THE UNIVERSAL BRITISH DIRECTORY of TRADE, COMMERCE, and MANUFACTURE, for ENGLAND and WALES.

P L A N of the W O R K.

THE liberal encouragement given to all publications in the form of a DIRECTORY is the fairest proof of their usefulness, and the best argument for offering a more comprehensive work to the public. If many conveniences are found to result from such compilations when local, limited, and partial, what may not be expected from a plan, which is intended to comprise every source of genuine information, applicable either to public or private life—to posts of honour or emolument—to plodding speculation or to active business;—in which the trading interests of the kingdom are united, and our home-manufactures exhibited to the commercial eye of every market in Europe?

From a selection of matter combining so many channels of information, the utmost conveniences will arise to individuals in almost every line of life; for, by having a general register of the names and places of abode of the Nobility, Gentry, Merchants, Tradesmen, Manufacturers, and Freeholders, in each city, town, and principal village, connexions may be formed, and transactions in business negotiated, with great dispatch and little expence, and without the necessity of long and fatiguing journeys, or vague enquiries, which often retard, and sometimes destroy, the most important objects of speculation or trade.

Persons or families, unconnected with business, whose pursuit is pleasure in travelling, or amusement in visiting the curiosities and antiquities of the country, will find an agreeable companion and an ample guide in this Directory. They will not only have an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the names and occupations of the principal inhabitants of every Town, even before they pass through it, but will be directed to the best inns and most agreeable roads; besides being entertained with a descriptive account of all the Gentlemen's Seats, and natural and artificial curiosities, as they pass along. In short, there is not an historical event, remarkable occurrence, subject of antiquity, modern improvement, or useful manufacture, peculiar to any county, city, town, or village, in the kingdom, that will not be recorded in this work, and referred to in a moment by a General Index compiled for that purpose.—The whole forming a most complete and instructive HISTORY and DESCRIPTION of GREAT-BRITAIN. To be completed in forty-two Numbers, at One Shilling each, making 4 elegant 8vo volumes.

N A V I G A B L E C A N A L S.

The great and wonderful increase of Trade, Commerce, and Manufacture, in this kingdom, during the last 30 years, has been produced by the introduction of Canal Navigations; and yet their course and extent are very little known but in the vicinity of those places through which they pass. Communications being now made by inland navigation between the ports of Hull, Liverpool, and Bristol; and the same chain now in contemplation from Bristol to the Sea at Southampton, and completed to the Thames, near London, whereby almost every place in the kingdom will feel the advantage of water-carriage; it must surely become a matter of the first importance to the Merchant and Trader, to be well informed in what manner and on what terms he may have his goods conveyed from place to place, and the safety and certainty, as to time, in which they will be delivered.

The Plan of London and Map of England, given in this work, are calculated to illustrate this subject. They are taken on a large scale, from a new survey, beautifully coloured, and brought up to the year 1792. In the Map of England will be described all the NAVIGABLE RIVERS and CANALS; with a table of their distances from one place to another, and the rates and prices at which goods and merchandize are conveyed, throughout the whole line of Navigations at present opened; and those now in hand, or under contemplation, will be described so as to be traced on the same Map after they are completed.

§ Eighteen Numbers of the above Work, price One Shilling each, are already published, and may be had of the Booksellers of Bath and Bristol.

ITS ANCIENT AND PRESENT STATE.

THE City of BATH, of very ancient renown, is situated in a most picturesque valley, in the N. E. part of the county of Somerset; it is surrounded by beautiful hills, abounding with springs of excellent water, which, by means of pipes, supply the city in a plentiful manner. The distance from Bristol 13 miles, Wells 19, London 107. The river Avon in a serpentine course passes through it, and is made navigable to and from Bristol.

Bath, united with Wells, is a bishopric. The cathedral is at the latter place, where the bishop, and other dignitaries belonging to the church, reside.

This city has ever been famous for its wonderful medicinal waters, the cause of whose powerful heat and healing qualities has given the learned much trouble to investigate; but it will be sufficient for us, in our confined plan, to observe, that they have continued their warmth and virtues for ages; and the inhabitants are daily witnesses to the benefit invalids receive in a variety of disorders; those, who for years have lost the free use of their limbs, have, by a regular course of bathing, and drinking these waters, been perfectly restored, and have left their crutches, as mementos, behind them of the blessings they received.— Those who have long been martyrs to gout, rheumatism, palsies, contractions, jaundice, scurvy, obstructions, and “the thousand maladies that flesh is heir to,” have repaired to these healing springs, and experienced renovated health and strength. The late Dr. Charlton, and the present justly-esteemed Dr. Falconer, have each written treatises on these waters, well worthy the attention of the philosopher, and the physician, but particularly so to the diseased.

The Britons called this place, Yr Ennaint Twymin, as Camden informs us; but he does not explain the meaning, which is, The Warm or Hot Bath; it was likewise called Caer Badon, which is the very name it now bears, that is, the city of Bath. It is said to have been built by Blethin, or Bledin Cloyth; that is, as Bale interprets it, Bladud Magus, or Bladud the Sage. He is said to have studied at Athens, and to have bestowed perpetual heat upon these waters by art magic.

It seems, the Romans had fortified Bath in such a manner, that the Britons were not easily dispossessed of it by the Saxons, who became masters of it in the year 599. They gave it the name of Acemannes Caester, which Camden and Bishop Gibson both interpret, the City of Valetudinarians. They called it also Bethancester, Hat Bathan, and Baddanbyng, all referring to its salutary waters.

It suffered severely from the fury of Swaine, who, at the head of his Danish army, plundered and burnt it. After the Norman conquest, the city met with some misfortunes in times of public commotion; but as soon as these were over, the splendour of Bath revived.

Chance being the common source of such discoveries as bring mineral fountains, and their healing virtues, to the knowledge of mankind, we shall find it manifesting itself in a very singular manner at Bath; and in the most eminent case, leading an ingenious young prince to one of the greatest secrets of nature, for the cure of a loathsome disease which he laboured under.

