½d. The earliest record discovered by Dugdale, was of the reign of Henry III., when a large portion of the lordship was held by Richard Peche. In the time of Henry VII., it belonged to Sir Simon Mountford, but upon his attainder passed to the Crown, and, by subsequent grants, was held first by the Fitz Gerald; and afterwards by Michael Throckmorton, to whom it was granted in the 1st of Mary. By a descendent of Michael Throckmorton, it was sold to Roger Burgoyne, of Wroxhall; and in 1686, it passed to Francis, Lord Carrington. In the 6th of Queen Anne, John Sanders, Esq., obtained the manor by purchase, and, at his own charge, re-built the Church. The lordship of Honily was anciently an Episcopal Bishopric, having a peculiar jurisdiction, and pilgrims came from distant parts to the Church, to offer to the patron, St. John, for their sins. There was also a celebrated well, named St. John's well, the water being called the "water of life;" and St. John's bath; concerning both of which, there formerly existed most ridiculous and superstitious ceremonies and belief. Mrs. Emily Willes is lady of the manor and owner of nearly all the parish. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small edifice, erected 1723, consists of nave, chancel, and tower, surmounted by a spire. The living, a rectory, value £150.; Mrs. E. Willes, patroness, and the Rev. Bernard Port, M.A., incumbent.

Directory.—William Dawes, Wm. Heath, Francis Horne, and Joseph Wheeler, and maltster, are the farmers.

LOXLEY, a small scattered village and parish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.S.E. from Stratford-on-Avon, containing 1550 acres of land; and in 1841, 74 houses, with 318 inhabitants; 1821, 311; rateable value, £1780. This was given by Offa, King of Mercia, to the Church of Worcester. The manor was principally held by the monks of Worcester and Kenilworth, until the dissolution, when it was granted to Thomas, Cawarden, Esq., and has since had various owners. The principal owners are Edward Devett, Esq., M. P.; J. C. Adkins, John Millward, and George Millward, Esqrs. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small stone structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and small gallery, with low embattled tower, containing three bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £5. 6s. 8d., now £200., augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £200. Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of the Crown; at present vacant; the Rev. R. Parsons Clemenger, officiating minister. Limestone abounds in this parish. Here is a small free school, with house for the mistress, erected 1840, at a cost of £170., by subscription.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Jane Norcliffe, of Loxley, gave by will, 1748, the sum of £100. for the use of the poor of this parish, Edward Mundy, Esq., being the sole executor, after whose death, Edward Miller Mundy, Esq., paid £70. in full, of all interest due thereon, charged on an estate then the property of Charles Hunt, Esq.; into whose hands, also, Mr. Mundy paid £100., with which the said estate continues to be charged. No payment has been received on this legacy since 1804. Mr. Hunt became bankrupt. The estate is now (1826) the property of John Dewes, Esq., and nothing is found upon his title deeds to establish the charge.

Directory.—Jno. Manton, shoemaker; Thos. Smith, carpenter; Jas. Taylor, bricklayer; Jas. Winter, blacksmith. The farmers are John Caleb Adkins, Thos. Jordan, John Milward, and Wm. Tims. Carrier, to Leamington, Wednesday, and Warwick, Saturday, David Polton.

SNITTERFIELD, a pleasant well built village, and extensive parish, 4 miles N. by E. from Stafford-on-Avon, containing 3,718a. 2r. 5p. of land; and, in 1841, 179 houses and 822 inhabitants; 1801, 592; 1821, 642; rateable value, £4,996. 2s. 8d.; was possessed at the Conquest by Earl Mellent, and passing from him to his brother, Henry de Newburgh, came, after a time, to John de Cantelupe, who, in the reign of Henry III. obtained a charter for a market and fair here. Sir William Beauchamp became the proprietor, early in the reign of Richard II.; and having descended in that line to Edward Plantaganet, Earl of Warwick, it came to the Crown upon his attainder. Henry VIII., in his 37th year, re-granted the manor, and being shortly afterwards purchased by John Hales, of Coventry, it continued in that family until 1668, when Lady Elizabeth Hales sold it to Thomas, afterwards Lord Coventry, the manor house being used as the family seat. Jago, the author of "Edgehill," and other poems, resided here many years as vicar, and is interred in the Church, which exhibits portions in the early decorated and later styles of English architecture, is dedicated to St. James, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and embattled tower, with three bells. The living is a vicarage valued in the King's Books at £8., now £250., in the patronage of the Bishop of Worcester, and incumbency of the Rev. Donald Cameron, M. A. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, erected 1840. The Wolds is a neat residence, half-a-mile west, the seat and property of Hy. Smith, Esq. The National School is a neat brick building, with a house for the master and mistress, erected 1837, at a cost of £700., raised by subscriptions, and a grant from the National Society. The site was given by the late Robert Phillips, Esq.; it will accommodate 120, average 100. Isaac and Eliz. Baker, master and mistress. Here is also a library for the use of the parishioners, instituted and supplied with books by Mark Philips, Esq., who is the principal landowner and lord of the manor. Hy. Smith, and Rt. Jas. Atty, have also estates here.

CHARITIES—Sir Stephen Hales, of Snitterfield, by will, 1668, gave £100. in consideration of which sum, Wm. Ainge sold a meadow to Geo. Sheldon and 4 others, on trust, for the use of the poor of this parish. The land consists of rather more than 2 acres of meadow in Alverton parish, now let at the annual rent of £9. which is paid over to the minister of this parish, and distributed, soon after Christmas, in coals and bread.

William Evans, vicar of this parish, bequeathed £10. to be put to use: one moiety to be employed in mending highways, especially churchways and watering places of cattle in the parish; and the other moiety in repairing the school-house in or near the churchyard. This money is now in the hands of the churchwardens. The school house is not standing.

William Cookes, by will, 1649, bequeathed the sum of forty marks out of his estate, to be employed in purchasing land for the benefit of four poor people of this parish. This money, soon after being received, was lent to one Magennis, then resident in the Would-house, who, from misfortunes, and suddenly disappearing, the money was lost.

WOLVERTON or WOLVERDINGTON parish and small village, 5 miles W.S.W. from Warwick, contains 1110 acres of land, and, in 1841, 42 houses and 162 inhabitants; 1801, 159; 1821, 152; rateable value, £1420. 18s. 6½d. Was held, in early times, under the Corbicons, by a family who took their names from the place, and, by marriage, coming to the Bromes, passed through the families of West, Breton, and Boteler; and, in the 10th of Henry VI., was possessed by Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, by whose will the reversion, after his daughter Anne's death, was settled upon the Dean and Canons of St. Mary, Warwick. After the dissolution, the manor was granted to Clement

Throckmorton, Esq. and Alexander Avenon; and, in the reign of Elizabeth, it was sold to William Baylis, and Thomas Staunton, who held a court baron, as lords of this place. The principal landowners are Mark Philips, Esq. and lord of the manor; Rev. Jas. Roberts, Rev. Benj. Winthorpe, Miss Mary Ann Wilcox, and William Wilcox, Esq. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, situated on an eminence, consists of nave and chancel. The latter was restored by the present rector, in 1847. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £7. 10s. 7½d. now £300. Rev. Benjamin Winthorpe, B. A., patron and incumbent, for whom the Rev. James Rd. Anderson, B. A., officiates.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Henry Roberts, rector of this parish, gave, by will, 1774, the sum of £5. to be yearly distributed to the poor, which was paid by his two sisters after his death; since whose death, the estate, both real and personal, passed to Henry Roberts, Esq., a second cousin to the testator. He declined the payment, on the ground that it was not charged upon any particular part of the property.

Directory.—Rev. Jas. Rd. Anderson, B. A. curate; Philip Bartlam, vict. Red Horse; Jph. Brookes, vict. Old Red Horse; Wm. Gardner, blacksmith; and Thos. Gibbs, Rd. Hawkes, John Middleton, Hy. Taylor, and John Taylor, farmers.

WROXHALL, or WROXALL, a small village and parish, 6 miles N. W. by N. from Warwick, contains 2010 acres of land, and, in 1841, 33 houses, and 176 inhabitants; 1801, 156; 1831, 181; rateable value, £2164. A priory of Benedictine nuns was established here by Hugh de Hatton, in the reign of Stephen; the site of which, with the Church and lands in Wroxhall, were granted, at the dissolution to Robt. Burgoyne and John Scudamore, the former of whom erected a mansion here, called Wroxhall Abbey, consisting of a quadrangle, enclosing a court; the western front being raised from the foundation by him, and the southern and eastern sides of the nunnery adapted to domestic purposes; is now the seat and property of Mrs. Anne Wren. Many parts of the original conventional building may be traced in the mansion; and in the dining and drawing rooms are some ancient oak wainscoting, as well as some excellent carved work about the fire-place. Sir Christopher Wren purchased the manor in 1713, and his descendants still enjoy it. Chandos Wren Hoskyns, Esq. is lord of the manor, and owner of the soil, except about 40 acres, which is the property of Mrs. Anne Wren. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is on the north side of the Abbey, was formerly a part of the cloisters, containing the tomb of one of the abbesses; and in the windows are some very fine specimens of ancient stained glass; there are also several monumental inscriptions to the memory of the Wren family. The living is a donative curacy, value not returned, Chandos Wren Hoskyns, Esq. patron; Rev. Wm. Grice, M. A. incumbent.

CHARITIES.—Poor's Estate. The latest trust deed of these estates is in 1795, when they were conveyed to Samuel Aston and others; and comprise a messuage in the parish of Hatton-on-the-Hill, with several pieces of land, containing in the whole about 21a., let at the yearly rent of £32. And certain lands in the lordship of Honeley and Balsall, containing, in the whole, with 2 acres 1r., an allotment in lieu of common rights, 30a. 1r. 38p.; let at the annual rent of £30. Also, Waltham's Cross, a large coppice, which contains 33 acres 3r. 26p. It is kept in hand by the trustees, who cut the underwood, and such timber as is fit to be cut; the proceeds of the sales of which, on an average, amount to £61. per annum, making, with the above rents, an annual income of about £123. The income, after defraying for repairs and other expenses, is applied to the relief of the poor of the parish; in clothing, linen, shoes, &c. per annum £15. 15s.; in coals or money, in lieu, £19. 19s.; faggots, or summer firing, £1. 15s.; rents paid for the poor, £37. 10s.; medical attendance and nursing, £30.

Apprenticing Charity.—It is not known from what source this charity is derived; the property consists of a cottage in Rowington parish, and 2a. 1r. of land, let at the yearly rent of £5., but which was about to be advanced to £7. There is also 11p. in Rowington Green, allotted upon the inclosure, in respect of the above; it is used as a garden, and let at the yearly rent of 10s. The income is applied in apprenticing poor children. In 1702, the estate was conveyed to Thomas Jeacock and three others, for the above use.

Directory.—Rd. Smith, blacksmith; Mrs. Anne Wren, The Abbey. The farmers are John Andrews, Humphrey's Farm; Saml. Burbury, Nunnery Farm; Jph. Cattell, Abbey Farm; Jph. Pearman, Warner Farm; Wm. Taylor, Wattpit Farm; W. Tibbits, Mousley Farm; Wm. Wincott, Gate Farm; and My. Winn, Woodcock's Farm.

THE STRATFORD DIVISION

Comprises 11 parishes and 1 township, viz. Aston Cantlow, Bidford, Billesley, Binton, Exhall, Haselor, Salford Priors, Stratford (Old), Stratford-on-Avon, township; Temple Grafton, Welford, and Wixford; 29,230 acres of land, 2305 inhabited houses, 163 uninhabited, and 11 building; 11,304 inhabitants; of whom 5578 were males, 5526 females; of these numbers 2598 males, 2719 females, were under twenty years of age; 2988 males, 3007 females 20 years old and upwards; 8687 persons were born in this county, and 2617 elsewhere.

ASTON CANTLOW, or CANTELUPÉ, an extensive parish and considerable village, 4 miles N.E. by E. from Alcester, containing 4566a. of land; in 1841, 233 houses, and 1889 inhabitants; 1801, 721; 1821, 877; 1831, 940; rateable value, £5225. This was granted by the Conqueror to one of his Norman followers, named Richard; but, in the 6th of John, came into the possession of William de Cantelupe, from whence the distinctive appellation arose to distinguish it from another Aston. Here, according to Dugdale, was "anciently, a park; and, by the tradition of the inhabitants, a castle also," supposed to have been built by this William de Cantelupe. The principal land owners are the Earl of Abergavenny, and Walter Hemming, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor. The Stratford-on-Avon canal intersects this parish. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, a chapel, on the north side, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen; and square embattled tower, with a peal of five good bells; mostly in the Gothic and early English styles of architecture. At the west end of the north aisle is a curious antique octagonal font, the sides of which are ornamented with heads or corbels. The arches and chancel windows are of peculiar beauty. Here are also some carved oak stalls, of a very early date. The living, a discharged vicarage, V. K. B. £9. 9s. 7d., now £93., has been augmented with £600. parliamentary grant; Rev. F. Fortescue Knottesford, patron; and the Rev. John Frederick Fagge, B. A., incumbent. The vicarage, a pleasant and commodious residence near the Church. The parochial school, situated on the south side of the church, is a neat stone building in the early English style, erected 1848, at a cost of £1000. defrayed by the late vicar, Rev. Henry Hill, and is now principally supported by Mrs. Hill; will accommodate 100, average 60; George Lewing, master; and Charlotte Griggs, mistress.

Hamlets.—Little Alne, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N. W. Newnham, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. Shelfield, 3 miles N. W.; and Wilmcote, with Pathlow, a small village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. W. In 1840, a neat chapel of ease was erected, dedicated to St. Andrew. The living, a perpetual curacy, Rev. E. B. K. Fortescue, M.A. incumbent. The National School is a neat stone building, in the early English style, erected 1846, at a cost of £400.; will accommodate 100; average, 40; W. L. Banks, master. This hamlet contains several stone quarries.

Those marked 1 reside at Aston Cantlow; 2, at Little Alne; 3, at Newnham; 4, at Wilmcote; and the remainder at Shelfield.

BIDFORD, an extensive parish and considerable village, 4 miles S. by E. from Alcester, on the northern bank of the Avon, over which there is a stone bridge of nine arches, containing 2210 acres of land; and, in 1841, 323 houses, and 1567 inhabitants; 1801, 928; 1821, 1219; 1831, 1268; rateable value, £6530. 12s. This was an ancient demesne of the crown, and given by King John to Llewelyn, Prince of Wales, on the marriage of that Prince to John's daughter. Llewelyn granted a market here in the reign of Henry III., but though recognized in the time of Elizabeth, it has long fallen into disuse. The principal land owners are Messrs. Owen, Gooch, and Co., Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart., Mr. Francis Robbins, Rev. Henry Goodman, John Slater, Esq., and Mr. James Millward; the former are lords of the manor. Bidford Grange, a spacious old mansion on the border of the Avon, formerly belonged to Bordesley Abbey, Worcestershire. Here are several blue stone quarries and lime kilns in this parish. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a large stone edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and square embattled tower, in which there is a peal of six good bells; the Church was almost all rebuilt in 1835, at a cost of £1,800.; in the chancel is a neat marble bust to the memory of Dorothy Skipwith. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £7.10s.7½d., now £213., augmented with £800. parliamentary grant; Sir Gray Skipwith, Bart., patron, and Rev. Thos. Boulbee, incumbent. The methodists have a neat chapel here. The National School is a large neat stone building near the Church, rebuilt in 1846, will accommodate 160; average 120.

Hamlets. Barton.—A small hamlet consisting of a few scattered houses, 1 mile E. by S. Broom, a hamlet and pleasant village, 1½m. N. by W. Marcliffe, another small hamlet, 1 mile S. by W.; here is an extensive saw mill for cutting marble and stone.

CHARITIES.—Alicia, Duchess Dudley, daughter of Sir Thos. Leigh, by indenture, 1655, granted to Sir Thomas Leigh and fourteen others, and their heirs, all her reputed manors, tenements, &c. in Marcliffe, in the parish of Bidford, consisting of upwards of 450 acres, and common pasture for thirty-eight cows, two hundred and eighty-five sheep, and nineteen horses or mares, &c. And all that farm of Barton, parcel of the manor of Bidford Grange, containing, by estimation, one hundred and sixty acres of arable, and seventy acres of pasture, and common of pasture, for all beasts in Barton, in the parish of Bidford, on the south side the river Avon; and all manner of tithes, with all ways, &c.; to hold the same to the use of the said Duchess Dudley for her life, and upon trust, within ten years after her death, to convey the premises to such uses as she should, by deed or will, appoint. She, by deed, 1655, appointed that the said trustees should, as above ordered, convey the premises above described, so that the rents thereof might continue for ever thereafter to pay the following sums:—to the poor in the almshouses, in Stoneleigh, £10.; to other poor people of Stoneleigh, £10.; to the poor of the parish of Kenilworth, £10.; to the poor of the parish of Ashow, £5.; to the poor of the parish of Leek Wootton, £5.; to the poor of the parish of Bidford, £10.; to the poor of the parish of Litchborough, in the county of Northampton, £6. 13s. 4d.; to the poor of the parish of Blakesley, in the county of Northampton, £6. 13s. 4d.; to the poor of the parish of Pattishall, in the county of Northampton, £6. 13s. 4d.; being a total of £70. yearly, for ever, by half-yearly payments; either to the several churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or otherwise in such manner, and to such poor persons of the said parishes, as the trustees should think fit. And she appointed that £100. yearly of the said rents should be paid towards redeeming poor English Christian slaves from the Turkish slavery; and in case the above sum of £100. is not or cannot be employed for the use above-named, she then appointed that it should be disposed of as follows:—£15. per annum to the minister of Bidford, in the county of Warwick; and £15. per annum to the minister of Blakesley, in the county of Northampton; and £70. more to the poor of the several parishes aforesaid, in the proportions mentioned in the former deed, all which the said Duchess Dudley confirmed by her will, dated 2nd November, 1668. In the year 1776, an act passed for the inclosure of the waste lands in the hamlets of Barton and Marleeve, in the parish of Bidford, by which various exchanges were made, and the whole of the estates now contain 356a. 1r. 11p., and were, in 1824, reduced in rent from £548. to £422. In the year 1798, the rents were £280., and previous to 1776, the rents amounted to no more than £109. per annum. The present charges of land-tax, chief-rent, receiver's salary, and stamps, are £43. 12s. 0d., exclusive of repairs. Since the year 1749, no payment has been required for the redemption of slaves, and the surplus revenue has, from time to time, been invested in the public funds; and, in September, 1825, the whole amount of stock was £17,087. 4s. 5d.; besides this there was a sum of £384. 9s. 6d. in cash, in the hands of the Accountant General, and a sum of £786. 18s. 6d. in the hands of the Receiver, William Henry Butler, to answer the repairs, &c., on the charity estates. For the appropriation of this accumulated fund, a scheme was laid by the trustees before the Master in Chancery, who, by his Report, 28th January, 1826, certified that he approved the scheme, which had been advertised in the London Gazette, &c. Under the operation of the last order of Court, the portion of rent payable to each parish will be doubled, unless any claim be made for the redemption of slaves within one year after the rents become due. In 1825, this parish received £22. 5s. 6d., which was given by the vicar, churchwardens, and overseers, to the poor, about Christmas, in sums varying from 5s. to £1.; which sum, as all expenses of the suit, &c. were discharged, would be greatly increased.

Rent Charges.—The sum of 10s. yearly is received from a small house occupied, 1825, by William Hemming, for the poor; and 5s. from a piece of land called Parker's corner, for the poor, supposed to be the gift of Wm. Ashfield and Wm. Brandon, by will, in 1706.

Post Office at Mr. William Hatton's; letters arrive at 9.30 a.m., and are despatched at 3.30 p.m.

Marked 1 reside at Broom, 2 Barton, 3 Marcliffe, and the remainder at Bidford, or where specified.

BILLESLEY, a small parish, 4 miles W.N.W. from Stratford-upon-Avon, containing 800 acres of land; and, in 1841, 5 houses and 31 inhabitants; 1801, 27; 1821, 26; 1831, 24; rateable value, £821. 6s. 8d. This was, according to John Rous, a place of some importance formerly. The manor was the property of the ancient Earls of Warwick, but in the time of Henry II., passed to the Trussells, a family of distinction, who held it until the reign of Henry VIII., when Thomas Trussell sold it to Sir Thomas Lee, of London, who rebuilt great part of the manor-house, and principally resided there. The principal landowners are the executors of the late Matthew Mills, Esq., and Rev. Thos. Higgins; the former are lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small stone edifice, consisting of nave and chancel. The living, a discharged rectory, V.K.B., £5. 4s. 7d., now £100.; in the patronage of the Executors of the late Matthew Mills, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. F. F. Knottford, M. A. The Hall is an ancient stone residence, the property of the Mills family.

DIRECTORY.—Arthur Crowdy, Esq., The Hall; Miss Harriet Mills, The Hall; the farmers are, Edward Lindon, Upper Billesley; James Page, The Hall; Arthur Rowley, and George Rowley.

BINTON, a parish and small pleasant village, 4 miles W. by S. from Stratford-on-Avon, contains 1,221 acres of land; and, in 1841, 61 houses, and 269 inhabitants; 1801, 217; 1821, 232; 1831, 277; rateable value, £1,317. 18s. 4d. This was one of the towns given by St. Edwyn to the Abbey of Evesham, on its being founded. The family of Beninton were lords of the manor during several reigns, and in the 1st of Edward I., it passed by marriage to the Wynecotes; thence in the 23rd Henry VIII., to Sir George Throckmorton; and subsequently, was purchased by the Hertford family. The Marquis of Hertford is lord of the manor and sole owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone edifice, on an eminence, consists of nave and chancel. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £8. 10s., now £140.; in the patronage of the Marquis of Hertford, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Sanders Skelton Dupuis, M. A. The Rectory is a neat brick building, on an eminence, near the church.

CHARITIES.—Church Land.—Certain land for the repairing and adorning the church, supposed to have been left by the Lady Walter, part of which is included in the Pickpole field, belonging to the Marquis of Hertford, whose agent pays the yearly sum of 12s. thereout. Also, a piece of ground in Welford Meadow, let for 32s. a year; these two sums are carried to the churchwardens' account.

Sarah Walford, who died in 1683, bequeathed to this parish the sum of £20., to be put in the hands of Mr. Thomas Walford, her husband, and the interest to be paid by him and his heirs to the poor of this parish, to be laid out in bread, and distributed once a month to poor men coming to prayers. The sum of 20s. is paid by the agent of the Marquis of Hertford, in respect of some land which formerly belonged to Mr. Walford; it is given away soon after Christmas, in bread.

William Badson, by deed, 1752, gave 15s. annually, in trust, out of a piece of land in Binton, to be equally divided amongst 15 poor housekeepers of the parish, of which number the clerk should be one, on St. Thomas's day. This land called the Old Avon, belongs to Mr. Thomas Hutchins, who pays the rent-charge.

DIRECTORY.—Leonard Bennett, needle manufctr.; Rev. Charles Sanders Skelton Dupuis, M. A., rector; Edward Edkins, butcher and shopkeeper; Wm. Emma, beer-house; James Fenemore, vict. and farmer, Stag's Head, Red Hill; Geo. Hy. Osborn, stone mason; Chas. Vincent, basket maker; Wm. Walton, vict. New Inn, The Bri'ge. The farmers are Thos. Canning, and maltster; Wm. Fisher, Red Hill; Hy. Jackson and Thos. Lowe, Lower Binton. Carrier, David Dwig, to Birmingham, Thur. & Sat.

EXHALL, a parish and small village, 2½ miles S.E. by S. from Alcester, contains 821 acres of land; in 1841, 44 houses and 207 inhabitants; 1801, 129; 1821, 209; 1831, 241; rateable value, £1,062; was formerly a chapelry belonging to Salford, and was given therewith by Henry I. to the canons of Kenilworth. Dr. Thomas, the continuator of Dugdale, was for several years vicar of this parish. The principal owners are the Marquis of Hertford, Rev. H. C. Carleton, Mrs. Sarah Smith, and Mr. John Field; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Giles, consists of nave and chancel. The living is a rectory, with the curacy of Wixford annexed, valued in the King's books at £8. 17s. 3½d., now £423, has been augmented with £200. private benefactions, £200. Queen Anne's bounty, and £300. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. H. C. Carleton. Here are several lime kilns and stone quarries in this parish.

HAMLETS. Grafton (Arden), 1½ miles S.E. by E., partly in this parish. Little Brittain, consists of a few cottages, ¾ mile east.

CHARITIES.—Mr. Burnell gave £5., as noticed in 1752, to the poor, the interest to be paid every year, at Easter. The churchwardens and overseers laid out this money in building a house, which cost near £6., but no interest has been paid for many years.

Mr. Walsingham gave £10. to the poor of Exhall, the interest to be paid one half at Christmas, and the other half at Easter; of this sum, £2. 10s. was lost previous to 1786: the remaining £7. 10s. is now in the hands of Edward Barnes, the churchwarden of Exhall. The interest, 7s. 6d., being for some years suffered to accumulate to about £2., was distributed to the poor in August, 1835.

Church Rent.—The sum of 24s. per year is payable out of the Church House, and three lands, lying in Exhall Field, at Christmas and Easter, by equal payments. The premises are now the property (1825) of John Reynolds, and the rent is carried to the church account.

HASELOR, a parish and small village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from Alcester, containing 2,285 acres of land; in 1841, 79 houses and 360 inhabitants; 1801, 306; 1821, 387; 1831, 349; rateable value, £3,020. 11s. 11d. In the reign of Edward III. the manor and advowson were purchased by Robert de Stratford, but the manor subsequently passed to Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, who, in the 19th of Richard II., bestowed it upon the canons of his Collegiate Church, at Warwick; and, at the dissolution, it was granted by the Crown to Sir Ralph Sadler, and a person named Winington. The principal land owners are Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart., Richard Hemmings, Esq., the Marquis of Hertford, Mr. Jno. Heming, Mr. Jno. Lane, Mr. Thos. Millington Lane, and the Trustees of Mrs. Lees; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, is pleasantly situated on an eminence, between the villages of Haselor and Walcott, and consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a low embattled tower. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's books, at £6. 13s. 4½d., now £42., augmented with £1,000. Queen Anne's bounty; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Cornelius Griffin, M.A.

WALCOTT, a small pleasant village and hamlet, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile E. Richard Hemmings, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner.

CHARITY.—Widows' Plot.—The tenant of a farm in this parish, the property of John Weston, Esq., pays an annuity of 10s. to the churchwardens. The Widows' Plot is supposed to contain about a quarter of an acre of rich land, and now forms a part of the Upper Yeaham Meadow. The sum is distributed to all the poor widows of the parish.

Directory.—(HASELOR.)—Thos. Cull, shoemaker; Chas. Field, baker and grocer; Hy. Knight, ploughwright; Mrs. Lydia Penn; Jph. Benj. Smith, castrator; Moses Spires, blacksmith; Thos. White, blacksmith; Chas. Young, piano-forte tuner. The farmers are Wm. Ankorn, Barlichway; Geo. Haines, The Lodge; Thos Hawkes; John Heming, The Grounds; Danl. Tonkins Morris, and corn miller; Jph. Smith; Thos. Warner; and Geo. Woodward, Rose Wood.

Walcott Directory.—Rd. Keyte, carpenter; Wm. Mander, carpenter; Sarah Richards, vict. and farmer, Paul Pry; Mrs. Eliz. Salt. The farmers are Saml. Allen, Rd. Greenhill, and John Richards.

SALFORD (PRIORS), an extensive parish, and small well built village, $5\frac{3}{4}$ miles S. by W. from Alcester, contains 4519 acres of land, and in 1841, 183 houses, and 865 inhabitants; 1801, 758; 1821, 813; 1831, 899; rateable value £6827. 1s. 8d. This is recorded as a possession of Evesham Abbey, on its first establishment; afterwards as belonging to the Countess Godiva, and was subsequently bestowed by Geoffry de Clinton, on the canons of Kenilworth. After the dissolution, the manor was, in the time of James I., sold to Sir Simon Clarke, Bart.; and a daughter of the celebrated Thomas Hobson, of Cambridge, having obtained it by grant from her husband (son and heir to the above-named baronet), bequeathed it to Sir Fulwar Skipwith, Bart., an ancestor of the present Sir Gray Skipwith. The Marquis of Hertford is the principal owner and lord of the manor; John Eyston Esq., owner and lord of the manor of Abbott's Salford; John Slater, sen. and jun., Esqrs., Mr. John Haywood, and Rev. H. M. Goodman, have estates here. Here is an ancient mansion, the property of John Eyston, Esq., who occasionally resides here, which was, up to 1839, used as a nunnery, when the inhabitants removed to Stanbrook Hall, Worcestershire. There is a room set apart for divine service, which is performed by a catholic clergyman. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is an ancient stone edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, with a tower, in which there are eight bells. The chancel contains three ancient monuments to the Clarke family. The living, a vicarage, value in the King's Books, £9., now £100., augmented with £800. parliamentary grant. Sir Gray Skipwith, Bart., patron; and Rev. Thos. Boulton, incumbent. The Vicarage is a neat brick building, pleasantly situated near the church.

Hamlets.—Bevington, (Cock) 2 miles N.W.; Bevington, (Wood) 1½ miles S.W.; Dunnington, a small village, 2 miles N. E.; the Baptists have a chapel here. Salford, (Abbots) a small pleasant village, 1 mile W. by S.

CHARITIES.—Free School.—William Perkins, a native of this parish, gave the sum of £232. for the purchase of certain messuages and premises, in Stratford-upon-Avon, in 1656, and granted them to feoffees and their successors, that they should yearly receive the rents, and dispose of the same towards the erection and establishment of a free grammar school, within the parish of Salford Priors, for the instruction of the Greek, Latin, and English tongues, and catechising the children, &c.; and that the feoffees should elect a graduate of one of the universities of Cambridge or Oxford, to be schoolmaster, provided he be not vicar of the said parish, &c. The school is now merely an English school, for reading, writing, and arithmetic, open to all the children of this parish, and also, by the donor's gift, to two poor children from each of the parishes of King's Brome, Bidford, Priors Cleave, and Harvington. The income of the trust premises, consisting of seven houses in Stratford-on-Avon, is £41. 8s. per annum, the whole of which, after the necessary deductions for repairs, is paid over to the master, Malcolm McGee.

William Parker, by will, 1729, gave a rent-charge of £4., for hats and coats, to six poor men or boys; and a further rent-charge of £6. given by William Parker, in 1763, for the same purpose. In 1786, both these sums were vested in Robert Parker. There are no documents now relating to these in the parish, but there is now paid out of an estate at Alcester, now the property of Thomas Purton, Esq., (but formerly of the Parker's,) an annual sum of £6., which is said to have been the gift of Robert Parker. This annuity is applied to the purchase of six coats, which are given to six poor men of Salford.

Joseph Medley, who died 2nd March, 1756, left certain sums for the repairing his tomb in this church-yard, and for the poor of the parish; from a suit at law, in 1808, the balance,—after the payment of expenses,—of £40. 1s. 6d. was paid; from which sum £19. 19s. was paid for the repair of the tomb, the remaining £20. 2s. 6d. is in the hands of the churchwardens. After paying other expenses on the tomb, it is intended to let the interest accumulate, and apply the money in adding the gift of another coat to Parker's charity.

STRATFORD (OLD) an extensive parish, which comprises Old Stratford, the hamlets of Bishopton, Bushwood, Drayton, Luddington, with Dodwell and Shottery, and the ancient borough and market town of Stratford-on-Avon; the entire parish contains 6,860 acres of land, and, in 1841, 1,355 houses and 6,022 inhabitants; 1821, 4229; rateable value £26,162. Old Stratford surrounds the borough of Stratford-on-Avon, and contains, with its several hamlets, 6432 acres of land, and, in 1841, 622 houses, and 2701 inhabitants; rateable value, £16,528.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, a borough and market town, in the parish of Old Stratford, having separate jurisdiction, 8 miles S. W. from Warwick; 19 S. W. from Coventry; and 94 N. W. from London, on the road through Oxford to Shrewsbury; this place, originally called Streat-ford and Stretford, derived its name from its situation on the great north road, and from a Saxon ford on the river Avon, at the entrance of the town. It was a place of considerable importance prior to the Conquest, and was distinguished for its monastery, founded in the reign of Ethelred, on or near the site of the present church. In 1197, Richard I. granted the inhabitants a weekly market, and, during the succeeding reigns, various other privileges were conferred upon the town. In the 36th and 37th of Elizabeth, it suffered materially from accidental fires, which destroyed the greater part of it; and again, in 1614, it experienced a similar calamity. In 1588, both ends of the bridge, over the Avon, were carried away by the flood that inundated the lower part of the town. During the parliamentary war, a party of royalists, stationed here, was driven out by a superior force of parliamentarians, under the command of Lord Brooke, in 1642; but the inhabitants still maintained their adherence to the royal cause, and, in the following year, Henrietta Maria, queen of Charles I., at the head of three thousand infantry, one thousand five hundred cavalry, and with a train of artillery, and one hundred and fifty waggons, advanced to the town, where she was met by Prince Rupert; and, after remaining for some days at New Place, the residence of Shakspeare, where she was hospitably entertained by the family, proceeded to Kington to meet the King, whom she accompanied to Oxford. The parliamentarians having subsequently obtained possession of the town, demolished one of the arches of the bridge, over the deepest part of the river, to prevent the approach of the royalists.

The town is beautifully situated on the south-west border of the county, on an eminence rising gently from the west bank of the Avon, which, here expanding, winds round its base. The entrance from the London road is over a handsome stone bridge of fourteen pointed arches, originally, with the causeway, three hundred and seventy-six yards in length, defended on each side by a stone parapet, and having on the north side a foot-path, with an iron palisade, supported by iron brackets, resting on the piers. This bridge was built by Sir Hugh Clopton, in the reign of Henry VII., and widened by Act of Parliament, in 1814. Nearly parallel with it, is another of nine cycloidal arches, built of brick, and exclusively used as a railroad to the wharfs at this extremity of the town; thence to Moreton, was opened in 1826, for coals and corn. At the southern termination of the town, over a branch of the river which has been diverted to form a mill-dam, is a foot bridge of wood, resting upon strong piers of stone; from the hill beyond which, is a fine view of the town, the church, the surrounding country, and the distant woods. The town consists of several spacious streets, intersecting each other, some at right angles, and others crossing obliquely. The houses, in general, are modern and well built, occasionally interspersed with buildings of large dimensions and handsome appearance; and in some of the streets are smaller houses of frame-work, timber and plaster; among these, part of the ancient house in which Shakspeare was born is still preserved in its antique state, and is an object of much interest. The house in which he lived in retirement, for a few years previously to his decease, was originally the mansion of the Clopton family, and was purchased by the bard, who, after repairing and improving it, called it "New Place;" it has been taken down by a late proprietor, who also cut down the mulberry tree planted by Shakspeare in the gardens. The town is well paved, and lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are amply supplied with water from pumps attached to their houses. The public library and reading rooms are supported by subscription. The Shaksperian library, also supported by private subscription, was established in 1810, and is a permanent and useful institution. The Literary and Scientific Institution is held in the upper room of the Market House. The Theatre is a neat brick building, within the precincts of Shakspeare's garden, and is internally well arranged, and elegantly fitted up. Assemblies are held occasionally during the winter, at the Town Hall. To the south of the town is a race-course, where races formerly took place, and were in general well attended, but have been seldom practised since 1786. A jubilee, in honour of Shakspeare, was instituted by Garrick, in the year 1769, when the Town Hall, which had been recently rebuilt, was dedicated to the poet; and his statue, finely sculptured, and presented to the town by Garrick; at the close of the ceremony, it was placed in a niche at the north end of the building; this festival has been revived, and is celebrated every third year. The environs, abounding with diversified scenery and objects of considerable interest, afford many beautiful walks; the salubrity of the air, and its central situation in a neighbourhood enlivened with the elegant villas of respectable families, and the noble mansions of the wealthy, make it eligible as a place of residence. There is not much trade carried on, the inhabitants being principally employed in agriculture. The Stratford canal, passing to the north of the town, and joining the Birmingham, Warwick, and Oxford canals, connects them with the Avon, which is navigable for barges of forty tons, to Tewkesbury, where it joins the Severn; thus affording a line of inland navigation to the principal towns in the kingdom: near the bridge are some extensive wharfs for lime, timber, coal, and other articles of merchandise. The market, which was formerly on Thursday, is now, by charter, granted in the 59th of George III., held on Friday, and is very considerable for corn and cattle. The fairs are held the first Monday in January, last Monday in March, last Monday in April, 14th of May, third Monday in July, 25th of September, and Friday after 11th of December. The May fair is for pleasure, September for cheese, and the rest for cattle. Statutes for hiring servants are October 12th, and the 2nd Friday after, when oxen are roasted whole. The corn market is held in the area near the Town Hall; the market house is a neat stuccoed building, erected at the west end of Wood street, near the spot where the ancient cross formerly stood, and surmounted by a cupola and vane, representing a falcon grasping a tilting spear, Shakspeare's family crest; and the cattle market is a spacious area, formed by the intersection of the streets leading to the London, Birmingham, Evesham, and Alcester roads. In 1841, here were 665 inhabited houses, 68 uninhabited, and 3 building; with 3,321 inhabitants, of whom 1,609 were males, and 1,712 females; 1801, 2,418; 1821, 3,069; 1831, 3,488; rateable value, £9,634. Lord and Lady Amherst own the manorial rights.

The town received its first regular charter of incorporation from Edward VI., which, reciting and confirming former grants and privileges to the "Bailiff and Burgesses of Stratford-on-Avon," was extended by James I., and subsequently by Charles II., in the 16th and 26th years of his reign, particularly the latter, styling the corporation, "The Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the borough of Stratford-upon-Avon; appointing a high-steward, recorder, steward of the court of record, mayor, and other eleven aldermen, twelve capital burgesses, two chamberlains, a town-clerk, and two sergeants-at-mace; and authorising courts of quarter sessions, but without exclusive jurisdiction; and a court of record for civil actions not exceeding £40.; both of which fell into disuse. Under the new municipal act, the borough is included in schedule B amongst boroughs not to have a commission of the peace, unless on petition and grant, (a commission, however, has since been granted); and, in section II. of that schedule, amongst those the municipal boundaries recommended the extension of the limits, and those laid down in their map accordingly, comprehend the whole town and suburbs. The borough was appointed by the act to be governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, under the usual style.

The following is a List of the Corporate body, and the Municipal Officers of the Borough.
CORPORATION.

Mayor.—Thomas Thomson, Esq., M.D.

Lord High Steward.—Lord Delaware.

Magistrates.—J. B. Freer, Esq., chairman; Edwd. Getley, Esq.; Thos. Deacle Gill, Esq.; Chas. Lucy, Esq.; and Thos. Thomson, Esq. Mr. John Lane, sen., clerk.

Aldermen.—Edmund Darby Ford, Esq.; John Branston Freer, Esq.; David Rice, Esq., and Thomas Thomson, Esq.

Councillors.—Messrs. Thos. Ashwin, Edwd. Fordham Flower, James Wm. George, Thos. Deacle Gill, Wm. Hartley, Frederic Kendall, Septimus Sutton Lowe, Wm. Chas. Lucy, Wm. Sheldon, Rt. Such, John Tasker, and John Warden.

Town Clerk, and Clerk of the Peace for the County.—Wm. Oaks Hunt, Esq.

Coroner for the County.—Henry Oliver Hunt, Esq.

Treasurer and Chamberlain.—Mr. Thomas Ashwin.

Sergeants at-Mace.—John Timms and John Ward.

Superintendent of Police, and Inspector of Weights and Measures.—Thomas Taylor.

Auditors.—Richard Newland and Robert Walker.

Assessors.—Abraham Newland and William Lowe.

Beadle and Town Crier.—James Palmer.

Town Clock Regulator.—John Pearce.

The Guildhall, in which the business of the Corporation is transacted, is an ancient building, possessing few claims to architectural notice; it occupies the west side of a small quadrangular area, of which the chapel of the ancient guild of the Holy Cross forms the north side; the vicarage and schoolmaster's house the east, and the entrance to the school the south side; above the hall are rooms appropriated to the use of the free grammar school. The Town Hall was rebuilt in 1768 by the Corporation, assisted by the nobility and gentry of the neighbourhood, on the site of the former, of which the upper room, having been used during the civil war as a magazine, by an accidental explosion was destroyed, and the building greatly damaged. The present building is a plain and substantial structure, of the Tuscan order, on piazzas: the area is appropriated to the use of the market; on the west front are the arms of the corporation, and in a niche at the north end of the building, is the statue of Shakspeare, presented by Garrick. The upper story comprises a handsome banqueting room, sixty-three feet long and thirty-one wide, decorated with paintings, among which are a full-length portrait of Shakspeare, sitting in an antique chair, by Wilson; and, at the opposite end, one of Garrick reclining against a bust of the poet, by Gainsborough; besides several smaller apartments, which are also ornamented with paintings. The larger meetings of the Corporation, the mayor's feast, and the town meetings, are held here; and the celebration of the jubilee, concerts, and assemblies, take place in this suite of rooms.

Petty Sessions for the Borough are held in the Town Hall, as circumstances require.

Petty Sessions House, Guild pits, is a good substantial brick building, with stone facings, erected 1849, one part being appropriated to the use of a lock-up, contains four cells, yard for exercise, and residence for the superintendent, Mr. Joseph Reason, who is also high constable for the district. Petty Sessions for the district are held here every alternate Friday.

About a mile to the west of the town, in the hamlet of Bishopton, is a mineral spring, which, having been analyzed by Dr. Perry, in 1744, was found to be of a saline quality, strongly impregnated with sulphur, in its properties like the water of Leamington. At Welcombe, about one mile to the north of the town, are the remains of a military entrenchment, formed of deep ravines, meeting obliquely in a common point: in the neighbourhood are several tumuli, in which human bones, spear heads, and other military weapons have been found; in opening one of these, in 1795, the proprietor discovered a human skull, transfixed with a spear, which appeared to be the gilded head of a standard pike. On the surface of Borden hill, about a mile to the west, astroites, or star stones, are found in profusion, in small columns, apparently formed of successive layers, which are easily separated: the soil is calcarious, and, in the region of limestone, to the north-west, large specimens of testaceous fossils are found. Of the ancient monastery, or the college that succeeded it, the site of which was near the parish church, not the slightest vestige is discernible. So intimately is the name of Shakspeare associated with every recollection and description of this borough, that every circumstance connected, however remotely with his memory, is deemed worthy of being recorded. It is singular, that, though a letter addressed to him has been discovered, which was in the possession of the late Captain Saunders, no traces of his hand-writing have ever been fully authenticated. In 1810, a large gold seal and ring, which had evidently lain there many years, were found near the church yard, bearing the initials W.S., tied together with a string and tassels, according to the fashion of his time; this, which with great probability, is supposed to have been his signet, is in the possession of Mr. Wheler, author of the History of Stratford. Stratford is eminently distinguished as the place where Shakspeare was born, on the 23rd of April, 1564, and in which, after having lived a few years in retirement, he ended his days on the anniversary of his birth, in 1616, in the 52nd year of his age. [See also page 148.] Mrs. Mary Hornby, in 1821, purchased of Shakspeare's descendents, several relics of antiquity, and removed them from his birth place; those most worthy of admiration are, a curious representation of David slaying Goliath, bearing date 1606, which hung over the mantle piece; the poet's chair, writing table, a small iron chest, which contained his will; dice box, sword, a book of autographs, which contains the signatures of royal and eminent visitors; and other curiosities, interesting to visitors to the native town of the Bard; these are now in the possession of the Misses Arabella and Elizabeth Reason, in Bridge street, who take great pleasure in showing them. Among other eminent natives, were John de Stratford, Lord Treasurer in the reign of Edward II., and Lord Chancellor in that of Edward III., who promoted him to the See of Canterbury; Robert de Stratford, his brother, Archdeacon of Canterbury, and afterwards Lord Chancellor, on the translation of his brother to the Primacy, and who, together with him and the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, was committed to the Tower, on a charge of having detained the supplies for the war with France, but was subsequently liberated, and promoted to the See of Chichester: Ralph de Stratford, Bishop of London, who, during the great pestilence, in the year 1348, purchased a piece of ground near Smithfield, for the interment of those who died of the contagion; John Huckell, educated in the free grammar school, author of a poem on the Avon, who assisted Garrick in the composition of the Ode, and other poetical addresses, delivered at the celebration of the jubilee, in 1769; and Francis Ainge, a memorable instance of longevity, who was baptised on the 23rd of August, 1629, left England in his youth, and died in North America, on the 13th of April, 1767, having attained the extraordinary age of one hundred and thirty-seven years.

The Church, situated in Old Stratford, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was formerly collegiate; is a spacious and venerable cruciform structure, in the early English style of architecture, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire. The west entrance is through a richly moulded and deeply recessed archway, above which is a large window, in the later style, its lower central compartment being filled up with three richly canopied shrines. An avenue of lime trees, with their branches entwined, forms a pleasing approach to the north porch, over which is an apartment originally lighted by a window, now covered by a tablet. The effect of the interior is destroyed by the closing up of the east end of the nave by the organ, excluding the transepts and the chancel. The nave, the fine oak roof of which is richly carved, and supported on clustered pillars and pointed arches, is very lofty, and is lighted by a range of twelve large clerestory windows, enriched with tracery of the later style. In the south aisle, which is in the decorated style, is a chapel, dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket. In the north aisle is a sepulchral chapel, separated by a richly-carved stone screen, containing several altar-tombs, with recumbent figures of the Clopton family, finely sculptured in marble, and painted to represent the natural complexion of the persons. In the transept are several ancient, and some handsome modern monuments, and at the extremity of each is a large enriched window. Massive piers of clustered columns, and lofty arches, support the tower, but lose their effect by the exclusion of the nave on one side, and of the chancel on the other. The chancel is parted off by an oak screen, which was, in 1836, divested of the thick coat of whitewash which had for years hid its beauty; we may now judge of its original appearance. The general character is similar to that of the nave; the walls are unpanelled, though perhaps once painted in fresco. It is lighted by a handsome range of five windows on each side, in the later style, and a large east window, of rich tracery, in which are placed several portions of stained glass that have been preserved; on the south side, near the altar, is a piscina, and near it, are stone stalls of elegant design. The beauty of these, and of the ornamental carvings in the church, have all been brought to their original state by the late renovation. On a slab at the entrance to the altar, covering the ashes of the Bard, is the following inscription, written by himself:—

Good friend, for Jesus' sake forbear,
To dig the dust enclosed here.
Blest be ye man yt spares these stones;
And curst be he yt moves my bones.