The story of this prince having been solemnly handed down to the elders of the present age:—as they received it, we here repeat the substance of it:

“ Bladud, eldest son of Lud Hudibras, (then King of Britain, and the eighth from Brute) having spent eleven years at Athens, in the study of the liberal arts and sciences, (that city being in those days the chief academy, not only of Greece, but of this part of the world also) came home a leper; whether from that hotter climate he had conversed in, or from ill diet, or infection, does not appear, those unlettered times giving down little or no account of things (though of greater moment) then transacted. But a leper he was, and for that reason shut up, that he might not infect others; he, impatient of his confinement, chose rather a mean liberty than a royal restraint, and, contriving his escape in a disguise, went very remote from his father's court into an untravelled part of the country, and offered his service in any common employment, probably thinking he was less likely to be discovered under such mean circumstances than greater; he therefore entered in service at Swainswick, a small village, 3 miles from this city, where his business, amongst other things, was to take care of the pigs, which he was to drive from place to place, for their advantage in feeding upon beech-ma's, acorns, haws, &c. the hills thereabout then abounding with such trees, though now few of the two former remain; yet there is a hill close upon the fourth part of this city, that still retains the name of Beechen-cliff, though there is scarcely a beech-tree left upon it.

“ Here the rising sun, breaking through the clouds, first saluted the Royal Herdsman with his comfortable beams; and, while he was addressing himself to the glorious luminary, and praying that the wrath of heaven against him might be averted, part of the drove of pigs, as if seized with a phrenzy, ran down the side of the hill into an alder moor, till they reached the spot of ground where the hot springs of Bath now boil up, and from thence returned covered with black mud. The prince being of a thoughtful turn, and very solicitous to find out the reason why the pigs that wallowed in the mire in the summer to cool themselves, should do the same in winter, observed them further, and following them down, at length perceived a steam and smoke to arise from the place where the swine wallowed. Making his way to it, he found it to be warm; and this satisfied him, that for the benefit of this heat the pigs resorted thither.

“ But, being a virtuoso, he made further observations; that whereas these filthy creatures, by their foul feeding and nasty lying, are subject to scabs, foul scurfs, and eruptions on their skin, some of his herd that were so, after a while, became whole and smooth, by their often wallowing in this mud. Upon this he considers within himself why he should not receive the same benefit by the same means; he tries it, and succeeds; and, when he found himself cured of the leprosy, declared who he was. His master was not apt to believe him at first, but at length did, and went with him to court, where he, after a while, was owned to be the king's son, and after his father's death succeeded him in the government, and built this city, and made these baths.

“ When the baths were completed, Bladud applied himself to nothing but ingenious studies, which he pursued with so much assiduity, that he taught necromancy in his kingdom; pursuing his magical operations, till he attempted to fly to the upper regions of the air, with wings he had invented for that purpose; but, unfortunately falling on a temple in the city of Trinovantum, dedicated to Apollo, he was thereby dashed to pieces, and his body was deposited at New Troy*, after reigning twenty-one years.”

* New Troy, where Bladud met with his tragical death, appears (as handed down to us, and explained by some ancient historians) to have been one and the same place, and no other than the City of Bath.

It is evident this city has been several times destroyed, either by civil commotions, or fires; and that the old city was 10 or 12 feet below the present one; for in digging some cellars to the house of Mr. Dodd, apothecary, in Stall-street, there was found (on the 29th of June, 1753) a pedestal, with an inscription. It may now be seen in the grand stair-case of the Guildhall.

The ancient city of Bath is said to have been built by King Alfred, about the year 900, and was surrounded by a strong fortified wall, (a small part of which is still standing, and called the Borough-Wall.) It appears to be of great antiquity, from the infinite number of ancient coins, statues, altars, inscriptions, and other monuments of Roman history, which have been, and are still daily, discovered in and about it.

The Bath waters, it is conjectured, derive their heat from passing through mineral beds, or being impregnated with the vapours of pyrites; or perhaps they derive this heat from an extrinsic cause, or subterraneous fire in the bowels of the earth. Very probable arguments have been urged, and great authorities there are on both sides; but we pretend not to decide on which truth lies. It is a certain fact, that the hot waters have retained their warmth and their virtues through a long course of ages, and that, whatever the cause may be, there are no just grounds to apprehend that their salubrious qualities will ever fail.

These waters are beneficial in almost all chronical distempers, and can hurt in none, except in hæmorrhages, inflammations, or bad lungs, unless they be overdosed in quantity, or too high or too hot a regimen be joined with them; for they are very grateful to the stomach, have a fine sulphureous steely taste, like that of the German Spä, or Pyrmont; and procure a great appetite, and good spirits, if cautiously managed; but, if high meats and strong liquors be indulged, they create inflammatory disorders. They are of a strengthening, cleansing, attenuating, opening, nature; they comfort the nerves, warm the body, and are good in all constitutions.

These waters are good in scorbutic rheumatism, and old wandering pains in any part of the body, by bathing and drinking when the pains are not attended with any feverish heat. They are very beneficial in all disorders of the paralytic kind, in palsies, convulsions, contractions, rheumatism, and lameness of all kinds; the bilious cholic in particular is singularly relieved by their use; as are obstructions of the liver and spleen, jaundice, scurvy, loss of appetite, and hysterical and hypochondriac disorders, when proceeding from weakness of the stomach. They likewise remove all sorts of cutaneous disorders, particularly the leprosy, by washing off those malignant salts that occasion these maladies, when taken inwardly, and discharging them by perspiration in bathing: the sulphureous particles too in the water entering into the skin, and dissolving the salts which are lodged near the surface. And it is the given opinion, if any of the preceding disorders fail of relief by the Bath water, it is because the patients will not allow time enough for their cure; or else are too loath to take pains, or cannot keep to such regular diet, as is absolutely necessary in stubborn cases.

The water should always be drunk hot from the pump. It is taken hot for the sake of the volatile spirit that circulates in it, which, being of a like nature with the universal menstruum or alkali in our stomach, does wonderfully restore it, when lost or depraved. And it is somewhat strange to see its effects in the stomach, and decayed appetites, which are soon relieved, by drinking the water hot from the pump. The water is generally drunk in the morning fasting, between the hours of six and ten, that it may have time to pass out of the stomach; though some drink a glass about noon. The quantity generally taken in a day is from one pint to three; though some drink two quarts. Few constitutions require more.

The spring which supplied the baths being cleared from the rubbish, &c. and the several ancient sewers for carrying off the water from the baths repaired, his Grace the late Duke of Kingston built on the same spot several baths and sudatories, upon a new plan, approved by some of the most eminent physicians, as well for the elegance and neatness of the design, as the utility of the several apartments.

OF BATHING.—Before the patient goes into either of the baths, a due preparation is necessary; the blood-vessels should not be too full, and the primæ viæ should be cleansed; without which cautions, bathers are liable to head-achs, fevers, &c. and not only lose the benefit they come for, but return to their homes much worse than before.

The time for bathing is in the morning fasting at all times of the year; because, being refreshed by a night's sleep, we are the better able to bear bathing; and, digestion being completed, we are not subject to disorders which arise from crudities, such as obstructions, head-achs, &c. and fasting too, because, the natural heat being sent out towards the circumference by bathing, digestion would be disturbed were we to go in with a full stomach. A glass or two of the water may be taken in the bath, it being very refreshing, and not only quenches thirst, but also promotes perspiration after.—The time of staying in the bath must be regulated by the physician or apothecary, according to the patient's strength or disorder.

We shall now describe the several baths, which are four in number, exclusive of those belonging to the late Duke of Kingston, before-mentioned.

1. The King's Bath, which rises about 152 feet South-West of the Abbey Church; the spring or main source of which is in the centre, and is covered over with a large leaden reservoir, to restrain its rapid motion, and to disperse the water more equally to the different parts of the bath, as well as to receive the pipes of the different pumps, which supply the water for drinking; by which means, as the water flows upwards in a strong, large, and uninterrupted, stream, all communication between the water used for drinking, and the water in the bath, is prevented. Once in three or four years this reservoir is opened, in order to clear it of a sandy substance, which the water brings up and deposits there, and which, if suffered to accumulate, choaks up the ends of the pipes which supply the different pumps. This sand is moderately fine, of a light grey colour, intermixed with a number of black particles, which, when examined through a microscope, appear not to be chrySTALLINE substances like a great part of the remainder of the sand. It is not more ponderous than common sand of the same fineness.

The Hot and Crops Baths have a reservoir, of nearly the same construction, but we cannot find that it is ever necessary to open them on the same account, or that any substance of this kind was ever found in them.

The springs were doubtless separated from the common springs by the Romans, and secured in with a strong durable wall. The dimensions of the King's bath are 65 feet 10 inches by 45 feet 10 inches, and it contains 346 tons 2 hogf-heads and 36 gallons of water, when filled to its usual height. In the centre of this bath is erected an elegant building of free-stone, with recesses and seats for the accommodation of ladies and gentlemen who bathe, and round it is built a covering, supported by a handsome colonade in the Doric order, that bathers may be sheltered from the inclemency of the weather.

This bath is now very much improved in every department, and the whole has been conducted under the inspection of the principal medical gentlemen resident in this city. Adjoining to this bath are two rooms, one for ladies and the other for gentlemen, in which are pumps for pouring the hot water on any part of the body affected, which has often proved more salutary than bathing the whole body in the common bath.

2. Adjoining the King's bath in Stall-street, are erected several elegant New Private Baths, Dry Pump-rooms, Sudatories, &c. under the direction of Mr. Baldwin, the city-architect.

3. The Crops-Bath, which rises about 100 yards South-West of the King's, was so called from a cross erected in the centre of it, by the Earl of Melfort, (Secretary of State to King James II.) as a memorial of the Queen's bathing in it in the year 1687.—This cross is now removed, the bath secured, the bathing rendered more convenient by slips for the bathers, and a small neat pump-room built, agreeable to the plans of Mr. Baldwin.

4. The

4. The Hot Bath, situated about 120 feet South-West of the former, is so called from its being deemed the hottest of all; though from many late experiments it has been declared to be nearly the same degree of heat as the King's Bath.—Here is a neat Pump-room for the company who drink this water; near which have been constructed, by the Chamber of the city, a commodious open bath, private baths, dry pump-rooms, and sudatories, continually kept warm by the fires of the dressing-room, to which they communicate; the sudatories may likewise be made use of for vapour-bathing. The whole of the building is 56 feet square.

The heat of the several baths has been taken by Fahrenheit's mercurial thermometer, and is as follows:

The water of the King's Bath, in its warmest part, raises the mercury to 103 degrees, and sinks it in its coolest to 100.

The thermometer stands in the Hot Bath at 100 or 101.

The degrees of heat in the Cross Bath are 93 and 94.

The water which is pumped up from the cisterns of the several baths for drinking, and which is conveyed through pipes immediately from its source, was found to be of various degrees of heat at different times of trial.

Thus the water which flows from the pump of the Cross Bath has descended from 110 degrees through all the intermediate ones to 105. That of the Hot Bath from 116 to 112: and the King's Bath pump from 116 to 114.

For many centuries the city of Bath was the asylum only of the sick, and its old inhabitants aimed at nothing more than to render the place comfortable to them. Towards the beginning of the present century, the spirit of improvement shewed itself, and it now can boast of being the most convenient, best-built, and most elegant, city in Europe. It formerly had a slight wall, of which some part still remains, as well as one or two of its gates; but almost all the new buildings, and the greatest and finest part of the city, are without the walls, particularly on the West; the fine square called Queen-square, in the middle of which is a small garden with gravel walks, and an obelisk in the centre. The whole square, by its uniformity, has the appearance of one house, though it is divided into several, and is 520 feet in front, and 260 in depth. Each front has 63 windows, and each end 31. Two of the other sides serve as wings to the principal side, each of which contains 24 houses upon a perfect square of 210 feet; and the front of these wings have each 25 windows, so that, when the whole building is surveyed in front, it shews 113 windows, extending 1040 feet, and from the neighbouring hills looks like one grand palace; as does the Crescent and Circus, two of the grandest piles of building in England.