And on the north wall is his monument, in which is a bust, representing him in the act of composing, with a pen in his right hand, and the left arm resting on a scroll upon a cushion; this bust, which is a well-attested likeness, and was originally painted with strict resemblance to the complexion, and colour of the eyes and hair of the poet, has, by the direction of his commentator, Malone, been painted to resemble stone, and forms a lamentable contrast to the complexioned monuments of the Clopton family, and others in the church. The living, a vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £20., now £239., in the patronage of the Countess Amherst, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Harding, M. A.

The Chapel of Ease, formerly of the Guild of the Holy Cross, is a handsome edifice, in the later style of English architecture, was rebuilt by Sir Hugh Clopton, in the reign of Henry VII. It has a square embattled tower, and a beautiful north porch, of which the entrance is a deeply-recessed and highly-enriched arch, surmounted by a canopy, embellished with scrolls and flowers. The nave is lofty, and is lighted on each side by a range of four windows. The chancel appears, from frequent alterations and repairs, which have been made at different times, without due regard to the prevailing style of the structure, to have lost its original character. In repairing the chapel, the walls were found to have been originally decorated with various legendary paintings, of great antiquity.

A Catholic Chapel is about to be erected on the Warwick road; to consist of nave, chancel, and transept, with a square tower.

The Baptist Chapel, in Poynton street, is a neat edifice, with a plastered front; erected 1835, and cost £960., defrayed by subscription.

The Independents have a commodious Chapel in Rother street. Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, Guild pits, is a large building with plastered front, erected 1835.

The Primitive Methodist Chapel is also in Guild pits. Besides the free grammar school, for which see Charities, two handsome National Schools, with houses for the master and mistress, were erected in 1846, of brick, with stone facings, on the Alcester road; each school will accommodate 180, average 80 boys and 105 girls; John Guppy, master; and Juliet Woodward, mistress; connected with these schools, is a public library.

The British Schools, Rother street, are connected with the Independent chapel, established 1824; consists of three rooms, for boys, girls, and infants; Wm. Pardoe, master; Ann Eliz. Steed, mistress; and Esther Smith, infant mistress.

Infant School, College street, founded by Miss Mason, is a convenient room, will accommodate 200, average 100; Mary Jordan, mistress.

The Savings' Bank, established September, 1834; Wm. Chattaway, Esq., treasurer, and Mr. J. S. Leaver, actuary.

Public Infirmary, Chapel lane, is a neat building, erected in 1840, at a cost of £1,200. defrayed by subscription; president, Sir Gray Skipwith, Bart.; hon. secretary, Rev. T. R. Medwin; assistant-secretary, Mr. F. Ward; physician, Thomas Thomson, M.D.; surgeons, David Wright, and dispenser, and T. S. Burman; matron, Mrs. Margaret Edkins.

Gas Works, Birmingham road, were removed from Chapel lane, in 1838, where they were first established, in 1834, at a cost of £3,000., raised by a number of shareholders; Mr. Thomas Deacle Gill, superintendent and secretary.

County Court, at the Shakspeare rooms, Warwick road, comprises the following places, viz.:—Alveston, Alderminster, Atherstone-on-Stour, Billesley, Binton, Charlecote, Clifford Chambers, Combrook, Compton Verney, Dorsington, Easington, Fulbrook, Grafton, Hampton Lucy, Kineton, Loxley, Luddington, Moreton Morrell, Marston-Sicca, Newbold Pacey, Old Stratford, Preston-on-Stour, Snitterfield, Stratford-on-Avon, Wellesbourne Hastings, Wellesbourne Mountford, Whitchurch, Welford, and Weston-on-Avon; F. T. Dinsdale, Esq., judge; R. H. Hobbes, Esq., clerk; and John Ashfield, high-bailiff.

Union Workhouse, situated on the north-west side of the town, is a large neat brick building, erected 1837, at a cost of £5,444.; Thos. Wm. and Lucy Salmon, master and matron; Rev. Cornelius Griffin, M.A., chaplain; Harriet Bark, schoolmistress; James Pritchard, house surgeon; R. H. Hobbes, Esq., clerk, and superintendent registrar; registrars of marriages, Edwd. Ashwin, for Stratford dist., and John Davis, for Wootton dist.; registrars of births and deaths, Rt. Flint, Stratford dist.; John Tombs, Old Stratford dist.; Rd. Pitt, Esq., Wellesbourne dist.; J. M. Brown, Esq., Kineton dist.; and Wm. Ensall, Wootton dist.; relieving officers, Rt. Flint, Stratford dist., and John Tarleton, Wootton dist. The Union comprises the following parishes, viz.:—Alveston, Atherstone-on-Stour, Alderminster, Bearley, Billesley, Beaudersert, Binton, Combrook, Charlecote, Compton Verney, Clifford Chambers, Claverdon, Dorsington, Easington, Fulbrook, Grafton, Hampton Lucy, Kineton, Langley, Loxley, Luddington, Moreton Morrell, Marston-Sicca, Newbold Pacey, Old Stratford, Preston Bagot, Preston-on-Stour, Stratford-on-Avon, Snitterfield, Whitchurch, Wellesbourne Hastings, Wellesbourne Mountford, Welford, Wolverton, Wootton Wawen, and Weston-on-Avon. John Branston Freer, Esq., chairman.

Clopton House, one mile north by west, the ancient mansion of the family of that name, was a large, heavy, square, compact brick building, of that deep red almost approaching to purple, and had in front a spacious court yard, entered through a gateway, the massive pillars of which seem to have been surmounted—like those of the Baron of Bradwardine—by grim heraldic monsters; and within, the old place was just such as naturally gives rise to startling legends. It had also its haunted chamber, wherein there hung a portrait “singularly beautiful,” of Charlotte Clopton, a lovely member of that family, who, during an epidemic sickness, had been too hastily interred in Stratford church; and who, upon another of the family being shortly after interred, was discovered by the gleam of the sepulchral torch, leaning in her grave clothes against the wall—dead, at last;—but not, until in the agonies of hunger and despair, she had bitten a piece from her own fair shoulder! Here also was a secret chapel, constructed in the frame-work of the roof, by a Roman Catholic owner, during the rigid penal laws against that mode of worship, whether practised conscientiously or otherwise. But now, by a change of ownership, the charm of ancient character and old association is invaded, if not utterly destroyed, the residence being wholly Italianized, by — Ward, Esq., the late owner; it is now the seat and property of Charles Thomas Ward, Esq.

Welcombe Hill, one mile north, abounds with picturesque and romantic scenery; here formerly stood the ancient mansion of the Coombe family.

Bishopston, a hamlet and small village, $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.W.; a neat Chapel of Ease, dedicated to St. Peter, was erected here in 1844, and cost £1,160., defrayed by subscriptions; the living, a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Vicar of Stratford, and incumbency of the Rev. John Peglar. The principal owners are John Branstons Freer, Esq., Edward Getley, Esq., and Rd. Greaves, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor.

Bushwood, a hamlet, 8 miles N. by W.; keeps its poor and roads separate.

Drayton, another small hamlet, 3 miles W.

Luddington, with Dodwell, form a hamlet; the former 3 miles, and the latter 2 miles west. This had formerly a church, but it has long gone to decay. The Marquis of Hertford is the principal owner.

Shottery, a hamlet and pleasant village, half a mile west; this is principally the property of the Marquis of Hertford. Here still remains the early home of Ann Hathaway, afterwards wife of the Bard.

CHARITIES.—King Edward VI., in the 7th year of his reign, extended his royal favour to this ancient borough, as a compensation for the dissolution of the ancient guild, which was endowed with divers lands, tenements, and possessions, out of which a free grammar school for the education of boys there, was maintained; and a certain almshouse there, consisting of 24 poor people, was likewise maintained; also a stone bridge over the Avon, called Stratford Bridge was kept in repair, &c. These possessions being then in the King's hands, he would extend his favour to them, to enable them to support the great charges which they were from time to time bound to sustain. He thereby, by charter, incorporated the inhabitants, by the name of the bailiff and burgesses of Stratford-upon-Avon, and granted to them and their successors all those messuages, lands, tithes, and possessions, then in his possession, and late belonging to the said guild, in Stratford-upon-Avon, Wylmote, Shottery, Burgetown, Dodwell, and Drayton, or elsewhere, &c.; then of the clear yearly value of £46.3s.2½d. By this incorporation and grant, the corporation became liable to support the almshouses, the free grammar school, the stipend and residence of the vicar, the stipend of the chaplain, and the repair of the bridge over the Avon. The Almshouses comprise 22 dwellings, upon two floors, the lower consists of one room with a closet behind; the upper apartments are accessible by a gallery, which runs over the closets. The apartments are spacious and are kept in good repair and supplied with stoves; the rest of the furniture is provided by the occupiers. There are 24 almspeople, 12 men and 12 women, of whom two of the most aged are permitted to reside amongst their friends. There is no limit of age at which the alms-people become eligible. They are elected at a corporate meeting, when the applicants are balloted for. They now receive a stipend of 5s. a week each, which has been increased at various times from the original sum of 4d. a week, directed by the charter. They receive also some other emoluments, under the following charities.

Richard Lord and Emmota, his wife, by deed of feoffment, in the first and second years of Philip and Mary, granted to Wm. Whateley, the bailiff, and five others, and their heirs, a close of land, on trust, to distribute the rents to the use of the 24 almspeople of this parish. The close lies at the western part of the town, and contains about 3 acres, now used as garden ground, and let at the clear yearly rent of £24. Many years ago £20. raised by the sale of timber on this property was lent to Tyler's trustees, for which an annual interest of £1. is paid; making £25. to divide among the almspeople, being to each £1. 0s. 10d. Thomas Lucas, by will, 1625, gave to two trustees his house in Church street, on trust, that they should yearly pay the proceeds to the almspeople of Stratford, and convey the same to other trustees. The property now forms part of a house in the old town, built partly on the site of the house given by Lucas, and partly on land belonging to the corporation. On a lease granted in 1818, the sum of £7. was reserved as the rent of the charity premises. But these premises the corporation have taken into their general fund, and no specific payment has of late years been made on its account. Sir Hugh Clopton, knight, by an indenture, 1732, granted a rent charge of £16. per annum, payable at Lady day, to the corporation of Stratford, out of a farm in Hampton Lucy, called Ingon farm, to the intent that they should lay out the same in buying every second year twelve blue coats of the value of 20s. and twelve blue gowns of the value of 20s. each, for the twelve almsmen and twelve almswomen, and should pay the vicar one guinea to preach a sermon in the chapel of the said town, on the 29th May annually, and 5s. to the clerk, and 12d. each to the said almspeople, both men and women, and lay out the residue in straw hats and aprons for the said almswomen. The rent-charge is received from George Lloyd, Esq., of Welcome, the owner of the Ingon farm, and distributed by the corporation, agreeable to the donor's intention.

Free Grammar School, was originally founded by Thomas Jolyffe, who, in 1482, granted to the Guild of the Holy Cross, of Stratford-upon-Avon, all his lands and tenements in Stratford and Dodwell, on condition that they should find a priest to teach grammar to all scholars coming to the school in the said town, and should, for his stipend, receive £10., &c. The present school, however, may be considered as the foundation of Edward VI., under the provision of whose charter it is maintained by the corporation. The master now receives £150. a year, and £30. to provide himself a house, the dwelling appropriated to him, under the charity, being very small. The school is conducted as a grammar school, in which the foundation scholars receive a complete classical education, with English grammar. The school is kept in an old building, over the Old Guildhall, and adjoining the Almshouses, and is kept in repair by the corporation; from 15 to 20 scholars are generally on the foundation; at present there are 44. In 1843, the school was re-modelled under a scheme issued by the Court of Chancery, when an additional master was appointed, with a salary of £130. per annum, and the head master's salary increased to £150., who, by virtue of his office, enjoys the incumbency of the Guild Chapel. The only qualifications needed are, that a boy must be seven years old, and a native of Stratford: here it was that Shakspeare received his early education; a desk said to have been frequently used by him, is still preserved in a room beneath the school. Lady Amherst appoints the head master; Rev. Thos. Rea Medwin, M. A., head master; and Mr. John Atkinson, second master. The Vicar now receives from the corporation an annual stipend of 150 guineas, to which sum it has been at various times advanced, besides some small payments for sermons, under different benefactions, amounting to £10. 0s. 7d.; he has also a good house and offices, with an excellent garden, provided by the corporation, and occupying the site of the residence originally granted under the charter. The Chaplain receives an annual stipend of £50., to which amount, like that of the Rector, it has been raised by successive additions. This office is held by the master of the grammar school. The Bridge.—After various litigations concerning the repairs of the Bridge, an Act was passed in the 52nd year of the reign of George III., reciting that the stone bridge over the river Avon, at Stratford, was erected in the reign of King Henry VII., by Sir Hugh Clopton, and had, from time to time, been repaired by the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the said borough; that in many parts it was in a ruinous state, very narrow and dangerous for persons, cattle, and carriages, to pass over, &c.; and that the several purposes of repairing, widening, or rebuilding of it could not be effected without the aid of Parliament. It was enacted that it should be lawful for the commissioners thereby appointed to widen, repair, or rebuild the bridge, &c., and to erect a toll-gate thereon, and demand the several tolls therein specified. And after reciting that the corporation were willing, for the purpose of providing a fund for the future repairs of the bridge, to pay annually, out of their revenues, the sum of £30. to the commissioners for executing the Act, until the sum of £5,000. should have accumulated. The tolls to be applied, in the first place, in defraying the expenses of obtaining the act; and in the next place, in paying to the mortgagees the interest due upon their securities. And as soon as the said tolls should be more than sufficient for those purposes, then the excess should be invested, from time to time, together with the annual sum of £30. to be paid by the mayor and corporation, in the name of the commissioners, in the purchase of Three per cent. consols; and such fund should be called "The Stratford-upon-Avon Bridge Fund;" and the income of such fund should be accumulated, in the nature of compound interest, until it should yield, by dividend, the annual sum of £250.; which said sum should be appropriated towards the expenses of widening, rebuilding, &c. the bridge, and in paying off any sums of money to be borrowed, or due and owing, on the credit of the Act, with lawful interest for the same, then all the tolls authorized by that Act to be collected should cease. The Guild Estate produces an annual rental of £866. 10s.; and the College Estate £651. 15s. 1d., making a total annual income to the corporation of £1518. 5s. 1d. These rents, however, do not reach the full value of the property: many of the premises are let for small rents, taking fines at the renewal of leases.

John Turner, by deed, 43rd Elizabeth, granted to trustees, their heirs and assigns, certain premises, in Stratford, to hold the same for the use of himself, for his life; and after his death, to the use of the poor; to distribute the same in bread, one half at Christmas, and the other half on Good Friday. The premises are let, with an adjoining house belonging to the corporation, at the yearly rent of £20., of which £5. is now appropriated to the use of this charity, and disposed of in bread, as directed.

John Combe, by will, proved 1615, gave £100. which should, within one year after his decease, be lent to 15 young and poor tradesmen, 20 nobles to each, for three years, they paying the sum of 3s. 4d. yearly for the same. He also gave to his cousin, Thomas Combe, his heirs and assigns, all his meadow grounds and appurtenances in Shottery Meadow, that he or they should pay, yearly, 20s. to a minister for a sermon twice a year at Stratford Church; and also, yearly, one week before Christmas, give to ten poor people of the borough, black gowns, every one of them worth 13s. 4d., &c. The Shottery fields were enclosed about the year 1787, and an allotment of 10 acres was made in lieu of the land which had belonged to John Combe, and now the property (1825) of Francis Ferdinando Bullock. The tenant pays the two rent charges of £1. for sermons, and £6. 13s. 4d. for gowns, which are given to poor people, selected by the mayor and chamberlain. Nothing is now known of the £100. to be lent to young men.

Thomas Combe, by will, 1656, devised to his cousin, William Combe, his Drayton tithes, and a parcel of Drayton Meadow, called the Parson's Piece, that the said Wm. Combe, his heirs and assigns, should yearly, for ever, at or before the 17th day of December, give to ten poor aged men and women, to be elected by the bailiff and chief aldermen, ten black gowns, marked with the letters T. and C. in white colours, on their breasts and backs, every one of them worth 13s. 4d.; and that they should attend the corporation each Sunday for the year ensuing, to and from church, &c. His will also was, that 20s. should be paid for two sermons, one on every 10th day of June, and the other on the 25th of December; and also out of the profits of Drayton tithe to pay 50s. to provide a dinner every 12th day of June, for the bailiff and burgesses, &c. These several payments, £6. 13s. 4d. are received from allotments, made at the inclosure above named, and now the property of Mr. Bullock, and applied according to the donor's intention.

William Tyler, by will, 1665, gave to the mayor and chief aldermen of Stratford-upon-Avon, where he was born, the sum of £200., to be paid to them by his executors, within twelve months after his decease, on condition that they should lay out the same in freehold land of the clear yearly value of £12. per annum, to be given amongst twelve poor persons of the borough, but not inhabitants of the almshouses: that is, 10s. thereof on the feast of St. John the Baptist, and the other 10s. on the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle. He also gave to the said mayor and chief aldermen the sum of £50. more, to lay out the same in freehold land, of the clear yearly value of £3. &c. to the intent that 15s. should be given to a minister for a sermon, on the feast day of St. Thomas the Apostle, yearly; and to the clerk and sexton, on the same feast day, 2s. 6d. each; and that the remaining 40s. should be spent in a collation or dinner for his trustees. And he also gave to the said parties, the further sum of £50. to be put forth at the interest of £6. per cent. per annum, to be lent to poor inhabitants, &c. The property belonging to this charity now contains 11½ acres of land, which, on the enclosure, in the year 1744, was allotted in lieu of other lands purchased under the will, and awarded to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Stratford-upon-Avon, and are let for the yearly rent of £88. 17s. But it is not known from what source £37. 10s. which made part of the purchase money, was derived; neither is it known what became of the £50. to be put out to interest. As the rents have increased, the payments made on account of the charity have also been proportionably increased, and are now as follows:—To 12 poor inhabitants of the town, on the feast of St. John the Baptist, and on the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, £34. 14s. on each feast; to the minister, for a sermon on St. Thomas's day, £4. 4s.; to the clerk, 15s.; to the sexton, 15s.; to the mayor, for a dinner on the same day, £11. 11s.; which, with £1. for interest to Lord's trustees, for £20. borrowed for fencing at the enclosure, and £1. 4s. for land tax, makes a total expenditure of £88. 17s.

Richard Smith, by indenture of feoffment, 1695, conveyed to John Woolmer, the Mayor of Stratford, and seven others of the said borough, their heirs and assigns, two messuages in Henley street, upon trust, out of the rents weekly for ever, at the parish church of Old Stratford, to give 12 penny loaves of bread to 12 poor inhabitants of the borough, and 6 penny loaves of bread to six poor inhabitants of the parish of Old Stratford, and also out of the said rents to pay yearly to the minister of the parish church 10s. to preach a sermon in the chapel of the said borough, upon the first Wednesday in September, before the mayor, &c., being the usual day of election of mayor, or upon what other day they should elect the mayor; and likewise to the clerk of the said church the sum of 1s. In the year 1820, these four houses, which had been let at £32. 10s. per annum, being in a very bad condition, a building lease of 42 years was granted of the premises, to William Alcock, at the rent of £30., granted in consideration that £500. should be expended in erecting new houses upon the site. Eighteen penny loaves are sent to the church every Sunday, of which 12 are given to poor inhabitants of the borough, and 6 to the poor inhabitants of the township of Old Stratford; 10s. is paid to the vicar for a sermon, and 1s. to the clerk; the rest of the rent remains in the corporation fund.

Richard Chandler gave £100. to the borough of Stratford, to buy land; the increase thereof to be disposed of, viz., 20s. to a minister to preach a sermon on the excellency of baptism, in the chapel, on the 25th of March, or, if that was Sunday, then on the day following; 10s. for the clerk and sexton; and 30s. to be distributed to the poor of the borough, yearly, by the churchwardens of the same, and 10s. for their pains; and the overplus to be laid out in clothing for poor children of the borough. Nothing is known of what was done with this £100., but 20s. is paid by the corporation for a sermon on the 20th of March, and 10s. to the clerk and sexton; and in the month of March, coats are provided for six poor boys, the cost of which, with the making, was, in 1824, £5. 3s. These are, no doubt, on account of Chandler's charity.

Thomas Oaken, gent., in 1573, gave £40., to be let out to eight poor tradesmen, for three years, at 8d. in the pound, changing every third year. The increase to be given, 3s. 4d. for a sermon, every first Wednesday in September, and 10s. to the mayor and aldermen, to be drank that day; the remainder to be given to the poor in bread. The sum of 3s. 4d. is paid to the vicar, in respect of this charity, but no bread is distributed.

William Mountford gave to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of this borough £20., to be let out at 16d. in the pound, the interest thereof to be disposed of by 6s. 8d. for a sermon, on the 15th day of April, and the remainder distributed to the poor in bread the same day. The vicar is paid 6s. 8d. for a sermon, but no bread is distributed. Hamlet Smith gave £5. to be let out to poor tradesmen, at 16d. in the pound, one half of which interest he ordered for a sermon on Friday in Easter week, and the other to be given to the poor, in bread, with Mr. Oaken's. 3s. 4d. is paid to the vicar, but no distribution of bread is made.

Ann Lloyd gave to this parish £11., to be let out by the churchwardens, at the yearly increase of 16s., of which she ordered 6s. for a sermon the Sunday before St. Thomas, and the remainder towards the repairs of this church, the chapel, and Mill bridge. The sum directed to be paid for a sermon is received by the vicar from the corporation. It is not known what became of the four last-mentioned benefactions, but as the corporation have been in the habit of regularly paying to the minister the sums directed, this amounts to an admission that the principal sums are vested in them; and the corporation through the town clerk, expressed their readiness to make these additional payments, in the whole, £2. 6s. and distribute the bread as directed.

Robert Parrott gave £40. to be let out to poor tradesmen of the said borough, at the rate of 4d. in the pound; the increase for a sermon on Friday in Whitsun-week, yearly, and 10s. for a collation for the members of the corporation; 3s. 4d. is paid to the vicar. John Turner gave 40s. yearly, to be given in bread to the poor with Mr. Oaken's. Lawrence Palmer gave £10. to be let out to poor tradesmen, at 12d. in the pound interest, the increase to be given in bread to the poor. Thomas Barber gave £5., to be let out to poor tradesmen, at 12d. in the pound interest, which was to be given to the poor in bread with Mr. Oaken's. Nicholas Ingram gave £10. to be let to poor tradesmen, at 12d. in the pound interest, which was to be given in bread. John Sadler and Richard Quiney gave £150. to be lent out; the increase to be given to the poor in bread. Of these five benefactions no further account can be given; they are supposed to be lost. Besides which, Henry Tones, in 1640, gave £1. yearly, to be laid out in bread for the benefit of the poor of this borough and Clifford, to be given on Good Friday, in bread. This was constantly paid till 1750, after which, the houses were sold, and payment refused. Joseph Woolmer, in 1747, gave a rent charge of £2. for bread to the poor; paid, in 1786, by Henry Roberts, and charged on a house in Chapel street, now belonging (1825) to Mrs. Dinah Warrilow, and that payment has been refused, the legacy being void under the statute of mortmain. Also, — Hatton gave money, in 1786, producing £5. 4s. a year, for teaching 12 poor children, then in the hands of the corporation. Nothing is known of this.

OLD STRATFORD TOWNSHIP.—Henry Smith, of Old Stratford, gave 12d. per week, to be raised out of six tenements in chapel lane, to buy bread to be given to 12 poor people of this parish, every Lord's day for ever. In 1786 it is stated these houses were taken down, and a good house afterwards built on the site, now the property of the family of the late Mr. Hobbs, solicitor; but nothing has since been paid.

Thomas Eden, of Weston-sub-Edge, in the county of Gloucester, by deed 1773, conveyed to trustees a farm containing about 26a. in Marnot's field, in the same county, and also some houses in the parish of St. Mary, Redcliffe, in Bristol; the rents of which amount together to £71. a year; from this sum a dame's school is supported at Old Stratford, for 21 children, boys and girls between the ages of 5 and 9 years; they are taught to spell and read, and repeat the church catechism, and the girls to sew; for which the schoolmistress receives, by quarterly payments, the annual sum of £9.2s., being at the rate of 2d. per week for each. There are five other similar schools in the counties of Gloucester and Worcester, supported by this gift, and spelling books, bibles, and testaments, provided for all the schools.

LUDDINGTON HAMLET.—Catharine, Vicountess Conway, by a codicil to her will, 1637, gave to the Grocer's Company, of London, a certain sum of money, to pay annually, to the minister and churchwardens of Luddington, in the county of Warwick, the sum of £5., to be distributed amongst the poor of that place. The sum of £5. is received from the Grocers' Company, by the Vicar of Stratford-upon-Avon, and given away about Christmas, to the poor families of this hamlet.

TEMPLE GRAFTON-WITH-ARDEN, a parish and small village, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.E. by E. from Alcester, contains 1,948 acres of land, and, in 1841, 401 inhabitants; 1801, 216; 1821, 336; 1831, 374; rateable value, £2,211. 16s. 3d. This is recorded to have been an early gift to the abbey of Evesham, and was granted by the Conqueror to some of his followers. In the reign of Henry III., it was possessed by the Knights Templars, and, at the dissolution, was purchased by Wm. Sheldon and John Draper, since which time it has had various owners. The principal land owners are John Fullerton, Esq., F. F. Bullock, Esq., W. & J. Lee, Esqs.; Mrs. Johnson; and Mrs. H. Holder; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St Andrew, is an ancient structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £91. augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £800. Queen Anne's bounty; F. F. Bullock, Esq., patron; and Rev. Wm. Blood, M. A., incumbent. There are several blue stone quarries and lime works in this parish.

ARDEN GRAFTON, a hamlet and small pleasant village, 3 miles E. from Alcester, formerly called Little Grafton, obtained its present appellation from a family who became possessors of it in the reign of King John; but afterwards coming into the hands of Edward I., he granted it, in his 20th year, to the monks of Westminster; and, at the dissolution, it was included in the conveyance from the Crown to Temple Grafton. The monks of Evesham had a portion of land in this village, granted by Wegeat, one of the Saxon Earls of Warwick, and confirmed by his successor Ufa. In 1838, here was a neat Sunday school, erected by subscription, and a grant from the National society.

CHARITY.—Walker left an annuity of 12s., which is now annually paid by Wm. Pearkes, as a rent charge out of a farm in Temple Grafton, of which he is the owner; it is received at Easter by the churchwardens, and given to the most needy poor.

Directory.—Mr. James Abbots; Rev. Wm. Blood, M. A., incumbent; Geo. Cooper, shoemaker, Arden; John Fisher, tailor; Joshua Harris, baker and grocer; Thos. Henley, vict., Mason's Arms; Abm. Hunt, wheelwright; Geo. Rogers, lime burner, stone mason, and beerhouse; Geo. Stait, carpenter; Edwd. Wilkes, lime burner and mason; Jesse Wilkes, gent. The farmers are, John Biddle, Grafton Court; Matthew Fisher; Wm. Fisher, Great Hilborough; Hy. Gould; Wm. Harward; Mrs. Hannah Holder; Jph. WELFORD, a parish and considerable village, 4½ miles W.S.W. from Stratford-on-Avon, chiefly in the upper Division of the Hundred of Deerhurst, Gloucestershire, containing 2,948 acres of land, and, in 1841, 738 inhabitants; 1801, 516; 1821, 702; 1831, 669; rateable value, £4,049. 11s. 7d. Lady Amherst, is lady of the manor and principal owner; Lord Harrowby, has estates here, and is lord of the manor of Bickmarsh. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is principally in the Norman style of architecture, consists of nave, chancel, and lofty embattled tower, in which there are five bells; on the roof of the Church, is a fine yew tree, which is considered a great curiosity, neither root or fibre are to be seen inside or out. The living, a rectory, in the Archdeaconry and Diocese of Gloucester, V.K.B., £29. 15s. 10d., now £442., in the patronage of Lady Amherst, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Davenport, M.A. The Wesleyans have a small Chapel here.

BICKMARSH, WITH LITTLE DORSINGTON, form a hamlet, 5½ miles S. by E. from Alcester, containing 1,340 acres of land, and, in 1841, 130 inhabitants; 1821, 61 Little Dorsington, contains 1 farm and several cottages, 6½ miles S.E. by S. from Alcester.

WIXFORD, a parish and small straggling village, 2 miles S. from Alcester, contains 505 acres of land; in 1841, 121 inhabitants; 1801, 116; 1821, 110; 1831, 108; rateable value, £1,000. This was given by Ufa, one of the Saxon Earls of Warwick, to the monastery of Evesham, about 974; and early in the reign of William Rufus, was passed away, in fee farm, by Abbot Robert, without the consent of his convent, to Ralph Boteler, of Oversley. This manor, in the 22nd of Richard II., was granted to John de Morehall, and for want of male issue, came to John de Clopton, passing afterwards by marriage, to Thomas de Crewe. Sir Robert Throckmorton is principal owner and lord of the manor. Charles Jones, Esq., has also an estate here. The Church, dedicated to St. Milburgh, consists of nave, chancel, and transept on the south side. The living is a perpetual curacy, annexed to the rectory of Exhall.

CHARITIES.—Robert Throckmorton, by deed, 4th of Charles I., granted certain tenements and lands, in this parish and in Exhall, to trustees, on trust, to pay the rents and profits to the minister and churchwardens of Wixford, for the time being, to be employed for the benefit of the poor of the said parish, and the reparation of the church, &c. Upon the inclosure of the parish of Exhall, in 1767, the commissioners awarded to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Wixford, 2a. 2r. 31p. of land, in Watersall Field, in lieu of the lands and right of common granted by the above deed. This allotment forms the Poor's Piece, let at the yearly rent of £6., which, with £4. derived from the houses in Wixford, which from time to time have been built by the parish, the ancient ones having long since been destroyed, makes a total income of £10.; out of which the cottages are kept in repair, and the church repaired. The surplus is distributed amongst the poor.

John Allen: According to whose will the annual sum of 5s. is paid, as a rent charge, out of land, known as Tandy's Pieces, in the hamlet of Broome, and parish of Bidford; which, on its receipt, is given to poor persons of this parish.

John Wilcox, by will, 1814, gave to his trustees and executors, and their successors, the sum of £500., upon trust, to place the same out on government security, and to pay the interest and dividends upon Christmas day, in every year, to poor persons resident in Wixford, at the discretion of the minister and churchwardens. The sum of £25., as interest, was paid by Mr. George Osborne, one of the executors, but it was discontinued about 1822, under an apprehension that the assets would not be sufficient to pay the several legacies left by the testator. A suit has been instituted in the Court of Chancery, to determine the question; it was decided in 1840, when all back interest was paid, and immediately distributed to the poor, and is now distributed annually.

Directory.—Wm. Ainge, vict., and registrar of births and deaths for Bidford district, Fish Inn; Thos. Allen, carpenter and builder; Wm. Bennett, shoemaker; Geo. Cox, baker; Henry Hopkins Smith, vict. and blacksmith, Three Horse Shoes; and Francis Cubberley, Moorhall, and Mrs. Eliz. Pollard, farmers.

HEMLINGFORD HUNDRED

Forms the north and north-west part of the county, and comprises the Atherstone, Birmingham, Solihull, and Tamworth Divisions, and contains 141,440 statute acres, 11,445 inhabited houses, 707 uninhabited, and 77 building; with 27,752 males, 28,039 females, making a total population of 55,764 souls; of these 12,780 males, 12,623 females were under 20 years of age; 14,945 males, 15,416 females were 20 years old and upwards; 46,806 persons were born in this county and 9,678 elsewhere.

THE ATHERSTONE DIVISION

Lies N.E. of the Birmingham and S. of the Tamworth Divisions, and comprises 15 parishes and 4 townships and chapelries, viz., Ansley, Baxterley, Caldecott, Chilvers Coton, Corley, Fillongley, Lea Marston, Mancetter, Atherstone, township and chapelry; Hartshill, township and chapelry; Maxstoke, Merevale, Nuneaton, Attleborough, township and chapelry; Stockingford, township and chapelry; Shustoke, Weddington, Whitacre Nether and Whitacre Over; and 39,106a. 3r. 36p. of land, 4271 inhabited houses, 397 uninhabited, and 14 building; 19,415 inhabitants, of whom 9,286 were males, 10,129 females; of these numbers, 4,409 males, 4,508 females were under 20 years of age; 4,877 males, 5,547 females 20 years old and upwards; 17,169 persons were born in this county, and 2,246 elsewhere.

ANSLEY is a small pleasant village, and scattered parish, 5 miles W. by N. from Nuneaton, containing 2714 acres 2r. 7p. of land, and in 1841, 701 inhabitants; 1801, 554; 1821, 721; 1831, 773; rateable value, £3376. 14s. 2d. This was part of the vast possessions of the Countess Godiva, and for many years held by the Hardeshall family, but came by marriage to the Culpepers, circa Edward III., and in 1613 was purchased by George Ludford, Esq., being now, by marriage with a co-heiress of his descendent, the late John Newdigate Ludford, Esq., the property of Sir John Newdigate Ludford Chetwode, Bart., who is also lord of the manor; except small portions owned by Sir Robert Peel, W. S. Dugdale, Esq., and a few small freeholders. The Hall is a large ancient brick mansion, 4 miles W. by N. from Nuneaton, in which is preserved the celebrated drawing made by Beighton, in 1716, from the curious fresco painting of Kenilworth castle, as in 1620, then existing in the old family seat of the Earls of Denbeigh, at Newnham Padox. Wharton, when on a visit here, in 1758, wrote some beautiful lines upon a hermitage in the grounds, which are printed in his works; it is the seat and property of Sir John Newdigate Ludford Chetwode, Bart. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, exhibits some portions of Norman architecture, though its general fabric is of later date, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, which contains three bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £6. 6s. 8d., now £116., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. John Charles Lucena, M.A., for whom the Rev. Herbert Woodward, B.A. officiates. The vicarge is a large neat residence near the Church. The Independents have a small chapel here.

CHARITIES.—John Perkins, who died 19th of April, 1618, left, by will to Wm. Holbech, gent., George Ludford, Esq., and three others, and their heirs, two closes called the Naves, upon trust, that they and their heirs should yearly, upon the 5th day of November, in Anesley church, after morning prayer, distribute the rents thereof unto the most needy and impotent persons dwelling in Ansley. In 1836, after various exchanges of land and renewals of trustees, the property consisted of a house and farm buildings, and several closes of land, containing in the whole, about 38 acres, let to Richard Mottram, at £26. per annum.

Sir John Twycross, formerly vicar of Ansley, left, by will, 20 marks in money, towards the purchase of an estate in land to be settled upon the trustees for Perkin's charity, with which, and some other, lands were purchased, that the trustees should distribute one moiety of the rents and profits thereof within eight days before Christmas and within eight days before Easter, to the poor of this parish, and should bestow the other moiety for repairing the highways most needful to be repaired in the parish. The above premises, in 1836, consisted of a farm house and outbuilding, and 24 acres of land, let to widow Mottram for £20. per annum. The buildings were erected from the produce of timber cut from the land. Since the year 1820, the sum of £10. per annum has been paid from the £36. arising for the use of the poor from the above estate, in aid of a salary of £20. to a schoolmaster; the remainder being paid out of the parish rates.

Robert Stratford, gent., gave 20s. yearly for ever, to be given in bread to the poor of this parish. The sum of 20s. is now paid (1836) by Dugdale Stratford Dugdale, Esq., of Merevale, who sends bread to that amount to the church, on Good Friday, distributed to the poor attending on that day.

Mary Oughton, buried April 29, 1713, gave £5. to be paid to the vicar of Anseley; the interest, one year for primers and testaments, the other for shoes for poor children.

—Shakespeare bequeathed the sum of £3., time unknown, the interest to be given yearly to the poor, in bread. The overseers pay out of the rates annually 8s. to the vicar, who distributes the amount to poor children of the parish in books or shoes. The above sums have been expended in rebuilding poor's houses.

Bell-rope Money.—The sum of 6s. 8d. yearly was received out of Jane Orton's rent, which gift was late Izon's house, after which the money was laid out in rebuilding the poor's houses in the Church end. The overseers, up to the year 1825, paid 6s. 8d. yearly to the Churchwardens for bell ropes.

BAXTERLEY, a small parish and village, 3 miles W. by S. from Atherstone, contains 874 acres of land; and, in 1841, 228 inhabitants; rateable value, £1406. In the reign of Edward I., it was granted to Sir John de Chetwynd. In the reign of Edward III., a moiety of the manor, with the advowson of the church, was given to the abbey of Merevale. After the dissolution, it was purchased from the Crown by Sir Walter Devereux, Knight, Lord Ferrers of Charley; it thence descended to the Earl of Essex. The principal land owners are W. S. Dugdale, Esq., and Messrs. John and George Breeden; the former is lord of the manor; several others have small estates here. The Hall is a good mansion, situated on a commanding eminence, the property of W. S. Dugdale, Esq.; is at present unoccupied. The Church consists of nave, chancel, and tower. The living, a discharged rectory, valued in the King's Books at £5. now £262., in the alternate patronage of the Crown and W. S. Dugdale, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. F. B. Morse.

Directory.—Jph. Baldock, shoemaker; Rev. Fras. Augustus Weeks, M. A. curate; Jph. Wright, rake maker; the farmers are Wm. Baldock, Jno. Bilson, Rt. Bilson, Geo. Breeden, Jno. Brown, and blacksmith; Rd. Heathcote, and maltster; Geo. Kirk, and miller; Jno. Mayler, Jno. Payne, My. Robottom, John and Wm. Smith, Geo. Topp, Jno. White, and Jph. Wright, and vict., Rose.

CALDECOTE, a small parish, 3 miles S. by E. from Atherstone, contains 666 acres of land, and, in 1841, 93 inhabitants; rateable value, £1476. A moiety of this manor was obtained by the Purefoy family, in the reign of Edward VI.; and Wm. Purefoy, a descendent, in the early part of the 17th century, rebuilt the principal portion of the Hall, which is a handsome mansion, the seat and property of Kirby Fenton, Esq. It is memorable for the gallant and extraordinary defence made there in 1642, by George Abbott, Esq., who had married a daughter of Colonel Purefoy; this gentleman, with only eight men besides his mother and her female servants, successfully resisted an attack made by 18 troops of horse, under the command of Princes Rupert and Maurice, without the loss of a single life; and tradition relates, that the pewter dishes and plates were melted down and made into bullets on this occasion. Although great additions were made to the mansion by Thomas Fisher, Esq., much of the ancient structure remains. Kirby Fenton, Esq., is lord of the manor, and principal owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Theobald and St. Chad, consists of nave and chancel. The living, a discharged rectory, value in K. B., £6. 15s. now £149., endowed with £200. private benefactions; and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; Kirby Fenton, Esq., patron, and Rev. Saml. B. Heming, incumbent. The Coventry canal and Trent Valley railway intersect this parish.

CHARITIES.—George Abbott, by will, 24th September, 1647, gave, out of lands at Badsley, £4. 10s. per annum, for a salary to a free school, to teach children, both boys and girls; also 10s. per annum to buy school books and catechisms for such school. Also, £5. per annum, to be paid out of the said lands at Badsley, to be disposed of as follows, viz:—10s. a year to buy himself a pair of gloves; the rest to be laid out in bibles and catechisms, &c.

Directory.—Kirby Fenton, Esq. The Hall; Thos. Swinnerton, farmer and miller and Edwd. Taverner, farmer.

CHILVERS COTON, a large pleasant but scattered village and parish, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile S.W. from Nuneaton, including the hamlets of Arbury, Griff, and Heath End. The manor came to the Crown at the dissolution; was, in the 4th of Elizabeth, sold to Fisher and Dabridgecourt; was afterwards purchased by Richard Chamberlain, Esq., from whom it passed to the family of Newdigate, and is now possessed by C. N. Newdigate, Esq., M.P., who is also owner of nearly all the parish. This parish contains 4,145 acres, 2 roods, 15 perches of land; and, in 1841, 559 houses, and 2,508 inhabitants; in 1801, 1,877; 1821, 2,169; 1831, 2,494; rateable value, £8,223. 2s. The principal part of the inhabitants are ribbon weavers and colliers; the Coventry Canal, and the Coventry and Nuneaton Railway pass through this parish. The Church is a neat Gothic structure, dedicated to All Saints, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, in which are three bells. In 1837, the church was enlarged, the north side being wholly rebuilt, by which means upwards of 400 additional sittings were obtained. The living is a discharged vicarage, value in K.B., £7. 4s., now £160; in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Hake, B. A. The vicarage is a neat residence, near the church, was repaired and enlarged in 1829. Sir Roger Newdegate, in 1764, wished to allot a farm in Stretton Field, in this parish, in lieu of the tithes, but was refused by the clergyman, who was desirous of being on the safe side, fearing the rents of land might be reduced; asked for a certain sum, which was granted, but is not now one quarter of the rent of the said farm. The Catholic Chapel is a small neat building, erected 1838. The Independents have a Chapel here, erected 1719, by the Rev.—Burnham; Rev. S. E. M. Hartnell, is the present minister. The Wesleyans have also a small Chapel here, built 1804. A neat National school was erected in 1846, by subscription, and a grant from the National Society.

Nuneaton Union Workhouse, is a large neat square stone building, erected in 1800, and in 1834 it was enlarged, and came under the New Poor Law Commissioners; will accommodate 230, average 130; and comprises the parishes of Arley, Astley, Bulkington, Caldecote, Chilvers Coton, Nuneaton, and Weddington; Samuel and Mrs. Parnella Bracher, master and matron; John Estlin, clerk; George Craddock, superintendent registrar; Thomas Mills, registrar of births and deaths; George Lampray, relieving officer; Henry Richard Harper, Esq., chairman: there are nineteen guardians. The medical officers are, William Bucknill, 1st district; John Nason, 2nd district; and John Prowse, house surgeon.

At Arbury, a monastery was built in the reign of Henry II., the site of which, and the possessions, were granted in the 30th of Henry VIII., to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk; and in the time of Elizabeth, they were sold to Sir Edmund Anderson, Knight, "who," says Dugdale, "totally demolished the whole fabric of the house and church; built out of their ruins a fair structure, in a quadrangular form, and having so done, passed it away, in exchange for other property, to John Newdigate, Esq.," to whose descendant, the late Sir Roger Newdigate, we are indebted for that architectural gem, the "Strawberry Hill," of Warwickshire.

Arbury Hall is a large and good stone mansion, pleasantly situate in an extensive park, well stocked with deer, and is the seat and property of C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M.P., $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. from Chilvers Coton, and 8 miles N. from Coventry. Sir Roger Newdigate found a large square building, surrounding a court yard, with piles of chimneys projecting from each front, which he covered, massive ornamented turrets, and reduced the disproportionate size of the court yard, by constructing a cloister around it. The principal apartments are finished in a very costly style, by a selection of the most beautiful specimens of enriched Gothic architecture, from existing examples, which are adapted to various purposes, with exquisite skill and taste. The ceiling of the dining-room is splendid; the drawing-room peculiarly chaste; the fine bay window in the saloon looks into a very tasteful garden; and the ceiling is a very elaborate imitation of that in Henry the Seventh's Chapel, at Westminster. In an adjoining room is the celebrated painting, representing in the central compartments, the two combats of John de Astley; this ancient picture was presented in 1773, by Sir John Astley, to the late Sir Roger Newdigate, as an heirloom to the Astley Castle, from whence it was removed, solely with a view to its preservation; and has been restored, with great care, from the ruinous condition in which it was when given.

GRIFF, a small pleasant village and hamlet, 2 miles S.W. from Nuneaton, contains an extensive colliery, lime and brick works, which give employment to 240 persons, and is the property of C. N. Newdegate, Esq., M. P.; there are also several scattered farms. Heath End, is a small scattered village and hamlet, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. of Chilvers Coton.

CHARITIES.—Sir Richard Newdigate gave 40s. a year out of land in Bedworth lane, payable at Christmas, to poor people in this parish, and by his will £20. more to the poor, for which his heir did settle £1. per annum out of the Barley Fields.

Sir Roger Newdigate, Bart, by will, 16th April, 1806, gave to the lord of the manors of Arbury, Griff, and Chilvers Coton, and his or their successors, six shares of £100. each in the Coventry Canal Company, to be held in trust, to pay the dividends in the following manner: To the schoolmaster of the charity school founded by Lady Newdigate, daughter of Sir Roger Twisden, Bart., £4. annually, the gift of his ancestors, and also £5., being the interest of £100. legacy of Mr. Edward Dudley, and in addition thereto £11..so as to make a salary of £20. annually, clear of all deductions to the said schoolmaster, to teach 30 poor boys in the school-house at Chilvers Coton, one part whereof was appointed for his residence. He also directed that a further sum of £10. annually should be paid out of the same dividends to a schoolmistress, for whose residence the other part of the school-house was allotted, on condition that she should teach 20 poor girls, all the said children to be nominated by the said lord or lords. He also further directed that the trustees should also pay to the vicar of Chilvers Coton, for a second sermon, at the parish church, every Sunday of the year, and upon Good Friday, and Christmas-day, after the afternoon service, 7s. for each sermon; or, in case of his refusal, the said dividends should be laid out in the purchase of books, or clothing for the poor, or other charitable uses. The school premises consist of two large school rooms. The schools, schoolmaster and mistress's house, are handsome stone buildings; a residence, with a garden is also assigned to the mistress, which, in 1849, was converted into an Infant school, and is supported solely by Mrs. Newdegate; average attendance, 90. Twelve boys and twelve girls of the poorest families are clothed entirely every year. The schools are open to all the children of the settled parishioners, and if room, the children of residents, if not settled, are admitted. The schools are taught on the National plan; about 140 boys and 98 girls attend. Francis Newdigate, Esq., succeeded in 1806, as lord of the manor of Arbury and Chilvers Coton, and, to the year 1834, had, besides the income of this charity, expended £3,604. 2s. 10d., as his own private distribution. John and Sarah Clarke, master and mistress; the salaries are, the former £60., and the latter £25. per annum. The master was inducted in 1842, since which time he has trained ten young men for schoolmasters.