The free-stone quarries in the surrounding hills are easily worked, the stone being of a beautiful appearance, and yet of a small expence, have been the chief cause of the magnificent buildings of Bath*. There are at this time upwards of two thousand houses planned out or contracted for in this rapidly-improving place, all of which will be on a grand, uniform, elegant, scale.

To encourage the proprietors of these expensive erections, almost every person of fortune or fashion in the kingdom makes a point annually of visiting this city, and many families, even through œconomic motives, make it now their constant residence. Provisions of all kind are here excellent and reasonable; and the amusements, though in the genteel and most superb styles, are rendered through the numerous subscribers far from expensive.

No place in Europe, in a full season, affords so brilliant a circle of polite company as Bath. The young, the old, the grave, the gay, the infirm, and the healthy, all resort to this vortex of amusement. Ceremony, beyond the usual rules of politeness, is totally exploded; every one mixes in the rooms upon an equality; and the entertainments are so wisely regulated, that, although there is never a cessation of them, neither is there any lassitude from bad hours, or from an excess of dissipation.

* The free-stone of the hills about Bath can be carried by the Avon to Bristol, whence it may be transported to any part of England; and the new works of St. Bartholomew's hospital in London, as well as the exchange of Bristol, are built with stone from Mr. Allen's quarry.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.—The Pump-room is situated at the North side of the King's Bath: it was erected in the year 1704, but much enlarged in the year 1751, and is now a neat piece of building. To this building in 1786 was added a handsome portico for the reception of the chairs, that the company in the pump-room might not be incommoded by the chairmen. The nobility and gentry assemble in it every morning, between the hours of seven and ten, to drink the water; for whose entertainment a good band of music attends during the season, whose pay is derived from the ball-subscriptions to the rooms.

There is hung up in this Pump-room, the following curious and beautiful lines, framed and glazed, written by the late Dr. Oliver:—

Scire Potestates Aquarum, usumque Bibendi.——VIRG.

EDGAR.

There are two sets of Assembly-rooms, viz. the Lower-rooms, kept by Mr. James Heaven, on the Walks, leading from the Grove to the Parades; and the New-rooms, East of the Circus, kept by Messrs. Derham and Stroud.

Mr. Heaven's ball-room was built in the year 1750, is 90 feet in length, 36 in breadth, and 34 in height; with a very fine stucco ceiling. The view of the river, valley, and adjacent hills, makes it one of the pleafantest morning rooms in the kingdom. There is in it a portrait of the late Richard Nash, Esq. to whom Bath is peculiarly indebted for its present flourishing state.

The Card-room is 60 feet long, and 30 feet wide, with a coved ceiling, and has in it another portrait of Mr. Nash. There are also two Tea-rooms, 40 feet by 24 each.

The New Assembly-rooms, at the East end of the Circus, are spacious and elegant. They were built under the direction of the late John Wood, Esq. and furnished by a subscription of 70 persons, and cost upwards of 20,000*l*. The first-stone was laid the 24th of May, 1769, by the said Mr. Wood, architect, and they were opened for the reception of company in Oct. 1771.—The ball-room is 105 feet 8 inches long, 42 feet 8 inches wide, and 42 feet 6 inches high. The two Card-rooms are, one an octagon of 48 feet diameter, the other 70 feet long and 27 feet wide. In the octagon Card-room is a fine portrait of Captain Wade, late Master of the Ceremonies, painted by Mr. Gainborough; and likewife a portrait of Richard Tyson, Esq. the present Master of the Ceremonies, painted by Mr. James.

Every room is superbly furnished with elegant chandeliers, girandoles, &c.

The amusements and terms of admission at each room, are as follow:—The subscription is 10s. each season to the gentlemen, and 5s. to the ladies; for which they are always open for the company to walk and play at cards, except Sundays, and then alternately, when cards are not allowed.

There are two Dress-balls every week, viz. on Monday at the New-rooms, and on Friday at the Lower-rooms. The subscription one guinea to each room, for which each subscriber has three tickets.

There are also two cotillon-balls every week, viz. at the Lower-rooms on Tuesday, and at the New-rooms on Thursday; subscription half-a-guinea; the ticket not transferrable.

And eight concerts in the winter at the New-rooms, on Wednesdays; gentlemen's subscription one guinea and a half, and ladies' one guinea; the tickets transferrable. Non-subscribers to the cotillon and concert pay 5s.

The General Hospital in this city is open to the sick and poor of every part of the world, to whose cases the Bath waters are applicable, (the poor of Bath only excepted.) It is an excellent institution, supported by voluntary contributions, and one hundred and thirteen patients receive every convenience, comfort, and advice, that their conditions may require. It is an elegant pile of building, 100 feet in breadth, and 90 in depth. The first stone of it was laid on the 8th of July, 1738, at the North-East corner of the building, by the Right Honourable William Pulteney, afterwards Earl of Bath.

CHURCHES, CHAPELS, &c. &c.—The cathedral church of St. Peter and Paul, commonly called the Abbey, (supposed to be built on the spot where stood the Roman temple of Minerva, who was the tutelar deity of the hot-springs,) is a noble edifice, built in the shape of a cross, and founded in the year 676, by king Ofric, together with the Abbey-house for nuns; but, in the year 775, king Offa placed therein secular canons, who, being expelled by king Edgar, he instituted Benedictine monks in their stead; and it was frequently repaired and augmented, till Oliver King began the present pile in 1495, which was occasioned by a vision or dream of his, as related by Sir John Harrington. “The bishop,” says he, “having been at Bath, imagined, as he one night lay meditating in bed, that he saw the Holy Trinity, with angels ascending and descending by a ladder, near to which was a fair olive-tree supporting a crown.” The impression was so strong, that the bishop thought he heard a voice which said, “Let an olive establish the crown, and let a king restore the church.” This had such an effect upon the good prelate, that he instantly formed a design to rebuild the church of St. Peter and Paul:—accordingly he set the work immediately in hand, and, as Sir John concludes, caused his vision to be represented on the West front of it, under the title of De sursum est, “It is from on high.”—The pious bishop was prevented from completing this work by death; and, upon the dissolution of the religious houses, this church coming into the king's hands, and the townsmen refusing to purchase it of the king's commissioners for 500 marks, it was entirely stripped of the lead, glass, iron, timber, and other materials; in which condition, with only the bare walls standing, it remained upwards of 100 years, till 1606, when it was restored to its present state by the pious benefactions of Dr. James Montague, then bishop of this diocese, and other generous benefactors, and made parochial.—The West front of this elegant structure is enriched with several statues, besides a representation of the vision of Oliver King, as above related. It contains many curious monuments; has a handsome altar-piece, representing the Wife Men's Offering, given in the year 1725 by General Wade, one of the representatives of this city; and an excellent organ, thought by very good judges to be one of the best in Europe. This church was formerly called the Lantern of England, on account of the number and size of its windows; but, as it is now inclosed by houses to the North and South, the light is much intercepted; it is a stately and elegant structure, and affords the curious stranger as much speculation as any parochial church of the same standing in England. The tower (which is 162 feet high) has an excellent peal of ten bells. The length from East to west is 210 feet, and from North to South 126; the breadth of the body and side aisles is 72 feet, and the windows are 52 in number. Here is divine service every day, at eleven in the forenoon, and at four in the afternoon, which was set on foot, and is supported, by the voluntary subscriptions of the company resorting to Bath, it being thought necessary that prayers should be performed daily at one of the places of religious worship in this city.

The several parishes in Bath are consolidated into one rectory, which is in the gift of the corporation, and has the vicarage of Lyncombe and Widcombe annexed to it. The Rev. Dr. Phillott is the present incumbent.

The parish church of St. James was rebuilt (chiefly by voluntary subscription) in the year 1768 and 1769, under the direction and agreeable to the plan of Mr. Palmer, of this city, architect; and is a very neat freestone building with fronts in the Gothic taste. The ground plan is a parallelogram of 61 feet long by 58 wide within the walls; the roof is supported by four Ionic columns; the ceiling is divided into three parts; the middle is finished with an entablature and coving, and the two sides with an architrave only, of the Ionic order. The altar forms a niche set round with columns and pilasters, with a Doric entablature. The tower was rebuilt in 1726, and has a peal of eight musical bells. In 1782 a new and excellent organ was erected in this church, by Mr. Seed of Bristol. Here is divine service on Sundays, and prayers Wednesday and Friday mornings, and Saturday afternoon; and morning prayers on Saint's-days. The Rev. Mr. Dart is the curate.

The church dedicated to St. Michael was begun to be rebuilt about the year 1734, and finished in 1742, at the expence of the inhabitants, by a voluntary subscription in some, and by a rate upon the whole, except a handsome subscription of the late General Wade, and a few other private benefactions. It is finished in the Doric order, with a fine dome; and is a very neat church in the inside, having a painting of our Saviour, and another of Moses, over the altar; the former by Mr. Hoare of this city, the latter by Mr. Robinson of London. It has a musical peal of eight bells, and an organ. The Rev. Mr. Wake is the curate. Here is divine service as often as at St. James's.

The parish church of Walcot stands within the liberties of this city; it was rebuilt in the year 1780, and has been since very much enlarged on account of the great increase of the inhabitants; it is a neat church, and has a good organ. The income of this rectory is equal to that of the consolidated churches in Bath; the present incumbent is the Rev. Mr. Sibley; the curate, the Rev. Mr. Dowson.

The chapel near the South-West corner of Queen-square, is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and was built by the late Mr. Wood, by a subscription of several gentlemen, who are now proprietors of it. The inside is of the Ionic order, and is 57 feet long, 48 broad, and 36 high: the outside is of the Doric order. It was opened Dec. 25th, 1734, for divine service; which is performed here twice every Sunday, at eleven and four; and every other day at eleven. The officiating clergyman is the Rev. Mr. Sibley.

The Octagon chapel in Milford-street, which was opened for divine service the 4th of October 1767, was built agreeable to the plan of Mr. Lightholder, architect, and is in great esteem for its neatness and elegance. It has a fine altar-piece, representing the Pool of Bethesda, painted by Mr. Hoare, and an excellent organ. Divine service is performed here every Sunday at eleven and five, and prayers every Wednesday and Friday at eleven. This chapel was purchased from the executors of the late Mr. Street, by the Rev. Dr. Gabriel, who is the sole proprietor and officiating minister.

Margaret chapel, situated in Margaret-buildings, Brock-street, is built in the Gothic order, with galleries; is 70 feet long, 60 wide, and 37 high, besides vides a large recess for the altar, over which is placed a capital picture of the Wise Men's Offering, painted by Mr. Williams, late of this city. The roof having no supporters, makes it very light, spacious, and elegant: it has an exceeding fine-toned organ, and two of Buzaglio's stoves. Divine service as at the Octagon. The Rev. Dr. Griffiths is the officiating minister.

The chapel dedicated to St. Michael, near the Cross-Bath, has annexed to it an hospital or alms-house, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, called the Blue Alms Charity, founded in the reign of Henry II. by Reginald Fitz-Jocelaine, bishop of this see, who gave an estate called St. John's Farm, then valued at about 60*l.* a year, for the support of six aged poor men, and six aged poor women of this city, and a master, who must be a clergyman of the established church. These poor people have a separate apartment, and an allowance of 4*s.* 2*d.* a week each. The alms-house was taken down in the year 1728, and rebuilt at the expence of the late Duke of Chandos, in consideration of some advantages he received in erecting Chandos-court.—This farm has been so much improved by being let out on building leases, that it is supposed the annual rents much exceed 10,000*l.* a year; and the fines constantly paying for renewals, which the master has the exclusive privilege of granting; and of which he receives one moiety, and the co-brethren and sisters the other moiety in equal portions, make the mastership equal in point of profit to most ecclesiastical benefices. There is divine service twice a day in this chapel. The Rev. Dr. Chapman, one of the canons of Bristol cathedral, is the present master.