Dr. Hinckley, in charity to his native place, gave, for a sermon to be preached, the Sunday next after the 3rd of May, 6s. 8d., and the poor 13s. 4d.; and to the poor in bread, yearly, payable out of the Barley field, which is the property of F. Newdigate, Esq.

Anthony Robinson, gent., of Griff, gave 10s., to be distributed in bread on Good Friday, yearly, and was vested in Sir Roger Newdigate.

Town Rents.—Various benefactions are mentioned on a table in the church, which were payable to the churchwardens and overseers, amounting in the whole to upwards of £9. By an Act passed in 1764, for the inclosure of waste lands in Chilvers Coton, an allotment was awarded to the Vicar for the proportion of the lands which had been usually applied to the poor's levies.

Church Money.—The sum of £2. 13s. 4d. is received annually by the churchwardens, from Dugdale Stratford Dugdale, Esq. Originally, it is supposed, paid out of the Tame fields, with some other small sums as mentioned on the benefaction table in the church, of which the origin is not known; and which are carried to the churchwardens' account. Two other payments of 7s. 6d. and 1s. 8d., noticed on the table are lost.

Mkd. 1 reside at Griff, 2 Heath end, and the rest at Chilvers Coton, or where specified.

CORLEY is a small village and scattered parish, situated on an eminence, 4 miles N. N. W. from Coventry; was, before the Conquest, the property of Godwine, from whose family it passed to the Hastings, Lords of Fillongley, and, in the reign of Henry VIII., came to the family of Lord Brooke. Lord Viscount Lifford is the present lord of the manor, and owner of one half of the parish. Jno. Shakespear, Thos. Arnold, Mr. Barford, Rd. Hollick, Sarah Smith, Edw. Phillips, Esq., Jph. Cox Keene, Jno. Barker, and many more small freeholders have estates here. The parish contains 1300a. of land, and, in 1841, had 67 houses, and 288 inhabitants; in 1801, 291; 1821, 316; 1831, 307; rateable value, £1892. The Church contains a very ancient monument to—Wadcock, Esq., and is built upon a very commanding spot; a most extensive view is obtained from the church-yard. The high ground adjoining was fixed upon as one of the stations in this county for the great trigonometrical survey of England. The living is a vicarage, value £400., in the patronage of Alfred Francis Gregory, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Arthur Wm. Gregory, M. A. The vicarage is a neat house, near the church. The national school is a neat building, with a house for the master, erected 1837, by subscription; will accommodate 60; this is a joint school for this parish and Keresley; George Cowley, master. Corley Hall, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. is a very ancient house, formerly the residence and property of—Wadcock, Esq., now the property of Lord Viscount Lifford. Corley Ash, 1 mile north, consists of a few scattered houses. Corley Moor, 1 mile N. W. The portion belonging to this parish is about 40 acres, which were enclosed in 1847. This moor extends into the parishes of Allesley and Fillongley. The former contains about 50 acres, and was enclosed about 20 years ago; the latter is yet open. Corley Rock, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E. of the church.

CHARITIES.—Henry Davey, by will, 1665, gave an annuity of 5s., issuing out of premises called Hatton's Orchard; from which it is still paid.

Henry Davey, the younger, gave £20., the interest to be given to poor widows or fatherless children.

Rev. Wm. Green gave £40., the interest to be applied to the poor. This, and the preceding sum were, in 1827, invested in the purchase of £65. 15s. 2d. Three and a half per cent. reduced annuities, in the names of the vicar and two churchwardens, producing an annual dividend of £2. 6s., and with the 5s., usually given in bread on St. Thomas's day.

Mary Tallis, by will, 1637, devised Berks' land, let for £6. per annum, to her grandson, Leonard Tallis, and his heirs, out of which land she gave to the poor of the town of Allesley, Fillongley, and Corley, 15s. yearly; to each town 5s., to be paid at Easter. This used to be paid out of land upon Corley Moor, in Allesley parish, by the family of Barfoot. Benjamin Hawkes purchased this land, and continued to pay the money. He devised the land to John Awson, who, after some years, declined payment; and, in 1834, was eleven years in arrear; application was made for the payment.

Peter Johnson left 3s. 4d. to the poor, paid out of land vested in Hawkes, in 1786. Twopenny bread to this amount used to be given through the fork of an ash tree, (the Corley Ash,) and afterwards paid for by Mr. Barford. John Awson also came to the possession of this land, and withheld the payment.

Donor unknown.—The sum of 10s. left to the churchwardens of Corley, the interest to be given in bread to poor widows. The churchwarden, as interest for this sum, pays 6d. a year, which is given in bread to poor widows, on St. Thomas's day.

Church Land.—Divett'scroft, containing 1a. 3r., now (1834) let to Samuel Moggs, jun., at the rent of £3. per annum, and carried to the churchwarden's account, and applied for the ornaments of the church.

Henry Barnett, who died in 1786, gave, by will, to the vicar and churchwardens of Corley, and the overseers of the hamlet of Keresley, £3. a year for ever: 10s. thereof to the vicar of Corley, to preach a sermon every Easter Monday, in the parish church of Corley; and £2. 10s. to be given equally, in bread, among the poor of the said parish and hamlet. Since 1822, this payment has been withheld, under the provisions of the statutes of 9th of George II.

FILLONGLEY, a neat, pleasant, and well-built village, and extensive parish, 6 miles N. W. by N. from Coventry, a portion of which, called Old Fillongley, belonged at the Conquest to the monks of Coventry. Other parts were successively possessed by the Dispencers, Marmions, and the powerful family of Hastings, who are supposed to have had their residence here; the ruins of two castles, not far from the church, being pointed out by Dugdale, one of which still bears the name of the Castle-yard, and was standing in the 18th of Edward II., having a park of large extent attached to it. The area and mounds of the other, called Castle Hills, are still visible, situate a little S. E. of the church. John de Hastings, then lord of Fillongley, procured a charter for a weekly market and a fair in the reign of Edward I., which have long been obsolete. The parish contains 4731a. 2r. 36½p. of land, of which 108a. 2r. 21p. are roads and waste. In 1841, here were 212 houses, 1,030 inhabitants; in 1801, 897; 1821, 980; 1831, 981; rateable value, £6859. 8s. The principal owners are Lord Aylesford, Lord Leigh, Rev. B. Adderley, Mrs. Shakespear, Mrs. Eliza Minnett, Geo. Bentley, Lord Viscount Lifford, Andrew de Mullin, W. S. Dugdale, Esq., Mrs. Mary Moss, Mrs. Catherine Chattaway, Wm. Holland, Mr. Rotherham, Avery's Charity, the family of Newlands, Henry Barnett Bellison, Esq., Mrs. My. Cash, Mrs. Frances Shread, Thos. Craner, Wm. Webb, Richard Hollick, Jph. Wagstaff, Wm. White, John Henry Howitt, Esq., Rev. Wm. Wakefield, Bond's Hospital, Coventry; John Smith, the Executors of the late John Nutt, Mrs. Underhill, and J. Little, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor. Several others have also small estates here.

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, is a neat ancient edifice, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, containing five bells; the chancel is separated from the nave by a screen of ancient rood loft, containing two lockers; and on the north side, an opening, with a pointed arch, has been made into a small aisle or chapel. The architectural style of the communication is referable to the latter part of the 15th century; the east window of this aisle has several kneeling figures of stained glass, and there are some fragments in the nave; here is also a piscina. In 1831, the Church was new roofed and leaded; in 1837, new pewed; and in 1849, the windows were renewed in the diamond pattern; all the stained glass being preserved. In the church yard is the shaft and basement of a cross, which, from the mouldings, appears to have been erected in the 14th century. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in K.B. at £8. 9s. 9d.; now £249.; in the patronage of the Crown and incumbency of the Rev. John Thickens. Tithes commuted 1844; vicarial, at £330. 12s. 1d., and five acres of glebe; rectorial, at £655. 1s. 1d.; glebe, 60a. 2r. 26p. Lord Leigh is the impropiator. The vicarage is a neat and good residence, near the Church. A neat Sunday school was erected in 1840, at the sole expense of Joseph Johnson, Esq.: Lord Leigh gave the land. Fillongley Hall, is a large neat mansion, pleasantly situated on an eminence, 7 miles N. W. by N. from Coventry, and 1 mile N. of Fillongley, and is the seat and property of the Rev. Bowyer Adderley. The Lodge, one mile N. of the Church, and 7 miles N.W. by N. from Coventry, is a neat mansion, the seat and property of Alfred Vaughton, Esq. Old Fillongley Hall, an ancient farm house, 1 mile E. Hey's Hall, another large and ancient farm house, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. Tipper's Hill, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. Wood End, 1 mile N., is a scattered hamlet; here is a small Methodist Chapel. Cooley Moor, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S., is partly in this parish, which is unenclosed: this parish contains a great number of scattered farms. The annual feast is held on the first Sunday in August.

CHARITIES.—Ayliffe Green, by will, 1690, gave to Thomas Holbatch and six others, and their heirs, a messuage, and the lands thereunto belonging, in Fillongley, of the yearly value of £20., upon trust, to pay £10. per annum, out of the rents thereof, to a schoolmaster, for the teaching of 10 poor boys of the said parish, till they should attain, respectively, the age of 14 years; and all the residue of the said rents, towards the clothing of the same poor boys, during the time they should be taught by such schoolmaster. The property belonging to this school consists of a farm house, &c., and 31a. 3r. 13p. of land, let, in 1849, for £49. 10s. a year, which is equally divided between the master and mistress. The boys are admitted at seven years of age, and are taught reading, writing, and accounts; they are clothed in green; each boy receives a complete suit, with a cap, two shirts, and two pairs of shoes; and the parents are allowed wool for knitting their stockings. The trustees meet at Whitsuntide and Christmas; they dine together, and the tenants and schoolmaster dine with them. Theophilus Bindley, master, and Sophia Jones, mistress.

Richard Walker, by indenture, 1754, in consideration of 10s., conveyed to Thomas Tysoe and six others, and their heirs, certain lands and tenements, on trust, after payment of all charges, to dispose of the clear rent in manner following: to pay one moiety of the rent to a schoolmaster, for teaching such boys of the parish as should be legally settled and living in the parish, above the age of seven and under the age of fourteen, to be free for all boys whose parents should be desirous to send them, to read, write, and cast accounts; and as to the other moiety, to pay the same to a schoolmistress, for instructing to read English and knit and sew plain work, such girls living and having a legal settlement in the parish, above the age of six and under the age of twelve; to be free to all such girls. The property now consists of a farm house and outbuildings, called Walker's Farm, containing 29a. 1r. 7p., now (1834) let for £28., the tenant paying the land tax. The income, with 16s. paid in respect of Garner's gift, is divided into two equal portions and applied as above.

Henry Garner, in his lifetime, gave £20., to be laid out in land, for the uses mentioned in Richard Walker's will. The money was laid out in repairing the house belonging to Green's charity; and 16s. a year is now paid in respect thereof.

Richard Walmsley, by will, 1816, bequeathed to his executors, Lawrence Heapy and Matthew Wrench, the residue of his personal estate, to be disposed of for such charitable purposes as they should think fit. The said executors proposed to the parishioners of Fillongley, that they would advance £230., on their raising the further sum of £40., making in the whole £270., to be laid out in the purchase of so much Three per cent. stock as would produce £10. yearly, to be added to the salary of the schoolmistress of Walker's school. After payment of the expenses of purchasing the stock, there remained a balance of £3. 3s. 2d. The dividends are paid to the schoolmistress, who for the whole, teaches about 30 girls.

William Avery, by will, 1732, after certain limitations, gave all his lands in Arley, Over Whitacre, and Fillongley, to Wm. Dilke, Jno. Dugdale, and 9 others, and their heirs, upon trust to apply £10. yearly, out of the rents, to the maintenance of a schoolmaster, at Arley; and £10. a year to a schoolmaster, at Fillongley; and £10. for clothing the said boys; the clothing to be blue. And, as to the surplus rents of the said premises, he directed, after all just expenses, that they should be disposed of in clothing the poor, binding out poor children as apprentices, and, further in relief of the sick and needy. The property consists of the Slowley Hill farm, containing 88a. 2r. 19p., in the parish of Arley, let (1834) at £140.; the Black-hall farm, containing 41a. 1r. 36p., in the parish of Fillongley, let for £55. per annum; with other property in Arley and Over Whitacre, giving a total rental of £205. 5s. The vicar of Fillongley, with one other of the trustees, have the principal management of the charity.

William Brierley, by will, 1715, devised, after certain legacies were paid, and after the death of his wife, the sum of £100., to be laid out in the purchase of lands, and settled on trustees; and the rents to be distributed amongst the poor of Fillongley, in bread, at Christmas and Midsummer. In 1728, a close, with a barn, at Wood End, in Fillongley, called the Broad Field, was conveyed to Samuel Jones and two others, and their heirs, in consideration of the £100. given by William Brierley; it contains 4a. 2r. 7p. of land, now let for £6.10s. per annum. In 1829, the sum of £24. was received for timber sold, which, with a balance of £6. 1s. 6d. then in hand, was invested in the purchase of £43. 9s. 7d. Three per cent. consols, producing a dividend of £1. 6s. annually. In 1833, the balance in the hands of the trustees amounted to £17. 16s. 6d.

Butt Fields Charity.—In the year 1748, the freehold of Butt Fields was purchased for £170. which sum had been raised by collections from various persons, for the use of the poor. The property now comprises three fields, containing together 12a. 1r. 39p. let (1834) to Charles Eaves, for £17. per annum; and a field and orchard, containing 4a. 0r. 39p. let to Joseph Cash for £6. per annum, making a total of £23.

Thomas Holbeche, by will, bequeathed 12s. per annum, to be bestowed in bread to the poor, on Holy Thursday, for ever, issuing out of a house, a garden, and orchard; late in the occupation of William Thompson.

Martin Whadcock gave 5s. yearly to the poor, in bread, payable out of his close in Fillongley, called the Hop-yard piece.

Francis Holbeche, gent., gave 5s. in bread to the poor, payable out of the Chapel house. This house has been taken down; the land on which it stood, now called Chapel Orchard, belongs to Richard Hollick, by whom 5s. is annually paid to the churchwardens.

Thomas Holbeche, gent., gave 50s. per annum, 1s. whereof to be given on every Sunday in the year, except two Sundays, in penny bread, to the poor; payable out of the Ousterne hills closes.

John White, by indenture, 1660, certain lands called Bennet's, in Arley, were devised to trustees, upon trust, that the profits should be employed according to the devise of John White, of Fillongley, viz.:—to pay the proceeds, then 6s. 8d., to the churchwardens of Fillongley, and the like sum to the churchwardens of Arley, to the uses of their churches. The property, containing 16 acres, was let from Lady-day, 1834, at £17. per annum; one moiety being paid to each parish.

Mary Talliss's gift.—See Corley.

Barnabas Holbeche, gave the close in Metley End, called Bernard's, for the repairs of the church, and the church house for the use of the parish. The close, now called the Town Piece, contains 3a. 0r. 6p. and let for £3. 3s. per annum, which is paid to the churchwardens. The church house has been enlarged, and is now used for the school.

Peter Johnson, of Corley, left 40 twopenny loaves to the poor of Fillongley, out of his estates at Corley, called Peter's bread, to be given at Christmas. This payment has been withheld by John Awson. See Corley parish.

Richard Walker gave 10s. yearly, to be paid out of his lands in Corley, called Richard Briscoe's land, for the use of the poor. No payment has for many years been received.

Henry Shakespear, by indenture, 1803, gave to Thomas Barber, for the use of the poor of the parishes of Arley and Fillongley, the sum of £200. Three per cent. consols, on trust, to receive the dividends, and pay one moiety thereof to each of the said parishes, to be distributed in bread to the poor, between Christmas day and Lady day, yearly; and it was provided, that the said Thomas Barber might, by deed or by will, nominate any other person to be his successor.

Post Office, at the Bell Inn, Mrs. Ann Ballard, post-mistress; letters arrive by foot-post from Coventry, 8,10 a.m., and are despatched 4,30 p.m., during the summer; and arrive 9,10 a.m., and are despatched at 4 p.m. in winter.

Marked 1 reside on Corley Moor, 2 Wood end, the rest at Fillongley, or where specified.

LEA MARSTON, a small village and scattered parish, 4 miles S. from Coleshill, containing 1,245 acres of land, and, in 1841, 61 houses, and 278 inhabitants; 1801, 209; 1821, 284; 1831, 269; rateable value, £2,330. 12s. 5d.; was, at the time of the Norman survey, included in Whitacre, being part of the possessions of Marmion, of Tamworth castle. The manor was purchased by Charles, afterwards Sir Charles Adderley, early in the reign of Charles I. The principal land owners are Sir Robert Peel, Bart., Lord Leigh, and Charles Bowyer Adderley, Esq., who is also lord of the manor.

Ham's Hall is a large neat stone mansion, 3 miles south from Coleshill, surrounded by an extensive park, in which is a beautiful avenue of trees, planted in the reign of Charles I., extending from the Church to the Hall; it is the seat and property of Charles Bowyer Adderley, Esq. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave, chancel, and square embattled tower, in which there are three bells. In the Church are several monuments to the Adderley family. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £110., has been augmented with £200. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; Charles Bowyer Adderley, Esq., patron; and Rev. Charles Thompson, B.A., incumbent. The parsonage is a neat residence in the Elizabethian style, 2 miles N.W. from the Church. Marston, a hamlet and small village, 5 miles south from Coleshill.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Dorothy Adderley, in her last illness, directed that certain lands in the parish of Shustock should be given for the augmentation of the perpetual curacy of Lea Marston; and after her death, her brother, Arden Adderley, by indenture, 1693, vested certain lands, in the parish of Shustock, containing, by estimation, about 23 acres, and called the Mill field, the Clay pits, and the Lynch field, in eight trustees, one of whom always to be the heir of the estate called Ham's Hall, in this parish, he being of the age of seven years at least,—upon trust; that they should receive the rents and profits of the said estates, and pay the same annually to the preaching minister of Lea Marston, he being a pious, orthodox, protestant divine. Certain duties required being performed, the rents of the estates are received by the incumbent.

Dorothy Adderley desired that the use of £40. should be distributed to the poor of Lea Marston yearly, and that the use of £30. should be yearly distributed for the teaching of poor children there, whose parents should be poor protestants, and for buying books for such children; and further reciting that James Adderley, by his will, gave the sum of £10. to the poor of this parish; and that for the better preservation of the said sums, amounting in the whole to £80. it was agreed that a rent-charge of £4. per annum should be charged on a certain meadow described. By indenture, 1719, Arden Adderley conveyed to Charles Adderley, and other trustees, their heirs, &c., one rent-charge of £4., whereof 50s. were to be given to the poor, and 30s. for the instruction of poor children of this parish.

Bowyer Adderley, by will, 1747, gave the yearly sum of £5. to the poor of this parish, to be paid by his heirs for ever out of his estate at Lea Marston.

Mary Jesson, is stated by the returns of 1786, gave £10. to the poor, then vested in the churchwardens and producing 10s.; and that the Adderley's, of Ham's, left money producing 5s. yearly, about which no information could be given.

John Chubbuck, by will, 1734, gave 20s. a year, payable out of his estate at Lea Marston, to poor house-dwellers in this parish, at the discretion of Charles Adderley, Esq., and others, to pay the same upon every Good Friday. No particular returns have of late been made for these last named three charities, but it is presumed they are all paid by the Adderley family.

Directory.—Chas. Bowyer Adderley, Esq., M.P., Ham's Hall; My. Asman, shopkr.; Jane Baldwin, schoolmrs.; Thos. Hardy, schoolmr.; Chas. Harvey, blacksmith; Mrs. Charlotte Scott, Marston; Rev. Chas. Thompson, B.A., Parsonage; Thos. Townsend, bricklayer; and Alex. Amos, Thos. Clarkson, Marston; Thos. Hargrave, Thos. Kendrick, Marston; Rt. Lingard, and butcher; Rt. Lingard, sen., Wood House; Thomas Scoffom, Marston; and Wm. Smith, Blackgraves, farmers. Carrier to Birmingham mon. and thur., Atherstone, tues., and Tamworth, sat., Hannah Foden.

MANCETTER, an extensive parish, containing the townships of Mancetter with Oldbury, Hartshill, and the township and market town of Atherstone; the entire area of which is 4275 acres, 3r. 32p. of land; and, in 1841, here were 1249 houses, and 5122 inhabitants: 1801, 3345; 1821, 4482; 1831, 5200; rateable value, £12,853. 19s. 6½d.

MANCETTER, or MANCESTER, is a small village and township, including the hamlet of Oldbury, 1 m. S.E. from Atherstone, contains 1978a. 2r. 6p. of land; in 1841, 100 houses, and 378 inhabitants; this village excites an interest from occupying part of the site of the ancient Manduessedum, a Roman station, occupying an area of 6a. on the Watling-street, which passes near it on the N.E., almost dividing the camp into equal parts. The principal land owners are T. C. Hinks, Esq.; S. S. Baxter, Esq.; H. C. Okeover, Esq.; Sir Henry Drydon; Hon. and Rev. Charles S. Twistleton; Mrs. Worley; Mr. Thos. Clarke; and Mr. Thos. Worthington. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, occupies an eminence, is a fine structure, and consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and embattled tower; its architectural details and ancient stained glass are worthy of notice.

The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's books at £10. 13s. 4d., now £229.; Rev. Benjamin Richings, M.A., patron and incumbent. The Vicarage is a neat residence, a short distance south-east from the church.

OLDBURY, a small hamlet, 2 miles S. from Atherstone, containing 503 acres of land, and, in 1841, 9 houses and 46 inhabitants; rateable value, £618. 9s. 6d.; and has on the summit of a commanding eminence, the remains of a quadrangular earthwork, the Campa Æstiva, or summer camp to the Roman station of Manduessedum; its area contains about seven acres, and three sides are well preserved; the ramparts are about twenty feet broad at the bottom, and six high. On the south side of the camp, the nuns of Polesworth had a cell, and within its area is a handsome mansion, commanding most delightful views of the surrounding country, and is the seat of John Hardy, Esq. H. C. Oakeover, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole owner. Here is an extensive coal mine in this hamlet.

HARTSHILL, a township and considerable village, 3 miles N.W. by N. from Nuneaton, contains 1,500 acres of land, and, in 1841, 264 houses and 1,061 inhabitants; rateable value, £3,566. 19s. 2½d. This is supposed to be included within the ancient Manduessedum, is situated on such an eminence, that upon a clear day, upwards of 40 churches may be seen from it, with the naked eye. A family assumed their surname from this place in the time of Henry I., and had a castellated mansion here, some remains of which are still visible. Here also was born, 1563, Michael Drayton, whose Poly Olbion, and numerous other poems, have given him a high place amongst our early poets; he died in 1631, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. The principal land owners are Kirby Fenton, Richard Alkin, Rd. Rt. Jee, and Rt. Fowler, Esqs.; the former is lord of the manor; several others have also estates here. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a neat structure, with nave and chancel, was consecrated April, 1848; endowed with £1,000. by the Rev. — Lowe, and £400. by the neighbouring gentry. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £60., in the patronage of the vicar of Mancetter, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. John Edge, M.A. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship here. Here are several quarries of excellent durable stone, used principally for making roads, and is sent to various parts of England; also a mine, from which a great quantity of manganese is obtained.

ATHERSTONE, a market town and chapelry, 14 miles from Coventry, 20 E. by N. from Birmingham, 24 N. by E. from Warwick, and 100 N.W. by N. from London, on the road to Chester and the ancient Watling street; containing 797a. 2r. 6p. of land, and, in 1841, 885 houses and 3,743 inhabitants, of whom 1,795 were males, and 1,948 females; in 1801, 2,650; 1821, 3,434; rateable value, £6,291. 9s. The principal land owners are W. S. Dugdale, Joseph Willday, C. H. Bracebridge, S. S. Baxter, and Henry Radford, Esqs; the former is lord of the manor. The name of this place, in Doomsday-book written Aderestone, is, by Dugdale, derived from Edred, or Aldred, who possessed it in the time of the Saxons, and thence called Edredstone, or Aldredstone; by others its name is deduced from its situation near Mancetter, the Manduessedum of the Romans; reckoning from which station, here was the first or nearest milliarium, on the line of the Roman Watling street, and thence called Hither-stone, or Atherstone. In 1485, the Earl of Richmond, previously to the battle of Bosworth Field, entered this town on the 20th of August, encamped his forces in a Meadow, north of the church, still called the Royal Meadow; and took up his own quarters at an ancient inn, now the Three Tuns, where he passed the night; the chair which he occupied is now in the possession of S. S. Baxter, Esq.: here he had an interview with the Stanleys, and concerted those measures which secured him the victory in the ever memorable battle that took place on the 22nd, and terminated the wars between the houses of York and Lancaster. In 1376, Ralph, Lord Basset, of Drayton, founded a convent of Augustine Friars, the church of which is now the parochial chapel; the chancel is appropriated to the use of the free grammar school. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1849, except the tower, and that part used for the grammar school, in the early decorated style of English architecture, at a cost of about £3,500., raised by subscriptions, and grants from the Coventry Diocesan Society, £500; and the Incorporated Society, for building and enlarging churches, £300.; Charles Holt Bracebridge, Esq., gave the additional land required, and a munificent donation; it now consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with octagonal tower at east end; the interior is handsomely fitted up with open pews, and will seat 1,200, many of which are free. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £150.; in the patronage of the Vicar of Mancetter, and incumbency of the Rev. Frederick H. Richings, M. A. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and the Society of Friends, have places of worship here. The Rosary Convent occupies an elevated situation, at the east extremity of the town; the chapel adjoining is open to the public; the whole forms a neat building. Frances Russell, rev. mother; and Rev. Richard Gerard, priest. Besides the free grammar and Simmonds charity schools, for which, see Charities. Here are small National and Infant schools; and a large British school, in connexion with the Independent Chapel, North street. The town consists principally of one long street, with branch streets leading to the Market place, and to the canal; is generally well built, interspersed with handsome modern houses, and good shops; it is well lighted with gas, and amply supplied with water. The Market place occupies a spacious area on the north side of the town, and contains the Town Hall, a spacious brick building, on piazzas, in which petty sessions, assemblies, and other public meetings are held. The situation of the town is very delightful, being sheltered at the back, or south side, by a range of wood-clad hills, the front, or north side, presenting a beautiful and extensive prospect, over a fine well cultivated country, bounded at a great distance by hills in the counties of Derby and Leicester; the scenery is enriched at one point by the river Anker, which glides along about a mile distant, dividing this county from that of Leicester, and retains its name till it joins the Tame at Tamworth. The Manufacture of hats is carried on here to a considerable extent. The market, which is on Tuesday, is well supplied with corn. The fairs are held on April 7 and July 18, for cattle; Sept. 19, 20, and 21, for cattle, cheese, and pedlary; on the Tuesday after, which is a statute fair; and on December 4th, is a great show fair for cattle. Petty Sessions are held every Tuesday by the county magistrates, and the following gentlemen usually attend: Sir J. N. L. Chetwode, Bart., Rev. J. C. Roberts, Rev. Samuel Bracebridge Heming, C. H. Bracebridge, Esq., Sir George Chetwynd, Bart., W. S. Dugdale, Charles Chetwynd, Richard Jee, Rd. Roberts Jee, C. N. Newdegate, George Moore, D. Heming, Esqrs., and Major Bamford; Henry Power, Esq., clerk; Mr. John Biddle, high constable; Mr. Wm. Vero, superintendent constable and governor of the lock-up. New County Court comprises the following places, viz.: Atherstone, Ansley, Baddesley, Baxterley, Caldecote, Grendon, Whittington, Hartshill, Mancetter, Merevale, Oldbury, Polesworth, and Dordon. Leigh Trafford, Esq., judge; John Thomas Pilgrim, Esq., clerk; John Biddle, high bailiff; and Wm. Alcock, sub-bailiff.

The Gas works, situated on the south side of the town, near the canal, erected 1841, by a company holding 600 £5. shares, ten of which are unappropriated; the affairs are managed by twelve directors. Mr. Thos. Simmons, secretary and managing director.

The Union workhouse, Long street, is a large ancient building, will accommodate 150, average 50; and comprises the following places, viz., Atherstone, Ansley, Baddesley Ensor, Baxterley, Bentley, Grendon, Mancetter, Merevale, Oldbury, and Polesworth, in this county, and A Heeton, Penny Drayton, Sheepy Magna and Parva, in Leicestershire; Francis Roberts, master, and registrar of births and deaths. John Baker, Esq., clerk and superintendent registrar; Leonard Gisborne and Geo. Simonds, registrars of marriages; Rt. Paget, relieving officer; W. S. Dugdale, Esq., chairman; there are 18 guardians, of whom six are ex-officio officers.

The Trent Valley Branch of the London and North Western railway, and the Coventry and Fazeley canal cross the north extremity of the town, where extensive coal, lime, and corn wharfs have been constructed.

The Hall is a neat mansion, on an eminence a little N.E. from the Church, commanding a most beautiful view of Charnwood Forest in Leicestershire, enlivened by the meandering stream of the Anker, by which river the estate is bounded; it is the seat and property of Charles Holte Bracebridge, Esq.

Cricket Club, at Mr. John Cook's, new Swan Inn, Market place, established 1847; George Chetwynd, Esq., president; S. S. Baxter, Esq., treasurer; Mr. Alfred C. King, secretary. The members of this club carry on the game with great spirit; amongst the number, are some of the most influential gentlemen in this part of the county. The cricket ground, situated about a quarter of a mile N.W. from the town, being in the Royal Meadow, is one of the most beautiful and picturesque spots for the purpose in the kingdom. Mr. George Butler, of Nottingham, is engaged for two seasons to teach the members the manly art and scientific game, whose kindness and perseverance have gained him great respect.

CHARITIES.—(Mancetter Parish.) Almshouses.—James Gramer, citizen and goldsmith of London, who died 13th December, 1726, gave, by will, £2,000. for the endowment of one almshouse for six poor men, to be built in his orchard, at Mancetter, adjoining the churchyard; the above £2,000. to be laid out in land, and the interest thereof to be applied for the maintenance of the six almsmen, at 5s. each weekly; the overplus to be laid out in repairs. The charge of building the said almshouses, according to the directions given in the will, to be paid out of his estate, over and above the said £2,000. The men, who were to be 60 years of age, of good conduct, such as had been housekeepers either in Mancetter or Atherstone, nevertheless the housekeepers of Mancetter to have the preference; and that all the poor men should receive the sacrament three or four times a year, and join in the prayers of the church upon all Sundays and holidays, provided they were in health. Susannah Rogers, his sister, and Richard Cooke, proved the will, and erected the almshouse; and by a decree, 7th November, 1733, it was ordered the charity should be established. A purchase of land, to the amount of £1,800. was approved by the Master in December, 1733, and seven trustees appointed. The property belonging to the trustees consists of a farm, let to Richard Pickering, containing 27a. 0r. 1p. at the rent of £75. per annum. 2r. 3p. of land was sold out of this property in the year 1800, for £49. 0s. 5½d., to the parish, for a new church yard. Also, Chas. Weetman, (1834) occupies three closes, called the Causeway close, the Highway close, and the Ridings; containing in the whole 32a. 1r. 7p., as yearly tenant, at the rent of £85. The land is tithe free, and the land tax, of £10. 12s. was purchased in 1799, at an expense of £215. The trustees are also possessed of £1,500. three per cent. consols. The income of the charity is now (1834) £205. per annum. The old almshouse premises consist of a range of six tenements, under one roof, containing one room each, fronting to the west side of the churchyard, having a strip of land in front, and a small yard at the end. Five new almshouses, containing one room each, have been erected, under an order of the court, obtained in 1822, by the side of the road adjoining the new church yard. Since 1822, the eleven almsmen receive 6s. a week, and £2. a year is allowed to the person who pays the almsmen every Saturday.

Bell Rope Piece.—Isaac Cook gave two leys of the Raile Meadow, in Mancetter, to find the three largest bell ropes at Mancetter. The successive owners of the meadow supply the ropes when necessary.

Free Grammar School.—(Atherstone Township.) Queen Elizabeth, by letters patent, 22nd December, in the 15th of her reign, (1573) reciting that Thomas Fulner, of London, merchant, by his will, ordered his executors to pay the sum of 200 marks of his effects to the inhabitants of Atherstone, to the intent that therewith they might purchase lands to them and their heirs, and might, from time to time, lay out the rents, as well towards the erection of a free grammar school, and the support of the same, for the tuition of the scholars there, as towards a fit maintenance for the schoolmaster there; and further reciting that Amias Hill likewise by his will devised 26s. 8d., to be issuing out of his lands, to be paid by his heirs to the same inhabitants, for the use of the aforesaid schoolmaster; and that Simon Broke and John Cheke, the executors of the testament of Thomas Fulner, paid the above sum of 200 marks, with which the inhabitants purchased lands and tenement in the county of Warwick, of the clear yearly rent of £6. 13s. 4d.

Also, that William Devereux, knight, had proposed to convey certain lands and tenements to certain of the inhabitants for the better maintenance of the school; and her said Majesty did, at the humble petition of the aforesaid William Devereux, knight, and of the inhabitants of the said town, grant that there thenceforth be one grammar school in the town of Atherstone, to be called by the name of the Free Grammar school of Wm. Devereux, knight, Thos. Fulner, and Amias Hill; to consist of one master, and that 12 of the most discreet men of the town should be called the governors of the possessions of the said school; and her Majesty nominated Rd. Goodall, Hugh Abell, and 10 others, who were thereby incorporated, by the name aforesaid, to have perpetual succession, &c. and on the death of any one, the remaining governors to elect another fit person of the town in the place of him so dying; or, in case they neglect six months, the bishop to elect. And it was also ordered, that when the office of master became vacant, and no fit person nominated to the same by the governors for the space of five months, then it should be lawful for the bishop to nominate. An estate purchased at Dosthill, by Sir William Devereux and others, was conveyed in trust for the use of the Grammar School. The school was also further endowed, in 1583, with some premises called "The Moor," in the lordship of Whittington, which appears to have been devoted to the support of a school, previously to the granting of the charter. In the year 1607, statutes, for the government of the school, were drawn up by the governors, and confirmed by their diocesan, the Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield. One of the governors is annually elected bailiff, and receives the rents, and keeps the accounts. In 1834, the income from the school property amounted to £253. 10s. 9d.; besides which, the master is allowed to retain in his own occupation, about five acres of land, formerly part of the moor, and are considered to be worth £35. a year; they are held by the master, at a nominal rent of 1s. 3d.; two acres of this land the master lets off in small gardens to mechanics. The school premises, said to be derived from the gift of Amias Hill, who appears to have purchased the site of the priory from Henry Cartwright, to whom they were granted after the dissolution, in 1542. The schoolmaster's house was built about the beginning of the last century, the funds of the governors being assisted by £20., given by Amias Mabel, and by £60. presented by a former master. It has a good garden attached to it, situated in the town of Atherstone, opposite the school. The Governors have expended within a few years about £800. in repairs and improvements, and the master £400. The school is the eastern end, or chancel of the old priory church, and was thus appropriated, in 1573; it is divided into two rooms, of which, that next the church is used for the English school. A pew in the church is annexed to the house; the whole is considered to be worth about £50. per annum, and is occupied by the master, at a nominal rent of 1s. 3d. per annum. Rev. Edward Power, M. A., master; and James Chattaway, English master.

The English School.—William Simmonds, of Atherstone, mercer, by will, 1685, declared, that in case his son, Joshua Simmonds, should die without issue, the rent of the close and barn, in the lordship of Whittington, in the county of Warwick, should be for some well qualified protestant schoolmaster, approved by the Governors of the school of Atherstone, and chosen at their discretion, to teach the male children of the town of Atherstone, until they were fitting to go to the free school; and should cause the said children to learn the Assembly's Catechism. After the death of Joshua Simmonds without issue, his cousin and heir, Charles Simmonds, by indenture, 8th Jan., conveyed the above premises to certain trustees, for the use of the school, as above named. The premises consist of two closes of ground, containing seven acres, with a stable, let to Dugdale Stratford Dugdale, Esq., for £40. per annum, and the land tax has been redeemed. Andrew Newton, Esq., left a sum of money to increase the English master's salary, laid out in the purchase of £50., reduced three and a half per cent stock. The interest of the stock is reserved to defray any trifling expenses in repairs, &c.; £40. is paid to the master. The school was divided from the grammar school in 1749, by subscription; this is now used for the English department of the grammar school. In 1842, a large and commodious school was erected in South street, and is now on the National plan; Joseph Mitchell, master.

Alice Couney, of Hartshill, by indenture, 1623, granted to trustees and their heirs, a yearly rent of £7., out of her estates in Hartshill, to the poor of the parish of Mancetter, 50s., of which, 40s. should be given the poor of Atherstone, on St. Thomas's day, and Good Friday; and 10s. among the poor of Hartshill, on the same days; and also, £4. 10s., the residue, to be yearly distributed to the poor of Nuneaton, of which, 10s. thereof to be yearly spent by the churchwardens and overseers of both parishes.

Edward Drayton gave £1. a year, payable to the churchwardens of Atherstone, for the use of the poor. The 20s. is received from the bailiff of Tamworth, as a charge on a piece of land, near Fazeley.

Edward Berks left £1. a year to the poor, charged as a rent-charge, and paid from the Wheat Sheaf public house, in Atherstone.

Michael Trafford, and Alice, his wife, in 1670, surrendered into the hands of the lord of the manor of Atherstone, their heirs, and assigns, a messuage, upon trust, to dispose of the same, and, after certain payments, directed the residue to be set forth to the use of the poor of Atherstone. In respect of this charity, the sum of £2. 11s. 3d. is received annually by the churchwardens, out of a house and premises, now the Nelson Inn, in Atherstone. This, with the preceding gifts, is laid out in linen, and distributed to about 60 poor widows.

Lady Fulwood's charity.—(see Henley-in-Arden.)—By a decree, 1657, at Warwick, under a commission of charitable uses, it was ordered that 20s. payable to the poor of Atherstone, should be charged on certain premises in Henley-in-Arden, belonging to William Wither, and 15 others, to be paid to the overseers of the poor of Atherstone, on the 25th of March, in each year. It is usually paid once in three years.

William Symonds, gent., of Atherstone, by will, 1687, ordered certain lands in Twycross, in the county of Leicester, of the yearly value of £14., and also the sum of £5. per annum, out of certain lands lying in the lordship of Mancetter, and payable yearly, in lieu of tithes, which said sums, or as much as could be raised out of the said grounds, should, for ever, be expended for the yearly placing forth to be apprentices to some trade, the poor men's male children of inhabitants of the towns of Atherstone, Tamworth, and Nuneaton, such as could read the Bible, and should have, at their placing forth, one Bible bought for them, and one of the Assembly's Catechisms, of the larger sort. The proceeds of this charity, (1834,) is £56. 8s. 9d., is received by the overseers of Atherstone, and distributed agreeable to the donor's intentions.

Sir John Repington, Knight, by will, 1625, gave £5. a year, for ever, to be distributed by 2s. a piece, to 50 poor people of the town of Atherstone, to be nominated by the minister and six more of the inhabitants of the said town. This payment is charged on a house on the north side the Long street, in Atherstone, now (1834) the property of Stafford Stretton Baxter, Esq.

Richard Warwick, and Hester, his wife, in 1633, surrendered into the hands of two customary tenants, according to the custom of the manor of Atherstone, a messuage, in which he himself dwelt, and another messuage, in the occupation of William Musson, to the use of himself and his wife for their lives, and after the decease of the survivor, to the use of the poor of Atherstone, to buy yearly for 20 poor men of the said town, coats and hats, or for as many as the said would buy. The above premises were, in 1671, sold for the sum of £310., which was invested in the purchase of certain premises and lands, in Earls Shilton. In 1832, the premises were let for 14 years, to Rd. May, at the yearly rent of £85. In 1833, the sum of £69. 1s. was expended in coats and hats, and distributed to 75 poor men belonging to the town of Atherstone, whether resident or not.

Richard Martin, of Atherstone, by will, 1664, gave the Cawsey Close to the use of the poor of the parish of Mancetter, to be bestowed in coats and hats, for poor men, with a spade upon the arm, at the discretion of the overseers of his will, and their successors. The premises comprise the Barn Cawsey Close, the Cawsey Close, and the Pingle. The rents, amounting to £52. 15s., after deducting charges for repairs, are annually expended in the purchase of coats and hats; the hats cost about 3s. 6d. each, and the coats 22s. 6d. They are distributed to the poor of Atherstone, Mancetter, and Hartshill; about 34 to Atherstone, and the remainder between the other two places.

Harrison Drayton, by will, 1671, gave to the poor of Atherstone, £5. a year, to buy six coats and six pairs of shoes for six poor women; the rest to put out one child apprentice, every year, for ever; and left £100. to be laid out to assure the same, and appointed Ralph Drayton and two others to be feoffees, in trust, and allowed them 5s., to be paid by his executors, for their expenses. The sum of £2. 12s. 6d. is now (1834) received from Stafford Stretton Baxter, Esq., being a charge upon his house on the north side of Long Street, Atherstone, the other moiety of the charity having many years ago been lost. There is also in the savings bank, a sum of £27., producing a dividend of 18s. per annum; and six woollen jerkins and six pairs of shoes are given to six poor widows, not under 60 years of age, at Midsummer, annually.

William Simmonds, by will, 1685, directed, that in case his son, Joshua, should die without issue, the clear rents and profits of three tillage acres, in the common fields of Atherstone, then of the annual rent of 54s., should be employed for the buying of twelve pennyworth of bread, every week in the year; six twopenny loaves to be given to six poor widows. On the enclosure of the common fields, in 1764, a piece of land, containing 1a. 3r. 20p., lying in the windmill field, was awarded to the trustees, in lieu of the said common land, and now laid to another piece of land belonging to Sharpe's charity, containing 3a. 0r. 37p., and called the Bread Acres; the entire being let for £25., of which £16. is appropriated to Sharpe's charity, and £9. to this charity; out of which, £7. 16s. is laid out in a weekly distribution of 3s. worth of bread, at Atherstone chapel.

John Loveday, by will, 1693, left to John Hogsflesh, £200., to be paid at the expiration of his apprenticeship; and in case he should die before the same became due, then he gave £100., part thereof, to the minister and churchwardens of Atherstone, for the use of the poor of the said parish. Ann Loveday, his executrix, gave £200. to the said uses, with this difference, that the interest given by John Loveday, should be distributed to 20 poor people, the week before Whit-Sunday, every year; and to the intent that the charities might be made perpetual, James Gramer, by will, 1724, charged all his house and lands in Mancetter with the payment of £20. a year, clear of all deductions, yearly, on St. Thomas's day and the Monday before Whit-Sunday. The vicar selects 40 poor persons of Atherstone, and pays 10s. to the curate of Atherstone, for a sermon, on St. Stephen's day.

Richard Abell, by will, 1677, gave a messuage in Atherstone, to his executors, and their heirs, upon trust, to employ the profits in setting forth of poor children residing in Atherstone to trades, or otherwise. The rent, £4. 8s., with 6s. 10d., the amount of land tax, exonerated by the trustees in 1814, to which the lessee was liable, are regularly paid, and appropriated to the putting out one boy apprentice.

William Sharpe, by will, 1709, gave the residue of his personal estate, to be laid out, by his executors, in the purchase of land, for the putting out to apprentice two poor children as often as the rents should be sufficient, one of them to be from Atherstone, the other from Bosworth, in the county of Leicester. In 1717, in consideration of £147., land lying in the Mithe Meadow, was conveyed to Hugh Kisse and two others, and their heirs, containing about five acres, and a piece of ground called Ragnall Pit Slade. At the inclosure, by the award dated 11th September, 1765, the commissioners allotted a parcel of land in Windmill Hill field, containing 3a. 0r. 37p., in lieu of the above-named land. The land is let, with the Bread Acres, at the rent of £25. a year; of which, £16. clear, is received for this charity, and applied in putting out apprentices, with premiums of £4. or £5. each, from Atherstone and Market Bosworth.

William Strong, did, before the 24th of June, 1736, place £11. in the hands of the Rev. Richard Blore, schoolmaster, of Atherstone, and appointed him and his successor for the time being, with two others, trustees thereof, on trust, to place the same upon a proper security, for the annual sum of 10s., to be applied in buying bread for the poor of Atherstone, on St. Thomas's day. This sum was, by agreement, invested in the enlargement of the parish workhouse, and the interest, 10s., made payable to the trustees of Strong's charity, which is given away, in sixpenny loaves, to twenty poor widows, on St. Thomas's day.

John Roper, gave out of a house in Atherstone, 5s. in bread, and 5s. to the parson of Atherstone chapel. Mr. Butler, the owner of the house, pays 5s. for bread, distributed on St. Thomas's day, and 5s. for a sermon on Good Friday.

John Choyce, by will, 1786, directed his executors to transfer the sum of £150. Four per cent. consolidated bank annuities, to the minister of Atherstone, and four other persons, upon trust, to pay out of the dividends, to 30 poor housekeepers of Atherstone, the sum of 3s. 6d. each; and he directed the residue to be applied to any contingent expenses relating to the said trust. The stock has been converted into new Three and a-half per cents., produces a dividend of £5. 5s., which is given, in sums of 3s. 6d., to poor persons, chiefly widows, of Atherstone.

Two Annuities, of 6s. 8d. each, are recorded in the returns of 1786; of which, one is paid from a house belonging to Thomas Gutteridge, on the south side of Long Street, and 6s. 8d. is likewise paid out of the school-house; both are distributed to poor widows in sixpences.

Mr. Bracebridge, by will, in 1695, gave the sum of £1., to be distributed to 20 poor inhabitants of Atherstone, and in 1786, vested in the heirs of the brother of Thomas Bracebridge and the churchwardens of Atherstone. We, in 1834, examined the agent of Charles Holte Bracebridge, Esq., of Atherstone Hall; but could not ascertain the existence of the charge.

Thomas Morton left 8s. a year, in trust, to the churchwardens of Atherstone, for the use of the poor, which is noticed by the returns of 1786, but nothing has been received in respect of it for 40 years.

Hamlet of Hartshill.—Nathaniel Newton, gent., of Hartshill, by will, 1730 (agreeable to the will of his father, Nathaniel Newton,—1711) devised his messuage and lands in Baxterley, in the tenure of Dinah Farmer, to John Gulson and eight other persons, their heirs and assigns for ever, that after his decease, having no issue of his body, the said estate, and also his messuage in Hartshill, then in the holding of John Payn, upon trust, that the said trustees, should, from time to time, elect a schoolmaster, to teach the children to read the English tongue, to write and cast accounts, and should place him in the said messuage at Hartshill, and ordered that he should teach the children born in Hartshill, or who resided there, as well girls as boys, without asking any reward; but that he should not be obliged to teach at one time more than 26 in all; 20 only should be of Hartshill, and six might be of any other place in the county of Warwick. The property consists of a farm-house and out-buildings, and 28 acres 30p. of land in Baxterley, let for the yearly rent of £37. A large school-room and school-house and garden, in the village of Hartshill, and about 5 acres of land adjoining, now occupied by the master, rent free, but subject to an annual payment of 18s. 4d.; being an apportioned share of £7., created by Alice Coney before-mentioned. The land held by the master is worth about £20. per annum. There is also an allotment of 1r. 1p., set out on the enclosure, in 1804. In 1834, the master had 30 free children, of whom, 28 were of Hartshill, and two of Atherstone, and receives £25. a year; he had also 36 pay scholars, of whom, 17 were boarders. The master has two schools, and three ushers, all competent to teach the classics: J. F. Matthews, master. At the balancing of accounts, in 1833, there was a sum of £135. 11s. 1½d. in the hands of the trustees. Out of the surplus income, sums of £10. and £20. used, occasionally, to be distributed to poor widows and others, but for some years have been neglected, many repairs having been required previous to 1834.

Alice Coney's Charity. (See Atherstone.) The sum of 10s. is received, annually, from the schoolmaster of Hartshill, by the overseers, and distributed, in sixpences, to poor persons, on Good Friday and St. Thomas's day.

Richard Martin's charity.—(See Atherstone.) Three or four poor men of this hamlet are selected annually by the trustees; each receives a coat and hat.

Swoin Stephens, of Hartshill, by will 1772, gave 20s. a year for ever, to be laid out in books, for poor children of Hartshill, and no other: to be given every Whitsuntide, and are to be nominated at the Easter meeting for choosing overseers. Application to be made in writing previously, to the overseers. The sum is regularly paid out of a house and garden, belonging to Mr. Richard Jee.

MAXSTOKE, a parish and scattered village, $2\frac{3}{4}$ miles S. E. by E. from Coleshill, containing 2,560 acres of land, and in 1841, 68 houses, and 346 inhabitants; 1801, 355; 1821, 361; 1831, 352; rateable value, £3,094. This was, probably, part of the extensive possessions of Turchil de Warwick, from whom it passed to the Limesseys, Odingsells, and Clintons; and one of the last-named family, in the 16th of Henry VI., exchanged it with Humphrey Stafford, afterwards Duke of Buckingham. A priory of Augustines was founded here in the 10th of Edward III., by William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon, the gate of entrance to which, remains of the tower, and several other fragments of the monastic buildings, with the boundary wall, are worthy of attention. The principal land owners, and lords of the manors, are Lord Leigh, and Capt. Thos. Dilke, R. N. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small edifice, apparently constructed out of the ruins of the monastery. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £5. 6s. 8d., now £70. endowed with £200. private benefactions, £400. Queen Anne's bounty, and £500. parliamentary grant, in the patronage of Lord Leigh, and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Hutchins, B. A. The vicarage, a large handsome residence, erected 1849, at a cost of £1,400., by Lord Leigh, and Capt. Thos. Dilke. A parochial school, for boys and girls, with house for the master and mistress, is a neat building, erected 1845, supported by voluntary contributions; will accommodate 70, average, 60. John and Maria Etchells, master and mistress.

The Castle, situated about one mile from the church, was the ancient seat of the Clintons, and chiefly erected in the reign of Edward III. On the attainder of Henry, grandson of the Duke of Buckingham, it was taken possession of by the Crown, and, by Henry VII., granted to the Comptons, who sold the castle and estate to Lord Keeper Egerton, in the 39th of Elizabeth, and was soon afterward purchased by the Dilke family. The castle is a parallelogram, with a hexagonal tower at each corner, and surrounded by a moat, over which is a bridge, the entrance being guarded by a fine and lofty machicolated gateway. The gates are in their original condition, as put up by Humphrey, Duke of Buckingham, covered with plates of iron, and his arms embossed upon the iron work. An accidental fire burnt a portion of the interior some time ago, but the noble hall, dining room, with curiously-carved door and chimney piece, kitchen, and chapel, are objects deserving of attention; and the walls of the great court shew the ancient caserns of lodgments of the garrison; and is now the seat and property of Capt. Thomas Dilke, R.N.

CHARITIES.—Mr. Phipps gave the interest of £20., Mrs. Elizabeth Dilke gave the interest of £20., and John Dakins gave the interest of £10., for ever, to be paid out of Catharine Meadow; 8s. to be paid out of the said meadow, yearly, to the poor, at Easter. These benefactions appear to have been placed in the hands of Thomas Dakins, of Maxstock Hall, who, by will, 1731, gave, for the use of the poor of Maxstock, the interest thereof yearly, on St. Thomas's day, to be distributed to the poor, with the approbation of the minister: for which sum, as well as for £50. for which he had given bond, the interest thereof to be distributed amongst the said poor at Easter; and he declared his will to be that his real estates, in Maxstock, should stand charged with the payment of the interest of both the above sums. William Dilke, Esq., of Maxstock Castle, pays the sum of £5. to the minister, which is given to poor persons in sums of from 2s. to 7s. The sum of 8s., charged on the Catharine Meadow, is also received from Mr. Dilke, and distributed at the same time.

George Webb.—See Warwick.—A boy from this parish occasionally bound apprentice, elected by the churchwardens, and is entitled to a premium of £7. at the expiration of his apprenticeship.

Directory.—Geo. Branson, blacksmith; Capt. Thos. Dilke, The Castle; Jno. Hailstone, vict. and maltster, Three Horse Shoes; Rev. Hy. H. Hutchins, B.A., Vicarage; Frances Reader, shopkeeper; John Stones, tailor; Thomas Ward, shoemaker. The farmers are Wm. Allcock, Wm. Bentley, Drake's Farm; Jane Burbidge, Hy. Haddon, Priory Farm; Eliz. Harris, Thos. Holland, and maltster, The Hall; Wm. Holland, Ann Loud, Eliz. Loud, William Loud, Martha Morton, James Oldacre, Thos. Oldacre, and William Wilks.

MEREVALE, a scattered parish, principally in the Sparkenhoe Hundred, Leicestershire; 1 m. W. by S. from Atherstone, contains 2657a. 3r. 15p.; of which 1797a. 1r. 8p. are in the county of Leicester; in 1841 there were, 102 inhabitants in this county, and 106 in Leicestershire; rateable value, £4,442. 8s. At the Norman survey this belonged to Grendon, consequently is not named in Domesday. In the 13th of Stephen (1148,) Robert Earl of Ferrers founded and largely endowed a monastery of Cistercians here, and at various subsequent periods further important benefactions were made to them; at the dissolution its revenue was £303. 10s. Some interesting fragments of the monastic buildings still remain, and from recent research a great portion of the foundation has been discovered, with walls in some instances one yard high, hitherto apparently scarcely touched by the all destroying hand of time; three stone coffins and some skeletons have also been found; here is a subterranean passage, but what course it takes is not known. At the dissolution, the site of this monastery was granted to Sir Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, one of whose successors sold it in the 17th century, to Stratford, one of whose descendants, W. S. Dugdale, Esq., is owner and lord of the manor of the Warwickshire portion; and S. S. Perkins, Esq., Wm. Baker, Esq., Wm. Harrison, Esq., Rev. Chas. Inge, A. Dixey, Esq., Geo. Moore, Esq., Rev. J. Andrew, and Mr. Hull, are the principal owners of the Leicestershire part, and each is the lord of the manor of his own estate. The Church, formerly the Chapel of our Lady at the gate of the Abbey, forms a pleasing portion of the remains of the monastery, and contains a fine assemblage of ancient stained glass in the large east and side windows, and a handsome alabaster tomb with recumbent figures, to the memory of Robert, Lord Ferrers of Chartley and his lady, several ancient brasses, and a stone figure in armour. The living, a Donative. W. S. Dugdale, Esq., patron, and the Rev. Thos. Jackson, M.A., incumbent. The parsonage, is a neat stone building, near the Church. The Hall, a handsome stone mansion, on a commanding eminence, has been rebuilt by its present possessor and occupant, Wm. Stratford Dugdale, Esq., and is surrounded by a park, in which is a fine lake and about 100 head of deer.

Directory.—Wm. Stratford Dugdale, Esq., The Hall; Jph. Floyd, parish clerk; Rev. Thos. Jackson, M.A.; John Loud, bailiff; Gilbert Minion, farmer, the Abbey Farm; and John Pogmore, colliery agent, are in Warwickshire; and Wm. Baker, Moor Barnes; John Bladon, Orton House; Wm. Cliff, High Fields; Edwd. Faux, New House Grange; Luke Faux, Pinwell Grange; Rev. Chas. Inge, Benn Hill; George Miles, Lea Grange; and Wm. White, Frog Hall; are the farmers in Leicestershire.

NUNEATON, a market town and parish, 18 miles N.N.E. from Warwick, 21 E. by N. from Birmingham, and 100 N.W. by W. from London, containing with the hamlets of Attleborough, and Stockingford 6,021a. 3r. 18p. of land; of this 2,692a. 1r. 23p., are in the township of Nuneaton; in 1841, 1863 houses and 7105 inhabitants; 1801, 4769; 1821, 6610; 1831, 7799; rateable value, £18,355. 11s. The name of this place is derived from the river in its neighbourhood, Ea in Saxon, signifying water, and from a priory established here, in the reign of Stephen, by Robert, Earl of Leicester, for nuns of the order of Fontevault, in whose convents abroad there were sometimes nuns and monks in one establishment, but here, there were only a prior, a prioress, and nuns; the prioress having supreme authority. In the reign of Henry III., a weekly market was granted to the prioress, and at the dissolution, the revenue amounted to £290. 15s. 0½d. The site and ground plan, with fragments of columns, and richly moulded arches, together with a considerable portion of the walls of the main building, are still visible; the outer walls, which enclosed a spacious quadrangular area, are still standing on the east side; a considerable portion of the material was used in rebuilding the Church. The town is pleasantly situated on the river Anker, over which are 2 bridges, and consists principally of 2 long streets and the market-place; the town is in general well built; it is lighted with gas and well supplied with water. The principal source of occupation is ribbon-weaving for the London market, in which branch of manufacture French looms and machinery have been introduced, especially in the figured gauze ribbon. The Birmingham and Coventry canal passes by the north-west extremity of the town, where there is a wharf belonging to Messrs. Craddock and Bulls, principally for cheese and oats; and there are quarries of excellent stone for making roads, which is much thought of and is sent to all parts of England. The market is on Saturday; and fairs are held May 14th, 15th, and 16th, for cattle and hardware; February 18th, and October 31st, for horses and cattle; and a statute fair is held fourteen days before Michaelmas. Three constables are annually elected, and sworn in at the court-leet, for the town and hamlets; there is also a permanent constable, Mr. Joseph Haddon. The town hall is a neat modern edifice of brick, in the upper story of which are two large rooms, let for public purposes, under which the market is held. Mr. William Marples is the lessee.

Petty Sessions are held at the Newdegate Arms every alternate Saturday; the following are the magistrates, Rev. S. B. Hemming, Sir N. L. Chetwode, Bart., and Rd. Gee, Esq.; John Power, Esq., clerk; a prison, or lock-up, was erected in Abbey street, in 1823. The New County Court is held in the town hall, once in each month, and comprises the following places, viz., Nuneaton, Astley, Arley, Ansley, Caldecote, Weddington, Chilvers Coton, Attleborough, Bedworth, Woodlands, Collycroft, Griff, Bulkington, Barnacle, Ryton, Wolverhill, Bramcote, and Marston Jabbitt. Frederick Trotter Dinsdale, Esq., judge; Thos. Ball Troughton, Esq., clerk; Henry Dewes, Esq., assistant clerk; Mr. Isaac Nind Whitwell, high bailiff; and Mr. Wm. Ballard, sub-bailiff. The principal land-owners are Colonel Tomkinson, Sir A. J. Aston, Bart., and W. S. Dugdale, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor, and many others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a fine structure, exhibiting portions in the various styles of English architecture, and consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, separated by clustered columns and pointed arches, with square embattled tower, having pinnacles at the angles; the roof is of oak, divided into pannels, and richly ornamented with ribs and foliage ; it contains ancient monuments to the families of Trotman, Stratford, and a white marble tomb to Marmaduke Constable, which is much defaced. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £24. 14s. 7d., now £902., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Chapman Savage, M.A. Tithes,—the rectorial were emerged in the land at the time of the enclosure; Lord Harrowby is the lay impropriator: vicarial, commuted in 1842, at £611. 6s. 1d. The vicarage is a handsome and commodious residence near the Church. The Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans have each a place of worship here. A large handsome National School, in Church lane, with house for the master, and one for the mistresses, erected 1848, by subscription, and grants from the Privy Council and the National Society; will accommodate 300, and 200 infants, average 150, and 90 infants; Ebenezer Rand, master; Sarah Webster, mistress; and Mary Bacon, infant mistress. Another neat Infant School, erected at the Top of Abbey street, in the same year, with a house for the mistress; will accommodate 200, average 100; Mary Robinson, mistress.

Gas Works, erected 1836, in Wash lane, by a company holding 270 ten pound shares; Messrs. Clay, Green, and Thorne, are the present lessees. Union Workhouse, see Chilvers Coton parish, in which it is situated.

ATTLEBOROUGH, a hamlet, chapelry, and considerable village, half a mile south, contains 1,613a. 3r. 16p. of land; and, in 1841, 296 houses, and 1,095 inhabitants: this was entirely possessed by the nuns. It had formerly a Chapel for the convenience of the inhabitants, for the serving of which 100s. was allowed to a priest. At the dissolution it passed, with the monastery, to Sir Marmaduke Constable; not a fragment now remains of it. The Chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, erected 1842, is a neat brick building, in the early English style of architecture, with a small tower at the south-west angle, surmounted with a stone spire; cost £3,000., raised by subscriptions, and grants from the Commissioners for Building new Churches, £250.; the Incorporated Society, £300.; and the Archdeaconry of Coventry Society, £200.; will accommodate 500, 343 sittings are free. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £170.; patron, vicar of Nuneaton; Rev. Mesac Thomas, M.A., incumbent. A neat National School, for boys, girls, and infants, with house for the master, built 1848, cost £670.; Caleb and Jane Kerley, master and mistress. The Baptists have a small Chapel here.

Here is an extensive quarry of excellent free stone, which is sent to various parts of the kingdom; it is situated 2 miles S.E. from Nuneaton, and wrought by Mr. Joseph Barnwell.

STOCKINGFORD, a hamlet, chapelry, and large village, 1 mile W., contains 1,115a. 2r. 19p. of land; and, in 1841, 354 houses and 1,386 inhabitants. In the reign of Edward I. the nuns had a grange here, which was afterwards granted to the canons of Arbury, and, at the dissolution, passed, with the other possessions of that priory, to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. The Chapel, dedicated to St. Paul, erected 1818, by the Church Commissioners, is a neat edifice, with a low tower. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £120., in the patronage of the vicar of Nuneaton; Rev. J. F. Bickerdike, incumbent. Here is a National and Infant School adjoining the Chapel, established 1846. The Wesleyans have a small Chapel here.

CHARITIES.—Nuneaton Free Grammar School.—King Edward VI., by letters patent, 11th May, 1553, on the petition of the inhabitants of Nuneaton, founded this school for the instruction of boys and youths, in grammar; Marmaduke Constable, Knight, and 11 others were appointed the first governors, and made a body corporate, with power, in case of death, for the survivors to choose another out of the town and parish of Nuneaton; the said King granted to the governors three closes of land, with the appurtenances thereto, within the precincts of the city of Coventry, late belonging to the Guild of the Holy Trinity in that city; also, a parcel of land called the Moorfields, late belonging to the said Guild, and two parcels of land called Chesterleys and Bottom's Acre, late belonging to the said Guild; also those pastures called the Penny Fields, within the said precincts theretofore; part of the possessions of the Corpus Christi Guild, in the said city; and a croft of land there, all which premises then extended to the clear yearly value of £10. 15s. 8d., to be held in free socage, and power was given to the said governors to use a common seal, to plead, and be impleaded, and to appoint a master, who was to have £10. a year for his salary; and they were empowered to take lands not exceeding the clear yearly value of £20. over and above the lands granted. King William and Queen Mary, in 1694, confirmed, by letters patent, the possessions of this school, then become of the yearly value of £70., and directed that the master should receive £60. for his salary, when there should be no undermaster, and £50. only when there was one, and the undermaster £10. The entire rental of lands now amounts to £12. 10s., in addition to which the governors are possessed of a school-house and premises, with a large garden and smallcroft, containing, in the whole, 3r. 21p., situate on the south side of the church-yard at Nuneaton, for the master's occupation; also, on the north side the church, a large school, in two divisions; annexed to this is a bell-tower, in which there are two rooms, the lower being used by the master as a study, and the upper one for the meeting of the governors, besides which, the governors are possessed of mortgage interest, amounting to £68. 11s.; and dividends on £650. Three and a half per cent stock of £22. 15s., amounting, in the whole, to £304. 1s. The governors meet and dine together annually on the 14th of February, when two of their body are elected receivers and treasurers. In 1834, the expenditure amounted to £249. 7s. 9d., of which the head master received £50., the undermaster £45., and £70. had been paid for apprentice fees of seven boys, at £10. The master is required to receive any boy of Nuneaton, within the number of 45, being ten years of age and able to read; when admitted, the master places them in which school he chooses; he has usually about twenty in his own school, most of whom learn latin, are all taught geography, mathematics, writing, and accounts. The undermaster has usually from 25 to 30 boys in his school, who learn reading, writing, and accounts only.

Richard Smith, gent., by will, 1712, gave to his executors and trustees, all his land and tenements, &c., in the county of Warwick, upon trust, subject to an annuity of £20. for the life of Elizabeth Wingfield, to apply the rents and profits thereof towards the clothing and educating poor children inhabiting the parish of Nuneaton, as the trustees should think fit; and he ordered, after the death of the said Elizabeth Wingfield, that the said trustees would convey the said premises to such persons as they should appoint, for the use of the said poor children; and all the residue of his estate, both real and personal, he gave to his friends, Dr. John Gaskarth, Nicholas Owen, and Hy. Hargrave, and their heirs, to dispose of the same in such charitable and pious uses as they should think fit. The trustees, after Mr. Smith's death, with the residue of his property, purchased a tenement in Nuneaton, for £110., with another, and one quarter of a yard of land belonging thereto, situate in Chilvers Coton, in the county of Warwick; also, John Gaskarth and Nicholas Owen, as surviving executors, granted to Thomas Liptrott and five others, and their heirs, all the said several messuages, lands, and premises in Stockingford, Hartshill, and Anceley, the tenement in Nuneaton, in which the schoolmaster and the schoolmistress inhabited, and several messuages and premises in Chilvers Coton: to appoint a schoolmaster, to teach poor boys of the parish of Nuneaton to read the English tongue, to write, and cast accounts; and, also, to appoint a schoolmistress, to teach poor girls of Nuneaton to read, sew, knit, and spin; to pay to the schoolmaster the sum of £15., and the schoolmistress £11. clear salary, besides the residences in Nuneaton, by equal sums at Lady day and Michaelmas, yearly. From a great accession in the value of the property, the trustees applied to the Court of Chancery for directions as to the disposal of the income; and an order was made by the Lord Chancellor, 23rd May, 1831, after which a Report was made, and a scheme provided for the management. In 1820, it was discovered that a vein of manganese existed under the Hartshill farm, which had considerably increased the value of the property. The present income (1834,) of the estates is £119. 4s. 6d., besides which there is a sum of £2,146. 7s. 3d. in the Three and a half per cent. reduced annuities, purchased with accruing dividends to the amount of £312., and £1,262. received from the payment of £1. 5s. for every ton of manganese raised on the estate, from 1826 to 1834, and £740. previously raised. There are thirty boys on the foundation, and about 15 other boys, for whom a payment of 3d., 6d., or 8d. a week is made, according to the class of instruction given, in the whole amounting to about £15. a year. He also receives pay scholars from the town, and, besides his salary, a gratuity is given him of £10., and 30s. allowed for firing. The mistress teaches 30 girls reading and needlework, and, besides her salary, has 15s. for firing, with a gratuity of £4. The trustees meet half-yearly, on the 23rd December and 23rd June. Charles Parnell, master, and Mary Webb, mistress.

John Farmer, by will, gave a rent charge of £1. 1s. for the purchase of prayer books for the children of Smith's charity school; this sum is paid (1834) by Joshua Kelsey, the owner of a house on the west side of Church street, in Nuneaton, and expended as above.

William Willoughby, of Nuneaton, by will, 1587, devised certain sums for charitable purposes, of which the churchwardens receive annually, from Mr. Percy, of Nottingham, as the agent of J. P. Plumptre, Esq., £1.7s. 4d.; and every fifth year a further sum of £8. 6s. 8d.; of the first sum 10s. is laid out in coals, and equally divided among the inmates of the almshouses in the churchyard; 10s. is paid to the governors of the grammar school, to be laid out in books; and 7s. 4d. is paid to the surveyor of the highways for the maintenance of two causeways in Nuneaton, made by the testator. The latter amount is given in sums of 20s. each, to six poor men; £2. is given to four poor widows, 10s. each for a gown, and the remaining 6s. 8d. is paid to the curate, for a sermon on Whit Sunday.

Richard Orton, in 1677, gave to the governors of the free grammar school, land then let at £3. per annum, for the use of 12 poor men. The land has been divided by the canal. It contains about 5 acres, let (1834) to John Cross, at £12. per annum. An allotment of about three quarters of an acre, set out at the time of the enclosure of the Cottage piece, and commons in Nuneaton, which is now let for £2. 10s. a year. The sum of £40. was received from the Coventry Canal Company, for compensation for the land cut through, now in the hands of Mr. Thomas Robinson. The amount of the rents and interest, after allowing £1. towards the dinner of the governors, on the 14th of February, is distributed on that day, to poor persons, in sums of 5s. each. There is also a sum of £23. received in 1834 for timber; it is intended with this sum, and the £10. above-mentioned, to build a house on the allotment.

Wheatley's Charity. (see Coventry.)—The governors of the free grammar school receive annually £2. from this charity, given away to four poor decayed tradesmen, in sums of 10s. each.

Couney's Charity. (see Mancetter.) The churchwardens receive annually from the trustees of Hartshill school, £2. to be distributed on St. Thomas's day, and £2. for the like purpose on Good Friday, given to the most deserving poor.

Edward Loader gave 12s. yearly, charged on a house in Abbey street, Nuneaton; now a grocer's shop (1834) occupied by John Marston; it is given in sums of 2s., to six poor labourers.

Symond's Charity. (see Atherstone.)—The churchwardens of Nuneaton receive the sum of £17. 6s. 8d., which is expended in placing out three boys apprentice; or, if no application for apprentices, the money has been given in bread. This parish is also entitled to receive one third of a rent-charge of £5.

Mr. Smith, by deed, 1704, gave 12s. yearly, to be distributed to six poor widows, on St. Thomas's Day, chargeable on a house, belonging (1834) to John Warner, grocer, extending from the market place to Abbey street.

Robert Bratt gave the sum of £14., the interest thereof to buy a poor man a coat against Easter Sunday. This money was carried to the parish account, and the coat is bought annually, of 14s. value, for a poor man.

Edward Stratford, Esq., of Nuneaton, gave £3. yearly, to be distributed to six poor men, in the beginning of May; this distribution was made as early as 1727.

Francis Stratford, of London, gave £200., the interest for the benefit of six poor persons, to be distributed to six poor people on Candlemas day. The tenants of Dugdale Stratford Dugdale, Esq., in Nuneaton, pay the above sums.

Elizabeth Farmer, 1819, gave the interest of £20. to be distributed on St. Thomas's day, yearly, to four poor widows; this money was advanced to the trustees of the Market house, who pay 20s. interest.

Highways.—The sum of 19s. 6d. is annually paid from a house in Church street, occupied by Mrs. Cradock, applied to the Highways.

Almshouses.—a building in the Church yard, adjoining the school, consisting of four tenements; the inmates are placed there by the churchwardens, but have no endowment except Willoughby's, noticed before.

John Farmer, in 1744, gave £30., the interest to be given to six poor tradesmen, on Christmas day. The returns of 1786, state, of this sum £21. was never paid, but that £9. was in the hands of the overseers. Nothing is now paid.

Mary Farmer, of London, by the benefaction table, is stated to have given £20., the interest to be given to poor women, on Christmas day. This is lost.

Miss Trotman.—The returns of 1786, mention a gift of 12s. a year to the poor by this lady, which had not then been paid for 20 years, nor since.

SHUSTOCK, a parish and small scattered village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.N.E. from Colehill, contains, with the hamlets of Bentley and Blythe, 3,763 acres of land; and, in 1841, 644 inhabitants, 1801, 496; 1821, 576; 1831, 634; rateable value £5592. 16s. 6d. The township of Shustock contains 1927 acres of land, and in 1841, 73 houses, and 378 inhabitants; rateable value, £3885. This village derives no mean celebrity from the circumstance of that eminent historian and antiquary, Sir William Dugdale, having been born in the rectory house here. At the Conquest, it was possessed by Geoffry de Wirce, and descended, through the several families of Mowbray, Camvill, Essay, Despenser, and Clinton, to Walter Aston, of Tixall, whose grandson sold it to Sir George Devereux, Knight, of Sheldon. The principal land-owners are W. S. Dugdale, Esq., and Mrs. Dorothy Croxall; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient stone edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, and gallery, and contains several beautiful marble monuments; one to the memory of Sir William Dugdale, Knight; with square embattled tower, containing five bells, and surmounted with a neat spire. The living, a discharged vicarage, V.K.B. £5. 7s., now £258., augmented with £200. Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of the crown, and intumbency of the Rev. George Salmon, B.A., for whom the Rev. R. K. Haslehurst, M.A., officiates. The vicarage is a neat residence, at the east end of the village.

BENTLEY, a township, chapelry, and small scattered village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. from Atherstone, contains 1836 acres, 2 roods 25 perches of land; and, in 1841, 49 houses and 266 inhabitants; W. S. Dugdale, Esq., is lord of the manor, and principal owner. The Chapel, dedicated to St. John, erected 1836, consists of nave, chancel, with embattled tower. Rev. Thos. Jackson, officiating curate.

BLYTHER, a small hamlet, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles, E.N.E. from Coleshill, containing a few houses and the Hall; a large brick mansion pleasantly situated; the property of W. S. Dugdale, Esq., and the residence of Col. Arbuthnot.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Hunthach, by will, 1709, bequeathed to the maintenance of a school, which he had built, and six almshouses, for poor widows, or others fallen into poverty, £20., to be paid yearly out of the rents and profits of the house and lands therein named, viz. the moat house, outbuildings, orchards, and gardens, the orchard field, the two meadows, the three broad fields, the two crofts, the higher Hudsford, and the Wood, all of which he had purchased for that purpose, to be let to the best advantage, to pay £8. to the school; and £12. to the almshouses, viz. 40s. to each house; desiring the vicar, churchwardens, and overseers for the time being, should see his will performed, allowing them 10s. yearly for their trouble. If any overplus money should accrue, he directed it might be laid out in repairs. The moat house farm, as above named, contains 33 acres, let at the rent £38. per annum. The land tax was redeemed in 1799, for the sum of £46. 19s. 4d.; and various repairs have been done from the sale of timber from the estate, leaving, in 1834, a balance in hand of £228. 17s. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$. The schoolmaster, David Davies, receives a salary of £35. a year, and in respect thereof takes all the children of the parish and of the hamlet of Bentley, both boys and girls, average about forty. They are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic. The school adjoins the almshouses, and was rebuilt in 1844. The almshouses consist of six tenements, three fronting to the east, and three to the west of two rooms each, with a garden. The six almspeople, three of each sex, appointed by the vicar and churchwardens, from among the poor of the parish, receive 10 guineas equally between them, at Lady Day and Michaelmas.

Town House. An entry in the parish register, 1656, records an arrangement concerning this house, occupied in two dwellings. It now consists of three tenements with a garden in which paupers are placed (1834) by the parish. Also, a fourth house which is let for £2 per annum, paid to the churchwardens and overseers, and carried to the poor and church-rate.

Kingsbury Meadow contains from 20 to 30 acres, and is held in doles or half doles by different proprietors; the land is mown every year, and a whole dole, estimated at $\frac{2}{3}$ of an acre, is considered worth £2. per annum. The overseers are said to be entitled to half a dole only, for which they receive £1. per annum.

William Hollier, by will, 1614, gave his son, Edmund Hollier, a cottage adjoining to Gennitt's croft, that he and his heirs should pay to the poor of Shustock, the sum of 5s. yearly, on the day of St. Matthew the Apostle. Thomas Adams, the present owner of the cottage (1834), pays the 5s. annually.

George Pinder, by will, 1658, gave to the poor of Shustock 7s., to be given them yearly, on St. Thomas's day, out of the Calder crofts, now (1834,) the property of William Stratford Dugdale, Esq.

* * The proceeds of Hollier's and Pinder's charities have, with that of the Kingsmead dole, been appropriated to the repairs of the Town Houses, which is clearly improper; for, according to the parish register, the Kingsbury dole ought to be employed for the use of the poor, and it may be doubted whether the Town Houses are to be considered parish property.

Dame Elizabeth Dugdale, who died 1713, gave an annual rent-charge of 12s., to be issuing out of a piece of ground or garden, lying on the north side of St. Michael's Church, Coventry, for the repair of a monument and vault, erected on the south side of the communion table, in the chancel of the parish church of Shustock; and she desired that if any part thereof should not be expended in such repairs, it should be yearly distributed by the minister and churchwardens to the poor, except 2s. to be paid yearly to the clerk of the parish for keeping the monument clean. The money is regularly paid.

Unknown.—In the parish register of 1656, is a memorandum stating that 10d. is paid yearly from the Hall Meadow, in the parish of Arley, for the poor of the parish of Shustock.

HAMLET OF BENTLEY.—Some person unknown gave £7. to the poor of Bentley. A sum of £7. is secured on the turnpike road leading from Atherstone to Coleshill, the treasurer of which pays 7s. annually. This is known by the name of the hanging money, from the tradition that it was given by a resident in the parish, who received a reward to that amount for prosecuting a felon to conviction.

Thomas Power gave £5. to the poor of this hamlet. The sum of 5s. used to be given annually, in books to the poor, by the late Thomas Power; since his death nothing has been received.

Directory.—Shustock, Colonel Arbuthnot, Blythe Hall; Arthur Bush, carpenter; Wm. Bush, vict., Plough; Mrs. Dorothy Crosscall, Blythe; David & Catherine Davies, free school; John Gibson, vict., Griffin Inn; Rev. Rd. Kay Haslehurst, M.A., curate; Wm. Walker Stevenson, and Rd. Stevenson, farmers.

WEDDINGTON, a small parish and pleasant village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Nuneaton, contains 880 acres of land: and, in 1841, 11 houses, and 77 inhabitants; rateable value, £1820. This was given by the Conqueror to Earl Mellent, whose brother Henry de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, succeeded to his possessions. In the reign of Henry I., the lordship was held by the family of Astley, and continued until the male line became extinct, when "it passed with the manor of Astley to the family of Grey;" the lands were enclosed and depopulated, by Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset, in the 7th of Henry VII. In the time of Elizabeth, Humphrey Adderley, Esq., purchased the lordship. Here is a handsome commodious family mansion, in the Tudor style, is at present undergoing considerable repairs, the property of Henry Dewes, Esq., unoccupied. The principal land owners are Henry Seymour, Esq., Mr. John Taylor, Rev. Samuel B. Heming, and lord of the manor, Mr. Swinnerton, Miss Sandford and Henry Dewes, Esq. The Church, dedicated to St. James, is a small brick edifice, consisting of nave and chancel. The living, a rectory, value in K.B., £8. 10s. 0½d., now £330., Rev. S. B. Heming, patron; and Rev. Geo. Wm. Sandford, M. A., intumbent. The Trent Valley railway intersects this parish.

Directory.—Rev. Geo. Wm. Sandford, M. A., rector; Chas. Sprigg, Rt. Swinnerton, and timber merchant; John Taylor, and Rd. Wood, farmers.

WHITACRE, (NETHER,) a parish and scattered village, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles N. E. from Coleshill, contains 1,926 acres of land, and, in 1841, 110 houses, and 503 inhabitants; 1801, 360; 1821, 408; 1831, 413; rateable value, £3,114. 18s. 2½d. Soon after the Conquest, this was granted to the Marmions, one of whom, Robert, re-granted it to William Fitz-Ralph, and Dugdale supposes that he, or some of his descendants, resided here, one of whom conveyed it, by marriage, to Robert, the younger brother of Philip Marmion, and, in the 14th of Edward II., conveyed a portion of it to Ralph, Lord Basset. The other portion of it went to William de Clinton, Earl of Huntingdon. After this time, the descent of the manor becomes perplexed, but, in the 18th of Elizabeth, all its parts were centred in Henry Cheney, who conveyed it the same year, to John Purefoy, and afterwards to Charles Jennens. The principal owners are now Mr. Thos. Biddle, Mr. Chas. Clarke, Mr. Chas. Fawkes and Lord Howe, who is also lord of the manor; and several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Giles, consists of nave, chancel, and square tower, in which there are three bells; the church contains two beautiful monuments to Chas. Jennens and Thos. Wright. The living, a perpetual curacy, V. K. B. £3. 3s. 3d., now £333., augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty; Earl Howe, patron; Rev. Wm. Bradley, M. A., incumbent; The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. The Birmingham and Derby branch of the Midland Railway intersects this parish, and has a neat station.

Charles Jennens, Esq., of Gopsal, in the county of Leicester, by will, 1765, gave to Edward, Viscount Wentworth, and seven others, two several sums of £1,000., to be paid to them within six months after his decease, on trust, to be applied, after necessary expenses, in manner following:—the interest of one of the sums of £1,000. to such person or persons as should read catechetical lectures, in some church or chapel, within five miles distance of his mansion house, to be nominated by the owner thereof; and the net produce of the interest of the other sum of £1,000. to be paid, in equal proportions, to the schoolmasters or schoolmistresses to the several townships of Twycross and Whitacre, and of Shackerston, in the county of Leicester. Earl Howe is the owner of the Gopsall estate, and has always been considered the sole trustee. The agent states that the above two sums are considered as charges on the estate, and that he has always paid interest for the lecturer, at four per cent., alternately, to the rector of Congeston, and the vicar of Orton-cum-Twycross. In respect of the second sum, £16. 13s. 4d., being one-third of £50., the interest at five per cent., is received, by half-yearly payments of £8. 6s. 8d., by the incumbent of this parish, from the agent of Earl Howe, and paid to the master of the National School, which is open to all the poor of the parish. His salary is made up to £35. by subscriptions from Lord and Lady Howe, and other proprietors of the parish. Wm. Green, master.

John Broughton gave 12s. to be paid out of the Plumpton Suit estate, in this parish, to be distributed amongst the poor, annually, on Easter Monday.

John Birch gave 20s., to be paid yearly, out of a piece of land called Fruitful or Woodstill, lying near Little Sutton, in the parish of Sutton Coldfield, to be given to the poor on Christmas day; and the other part in books, for the use of those poor children who have most need.

WHITACRE, (OVER,) a small parish and pleasant rural village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. N. E. from Coleshill, containing 1,346 acres of land, and, in 1841, 76 houses, and 330 inhabitants; in 1801, 209; 1821, 292; 1831, 228; rateable value, £1,602. 14s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Soon after the Conquest, this became the property of the Marmions, who, in the reign of Henry I., enfeoffed the ancestor of Simon de Whitacre in the same, and the manor continued in that line until the end of the reign of Edward III., when it was conveyed, by heiresses, to Walsh and Hore, and from Walsh, by marriage, to Sir Thomas Poultney, Knight, his cousin; whose descendents alienated the same, in the reign of Elizabeth, to John Miller, of Whitacre. The principal owners are Mr. Wm. Wilson, Mr. John Smith, Mr. Edwd. Weston, Mr. Jas. Weston, Rev. Ralph Greenside, and several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, situated on an eminence, consists of nave, chancel, and square tower, surmounted by a handsome spire. The living is a donative, rated at £142. augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £400. Queen Anne's bounty. Earl Digby, patron; and Rev. Ralph Greenside, incumbent. The Parsonage is a neat residence, on a commanding eminence.

CHARITIES.—William, Lord Digby, for many years gave 20s. to buy pious books for the poor of this parish. The Rev. Mr. Morrall, the minister, deposited in the hands of the said Lord Digby £40., the interest to be paid, yearly, for teaching six poor children of the parish to read English, and to write. And Anthony Nicholson gave, by will, 1727, £20., the interest to be distributed yearly, on Christmas day, amongst the poor of the parish. These sums were laid out in 1740, in the purchase of the Broad croft, and the Floodgate meadow. Lord Digby paid for the writings, and drained and trenched the meadow, and they were let for £4. The Broad croft is let for £8. per annum, subject to a land tax of 5s. 10d.; and the Floodgate meadow, containing about one and a half acres, for £5. per annum, subject to a land tax of 3s. 2d. These rents are received by the churchwardens, and applied to the above gifts; of which sum, £5. is paid for the education of eight poor children.

James Du Fresney, of Arley Hall, by will, 1740, gave £10. to the poor of this parish, to be distributed in bread on St James's day. Paid by the late Rev. Robert Sadler.

Thomas Miller, in 1726, gave £10. to the poor. The Rev. Robert Sadler paid 10s. a year, as interest, to the time of his death, in 1830; since which, Edward Sadler, Esq., of Sutton Coldfield, his sole executor, has undertaken to pay the parish officers the above two sums.

Thomas Devitt gave 10s. yearly, out of certain lands called Devitt's Flanders, in Kingsbury parish, for preaching a sermon, in Over Whitacre church, every Whitsuntide. The tenants of Sir Robert Peel, Bart., the owner of the lands, pay the sum to the churchwardens for the curate, who preaches a sermon on Whit-Sunday.

Rev. Arthur Miller, by will, 1779, gave to the minister and churchwardens, and their successors, £100., in trust, out of the interest to pay 5s. each to 20 poor objects of charity. The Rev. Arthur Grammar Miller, the son of the donor, who died in 1832, held the money. Mr. Charles Wheatman was his executor. The interest has been regularly paid, and distributed on Whit-Sunday and Christmas day.

Unknown Donor.—In the returns of 1786, a payment of 10d. per annum, is said to be vested in Richard Geast. This is paid from Hall's Meadow, in Shustock, the property of William Stratford Dugdale, Esq., and paid by his tenant.

Directory.—Jno. Adderley, shoemaker; Edw. Birch, bricklayer; Edw. Dyke, mason and vict., Owl Inn; Hy. Gender, vict. & joiner, Bull's Head; Rev. Ralph Greenside, incumbent; Jno. Mason, butcher; Wm. Matthews, wheelwright; Mrs Eliz. Messenger, Jph. Moore, blacksmith; Mrs. Eliz. Morewood, Rev. Thos. Warding, Arthur Wm. Watson, architect. The Farmers are Geo. Aucott, Thos. Cheshire, and shopkr.; Wm. Devitt, Jph. Earp, Isaac Messenger, John Mould, John Smith, Holt Hall; Thos. Smith, Arthur Watson, and miller; Hy. Watson, Edwd. Weston, The Hall; Jas. Weston; Wm. Wilson, Mansion House; and John Wright.

THE BIRMINGHAM DIVISION

Forms the west part of the hundred, running with a point to Birmingham, meeting the county of Stafford to the north, and that of Worcester to the south; and comprises six parishes, 5 chapelries, and 1 township, viz:—Aston, juxta Birmingham, Castle Bromwich, chap.; Little Bromwich, chap.; Eardington, chap.; Saltley and Washwood, chap.; Water Orton, chap.; Coleshill, Curdworth, Minworth township, Sheldon, Sutton Coldfield, and Wishaw: 26,050 acres of land; in 1841, 2,909 inhabited houses, 136 uninhabited, and 33 building, with 15,538 inhabitants, of whom 7,915 were males, 7,623 females, of these numbers, 3,574 males, 3,455 females, were under 20 years of age; 4,341 males, 4,168 females, were 20 years old and upwards; 11,611 persons were born in this county, and 3,927 elsewhere.

ASTON parish, (History of) see page 71 to 78, Directory, 402 to 404.

COLESHILL, a small market town and parish, pleasantly situated on the acclivity and summit of an eminence, rising gradually from the river Cole, over which is a neat brick bridge, of six arches, leading into the town, 10 miles E. from Birmingham, 10 S.W. from Atherstone, 18 N. by W. from Warwick, and $103\frac{1}{2}$ N.W. from London. The town consists principally of one long street, from the centre of which, a shorter one of considerable width, diverges towards the church, and affords a convenient area for the market place, in which is a portico of brick: the houses are, in general, well built, several of them are handsome, and of modern date: the inhabitants are amply supplied with water from springs, and from the rivers Thame and Blyth, which run through the parish. Soon after the Conquest, this place was in the possession of Geoffrey de Clinton, from which family the lordship passed by marriage to the Mountforts, but on the attainder of Sir Simon Mountfort, and confiscation of his immense property, the manor was granted to Simon Digby, deputy constable to the tower, the man who had officially conducted him to the bar at his trial. Digby, the new lord, built a mansion in the vicinity of the town; and Robert, Lord Digby, in the 20th of James I., obtained new charters for a weekly market, and two yearly fairs. It appears, from an ancient record, that, at an early period, there was a castle here. The park was on the west side of the town, and, in a very low part of it stood the very ancient mansion, probably the erection of the Mountforts, in its original state: the Digby family deserted it about the middle of the 18th century, and very early in the 19th, the venerable remains were wholly taken down. The present Earl Digby takes the title of Viscount from this town. This parish contains 5,676 acres of land, and, in 1841, 439 inhabited houses, 19 uninhabited, and four building, with 2,172 inhabitants; 1801, 1,437; 1821, 1,760; 1831, 1,858; rateable value, £7,613. 9s. 4½d. The principal land owners are, Earl Digby and Rev. John Digby Wingfield; the former is lord of the manor; there are also a great many small owners. The Market is on Wednesday, which is well supplied with corn, poultry, provisions, &c.; and fairs are held on the first Monday in January, for cattle and sheep; Shrove Monday, for horses, which is the principal fair; May 6th, first Monday in July, and the first Monday after September 25th. all for cattle.

Petty Sessions are held by the county magistrates, every alternate Wednesday, at the lock-up, in High street, which is a substantial brick building, erected 1845; the following gentlemen generally attend:—Earl of Aylesford, Vicount Lifford, Capt. Dilke, R.N., C. B. Adderley, Esq., and W. C. Alston, Esq.; John Shaw, Esq., clerk.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is an ancient and spacious structure, in the decorated style of English architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, gallery, in which is a good organ, with a lofty tower containing six bells, and surmounted by an octagonal spire. In the chancel are some ancient and beautiful monuments to the Digby family. The living is a vicarage, V.K.B. £10. 18s. 6½d., now £718.; Earl Digby, patron; and Rev. John Digby Wingfield, M.A., incumbent. The Vicarage is a large neat residence near the Church.

The Independents and Wesleyans have each a Chapel here.

Gilson, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N.W., consists of a few scattered farms.

The Birmingham and Derby Railway crosses this parish, and has a station one mile north, which is called Forge Mills Station; James Copson, station master.

CHARITIES.—Grammar School.—By an inquisition, taken 18th March, 10th of James I., under a commission of charitable uses, it was found, that a messuage, with the appurtenances thereto belonging, standing on the churchyard side, wherein a free school was used to be kept, with much other property, rent charges, &c., existed, and were in the hands of feoffees, of which considerable portions had been, originally, for superstitious uses, the saying of Paternosters for the souls of the dead, of obits, for wax to burn before the cross of the church, at the time of mass, &c. Of these, Alice Digby, by deed of feoffment, 1520, granted to Thomas Digby, Esq., the vicar of Coleshill, and nine others, certain premises, of the value of 38s. 8d.; and a rent, out of certain lands, of 6s. 8d. to hold the same on trust, &c., for certain superstitious uses, and, as such, afterwards forfeited, but, by some of the family, restored, for the use of a school, the income of which is now £10. per annum. Richard Chapman, by deed, 37th Henry VII., granted to John Grene and nine others, all his lands and tenements in Coleshill, &c.; and from the rents to distribute 4s. 4d. for the use of poor persons, in a place called Chapmans, in which a man and his wife should dwell, to take care of the poor there; 2s. for wax, to burn during mass; 12d. for an obit, &c. for the souls of himself, his wife, and their fathers and mothers; and 4d. to the vicar, for the Bede Roll; the remainder to be for works of charity.

George Butler, by will, 1591, gave his house, at the lower end of Coleshill, called the Almshouse, also, a house and land in Gilson, for the uses following:—that the rents thereof should be employed to keep the said Almshouse in repair, and buy furniture when wanting; that the feoffees, or constables with their consent, might lodge any poor travellers, that should desire it, in the almshouse; that some person be permitted to dwell there, rent free, to look after the house, and take care of the poor lodgers; and the overplus of rent to some charitable use. This house has been rebuilt, and, in the course of one year, 1,300 travellers have received the benefit of this charity, by one night's lodging.

William Harvey, by will, 1679, declared that a house, built by him, should for ever remain a habitation for poor widows, of the parish of Coleshill, as the feoffees of the school lands should think fit to place in the said houses. The vicar of Coleshill, for the time being, is always considered as a trustee. The total rents of the Grammar School trust amount to £179. 7s. 5d. There is also a sum of £1,200. Three per cent. consols, producing £36. per annum, making a total income of £215. 7s. 5d. Within the twenty years previous to 1834, it appears that upwards of £1670. was received for timber sold, by part of which the above stock had been purchased. The School consists of an upper and lower room: the upper room is used as the classical, and the lower as the English and writing school. The master's house was, in 1824, new roofed, and thoroughly repaired, at a cost of nearly £1,000., including the building of the school rooms, which adjoin and communicate with the house. The master is required to teach the classics to all boys sent to him, by a note in writing, signed by three trustees. In the lower school, boys are admitted as soon as they can read the New Testament. The boys in the upper school have the liberty of attending in the lower school. No entrance money is paid. The total expenditure is given as £180., of which sum the head master receives £80. besides the house and garden, &c.; the second master receives £70. but he has no residence. Rev. Philip Roberts, M. A. head master; Wm. Tite, English master. Coals for the schools, and for the Travellers' Rest, £12.; annual dinners, £8.; Paternoster dole, now given to children for saying the catechism, £3.; with other small items.