The little chapel dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, situated under Beechen-Cliff, is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.—The present incumbent is Dr. Richard Roberts, master of St. Paul's school, London, and it is supported by public subscription. Here is divine service every Sunday, performed by the present curate of the Abbey. Adjoining is an hospital belonging to it for idiots, rebuilt in 1761.

There are besides several other places of divine worship in this city, viz. the Unitarian meeting-house, in Frog-lane; the Quakers meeting-house, in Marchant's-court; the Baptists meeting-house, in Garrard-street; Lady Huntingdon's chapel, in Harlequin-row; a Moravian chapel, in Monmouth-street; a chapel in New King-street, for Methodists, or the followers of the late Rev. John Wesley; an Independent meeting-house in Argyle Buildings; a meeting-house for the followers of the late Mr. Whitfield, opposite St. James's Parade; and a Roman Catholic chapel, in Corn-street.

The principal COFFEE-HOUSES here are kept by Mr. Frappel, Mr. Pritchard, and Messrs. Derham and Stroud. Mr. Frappel's is called the Grove Coffee-house, situated in Orange-Grove; Mr. Pritchard's, the Parade Coffee-house, fronts the North Parade, and is thought to be one of the pleasanter in England, commanding a delightful view of the country; and the last adjoins the New Assembly-rooms.

The public Grammar School, situated in Broad-street, was originally founded and endowed by King Edward VI. with part of the land belonging to the dissolved religious houses. The present building was begun in the year 1752.

There is also a charity-school in this city, which was first founded in the year 1711, and was begun, and for some years carried on, by the interest and unwearied endeavours of that eminent pattern of learning and piety, Robert Nelson, Esq. who engaged Dean Willis, (afterwards Lord Bishop of Winchester,) and several other persons of distinction, to aid and assist him in this arduous and charitable undertaking. It was rebuilt by subscription, and the corporation liberally contributed towards it, as well by their subscriptions, as by a grant of the ground on which the present school is now erected; and on the 12th of October 1721, the foundation-stone was laid by Mr. Hoare, on which is the following inscription:—

GOD's Providence is our Inheritance.

In January 1785, a subscription was set on foot by Henry Southby, Esq. for establishing Sunday Schools in this city, for the children of the poor who have no other means of learning their social and religious duties. In a few weeks a sum sufficient was raised for the purpose, and, at a public meeting of the subscribers, the clergy of the city and several gentlemen were appointed a committee for conducting the business, and several resolutions were entered into; among which the chief were, that the appointment of the masters and mistresses should be in the rectors of Bath and Walcot;—that the books of instruction should be such only as are in the list of those recommended by the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge;—that the children should attend divine service every Sunday evening at the Abbey church,—and that the children admitted should be recommended by subscribers. The latter resolution has, however, been rescinded.

The Theatre, situated in Orchard-street, is established by royal patent granted to John Palmer, Esq. comptroller of the general post-office; William Keasberry, and William Dimond, Esqrs. The form of it, as far as the pit and boxes extend, is semicircular; the front on the sides of the stage are adorned with columns of the Doric and Ionic orders, and the ornaments are expressive of and bear analogy to the amusements of the place. It is furnished with a large lobby or waiting-room, with proper retiring-rooms, and at the top of the house are ventilators. In short, nothing is omitted that can contribute either to its beauty or convenience. The whole was designed and executed by Mr. Palmer, architect; and it is universally allowed, for its size, to be as complete a theatre as any in Europe. The days of performance are in general Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

The Old Guildhall of this city, which was built after a plan of the celebrated Inigo Jones, was situated in the High-street, directly between the present Green-market and the Christopher inn; but the corporation finding this hall and its offices too small, and its situation very inconvenient for carriages passing through the city, came to a resolution a few years since to erect a new one on the East side of High-street, and the first stone was laid by the right worshipful the mayor, attended by the rest of the corporation, on the 11th day of February 1766.

The city is governed by the mayor, recorder, (earl Camden) and aldermen, besides twenty common-council; the number of aldermen (out of which the mayor and two justices are chosen) is not to exceed ten, or be less than four, and a town-clerk. The present town-clerk is John Jeffreys, Esq.—From among the common-council (except the senior, who is always chamberlain) are yearly chosen two bailiffs or sheriffs, and two constables. The representatives in parliament for the city are elected by the corporation:—the present representatives are Lord Viscount Bayham and Lord Weymouth.

A court of record is held at the town-hall every Monday, which has cognizance of all personal actions within the said city or its liberties, in case the debt or damages exceed or amount to 40s. Of this court the town-clerk is the prothonotary, and the serjeants at mace for the time being are the attornies. There is also a court of requests, for the more easy and speedy recovery of small debts under 40s. within the city and liberties.

There are two fairs held annually in this city, of very trifling note; but on Lansdown, about three miles distant, on the 10th of August, a fair is annually held for cheese, horses, and most kinds of merchandize. The principal markets are kept on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and plentifully supplied with every kind of provisions, generally at moderate prices. Fresh butter (equal to any in England) is brought in from the country every morning; and the butchers who live in the city supply the inhabitants with the best of meat every day in the week. The markets for fish are, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and are thought to excel those of any inland town in the kingdom, as well in the goodness as the quantity of the sea-fish brought to it, and the fresh-water fish daily taken from the river Avon.

The Grove, near the Abbey-church, is called Orange-grove, from an obelisk erected by the late Richard Nash, Esq. in compliment to the Prince of Orange, who came here for his health just before he married the Princess Royal of England, and received great benefit from the waters.