Simon, Lord Digby, by will, left the sum of £500. to William, Lord Digby, and John Kettlewell, in trust, to be disposed of to such pious and charitable uses as they should think fit, and, as soon as might be, invested in purchasing lands in fee simple, to be employed to the purposes following, or such of them as the said William, Lord Digby, or his heirs, or owners of Coleshill Hall, and the incumbent of Coleshill, and any trustee, or two of them, should appoint, viz.—£2. 10s. to buy bibles, common prayer books, &c. for the poor; £5. in physic, and things necessary to recover health, &c.; £5. for clothes for widows and poor housekeepers, &c.; and £4. in teaching poor girls to read, spin, knit, and sew, &c.; and in teaching the sons of such poor persons to write and cast accounts, &c.; and employing £6. for setting out, yearly, one poor boy, &c., apprentice. This charity was invested with the following.

Offalia Rawlins, widow, by will, 1687, bequeathed the residue of her goods and estates to charitable uses, at the discretion of John Kettlewell, her executor. £100. appears to have been available to this charity, the executor covenanting with Lord Digby and the trustees of the Digby charity, to lay out the money in lands; or till then that the rents and profits of the land, and till the purchase the interest to be employed to the uses following, or some of them, viz.; every three succeeding years, £1. 10s., to buy bibles, prayer books, &c.; and in the first of the three years to employ £1. in instructing poor girls and the sons of poor people; any residue of the product of the said first year to be carried on for the raising £6. for apprenticing a poor boy, and in the third year of each successive three years, to employ £3. for clothes for poor widows. By deed, 1689, it was recited that William, Lord Digby, had purchased for £752. 17s. the fee simple and inheritance of a fee farm rent of £35. 17s., out of the manor of Curdworth, in the county of Warwick, and had settled £31. per annum, part of the said rent, to the uses of the said charities, in lieu and satisfaction of the said sum of £600.; that is, £26. part thereof to the uses of Lord Digby's charity; and £5. thereof to that of Mrs. Offalia Rawlins, and the £4. 17s. residue of the above said rent charge to such uses as the said William Lord Digby should appoint, or to his heirs and assigns. This residue of £4. 17s. was, in 1730, given by Lord Digby to the girls' school.

Thomas Everett, by will, 1712, gave to his brother, John Everett, his two tenements in Coleshill, to hold to him during his life, and after his death, bequeathed them to the use of the poor of Coleshill for ever. By indenture, 1717, John Everett granted to Lord William Digby, the vicar of Coleshill, and others, at his decease, the two cottages and other property for the use of the poor. Since 1800, this charity is mixed with the accounts of Lord Digby's and Mrs. Rawlin's charities, in addition to the funds of the girls' school.

Gustavus Brooke, by indenture, 1761, for settling the yearly sum of 40s. for and towards clothing poor people of Coleshill, granted to Henry, Lord Digby, and his heirs, for ever, a yearly rent charge of 40s. to be issuing out of the Dog lane croft and Peplew croft, in Coleshill; and, by the said indenture, confirmed to Simon, Lord Digby's, feoffees; and now forms one account with the girls' school.

The Girls' School.—Michaelmas, 1708. The Right Hon. Lord Digby gave a house, and fitted up the same for a school, and subscribed £5., with other subscriptions, amounting to £27.17s., which being uncertain, the following additions were made to it, viz.:—John Everett revoked his former gift, and gave to the trustees the said property, consisting of three dwellings with the appurtenances, &c., to the use of this school, now of the yearly value of £6.17s. There are small gardens attached, but the premises are old, and partly untenable, (1834.) William, Lord Digby, by indenture, 1730, gave the residue of a rent charge, before-mentioned, of £4.17s., to the use of this school. And further reciting that John Adamson, by will, directed that £20. should be placed out for the use of the poor of Coleshill, of which sum only £15. was recovered, the interest to be given in bread. Also, that Margery Orton, by her will, gave £10., to be vested in the said trustees. It is also recited that Lord Digby did release, and sell to Digby Coates, the vicar, for the £15. above-named, a messuage, used for a charity school for girls, with two messuages, an acre of meadow ground, and also another tenement, &c., and the above-named rent charge of £4.17s. for the uses of the said girls' school, &c. In 1770, Henry, Lord Digby, by indenture, conveyed to the Rev. William Digby, dean of Worcester, and vicar of Coleshill, and others, certain premises, to be used as the said girls' school, in exchange for the old school, then become dilapidated, &c. Mr. Gustavus Long, by will, bequeathed £10. for the use of the said school; he died 1st June, 1715, Lord Digby being his executor. The interest, at five per cent., is now paid by Lord Digby's steward. By the enclosure award of this parish, 1782, an allotment was awarded to the trustees of the girls' school, in lieu of open field land, and ten common rights, containing 14a. 13p. The income of the charities connected with the girls' school trust amounts to £70. 15s. 7d.; and the expenditure to £51. 8s. 2d.; of which the schoolmistress receives £12., and £2. is allowed for coals; £22. 4s. 10d. expended in ten coats, for men, and ten gowns, for women; 15s. for bread; £2. 10s. for bibles and religious books; and £6. as an apprentice fee; 18s. 8d. is paid for land tax, chief rents, and stamps. In 1833, there was a balance in hand of £90. 13s. 9d., which it was intended to apply to the improvement of the school. About 20 girls, under the age of 14, are taught to read and sew, and do plain work, and regularly attend divine service in the church. This school is now taught on the National plan. The present school is a neat brick building, erected 1836, in High street; Elizabeth Proctor, mistress. The National School, for boys, is a large brick building, situate in High street, will accommodate 150; average, 32. There is also a large infant school attached, which will accommodate 160; average, 25. Henry and Emily Mitchell, master and mistress; who receive a salary of £50. per annum.

Thomas Hunbach, by will, 1652, left a messuage, and certain lands, situated in Nether Whitacre, for the use and benefit of the poor of Coleshill, on trust to certain trustees.

Richard Wise, of Gilson, in Coleshill, by indenture, 1655, conveyed to trustees, certain lands, containing about three quarters of an acre, in Coleshill, for the use of the poor of the said parish, known by the name of the Smock Gussett, for which, 3s. a year was paid as rent till the inclosure, when it was allotted to the vicar, forming part of a field. The property derived from Hunbach consists of a house, barn, garden, and two closes, called the Large Croft and the Little Croft, containing 3a. 3r. 17p. in Nether Whitacre, let for £11. per annum, which is given away by the churchwardens and trustees, on Friday in Easter week, in sums varying from 1s. to 2s. 6d. to the poor.

Mrs. Mantell, by will, 1754, left £20. to the poor of this parish. This sum, 1833, is in the Atherstone Savings' Bank, and the interest is distributed with Hunbach's charity, CURDWORTH, a parish and small scattered village, 3 miles N.W. by N. from Coleshill, containing with the township of Minworth, 3263 acres of land, and, in 1841, 693 inhabitants; in 1801, 452; 1821, 555; rateable value, £5164: Curdworth township contains 1713 acres of land, 60 houses, and 364 inhabitants; rateable value, £3614., this was anciently called Arden, and a family who resided at Park Hall in this parish, assumed their surname from it. One of these, (Edward), was executed for treason, in the 27th of Elizabeth, and his estate confiscated, but afterwards recovered by his son Robert. The principal land owners are Lord Leigh, Lord Digby, B. P. G. C. Noel, Esq., C. B. Adderley, Esq., and the Rev. Wm. Wakefield; the three latter are lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, consists of nave and chancel, which are divided by a fine Saxon arch, with tower, in which are three bells. The living, a vicarage, value in K. B., £5., now £300.: patrons, alternately B. P. G. C. Noel, Esq., C. B. Adderley, Esq., and Rev. Wm. Wakefield, M. A., who also enjoys the benefice. The vicarage is a neat residence, near the Church.

Minworth, a township and small well built village, 4 miles N.W. by W. from Coleshill, contains 1550 acres of land, and in 1841, 60 houses and 329 inhabitants; 1801, 291; 1831, 324; rateable value, £1,550.; this was, from the time of the Conquest, to the extinction of the Arden family, held with Curdworth. Geo. Wakefield, Esq., is the principal owner.

SHELDON, a parish and scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Coleshill, containing 2514 acres of land, and, in 1841, 101 houses, and 487 inhabitants; 1801, 365; 1821, 432; 1831, 422; rateable value, £5324. 16s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. The manor was principally held by a family of the name of Sheldon, from the reign of Henry I. or II., until that of Edward III., after which time they passed through the families of Peto, Basset, Stafford, Shirley, and Grey, a member of which last named family sold them to Sir George Digby, whose posterity still possess it. Lord Digby is lord of the manor and principal owner. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, principally in the decorated style, consists of nave, chancel, and north aisle, with square tower. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books, at £8. 10s. 10d., now £389. Earl Digby, patron; and Rev. B. J. Bateman, B.A., incumbent. The rectory is a good residence near the church. Tile Cross, 3 miles W. from Coleshill; here stood a wooden cross, round which a market was held during the plague in Birmingham. The London and Birmingham railway, and the Warwick canal intersect this parish.

CHARITIES for poor and school. By a deed-poll, 1544, Richard Smallbrook, of Birmingham, in consideration of a certain sum of money, paid to him by Henry Brown and Thomas Sharman, churchwardens of Sheldon, granted to them and their successors, churchwardens of the said parish, all his lands, meadows, &c. within the lordship of Sheldon, to the use of all the poor parishioners. By an indenture 1563, John Ballonett, of Sheldon, granted to John Eido and others, a cottage and garden formerly belonging to Nicholas Chamberlaine, Aslemoor meadows, and various other lands, to hold the same to certain charitable uses. Besides which, Rev. Henry Rodes, late rector, gave £9., the interest to be given to the poor, on Good Friday, after morning prayer. Susanna Dunton gave £3., the interest to be given in bread, to the poor on Whit Tuesday. Thomas Hall gave £10., the interest to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day, after morning prayer. Sir George Devereux gave £20., the interest to be distributed on Good Friday, after morning prayer. Agnes Bray, by will, 1729, gave the sum of £30. to the minister and churchwardens, to be placed out on good security, the interest to be distributed to poor widows of this parish. Elizabeth Compson, by will, bequeathed to the poor of Sheldon, the sum of £5., the interest for poor widows.

By indenture, 1730, William, Lord Digby, desirous of perpetuating a charity school which had been some time established in Sheldon, in consideration of the sum of £42., conveyed to Edward Digby and others, a parcel of land called Clare croft, and a parcel of ground called Bonell's meadow, on the river Cole, a parcel of land called Molehay and Lane's end, in Sheldon, on trust, that they, their heirs, &c. should, out of the rents, pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor the several sums, as above named, to the use of the poor, and pay the overplus of the rents to the schoolmaster of the said charity school, to teach ten poor children of the manor of Marston Culy, to be nominated by the rector of Sheldon. The rents of the estates amount to £40. 10s.; of which sum £30. 2s. is paid to Edward Newhall, schoolmaster, by quarterly payments, and the remainder distributed to the poor in money, by the vicar, and some of the principal farmers at this time contribute to the distribution. The school is kept in a room adjoining the church, over which is a library; all the poor children are entitled to instruction gratis. The schoolmaster also receives £6. as the dividend upon £200. South sea annuities of 1751. Also, £2. 2s. is annually received from Lord Digby, as the interest of £42., held on a promissory note, dated 27th May, 1796, and given to the poor on St. Thomas's day, usually in sums of 1s. each. The sum of £39. 5s., by the last indenture of the charities, 1812, stated to be in the hands of the Rev. Robert Digby, Rector of Sheldon, cannot be accounted for.

Mary Sheldon, by will, 1826, gave to the ministers and churchwardens for the time being of the parish of Sheldon, £650. upon trust to invest the same in their names, in the public funds, and to distribute the interest in blue coats and cloaks, and other warm clothing, to the aged poor on St. Thomas's day. The above sum was reduced by the income-tax to £585., which was invested, in 1826, in the purchase of £656. 7s. 7d. Three and a half reduced annuities, producing £22. 19s. 4d. per annum, and distributed by the minister and churchwardens to about 50 poor persons, in cloaks, blankets, flannel, and sheeting.

Directory.—John Andrews, corn miller, Hill Horton and Babb's Mills; Rev. B. J. Bateman, B.A., rector; John Berwick, shoemaker; S. Bray, solicitor, The Cottage; Thos. Harvey, and builder; John Marson, John Mayou, John Newbley, Thos. Reaves, Robt. Thornley, Geo. Wells, and William Wells.

SUTTON COLDFIELD, a neat market town, borough, and extensive parish, 7 miles N. by E. from Birmingham, 26 N.W. by N. from Warwick, and 110 N.W. by N. from London; containing 13,030 acres of land, and, in 1841, 834 inhabited houses, 49 uninhabited, and 4 building, with 4,300 inhabitants; 1801, 2,847; 1821, 3,466; 1831, 3,684; rateable value, £18,824. 12s. 1½d. The principal land owners are Sir Robt. Peel, Bart., Capt. Somerville, Mrs. Bedford, Sir W. H. Hartopp, Bart., Sir F. Lawley, F. B. Harket, Esq., H. M. Chadwick, Esq., Rd. Horton, Esq., the Rev. E. A. Bagot, and the Corporation, who are also lords of the manor. This was held by the Conqueror, at the time of the Norman survey; but Henry I. granted it to Roger, Earl of Warwick; and one of his successors, Guy de Beauchamp, obtained in the 28th of Edward I., a charter for a market and fair here. It appears, however, that in the reign of Henry VII. both the market and town itself had fallen into great decay; when a great benefactor arose, in the person of John Vesey, Bishop of Exeter, a native of the place, and a prelate of considerable eminence, to whose numerous benefactions may be attributed its subsequent prosperity. Not only did the bishop bestow upon the poor of Sutton a large tract of land, for pasturage, but, in the 20th of Henry VIII., procured a charter of incorporation for the town, built a market house, founded a free school, and enlarged and ornamented the parish church. Nor did his active benevolence stop here, for he attempted to introduce the clothing manufacture, and, thereby, provide a permanent source of prosperity to the place, building several houses for the free use of persons following the trade; but the exotic manufactory did not flourish, and has long since ceased to be practised, though the houses still remain. The town occupies a bleak and exposed situation, on rising ground, of steep acivity, and consists principally of one long street. The houses are mostly modern, well built, and of handsome appearance; the inhabitants are well supplied with water from springs. Adjacent to it, is a very extensive and finely wooded park, in which the inhabitants have the privilege of pasturage, for a small payment to the corporation; it is crossed by the Ikniel street, which is distinctly traceable for two miles, entering the park near a small artificial mount, called King's, standing on the Coldfield, from the circumstance of Charles having harangued his troops from Shropshire on this spot; and taking thence a direction into the Lichfield road. Here is a medicinal spring, called Rounton Well: another, possessing sulphurous qualities, is now disused. The principal occupation is the manufacture of spades, saws, axes, and other implements: mills for grinding gun barrels are worked by streams of water issuing from pools in the park, one of which covers from thirty to thirty-five acres. The Birmingham and Fazeley Canal passes through the parish. The market is held on Monday; and fairs are on Trinity Monday and November 8th, for cattle, sheep, and pedlery.

The town is governed by a corporation, consisting of a warden and two capital burgesses, viz.:—Robert Garnet, jun., Esq., warden; Sir Wm. Edmund Cradock Hartopp, Bart., and the Rev. James Packwood, capital burgesses; Holbeche and Addenbrooke, deputy stewards, clerks of the peace, and clerks to magistrates; Earl of Aylesford, high steward; Geo. Beech and John Hursfield, serjeants at mace; and Taylord and Lloyd, treasurers. The warden, who is chosen annually, and the capital burgesses, for life, by the corporation, from their own body, are justices of the peace, by virtue of their office. The warden acts as coroner for the town, manor, and lordship of Sutton. The corporation are lords of the manor, and elect a lord high steward and park keepers: the former appoints his deputy, who must be a lawyer, and presides at the courts leet and baron. The other members are also chosen by the corporation; the inhabitants are free and eligible by residence. Under the charter they are empowered to hold courts Oyer and Terminer, and of goal delivery, which, from disuse, have been transferred to the county town, the corporation paying a quota towards the county rate. Petty sessions are held in the Town Hall, every alternate Wednesday, which is a neat brick building, in which are the arms of Bishop Vesey, emblazoned on a shield, surmounted with a mitre.

The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a handsome structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and square tower, in which there are six good bells. It is a fine ancient structure, built probably in the 13th century, though combining different styles of English architecture. The aisles were added by Bishop Vesey, whose effigy, in a recumbent posture, with a mitre on his head, and crosier in his right hand, is in the chancel. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £33. 9s. 2d.; the present value not returned: Rev. W. K. Riland Bedford, patron; and Rev. Richd. Williamson, D.D., incumbent. The Rectory is a good residence, half a mile east. A district Church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, erected 1845, at Walmley, is a neat edifice, in the Norman style of architecture. The living, a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Rev. J. and Miss Riland, and incumbency of the Rev. G. W. Robinson. St. James's district Church, situated at Mere Green, is a neat brick edifice, erected 1835; in the patronage of the Rector of Sutton Coldfield, and incumbency of the Rev. S. C. Saxton. The Catholic Chapel is a neat building: Rev. James Moore, priest. The Baptists, Independents, and Methodists, have each a place of worship here. Savings Banks, established January 11th, 1819: Sir Francis Lawley, Bart., president; Earl of Aylesford and W. S. Dugdale, Esq., M. P., vice-presidents; Messrs. Taylor and Lloyd, treasurers; and Wm. Steele Perkins, secretary. Driffold House Asylum is a large brick building, delightfully situated on a commanding eminence, half a mile south, and has about eighteen acres of land adjoining, for the recreation of the inmates: Mr. George Bodington, surgeon, master. The visitors are D. Johnson, Esq., W. C. Alston, Esq., J. T. Lawrence, Esq., and J. F. Leasan, Esq. The Corporation Schools are neat brick buildings, situated in Digbeth, Green lane, Mere green, and Church hill; taught on the National plan.

HAMLETS.—Little Sutton, a small pleasant village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. Hill, a small village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north. Maney, a hamlet, adjoining the west end of the town. Mere green, a small scattered village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north. Warmley Ash, a small village and hamlet, 2 miles S.E. Wild green, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles south. The parish also contains many scattered farms and houses.

CHARITIES.—The Corporation Charity.—King Henry VIII., by letters patent, 16th December, 1528, granted to his liege men of Sutton in Coldfield, that they should, for ever, be called the ROYAL TOWN OF SUTTON COLDFIELD; and appointed William Gybons, one of the inhabitants, to be the first warden. And after reciting other letters patent of the said king, whereby he had made certain grants for life of his manor, park, and chase, the herbage of his park, &c., to certain persons; notwithstanding which, the said king, by Letters Patent, in the 12th year of his reign, granted to the aforesaid warden and society of men, inhabitants of the said town and manor, and all their successors, all his town, manor, and lordship of Sutton Coldfield, and his chase and park of Sutton Coldfield, and all messuages, mills, lands, woods, herbage, underwoods, rents, reversions, services, with the pools and fishes in the same, &c., in the county of Warwick, or the county of Stafford, to pay to the king all the ancient rents, and an increased rent of £2. 11s. 2d. yearly, amounting in the whole to £53.; to be paid yearly, at the feast of St. Michael. Also, power to purchase lands, to the annual amount of £10.; with leet and view of frank pledge within the town and manor, and all fines, &c. Also, the right to have a market (the warden being appointed clerk of the market,) and two annual fairs, and free warren, &c. It was also granted, that any inhabitant, or other person, willing to build, at their own cost, a new house, on the waste in any part of the lordship, it might be lawful for him to enclose 60 acres of the waste, or less, in the same lordship, together or separate; to hold to them, and their heirs, for ever, rendering, at Michaelmas, yearly, to the warden and society, &c., all services, suits of court, heriots, demands whatsoever, twopence sterling for every acre of the waste so enclosed. By an award, 1581, under the hands and seals of Sir Fulke Grevelle, Knight, and four others, after reciting that William Taylor, and other inhabitants of Sutton, had exhibited their bill of complaint in her majesty's court of the Star chamber, against Thomas. Gibbons, Esq., and others, stating that the various wardens, under colour of their office, had made various grants, in fee farm, to their own uses, to the amount of 600 or 700 acres, parcel of the possession of the said corporation, reserving the rent of 2d. an acre only, to the behoof of the said corporation; and also had demised parcels of the possessions of the said town to themselves, &c., contrary to the said charter. By a decree in the Exchequer, Michaelmas term, 1617, it is stated that the yearly rents were to be applied to the discharging poor inhabitants of tenths and subsidies, or to the building of houses, or to the marrying of poor maids. It was charged that the defendants had employed the profits to their own uses, and sold the king's manor house, &c., and wasted and conveyed away his majesty's woods, to the value of £1,000., &c.; and received to themselves to the value of £10,000. The commissioners, by their certificate, stated, that after hearing the parties on both sides, they were of opinion that the orders and rates after-mentioned should be confirmed, for the preventing all future disputes. Among other things, it was ordered that no more cottage houses should be erected on any part of the heaths or wastes, unless they should be for the necessary relief of poor and impotent people. It was also found, that land and rents to the value of 100 marks, or above, had been theretofore given for the maintenance of a schoolmaster in the said town, the greatest part whereof was sold or made away by the wardens, and fellows of the corporation, so that £10. only was paid to the schoolmaster, &c., &c. Various other suits were afterwards instituted against the warden and society. It was at length agreed by the parties, that a scheme, for the management of the charity, should be settled under the sanction of the court; and, by a decree, dated 26th June, 1799, it was referred to one of the masters to settle a plan for that purpose. By an order, 23rd March, 1802, it was declared the management of the charity estates ought to be continued to the warden and society, and that the several payments of £58., as fee farm rent to the Crown, with five other sums amounting to £66., ought respectively to be paid, and the residue to be applied in portioning poor maids. And the master was directed to appoint a proper person to survey the timber, which was then to be sold, and the clear proceeds invested in the purchase of Three per cent. consols, in the name of the accountant-general, with liberty for the parties to lay a scheme before the master, for the application of the dividends. Large quantities of timber were cut down, and the net proceeds (after payment of £1825. 5s. 4d., the costs of the suit, were invested in Three per cent. consolidated annuities, and the whole of this fund amounted, at the time of the decretal order, next-mentioned, to £38,475. 8s. 10d. stock, and £3561. 14s. 3d. cash, in the bank, in the name of the Accountant General. For the application of this fund, the corporation obtained leave of the court to bring in a scheme, upon one article of which the master made a report, 16th Nov., 1822, certifying that it would be proper to allow to the corporation, out of the said fund a sum of £3,655. for the purpose of draining Sutton Park, a great part of which was, boggy and mossy land. This sum was paid to the corporation in February, 1823. On consideration of the rest of the scheme, and various alterations made therein, the master finally approved of the following application, which he certified by his report, 14th of

May, 1825. 1.—That a charity school be established in Sutton Coldfield, for 100 male and female children, poor inhabitants of the parish, on Dr. Bell's system, or any other which might be thought more eligible. 2.—That a school of the same description should be established in some convenient situation between the hamlets of Hill and Little Sutton, in this parish, for the education of 100 boys and girls, as above. 3.—That a preparatory school should be established in that part of the parish, called "Beyond the Wood," and "Walmley," for the convenience of 40 smaller children, to have the benefit of instruction, being too far distant from the other schools. 4.—That a part of the above school, in the town of Sutton, be appropriated for a school of industry, for instructing of girls in sewing, spinning, knitting, writing, and arithmetic, &c. 5.—That the children attending these schools should be annually clothed, as a means to induce the parents to send them regularly. 6.—That the sum of £2,392. should be allowed for the building and furnishing these schools, including the school of industry. The timber required for the purpose, to be taken out of Sutton Park. 7.—The sum of £40. to be allowed as a salary to the master to the school of Sutton; the sum of £60. allowed to the mistress of the school of industry, she finding an assistant, and having the management of the girls' school also: and the sum of £40. for the master of Hill and Little Sutton; and £25. for the master or mistress at Walmley. 8.—That £30. per annum be allowed for firing at the different schools. 9.—That the sum of £2. should be allowed for the clothing of each boy, £1. 11s. 6d. for each girl, which, estimating the number in the different schools at 240, would annually amount to £429.; and that none should be admitted under the age of six, nor continue beyond the age of twelve. 10.—That the boys and girls educated at the above schools, as they arrive at proper ages, should be put out apprentices, with premiums, or to service, with new clothes, for which £20. should be allowed annually. 11.—That £100. should be allowed for the purchase of raw materials for the school of industry, and machinery, and for the materials for making the clothing; and also the sum of £50. for the like purposes. 12.—For medical assistance, vaccination of the poor gratis, attending poor married women in child-bed, at their own houses, £31. 10s. per annum. 13.—That poor married women be supplied with sheets and child-bed linen, to be lent them during their confinement, for which, £35. should be allowed annually. 14.—That the sum of £30. per annum should be allowed for the purchase of blankets, or other articles of charity, to be distributed annually, on the day of the warden's choice, amongst the old and infirm poor. 15.—That ten almshouses should be built for the reception of reduced inhabitants, for which, the sum of £608. should be allowed. 16.—For an increase of the salary of the deputy steward, £30. 17.—For an increase of the salary of the Sergeants at Mace, £44. each; as assistant park keepers, making their salaries £50. each, they being required, with the park keepers, to give up their whole time to the charity estates. 18.—That there should be allowed for the building of two small houses, in or near Sutton Park, for the 2 Sergeants at Mace, £258. 19.—The Warden being enjoined by the charter to see that the weights and measures are just within the parish, that there should be allowed for a weighing machine for the use of the poor inhabitants, £173. 14s., and for a salary for a person to attend on the same, £5. per annum. 20.—That £10. should be allowed for purchasing new maces, and for restoring the ancient forms of the corporation, such as cloaks and hats to the sergeants, and a coat and hat to the keeper; and an allowance for a dinner, at the warden's choice, to the members of the corporation, who give their time and labour gratuitously, the annual sum of £25. By an order of the court, 2nd of April, 1828, it was further directed that the sum of £30. should be allowed the warden and society, as a salary for the mistress at the school, at Hill and Little Sutton, by quarterly payments. The total amount of the annual sums directed to be supplied from the interest of the timber fund, being £1004. 10s., was regularly paid to the corporation by quarterly or yearly payments, and the accounts were passed before the master, till Aug. 1833, when the corporation, upon petition, were permitted to receive the dividends upon the stock, then reduced to £939. 4s. 4d. per annum, as they became due, and to supply the deficiency for the purposes above mentioned, from their other income; and at the same were relieved from passing any further accounts before the master until the further order of the court. The property of the corporation has received considerable changes; by an act of Parliament, 5th of George IV., for inclosing the common lands of the parish of Sutton Coldfield. The award was not signed in 1833, at which time the entire rental of the estates of the corporation amounted to £789. 5s. 1d., to which must be added the profits of pasturage of cattle, &c., in the park, £16. In the year 1828, application was made to build a gallery in the Church for the accommodation of the schools, this was granted, and effected at a cost of £300. The extensive tract of land called Sutton Park contains clear ground within the park 1623a. 2r. lands; enclosed and planted with wood, viz., Westwood Coppice, Holley Hurst, Lower Nut Hurst, Upper Nut Hurst, and Darnel Hurst, 268a. 3r. 20p.; lands not enclosed, covered with wood, viz., Stretly Wood, Pool Hollies, Gunslade, Valley Wood, Lady Woods, &c., 136a. 1r. 26p.; making a total of 2028a. 3r. 6p. Every inhabitant of the manor is entitled, by immemorial custom, to turn in horses, cows, and other cattle, except sheep, on paying for each horse, mule, or ass, tenpence for three months, or one stage, as called; and fivepence for every cow or heifer. The park keeper collects these payments, and some small profits made by the sale of ling or gorse. Previous to the enclosure, the waste lands of this manor amounted to about 4000a., about one half of which were approved by what was called the Lot Acre System. Portions, to the extent of about 700 acres at a time, were let out among the inhabitant householders of the parish, in toll of one acre to each, they covenanting for the proper cultivation thereof, for the term of five years, and for the payment of a small yearly acknowledgment, varying from 6d. to 2s. 6d. Lots were also drawn by the officers of the corporation. At the termination of the five years, the lands were thrown open, and another portion of the waste allotted. The land thus let was estimated to be worth £1. per acre to the occupier. By the inclosure act, 41a. 0r. 18p. of land was awarded to Sherley Farmer Steel Perkins, Esq., in lieu of the £58. fee farm rent, in whom that rent had become invested. The annual receipts for the year ending November 2nd, 1832, were £781. 15s. 10½d.; and the various expenses were £648. 19s. 4d.; leaving a balance to the corporation, of £142. 16s. 6½d. The cost in the progress of this cause in the Court of Chancery, amounted at the date of the last mentioned order (1828) to the enormous sum of £6,000. and upwards. A further amount still remained to be discharged, which was not ascertained at our inquiry (1833). Surely this costliness of rectification of administering charities is well deserving the attention of the legislature.

Free Grammar School.—By deed poll, under the hand and seal of John Harman, alias Vesey, Bishop of Exeter, November 20th, Henry VIII., (1541,) reciting that the said Bishop, and Thomas Gybbons, Hugh Turnor, Richard Turnor, and Mary, his wife, by their indenture, 1540, had granted a certain annual rent of £7., issuing out of certain lands in King's Sutton, to the guardian and society of the royal town of King's Sutton, and their successors, to the intent that they should provide some learned layman, to teach grammar and rhetoric in the said parish; who, with his scholars, should daily say the psalm De Profundis, for the souls of their benefactors. He, the said bishop, thinking the stipend too small for the support of a learned master, gave and granted to the aforesaid guardian and society, five other properties in the said parish, then of the value of £3. 9s. 3d., for the use of the said teacher. Various improper alienations had been made of the lands vested in the corporation for the above charity, and, in consequence, two successive commissions, under the statute for charitable uses, and decrees for the future regulation of it issued. Under the enclosure act of 1824, several rent charges are commuted, and several exchanges of land have been made. By a survey of the school lands, in 1724, they amounted to 136a. 1r. 36p.: the rental, in 1817, amounted to £469. 7s., including £4. 4s. received as pew rent in the church. The management of this property was, by a power of attorney, 11th September, 1818, confided to Mr. Chas. Barker, the schoolmaster, so long as he continues to hold that situation, and applied by him to his own use, all outgoings being paid by him. The premises in which the master resides and the school is held, consist of a spacious house, with a garden, orchard, and fore court, containing about 3½ acres. These premises were built about the year 1729, by Paul Lowe, a former schoolmaster, upon a piece of ground purchased for the purpose, by the corporation, who also granted a sum of £400. towards the building. Mr. Lowe also expended a further sum of £300., in consideration of which, a lease was granted to the said master. This lease has been given up, by an exchange under the inclosure act. This school appears to have been improperly conducted under Mr. Barker. In 1829, the English classes were withdrawn from the Grammar School. The commissioners say, at the time of our enquiry, October, 1833, we did not find such improvements in the circumstances of the Grammar School as might have been expected; and we think the trustees would better discharge their duty by receiving the rents of the property by their own steward, and paying the net surplus to the master.

Lord's Meadow, or Widows' Acre.—This meadow, containing about twelve acres, is situated in the quarter called Beyond the Wood and Warmley, and has been from time immemorial divided into 15 portions, appropriated to the use of 15 poor widows of the parish, nominated by the warden and society, and who enjoy the same for their respective lives. The widows have only the benefit of the first mowing; the after math and winter feed being taken by the proprietor of an adjoining farm, called the Hurst, who keeps the fences in repair. By traditional report, this charity was derived from the gift of Vesey, Bishop of Exeter. Under the provisions of the inclosure act, the Lord's Meadow has been exchanged for three parcels of ancient meadows, with a small allotment, amounting in the whole to 16a. 2r. 6p., viz.:—the Broomy Leasow and two closes called the Moors.

John Wilkins, by deed, 1707, gave to the poor of this parish, for ever, a piece of land, in Hill, called Sharrat field, and appointed trustees to employ the rents, about the 28th of October, in buying and distributing bibles, common prayer books, and other religious books. The land known as the bible land, contains 2a. 0r. 24p., let for £3. 4s. per annum. An allotment of rather more than a quarter of an acre also belongs to this charity. The rector receives the rent which is applied as above.

Thomas Jesson intending to have given the sum of £100. for the use of the poor of this parish, the sum was paid by John Jesson, the heir at law, for that purpose, and with £25. more, given by several other persons, was laid out in the purchase of five pieces of land lying in Hill, in this parish, containing by estimation 15 acres, called the Five Siddals, and by indenture, 1707, conveyed to trustees, on trust, to suffer the rents and profits to be received by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor for the time being, who should distribute 40s. as a dole for poor people of this parish on St. Thomas's day, and to employ the residue above all necessary charges for the binding out poor children apprentices. The property consists of five parcels of land, containing 14a. 0r. 19p. and known by the names of the Two Long Pieces, and the Three Ostlets, situate near Hill, with a barn, on one of the fields, erected by the trustees in 1819, let for the annual rent of £22. 10s. Of this rent £2. is given in bread on St. Thomas's day, and the rest is applied to apprenticing poor boys.

John Addyes, who died August, 1762, gave, by his will, a yearly rent charge of £5. payable out of his capital messuage, wherein he lived, called Moor Hall, and the lands thereunto belonging, on the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, for ever, and directed that £3. part thereof should be applied yearly towards placing out poor boys of the parish apprentices to some trades, at the discretion of the owner of the estate and the rector of the parish, and that 40s. a year should be distributed in the parish church, on the feast day of St. Thomas the Apostle, to the poor.

John Hacket, by will, 1808, directed that all persons who, from time to time should become seised of such parts of his real estate as lay within the parish of Sutton Coldfield, should, out of the rents thereof yearly, for ever, dispose of the sum of £5., as an addition to the like sum of £5., given by the will of his late uncle, John Addyes, Esq., for certain charitable uses, to be paid yearly. Francis Benyon Hacket, Esq., the owner (1834) expends £3. annually in apprenticing a boy and £2. is given on St. Thomas's day.

Valens Sacheverell, Esq., by will, gave to the poor of this parish 20s. yearly, to be paid out of his messuage in Great Sutton, then in the possession of Mary Reeve, to be distributed on the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, for ever. The sum of £1. is received by the churchwardens, from the tenant of an estate called New Shipton, and distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Ralph Sedgwick, of Wild Green, by will, 1665, gave £5. to the churchwardens and overseers of this parish; the interest to be distributed in bread, on St. Thomas's day.

Mr. Nicholas Dolphin, by will, left £20., the interest to be distributed to the poor of his neighbourhood, by the rector.

Mrs. Mary Jenks, by will, 1750, gave £50. to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, for the use of the poor.

William Blakely, by will, 1803, gave £5. to the rector, for the use of the poor. The above four sums, amounting to £80., are, with another £10., placed in the Savings bank. The interest is added to the St. Thomas's day distribution. This distribution is further aided by two sums of 6s. and 4s. received from the corporation, and a further sum of 6s. from the tenant of the Cup public house, belonging to the corporation. The origin of these payments is not known. A further sum of 13s. 6d. used to be received from Mr. James Hargrave, of this parish, but he died insolvent about 1828, and nothing has been paid since.

George Sacheverell, Esq., by will, 1715, gave to the poor of this parish the sum of £5. per annum, to be paid out of his lands then or late in the possession of William Butler, to be yearly distributed in bread, on the 2nd day of February, being his birth day, and on the 23rd of April, being St. George's day, by equal portions. 50s. worth of bread is supplied by a baker of the parish, on each of the above days; it is supplied in sixpenny and twopenny loaves, and given away at the church, and paid for by the tenant of the New Shipton farm.

Thomas Wheeler gave, by will, (he was buried in 1627) a parcel of land called the Raild meadow in Maney quarter, the yearly rent being 16s., was to be distributed by the rector and churchwardens, on Good Friday. Mr. Robert Edmunds pays the sum of 16s. as a rent charge for this charity.

Thomas Cooper gave, by will, 1687, the Pit close and the Long Leasows, in Little Sutton Quarter, containing together 6 acres, 2r. 12p. let for £9. 17s. per annum; the rents are distributed by the rector and churchwardens, to the poor. They are (1834) about to be exchanged, under the inclosure, for other lands near Hill Wood.

Mrs. Jesson, by will, left the interest of £10. annually to the poor; this sum makes up the £90. in the Saving's bank.

Lost Charities.—Mrs. Jacobs, in the reign of James I., gave, by will, the sum of £60., the interest to be distributed by the warden and corporation.

Nicholas Birch, of Little Sutton, gave, by will, 1667, 10s. per annum, to be given amongst the poor of Hill and Little Sutton.

Elizabeth Kempson, in 1767, gave £5., producing, by the returns of 1786, 4s. yearly. Of these no information could be obtained.

WISHAW, a parish and small village, $3\frac{3}{4}$ miles E.S.E. from Sutton Coldfield, containing, with the hamlet of Moxhall, 1196 acres of land, in 1841, 55 houses, and 336 inhabitants; 1801, 218; 1821, 219; 1831, 361; rateable value £2121. The Knights Templars had considerable possessions here as early as the reign of Henry II., and granted in the 12th of Henry III., certain lands to Margaret de Lisle, which family were long owners of land in this lordship. The family of Beresfords were also considerable proprietors here as early as the time of Edward I.; their possessions subsequently passed to the Hores and Pudseys. The principal landowners are the Hon. Mrs.

Letitia Penelope Noel, and B. P. G. C. Noel, Esq., who is also lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Chad, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a square tower and two bells. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £5. 5s., now £370. Patrons, John Ffoliot, Esq., and the representatives of the Jesson family. Rev. Wm. Robinson, M.A., incumbent. Tithes commuted, 1847, at £320.

MOXHULL, a hamlet and small scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by W. from Coleshill; in 1841, here were 14 houses and 73 inhabitants. This was originally a member of Curdworth, and belonged to the ancient Earls of Warwick, who granted it at a very early period to the Ardens, from whence it passed to the De Lises, and after continuing upwards of 400 years in that family, came by marriage to Sir Andrew Hacket. Moxhull Hall, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. by W. from Coleshill, is a large handsome stone mansion, surrounded by an extensive park, and the drive to the principal entrance is through an avenue of fine firs; it is the seat and property of B. P. G. C. Noel, Esq.

CHARITIES.—Lady Mary Hacket, out of her pious intention, founded a school at Wishaw; her son, Lisle Hacket, gave the land, and she also lodged £100. in the hands of her said son to be laid out in land for the use of the schoolmaster. By indenture, 1719, Lisle Hacket conveyed to Henry Lord Ffoliot, and five others, the said schoolhouse, with certain lands adjoining, lying in the Churchfield, for the use of the said school, and also covenanted to pay £5. as interest for the £100. to the use of the schoolmaster, till such sum should be invested in land, to be paid by quarterly instalments. The present master, (1833) resides in the old school house; to this an addition built by a former master of the name of Snape, is let to a tenant who states them, with part of the school garden, to be worth £7. 10s. per annum. Mrs. Noel pays £5. as specified by the deed, and has lately repaired the school premises. A number of children attend the school, who pay a small weekly sum.

Thomas Baylis, by will, 1744, made a charitable bequest, which appears to have been carried into effect by Dorothy Smith, who, by indenture, 1745, conveyed to Andrew Hacket, Esq., of Moxhull, and Thomas Martin, of Curdworth, clerk, and their heirs, a close of land, in the parish of Sutton Coldfield, called the Great Stoney Close, to pay out of the rents thereof, to the minister and churchwardens of Wishaw, yearly, on the 21st of November, 20s., to be disposed of among the poor inhabitants of the said parish; and, also, to pay 10s., yearly, to the schoolmaster of Wishaw, by half yearly payments, 25th March and 29th September, to teach one poor boy of the said parish. The devisees of the late Sir Samuel Romilly (1834) are owners of the close.

John Goodyear, is, by the parliamentary returns of 1786, stated to have left 10s., annually, in aid of Lady Hacket's endowment for a school. This does then appear to have been paid; but we could obtain no further information respecting this charity. The present school is a neat brick building; will accommodate 30. Miss Gray, mistress.

Margaret Butler's charity.—(See Aston.) In respect of this, the churchwardens receive £2. annually, at Easter.

THE SOLIHULL DIVISION

Forms the south boundary of the Hundred, and comprises ten parishes and three chapelries, viz., Baddesley-Clinton, Barston, Berkeswell, Bickenhill, Elmdon, Hampton-in-Arden, Balsall Temple, chap.; Knowle, chap.; Nuthurst, chap.; Meriden, Packinton Great, Packinton Little, and Solihull; and 44,453a. 1r. 21p. of land, and, in 1841, 2,238 inhabited houses, 78 uninhabited, and 28 building; with 11,221 inhabitants, of whom 5,731 were males, 5,490 females; of these numbers 2,573 males, 2,433 females, were

BADDESLEY CLINTON, a parish and small scattered village, 7 miles N.W. from Warwick, containing 1,140 acres of land; in 1841, 25 houses and 115 inhabitants; 1801, 130; 1821, 140; 1831, 110; rateable value, £1,232.; this place derived its name from its having become the inheritance of a son of Sir Thomas Clinton, of Coleshill. In the reign of Henry IV. it was purchased by John Brome, whose son, Nicholas, murdered the steward of Richard Nevil, Earl of Warwick. From the Bromes, the lordship passed to the Ferrers family, in whose possession it continues. Marmion Edward Ferrers, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, consists of nave and chancel, with low embattled tower; it was enlarged, and the tower built, in the time of Edward IV., by Nicholas Brome. The living, a perpetual curacy, V.K.B. £4. 6s. 8d., now £270., united to the vicarage of Polesworth; M. E. Ferrers, Esq., patron; and Rev. John Short, M.A., incumbent. Catholic Church, a neat brick building, erected 1793, with a house adjoining for the priest. Baddesley House is an ancient stone mansion, the residence of Major Hy. Capel Sandys.

CHARITIES.—William Knight, by will, 1717, gave to the poor of Chadwick End, in Balsall, 10s., and likewise to the poor of Baddesley Clinton, 10s. to be paid yearly, after the death of himself and his wife, and secured on two little closes called House Place, in a surrender, bearing date with the will; to be given away on Good-Friday, by the churchwarden and overseers.

Mrs. Hodgkinson gave £2. for the benefit of poor housekeepers; this sum is constantly in the hands of the overseers, and 2s. interest is allowed for it, which is given with the above charity.

Directory.—Major Henry Capel Sandys, Baddesley House; Rev. Wm. Ilsley, catholic priest; Thos. Parsons, farmer; Maria Greswold, vict. and farmer, Orange Tree; Edw. Gale, farmer, Nether Wood Heath; and Joseph Heath, shopkeeper.

BARSTON, a parish and small pleasant village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. from Solihull, containing 1,990 acres of land; in 1841, 91 houses and 392 inhabitants; 1801, 361; 1821, 344; 1831, 342; rateable value, £3,287. This was one of the extensive possessions of Turchil de Warwick; was anciently given partly to the Knights Templars, and partly to the Hospitalers, and, at the dissolution, coming to the Crown, was granted in the 4th of Elizabeth, to John Fisher and others. The principal land owners are Edwd. Barber, Esq., and Col. Northey, who is also lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is a plain brick edifice with stone facings, and consists of nave, chancel, and tower, in which there are five bells. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £180., annexed to the rectory of Berkeswell; Rev. Saml. Brett Shirreff, M.A., patron and incumbent. The parish school is a neat brick building, erected 1847, by subscription; will accommodate 80; average, 40; Ann Dingley, mistress. Escote, a hamlet, consists of many scattered dwellings, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. by S. from Solihull.

CHARITIES.—Lucy Bressie, in 1647, surrendered the Town Close to trustees, to pay 2s. of the rents thereof, towards the repairs of the church; and, after payment of chief rents, and other taxes, to distribute the residue amongst the poor of Barston. The close contains about two acres, now let for £4. 4s. per annum. Mr. Edward Barber, the acting trustee, manages the distribution, usually made the Sunday after Lady-day.

Thomas Fisher, of Escote, gent., 1651, gave 10s. per annum, for ever, out of two closes called Ebridges, to be given to the poor, on St. Thomas's day; now the property of Miss Fisher, whose tenant pays the charge.

Henry Marsh gave, 1617, out of his estate at Pearsall End, 10s. per annum, to be given to the poor on Christmas-day. Joseph Boulton, Esq., of Knowle, owns the estate at Pearsall End, and pays the charge.

Margaret Allibone gave out of her estate, at Escote, in 1719, the sum of 20s. per annum, to be given to the poor of Barston, on Christmas-day. Miss Fisher is (1826.) the owner.

Catharine Astley gave 10s. per annum from her lands in this parish, situated in the manor of Balsall, to be given to the poor of Barston, on Good-Friday. Mrs. Ann Huddesford is the owner; her tenant pays the charge.

Martin Astley gave 10s. per annum, to be paid out of his estate, surrendered to Ann Huddesford, and her heirs; to be given to the poor of Barston on the day of our Lady. Mrs. Huddesford's tenant pays the charge.

William Penn, in 1624, gave 10s. per annum, for ever, to be paid out of Long Rangley close, to be given to the poor of Barston on Good-Friday; Mr. James Gilbert, the owner, (1826,) pays the charge. The above doles, amounting to £3.10s., are distributed about Christmas.

BERKESWELL, an extensive parish and small pleasant village, 6 miles N. by W. from Coventry, containing 6,300 acres of land, of which 65 are glebe; and, in 1841, 369 houses and 1,504 inhabitants; 1801, 1,192; 1821, 1,468; 1831, 1,450; rateable value, £11,789. 2s. 8d. Belonged, at the Conquest, to Earl Mellent, from whom it passed to his brother, Henry de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick. In the reign of Edward II., it again came into the Warwick family, and through the Marrows and Knightleys, to Sir John Eardley Eardley Wilmot, Bart., who is the principal owner and lord of the manor. The Earl of Aylesford, Rd. Lant, Wm. Floyd, Esqrs., the Coventry Charity Trustees, the Berkeswell Charity Trustees, Wigley Greswold, Esq., Rev. S. B. Shirreff, and many others have estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and embattled tower; the living, a rectory, with the perpetual curacy of Barston annexed, value K. B., £14. 12s. 6d., now £786., in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. Saml. Brett Shirreff. The Rectory is a handsome spacious residence near the Church. London and North Western Railway Station, 1½ m. S. by W.