On the other side of the New-bridge, erected by William Pulteney Esq. across the Avon, is a public garden, called Spring-gardens, very pleasantly and judiciously laid out by Mr. Pritchard, for the summer amusement and recreation of the inhabitants and company in this city, who may walk here the whole season on paying a subscription of three shillings.—Those who do not subscribe, pay six-pence for admission, and receive a ticket that entitles them to any thing they choose of that value. Here are public breakfasts and public tea, attended with horns and clarionets, during the summer; the days uncertain; and also one public evening every week with illuminations, fire-works, and entertainments, similar to the London Vauxhall.

SEATS and VILLAS in the Vicinity of BATH.

In the vicinity of a city, where every house may be called a capital mansion, few gentlemen's seats can be thought worthy attention, yet the neighbourhood abounds with many pleasing seats and villas:—Keston, the ancient seat of the Harringtons, (late Sir Cæsar Hawkins, Bart.) Bathaston, the seat of Sir John R. Miller, Bart. near which, on one of the happiest situations in the kingdom, a house, on an extensive scale, is now building for Dr. Skeete; Midford Castle, built by Disney Roebuck, Esq. now the property of Dr. Pugh; but the most magnificent mansion is Prior Park, the seat of the late good and liberal Ralph Allen, Esq. now in the occupation of the Rev. Stafford Smyth, who married the widow of Warburton, Bishop of Gloucester, niece of Mr. Allen.

Mr. Allen's seat commands a prospect, as delightful as it is possible for the imagination to conceive, the city of Bath being the chief object, and towards it the principal front of the house is turned. The seat consists of a house in the centre, two pavilions, and two wings of offices, all united by arcades, and making a continued curved line of building of above 1000 feet in front, of which the house takes about 150 feet, and is of the Corinthian order, elevated upon a rustic basement, and crowned with a bull's-head; the centre advancing forward, and making one of the largest and most correct porticos in the kingdom. The order includes two stories, and the house has 15 windows in the length of it. The portico, together with a Corinthian hall in the principal story, a chapel on the same floor of the Ionic order, supporting the Corinthian, and a Corinthian gallery extending over the hall, and the rooms on each side of it, all finished with free-stone, are the beauties and curiosities of the pile. The gardens consist of two terraces, and two slopes, lying Northward before the house, with winding walks made through a little coppice, opening to the Westward of those slopes; but all these are adorned with vases and other ornaments, in stone-work; and the affluence of water is so great, that it is received at three different places, after many little agreeable falls, at the head of one of which there is a statue of Moses down to the knees, in an attitude expressive of the admiration he must have been in after striking the rock, and seeing the water gush out of it. The winding walks were made with great labour; and, though no broader than for two or three to walk abreast, yet in some places they appear with little cliffs on one side, and with small precipices on the other.

Lansdown is one of the most conspicuous and happily situated hills in the West of England, and famous for the number of sheep fattened by its delicate herbage.—From hence you have a fine view of the Bristol channel, city of Bristol, part of Wales, and great part of Gloucestershire, Worcestershire, and Wiltshire; and there is one point of view where the cities of Bath and Bristol may be seen at the same time.

Farley Castle, Somersetshire, six miles from Bath.—At what time this castle was erected, or who was its builder, is not certainly known. If one may judge from the extent of its ruins, it seems surprising so little should be said of it in history. The first account of it is no farther back than the 16th of Edward III. at which time Farley appears to have been the property of Lord Berghersh; it was sold by his grand-daughter, the sole heiress, with other estates, to Robert Lord Hungerford; and the present proprietor is — Frampton, Esq.

Stanton-Drew, Somersetshire, is eight miles from Bath. At this place is a piece of antiquity, supposed to be the remains of a Druid's temple, much in the same form as that at Stonehenge, in Wiltshire, consisting of a circle of large pillars, about six feet high, each of which seems to have made a diameter of 90 paces, though there is no appearance of a ditch. The remains of this monument, among the common people, bears the name of a Wedding, from a tradition, that, as a bride was going to be married, she and the rest of the company were changed into pillars of stone.

By his MAJESTY'S Royal LICENCE and AUTHORITY.

THE UNIVERSAL BRITISH DIRECTORY of TRADE, COMMERCE, and MANUFACTURE; regulated by annual Supplement. The first Volume, containing fourteen Numbers, comprizes LONDON; and, from the variety of its information, will be found a most useful Guide to Noblemen, Gentlemen, Merchants, Bankers, and Traders, in every part of Europe.

Independent of references to persons, public offices, law, divinity, physic, &c. &c. this volume historically describes the origin and progress of Commerce; of Banks and Bankers; of paper circulation; of ancient and present value of money: of the East-India, South Sea, and Bank of England, Companies; imports and exports; national debt; public funds; public income and expenditure; British Constitution and Parliament; Lords and Commons, with town and country residences at one view; ships composing the Royal Navy; officers of the navy and army. The internal jurisdiction of London; authority of its courts; its elections at Wardmotes and Common Halls, with adjudged cases of whatever may qualify or disqualify voters at either. Embellished with a large elegant Plan of London, Westminster, and Southwark, including the new streets, squares, and buildings, up to the year 1791.

The COUNTRY PART, which forms a most interesting and instructive HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN, with references to all persons of respectability, and to the Freeholders throughout the kingdom, who are distinguished by the letter (F); also to noblemen and gentlemen's seats, to all staple manufactories and navigable canals, and to every thing historical and curious; is in the press, and will be completed with all possible expedition. The whole will be comprised in about forty-two numbers, at one shilling each; and an agent is appointed in every town in the kingdom for enrolling names and receiving subscriptions.

II.

For CHRISTIAN FAMILIES of every PERSUASION.

THE SECOND EDITION, NUMBER I. to be continued weekly, and completed in 106 Numbers, price Sixpence each, or the overplus given gratis,

A GRAND IMPERIAL FAMILY BIBLE,

Including the Old and New Testaments, the Apocrypha, and all the Scriptures complete; beautified with 53 superb Engravings of uncommon magnitude and elegance, and forming upon

on the whole the most magnificent volume of the Holy Scriptures hitherto submitted to public patronage, being printed on the following large and beautiful type:

God saw that it was good.