CHARITIES. School.—Church and Poor Lands.—About the year 1589, a bill was filed in the Court of Chancery, by Oliver Matthew and others, on behalf of the inhabitants of Berkeswell, against Samuel Marow and another, complaining that the defendants, of whom Samuel Marow, was lord of the manor of Berkeswell, were seeking to obtain possession of certain premises within the manor, which had been from time immemorial vested in the churchwardens of the said parish, to the use and reparation of the church, and to the finding and maintaining a school in the said town, and by them let to the complainants, with the assent of the parishioners, and for the lord of the manor, for the time being, according to the custom of the said manor, and praying relief accordingly. The cause came on to be heard 26th November, 32 of Elizabeth, (1589), when it was ordered, that the churchwardens of the parish should thenceforth, according to the true intent of the four copies of court-roll mentioned, and for such rents as therein mentioned, hold, and quietly enjoy, the tenements contained in the said copies; and should employ the rents for the use and reparation of the church, and the finding and maintaining a school in the said town, and the relief of the poor. By a subsequent decree, 1754, at the relation of Samuel Pearman, and others, it was ordered that £20. a year be paid to the schoolmaster, and a sum not exceeding £16. a year, should be applied for the ornaments and reparation of the church, and the remaining part of the said rents and profits should be applied to the relief of the poor of the said parish; and it was ordered, that certain cottages occupied by poor people rent-free, should so continue to be so occupied. Of these cottages, there are 32, having about two acres of land belonging to the whole number; they are said to be worth 30s. each per annum. The other property consists of 89a. 2r. 32p. of land, of which 10 acres are woodland, with farm and other houses, producing an income of £162. 8s.; this is received by the churchwardens, out of which £16. is paid for repairs of the church: the schoolmaster receives £20. a year, and £1. 15s. 6d. is paid to the lord of the manor for customary rents, and the remainder is given away to poor persons in immediate want, or sickness, on application to the churchwardens, in sums varying from 2s. to 10s. Money is also occasionally paid for rent for poor persons. The master of the school is appointed by the parish, and receives all the children of the parish who apply; generally about 50 attend, who are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic: he receives £5. a year in addition, as a private donation from the rector. The master has a house and garden, and the parish also has a small house by the churchyard, rent-free. The school has recently been re-built, and is a neat spacious building, with a house for the master, now taught on the National plan; Joseph Voice, master.

Good Friday Grove.—Three parcels of land, lying together, containing about 8 acres, let to Thomas Gwyn, at £16. per annum, which is given away on Good Friday, to poor families, in sums of 4s. each, or old persons.

Marsh's Gift.—The sum of 10s. is received from Hampton-in-Arden.

Thomas Miles gave 10s. to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's Day, to be paid out of the Stone Pit Field: given on St. Thomas's Day.

Richard Lea, alias Eade, gave 6s. 8d. a year, to be distributed to the poor, on St. Thomas's Day. The sum of 6s. 8d. is paid by Sir Eardley Wilmot, out of a farm rented by Joseph Fritton, in Berkeswell.

Richard Redding, alias Brewer, gave £10., the interest to be given to the poor on St. Thomas's Day; Mary Bradnock, as tenant, pays the above 10s.

Mr. Job Potter gave £1. 10s. a year, to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's Day, to be paid out of Kendall field; John Cole now pays the above sum, entered as paid out of Jury field.

Thomas Docker gave 5s. a year, to be given in bread on St. Thomas's Day, out of the Hither Waste field; Mr. William Reader pays the 5s.

George Smith gave £10., the interest to be given on St. Thomas's Day; this is lost.

Gilbert Docker, by will, 1730, gave 5s. a year to the poor, paid out of a house and shop in Docker lane. The St. Thomas's doles, amounting in the whole to £3. 16s. 8d., are given away to poor families, parishioners, on that day, in shillings.

John Whitehead, by will, 1693, gave to John Atkins, and three others, and the rector and churchwardens of Berkeswell, and their heirs, &c., a messuage, and the lands thereto belonging, at Oldnall End, in trust, yearly, to lay out £4. 10s. to putting forth yearly one poor child, boy or girl, apprentice; and the remaining profits being £3. or more, he directed that the same should be given to the most needy poor, every Thursday before Whitsuntide. The property (called the Hole Farm) contains 13a. 3r. 14p. of land, and is let for £18. per annum, and distributed as above.

Catherine Whitehead, relict of the above, gave, by her will, 1711, to the poor of this parish, 30s. per annum, to be paid out of Nalcote Hall farm, in this parish; Mr. John Lant, the owner, pays the rent-charge, which is given with John Whitehead's charity.

John Allen, about 1747, by will, gave to the poor £16.; this sum, with £3. interest due upon it, is now in the hands of the commissioners of the Redfern turnpike road, producing 15s. 2½d. interest, which is received every two or three years, and distributed on the Thursday before Whit-Sunday.

BICKENHILL, an extensive parish, 4 miles N.E. from Coleshill, containing 3,736 acres of land, and, in 1841, 774 inhabitants; 1801, 664; 1821, 648; 1831, 725; rateable value, £3,844. For parochial purposes, it is divided into the Church and Middle quarter, Lyndon quarter, and Marston quarter: and is on the line of the London and Birmingham Railway. Turchell de Warwick was the earliest possessor on record; and a part was subsequently assigned to a branch of the Arden family, one of whom resided here, and assumed the name of Bickenhull. The principal land owners are Earl of Aylesford, Earl Digby, Lt.-Col. Rt. Short, Mr. Saml. Thornley, and several others have small estates here; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by a spire; the living is a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's books at £7. 17s. 3d., now £300. Earl of Aylesford, patron, and Rev. C. T. Elers, B.D., incumbent. The vicarage is a neat brick residence, pleasantly situated at the west end of the Church.

The Church and Middle Quarter, a small scattered village, 4 miles N.E. from Solihull; in 1841, here were 60 houses and 273 inhabitants, and 1,626a. 3r. 2p. of land; rateable value, £1,590. 4s. 2d. Earl of Aylesford is lord of the manor. The Free School is a neat brick building, with a house attached for the master, in the Gothic style, erected 1843, by the Earl of Aylesford, and is supported by voluntary subscription; will accommodate 70, average 60; Joseph and Mary Ward, master and mistress.

The Lyndon Quarter, a small scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. from Solihull, contains 931a. 3r. 38p. of land; and, in 1841, 72 houses, and 310 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,290. 7s. 1d. Mr. William Waterhouse is lord of the manor.

Marston Quarter, $5\frac{1}{4}$ miles N. from Solihull, is a small village, containing 1,178a.; rateable value, £1,350. 19s. 4d. Earl Digby is lord of the manor. The Wesleyans have a neat Chapel here.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Blanch Wollaston, in 1676, directed that her personal estate should be laid out in land, for certain charitable uses, one of which was, that £5. of the yearly rents should be distributed to the poor of Bickenhall. The parish officers receive £5. per annum from the trustees at Walsall, which is given to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

George Smith, by will, 1731, gave £10. to the poor of this parish, the interest to buy bread, to be given to the poor, one half on St. Thomas's day, and the other on Good Friday.

Uncertain Donor.—An annual sum of 20s. was, for many years received, previous to 1805, supposed, agreeable to the will of ——— Shaw, paid from estate in Yardley, then belonging to Thomas Ward, who left the estate to the Rev. Charles Warnford; he afterwards sold it in parcels. Nothing has been received since the death of Mr. Wm. Ward, in 1805, when the estate came to his brother.

The principal landowners are, the Earl of Aylesford, Sir Robert Peel, and lord of the manor. Wm. Chas. Aston, Esq., and several others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Bartholomew, is a fine ancient structure, and had, originally, a lofty spire, "which was," says Dugdale, "a noted mark to a great part of the woodland," but was destroyed by lightning, in 1643: it now consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with square embattled tower, in which there is a peal of six good bells. The living, a vicarage, V. K. B., £15. 6s. 8d., now £578.; in the patronage of the Master and Brethren of Leicester's Hospital, Warwick, and incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Ashly Morris, M.A. The vicarage is a handsome residence, pleasantly situated near the church. The Independents have a neat brick Chapel here, erected 1838. Fairs are held June 11th, July 16th, September 10th, and October 17th, which is also a statutes for hiring servants. London and Birmingham Railway station, with Birmingham and Derby branch, about $\frac{1}{2}$ a mile north; George Tweedle, agent.

BALSALL TEMPLE, a township, chapelry, and considerable scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. by E. from Solihull, includes the hamlets of Chadwick, or Bedlam's end, Balsall common, Balsall street, Fen end, Mear end, and Wootton green, and contains 2265 acres of land, and in 1841, 254 houses, and 1160 inhabitants; 1821, 1056; this was given by Rodger de Mowbray to the Knights Templars, in the time of Richard II., who erected the Church here, and a preceptory. In the reign of Edward II., this fraternity was dissolved, and their possessions here given to the Knights Hospitallers, who retained them until the dissolution. Queen Elizabeth granted the manor, to her favourite Dudley, whose grand-daughter, Lady Catherine Leveson, gave it by will, for the purpose of founding a hospital for indigent females, and so well has the institution flourished, that its present income is little short of £1,500. per annum. The ancient Hall, or Refectory of the Templars, stands near the Church, and though formerly a magnificent apartment, presents now, surrounded as it is by brick work, the appearance of a large barn; it was originally framed wholly of timber, and divided by large wooden pillars into three aisles. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, remains nearly as built by the Templars, without any division into aisles. The chancel is only separated from the body of the Church, by a raised floor of three steps, and on the south side are three stone seats, within a canopied recess, and a small niche. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £50., in the patronage of the Governors of Balsall Hospital, and incumbency of the Rev. John Short, M.A.

Springfield Hall, a large neat brick mansion, 4 miles S.E. from Solihull, the seat and property of Joseph Moore Boulton, Esq.

KNOWLE, a chapelry and large pleasant village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. from Solihull; in 1841, here were 253 houses, and 1208 inhabitants; 1821, 1082; and 3263a. 3r. 33p. of land; rateable value, £5231. 18s. 4d. This lordship, in early times, belonged to the Arden family, from whom it passed to Queen Eleanor, on whose death it was given to the monks of Westminster. J. W. Unett, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Chapel, dedicated to St. Anne, is a building of considerable beauty, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles. In the wall of the south aisle, are four stone seats within embellished recesses, and beyond is a handsome piscina. The whole was erected and completed at the expense of Walter Cooke, a canon of Lincoln; towards the latter end of the reign of Richard II., and in the 4th of Henry IV., he also founded a chantry and guild here, as well as a college of chantry priests, whose habitation still remains at a short distance from the west end of the Chapel, converted into dwelling houses. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £126., augmented with £400. private benefactions, £400. Queen Anne's bounty, and £800. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of J. W. Unett, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Saml. Crowther, M.A. Fairs are held for cattle and sheep, on the first Monday after St. Ann's day, and on Old Michaelmas day, which is also a statutes for hiring servants. The Hall, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.E., is a neat brick residence, the seat and property of Robert Emilius Wilson, Esq.

Nuthurst, a small scattered village and chapelry, 8 miles W. by S. from Hampton in Arden; and, in 1841, 25 houses, and 132 inhabitants; 1801, 99; 1821, 76; 1831, 124; this was for many generations held by the Trussells. The Chapel is a neat edifice, consisting of nave and chancel, in which there is a beautiful stained glass window. The living, a curacy, with the vicarage of Hampton.

CHARITIES.—Henry Marsh, by a conveyance 16th James I., in the manor of Balsall, an estate at Pearshall end, gave to the use of Robert Taylor and his heirs for ever, on the following conditions, to pay to the poor of Hampton-in-Arden, 20s.; to the poor of Berkeswell, 10s.; to the poor of Balsall, 10s.; to the poor of Barston, 10s.; to the poor of Knowle, 10s. The said several sums to be paid on the day of St. Thomas the Apostle, to the collectors of the poor rates of the said towns for the use of the poor on Christmas eve. This property, in 1797, became the property of Joseph Boulton, Esq., who not being aware of the entry on the court rolls, discontinued the payment. Since (1825,) he has agreed to pay £5. as arrears, and to continue to pay the 20s. annually. The premises now form part of Mr. Boulton's park, at Pearsall End.

Town Lands.—In the year 1686, on a benefaction table in the church, there is stated various sums, amounting in the whole, to £102. 13s.; with this sum certain lands were purchased; let, 1825, to Francis Burton, at £14. per annum. The rent is applied in apprenticing poor boys.

George Fentham, of Birmingham, by will, 1690, gave to Ambrose Foxhall, and three others, and their heirs, all his messuages, lands, with the appurtenances, &c.; and all his goods, chattels, debts, &c., whatsoever, on trust, for the performance of his will, and after discharging his debts and several legacies therein mentioned, he gave an annuity of £30., to be paid as follows: £20. to be paid half-yearly, at Lady Day and Michaelmas, to a schoolmaster at Hampton, to be appointed by the inhabiting copyholders of this manor, for his salary, for poor male children of the said manor; it is now taught on the National plan; Josph. Smith, master, with a salary of £60. per annum: Harriet Willday, mistress; salary £30.. and Sarah Mills, mistress of the infants; salary £10. per annum. £5. more of the said annuity, yearly, at the feast of Lady Day, to be given to ten of the poorest families in Hampton, and £5. more for the placing out an apprentice a poor boy of Hampton, and after giving another annuity of £20. to the poor of Birmingham, he gave the residue of his real and personal estate in two equal parts, the rents and profits of one part thereof to be employed for the relief of the poor inhabitants of Hampton, or in teaching of poor children to knit, sew, spin, or do such like work, or in the setting out of poor children apprentices, and the other moiety to be employed for the relief of the poor inhabitants of Birmingham, in manner in said will mentioned. After much litigation, a division was made of the estates under a commission of the Court of Chancery, and signed by the Commissioners, 1st. June, 1738. In 1818, George Tandy and seven others were appointed new trustees. The premises allotted to this parish are (1826) of the yearly value of £176. 18s. 6d. Two schools, one for boys and one for girls, are supported. The master has a salary of £42. a year, for which he instructs all the poor boys belonging to the parish in reading, writing, and arithmetic; and he occupies a house and garden, rent free, which was built in 1782, at an expense of £152. 3s. 8½d.; the poorer children are furnished with books and stationery, and coals, to the amount of £1. allowed the master. The mistress of the girls' school receives a salary of £12. 12s. a year, and teaches all the poor girls sent to her, to read, knit, and sew; she has 10s. a year allowed for coal, but has no house or school provided. The schools are now taught on the National plan, about 120 children attend; Joseph Smith, master; Harriet Willday, mistress; and Sarah Mills, mistress of the infants. The girls' and infants' schools is a handsome brick building, erected 1849. £55. is given to the poor by half yearly distributions, besides which, occasional gifts of 10s. or 20s. are made to poor people. The trustees meet on the second Monday in May, and the day before St. Thomas's day, and dine together, leaving, after the expense of collecting the rents and stamps, £1. 3s. 6d., a balance of about £47.

BALSALL HAMLET.—Saracen's Head Charity.—The donor of this seems to be unknown; these premises consist of a small public house, in Balsall street, with two crofts of land, containing about two acres, and an allotment made on the inclosure in 1802, of 2a. 0r. 30p. These premises were, 9th October, 1821, surrendered by copy of court roll of the manor of Balsall, to Henry Couchman, and eight others, and their heirs, on trust, for the use of the inhabitants of Balsall. The premises were let soon after the inclosure, for the annual rent of £8. 12s., which, in 1826, had not been altered. The rent is distributed on St. Thomas's day, to poor people of this hamlet, in sums of 4s. and under.

Ludfords, or Wake-shilling, of which the origin is not known; the property consists of 1a. 1r. of old enclosure, and an allotment at the inclosure of 1r. 38 perches, let together for the annual rent of £3. 3s., which is distributed at Balsall wake, to the poor of certain parts of the hamlet, to which it is limited in sums from 1s. to 2s. each.

Coventry Dole, of which the donor is unknown; Joseph Merry, Esq., of Coventry, pays the annual sum of 15s. from a warehouse, formerly a stable, his property, situated at the corner of Wells street, Coventry, which is given to the poor of Balsall street and Wootton Green, in small sums, on St. Thomas's day.

— Huddesford gave an annual sum of 10s., which is paid out of a farm, now the property (1826) of Edward Mallery, Esq., and is given in sixpences to poor people in Balsall street quarter, on Easter Monday.

William Knight, by will, 1716, gave to the poor of Chadwick End, in Balsall, 10s., and likewise 10s. to the poor of Baddesley Clinton, to be paid upon Good Friday, secured on two closes, called House Place, now (1826) the property of William Assender, of Balsall, by whom the doles are paid.

Henry Marsh.—See Hampton-in-Arden division. The sum of 10s. is received for the use of the poor of Balsall.

Leonard Freckleton, see Knowle, (in this parish.) The sum of 6s. 8d. is received by the churchwardens, and distributed with the two preceding charities, in sixpences, to the poor, on Good Friday.

HOSPITAL at Balsall.—Lady Katharine Leveson, of Trentham, in the county of Stafford, by a codicil to her will, 1670, devised the manor of Balsall, alias Temple Balsall, with all the lands, tenements, and privileges whatsoever, to the Hon. Richard Newport, and eleven others, and their heirs and assigns, for ever, upon trust, to erect an hospital, &c. for twenty poor persons, being widows, and poor women not married, &c., who should receive the yearly sum of £8. each. Also, that £20. should be paid to a minister, who should, twice every day, read the scripture, and pray with the said poor persons, and that £10. a year should be allowed to a person, as overseer of the house, and receiver of rents; and the residue of the rents to be employed about the repairs of the said almshouse, and other charges, which being discharged, the overplus to be disposed of amongst the poor almspeople. By another codicil to her will, she declared her desire to be, that the minister appointed to read prayers, &c., should also teach 20 poor boys of Balsall and parish. By an act, passed in the first year of Queen Anne, this hospital was incorporated, &c., Richard Newport, Esq., and ten others, being appointed governors, &c. The income (1826) derived from the manor of Balsall, amounts to £1264. 12s. 4½d. There is also a sum of £5197. 3s. 7d. in the Three per cent. consols., having been balances invested at various times, producing £155. 18s. 2d. in dividends, making a total income of £1420. 12s. 6½d., but which is subject to an annuity of £50. to the vicar of Long Itchington. The Hospital consists of a handsome building, two stories high, occupying three sides of an oblong quadrangle, and comprising a house for the residence of the master, with a garden, and apartments for the matron, and for the assistant master; and thirty dwellings, with gardens to each, occupied by the almswomen. Of these dwellings, eight consist of two apartments each, sixteen of three, and six of four. The original building, for 20 almswomen, appears to have been erected previous to the year 1683, to which additions have been made, the last of which was in 1772. The women receive each a weekly sum of 3s., with the addition of 1s. in the last week of each quarter, amounting to £240. per annum, as the original payment. From 1784, they received an additional sum of 9d. per week, which, in the year 1826, was increased to 1s. 6d.; making the weekly payments, together, a yearly sum of £469. 10s. They also receive, each, at Christmas, £2., since 1708, and a further sum of £1. 15s. from the year 1777, making a total of £469. 10s. in money payments. They have also an allowance of two sixpenny loaves each per week, and 30 cwt. of coals each annually, and a woollen gown each every year, and are supplied with milk from a cow kept for the purpose. A matron resides in the hospital, who has £40. a year; and a nurse also resides in the house, and has the same weekly pay as the almswomen, and is, in addition, allowed £10. yearly salary, and 30 cwt. of coals. An apothecary attends the almswomen, and receives £10. 10s. per annum. The master of the hospital reads prayers twice a day in the school room belonging to the hospital; he receives a salary of £70. per annum; but the assistant master, who resides in the almshouse, and receives £30. per annum, teaches the school, which is open to all the poor children of Balsall. Prayer books and Testaments are provided for the children, and 30 cwt. of coals allowed yearly for the school room. These sums, amounting to £949. 8s. 3d., with other outgoings, amounting to £324. 15s. 11d., in which is included a salary of £50. to the master of the hospital, as chaplain to Temple Balsall Chapel; leaving a surplus of £146. 8s. 4½d. At the expiration of the present lease of the houses in London, an accession of income may be expected at the audit in 1826. The balance in hand was £561. 9s. 0½d.

KNOWLE CHAPELRY.—The Hon. Sarah Greville's charity, for educating and clothing poor boys and girls, see Warwick. The original number was 6 boys and 6 girls for this chapelry. In the year 1823, twenty-three were sent to school, in general rather more boys than girls. All the children are clothed annually: the boys have a blue coat, with a waistcoat and breeches of orange colour, a pair of stockings, a pair of shoes, and a shirt. The girls have gowns and petticoats of blue stuff, bound with orange; a bonnet, shift, pair of stockings and shoes, an apron, and a tippet. The minister and churchwardens appoint the children, who can remain for three years, and, in some cases, longer.

The Hon. Algernon Greville, by will, 1718, directed that there should be £500. given to put out boys and girls, of an equal number, to learn to write and read English. In consideration of the above, the manor of Knowle, with Knowle Hall, was conveyed in mortgage, in 1743, to William Smith, his heirs and assigns, except the yearly payment of £25., for the use of the above-named £500., free of all incumbrances, &c. The sum of £25. is regularly paid by the agent for the manor of Knowle, and applied in the teaching of from 15 to 25 poor children.

Fulke Greville, Esq., lord of the manor of Knowle, by indenture, 1742, in consideration of the yearly rent of £5., conveyed to Moreton Slaney, Esq., and four others, all and singular cottages and waste grounds, then inclosed in small pieces, within the said manor, together with the Bowling Green, near the Red Lion, in Knowle, (except the cottage of Mary Webb, and Baylis's Plecks, in the tenure of Thomas Field,) and all outhouses, &c., belonging the said premises, from Michaelmas next ensuing, for the term of 99 years, to pay the aforesaid sum of £5., by equal portions, at Lady-day and Michaelmas; and after the said payment, the executors, upon special trust, should employ the residue of the rents for the use of the poor of the hamlet of Knowle. The residue of this lease (1826,) is vested in Rev. Thomas Blyth, and Joseph Boulton, Esq. The property consists of 37 cottages, and as many plecks, or small pieces of land, and are let to 47 tenants, at yearly rents amounting to £35. 9s. 6d. in the whole, held by poor people at low rents; after the payment of the £5. reserved rent, about £15. is expended in the schooling of poor children, about £5. for clothing, and the remainder in repairs and other expenses. Chas. Chinn, master, and Martha Boston, mistress.

Fulke Lord Brooke, by indenture, 1694, granted to Sir Clement Fisher, and four others, the Tile House Closes, to hold the same to the use of the said Fulke Lord Brooke, for his life; and, after his decease, for the use of themselves, their heirs, and assigns, upon trust; out of the rents and profits thereof, to lay out yearly the sum of £3. to buy three coats for three poor men, and three gowns for three poor women, living in the manor of Knowle, to be marked with the letters F. B., on the breast, with red cloth; to be delivered to them on the 1st day of November, called All Saints' day; and to pay the residue of the rents to such persons as should be entitled to the manor of Knowle. The agent for the manor of Knowle pays the £3., which is expended according to the donor's intention.

Thomas Harborne, of Knowle, by will, 1728, willed that his executrix and heirs should, yearly, for ever, upon the 2nd of September, give, to six poor persons, within the manor of Knowle, that should duly attend the service of the church, a dark grey cloth coat or gown, of 10s. price. And he willed that £4. per annum should be charged upon that tenement, in Knowle, where John Patchett, cordwainer, then lived, to discharge the expenses aforesaid; or it might, in part, be given to poor children. The overseers annually expend £3. in providing gowns and coats for six poor persons. It appears, about the year 1740, that the overseers of Knowle became possessed of John Patchett's premises, which they still retain, and on which they have built several cottages. The said Thomas Harborne further bequeathed, after certain limitations, the sum of £2,000. to his brother, Edward Moore, Esq., and the minister of Knowle, on trust, that they, or their heirs, should apply the sum of £2,000. to the best charity they could think upon, and the residue of his estate he gave to his daughter, Mary Alice Harborne, who died without issue, in 1734, upon which William Bradley, as next heir, possessed himself of the estates; on which, the chapel-wardens, and overseers of the poor, on behalf of themselves, and the inhabitants and poor of Knowle, to establish the charity, in 1737, obtained a decretal order of the court of Chancery; but after the payment of costs, the sum of £386. 14s. 7d. only was recovered, as applicable to the testator's will, which was laid out in the purchase of £348. 8s. 2d. South sea annuities, in the name of the attorney general. By a subsequent order of the court, and agreeable to a scheme which had before been produced, it was ordered that the sum of £174. 4s. 1d., being a moiety of the said South sea annuities, should be sold, and the money thereby arising should be paid to Rev. Richard Taylor, the minister of Knowle, to be applied, with other money, then proposed to be advanced by Richard Smith, for the purpose of obtaining an augmentation of the said chapel, by Queen Anne's bounty. The master, by a subsequent order, approved of Moreton Slaney, Esq. being trustee, in the room of Edward Moore, deceased, and that out of the sale of the remaining £174. 4s. 1d. South sea annuities, the sum of £184. should be paid for the purchase money of certain estates, upon the trusts specified by the aforesaid scheme, to be applied for the benefit of the poor of Knowle, as also any residue arising by such sale. The premises were conveyed to Moreton Slaney, and his heirs, upon trust, to pay the clear yearly rents and profits, after discharging the charges of the said purchase, to pay the same to the poor of the hamlet of Knowle. The estates, now, (1826) including some exchange under the award of the Knowle inclosure, contain 15a. 1r. 16p., let for £20. per annum. In addition to the above, the Birmingham and Warwick canal company pay £1. 3s. 4d., in respect of 1r. 3p. of land taken by them. Out of this income distributions are made to poor parishioners, in sums varying from 5s. to 2s. 6d., to the amount of about £17. In 1827, there remained a balance in the trustee's hands of £59. 2s. 3d., to meet repairs, or casual calls for charity.

Andrew Palmer, by will, 1673, gave Richard Grimshaw, and three others, £100. to buy land, to be settled upon them and their heirs, to the end that the rents and profits thereof might be disposed of by them, as follows:—Two fifth parts thereof towards the maintenance of a preaching minister, in the chapel of Knowle; two fifth parts to the relief of the poor; and the other fifth part towards the repairs of the said chapel. Featherstone's field, at a court of the manor, 30th of Charles II., was made subject to a rent charge of £5.; which, after deducting £1. for land tax, is distributed as above directed.

Leonard Freckleton, on the 25th of April, 34th of Elizabeth, surrendered, in the manor of Knowle, into the hands of Gregory Radford, and Leonard Radford, his son, and their heirs, a messuage and lands, called the Browns, in Knowle, that they should, yearly, pay thereout the sum of 20s., viz.: 6s. 8d. to Balsall, 6s. 8d. to Knowle, and 6s. 8d. to Berkeswell; to be paid on the 20th day of March. Joseph Boulbee, Esq., the owner, (1826,) pays the above rent charges.

John Symons surrendered, June 29th, 7th of James I., to Oliver Weigham and Richard Adye, and their heirs, a cottage and lands, in Knowle, to the use of the said John Symons, and Joice, his wife, and the right heirs of the said Joice, upon condition that they pay out of the said premises, 20s., yearly, on Wednesday next before the feast of Easter, to be expended, yearly, to the poor, by the chapelwardens and overseers of Knowle. This land forms part of the Waterfield estate. Sixteen shillings is received as the amount, 4s. being deducted for land tax.

Frances Fisher, from whose gift 4s. 6d. was formerly paid, but now only 3s. is received, which is added with others to the Easter distribution.

Henry Marsh. (See Hampton in Arden.) The sum of 10s., payable to the poor of Knowle, is added to the Christmas distribution.

Francis Bent.—The sum of 3s. 4d., received by the churchwardens, for this charity, is paid (1826) by Mrs. Reddall, the owner of several houses in Knowle, and added to the Christmas distribution.

House at Rising Brook.—The sum of 22s. has continued to be paid from this house since 1685. It is included in the Christmas distribution.

Edward Tallis, by will, 1794, gave to William Dester, and the minister and chapelwardens of Knowle, the sum of £50., to be placed out at interest, which should be laid out in buying of sixpenny loaves, to be distributed to poor housekeepers of Knowle, on the feast of St. Thomas the apostle. The sum of £95. 9s. 3d. Three per cent. consolidated annuities was purchased with the above sum. Out of the annual dividends,—£2. 17s. 2d.,—£2. 10s. is laid out in the purchase of sixpenny and threepenny loaves, which are distributed in Knowle chapel, on the first Sunday of the New Year, after morning service. The balances are distributed occasionally in the same manner.

Thomas Treherne, by will, 1799, bequeathed to the minister and chapelwardens of Knowle, the sum of £25., to be placed out at interest, to be given, in bread, on New Year's Day, when Sunday, or on the Sunday before New Year's Day, to poor housekeepers of Knowle. £42. 11s. Three per cent. consols was purchased with the above sum. Out of the dividends,—£1. 5s. 6d.,—£1. 5s. is applied in the purchase of sixpenny and threepenny loaves, which are given, with Tallis's, as above stated.

Richard Grimshaw, as presented at a court held at Knowle, 22nd October, 2nd year of William and Mary, died, possessed of a certain cottage, with a garden and orchard thereto; which estate, after the death of William Betts, was assigned for the use of Knowle, for ever. There are five cottages in Golden End, in Knowle, supposed to be on the property given by Grimshaw: these cottages are occupied, rent free, by poor persons placed in them by the parish officers.

Thomas Saunders, by a court roll, 20th of Charles I., charged the Nether Close with a charge of 4s., to the poor of Knowle. Of this nothing is known.

NUTHURST HAMLET.—John Collett, by deed, 9th October, 10th of Elizabeth, gave, to trustees, a close, in Nuthall, in trust, to deliver one moiety of the rents to the churchwardens of Lapworth, and one moiety to those of Nuthurst, to distribute to the poor of those places, on Good Friday, or in aid of the highways. The sum of 18s. is received, which is carried to the poor rate.

Town Close.—This piece of land contains about 1½ acres, now in the occupation of Wm. Ingram, at the rent of £3. 10s. per annum, which is applied in aid of the poor rates.

Poor's Land and House.—These premises are let to Samuel Gazey, at the yearly rent of £3., which is also carried to the overseers' account.

Isaac Morteboys, by will, 1701, gave £15. for the poor of this hamlet. This money is now (1826) in the hands of Mr. William Ingram, who distributes 15s., as interest, to poor people, on St. Thomas's day, in portions of 1s. 6d. each.

MERIDEN, anciently called ALSPATH, a parish and considerable pleasant village situate on the Coventry and Birmingham road, $5\frac{1}{4}$ mile W.N.W. from the former, and 12 miles E.S.E. from the latter; was part of the possessions of the Countess Godiva; and contains 2,612a. 1r. 21p. of land, and, in 1841, 191 houses; and 1,071 inhabitants; in 1801, 821; 1821, 927; 1831, 892; rateable value, £4,726. 16s. 9d. In the 12th of Edward II., John de Segrave, who had considerable property here, obtained a charter for a market and fair here; both have long since fallen into disuse. The Hall is a handsome mansion, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile W. from the Church, the seat of Edmund Robert Danel, Esq.; and the property of the Digby family. Darlaston Hall, an ancient neat mansion, a little to the east of which is a belfrey, containing sixteen bells, which forms one of the most beautiful set of chimes in the kingdom; was formerly the seat and property of Sir Clement Fisher, now that of Charles Blakesley, Esq. Ryleye House, a good residence, beautifully situated on an eminence, about 200 yards north from the Church, is the property of James Tittermaster, Esq., M.D., and the seat of Colonel Whitecote. A little east from the Church, is an ancient farm house, built 1609, originally moated round; a great portion still remains; was once the seat of one of the Earls Derby. The Giants Den, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile S.W., a small farm house, built upon a mound, moated round; many ancient relics have been found here, and it is said, was formerly the residence of a giant. Walsh Hall, a very ancient farm house, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N. Alspath Hall, an ancient house, 1 mile E., has originally been large, and an extensive moat round, a great portion of which still remains. Holly-berry end, 2 miles N.E., contains three farm houses, two of which are ancient; Holly-berry House, which is the property of its occupant, Mr. H. B. Bellisson; and Marlbrook Hall, which is moated round, except on the north side, which has been filled up. Lodge green, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N., on which is an extensive brick and tile works, and several scattered houses. Meriden Green contains several houses 1 mile W. Eave's Green, a few cottages, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N.E. The Earl of Aylesford is lord of the manor, and principal owner of the soil. Mr. H. B. Bellisson, C. W. Digby, Esq., Benj. Wilks, — Greswolde, Esq., the Corporation of Coventry; Wm. King, J. Boulton, Esq., J. Little, Esq., John Lant, and others have also estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient edifice, containing nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, in which are four bells; it also contains two ancient monuments, one to the memory of John Wyard, who founded a chantry here, in the reign Henry IV.; the other is supposed by Dugdale, to have been erected to the memory of one of the Walsh's, anciently lord of this manor. In 1827, the Church received an addition of 225 sittings, of which 182 are free; the Incorporated Society for building and enlarging churches and chapels, having contributed £150., towards the expense. The living is a discharged vicarage, value in K. B. £5. 12s., now £263; patron, Earl Aylesford; incumbent Hon. and Rev. Charles Finch, M.A., for whom the Rev. Philip Scholfield, M.A., officiates. The vicarage is a neat residence near the Church. At the National school, is a useful agricultural library, containing upwards of 300 volumes; it is supported by the clergy, farmers, and respectable tradesmen of the surrounding neighbourhood; Mr. John Kimpton, librarian.

Forrest Hall, about $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles W. by N., adjoining which is a commodious archery ground; a ball-room has recently been erected; the Society is called the Woodmen of Arden, who hold their meetings in June, July, and August; the first gold obtained by a subscriber in the grand archery week, which is always in the latter month, is rewarded with a gold medal and a guinea; a silver medal is also contested for; a silver arrow is shot for on the Wednesday, and a bugle horn on Friday; distance from 180 to 240 yards. After dinner on the Wednesday and Friday, the ladies and visiting gentlemen shoot for different prizes, at 60 yards; and, in the evening, there is a ball. The Earl of Aylesford, warden; Rev. Thomas Coker Adams, secretary; and Mr. Robert Thompson, superintendent.

Union Workhouse, at the N.W. end of the village, comprises 18 parishes, viz., Allesley, Berkeswell, Bickenhill, Coleshill, Corley, Coundon, Fillongley, Hampton-in-Arden, Kinwalsey, Lea Marston, Mastoke, Meriden, Packington Great, Packington Little, Sheldon, Shustoke, Whitacre Nether, and Whitacre Over. The house will accommodate 130, average 85; Geo. and Mrs. Frances Bywater, master and matron; Charles Palmer, clerk and superintendent registrar; Francis Bint, registrar of births, deaths, and marriages, for Meriden dist.; Wm. Jacobs, registrar of births, deaths, and marriages, for Coleshill dist., and relieving officer for the Union; Thomas Stonor Simkiss, auditor; Rev. J. W. Knight, chaplain; and the Earl of Aylesford, chairman.

CHARITIES.—Girls' School. Kenelm Digby, Esq., by will, 1811, gave to Charles Mills, Esq., and Wriothlesley Digby, Esq., two shares in the Coventry Canal Navigation, in trust, to apply the dividends in the support of a charity school for female children, under the patronage of his sister, Jane Mills, with power to sell the said shares and invest the money in some other way. On the 24th of April, 1813, the Earl of Aylesford demised a croft of land containing 1a. 3r., called the Old Bowling Green, to the trustees for the purposes of the school, at a rent of 1s. for 30 years, with a covenant to renew the lease for the further period of 21 years, at the like rent. Upon these premises, situated about half a mile from Meriden, a school was built in 1813; the school-house adjoins, in which the mistress resides; about half the ground is planted, and the rest is a garden, of which the mistress has the benefit; the yearly dividends of the two canal shares was £80. in 1813; but in 1833, they were only £64. The schoolmistress receives a salary of 15s. a week, which includes an assistant, to whom gratuities are occasionally given. Coals are supplied for the school, at a cost of about £3. 3s. per annum. 24 girls are taught and clothed at an expense of between £30. and £40., which includes the clothes usually given upon their quitting school; in consequence of the depreciation in the value of canal shares, the children are not now clothed; pay scholars are also allowed. The expenditure is greater now than the income. Mrs. Mills has made up the deficiency.

Boys' School.—Wriothlesley Digby, Esq., by will, bequeathed four out of the five canal shares in the Coventry Canal Navigation, which were given him by his brother Kenelm Digby, deceased, to his brother Noel Digby, to dispose of in charity, especially in the parish of Meriden. By declaration of trust, the said Noel Digby settled two of the canal shares, numbered 104 and 105, into the names of William Somerville and others, as trustees, and their heirs to stand possessed of the said two shares, upon trust, to pay yearly out of the dividends, to the master of the National school, for the education of boys, established in Meriden, by half-yearly payments, in augmentation of the stipend of the master, and such other sums of money as the trustees should think fit, towards improving the school premises, or providing books, &c.; and any residue to be applied in apprenticing poor boys of the parish. An annual income of £64. is at present (1833) received from the two shares. The school-room was built by Wriothlesley Digby, about the year 1823, on land belonging to Lord Aylesford, for which the trustees pay 20s. a year. The master resides in a house belonging to Lord Aylesford, but fitted up by Lord Digby. The master receives £20. a year, by quarterly payments. Twelve boys are clothed and twelve others have hats and shoes given them at an annual cost of £24. 10s. 6d.; the income being considerably diminished by the depreciation of the above shares, that the clothing is discontinued for the present; books and school requisites are found for them. Boys are occasionally put out apprentice. The average number of boys is about 60, and the school is in union with the National Society. New Schools were built a few years ago, at the east end of the village, at a cost of £522. 3s. 1d. raised by subscription, and forms a neat building, with a house for the master and mistress, in the centre. John and Mrs. Nancy Kimpton, master and mistress, with salaries of £40. and £25. per annum.

Fuel and Clothing.—The two remaining shares in the Coventry Canal Navigation, left by Wriothlesley Digby, as before noticed, were, by indenture, 1831, after the death of the above named Rev. Noel Digby, were conveyed, by Mrs. Jane Mills and Kenelm Somerville, his residuary legatees to the Rev. W. Somerville, curate of Meriden, and three others, in trust, to apply the income thereof, yearly, in the purchase of fuel and clothing, comprising not only apparel, but also bed linen, blankets, and coverlids, &c. The trustees were also empowered to accumulate, out of the income of the said shares a sum not exceeding £25. yearly, and not exceeding £250. in the whole, the interest of which should be applied in like manner with the trust fund. The distribution of this charity commenced at Christmas, 1831. The dividends are (1834) £32. At the second distribution, Mrs. Mills added £20.

Thomas Avery, in 1688, left 5s. for bread to the poor. Thomas Lapworth, in 1691, left 10s. for bread to the poor, besides seven other small bequests being made for the poor, of which the original donations, amounting in the whole to £192., which sum was, by indenture 1749, invested by the Hon. Wriothlesley Digby and others, the trustees, in the purchase of a close of pasture ground, called the Right Lands, containing by estimation eight acres in Keresley. The gifts of Richard and Joseph Simmons, Mrs. Dyall, Mr. and Mrs. Featherstone, with £44. in the town stock, and £15. advanced by Mr. Jones, the vicar, to be re-paid from the rent, made up the above sum. The close is let on lease for £14. per annum, and the proceeds distributed according to the intentions of the several donors, amounting to £8. 17s. The remainder of the rent, with the sum of £6. 10s. as interest of the sum of £163., being the proceeds of 16 oak and 5 ash trees, sold from the close and laid out on mortgage, is given away on St. Thomas's day, in sums varying from 3s. to 6s. each.

Henry Burnett, by will, 1781, gave to Wriothlesley Digby, Esq., and three others, £500. in trust, to invest the same, and from the interest to pay 10s. 6d. a year for a sermon, to be preached in Meriden church, on Easter Monday, and the sum of 2s. for bread, to be distributed to the poor of Meriden, by the churchwardens and overseers, and to apply the residue of the interest for putting boys to school belonging to or residing in the parish, and for finding them books, pens, and other necessary things. By indenture, 1828, Rev. Noel Digby conveyed to the Rev. William Somerville and three others, a parcel of land called Leightons, in Keresley, in the county of the city of Coventry, then in four closes, containing about 16 acres, upon trust, after keeping down the interest of a sum of £663., secured by mortgage of the said premises, so long as the same should remain due, to apply the rents and profits to the poor, &c. The property contains about 16½ acres, with a hovel, let to Robert Oughton, as yearly tenant, at £30. per annum. Out of the rent, £20. is paid annually as interest at 4 per cent, on Barnett's £500. and £6. 10s. as interest of £163. to the trustees of the Right Lands charity; being the original sum secured by mortgage on this property, all further income arising from it must be considered the gift of the Rev. Noel Digby. The sum of £5. 4s. is given away in twopenny loaves weekly. £20. is paid to a schoolmaster, and 10s. 6d. for a sermon.

Church Lands.—This parish is entitled to two thirds of the rent of Lapworth Osier Grove. The premises consist of a house, garden, and croft, containing about 2½ acres, and worth at least £5. a year, but let at £2. 5s.; of which 30s., received by this parish, is carried to the church rate account.

Thomas West, in 1616, gave, out of Lucas's Grove, £1. 10s. yearly, on St. Thomas's day.

Thomas Ratten gave, out of Tyburn croft, 10s. yearly, on St. Thomas's day.

Mr. Thomas Holbeche gave, out of Thompson's house, 8s. yearly, on Holy Thursday.

Thomas Brown, by indenture, 1725, granted an annuity of 10s. payable out of Barley grove, to the Rev. Samuel Jones and others, in consideration of £10. paid him by Mrs. Susanna West, his late sister in law; 5s. of the said annuity to be paid to five poor women, of this parish, at the parish church, on St. Thomas's day; and 5s. to be laid out in repairing her tomb, and those of Thomas and Henry West, standing together in Meriden church.

Abraham and Susanna Winspear gave a rent charge of 20s. out of Douse field and Lodge orchard, 12s. to be laid out in bread, and 8s. for a sermon; payable the Thursday before Michaelmas.

John Reynolds, in 1756, left £10. the interest to be paid to ten poor persons.

Humphrey Hawksford, in 1778, left £20., the interest to be given in bread to the poor. In the year 1788, there was a sum of £60. in the hands of the then vicar, for which he paid £2. 8s., interest. This sum was laid out towards building the new boys' school, erected by Mr. Digby.

Mary Adcock, in 1770, gave a rent charge of 8s. a year, then vested in the vicar and churchwardens. Nothing is now known of this payment.

Post Office, at Mr. Henry Whittem's; letters arrive by gig mail, from Coventry, at 6.30 a.m., and are despatched at 8.30 p.m.

PACKINGTON, GREAT, a parish and scattered village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. E. by S. from Coleshill, containing 2,257 acres of land; and, in 1841, 60 houses, and 340 inhabitants; 1801, 315; 1821, 351; 1831, 334; rateable value, £2,633. Was held by Turchil de Warwick at the Conquest, from whom, or from his son, it passed to Geoffrey de Clinton, whose son gave it to the monastery at Kenilworth; and, at the dissolution of the abbey, it was granted to John Fisher, Esq., who built the family mansion. His son, Sir Clement, formed the park; and his son, Robert, raised a large pool to the east of the house, and erected a lodge in the park. In the early part of the 18th century, the manor came to the Right Hon. Heneage Finch, by marriage with a daughter of the last Sir Clement Fisher, who erected the present Packington Hall, from its foundation. By various improvements, made by the late Earl of Aylesford, and his father, it is now a commodious and handsome mansion, surrounded by an extensive park, well stocked with deer, which possesses a natural inequality favourable to picturesque effect, well wooded, and adorned with water; and the late Earl, who possessed highly-cultivated taste, joined to great activity of mind, studiously imparted to them an air of wildness, calculated to show off those advantages to the best effect. The Hall contains a fine Library and some choice paintings; it is the seat and property of the Right Hon. Heneage Finch, Earl of Aylesford, who is also lord of the manor and principal owner. Under a large tree in the park is a monument, bearing the following inscription:—"On Thursday, September 3rd, 1789, William Cawssey, of London, farrier, was, on this spot, struck dead by lightning. To commemorate this awful event, as well as to warn others from exposing themselves to the same danger, by taking shelter, in a thunder storm, under trees, this monument is erected." The Church, dedicated to St. James, situated in the park, is a neat brick edifice, built 1790, at the sole expense of the Earl of Aylesford, and ornamented by an altar piece, painted in fresco, by Rigaud. It contains monuments to the memory of John Fisher, Esq., who died 1570, and Sir Clement Fisher, and his wife. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £7. 10s. 2½d., now £66.; in the patronage of the Earl of Aylesford, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Charles Finch, M. A.

Church Lands.—The rents of certain premises, amounting to £11. 19s. per annum, are received by the churchwardens, and carried to account of the church rate. At a vestry, held January, 1787, it having been found that the steeple and church were in bad condition, it was ordered that the vicar and churchwardens should mortgage all the church estates, for the purpose of raising £200. or more, towards building the said church, and that all the church money then in hand, amounting to £198. should be applied to the said purpose. The church was rebuilt by Lord Aylesford, the parish contributing £400. The £200. was borrowed on bond, of which £100. has been paid off.

Poor's Money.—A sum of £225. is in the hands of the Earl of Aylesford, producing £9. a year interest. This money is composed of several ancient gifts from the Fisher family, and others, and increased by the Earl of Aylesford. The interest, with the sacrament money, amounting, in all, to about £25., is laid out annually in the purchase of linen and blankets, and distributed to about 50 poor persons, parishioners.

William Wotton gave £5. to the poor of this parish, the interest to be distributed the first Sunday in the months of November, December, January, February, and March.

William Burbidge, who died in 1803, left £10. to be added to Wotton's charity, and the interest to be given away in bread annually. He also left £10. to be given to the poor of this parish, at his death, which was distributed accordingly. This £10., and £5. as Wotton's gift, are in the hands of Mr. William Burbidge, churchwarden, who pays 15s. interest for them; and bread to the amount of 2s. 6d. is distributed on six several Sundays in the year, by the churchwardens, to poor persons attending at church.

Directory.—Earl of Aylesford, The Hall; John Cookson, shoemaker; Abm. Jones, blacksmith; Wm. Poole, gardener; Jas. Taaffe, house steward; John Windebank, game keeper. The Farmers are Jph. Dodwell, Thos. Jackson, Jph. Keatley, Ash Farm; Edwd. Mayow, Warren Farm; Thos. Oldams, Mill Farm; Jph. Shuttleworth, John Shuttleworth, and Wm. Smart, and vict., Up and Down Port.

PACKINGTON, LITTLE, a small parish and scattered village, 3½ miles S. S. E. from Coleshill, contains 996 acres of land, and, in 1841, 29 houses, and 151 inhabitants; 1801, 140; 1821, 150; 1831, 150; rateable value, £1,352. This is supposed to have been a part of Earl Mellent's possessions, but it is not mentioned in Domesday. A moiety of the manor, called Packington Pigot, after passing through the hands of several members of the noble family of Grey, came to the Crown, on the attainder of the Duke of Suffolk; and, being granted by Elizabeth, to Edward, Earl of Lincoln, was sold to Sampson Baker, and descended to his son John, of the Charter House, near Coventry. Within this lordship was a hermitage, which, together with the Church, was given to the monks of Worcester, by Gilbert Picot; and, at the dissolution, the lands were granted to the dean and chapter. The principal owners are now the Dean and chapter of Worcester, corporation of Coventry, Earl Digby, Earl of Aylesford; and Earl Stanford is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a neat stone edifice, consisting of nave and chancel, with a square wooden tower. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books at £3., now £212.; in the patronage of Earl of Aylesford, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. Charles Finch, M. A. The Rectory is a large neat residence near the church.

CHARITIES.—George Shakespear, by will, 1719, gave to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Little Packington, £10., to be laid out in land, or secured, in order to lay out 10s. in bread, yearly, for the poor, on St. Thomas's day. Now paid by Lord Aylesford, from land purchased of the Shakespear family.

The Rev. James Jacques, by will, 1788, directed his executors to pay into the hands of the rector of Little Packington, and the vicars of Coleshill and Meriden for the time being, the sum of £150., upon trust, that they and their successors, &c., should place the same out at interest, and pay, or cause to be paid, as the interest, the sum of £5. per annum, into the hands of the rector, churchwardens, and overseers of Little Packington: 50s. thereof to be paid to a schoolmistress, to teach ten poor children to read, and £3. 10s., the remainder, to be laid out in providing comfortable clothing for the poor: and he also bequeathed to John Smart, and two others, £25., upon trust, that the same should be invested in some permanent security, to be yearly laid out in bread, to the poor, one half on the first Sunday in February, and the other upon Good Friday. The sum of £150. bequeathed by the above will, was laid out in the purchase of £250. Three per cent. consols. In 1832, owing to a long lapse, the sum of £120. was received from the dividends, as due: after paying £11. 19s. 6d. for the expense of obtaining them, and £2. 3s. for a power of attorney, the residue was invested in the same stock, and added to the original sum, making £376. 9s. 1d., standing in the names of the trustees, the Rev. William Digby and the Rev. Charles Finch. The annual dividends, £11. 5s. 10d., are applied according to the intention of the donor. In respect of the £25., neither principal nor interest was paid for about 20 years, when, on the settling of an account, the parish agreed to allow £15. as interest, making a total sum of £140., for which the overseers agreed to pay interest, at five per cent. per annum, to the trustees, out of the poor rates, to be expended in bread, and given to the poor, as directed by the will.

Directory.—John Bullous, shoemaker; Hon. and Rev. Charles Finch, M.A., rector; Thos. Hill, blacksmith; Thos. Sutton, tailor; and John Bond, John Dutton, William Nicholds, Rd. Smart, Wm. Spencer, Chas. Todd, and Ephraim Todd, farmers.

SOLIHULL, an extensive parish and small market town, pleasantly situated on the road from Warwick to Birmingham, 13 miles N.W. from Warwick, 7 S.E. from Birmingham, 12 W. by N. from Coventry, and 105 N.W. from London. The town consists of one long street, with another branching off the high road to the market place; the houses in general are modern and well built, and many of them large and handsome. The inhabitants are well supplied with water from springs; the air is salubrious, and the surrounding scenery of a pleasing character. The Warwick and Birmingham and the Stratford-on-Avon canals pass through the parish: this was, at the Conquest, known by the name of Ulverlei, or Wolverley, at which time it had a church. The manor was granted by William the Conqueror to Cristina, and afterwards passed to Ralph de Limesie; by an heiress, it came to Hugh de Odingsells, in the time of King John, and thence to his son William, in the reign of Henry III., who procured the grant of a market and fair, but they were apparently soon discontinued, as Hotham, Bishop of Ely, to whom the lordship had devolved, obtained another charter, in the 13th of Edward II. The parish contains 11,296 acres of land; and, in 1841, 649 inhabited houses, 23 uninhabited, and two building, and 3,401 inhabitants, of whom 1,737 were males, and 1,664 females; 1801, 2,473; 1831, 2,817; rateable value, £12,546. The principal land owners are, Col. Robert Short, Mr. Henry Harvey, Mr. George Homer, Mr. Charles Curtis, Lady Byron, Mr. John Smallwood; the former is lord of the manor; many others have small estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Alphege, is a large cruciform structure, partly in the later and partly in the early styles of English architecture, the tracery mouldings and corbels in the interior are extremely elegant; there are also some fine specimens of tabernacle and screen work: it consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and gallery, with embattled tower, surmounted by an octagonal spire, and contains a peal of eight good bells; the vestry was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket. The living, a rectory, valued in the King's Books, at £24. 18s. 4d., now £1,462.; Rev. Archer Clive, patron, and Rev. Patrick Murray Smythe, M. A., incumbent. Tithes commuted, 1846, at £1,500. The rectory, situated near the church, is a handsome residence. The Catholic Chapel is a neat brick edifice, erected 1836, Rev. Francis Lycett, priest. The Independents have a neat Chapel here. The market, which was on Wednesday, has long been obsolete; and fairs are held April 29th, for cattle and horses; on the Friday after September 9th, and for hiring servants; and October 12th, for cheese and cattle. The Court leet, at which a constable is appointed, is held occasionally in the Town Hall, a neat brick building, in which assemblies and other public meetings are held; the magistrates also hold petty sessions here, on the first Saturday in every month; Col. Robert Short and Joseph Moore Boulton, Esq., are the presiding magistrates. The County Court comprises the following places, viz:—Solihull, Packington Great and Little, Tanworth, Packwood, Elmdon, Baddesley Clinton, Bickenhill, Hampton-in-Arden, and Lapworth; Frederick Trotter Dinwale, Esq., judge; J. B. Hanbury, clerk; George Joseph Harding, assistant clerk; Robert Short, bailiff; and John Wilks, broker.

Malvern Hall, $\frac{1}{4}$ mile west, is a large handsome mansion, surrounded with an extensive park, and is the seat and property of Henry Greswolde Wigley, Esq.

Oulton Hall, a neat brick mansion, 6 miles south from Birmingham, the residence of Miss A. Watts, and property of Mr. Alston.

Hillfield Hall, an ancient farm house, 1 mile south, occupied by Mrs. Ann Sprigg.

The Union Workhouse will accommodate 150, average 96, and comprises 12 parishes viz: Baddesley Clinton, Balsall Temple, Barston, Elmdon, Knowle, Lapworth, Nuthurst, Packwood, Solihull, Tanworth, and Yardley; Mr. Rbt. and Eliz. Hodder, master and matron; Frances Hodder, schoolmistress; Edward Kimbell, relieving officer, and registrar of births and deaths for Knowle district; Thomas Harbourne, registrar of births and deaths for Solihull dist.; Henry Preston Goodwin, registrar of marriages: there are 20 guardians and five ex-officios; George Joseph Harding, clerk; Rev. P. M. Smythe, chairman; and Thomas Lowe, surgeon.

Shirley Street, a scattered hamlet, 2 m. N.E., on the ancient Roman road. The district Church, dedicated to St. James, is a neat edifice, in the early English style of architecture, consisting of nave, chancel, gallery, and square tower. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £120., Rector of Solihull, patron, and Rev. Nash Stephenson, M. A., incumbent. A neat National school, for boys and girls, with a house for the master, erected by subscription, and a grant from the National Society, will accommodate 150, average 130; Abraham Knowles, master, and Mary Ann Ardiker, mistress. The Baptists have a Chapel here, erected 1845.

CHARITIES.—By an inquisition taken at Solihull, 5th of September, James I., under a commission of charitable uses, the jurors found numerous estates and rent-charges in the hands of feoffees, for charitable uses; these estates were, at various times, conveyed to new trustees, of which the last was 29th May, 1813. On 9th November, 1825, the commissioners, under the act for inclosing lands in Solihull, in consideration of £406. 7s. conveyed to the feoffees certain lands; and, under the inclosure, various exchanges and allotments were made, giving to the feoffees a further sum of £436. 12s. 1d., which may be considered a clear profit to the charity from these exchanges. The present rental of the property belonging to the charity is £512. 10s. 6d. per annum, besides which there was a sum of £1,237. 3s. 9d. received for timber, from which £406. 7s., as above stated, was expended in the purchase of the land at Load Heath, with other incidental expenses, amounting in the whole to £571. 19s. 3d., leaving a residue of £665. 4s. 6d., which was applied to the purposes of the current account. During the 10 years ending 1825, the sum of £1,704. was expended in repairs, exclusive of £115. paid for the building a cottage at Load Heath, which leaves a net rental of £376. 15s. 6d.; from which £40. is given to the poor, in equal portions, on Good Friday and All Souls day, agreeable to the will of John Collett, 1st of May, 7th of Elizabeth; also, a sum of £5. 14s. as Marstons, a sum of £11. 11s. as Baynton's, and a sum of £2. as Wheatley's, for charitable uses, amounting in the whole to £59. 5s., leaving a sum of £317. 10s. 6d., from which a school is maintained, consisting of a classical and an English department; the children of any parishioner are admitted to either school. The head master, who is always a graduate in one of the universities, resides in the school-house and premises rent-free, and receives a salary of £100. a year; he takes a few private pupils. There are only three boys on the foundation. The English school is conducted by an assistant master, who receives a salary of £65. a year; he is allowed to take pay scholars, if room for them. There are two school-rooms annexed to the master's house; the head master superintends the English school. The parents find books, and the feoffees provide for the repairs of the house and premises. Rev. Geo. Elliott, M.A., head master, and Rd. Sice, English master. From this fund is also defrayed the amount of the churchwardens general account, averaging £53. per annum; £5. to the organist; £2. to the clerk, for ringing the curfew bell; £2. 2s. for looking after the church chest; making, together with the master's salary, £227. 2s., thus leaving an annual surplus of £90. 8. 6d.

Poor Stock.—The sums of £45. and £5., given for a stock, which, as early as 1683, was reduced by losses from loans, to £26., after which no distinct account appears; but for several years, a sum of £18. 4s. 5d. is noticed as belonging to the fund, being out at interest, and the interest distributed to the poor.

Job Marston, by will, 1701, gave the sum of £30., which he directed his executors might lay out in the purchase of some property, to be by them conveyed to Dr. Isham, rector of Solihull, and eleven others, and their heirs, upon trust, to distribute all the rents to the poor of Solihull. By indenture, 15th May, 1707, a piece of land called the New Lunt, near Acock's green, was granted by Robert Powell, to the trustees, for the above sum. This forms part of feoffees estate, and contains 2a. 1r. 7p., now let at the yearly rent of £5. 14s.

Mary Baynton, by will, 1760, bequeathed to Sir Robert Ladbroke, his heirs, and assigns, £100., upon trust, that the said Sir Robert should invest the same in the purchase of property, on trust, that the organist of the parish church should receive the profits of the same. By indenture, 1777, Robert Ladbroke, Esq., for the sum of £162. 15s., of which £100. was the legacy of Mrs. Baynton, then in Mr. Ladbroke's hands, conveyed to the Rev. Richard Sutton Yates, D.D., and thirteen others, a messuage and two closes of land, containing 4 acres, known as the Oat Croft, on trust, to pay out of the rents £4., yearly, to the organist of the parish church, and dispose of the residue to such charitable purposes as they thought proper. This property is let for £11. 11s. This forms part of the feoffees' estate.

— Wheatley. (See Coventry.) The sum of £2., as applicable to this charity, is received by the feoffees, which is given to four poor men of the parish.

Rev. Henry Greswold, by will, 1700, ordained that his executors should lay forth the sum of £100. in purchasing lands, to be settled upon the feoffees, on trust; that they should permit the churchwardens of Solihull to receive the rents of such lands, with which they should purchase, yearly, eight shifts and eight blue gowns, the gowns to be marked on the left sleeve with the letters H. G.; to be given, yearly, on the feast of All Saints, to 4 poor boys and 4 poor girls of the parish, aged between five and fourteen years; for the fitting the said boys and girls to school, to learn to read and write; such children to be nominated by the curate and churchwardens: and he willed, that if any residue then remained, it should be laid out in buying shoes and stockings, or other apparel, to be given to the boys and girls with the gowns. Land, called Heatleys, lying in Chatwiche, appears to have been purchased with this legacy. This land consists of three closes, containing 6a. 1r. 21p., let at the annual rent of £12., to which 1a. 3r. 31p. was awarded at the Balsall inclosure act, now let for the annual rent of £1. 4s. In 1821, timber was sold from the estate to the value of £205. 0s. 9d. In 1826, two exchequer bills, of £100., were purchased, and the whole proceeds of the charity amounted to £18. 16s. 1½d., and seven of each sex received the benefit of the charity.

Edward Holbeche, of Solihull, by will, 1640, bequeathed to Thomas Waring and three others, and their heirs, a rent charge of £3., to be issuing from a close called Good Hart Land, in the parish of Tanworth, on trust, to distribute yearly, on the 1st of June, and the last day of November, to the poor and needy of Solihull, which is given in small sums of 6d. and 3d. each.

George Palmer. As early as 1687, the sum of 20s. annually was paid for this dole, and entered as a payment out of a windmill, which is gone. Mrs. Jane Ann Eleanor Wilson and Henry Greswold Lewis, Esq., who succeeded to the property of Benjamin Palmer, Esq., pay the rent charge to the churchwardens, which is given to four poor widows.

Ann Greswold, by will, 1754, gave the churchwardens of Solihull, for the time being, the sum of £50., the interest to be laid out yearly, in bread, to be distributed to the poor every Christmas day. Henry Greswold Lewis, Esq., who holds the money, sends 80 sixpenny loaves, as the interest, every Christmas day, which are given to the poor.

Mrs. Martha Palmer, by will, 1726, desired that her executrix, within twelve months after her decease, would purchase an estate of freehold, of the value of £50., to be made to and in the name of her brother, Benjamin Palmer, &c., on trust, to pay for the schooling of poor girls, to teach them to read, sew, and knit. In 1743, in consideration of £70., a messuage and three acres of land, in Solihull, then in the possession of John Overton, was conveyed to the use of the said Benjamin Palmer, his heirs and assigns; besides which, the further sum of £4. 5s. was expended in the purchase, by the said Benj. Palmer, making £74. 5s., being the same monies received by him of the representatives of the said Martha Palmer; and he and his heirs, should stand seized of them, in trust, for the said charitable uses.

Mrs. Fisher.—In 1756, certain lands were conveyed by Thomas Palmer, to Benjamin Palmer, his heirs and assigns, for £60., left by Mrs. Fisher, on trust, for the teaching of poor girls of this parish. This property, and that of Martha Palmer, being both for the same purpose, have been let together in one lease,—which led to the mistake, when, on the enclosure of the common fields in Knowle, an allotment of 3a. 0r. 19p. was awarded to Martha Palmer's charity, which was for the joint property,—which now produces the annual rent of £15. 11. A schoolmistress is paid £12. a year, for which she teaches 15 poor girls. A surplus remained in the hands of the trustees, (in 1827,) amounting to £95. 13s. 9d.

Thomas Doley, by will, 1704, left certain lands, which, on a survey, in 1800, were found to consist of 1a. 3r. 19p., in Berry field, and 2a. 1r. 10p. in that of Seed furlong, in the parish of Solihull and manor of Knowle; about the year 1816, on the enclosure of the manor of Knowle, there was awarded in lieu thereof, an allotment in Berryfield, of 4a. 1r. 20p. to the trustees of Doley's charity. The land is let to Joseph Capner, at the yearly rent of £8., which is employed in the clothing of poor boys of the parish, with a cloth jacket and trousers and a hat.

THE TAMWORTH DIVISION

Forms the north boundary of the hundred and of the County, having the county of Stafford on the north, comprises 10 parishes, 5 chapelries, 2 townships, and 1 extra parochial liberty, viz.: Austrey, Baddesley Ensor, Grendon, Kingsbury, Middleton, Newton Regis, No Man's Heath, extra parochial, Polesworth, Warton, chap.; Seckington, Shuttington, Tamworth, Amington, chap.; Bolehall and Glascote, twp.; Wilnecote with Dosthill, chap.; Fazeley, chap.; Syerscote, twp.; and Wigginton, chap.; the three latter are in Staffordshire. 32,640 acres of land; in 1841, 2027 inhabited houses, 96 uninhabited, and 2 building, with 9,590 inhabitants, of whom 4,703 were males, 4,797 females, of these numbers 2,224 males, 2,153 females, were under 20 years of age; 2,569 males, 2,644 females, were 20 years old and upwards; 7,611 persons were born in this county, and 1,979 elsewhere.

AUSTREY, a parish and scattered village, 6 miles E. N. E. from Tamworth, containing 2,280 acres of land; and, in 1841, 124 houses, with 497 inhabitants; 1801, 491; 1821, 542; 1831, 540; rateable value, £3579. 10s. This was the property of Wulfic Spot, the founder of Burton Abbey, about 60 years before the Conquest, from whom it passed to Leofric, Earl of Mercia, who gave a portion of the lordship to the monks of Burton Abbey, which they retained until the dissolution; and, being then granted to William, Lord Paget, in the 2nd of Philip and Mary, sold it to the Breretons. The principal land owners are Geo. Moor, Esq., Mr. Thos. Oldaker, Mr. Jph. Corbett, and the trustees of Monk's charity. The Church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, consists of nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, containing five bells, and surmounted with a lofty spire. The church was repaired, new pewed, and an organ added in 1845, at a cost of £2,500., raised by subscription, and a loan of £400. from the Incorporated Society. In 1844, a beautiful stained glass window was put in the end of the south aisle, to the memory of the late Rev. Roger Bass, M. A., late vicar, who, on the 8th of April, in the same year, fell from his horse, and expired instantly. The living, a vicarage, V. K. B. £8., now £300., in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. W. Herrick Dyott, M. A. The vicarage is a good residence, pleasantly situated near the church. The Baptists have a large neat brick Chapel here, erected 1819.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Monke, of Shenston, in the county of Leicester, by will, 1713, devised all his messuages and lands, within the lordship of Allestrey, or Austrey, in the county of Warwick, and in Blaby and Countesthorpe, in the county of Leicester, (subject to certain limitations, which afterwards failed, and chargeable with an annuity of £100. payable to his wife,) to Sir Robert Burdett, Bart., of Bromcote, and four others, in trust, out of the rents to repair the monument, erected by him, in the parish church of Austrey, to his son, Herbert Monke; and to pay £10. for putting out an apprentice, one boy, belonging to some poor person of Austrey, and £5. to be laid out in an entertainment at Austrey, for his said trustees and their friends, some day in Easter week, yearly, &c., and the residue of the said rents to be laid out for charitable uses, within the parish of Measham, in the county of Derby, and the parishes of Shenston, Austrey, and Whitwick, as his said trustees should appoint. The total income of this charity, now, (1833) is £291. 13s. 3d., of which £23. 12s. 6d. is a dividend, on stock purchased with accumulations. About 14 apprentices are put out in each year, from the above-named parishes, giving an expenditure of £140. A sum, varying from £15. to £20. is paid to a schoolmaster in Austrey. The poor of this parish also receive £15. annually, given in bread or money, in sums varying from 2s. to 10s. to a family. Other sums are paid to the other parishes named.

John Lakin, by will, 1630, gave £40. to trustees, the profits to be equally employed for the church and the poor. Anne Lakin, executrix of the above, gave £10. to be employed for the use of the poor. Florence Brown gave £3. for the use of the poor, at Whitsuntide. John Prior, vicar of Austrey, added £7. to the above £3., the profits to be given to the poor at the feast of Pentecost. These sums, amounting to £60., were laid out in the purchase of a close at Little Appleby, and vested in certain trustees, who, some time in the 17th century, with the approbation of the parishioners, sold the same to Mr. George Moore, for the sum of £100. Elizabeth Smith, of Coventry, by will, 1696, gave £100. to the poor of Austrey. Thomas Monk gave £26., on condition, that bread to the value of £1. 6s. should be yearly given in respect thereof. In consideration of the above sums, with £9. interest added, the sum of £235., was laid out in the purchase of a close containing 18a. 1r., in Barwell, in the county of Leicester, which was afterwards sold, and the trustees are now possessed of a farm house, &c., in Austrey, and 10a. 1r. 15p. of land, let at £27. per annum, to John Smith. The income is applied in giving bread to the value of £1. 6s. for Monk's gift, in apprentice fees, and the general surplus given to poor persons, in money, in sums varying from 3s. to 12s. each.

Mr. Hill, by will, left £10., the interest to be given away in bread to the poor. This sum (1833) is now in the hands of Mr. John Barrett, one of the trustees.

Miss E. Toone, by will, 1818, gave £150., to be invested in land, or placed in the funds; the interest to be applied in supporting a schoolmaster. This legacy, after deducting the legacy duty, was, with some accumulation of interest, laid out in the purchase of £141. 13s. 6d. Four per cents, since converted into Three and a half per cents, yielding a dividend of £4. 19s. 2d., which is received by the minister, and applied to the use of the parish school. A new one is now in the course of erection; Hugh Butler, master, with a salary of £45. per annum; and Sarah Stanton, mistress, salary, £16. per annum.

BADDESLEY ENSOR, a small parish and village, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. N. W. from Atherstone, containing 1,012a. 3r. 17p. of land; in 1841, 123 houses, and 579 inhabitants; 1801, 371; 1821, 335; 1831, 568; rateable value, £1,322. 6s. Was held at the Norman survey by Turchil de Warwick, and came, with his other possessions, to Henry de Newburgh. In the 10th of Richard II., the lordship was owned by Robert de Harcourt, but shortly afterwards passed, by marriage, to a person named Ensor, from which circumstance the appellation, Ensor, was given it. It subsequently came to Herthull, and from him to Cokain, of Pooley Hall. The principal owners are W. S. Dugdale, Esq., Mr. Jph. Thompson, Mr. Geo. Harris, Mrs. Martha Burbury, and J. C. Hinks. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt in the early English style, in 1846, at a cost of £3,000., principally defrayed by W. S. Dugdale Esq. It consists of nave and chancel, with a low square tower, surmounted by an octagonal spire. The living, a perpetual curacy, value £106., has been augmented with £1,200. Queen Anne's bounty, and £200. parliamentary grant, in the patronage of the parishioners, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Bradley, M.A. The Independents have a small Chapel here. Here are two extensive coal mines in this parish.

CHARITIES.—George Abbott, by will, 1647, gave, out of his lands in Baddesley, the sum of £4. 10s. per annum, for ever, for a salary to a free school, to teach pettys, both boys and girls, to be paid in May and November; and also, out of the said lands, he bequeathed 10s. to buy school books. He left his estate also chargeable to the said annual payments, and others, to the parish of Caldecote, abating proportionably. The sum of £4. 2s. is received from an estate occupied by George Palmer. From 1824 to 1833, there being no schoolmaster, no payment was made. It has been agreed, that the balance shall be paid, and employed, with other subscriptions, in the erection of a school. A small one was erected in 1840.

By the returns of 1786, it is stated, a rent charge of 8s. per annum, then vested in Rowland Farmer, given by some unknown donor, to eight poor widows. Last paid by one Morris, about 1787.

Directory.—Post Office at Mr. Michael Atkins'. Letters arrive at 9 a. m., and are despatched at 6 p. m. Hy. Atkins, beerhouse; Michael Atkins, grocer; Rev. Wm. Bradley, M. A.; William Collins, beerhs. and grocer; Wm. Crossley, vict. and farmer, Maypole; Jph. Dooley, underground bailiff; My. Garratt, butcher; Thos. Middleton, tailor; Jph. Phillips, grocer; Thos. Shilton, vict. Red Lion; Ed. Toon, timber mcht.; Jph. Wallis, drag rake maker. The farmers are Catherine Clark, Jas. Cooke, Old Hall; John Cooke, Geo. Harris, and drag rake maker; and Jph. Thompson.

GRENDON, a scattered parish, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. W. from Atherstone; containing, with the hamlet of Whittington, 2,183 acres of land. In 1841, here were 110 houses, and 529 inhabitants; rateable value, £3,637. 4s. 9¼d. This is included in the Conqueror's survey. In the reign of King Stephen, the family of Grendon assumed their surname from this place; and, in the 13th of Edward II., their possessions came, by marriage, to Sir Philip de Chetwynd, in which ancient family they have ever since remained. The present possessor, Sir Geo. Chetwynd, Bart., on his coming to Grendon, in 1824, found the old mansion much neglected; but under the direction of Potter, of Lichfield, he has much enlarged and improved it, furnishing it with a valuable library, and extensive collection of paintings, coins, and medals; it is situate in a very ancient park. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient plain edifice, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and south transept, which contains two handsome stained glass windows, representing the Chetwynd family arms, as early as the 13th century, placed there by the present Sir George Chetwynd, who also contributed an organ, and, in 1833, completely repaired the chancel, restoring the two ancient monuments there, and contributing an altar piece, of fine oak carving, with rails of corresponding character, before the communion table. In 1847, a handsome square embattled tower, of freestone, was built, at a cost of £1,800. to be defrayed by a parish rate; it contains three bells. The living, a rectory, V. K. B. £20. 3s. 4d., now £525.; in the patronage of Sir George Chetwynd, Bart., and incumbency of the Rev. Henry Hanmer, M. A. The rectory is a plain brick building, near the church. The Coventry canal intersects this parish.

WHITTINGTON, a small hamlet adjoining Atherstone, and 2 miles S.E. from the parish church; here were, in 1841, 109 inhabitants; a part of this was given to the monks of Merevale, by Robert, Earl Ferrers, when he founded that monastery, the residue then belonging to the Grendon's; William Stratford Dugdale, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner. Here is an extensive coal wharf on the Coventry canal.

Grendon Lodge, a handsome mansion, at the western extremity of Atherstone, but in this hamlet, is the seat and property of John Holme, Esq.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Gibson, by will, gave a legacy of 50s. to the poor, to be distributed on Good Friday. Rev. Arthur Stevens, who died in 1737, charged an estate at Dostill, called Hockley, with the above payment; it is the property of Sir Robert Peel.

Edward Healey, in 1769, left £30.; and Edward Collins, 1777, left £10. for teaching poor children of this parish. This sum of £40. is secured on the Pinwall Lane turnpike road, producing £5. per cent. interest, which is paid to a Dame's school, for instructing three poor children of the parish.

Grendon Directory.—Ann Butler, shopkeeper; Sir George Chetwynd, Bart., The Hall; George Clarke, Rev. Henry Hanmer, M.A., Rector; John Keay, beerhouse; Samuel Mallaby, corn miller; Thomas Peerman, cattle dealer: the farmers are, Thos. Alkin, John Baker, Mount Farm; William Croft, Thomas Felthouse, and Thomas Wood.

Whittington Directory.—Samuel Allen, hat manufctr. and shopkeeper; Eliz. Arnold, dress maker; Miss Jane Bailey, George Day, vict. and wharfinger, King's Head; John Holme, Esq., Grendon Lodge; Mr. Samuel Moore, Thomas White, timber merchant; Joseph Wilner, beerhouse and shoemaker; and John Alkin, and Thos. Powers, farmers.

KINGSBURY, an extensive parish and small village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. by E. from Coleshill, contains 8,004 acres of land; in 1841, 280 houses and 1,322 inhabitants; rateable value, £12,191. The Countess Godiva held Kingsbury, and in the reign of King John it came by marriage to Peter de Bracebrigge, whose descendents made this their principal residence until the reign of Elizabeth, when they sold it to Sir Francis Willoughby, of Middleton. Dugdale says, that in the time of the Saxons, this was a seat belonging to the Mercian Kings, and thinks that Bertulph had a great council of his prelates and nobles here in 851. The principal land owners are Sir Robert Peel, Bart., —Willoughby Esq., —Martin, Esq., K. Greenway, Esq., W. Y. Peel, Esq., John Boulton, Esq., Dr. John Staunton, T. Lovett, Esq., Wm. Wakefield, Esq., and Lord Middleton; the former is lord of the manor of Kingsbury, and the latter of Hurley. Kingsbury Hall is an ancient stone building, near the church, in the occupation of Mr. Walter Coleman, farmer. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is an ancient stone structure, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, gallery, and square embattled tower, in which there are five bells. The living, a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £8. 10s.; now, £118.; has been augmented with £200. parliamentary grant: in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor, and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Cary, M.A. The Vicarage is a neat residence near the church.

Bracebrigge Chapel, formerly belonging to a family of that name, is a very ancient edifice, adjoining the church. Some of the Mercian kings are said to be buried here. It is now used as a Sunday school.

HAMLETS.—Cliffe, adjoining Kingsbury. Dosthill, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. Hemlingford Green, or Bodmoor Heath, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by N. Hurley, a considerable village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles E., contains 604 inhabitants. And Wheatley, a joint hamlet with Dosthill.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Coton, by indenture, 1686, demised to William Willington and others, a messuage, with the garden and orchard thereto belonging, and an acre and a half of meadow, lying in Kingsbury Meadow; also, two cows' grass, out of Hemlingford Green, all in this parish; also a close, formerly called the Old Croft, then in two parts, at Pipe Hill, near Lichfield; and, also a rent-charge of £4. yearly, clearly to be paid out of grounds called Fur Woods, in three parts, at Arley, in the county of Warwick, liberty being reserved, that the said Thomas Coton, his heirs, or assigns, to put a horse or horses at their pleasure, at the said buildings, at Kingsbury; and also, except a rent charge of 30s. per annum, to be paid out of the closes at Pipe Hill, for ever, to the vicar of Kingsbury, for the time being, which was given by Thomas Coton, deceased, father of the said Thomas Coton, &c., to hold to the use of themselves, and their heirs, and of the vicar of Kingsbury, for the time being, upon trust, to dispose of the whole profits for the following uses, viz.:—the messuage at Kingsbury, with the lands, meadow ground, and cows' grass thereto belonging; and also the clear yearly rent of £4., and 10s. more to be paid to a schoolmaster, at Kingsbury, to teach the poor boys and girls of Kingsbury, Nether Whitacre, and the hamlet of Marston; at the same messuage, to learn the Bible well, to learn the Accidence, and further, in Latin, and to teach them to write. &c. The premises consist of a good residence for the master; in one of the three low rooms the school is kept. There are two gardens and an orchard, about one acre in the whole, worth about £10. a year; and the other property is let for £18. 18s. per annum, from which, the master pays 30s. a year to the vicar of Kingsbury; he also receives 21s. a year from the proprietors of the Wyrley and Easington canal, for its crossing the Old Croft, at Pipe hill. He also receives 20s. a year from the owners of Tibhall farm, in respect of the gift of Philip Stanyers, Esq., which is laid out in Bibles, and distributed to the children, under the superintendence of the vicar. The schoolmaster provides a stable for the proprietors of the Coton Hall estate; he receives all the children of Kingsbury, the hamlet of Marston and Nether Whitacre, who choose to come; they are instructed in reading and writing gratis, but pay for learning arithmetic. The parish provides a load of coals for the school annually; Latin is not taught; about 40 attend in winter, but in summer not so many. In 1843, a new school was erected, which is a neat brick building; will accommodate 100, average 50; Joseph Sproston, master, with a salary of £50. per annum. A girls' school is held in the master's house, Esther Mason, mistress, whose salary is £20. per annum; the salaries are increased by subscription.

Ann Willington, by will, gave £50. to the poor, likewise about seven acres of land; with part of the above sums, three houses were purchased, which have been rebuilt by the parish, the parish officers appointing the tenants. The land, situated at Hedge hill, contains 7a. 0r. 39p., now let for £12. per annum.

The Table of Benefactions contains several benefactions, amounting in the whole to £360., of which Philip Stanyers, Esq., of Tibhall, gave £100., Mrs. Eliz., Worthington, £50., with various others of £20., £10., and £5. each. In respect of these gifts, the sum of £300. is secured by mortgage, on lands at Wheatly, belonging to Wm. Coates, for which he pays 4½ per cent interest, which is regularly paid at the church, on St. Thomas's day. The parish also pays 16s. interest for £19. 19s., the bequest of Mr. Josiah Marshall. The farmers make a collection, called corn money, usually about £14. The whole of the above are distributed in money to the poor, on St. Thomas's day. Philip Stanyers also gave £1. annually to the schoolmaster, and £1. in Bibles, paid by the owner of Tibhall farm; the Bibles are brought to the church on St. Thomas's day.

Post Office, at Mrs. My. Abraham's; letters arrive at 10 a.m., and are despatched at 4 p.m. Marked 1, live at Bodymoor Heath; 2, Dosthill; 3, Hurley; and the remainder at Kingsbury, or where specified.

MIDDLETON, an extensive parish and well built village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.S.W. from Tamworth, contains 3,778 acres of land, and, in 1841, 103 houses and 505 inhabitants; rateable value, £4,662. 2s. 7d. : was disposed of to the Marmions, of Tamworth Castle, soon after the Conquest; and, upon the failure of that line, became the property of the family of Middleton, who have held it from the time of Henry VI., and still have a handsome mansion here; the grounds around are well wooded and watered. Lord Middleton and Hon. Mrs. Noel are the principal owners; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a square tower. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £100.; Lord Middleton, patron, and Rev. H. V. Hodge, incumbent. The Birmingham and Fazeley canal intersects this parish.

CHARITIES.—Francis Willoughby, Esq., by will, 1672, gave £5. a year; of which, £4. to be paid to a schoolmaster, to teach poor children, and £1. to buy bibles for the said poor children.

Robert Gorton, of Shrewsbury, by will, 1693, left £100., or £5. a year, to buy a dozen of penny bread, to be given, at church, every Sunday throughout the year, to poor persons; and the remainder, 48s., to a schoolmaster or mistress, to teach poor children. Sir Thomas Willoughby, in 1700, gave a further sum, and, with the whole, purchased certain lands, called the Sherdales, in the parish of Kingsbury. The property consists of several closes of land, in Wheatley, a hamlet in Kingsbury parish, let to John Cheate, at £27. 10s. per annum. The rent is paid to the vicar, half yearly, and disposed of on Good Friday and St. Thomas's day, on each of which, £5. is paid to a schoolmaster; £1. 16s. is paid for bread, of which 12 penny loaves are given away every Sunday for six months, and 10s. of threepenny loaves on Good Friday, and £6. 18s. 6d. to poor persons not receiving relief. It is also stated, that 20s. a year was left out of Squire Willoughby's estate, at Cliffe, in the parish of Kingsbury, to buy bibles, but has not been paid since 1810.

Georgiana Dowager Baroness of Middleton, by deed, 1783, vested £1,000. Three per cent. consols, in the names of Sir Robert Lawley, Bart., and Andrew Hacket, their executors and assigns, to pay, yearly, 20s. thereof in buying pious books, and, after deducting the expenses, should apply the residue in providing a schoolmaster and school-mistress in the parish, &c. The school for boys is kept in a room adjoining the church; it is open to all boys of the parish; usually about 25 attend. The master lives in the school-house, in the village; he is also permitted to occupy 4 acres of ground, rent free, adjoining his house, by Lord Middleton. There is no school room for girls: the mistress usually has about 50, appointed by the vicar and churchwardens. Of the dividends, 20s. is expended in books, for the use of the schools, and £14. 10s. each is paid to the master and mistress. Private subscriptions are occasionally made for the mistress.

Samuel White, Gent., of Arley, by will, 1715, gave, to the poor of Middleton, 20s. a year, for ever, to give 10 dozen of white penny loaves, and 10s. in money, every Whit-Monday; to be paid out of the Broome Close, in Over Stone hall, in the parish of Spenstone, in the county of Stafford; and, also, 10s. to be paid for a sermon on Whit Monday. It is also stated in the old churchwardens' books, that, after the payment of the 30s., the overplus of the rent was to be given to poor widows attending church on that day. The close of land contains 3a. 3r. 18p., let for £6. per annum, which is paid to the vicar. A sermon is preached on Whit Monday, and part of the money distributed in bread, and money usually in sums of 5s. each, to poor widows.

Directory.—Thos. Binder, gardener; Jonthn. Cooper, schoolmaster and shopkeeper; Wm. Davis, shoemaker; Thos. Dixon, shoemaker; Samuel Hall, wheelwright; John Hindley, farm bailiff; Rev. Hy. V. Hodge, incumbent; Ann Langley, schoolmistress; Sir Fras. Lawley, The Hall; Jno. Mason, tailor; Thos. Mason, tailor; Jno. Stevenson, vict., Green Man. The farmers are Jno. Buckfield, Park Gate; Jane Cox, Hunts Green; Jph. Davis, Littlewood end; Jph. Dutton, and miller; Thos. Gibson, Upper House; Jno. Jackson, Saml. Jackson, Wood farm; Hy. Lees, Hy. Owen, Hunts Green; Jph. Owen, Thos. Sudbery, Wm. and Sarah Tidy, Eliz. Walker, and Thos. Yeomans.

NEWTON REGIS, a parish and well built village, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. by E. from Tamworth, contains 1,281 acres of land; in 1841, 104 houses, and 454 inhabitants; rateable value, £1,530.: was originally a member of Seckington, and being held by the crown until the time of Henry II., obtained the name of Newton Regis. The principal owners are Capt. Wm. Inge, Mr. Wm. Princep, Sir Rt. Burdett, Bart., and Mr. Jno. Spencer: the two former own the manorial rights. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of nave and chancel, with a high embattled tower, surmounted by a spire. The living, a rectory, V.K.B. £14. 1s. 5½d.; now, £300.; Sir Robt. Burdett, Bart., and Capt. Wm. Inge, patrons; and Rev. Wm. Heacock, B.A., incumbent. The Rectory is a good residence, near the church. A neat National School was erected near the church, in 1845, by Capt. Wm. Inge, and cost £400.: will accommodate 150.

CHARITIES.—Robert Spencer gave 10s., yearly, to the rector of Newton Regis, for preaching a sermon, upon one of certain texts specified, on the Sunday next following the day of his burial, or on the day of his burial, being September 9th, 1721. He also gave 20s., yearly, to the poor who should attend the preaching of the said sermon. The land charged is situated in this parish, now (1833) the property of Henry Ward, of Atherstone, by whom the annuity is paid, and distributed as above.

Robert Spencer gave 10s., yearly; 5s. thereof to the rector of Newton Regis, for preaching a sermon on the Sunday, in the afternoon, next after the day of his burial, or on that day when Sunday; and the other 5s. to be distributed to the poor, after the sermon. He was buried October 10th, 1728. William Princep, Esq., is the owner of the estate in this parish so charged, and pays the annuity, which is distributed as above.

Directory.—Jas. Baxter, wheelwright; Geo. Glover, shoemaker; Edwd. Grice, blacksmith; Dnl. Harrison, tailor; Thos. Humphreys, butcher; Jph. Joyce, plumber and painter; Wm. Riley, farmer and beerhouse; Wm. Riley, jun., carpenter and wheelwt.; Rev. Chas. Hy. Sale, M.A., curate, Rectory; Jph. Shakespear, shoemkr.; Sml. Shilcock, vict., Queen's Head; George Wilkes, shoemaker. The farmers are Wm. Princep, Wm. Smith, John Spencer, and Edward Swinnerton.

NO MAN'S HEATH, an extra parochial liberty, $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. by E. from Tamworth, comprises about 15 acres of enclosed land, and has 10 houses, with 30 inhabitants. At this place the counties of Warwick, Leicester, and Derby meet in a point so small that a man may be in them all at the same time.

POLESWORTH, an extensive parish and village, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles E.S.E. from Tamworth, contains 6,310 acres of land; in 1841, 421 houses, and 1,844 inhabitants; 1801, 1,355; 1821, 1,834: rateable value, £10,367. 15s. Dugdale, upon questionable authority, represents the nunnery here, as being the earliest religious house founded in this county. we are, however, certain, that after William the Conqueror gave Polesworth to Robert Marmion, he expelled the nuns from their convent here, and they were forced to retire to a cell belonging to them at Oldbury. Within a year, he repented of his harsh conduct, restored the nuns to their original station, and bestowed the town of Polesworth upon them with his demesne of Waverton. From this time, the establishment flourished uninterruptedly, until the dissolution, supported by numerous additional benefactions; and the nuns obtained, from Henry III., a charter for a market and fair. Some fragments of the monastic buildings yet remain in the vicinity of the church. The principal land owners are Sir George Chetwynd, Lord Beauchamp, Sir Robert Burdett, Bart., Trustees of Polesworth School, Wm. Wynne Griffin, Esq., and Mr. Robt. Hanbury: the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Edith, is an ancient stone structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a square embattled tower, in which there is a peal of five good bells. The living is a discharged vicarage, valued in the King's Books at £10.; now, £502.: in the patronage of the crown, and incumbency of the Rev. John Duff Schomberg, B.A. The Vicarage is situate a short distance from the church. The Independents have a small chapel here. The Coventry Canal and Trent Valley Railway intersect this parish; the station situated $\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.; Thos. Wright, station master. Here are three extensive coal mines in this parish.

Frezley, another hamlet, consisting of a few well-built, but scattered houses.

Hall End, a hamlet and manor, having two farms and four cottages, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. W. Lord Beauchamp owns the manorial rights.

Pooley Hall, half a mile W. by N., situated on a commanding eminence, overlooking the river Anker, is an interesting specimen of ancient domestic architecture, erected in the reign of Henry VIII., by Sir Thomas Cockain; this being the principal seat of the family from the time of Henry IV. It is an irregular structure, partaking of the embattled style of the previous turbulent period, and the more convenient and ample openness of construction, then coming into use, now occupied as a farm house.

Warton, a hamlet and chapelry, 1 mile N.E. by E. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a neat stone structure, erected 1841, at a cost of £1015. The living, a perpetual curacy; Vicar of Polesworth patron; Rev. Rd. Millington, M.A., incumbent. The Baptists have a small chapel here, erected 1812.

CHARITIES.—Sir Francis Nethersole, Knt., by deed, 1655, conveyed to John Swinfen, of Swinfen, and five others, and their heirs, a house, newly-erected, for the habitation of the minister of Polesworth; with the barns, gardens, and orchards thereto belonging, situate in the town of Polesworth; and a barn, newly-erected, for a tithe barn; and a piece of land, 21 feet in length, and $4\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, at the end of the barn; and a small piece of ground, one yard in breadth, alongside the said barn, &c.; and a messuage, lately built of stone, for a school house there; and the gardens, buildings, orchards, thereto; and a croft adjoining the said school, 132 feet in length, and 26 feet in breadth; and a parcel of ground, called the Berrilie Meadow, in three parts, with various other tenements and lands in Wareton; and all those the impropriate tithes of Wareton, Dordon, and Pooley, in the parish of Polesworth, with certain exceptions; and also an annuity of £26. 13s. 4d. yearly, issuing out of the manor of Holt Hall and Frezley, in the said parish; to hold the said premises in trust, to permit the said Sir F. Nethersole to take the rents for his life; and, after his decease, upon trust, to permit the vicar of Polesworth, for the time being, if there settled, to enjoy the same. And upon further trust, to place a schoolmaster in the edifice to be erected next the school-house, for his habitation; and to provide a schoolmaster and mistress to teach school in the said stone building, one part for boys, the other for girls; and employ the rents of the said premises for the maintenance of a schoolmaster and mistress, to teach the children of the parish of Polesworth; the boys to write and read, and the girls to read, and work with the needle. The estates have been carefully surveyed and mapped, and were let in 1832. The vicar's estates comprise impropriate tithes in Dordon, amounting to £107., which includes a modus of 20s. per annum, covering about 178 acres. In Wareton, a farm, containing 129a. 1r. 24p., let to John Chilwell, for £232. per annum; in the Fleet meadow, in four parcels, containing 22a. 0r. 1p., let to Thomas Hall, for £43. per annum; six closes of meadow and pasture, containing 37a. 3r. 31p., let to Richard Hill, at £67. per annum; and a messuage, let to Timothy Fletcher, at £5. per annum. The whole subject to a land-tax of £7. 6s. leaving a clear income to the vicar of £454., with the donative house, garden, yard, and outbuildings, and two doles of meadow in the Town meadow, which are occupied by the vicar, rent-free. The various estates for the general charity produce a rental of £370. 13s. 4d.; besides which, the trustees have a sum of £1,193. 7s. 3d. Three per cent consols., standing in the names of Dugdale Stratford Dugdale, Esq., and Charles Edward Repington, Esq.; the dividends, £35. 16s. per annum, make the total income of this branch of the charity (1833) £406. 9s. 4d.; from which the vicar receives £1. for a sermon, at the annual meeting, when £5. is allowed for a dinner in the school house. The schoolmaster has £100. per annum, and the schoolmistress £40. per annum, with each an allowance of £5. for coals; £3. 3s. is paid to Wareton Sunday school, and £5. 5s. to that of Polesworth, and £5. to the master of Tamworth school; which, with other small payments, amounting in the whole to £186. 12s. 4d., leaving a surplus income of £219. 17s. Out of this sum, one or two apprentices are put out to better sorts of trades, with premiums of £10. each. Also, about £22. is annually appropriated to a preparatory school. The repairs form the only remaining head of expenditure; the whole are in good repair, and the schools, and the master and mistress's houses, have been rebuilt, at an expense of £3,139. The average number of boys attending the school is 65. They are not admitted till they are seven years old, and can read a book of monosyllables; the girls average also 65; and the preparatory school 56 children. Daniel Lees, master; and Sarah Bird, mistress.