The Notes and illustrations adapted to this work are peculiarly edifying and instructive.—Their chief merit lies in “steering between the extremes of doctrines seemingly opposite—in passing over terms utterly unintelligible—and in forming a temperate, yet not inconsistent, system.”

Long and fulsome panegyrics, in recommendation of this Work, are as unnecessary as they are insulting to the understanding of a discerning public, who need only examine and compare, to discover superior merit.—The first number will be given gratis to every person who agrees to take in the work.

III.

THE OCCULT SCIENCES,

In which the abstruse Doctrine of the STARS, of MAGIC, DIVINATION, EXORCISM, and Familiarity with Spirits, vegetable, astral, and infernal—the Calculation of Nativities—Horary Questions—and the astrological Proficiency of FUTUREITY, are clearly demonstrated and proved. By E. SIBLY, Fellow of the Harmonic Philosophical SOCIETY in PARIS.

It has afforded singular reputation to the author, that the cabal, formed on purpose to cry down this interesting book, hath been defeated, and driven from every argument set up against it.—The act of parliament, by which the work was at first suppressed, has been since repealed; and the author congratulates himself, for the good of others, in the triumph he has had over obstinate and unbelieving men, though of the first classical knowledge in the world!

A most USEFUL and INTERESTING little BOOK,

LAWS for regulating BILLS of EXCHANGE, inland and foreign;—including all the late decisions in the Court of King's Bench, House of Lords, &c. with an abstract of the act for imposing additional Duties on RECEIPTS, PROMISSORY NOTES and DRAFTS; which took place the FIRST of AUGUST 1791. Elucidated with Rules and Observations for the legal guidance of the public, in all transactions of receipts and payments, and for the recovering of notes and bills lost, mislaid, destroyed, or stolen.— With several adjudged Cases, pointing out the terms and conditions upon which Bills of Exchange, Notes of Hand, &c. are negotiated; the time allowed for returning notes or drafts to the drawer in cases of non-payment; upon what occasions, and for want of attending to what prescribed forms, bad bills frequently become the property of the holder; on what account protests, and notice of non-payment to the drawer, become absolutely necessary; modes of proceeding to recover lost, stolen, or forged, Bank-notes or drafts, and what parties are liable to the payment thereof; the nature of acceptance, protest, and indorsement of bills, with the most summary and approved modes of declaring and pleading in all actions upon Notes, Bills of Exchange, &c. with the evidence necessary to support the same. Cautions relative to closing accounts and taking receipts under the late act—the smallest deviation from which incurs a penalty of 20l.—With a variety of other information indispensably necessary to be known by every member of the community. THE TENTH EDITION.

By J. BLAGRAVE, Notary Public.

☞ Since, by the new act, persons are exposed to heavy penalties, without a sense of their danger, this little tract is a necessary companion for the pocket or desk of every individual, as well to elude the rapacity of informers, as to be guarded against imposition by fabricated bills and forged notes; in all which cases, the established law, and best advice, will be found in this book, for only eighteen pence.

HAMPSHIRE MILLER'S RAT-POWDER,

THE only Composition yet discovered, that Rats of every species will eat.—They prefer it to all other food, and though the smallest particle is instant death, they will eat it even in sight till they drop, and will not be driven from it, yet no cat will touch it. It is equally destructive to water rats and mice. There is scarcely a town in the kingdom, where it has been used, that the venders cannot furnish the most astonishing proofs of its efficacy, and there are instances on board ship, where every rat has been allured to the spot where it was laid, and killed in less than two hours. The advertiser being a person of established reputation, in easy circumstances, and to whom reference may be had, it is scarce necessary to say, his inducement for offering it to the public, is the general good, and if in any case it proves inefficacious, the venders are ordered to return the money. It is sold in packets at 2s. 6d. each, covered with a red stamp, whereon is impressed the inventor's name, T. Raifs, to prevent counterfeits.

VIII.

BERKENHOUT'S REAL VEGETABLE NANKEEN DYE.

THIS article, though cheap, and its use simple, possesses most admirable properties. It restores the lost colour of Nankeen dresses of every kind; and changes the white ground of ladies linen or cotton gowns, drawing-room or bed furniture, &c. &c. to a rich, bright, beautiful, chintz-pattern ground, without the least injury to the figure;—but, on the contrary, gives a brighter lustre to the flowers, and leaves a fine gloss on the surface of the cloth; and, though it be ever so much faded by wear and washing, it gives it the appearance of new. It is a most convenient thing on-board ship, where it preserves Nankeen dresses, and keeps them clean four times as long as common washing. Price one shilling the bottle, with directions. One bottle is sufficient for two or three gowns, or for a change of gentlemen's breeches for the whole summer; and is used in the scald without any difficulty or trouble.

IX

BERKENHOUT'S VEGETABLE CHINESE LIQUID BLUE

Which gives to SILK STOCKINGS a most admirable transparent blue cast, equal to new. To white thread or cotton stockings it gives an appearance nearly equal to silk. All kinds of white silk, tiffanies, ribbons, muslins, gauzes, cottons, linens, &c. it dyes of an elegant transparent blue; and to black silks it wonderfully restores the lost colour by sponging only, whether gowns, stockings, cloaks, or ribbons; and for bluing small linen, and all the business of the laundry, this elegant article far exceeds the common stone and powder blue, and is much cheaper. It is sold in stone jars at one shilling each, with directions for its use.

The utility and reputation of these vegetable Dyes, have already excited spurious imitation, which being compounded of a vitriolic acid, destroy the fabric, and are dangerous to use. To guard the public from such frauds, each genuine bottle of the Liquid Blue and Nankin Dye, is covered with a red stamp, in the centre of which are the Arms of China, and the signature "Fra. Berkenhout," to imitate which, is a capital felony.

N. B. All the foregoing Articles are appointed to be sold by the Agent to the British Directory, in each town in the kingdom; and may be had of all the newsmen.