George Neale, by will, 1631, gave £20. which was to be paid to Thomas Corbyn, Esq., of Hall End. This estate now belongs to Earl Beauchamp, and the sum of 35s. is yearly paid by Mr. John Lakin, the tenant of a part of the estate, and distributed to poor widows, in sixpenny and shilling loaves.

William Beck, of Freazley, in this parish, gave £10., the interest to be given to poor widows, 1s. each, on Good Friday. John Weston, of Freazley, gave £10., the interest to be given to the poor on the 9th day of April, or Good Friday. Mary, the wife of John Tubuge, gave £5. the interest to be distributed in the week before Christmas, to the poor. Thomas Bardet gave £8., the interest to be given, yearly, to the poor of Freazley. William Wragg, A.M., late vicar, bequeathed £10. to the poor of the parish, to be distributed by two dozen loaves a day, on the five Lord's days next following the 11th day of November, yearly, by the minister. Walter Moseley of Dordon, in this parish, in 1716, gave £10., the interest to be laid out in penny bread; and two dozen given at the church to the poor, yearly, upon Trinity Sunday, and four Sundays following. In consideration of the above sums, and others, amounting in the whole to £7.3s. 10d., a close of pasture ground, called the Common close, at Barwell, in Leicestershire, was, by indenture, conveyed to the churchwardens and overseers of Polesworth, for the uses above-mentioned. The land contains 4 acres, and is used as garden ground, and let for £10. per annum, paid to the churchwardens, from which £1. is paid to the vicar, and laid out in bibles, testaments, and prayer books, supposed to be on account of a portion of Michael Biddulph's charity, having been employed in the purchase. The remainder is given away in bread.

William Hall, by will, 1756, gave £20. to the poor of Polesworth; Ann Shaw, in 1751, left £15. to the poor of this parish; and the Rev. Nathaniel Troughton, vicar, in 1789, left £10. to the same use; these sums, amounting to £45., are (1833) placed in the Atherstone Savings Bank, and the interest distributed in bread.

Michael Biddulph, in 1687, gave £4. 5s. 8d. yearly, to buy Bibles, to be distributed by the minister of the parish every half year. This payment has not been received for a very long time; it is said to have originally been paid by St. John's Hospital, at Lichfield.

Rev. William Madan, A. M., late vicar of Polesworth, who died 17th April, 1824, gave £100., the interest to be expended annually in the purchase of Bibles. This sum is placed in the Atherstone Savings Bank, and the interest is given away by the minister in Bibles, Testaments, and Prayer Books.

Andrew Newton, Esq., in 1821, presented £75. to the Sunday school; this sum is invested in the Atherstone Savings Bank, and the interest applied to the use of the Sunday school.

Post Office, at Mr. Wm. Wilkes'; letters ar. at 8.30. a.m., and are despatched at 5.30. p.m.

SECKINGTON, a parish and small village, at the northern extremity of the county, 4 miles N. E. by N. from Tamworth, contains 1200 acres of land; in 1841, 24 houses and 118 inhabitants; rateable value £1194.; this was part of the large possessions of Earl Mellent, but in the reign of Henry II. belonged to William de Camvile, a female descendent and heiress of which family marrying, in the time of Edward II., Robert Burdett, the lordship passed to him, and is now held by Sir Robert Burdett, Bart., to whom it came by regular descent, from the above named Robert. Seckington is remarkable as having been the theatre where a sanguinary conflict took place between Cuthbert, King of the West Saxons, and Ethelwald, the Mercian King, in 757. Near to the Church are the remains of a large entrenched camp, of a circular form, the outer ditch being twenty feet wide at the top, ten feet wide at the bottom, and twelve feet deep; the inner diameter of the camp is three hundred feet. On the north side is an artificial mound, forty-two feet high, and twenty-three feet wide at the summit, thought by Dugdale to have been intended for an exploratory or watch tower. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, consists of nave and chancel, in which is an ancient marble tablet, to the memory of the Burdets; with a handsome lofty spire, containing two bells. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's Books, at £5. 16s. 0½d., now £275. Sir Robert Burdett, Bart., patron, and Rev. Robert Nicholas French, M.A., incumbent. The rectory is pleasantly situated near the Church, and occupied by the curate.

Directory.—Rev. Alex. Joseph Lyon Cavie, B.A., curate; George Bonsor, butcher and shopkeeper; and Thos. Ball, John Cotton, Arthur Dabbs, Wm. Dester, and Jas. Hall, farmers.

SHUTTINGTON, a parish and small scattered vilage, 3½ miles E. by N. from Tamworth, containing 1010 acres of land; in 1841, 37 houses and 190 inhabitants; rateable value £1781. 10s. This not being mentioned in Domesday, is supposed to have then belonged to Seckington. About the 7th of Henry II., William Burdett gave it to the monks of Alvecote, on his founding that monastery; and after the dissolution it was granted in exchange, by Henry VII., in his 34th year, to Lord Chancellor Audley, who, in the following year, sold it, together with the site of the priory, and since that time the lordship has had various possessors. The Earl of Essex is the principal owner, and lord of the manor; Stanley Pipe Wolferston, Esq., Mr. John Alkin, and the Rev. Alex. Jph. Lyon Cavie. have also estates here. The Church, dedicated to St. Mathew, is a small neat stone structure, was restored, beautified, and new-pewed in 1844, at a cost of £120., defrayed by the landowners and the Rev. — Boodle; it consists of nave and chancel. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £318., has been augmented with £400. private benefactions, and £600. Queen Anne's bounty; Earl of Essex patron; and Rev. Alexander Joseph Lion Cavie, B.A., incumbent. Alvecote Priory is an ancient stone building, pleasantly situated about 1 mile S. by W., having a beautiful lawn in front, and on one side of it is a small portion of the remains of the priory chapel; on digging near this place a few years ago, there was a jar of brass and copper coins found, some of the reign of Constantine, part of which are in the possession of Mr. Samuel Roby, the present occupant; the priory has been occupied by the same family for the period of three hundred years. The Trent Valley railway intersects this parish.

CHARITY.—Rev. John Clarke, in 1716, granted all the great and small tithes in Shuttington to trustees, after the death of his wife, to employ the profits for the maintenance of a minister at the church at Shuttington, provided he was appointed by the consent of his trustees for the time being, but if placed there without their consent, the profits during such time should be disposed of for putting to apprentice poor children whose parents should be reputed not worth £10. a piece, resident in Stanton-by-Bridge, in Derbyshire, and in Shuttington. In lieu of the tithes and glebe conveyed to the trustees, two farms were allotted under the Edingale enclosure act, about the year 1806, which, together, contain 144a. 3r. 25p. of land; let for £232. 3s. 0d. From the year 1745 to 1792, two successive ministers were appointed without such consent, and in consequence only small payments were made to them, and, of the residue, premiums were made for apprenticing poor children, but which did not exhaust the income; and the trustees are possessed (1827) of £1525. Three per cent. consols, and £314. 16s. Three per cent. reduced annuities, producing together £54. 5s. 10d., which is applied in placing out apprentices. The trustees meet annually at Wichnor Bridge, on the third Wednesday in June, when all children who apply are placed out, with premiums varying from £9. to £15. 15s.

Directory.—Mr. Isaac Biddulph, George Lunn, beerhouse; Joseph Newborough, shoemaker; William Shilcock, miller, Alvecote Mill; John Tunncliffe, blacksmith; the farmers are Francis Allen, Jph. Ensor, The Fields; Thos. Haywood, Saml. Roby, Alvecote Priory; Mrs. Catherine Spooner, Mrs. Frances Spooner, and John Spooner, The Hill.

TAMWORTH, a large parish, ancient borough, and market town, partly in the south division of Offlow Hundred, county of Stafford, pleasantly situated at the confluence of the rivers Tame and Anker, which divides the town into two nearly equal parts, 30 miles N. by W. from Warwick, 15 N.E. by N. from Birmingham; and 112 N.W. by N. from London; the western part of the town, with the church, is in Staffordshire; and the eastern part, with the market place, and the castle, with its liberty, are in Warwickshire. The entire parish contains 12,920 acres of land; and, in 1841, 7746 inhabitants; of these numbers, 5390 acres of land, and 3560 inhabitants are in Warwickshire, comprised in the townships of Amington and Stone Delph, which contains 65 houses and 276 inhabitants; Bolehall and Glascote, 112 houses and 495 inhabitants; the Tamworth part of the borough 440 houses and 1992 inhabitants. Tamworth Castle Liberty, 13 houses and 59 inhabitants, with the Wilnecote and Dosthill hamlets, 164 houses, and 718 inhabitants. The Staffordshire part is comprised of the township and chapelry of Fazeley, part of the borough of Tamworth, containing 110 acres of land, 370 houses, and 1797 inhabitants; the chapelry of Wigginton, and the extra parochial liberty of Hopwas Hayes, in the South Offlow Hundred, with the township of Syerscote, in the North Offlow Hundred of Staffordshire; rateable value £21,666.; population, in 1801, 3,870; 1821, 7,185; 1831, 7,182. Sir Robert Peel, Bart. is lord of the manor and principal owner.

The borough of Tamworth is neat and well built, and surrounded by an extensive tract of rich meadows, through which the Tame and Anker glide in the most picturesque manner. The two bridges which are thrown across these rivers, and the venerable church and castle, add greatly to the general beauty of the scenery; whilst its situation, near the Birmingham and Derby, and Trent Valley Railways, and on the great north roads, from London to Chester and Liverpool, and from Birmingham to Nottingham, together with its contiguity to the Fazeley and Coventry canals, which open a direct communication with the Grand Trunk, the Trent and Mersey, and other great canals and navigable rivers, all of which render the town as advantageous for trade as it is considered to be for retirement. This town is of great antiquity, being considered the most ancient in the county. Its name is derived from Tame, the river on which it is situated, and Waert, or Worthidge, a water farm. At a very early period it was the site of a Mercian fortification and royal residence, and was the seat of government under Offa, Cenwulf, Beornwulf, and others, at which period it also had a mint. The town having been nearly destroyed by the Danes, was rebuilt early in the 10th century by Ethelfleda, daughter of Alfred the Great, who also erected a castle for its defence, which stands on the south-east side of the town, upon a lofty artificial mound, rising within the angle formed by the conflux of the Tame and Anker. Was given by the Conqueror to Robert Marmion, one of his followers, and continued in that powerful family until the 20th of Edward I., when it became, by marriage, the property of William Mortein, and subsequently passing through the noble families of Ferrers and Compton, came to the Marquis Townshend, by one of which family it was forfeited or mortgaged to Mr. Robins, of London; and he having died in 1833, his executors obtained a decree from the Lord Chancellor, to sell the said property, and Capt. John Townshend became the purchaser. It is now the property of Lord Charles Townshend, and the residence of Miss E. Wolferton.

The Market is held on Saturday, is well supplied with corn, and provisions of every kind. There are likewise seven annual Fairs, for cattle and merchandise, held on the last Monday in January, the first Mondays in March and April, May 4th, July 26th, first Monday in September, October 24th, and December 15th. The May, July, and October are on the feasts of St. George, St. Swithin, and St. Edward the Conqueror, old style; those held in March, April, Sept., and Dec., are of recent establishment.

The town lost the name of a borough till it was restored by Queen Elizabeth, which was confirmed on the 16th Charles II., under which the town continued to be governed by a high steward, two bailiffs, recorder, town clerk, and 24 capital burgesses, styled the "Bailiffs and Commonalty of the borough of Tamworth." Under the recent municipal act, the borough is now governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, under the usual corporate style. The parliamentary borough was enlarged, and now includes the whole of the parish, and returns two members to parliament. The right of voting was anciently conferred on all inhabitants paying scot and lot. Of the 491 voters registered in 1837, 261 were scot and lot voters, and 230, £10. householders. The following is a list of the members of parliament, corporate body, and municipal officers.

Members of Parliament.—Sir Robert Peel, Bart., and Captain John Townshend.

Mayor.—John Butler, Esq.

Aldermen.—John Hall, Wm. Robinson, Thos. Buckerfield, and Rt. Nevill.

Councillors.—Etienne Bruno Hamel, Fras. Hinks, George Matthews, James Payton, Thos. Bramall, Saml. Hanson, John Butler, Thos. Arnold, Wm. Platts, Job Castle Righton, John Hill, and Stewart Geo. Robinson.

Auditors.—Thos. Wainwright and Edmund Eaton.

Assessors.—Thomas Tunnadine, and Abel Clason.

Town Clerk.—Francis Willington.

Magistrates.—The Mayor and Ex-Mayor, Fras. Willington; John Hall, Thomas Bramall, and Wm. Parsons, Esqs. Clerk to Magistrates.—Thos. Argyle, Esq.

Sergeant at Mace, John Brown. Town Crier, Richard West.

The Town Hall, where the corporation transact their business, is a handsome building in the Market place, was rebuilt in 1807, and, in 1812, enlarged and beautified at considerable expense. Balls and assemblies are occasionally held here.

County Court, held in the Town Hall, and comprises the following district, viz: Tamworth, Tamworth Castle, Amington, Wigginton, Austrey, Newton, Seckington, Shuttlington, Clifton, Harlaston, Edingale, Chilcote Statfold, Thorpe, Syerscote, Croxall, Fazeley, Hints, Drayton, Wilnecote, Middleton, Kingsbury, Bolehall with Glascote, and Canwell. Leigh Trafford, Esq., judge; John Shaw, Esq., clerk; and George Thorneloe, high bailiff.

Banking Establishments.—National Provincial Bank of England, (Branch of); and the Savings Bank, established 1823.

Gas Works, Bolebridge street, established 1835, at a cost of £2,500., raised by 250 £10. shares, since which another holder has been added. J. Simmons, superintendent.

Union Workhouse, Lady Bridge bank, comprises the following places, viz.:—Tamworth, Tamworth Castle, Amington, Wigginton, Austrey, Newton, Seckington, Shuttington, Clifton, Harlaston, Edingale, Chilcote, Statfold, Thorpe, Syerscote, Croxall, Fazeley, Hints, Drayton, Wilnecote, Middleton, Kingsbury, Bolehall with Glascote, and Canwell. Jas. and My. Mead, master and matron; Saml. Paul Shawe, Esq., chairman; Wm. Power, Esq., auditor; John Shaw, Esq., clerk to guardians and superintendent registrar; Robt. Cave Brown, medical officer; Rev. Edwd. Harston, chaplain: John Wright, relieving officer; John Wright and James Goddrige, registrars of births and deaths; and John Brown, registrar of marriages.

The Church, dedicated to St. Editha, is an ancient edifice, in the decorated and later styles of English architecture, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, having a tower, with lofty pinnacles, in which is a peal of six good bells. It is supposed to occupy the site of a nunnery, founded by St. Editha. It was formerly collegiate, and possessed a dean and six prebendaries. In 1809, it was repewed and repaired at a cost of £4,000., towards which the Marquis of Townshend and Sir Robert Peel, Bart., were liberal contributors. The living, a perpetual curacy, certified at £16.; now, £170.; has been augmented with £400. private benefactions, £400. Queen Anne's bounty, and £800. parliamentary grant; in the patronage of Admiral A'Court Repington, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Harston, M.A. Vicarial tithe commuted, 1839, at £499.; Admiral A'Court Repington is the impropriator.

The Catholic Chapel, near Aldergate, dedicated to St. John, is a neat building, erected 1829, and cost £2,200., including a house for the priest, Rev. James Kelley.

The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, and the Society of Friends, have each a place of worship here.

Free Grammar School, Gungate, with a house for the master. Leland says, "there is a guild of St. George in Tamworth, and to it belonged £5. land, per annum; and, of late, one John Bailie gave other £5. land, unto it; and, therewith, is now erected a grammar school." Queen Elizabeth, in 1588, re-founded this school, for the education and instruction of boys and youths in grammar; to continue for all future time, and to consist of one master or pedagogue: and she confirmed to it a yearly rent charge of £10. 13s. 2½d., granted out of the revenues of the crown by Edward VI. She appointed the bailiffs and commonalty of Tamworth to be a body corporate, by the name of guardians of the possessions, &c., of the said school, and gave them the power of appointing the master. This was afterwards confirmed by the corporation charter granted to the borough in the 16th Charles II.; but the master now only receives £7. 13s., yearly, from crown revenues, the remainder being deducted for land tax and office fees. His salary has, however, been augmented by the following benefactions, viz.: £5., yearly, left by Sir Francis Nethersole, in 1659, for the instruction of six poor boys of Polesworth and Warton; £10. a year left by Wm. Ashley, in 1666, out of land in Essex; £5. 18s. 6d., yearly, given by John Vaughton; £2. 9s. 9d., yearly, left by Rd. and Eliz. Beardsley; £2. from John Rawlett's gift; and 10s. from Hy. Mitchell's gift; making a total yearly income of £33. 11s. 3d. This endowed school will never be of any benefit to the inhabitants, until the governors require the master to teach reading, writing, and arithmetic, to a certain number of free scholars, as has been done at many other ancient grammar schools. At present only about four scholars attend. Henry Handley, master.

Rawlett's Free School, Church street, founded in 1686, by the Rev. John Rawlet, for the education of twelve poor boys and ten girls; the latter are now sent to the National School. The master receives a salary of £20. per annum.

The National and Infant Schools, College lane, consist of two large rooms, for boys and girls, and a smaller one for infants.

Sir Robert Peel's School, Lichfield street, was established 1827; the present building was erected 1837, by Sir Robert Peel, Bart., from whom it receives its main support. Samuel Vaughan, master.

The School of Industry, near Aldergate street, established 1802. The present school is a neat brick building, erected 1842, and is supported by voluntary contributions. Patience Webster, mistress.

The Charities belonging to the borough and parish of Tamworth are numerous and valuable; but the parliamentary commissioners, who visited the town in 1823, found but few documents relating to the origin of the gifts; their principal source of information on that subject, was from a manuscript book, written in 1690, by the Rev. Samuel Langley, a late vicar. The corporation are trustees of most of those belonging to the borough.

The Benefactions to the poor produce the following yearly sums, viz.: £6 for flannel and cloth, and 13s. 4d. for a sermon on Nov. 1st, left by Henry Suckley, in 1564, out of land at Corbetslye, Essex, and two houses in Watling street, London; £2. by Stephen Baylie, in 1620, out of the Tamhorn estate; 10s. by John Wightwick, out of Spitt'sfield; 16s. from £18, by Thomas Cheate; in 1628, 10s. to the minister, and 10s. to the schoolmaster, by Henry Mitchell; in 1629, out of land at Tamworth, lately belonging to John Robins, Esq.; £10. by Sir John Ferrers, in 1630, out of Lea Hall, near Bradburn, in Derbyshire; £8. from Lidge-lane close, at Fazeley; and 26s. from land occupied by the Coventry canal, both left by Edward Drayton; but out of these rents, 20s. are paid to the poor of Atherstone: 40s. by Richard Vaughton, out of Gorsty-Perrycrofts, in Bolehill; £5. out of a close in Wigginton field, purchased with the gifts of Elizabeth Mitchell, and Ann Osburn; £20. from a house and garden in Gungate, left by the Earl of Northampton, and for some time used as the workhouse; £6. 15s. by Elizabeth Beardsley, from £135. secured on the turnpikes from Tamworth to Ashby, Fielding Bridge, and Measham, for bread; 21s. 8d. by Mrs. Harcourt, out of land at Fillongley; 10s. with 10s. for the poor of Wigginton, by Thos. Cope, out of Chare's croft; £5. to the poor of the parish, and 6s. 8d. to the curate of Amington, from £120 left by Rd. Repington, and now vested with C. E. Repington, Esq.; this legacy is equally divided amongst the poor of Bolehall, Glascote, Tamworth, Wigginton, and Amington. £14. by Henry Smith, out of the manor of Drayton Bassett, for relieving the sick and clothing poor boys; £7. 9s. from Kettlebrook close, left by Rd. and Eliz. Beardsley, in 1670, for the equal benefit of the vicar, the schoolmaster, and the poor; £17. 15s. 6d. also to be divided into three portions for the same parties, and arising from two crofts and two houses, left by John Vaughton, in 1683; £6. from land on Stanley Pipe Wolferstan, Esq.'s estate, in Wigginton, given in exchange for land, left by Sir Henry Gough in 1686; £109. from 32 acres of land and five houses, left in 1686, by the Rev. John Rawlet, for apprenticing four poor boys, for educating 12 boys and 10 girls, and for relieving the poor, after paying £4. to the vicar for four sermons, and £2. to the master of the grammar school; £14. 7s. paid by the churchwardens of Atherstone, as the Tamworth portion of Wm. Symond's charity. for apprenticing poor boys, left in 1687; £88. arising from 25 acres of land, and £1364. 15s. three per cent. consols, purchased with £400. left by Samuel Port, in 1705, and the savings of the yearly proceeds of his charity, which he directed to be employed in apprenticing poor children of Tamworth to trades in London; a premium of £40. is given with each apprentice,—and the trustees say it is difficult to procure good masters in London, even for that sum,—except 21s. for a sermon in October; £8. from £200. four per cents. left by Mary Wilson, in 1808, for apprenticing one poor boy yearly; £27. 9s. 7d. from houses and land, purchased in 1698, with the bequests of Lady Clobury and Rebecca Mitchell, for the poor; 13s. from two cottages, in Gungate, left in 1701, by Walter Ashmore, and 15s. from £15., arrears of the said annuity. £16., from Peddy croft, in Bolehall, left by Thomas Blood, one-half to 20 poor housekeepers and the other to the curate; 20s. from £20., left by Christian Orton, for six poor widows; 10s. to the minister, 5s. to the clerk and organist, and 5s. to the poor, left by Eliz. Matthews, in 1795; 50s. from £50., left by Mary Dones, in 1788, for the support of Sunday schools, together with £100. three per cent, consols, for providing bread and a sermon yearly, and the interest of £100. for apprenticing poor children; and an annuity of £10. left by Lord Weymouth, and now paid by the Marquis of Bath, for the instruction of 16 young children, in reading and knitting. Several smaller charities belonging to Tamworth are lost. The following belong to the out-townships of the parish:—

Guy's Alms-House, in Gungate, is a substantial building, containing 14 dwelling rooms, with separate entrances. This almshouse was founded and endowed with an annuity of £115., by Thomas Guy, Esq., of London, in 1724, for the reception of 12 poor men or women, of Wilnecote, Glascote, Bolehall, Amington, Wigginton, and Hopwas; his poor relations having the preference. The annuity is received from the governors of Guy's Hospital, in Southwark; and out of the savings thereof, nine parcels of building land, in Birmingham, have been purchased for £1570., and they are now let for £68.; swelling the total yearly income of the charity to £183., from which the twelve alms-people have each a weekly stipend of 4s.; and the remaining part of the income, after paying for repairs, &c., is divided among the founder's poor relations, principally of the names of Vaughton and Wood, without reference to their place of residence. The alms-house, is a neat brick building, with gardens behind, for the use of the inmates. The founder was a native of Tamworth, and a celebrated bookseller and citizen of London, where he bequeathed £200,000. for the foundation of the hospital in Southwark, which bears his name. The almshouse here occupies the site of a religious house or hospital, dedicated to St. James, and founded by Philip Marmion, in the 15th of Edward I.

The benefactions of Amington township produce the following sums annually: £6. from the proprietors of the Grand Junction canal, for land left in 1660, by Hugh Sharpe, for nine poor families; 10s. out of Dester's close, left in 1658, by John George; and 20s. out of Tell Feather's close, left, in 1669, by Rd. Beardsley; one half of the two latter belongs to the poor of Bolehall and Glascote. The school at Hopwas, and the croft adjoining, were given, in 1724, by Thos Barnes, and have since been augmented with an allotment of common land, containing 2a. 2r. 14p. The whole of the premises are worth about £14. per annum and are occupied by a schoolmistress, who teaches about 20 free scholars. Wigginton Township has the following annual doles, viz.: £8. 15s. 9d. from £293. Three per cent. consols, purchased with £200. left in 1774, by Elizabeth Beardsley, one half to the curate and the other to the poor; £10. from £200. left in 1795, by John Taylor, for the same uses; and two sums of 10s. each, out of two farms, left by unknown donors, for the poor. Fazeley Township has for the poor, 20s., yearly, left by John Walton, in 1727, out of land in Kingsbury; and £2. arising from land in Fazeley, left in 1729, by Samuel Twigg.

AMINGTON, a township and chapelry, 2 miles E., contains 2,161 acres of land, 65 houses, and 276 inhabitants; rateable value, £4,036. The principal land owners are Admiral A'Court Repington, and John Levett, Esq.; the former is lord of the manor. Amington Hall, a neat mansion half a mile north, the seat and property of Admiral A'Court Repington. The chapel is a small neat edifice. Stonedelph, a small hamlet, 2½ miles S.

BOLEHALL, with GLASCOTE, form a township: the former joins Tamworth; the latter 1½ miles S.S.E.; contains 1154 acres of land, and, in 1841, 414 inhabitants; rateable value £4996. The principal owners are Lord Charles Townshend, Major Bamford, Henry Smith, Esq., and Sir Robert Peel, Bart.; the former is Lord of the manor. Messrs. Gibbs and Canning have extensive coal mines and brick works at Glascote.

Wilnecote with Dosthill, form a chapelry, containing 997 acres of land; in 1841, 164 houses, and 718 inhabitants; rateable value £2377. Wilnecote is a pleasant scattered village, 3 miles S.E. by S. from Tamworth; of which Sir Robert Peel, Bart. is lord of the manor and principal owner. The chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small stone structure, consisting of nave, chancel, and low tower. The living, a perpetual curacy, rated at £90., augmented with £1000. Queen Anne's bounty, and £1,200. parliamentary grant, in the patronage of the Vicar of Tamworth, and incumbency of the Rev. Robert Watkins Lloyd. Wilnecote Hall is a neat brick residence, the seat and property of Major Thomas Bridget.

The townships in Staffordshire belonging to Tamworth parish are Fazeley township and chapelry, 1½ miles S. Syerscote, 2½ miles N. by E. and Wigginton, township and chapelry, 2 miles N.

PROTECTED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT, JULY, 1845.

PATRONIZED BY H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT.

FLEXIBLE SADDLE,

INVENTED BY MR. A. NEWLAND,

AND

MANUFACTURED SOLELY BY CHARLES THOMAS,

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON,

(LATE FROM CUFF'S, LONDON, SADDLER TO HER MAJESTY.)

The Nobility, Gentry, and the Public are most respectfully solicited to inspect this novel and useful invention.

It consists of a metal cantle of a peculiar shape, so flexible as to yield to the slightest pressure on the seat, which prevents concussion, thereby giving to the rider a most comfortable and easy seat, without producing so much fatigue, and enabling the horse to carry the burden with facility and ease.

It is so constructed as to cause a circulation of air between the seat of the saddle and the horse's back, causing that coolness so essential to the comfort of the rider, and also preventing the galling of the horse's back, so frequently occasioned by the heat of the saddle. It is as light and durable as the ordinary saddle, not so likely to run forward, and is allowed by experienced riders to be superior to all others yet invented, and can be suited to the height and weight of any person.

 Ladies' Saddles made on the same principle.

E. CLIPPERTON,

LONG STREET, ATHERSTONE,

From 87, Regent Street, London,

FASHIONABLE TAILOR,

Ladies' Habit Maker, & Woollen Draper.

YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S PARISIAN DRESSES, NAVAL AND MILITARY UNIFORMS, SERVANTS' LIVERIES, &c., MADE IN THE FIRST STYLE.

E. C. wishes to inform the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, Professional Gentlemen, Tradesmen, Farmers, Graziers, and the Public generally, that he keeps first class Goods, at moderate charges; visits London twice each year for the selection of Fashions and New Goods, and that all Orders sent by post will meet with immediate attention.

No. 40,
DIGBETH, BIRMINGHAM.

J. B. particularly invites attention to his Newly-Invented and PATENT MEASURING TAPE, which contains all the advantages of ROUTLEDGE'S SLIDE RULE, in Circle. The handle used for winding up the Tape contains an EVER-POINTED PENCIL; also a Reserve for Leads, and the Steel Spike is used for holding the Tape in Measuring. At the beginning of the Tape is a Metallic Loop attached to the Ring and secured by an Eyelet, for the insertion of the Steel Spike aforesaid, thus rendering a second party unnecessary in measuring. The sides of the Box are covered with Asses Skin for convenience in writing, so that this Article may be considered a multum in parvo of a Surveyor's requisites.

J. B.'s TAPES are also Manufactured on the Multiplying Principle, by which an immense saving of time is effected, this principle being decidedly superior to the old one, five-sixths of the time being saved by its use.

FENTON & MARSDEN'S

REGISTERED MORTICE GAUGE, N^o 970,

Edge & Joiners' Tool Manufacturers,
SHEFFIELD.

Fig. 1—A, a, B, b, is the Stem, which instead of being a square piece of Wood, as heretofore, is formed of two hollow Brass Tubes, the one, A, sliding into the other, B. The Head, C, of Ebony, or other hard wood as usual, furnished internally with a Brass Nut, by which it is screwed tight up to the Shoulder, b, on the Tube, B; d is a Marking Point fixed to the Tube A; e is a second Marking Point, which traverses in the Slot f, g, and is attached by a small Screw to an internal Nut, h, shewn in Section Fig. 2. By turning the Screw at B the Tube A is drawn into, or forced out of, the Tube B, and the Marking Point, d, thereby brought nearer to, or farther from the Head, C. A similar Screw at the end, A, gives a backward or forward motion to the Marking Point e, and so by the movement of these two Screws the Marking points can be set to any required distance with great facility, and when set they cannot be accidentally shifted in using. The arrangements for effecting this object are plainly shewn in Section Fig. 2. The Tubes are prevented from turning in each other by a Screw, i, in the Tube B, which traverses a Slot in the inner Tube, A.

The Proprietors and Manufacturers of the above Mortice Gauge feel confident that the preference will be claimed by such Workmen as value CORRECTNESS with ECONOMY OF TIME AND LABOUR. The advantage it possesses over all others, is that which is so essential in this article—when once fixed in the required position which the ordinary Gauges are liable to, thereby causing serious inconvenience, which, by this invaluable invention, is altogether avoided, and

IT CANNOT BE ALTERED BY ACCIDENT,

CORRECT WORKMANSHIP INSURED.

FENTON & MARSDEN'S
REGISTERED BRACE HEAD, NO. 986,
 MANUFACTURED BY
Edge & Joiners' Tool Manufacturers,
SHEFFIELD.

The Figure represents the Section of the Brace Head. A is a Spindle terminating at the top point, c, and to be attached to the Stock of the Brace by a Screw, b; D, D is a Brass Neck, through which the Spindle, A, passes, and in which it turns freely; at the top of the Neck are placed two Screws, d, d. E, E is a Collar of hardened Steel formed in two parts, as seen separately at Figure 2, which is put through a recess in the neck D, and its central opening exactly fits the grove a, of the Spindle. When this Steel Collar, E, is put in its place, it is held there by a Brass Collar, e, e, which is slipped over the neck D, and screwed down by the Cap F, which holds it to its place, the Cap F, being prevented from working off by the Nut screwed on the Neck, d, having a reverse thread.

In offering the above Brace Head to the Public the Proprietors have great satisfaction to add that by such Improvements it will be found to SUPERSEDE ALL OTHERS hitherto manufactured. It possesses those advantages so long sought for, viz., SECURITY OF THE HEAD TO THE BRACE, EASE IN WORKING, WITHOUT FRICTION, and ultimate DURABILITY. This will be at once obvious to all Artizans; and claim that preference in their selections which by the immense saving of time and labour the above invention is deserving.

Lives not considered perfectly admissible on the ordinary terms, assured at rates of Premium corresponding with the extra risk.
The Share of Profits allocated to an Assured may be applied in reduction of future Annual Premiums, or added to the Policy by way of Bonus, or received at once in cash, at its then present value.
One-half of the amount of the Policy advanced on approved personal and other security, re-payable by instalments.
A main object of the Society is to extend the benefit of Life Assurance to all Classes, by granting small Policies, and allowing the Premiums to be paid Monthly, WITHOUT ANY CHARGE FOR STAMP DUTY.
Policies granted from £20. to £5,000.
The usual Commission allowed on the introduction of Policies.
MEDICAL REFEREES PAID IN ALL CASES.
The Rates of Premium are as moderate as is consistent with perfect security to the Office and the Assured.

COMMAND.

Maker

QUEEN.

1840.

PATENT

VICTORIA WORKS, GRAHAM STREET, BIRMINGHAM,

Has been for a long series of years engaged in the manufacture of steel pens, and during that time has devoted his unceasing attention to the improving and perfecting this useful and necessary article; the result of his persevering efforts, and numerous experiments upon the properties of the metal used, has been the construction of a pen upon a principle entirely new, combining all the advantages of the elasticity and fineness of the quill, with the durability of the metallic pen, and thus obviating the objections which have existed against the use of steel pens.

The patentee is proud to acknowledge that a discerning public has paid the most gratifying tribute to his humble, though useful labours, by a demand for his pens, far exceeding his highest expectations.

THE NUMBER OF PENS MANUFACTURED AT THE WORKS OF
EXCEEDS 120 MILLIONS ANNUALLY.

CAUTION.—Purchasers will please notice that each Pen of the celebrated No. 303 bears the stamp, "Joseph Gillott's Extra Fine," and each Packet, in addition to the Number, has the Maker's Name on the Label. This Caution is deemed necessary in consequence of other makers adopting the above designating number, by which the Original, Joseph Gillott's Victoria Pen, is better known than by any other term, and has attained such a wide spread popularity throughout the United States of America, where these spurious imitations have been introduced.

AT THE REQUEST OF PERSONS EXTENSIVELY ENGAGED IN TUITION, J. G. HAS INTRODUCED HIS

WARRANTED SCHOOL & PUBLIC PENS,

Which are especially adapted to their use, being of different degrees of flexibility, and with fine, medium, and broad points, suitable for the various kinds of writing taught in Schools.

SOLD RETAIL BY ALL STATIONERS, BOOKSELLERS, AND OTHER RESPECTABLE DEALERS IN STEEL PENS.

Merchants and Wholesale Dealers can be supplied at the Works, Graham

W. CREAMER, (late of 119, New-street,)

In returning his most sincere thanks to the Ladies of Birmingham and its vicinity for the distinguished patronage he has received during four years, begs to inform them that he has REMOVED to these extensive Premises, where his STOCK of FURS for the Season is now ready, comprising every description, and all the Novelties that have yet appeared in the London and Parisian Markets.

In inviting the Ladies to an inspection thereof, he does not wish to hold out any absurd inducement. He feels, however, gratified in observing, that as he purchases his Skins precisely on the same terms as the largest Wholesale Houses, and also Manufactures them, he obtains thereby an advantage over the smaller Purchaser, who merely Retails them, and is enable to charge much lower than they possibly can. The Establishment is moreover exclusively devoted to the SALE of FURS, and the extent and variety of the Stock will not be found surpassed in any House in the Kingdom.

To Alterations and Repairs it will always be his study to devote as much attention and care as if he was engaged in the Manufacture of New Articles; and as they are done on the Premises, and under his own inspection, he has the utmost security for the punctual and faithful execution of every Order with which he may be favoured.

JOHN MITCHELL,

PATENTEE AND MANUFACTURER OF THE MUCH APPROVED

METALLIC PENS

AND PEN HOLDERS,

WHICH, FOR THEIR FLEXIBILITY AND DURABILITY,

STAND UNRIVALLED.

The Peculiar advantage of J. MITCHELL'S PATENT PEN is in the elasticity of the upper part, which is so constructed that it adapts itself to any Pen Holder, even if much smaller than the Pen, without damaging the nibs, thus obviating a difficulty that has always been experienced by parties using Steel Pens, and which has entirely prevented many persons from using them.

The PATENT PEN HOLDER possesses a similar advantage, as by expansion it accommodates various sizes of Pens made upon the ordinary principle.

J. M. begs to inform Merchants, Bankers, and the Public in general, that he continues to manufacture every description of Steel Pens requisite for fine, bold, and ornamental writing; and solicits a continuance of their patronage and support, of which he has hitherto received so liberal a share; and is sorry to be under the necessity of cautioning the Public against the dishonourable acts of certain unprincipled manufacturers, who, with a view to take advantage of his reputation, mark their Pens similar to his name, sometimes omitting the T, thus, MICHELL, or substituting the L for T, thus, MILCHELL; and thereby, (particularly in the French and Foreign Markets,) obtain some success in passing off a spurious and worthless article, alike to his injury and that of the purchaser.

J. M.'s genuine Pens are marked his name in full, thus, "JOHN MITCHELL'S," and the parties above alluded to, are desired to take notice, that he is determined to treat with the utmost severity of law those found participating in such illegal and disgraceful practices.

M. CAPELLA,

LOOKING-GLASS & PICTURE FRAME MANUFACTURER,

CARVER AND GILDER,

104, DIGBETH, AND 53, EDGBASTON-ST., BIRMINGHAM,

ESTABLISHED 1834.

Returns his most sincere thanks to his Friends and the Public generally, for the very liberal support he has received for a period of thirteen years, and more especially since his misfortune by fire, in 1839: and, in order to meet the extended patronage of his friends, he has taken the old-established and extensive premises, at 53, Edgbaston-St., where he has the largest and most magnificent Silvering Table in the Kingdom, by which he is enabled to Silver and Polish Glasses of the largest dimensions, in a very superior manner, and on such terms as he trusts will merit a further continuance of their favours. He has also taken to the old-established POLISHING and SILVERING BUSINESS, carried on for fifty years by Mr. Robinson, at No. 64, Bull Street, and earnestly solicits a continuance of the favours of the Connexions of his predecessor.

T. B. ROBINSON begs respectfully to thank the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public in general, for all favours conferred upon him; and begs to recommend M. Capella as a person perfectly understanding the Silvering & Polishing Business in all its branches.

M. C. respectfully invites a personal inspection, at either of his Establishments, of his extensive and valuable Stock of Picture-Frames, Mirrors, Looking-Glasses, Barometers, Weather-Glasses, &c., which he feels confident, both for extent and beauty, cannot be surpassed.

N. B.—Glasses framed, polished, and re-silvered, old Frames re-gilt, Oil Paintings cleaned, and Pictures repaired and varnished.

Observe!—104, Digbeth, and 53, Edgbaston-St., Birmingham.

ELEGANT TOILET REQUISITES.

EACH OF INFALLIBLE ATTRIBUTES.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

This mild yet powerful renovator insinuates its balsamic properties into the pores of the head, nourishes the Hair in its embryo state, accelerates its growth, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, sustains it in maturity, and continues its possession of healthy vigour, silky softness, and luxurious redundancy to the latest period of human life. For Children it is especially recommended, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hair, and rendering the use of the fine comb unnecessary. Its invaluable properties have obtained the especial patronage of Her Majesty the Queen, the Court, and the whole of the Royal Family of Great Britain, and of every Court of the civilized world.

Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; or Family Bottles, (equal to four small,) at 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

On the wrapper of each bottle of the genuine Article are these words, in two lines,

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

ROWLANDS' HAIR WASH.

A Preparation from the choicest ORIENTAL HERBS, of peculiarly mild and detersive properties. It pleasingly and effectually cleanses the HAIR and SKIN of the HEAD from Scurf and every species of impurity, and imparts a delicate fragrance. It is particularly recommended to be used after BATHING, as it will prevent the probability of catching cold in the head, and will render the hair dry in a few minutes. Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.

AN ORIENTAL BALSAMIC PREPARATION of unfailing efficacy, in purifying the SKIN from all PIMPLES, SPOTS, FRECKLES, TAN, and DISCOLORATIONS, producing a healthy freshness and transparency of COMPLEXION; and a softness and delicacy of the HANDS and ARMS. During the HEAT and DUST of SUMMER, or FROST and BLEAK WINDS of WINTER, and in cases of SUN-BURN, STINGS of INSECTS, CHILBLAINS, and CHAPPED SKIN, or incidental inflammation, its virtues have long and extensively been acknowledged. Its purifying and refreshing properties have obtained the exclusive Patronage of the QUEEN, the COURT, and the ROYAL FAMILY of Great Britain, as well the principal COURTS OF EUROPE. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

* Beware of spurious "KALYDORS," containing mineral astringents, utterly ruinous to the Complexion, and which, by their repellent action, endanger health.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

OR PEARL DENTIFRICE.

A WHITE POWDER FOR THE TEETH, composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental Herbal. It eradicates tartar from the teeth, removes spots of incipient decay, polishes and preserves the enamel, imparting the most pure and pearl-like whiteness, and renders the breath sweet and pure. Scurvy is, by its means, eradicated from the GUMS, and a healthy action and redness are induced, so that the Teeth, (if loose,) are thus rendered firm in their sockets. Its invaluable properties have obtained its selection by Her Majesty the Queen, the Court, and Royal Family of Great Britain, and the Sovereigns and Nobility throughout Europe.—Price 2s. 9d. per box.

ROWLANDS' ALSANA EXTRACT.

For relieving the Tooth-ache, Gum-boils, and Swelled Face, and which, by constantly using, prevents those maladies. In the anguish of excruciating pain, it affords instantaneous relief. It is perfectly innocent in its nature. Price 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. per bottle.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.

UNPRINCIPLED SHOPKEEPERS, for the sake of gaining a trifle more profit, vend the most SPURIOUS COMPOUNDS under the same names, some under the implied sanction of Royalty, and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at deception. It is therefore highly necessary to see that the word "ROWLANDS" is on the Wrapper or Label of each Article. Sold by the Proprietors—

A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, HATTON GARDEN, LONDON,

VIEW OF THE PRESS ROOM IN JOHN BLURTON'S
PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT.

THE ROYAL STEAM PRESS OFFICE,
 CASTLE STREET, SHEFFIELD.

JOHN BLURTON

Respectfully announces to his Friends and the Public, that COWPERS' PATENTED PERFECTING MACHINE, WORKED WITH STEAM POWER, is now at work at his Establishment, with all and every recent and late improvement, calculated and warranted to throw off 1,000 sheets per hour, printed on both sides; and as this is THE ONLY NEW ONE that ever has been, or likely to be introduced in the Town of Sheffield, it will be easily not only conjectured, but known, that no other Establishment can equal this for CHEAPNESS AND EXPEDITION.

ATTENTION IS PARTICULARLY REQUESTED TO THE

CAUTION.

JOHN WILSON,

SYCAMORE STREET, SHEFFIELD,

THE ORIGINAL MANUFACTURER OF SHOE, BUTCHERS',
WEAVERS', BREAD', COOKS', PALLET, PUTTY, GLAZIERS', FARRIERS' KNIVES, BUTCHERS' STEELS, &c., &c.,

DEEMS it right to apprise his Friends, that not only does his Mark continue to be PIRATED both in this Country and on the Continent, but that certain unprincipled persons, who are deterred from striking his Mark only from a fear of being visited with Legal Proceedings, have been led by their cupidity to resort to another mode of imposition, and IN ORDER TO EVADE THE LAW, are vending articles marked—

I. WILSON, only ;	or, WILSON CAST STEEL
or, WILSON WARRANTED	or, GEO. WILSON

in each case omitting the Corporation Mark.

OBSERVE,

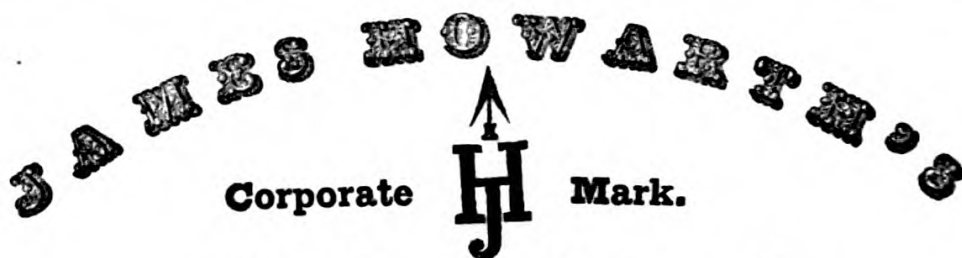

All Knives, Steels, &c., of JOHN WILSON'S manufacture, are stamped with his Corporation Mark, "Four Peppercorns and a Diamond," thus, ☼ in one of the following forms:—

I. WILSON ☼	☼ I. WILSON CAST STEEL
☼ I. WILSON WARRANTED	☼ I. WILSON SHEAR STEEL

Notice is hereby Given,

That all persons whomsoever, who shall counterfeit or imitate the marks used by the said JOHN WILSON, or who shall sell any Shoe, Bread, Butchers', Cooks', or any other KNIVES, or any Butchers' STEELS, stamped with any such counterfeit or imitated Marks, will, immediately after they shall be discovered, be proceeded against in one of the Courts of Law or Equity ; and the said JOHN WILSON hereby invites all persons, to whom any such fraudulent practices as the above mentioned are, or may be known, to give him Information, assuring them that they shall be LIBERALLY REWARDED.

HENRY BROWN'S PATENT ANTI-FRICTION BRACE

We have great pleasure, as practical Mechanics, in presenting to your notice the PATENT ANTI-FRICTION BRACE. The advantage of the Patent Anti-friction Brace, above all others, is its EASY WORKING, having no friction. The Spindle and Socket Nut being of Hardened Steel. The Brass Neck has a Nut screwed upon, or into the Brass Socket Piece, thereby firmly securing the Ebony Cap of the Head, and preventing its coming off, causing a firm steady working of the Brace.

Resting assured that you will see the superiority, and give us the encouragement we deserve, We are, Gentlemen, your most obedient Servants,

FOSTER'S
WARWICKSHIRE VERMIN KILLER,

Certain and speedy destruction of Rats, Mice, Beetles, and all other kinds of Vermin without the risk of endangering human life.

This truly safe and wonderful preparation, now offered to the public, differs from all others in being perfectly free from Arsenic, Crow-fig, or any other deadly poison, of which most of the compositions hitherto sold for this purpose consist. This Paste may be placed in all houses, without the least fear: being totally devoid of danger to human life, and also perfectly harmless to dogs and cats. Farmers, maltsters, millers, bakers, and, in fact, all private dwelling houses, infested with these troublesome and destructive vermin, should never be without this invaluable Paste, as it may be placed with the most perfect security in all barns, ricks, granaries, and pantries, where it would be dangerous to lay arsenic, or any other poison. And it is a remarkable fact, that when once any buildings, barns, or premises are cleared of rats, the most injurious of all vermin, others will seldom be found to inhabit the same place again.
